but by the dignity of the master. Wall.

To his grim cave, all dismal! yet to sense
More terrible at 'th entrance than within. Milton.
Let this, and every other anxious thought,
As th' entrance of my threshold be forgot. Dryden.

4. Initiation; commencement.
This is that which, at first entrance, hands and clothes them: they want their liberty.
Locke.

5. Intellectual notions; knowledge.
He that traverseth a country before he hath some entrance into the language, goeth to school, and not to travel. Bacon's Essays.

6. The act of taking possession of an office, or dignity.
From the first entrance of this king to his reign, never was king either more loving, or better beloved. Hist. Eng. Edw. VI.

To ENTRAP. v. n. [from trap.]
1. To ensnare; to catch in a trap or snare.
Take heed, mine eyes, how ye do stare
Himself too rashly on that guttleful net;
In which, if ever, let me taste it not.
Out of her hands ye by no means shall get.
Spenser.
The fraud of England, not the force of France,
Hath now entrapt the noble-minded Talbot.
Shakesp.

2. To involve unexpectedly in difficulties or distresses; to entangle.
The man most wary, in whose whelping lap
She sought to entrap me by intelligence. Shak.

3. To take advantage of.
An injurious person lies in wait to entrap thee in thy words. Eccles. viii. 11.

To ENTREAT. v. a. [fracter, Fr.]
1. To petition; to solicit; to importune.
Isaac entreated the Lord for his wife.
Gen. xxxvi. 21.

2. To prevail upon by solicitation.
I have a wife, whom I protest, I love;
I would she were in heaven, so she could
Entreat some pow'r to change this currish Jew.
Shakesp.
The Lord was entreated of him, and Rebecca his wife received.
Gen. 31. 21.
It were a fruitless attempt to appease a power, whom no prayers could entreat, no repentance remove.
Rogers.

3. To treat or use well or ill.
Whereas thy servant worketh truly, entreat him not evil.
Eccles. vii. 20.
Must you, sir John, protect my lady here?
Entreat her not the worse in that I pray
You use her well. Shak.

Shakesp., Henry VI.
Well I entreat her, who well deserve'd:
I call'd her often: for she always serv'd,
Use made her person easy to my sight,
And easily importuned for delight.

4. To entertain; to amuse. Not used.
My lord, I must entreat the time alone.
—God shield I should disturb devotion. Shak.

5. To entertain; to receive. Not in use.
The garden of Prosperine this height.
And in the midst thereof a silver well.
With a thick arcade goodly overtopped,
In which she often us'd, from open heat,
Herself to shroud, and pleasures to entreat.
Fair Qy.

To ENTREAT. v. n.
1. To offer a treaty or compact. Not used.
Alexander was the first that entreated peace with them.
Mar.

2. To treat; to discourse. Not used.
The most admirable mystery of nature is the turning of iron, touched with the leadenstone, ENTREATANCE. n. s. [from entreat.] Petition; entreaty; solicitation. Not used.

These two entreatance made they might be heard.

Nor was their just petition long deny'd. Fairfax.

ENTREATIES. n. s. [from entreat.] Petition; prayer; solicitation; supplication; request.

If my weak orator
Can from his mother win the Duke of York;
Anon expect him here; but if she be Obdurate to entreaty, God forbid
We should infringe the holy privilege
Of sanctuary.

ENTREMETS. n. s. [Fr.] Small plates set between the main dishes.

Charms ofaret plants of white beet transplanted, producing great tops, which, in the midst, have a white main shoot, which is the true chord used in potages and entremets.

ENTRY. n. s. [from enter; entrée, Fr.]
1. The passage by which any one enters a house.

Some there are that know the resorts and falls of business, that cannot sink into the main of it; like a house that hath convenient stairs and entries, but not a fair room.

A straight long entry to the temple, Blind with high walls, and horror over head. Dryden.

On this account, because thou art afraid
A dirty hall or entry should offend.

The curious eyes of thy invited friend? Dryden.

We proceeded through the entry, and were necessarily kept in order by the situation. Tatler.

2. The act of entrance; ingress.

Batheing and anointing give a relaxation or emulsion; and the mixture of oil and water is better than either of them alone, because water entereth better into the pores, and oil after entryeth better, and batheing.

The lake of Constance is formed by the entry of the Rhine.

By the entry of the chyle and air into the blood, by the lacteals, the animal may again revive.

ENTRY, n. s. [from enter; entrée, Fr.]
1. One that enters another; a malicious one; that desires the downfall of another.

Men need no wise how they be too perfect in compliments; for that enterers will give them that attribute, to the disadvantage of their virtues.

Bacon.

ENTRY. n. s. [from enter; entrée, Fr.]
1. Infected with envy; painted by the excellence or happiness of another.

A man of the most envious disposition that ever infected the air with his breath, whose eyes could not look right upon any happy man, nor ears bear the burden of any man's praise.

ENTRY. n. s. [from enter; entrée, Fr.]
1. A cloud of smoke envelops either host, and all at once the combatants are lost.

Darkly they join adverse, and shock unseen,
Confers with corners justling, men with men.

Dryden.
ENVoY. n. s. [envoy, Fr., envoyé, Lati.]
1. To hate another for excellence; happiness, or success.
2. To grieve at any qualities of excellence in another.

To ENVy. v. a. [envier, Fr., inviero, Lati.]
1. To hate another for excellence or felicity; with at.
2. To feel envy; to feel pain at the sight of excellence or felicity: with at.

EPAULEMENT. n. s. [Fr. from epaule a shoulder.]
In fortification, a sideward made either of earth thrown up, of bags of earth, gabions, or of fascines and earth. It sometimes denotes a semibasement and a square orlilion, or mass of earth faced and lined with a wall, designed to cover the cannon of a caisnete.

EPI.

EPEN'THESIS. n. s. [epenthek]. [In grammar.] The addition of a vowel or consonant in the middle of a word. Harris.

EPIHA. n. s. [Hebrew.] A measure among the Jews, containing fifteen solid inches.

EPHEMERA. n. s. [ephemeris].
1. A fever that terminates in one day.
2. An insect that lives only one day.

EPHEMERAL. adj. [ephemeris].
Diuretic.

EPHEMERICK. s. na; beginning and ending in a day.

This was no more than a mere bubble or blast, and would be called ephemeric.

EPHEMERIS. n. s. [ephemeris].
One who consults the planets; one who studies or practises astrology.

EPIHOD. n. s. [758]. A sort of ornament worn by the Hebrew priests. That worn by the high priest was richly composed of gold, blue, purple, crimson, and twisted cotton; and upon the part which came over his two shoulders were two large precious stones, upon which were engraved the names of the twelve tribes of Israel, upon each stone six names. Where the epiphod crossed, the high priest’s breast, was a square ornament, called the breast plate; in which twelve precious stones were set, with the names of the twelve tribes of Israel engraved thereon, one on each stone. The epipods worn by the other priests were of plain linen.

Calcut.

He made the epiphod of gold blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen. Exod. xxvii. 2. 4.

Array’d in ephod, nor so few.

As are those pears of morning dew, which hang on herbs and flowers.

Sandy.

EPC. adj. [epicus, Lat. trig.]. Narrative; comprising narrations, not acted, but rehearsed. It is usually supposed to be heroic, or to contain one great action achieved by a hero.
Holmes, whose name shall live in epic song. While music numbers, or while verse has feet.
The epic poem is more for the manners, and the tragedy for the passions.

From morality they formed that kind of poem and tale which we call epic.

Epide.cium. n. s. [ἐπιδείκτικός] An elegy; a poem upon a funeral.

You from above shall hear each day
One dirge dispatched unto you daily;
These, your yearly tribute, shall become
Your lasting epicicism. - Sword's Paraphrase.

Epicure. n. s. [epicureus, Lat.] A follower of Epicurus; a man given wholly to luxury.

The poetry false names, and mingle with the English epics:

The epicure buckles to study, when shame, or the desire to recommend himself to his mistress, shall make him uneasy in the want of art or kind of knowledge.

Epie.креa.n. adj. Luxurious; contributing to luxury.

Tie up the libertine in a field of feasts,
Keep his heart from fasting; epicurean cooks,
Sharpen with cleaver sense his appetite. - Shakeesp.

What a damn'd epicure is this! - Shak.

Epie.круism. n. s. [from *epicure.] Luxury; sensual and gross pleasures.

Here you do keep a hundred knights and squires;
Men so disorder'd, so debauch'd, and bold,
That the court, infected with their manners,
Shews like a riotous town; epicureism and lust.

Make it a tavern or a brothel. - Shak. King Lear.

There is not half so much epicure in any of their most studied luxuries, as a bleeding fence at their mercy.

Epie.a.рize. v. a. [from *epicure.] To devour like an epicure. A word not used.

While I could see thee full of eager pain,
My greedy eyes epicure on thine.

Epie.cl.ye. n. s. [ἐπικλέος and κλέος.] A little circle whose centre is in the circumference of a greater; or a small orb, which, being in the deferent of a planet, is carried along with its motion; and yet, with its own peculiar motion, carries the body of the planet fastened to it round about its proper centre.

Epie.cloid. n. s. [ἐπικλοειδής] A curve generated by the revolution of the periphery of a circle along the convex or concave part of another circle.

Epie.pi.c. n. s. [ἐπίπεδος]

1. That which falls at once upon great numbers of people, as a plague.

It was conceived not to be an epidemic disease, but to proceed from a malignity in the constitution of the air, gathered by the predispositions of seasons.

As the proportion of epidemical diseases shows the aptness of the air to sudden and vehement impressions, so the time of the diseases shows the ordinary temper of the place.

2. Generally prevailing; affecting great numbers.

The more epidemic and prevailing this evil is, the more honourable are those who shun the exceptions.

Epin.ycl.tis. n. s. [ἐπιεκτικός] A sore at the corner of the eye.

The epitaph is of the bigness of a lupin, of a dusky red, and sometimes of a livid and pale colour, with great inflammation and pain.

Epie.pi.n. y. n. s. [ἐπιφανεία] A church festival, celebrated on the twelfth day after Christmas, in commemoration of our Saviour's being manifested to the world, by the appearance of a miraculous blazing star, which conducted the magi to the place where he was.

Epie.pi.n. c. n. s. [ἐπιφονήμα] An exclamation; a conclusive sentence not closely connected with the words foregoing.

I bow to a gentleman, who made it a rule in reading to skip over all sentences where he spied a note of admiration at the end. If those preachers who abound in epiphanous words but look about them, they would find one part of their congregation out of countenance and the other askep, except perhaps an old female beggar or two in the aisles, who, if they are sincere, may probably groan at the sound.

Epie.pi.n.ora. n. s. [ἐπιφονήρα] An inflammation of any part, but more especially a defluxion of humours on the eyes.

Epi.ep.yl.o.los. e.p.ous.ous. adj. [from *ἐπίρροιβος, *ἐπίλος, and *ἐπιμάνεια.] Applied to plants that bear their seed on the back part of their leaves.

Epie.pi.sis. n. s. [ἐπισίσοι] Accretion; the part added by accretion; one bone growing to another by simple contiguity, without any proper articulation. - Quinny.

The epiphysis of the os femoris is a distinct bone from it in a child, whereas in a man they do entirely unite.

Epi.epo.ge. n. s. [ἐπιπολέω] A figure of rhetoric, by which one aggravation, or striking circumstance, is added in due gradation to another; as, he not only spared his enemies, but continued them in employment; not only continued, but advanced them.

Epie.epo.ca. y. n. s. [ἐπισεποτάς, Lat.] The government of bishops, the government of the church established by the apostles.

Which the bishops must not contest with the assembly in jurisdiction; so that there was little more than the name of episcopal preserved. - Cleraren.

Presbytery itself cannot be proved by prescription, since episcopacy is not prescribed by any time whatsoever.

Epi.epo.cal. adj. [from *episcopus, Lat.] 1. Belonging to a bishop.

The plot of discipline sought to erect a popular authority of elders, and to take away episcopal jurisdiction.

2. Vested in a bishop.

The apostle commands Titus not only to a pattern of good works himself, but to use his episcopal authority in exhorting every rank and order of men.

Epi.epo.cat. n. s. [ἐπισκόπος, Lat.] A bishoprick; the office and dignity of a bishop.

Epi.epo.de. n. s. [ἐπιεπίδοτος, Lat.] An incidental narrative, or digression in a poem, separable from the main subject, yet rising naturally from it.

The poem hath no other episodes than such as naturally arise from the subject. - Addison's Spec.
EPI

EPISTOLARY. adj. [from epistle.] Con-

5. Palestine. n. [in and πρακτ.]

I. Distinct from the other letters, it

II. the

III. the

IV. the

V. the

VI. the

VII. the

VIII. the

VIII. the

IX. the

X. the

XI. the

XII. the

XIII. the

XIV. the

XV. the

XVI. the

XVII. the

XVIII. the

XIX. the

XX. the

XXI. the

XXII. the

XXIII. the

XXIV. the

XXV. the

XXVI. the

XXVII. the

XXVIII. the

XXIX. the

XXX. the

XXXI. the

XXXII. the

XXXIII. the

XXXIV. the

XXXV. the

XXXVI. the

XXXVII. the

XXXVIII. the

XXXIX. the

XL. the

XLI. the

XLII. the

XLIII. the

XLIV. the

XLV. the

XLVI. the

XLVII. the

XLVIII. the

XLIX. the

L. the

EPISTEMIC. adj. [from episteme.] A

II. the

III. the

IV. the

V. the

VI. the

VII. the

VIII. the

IX. the

X. the

XI. the

XII. the

XIII. the

XIV. the

XV. the

XVI. the

XVII. the

XVIII. the

XIX. the

XX. the

XXI. the

XXII. the

XXIII. the

XXIV. the

XXV. the

XXVI. the

XXVII. the

XXVIII. the

XXIX. the

XXX. the

XXXI. the

XXXII. the

XXXIII. the

XXXIV. the

XXXV. the

XXXVI. the

XXXVII. the

XXXVIII. the

XXXIX. the

XL. the

XLI. the

XLII. the

XLIII. the

XLIV. the

XLV. the

XLVI. the

XLVII. the

XLVIII. the

XLIX. the

L. the

To EQUATE. v. a. [from equate.] To

I. to

II. to

III. to

IV. to

V. to

VI. to

VII. to

VIII. to

IX. to

X. to

XI. to

XII. to

XIII. to

XIV. to

XV. to

XVI. to

XVII. to

XVIII. to

XIX. to

XX. to

XXI. to

XXII. to

XXIII. to

XXIV. to

XXV. to

XXVI. to

XXVII. to

XXVIII. to

XXIX. to

XXX. to

XXXI. to

XXXII. to

XXXIII. to

XXXIV. to

XXXV. to

XXXVI. to

XXXVII. to

XXXVIII. to

XXXIX. to

XL. to

XLI. to

XLII. to

XLIII. to

XLIV. to

XLV. to

XLVI. to

XLVII. to

XLVIII. to

XLIX. to

L. to

EQUILIBRIUM. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]

EQUITY. n. [in and πλατωμ.]
Dried Mutton's Hudibras. Milton's Holder of great Broun. Equality according to Having a great and Pritrr. I'utg.irr. [from equale or equal.]

1. To make even.
To equale accounts we will allow three hundred dollars, and so long a time as we can manifest from the Scripture. Brown.

2. To be equal to: a sense not used.
That would make the moved body, remaining what it is, signed to its lighter, to equale and fit a thing bigger than it. Digby.
Ye lofty bees, tell this matchless dance. That if I might, I knew where. It could not equale the hundredth part Of what here ye have kindled in my heart. Watter.

Equality. n.s. [from equale or equal.]
1. Likeness with regard to any quantities compared.

2. The same degree of dignity.
One shall rise.
Of proud ambition; who, not content With fair equality, fraternal state, Will arrogate dominion uneven'd
Over his brethren. Milton's Paradise Lost. According to this equality wherein God hath placed all mankind, with relation to himself, in all the relation that hath been man and man there is no dependence. Swift.

3. Evenness; uniformity; constant tenor; equability.
Measure out the lives of men, and periodically define the alterations of their temper, conceive a regularity in mutations, with an equality in constitutions, and forget that variety which physicians therein observe. Boyle's Experiments.

Equally. adv. [from equal.]
1. In the same degree with another person or thing, alike.
To reconcile men's vices to their fears is the aim of all the various schemes and projects of sin, and is equally intended by atheists and immorality. Rogers.
The covets are equally impatient of their condition, equally tempted with the wages of unrighteousness, as if they were indeed poor. Rogers.

2. Evenly; equably; uniformly.
If the motion of the sun were as unequal as a ship, sometimes slow, and at others swift; or, being constantly equally swift, it yet was not circular, and produced not the same appearances, it would not help us to measure time more than the motion of a comet does. Locke.

3. Impartially.
We shall use them, as we shall find their merits and our safety May equally determine. Shakespeare, King Lear.

Equallness. n.s. [from equal.]
Equality. Let me lament
That our stars unceasingly should have divided Our equallness to this. Shakespeare.

Equangular. adj. [from equus and an- gulus, Lat.] Consisting of equal angles.

Equanimity. n.s. [equanimitas, Lat.]
Evenness of mind, neither elated nor depressed.

Equanimous. adj. [equanimo, Lat.] Even; not dejected; not elated.

Equation. n.s. [square, Lat.] The investigation of a mean proportion collected from the extremities of excess and defect, to be applied to the whole.
We are to find out the extremities on both sides, and from and between them the middle daily motions of the sun along the Ecliptick; and to frame the proportions of our figure, to be applied to the mean motion by addition or subtraction, as the case shall require. Holder on Time.

By an argument taken from the equations of the times of the eclipses of Jupiter’s satellites, it seems that light is propagated in time, spending in its passage from the sun to us about seven minutes of time. Newton’s Opticks.

Equation. [In algebra.] Is an expression of the same quantity in two dissimilar terms, but of equal value; as, 3s. = 36d. Dict.

Equation. [In astronomy.] The difference between the time marked out by the sun’s apparent motion, and the time that is measured by its real or middle motion; according to which clocks and watches ought to be adjusted. Dict.

Equator. n.s. [equator, Lat.]
The equator on the earth, or equinoctial in the heavens, is a great circle, whose poles are the poles of the world. It divides the globe into two equal parts, the northern and southern hemispheres. It passes through the earth’s east and west points of the horizon; and at the meridian is raised as much above the horizon as is the complement of the latitude of the place. Whenever the sun comes to this circle, it makes equal days and nights all the round the globe, because he then is rising east and setting west, which he doth at no other time of the year. Harris.
By reason of the convexity of the earth, the eye of man, under the equator, cannot discover both the poles; neither would the eye, under the poles, discover the sun in the equator. Brown's Vulgar Err. On the other side the earth, there is much land and water, which may be used. Drayton.
The sun is rising; and the Creation.
Rocks rich in gems, and mountains big with mines.
That on the high equator rides rise,
Whence many a bursting stream auriferous plays.
Thomson.

Equatorial. adj. [from equator.]
Perpetual to the equator; taken at the equator.
The planets have spheroidal figures, and obliquity of their equatorials to their elliptic planes.
Cheyne.

Equerry. n.s. [equivus, Dut.]
Master of the horse.

Equestrian. adj. [equestris, Lat.]
1. Being on horseback.
An equestrian lady appeared upon the plains.
Spectator.

2. Skilled in horsemanship.

3. Belonging to the second rank in Rome.

Equirural. adj. [aquus and crus.

Equirure. (Lat.)

Equitaur. adj. [equestrius, Lat.]

1. Being on horseback.

2. Skilled in horsemanship.

3. Belonging to the second rank in Rome.

Equirural. adj. [aquus and crus.

Equirure. (Lat.)

Equestrian. adj. [equestrius, Lat.]

1. Being on horseback.

2. Skilled in horsemanship.

3. Belonging to the second rank in Rome.

Equirural. adj. [aquus and crus.

Equirure. (Lat.)

Equestrian. adj. [equestrius, Lat.]

1. Being on horseback.

2. Skilled in horsemanship.

3. Belonging to the second rank in Rome.

Equirural. adj. [aquus and crus.

Equirure. (Lat.)
our days and nights equal. This he doth twice a year, about the 21st of March and 23d of September, which therefore are called the vernal and autumnal equinoxes.

Harris.

It is not helical but heliometrically called the equinox.

The time when this kid was taken out of the womb was about the vernal equinox.

Ray.

'Twas now the moon in which the world began, if March beheld the first created man.

And since the vernal equinox the sun,

In Artes twelve degrees or more had run. Dryden.

Equality; even measure, Improper.

Do but see his vice;

'Tis to his virtues a just equipo'd.

The one as long as the other. Shakespeare. Othello.

Equinocial wind: a poetical use.

The passage yet was good: the wind, 'tis true,

Was somewhat high, but that was nothing new.

No more than usual equinoctial blew. Dryden.

Equi'nerman. n. s. [equus and numerus, Lat.] Having the same number; consisting of the same number.

This talent of gold, though not equine, nor yet epsonerant, as to any other; yet was equivalent to some correspondent talent in brass. Arithmet. on Coins.

To EQUIP. v. a. [equiper, Fr.]

1. To furnish for a horseman or cavalier.

2. To furnish; to accoutre; to dress out.

The country are led astray in the following to a ridiculous habit, when they fancy themselves in the height of the mode.

Addition.

EQUIPAGE. n. s. [equipe, Fr.]

1. Furniture for a horseman.

2. Carriage of state; vehicle.

Winged spirits, and chariot-wing'd,

From th' armony of God; where stand of old

Myriads, between two brazen mountains lodge'd.

Against a solemn day, harness'd at hand.

Celestial equipage! Milton's Par. Lost.

3. Attendance; retinue.

Soon as thy dreadful trumpet begins to sound,

The god of war, with his horse equipage.

Thus doth awake, sleep never he so sound. F. Q.

I will not lend thee a penny. Shaksp.

I will retort the sum in equipage. Shaksp.

That an equipage thus hast in air, and

With view scorn two pages and a chair. Pope.

4. Accoutrements; furniture.

EQUIPED. adj. [from equipage.] Accoutred; attended; having fine habits; having splendid retinue.

She brought with a goodly train of eque'es and ladies; equipped well, and entertained them right fairly, as befits.

Equipe'd, n. s. [equus and pande, Lat.] The act of hanging in equipage; not determined either way.

The will of man, in the state of innocence, had an entire freedom, a perfect equipo'dness and in dependence to the third part of the contrivance, to stand or not to stand.

EQUIPMENT. n. s. [from equip.]

1. The act of equipping or accounting.

2. Accoutrement; equipage.

EQUIPOISE. n. s. [equus, Lat. and pois, Fr.] Equality of weight; equilibration; equality of force.

In the temperate zone of our life there are few bodies at such an equipoise of humours; but that the prevalence of some one indisposes the spirits.

Glaville's Satis.

EQUPOSE. n. s. [equus and pallentia, Lat.] Equality of force or power.

EQUIPOLLENT. adj. [equipollens, Lat.] Having equal power or force; equivalent,

Votary resolution is made equipollent to custom,

EQUIPO'NERANCE. n. s. [equus and numerans, Lat.] Equality of weight; equipoise.

EQUIPO'NERANCE. n. s. [equus and ponderans, Lat.] Being of the same weight.

Their lungs may serve to render their bodies equipo'nerant to the water. Ray on the Creation.

A column of air, of any given diameter, is equipo'nerant to a column of quicksilver of the same height; a column of ninety-two pounds of quicksilver in a diameter of twenty-nine and thirty inches height. Locke.

To EQUIP'NERATE, v. n. [equus and ponderans, Lat.] To weigh equal to any thing.

The heaviness of any weight doth increase proportionably to its distance from the centre: thus one pound at A, will equiperorate unto two pounds at B, if the distance D is double unto A.

EQUIPO'NIOUS. adj. [equus and ponderus, Lat.] Equilibrated; equal on either part. Not in use.

The Scepticks affected an indifferent equipo'nisus neutrality, as the only means to their arsatura.

Glaville's Satis.

EQUITABLE. adj. [equitable, Fr.]

1. Just; due to justice.

It seems but equitable to give the artists leave to nancy in such a just. Swift.

2. Loving justice; candid; impartial; as, an equitable judge.

EQUITABLY. adv. [from equitable.] Justly; impartially.

EQUITY. n. s. [equité, Fr. equitas, Lat.]

1. Justice; right; honesty.

Foul subornation is predominant, and equity exalt'd your highness' land. Shakespeare. Christiania, with the private interests of men and the public peace, enforcing all justice and equity. Tullion.

2. Impartiality.

Liking their own somewhat better than other men's, even because they are their own, they must in equity allow us to be like unto them in this af extent. Hooker.

3. [In law.] The rules of decision observed by the court of Chancery, from the distinct maxims of law.

EQUIVALENT. n. s. [equus and valet, Lat.]

EQUIVALENCY. n. s. [equity and valet, Lat.] Equality of power or worth.

Must the servant of God be assured that he might do nothing for him? Yes, either formally or by way of equivalence, either that or something better.

Hume.

That there is any equivalence or parity of worth betwixt the good we do to our brother, and the good we hope for from God, all good Protestants do demand.

Civil causes are equivalent unto criminal causes, but this equivalence only respects the careful and diligent admission of proofs. Ayloffe's Pervene; or, Justice's Divorce, from the Eunuch.

To equiperorate; to be equal to.

Whether the transmission of Eve seducing did not exceed Adam seduced, or whether the restitubility of his reason did not epoxide the facility of her seduction, we refer to schoolmen. Brown.

EQUIVALENT. adj. [equus and radens, Lat.]

1. Equal in value.

Things

Well worth equal, and neighboring value;

By lot are parted; but the value, high heavi', thy share,

In equal balance laid with earth and hell,

Flings up the adverse scale; and shews proportion. Prior.

2. Equal in any excellence.

No fair to thine

Equivalent, or second which compell'd

Me thus, though important perhaps, to come

And gaze, and worship thee. Milton's Par. Lost.

3. Equal in force or power.

The strength of those who, with a strength

Equivalent to angels, walk'd their streets,

None offering fight. Milton's Paradise.

4. Of the same cogency or weight.

The consideration of public utility, by very good advice, judged at least the equivalent to the easier kind of necessity.

Hooker.

5. Of the same import or meaning.

The use of the word minister is brought down to the literal signification of it, a minister; for now to serve and to minister, servile and ministerial, are terms equivalent.

South.

EQUIVALENT. n. s. A thing of the same weight, dignity, or value.

The slave without a ransom shall be sent:

It rears for you to make it' equitable. Dryden.

Fancy a regular obedience to one law will be a full equivalent for their breach of another. Rogers.

EQUIVALOJ. adj. [equivocous, Lat.]

1. Of doubtful significations; meaning different things, standing for different notions.

These sentences to sugar or go tall,

Being strong on both sides. Dryden. Shaksp.

Words of different significations, taken in general, are of an equivocal sense; but being considered with all their particular circumstances, they have their sense restrained.

Stillingfleet.

The greater number of those who held this was more equivocous by equivocal term.

2. uncertain; doubtful; happening different ways.

Equivalency is the production of plants without seed, or of insects or animals without parents, in the natural way of coition between male and female; which is now believed never to hap pen but that all bodies are inunovably produced.

There is no such thing as equivocal or spontaneo

s generation; but all animals are generated by animal parents of the same species with themselves. Ray.

Those half-lam'd wretches, numerous in our isle;

As half-form'd insects on the Banks of Nile;

Unfinish'd things, one knows not what to call,

Their generation's so equivol.

Pope.

EQUIVALENCY. n. s. Ambiguity; word of doubtful meaning.

Shall two or three wriggled equivol have the force to corrupt us? Demost.

EQUIVOCALLY. adv. [from equivocal.]

1. Ambiguously; in a doubtful or double sense.

Words abstracted from their proper sense and significations, lose their nature of words, and are only equivocally so called. South.

2. By uncertain or irregular birth; by equivol generation; by generation out of the stated order.

No insect or animal did ever proceed equivocally from putrefaction, unless in marial cases; as, in Egypt by the divine judgments. Bentley.

EQUIVALENCY. n. s. [from equivocal.]

Ambiguity; double meaning.

Distinguish the equivolocity or latitudinarian of the word, and that peculiar part of that equus, which is the ground of my demonstration. Norris.

To EQUIVOCATE. v. n. [equivocatio, Lat.]

To use words of double meaning; to use ambiguous expressions; to mean one thing and express another.

Not only Jesus can equivolate.

Dryden.

My soul disdain'd all tongues.

But yet your false equivocal tongue,

Your looks, your sylence, your every mortification;

But you are ripe in frauds, and learn'd in false hoods. Smith.

EQUIVOCATION. n. s. [equivocatio, Lat.]

Ambiguity of speech; double meaning.

638
ERE

Reproof is no faulty misapplied, and through equivocation, wasted.

I pull in resolution, and begin.
To doubt the equivocation of the fiend.
That lies true.
Shakesp. Macbeth.

Equivocator. n.s. [from equivocate.]
One who uses ambiguous language; one who uses mental reservation.

Here's an equivocator, that would swear in both the scales against either side; yet could not equivocate to heaven.
Shakesp.

Ere, a syllable in the middle of names or places, comes by contraction from the Saxon papa dwellers. Gibson's Camden.

Era, n.s. [eræ, Lat.] The account of time from any particular date or epoch.

From the blessings they bestowed.
Our times are dated, and our era move:
They govern and enlighten all below.
As thou dost all above.

Page.

Eratation. n.s. [and radius, Lat.]
Emission of radiation.

God gave me my heart humbly to converse with him, from whom alone are all the emissions of true majesty.

King Charles.

To ERATICATE. n.a. [eradicato, Lat.]
1. To pull up the root.
2. To completely destroy; to end; to cut off.

If a gouty person can bring himself entirely to a milk diet, he may so change the whole juices of his body as to eradicate the diysterem. Arbuthnot.

If vice cannot wholly be eradicated, it ought at least to be confined to particular objects. Swift.

Eradication. n.s. [from eradicate.]

The act of tearing up the root; destruction; excision.

2. The state of being torn up by the roots.

They affirm the roots of mandrakes give a shrick upon eradication, which is false below confusion.

Brown.

Eradicative. adj. [from eradicate.]
That which cures radically; that which drives quite away.

To ERASE. n.t. [erare, Lr.]
1. To destroy; to excise.

The heads of birds, for the most part, are given erased; that is, plucked off. Peacham on Blazing.

To expunge; to rub out.

Erasure. n.s. [from erase.]
1. Destruction; devastation.
2. Expiration; abolition.

Ere. adv. [en, Sax. air, Goth. ear, Dut.
This word is sometimes vitiosly written eir, as if from ever. It is likewise written or before ever, and up in Saxen being indiscriminately written. Mr. Lyc.]
Before; sooner than.

Ere he would have hang'd a man for the getting a hundred bastard's, he would have paid for the burning a thousand.
Shakesp.

The lions brake all their bones in pieces or ever they came to the bottom of the den.
Daniel.

Just trial, ere I merit.

My exaltation, ere it change or end. Milton.

The mountain trees in distant prospect please, Let ye yet the pine descended to the sea;
Ere sails were seen to issue from the shore.
Dryd.

The birds shall cease to tune their ev'n singing, The winds to breathe, the waving woods to move, And stream in morning, ere I cease to love. Pope.

Ere. prep. Before.
Our fruitful Nile.

Flow'd ere the wonted season.
Dryd.

Erelong. adv. [from ere and long.] Before a long time had elapsed.
Nic longum tempus.

THE ANGER already began to paint revenge in many colours, erelong he had not only cotton pure, but pardon.
The wild horse having cumity with the stag, came near in desire of aid, who mounted upon his back, and following the stag, erelong slow him.

Sydney.

Nothing is last that is fenced: it will have another face than it had erelong.
Ben Jonson.

They swim in joy, Erelong to swim at... and laugh, for which The world erelong a world of tears must weep.
Milton.

I saw two stock-doves hillimg, and erelong

Dryden's Virgil.

It pleases me to think, that I who know so small a portion of the works of the Creator, and will slow and painful steps keep up, and down on the surface of this globe, shall erelong shoot away with the swiftness of imagination, and trace the springs of nature's operations.
Spectator.

ERENow. adv. [from ere and now.] Before this time.

Ah, gentle soldiers, some short time allow;
My father has reported him erenow.
Dryden.

Had the world eternally been, science had been brought to perfection everlong. Cheyne.

EREREWHILE. adv. [from ere and While.]

Some time ago; before a little while.
I am as far now, as I was erenow;
Since night you lov'd me, yet since night you left me.
Shakesp.

We sit down to our meals, suspect not the introduction of poisoned unities, who erenow we know were wont to surprize us. Decay of Piety.

To ERECT. v.a. [erectus, Lat.]
1. To raise in a straight line; to place perpendicularly to the horizon.
2. To Erect a Perpendicular. To cross one line by another at right angles.
3. To raise; to build.

Hamper willest erect.
Which, wand'ring long, at last thou shalt erect.

Dryden's Virgil.

There are many monuments erected to benefactors to the republic.
Addison on Italy.

4. To establish anew; to settle.

Great difference there is between their proceedgings, w'ch erect a new commonwealth, which have neither regiment nor religion the same that was, and theirs who only reform a decayed state.
Homer.

He suffers seventy-two distinct nations to be erected out of the first monarchy under distinct governors.
Balogh.

5. To elevate; to exalt.

I, who am a party, am not to erect myself into a judge.
Dryden's Fables, Preface.

I am far from pretending infallibility: that would be to erect myself into an apostle. Locke.

All the little scrappers after fame fall upon him, and have recourse to their own invention, rather than suffer him to erect himself into an author with impunity.
Addison.

6. To raise consequences from premises.

From fallacious foundations and misapprehend-ed mean, men conclude no way infer-rable from the premises.

Men being too hasty to erect to themselves general notions and ill-grounded theories, find themselves deceived in their stock of knowledge Locke.

Malebache erects this proposition, of seeing all things in God, upon their ruin.
Lecke.

6. To animate; not to depress; to encourage.

Why should not hope
As much erect our thoughts, as fear depress them?
Denham.

To Erect. v.n. To rise upright.

The trefoil against rain swelleth in the earth, and so standeth more upright; for by wet, stalks do erect, and leaves bow down. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

Erect. adj. [erectus, Lat.]

1. Upright; not leaning; not prone.
For men to Err is human, to forgive divine.

ERRATUM. All errors that are made will be corrected in future.

Dr. Adam Smith's "The Wealth of Nations."
ERS, or Bitter Vetch. n. s. [sicva valde annara.] A plant.

ERST, ade. [erst, Germ. aprze, Sax.] 1. First.
2. At first; in the beginning.

FAME. n. s. [fama, Lat.] 1. The act of breaking or bursting forth from any confinement.
2. Burst; emission; something forcing itself out suddenly.

FAREWELL. n. s. [farewell, pl. fai.'ru.,] A word used instead of the word "goodbye" or "good morning," etc., in formal or official language.

FECASTER. n. s. [fiercetor,] A kind of bird.

FETID. adj. [fetida,] Stinking, putrid, offensive.

FETIDITY. n. s. [fetidit.,] The quality of being fetid.

FIRESIDE. n. s. [fireside,] A place where a fire is burning.

FIREWORKS. n. s. A display of fireworks.

FLOODED. adj. [flooded,] Watered, overflowed, inundated.

FLOWER. n. s. [flora,] A plant having blossoms.

FRAGILE. adj. [fragilis,] Easily broken, delicate.

FRAGMENTS. n. s. [frag'ments,] Parts broken off, pieces.

FRANTIC. adj. [frantic,] Lunatic, mad.

FRIGHT. n. s. [fright,] A sudden shock, terror.

FRIEND. n. s. [friend,] A person who is kind and helpful.

FRIENDLY. adj. [friendly,] Kind, helpful, sociable.

FRICTION. n. s. [friction,] The rubbing or sliding of two surfaces.

FRIENDSHIP. n. s. [friendship,] A close association between people.

FRIED. adj. [fried,] Cooked by frying.

FRIENDLY. adj. [friendly,] Kind, helpful, sociable.

FRIED. adj. [fried,] Cooked by frying.

FRIED. adj. [fried,] Cooked by frying.

FRIED. adj. [fried,] Cooked by frying.

FRIENDLY. adj. [friendly,] Kind, helpful, sociable.

FRIED. adj. [fried,] Cooked by frying.

FRIENDLY. adj. [friendly,] Kind, helpful, sociable.

FRIED. adj. [fried,] Cooked by frying.

FRIENDLY. adj. [friendly,] Kind, helpful, sociable.

FRIED. adj. [fried,] Cooked by frying.

FRIENDLY. adj. [friendly,] Kind, helpful, sociable.

FRIED. adj. [fried,] Cooked by frying.

FRIENDLY. adj. [friendly,] Kind, helpful, sociable.

FRIED. adj. [fried,] Cooked by frying.

FRIENDLY. adj. [friendly,] Kind, helpful, sociable.

FRIED. adj. [fried,] Cooked by frying.

FRIENDLY. adj. [friendly,] Kind, helpful, sociable.

FRIED. adj. [fried,] Cooked by frying.

FRIENDLY. adj. [friendly,] Kind, helpful, sociable.

FRIED. adj. [fried,] Cooked by frying.

FRIENDLY. adj. [friendly,] Kind, helpful, sociable.

FRIED. adj. [fried,] Cooked by frying.

FRIENDLY. adj. [friendly,] Kind, helpful, sociable.

FRIED. adj. [fried,] Cooked by frying.

FRIENDLY. adj. [friendly,] Kind, helpful, sociable.

FRIED. adj. [fried,] Cooked by frying.

FRIENDLY. adj. [friendly,] Kind, helpful, sociable.
ESCHAR. n.s. [esp. in w. sh.] A hard crust or scar made by hot applications. When issues are made, or boils exposed, the eschar should be cut out immediately. Sharp's Surg.

ESCHAROTICK. adj. [from eschar.] Caustic; having the power to sear or burn the flesh.

ESCHAROTICK. n.s. A caustic application. An eschar was made by the catheracter, which we thrust off, and continued the use of escharotics. A merit's Surgery, 1689.

ESCHEAT. n.s. [from the French escheoir.] Any lands, or other profits, that fall to a lord within his manor by forfeiture, or the death of his tenant, dying without heir general or special. Eschate is also used sometimes for the place in which the king, or other lord, has escheats of his tenants. Thirdly, eschat is used for a writ, which lies where the tenant, having estate of fee-simple in any lands or tenements held of a superior lord, dies seised, without his general or especial. Cewel.

To ESCHER, v.a. [from the noun.] To fall to the lord of the manor by forfeiture, or for want of heirs. In the last general wars there, I knew many good freeholders executed by martial law, whose houses and lands by saved to their children, which should have otherwise eschated to her majesty. Spenser in Ireland.

ESCHEATOR. n.s. [from eschat.] An officer that observes the escheats of the king in the county whereof he is escheator, and certifies them into the exchequer.

Cewel.

At a Bartholomew fair at London, an escheator of the city arrested a clothier, and seized his goods. Evelin's Reflections.

To ESCHEW. v.a. [esceoir, old Fr.] To fly; to avoid; to shun; to decline. A word almost obsolete.

She was like a young fawn, who, coming in the wind of the hunters, doth not know whether it be a thing or no to be escheated. Sidney.

So let us, which this change of weather view, Change eke our minds, and former lives amend; The old age's sins forepast let us eschew, And fly the faults with which we did offend. Spens.

He who obys, destruction shall escheat; And a mad dog knows both when and what to do. Sam. licences. Of virtue and men, univerally to practice the one, and eschew the other. Attebury.

ESCHUTCHON. n.s. The shield of the family; the picture of the ensigns armorial.

Eschutchion is a French word, from the Latin sigillum, and hence cometh our English word buckler, being in the old Saxon signifying leather, and buck or buck a buck or stag; of whose skins, quilted close together with horn or hard wood, the ancient Britons made their shields. Peacham.

There be now, for martial encouragement, some degrees and orders of chivalry, and some remembrance dishonors. We shall pass over the eschatonous of the tribes of Israel, as they are usually described in the books of Kings. Hooker.

Would you proceed especially against Cain?Shakesp.

This should children take in doing of mischief, but more especially the pleasure they take to put any thing that is capable of it, I cannot persuade myself to be any other than a foreign and introduced disposition. Locke.

Providene hath planted in all men a natural desire and curiosity of knowing things to come; and such things especially as concern our particular happiness, or the general fate of mankind. Burton.

ESPERANCE. n.s. [Fr.] Hope. Not used.

To be worst, The lowest, most dejected things of fortune, Stands still in esperance, lives not in fear.

Yet there is a credence in my heart, An esperance so ostentiously strong,

That doth invert th' arrest of eyes and ears. Shak.

ESPIAL. n.s. [Fr. from espier.] A spy; a scout; one sent to bring intelligence.

Not used.

Those four garrisons, issuing forth at such convenient times as they shall have intelligence, or observed upon the enemy, will deceive him from one side to another. Sanderson in Ireland.

As he march'd along,

By your empires were discovered

Two mightier troops. Shakesp.

Spyes have informed me,

The English in the suburbs close entrench'd, Went through a secret grate. Shak. Hen. VI.

She had some secret that should look abroad for graceful youths, to make Plantagenets. Bacon's Hen. VII.

ESPLANADA. n.s. [Fr.] In fortification, the same with the glacis of the countercarp originally; but now it is taken for the empty space between the glacis of a citadel and the first houses of the town. Harris.

ESPOSTALS. n.s. without a singular. [sponsalis, Lat. epous.] The act of contracting or affiancing a man and woman to each other; the act or ceremony of betrothing.

ESPOSTAL. Used in the act of espousing or betrothing.

The ambassador put his leg, stript naked to the knee, between the exposed sheets; that the ceremony might amount to a consummation. Bacon's Hen. VII.

To ESPOSE. v.a. [espous.] 1. To contract or betroth to another: with to.

Deliver me my wife Michael, which I espoused to me. Bacon. 3. Sum.

Or with.

He had received him as a suppliant, protected him as a person fled for refuge, and espoused him with his kinswoman. Bacon.

To marry; to wed.

Lavinia will make my empressess, And in the sacred Pantheon her espouses. Shakp.

This died sleep,

With flowers, garlands, and sweet smelling herbs, Espos'd Eve's deck'd her first nuptial bed. Shak.

They espous'd; for they with ease were join'd,

Who were before contracted in the mind. Drygen.

If her approv'd,

Let him espouse her to the peer she loves. Pope.

To adopt; to take to himself.

In gratitude unto the duke of Brezgane, for his former favors, I espoused that, they put declared myself in aid of the duke. Bacon's Hen. VII.

To maintain; to defend.

Their gods did not only interest themselves in the event of wars, but also espoused several parties in a visible corporeal descent. Drygen. Jew. Deli. 624.
ES S
The city, army, court, expose no cause. Dryd.

Men expose the well-endowed opinions in fashion, and then seek arguments either to make good their beauty, or varnish over their delicuity. Locke.

The righteousness of the best cause may be over-powered by the injuricousness thereof work sensible smart. Smirr.

To discover a thing intended to be hid. He who before he was espied was afraid, after being perceived was amazed, now being hardly rapped upon, left both fear and shame, and was moved to anger. Sidney.

To see unexpectedly. As one of them opened his sack, he espied his money. Gen.

To discover as a spy. Men sent me to spy out the land, and I brought him word again. Isa. xiv. 7.

To watch; to look about. Stand by the way and esp; ask him that fleeth, what is done? Job. 31.

The armour-bearer or attendant on a knight. 1. The armour-bearer or attendant on a knight. 2. A title of dignity, and next in degree below a knight. Those to whom this title is now of right due, are all the younger sons of noblemen, and their heirs male for ever; the four esquires of the king's body; the eldest sons of all baronets; so also of all knights of the Bath, and knights bachelors, and their heirs male in the right line; those that serve the king in any worshipful calling, as the serjeant chirurgeon, serjeant of the ewy, master cook, &c., such as are created esquires by the king with a collar of S. S. of silver, as the heralds and serjeants at arms. The chief of some ancient families are also wise esquires by prescription; those that bear any superior office in the commonwealth, as high sheriff of any county, who retains the title of esquire during his life, in respect of the great trust he has had of the posse comitatus. He who is a justice of the peace has it during the time he is in commission, and no longer. Utter bar-

What, are our English deans?—Sir Richard Baker, Davy Gam esquire. Shakesp.

To ESSAY. v. a. [esayer, Fr.] 1. To attempt; to try; to endeavour. While I this unexamined task essay, Pass aweful galls, and beat my painful way, The casual gods of divine assistance bring. Blackmore. No conquest she, but o'er herself desist'd: No arts essay'd, but not to be admist'd. Pope.

2. To make experiment of. To try the value and purity of metals. The standard in our mint being now settled, the rules and methods of essaying suited to it should remain unvariable. Locke.

ESSAY. n. s. [from the verb. The accent is used on either syllable.] 1. Attempt; endure. Fruitless our hopes, though pious our essays; Ye're to preserve a friend, and mine to praise. 2. A loose silly of the mind; an irregular indigested piece; not a regular and orderly composition. My essays, of all my other works, have been most current. 3. Goodly by his work survey. And calls his finish'd poem an essay. Poem to Rose. 3. A trial; an experiment. This treatise prides itself in no higher a title than that of an essay, or imperfect attempt at a subject. He wrote this but as an essay, or taste of my virtue. To speak pell-mell. Rejoicements wear us into a liking of what possibly, in the first essay, displeased us. Locke.

First taste of any thing; first experiment. Translating the first of Homer's Idiads, I undertook an essay to the whole work. Dryd. Fab. Pec.

ESSE NCE. n. s. [essentia, Lat.] 1. Essence is but the very nature of any being, whether it be actually existing or no: a rose in Winter has an essence; in Summer it has existence also.

Watts's Log. One thinks the soul is air; mother, fire; Another, blood diffus'd about the heart; And a third, the elements conspier. And to her essence each doth give a part. D. Davies.

The nature of the spirit seems the most unknown to me than it is, that I might believe its existence, without meddling with all of its essence. More's Divine Dialogues.

He wrote the nature of things upon their names: he could view essences in themselves, and read forms without the comment of their respective properties. Locke.

2. Formal existence; that which makes anything to be what it is. The visible church of Jesus is one in outward profession of those things, which supernaturally appertain to the very essence of Christianity, and are necessary required in every particular Christian man. Hooker.

3. Existence; the quality of being. In such cognizance have I food, with such a darkness and heaviness of mind, that I might have been persuaded to have resigned my very existence. Sidney.

4. Being; existent person.

5. Species of existent being. Here be four of you, as differing as the four elements; and yet you are friends: as for Epona, because he is temperate, and without passion, he may be the fifth essence. Bacon.

For spirits when they please, Can either sex assume, or both; so soft And uncomprised is their essence pure; Not ty'd or managed with joint or limb. Milton.

7. The cause of existence. This sense is not proper. She is my essence; and I leave to be, If I be not by her fair influence. Foster'd, refined'd, cherished, kept alive. Shakesp.

8. [In medicine.] The chief properties or virtues of any simple, or composition collected in a narrow compass.

9. Perfume; odour; scent. Our humble province is to tend the fair; To save the fragrant flowers, nor let th' impur'd essence exhale. Pope.

To ESSENCE. v. a. [from essence.] To perfume; to scent.

The husband raps, from morn to night, at essayed gaps and toady courtiers. Add. 's Sppe.
EST

Soon after the rebellion broke out, the Presbyterian sect was established in all its forms by an act of the sixths and commons. Swift.

3. To make firm; to ratify, every word, and every binding oath to afflict the soul, her husband may establish it, or her lawful son. Act, xvi. 5.

5. To form or model. He appointed in what manner his family should be established, Charleton.

6. To found; to build firmly; to fix immovably. A sense not in use.

7. To make a settlement of any inheritance, A sense not in use.

ESTABLISHER, n. s. [from establish; establishment, Fr.]

1. Settlement; fixed state.

All happy peace, and goodly government, Is settled there in sure establishment. Fairy Queen.

2. Confirmation of something already done; ratification.

He had not the act penned by way of recognition of right; as, on the other side, he avoided to have it by new law; but chose rather a kind of middle way; a new establishment. Jast. H. VII.

3. Settlement regulation; form; model of a government or family.

Now come into that general reformation, and bring in that establishment by which all men should be contained in due order. Spencer.

4. Foundation; fundamental principle; settled law.

The sacred order to which you belong, and even the establishment on which it subsists, has often been struck at; but in vain. Atterbury.

5. Allowance; income; salary.

His excellency, who had the sole disposal of the emperor's revenue, might gradually lessen your establishment. Swift.

6. Settled or final rest.

Whilst we set up our hopes and establishment here, we do not seriously consider that God has provided another and better place for us. Wake.

ESTATE n. s. [estat, Fr.]

1. The general interest; the business of the government; the publick. In this sense it is now commonly written state.

Many times the things added to judgment may be mean & stran, when the reason and consequence thereof may reach to point of estate; I call matters of estate not only the parts of suavcigility, but whatsoever introduceth any great alteration, or dangerous precedent, or concerneth manifestly and considerably the portion of people. Bacon's Essay.

2. Condition of life, with regard to prosperity or adversity.

Thanks to piddle chance, She cast us headlong from our high estate. Dryden.

3. Possessions, in general. Truth and certainty are not all secured by innate principles; but men are in the same uncertain, fluctuating state with as without them. Locke.

4. He had no possession; generally meant of possessions in land, or realities.

She accused us to the king, as though we went about to overthrow him in his own estate. Sidney.

Go, misers! go for lucres sell thy soul.

Truck wares for wares, and trundle from pole to pole.

That men may say, when thou art dead and gone, See what a vast estate he left his son! Dryd. Pers.

5. Rank, quality.

Who hath not heard of the greatness of your estate? Who seeth not that your estate is much excelled with that sweet uniting of all beauties. Sidney.

6. A person of high rank. This sense is disused.

She is a duchess, a great estate. Latimer.

Heed, on his birth-day, made a supper to his lords, high captains, and chief estates of Galilee. Mark xvi. 21.

To ESTATE. v. a. [from the noun.] To settle as a fortune.

What hath this queen Samson's me luther?

—A contract of true love to celebrate, And some donation freely to esteem. On the latest loves. Shakspe. Tempest.

To ESTEEM. v. a. [estimer, Fr. estimo, Lat.] 1. To set a value whether high or low upon any thing.

The worth of all men by their end estem, And then due praise, or due reproach they yield. Spencer.

A knowledge in the works of nature they honour, and esteem highly profound wisdom, and be this wisdom saveth not. Hooker.

I preferred her before sceptres and thrones, and esteemed riches nothing in comparison of her. Wind, viii. 3.

2. To compare; to estimate by proportion.

Besides, those single forms doth esteem, And in her balance doth their values try. Daven.

3. To prize; to rate high; to regard with reverence.

Who would not be loved more, though he were esteemed less? Dryden.

4. To hold in opinion; to think; to imagine.

Our man esteemed one day above another; another esteemed every day alike. Rom. xiv. 5.

To ESTEEM. v. n. To consider as to value: with of.

Many would little esteem of their own lives, yet for remore of their wives and children, would be withheld from that heinous crime. Estvem.

High value; reverential regard.

Who can see, Without esteem of their lives, or worth of poverty, Sober Facilitius, or can cease to admire The ploughman counsell in his coarse attire? Dryd.

Both those poets lived in much esteem with good and holy men in orders. Dryden's Fables, Preface.

I am not uneasy that many, whom I never had any esteem for, are likely to enjoy this world after me. Pope.

Esteemers. n. s. [from esteem.] One that highly values; one that sets high rate upon any thing.

This might instruct the proudest esteemers of his own parts, how useful it is to talk and consult with others. Locke.

ESTIMABLE. adj. [Fr.] 1. Valuable; worth a large price.

A pound of man's flesh, taken from a man, Is not so estimable or profitable As flesh of mutons, becs, or goats. Shakspe.

2. Worthy of esteem; worthy of some degree of honour and respect.

A lady said of her two companions, that one was more estimable. Ye other more estimable. You lost one who gave hopes of being, in time, every thing that was estimable and good. Temple.

ESTIMABLNESS. n. s. [from estimable.]

The quality of deserving regard. To ESTIMATE. v. a. [estimo, Lat.] 1. To rate; to adjust the value of; to judge of any thing by its proportion to something else.

When a man shall sanctify his house to the Lord, the priest shall inquire it whether it be good or bad: as the priest shall esteem it, so shall it stand.

Lev. xxvii. 16.

2. To calculate; to compute.

ESTIMATE. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. Computation; calculation.

Upon a moderate trial and calculation of the quantity of water now actually contained in the abyss, I found that this alone was full enough to cover the whole globe to the height assigned by Moses.

Wordard.

2. Value.

I'd love My country's good, with a respect more tender, More holy and profound than mine own life, My dear wife's esteem, her womb's increase, The treasure of my life. Shakspe. Coriolanus.

3. Valuation; a measure of comparative value; comparative judgment.

The only way to come to a true esteem upon the odds betwixt a publick and a private life, is to try both. L'Estrange.

Outward actions cannot give a just esteem of us, since there are many impositions of a man which are not capable of appearing in actions. Addison.

ESTIMATION. n. s. [from estimate.]

1. The act of adjusting proportional value.

If a man should sanctify unto the Lord some part of a field, the estimation shall be according to the seced. Leviticus.

2. Calculation; computation.

3. Opinion; judgement.

In our own estimation we account such particulars more worthly than those that are already tried and known. Bacon.

4. Esteem; regard; honour.

Crimes there were hid to his charge many, the least wherein being just, had bereaved him of esteem and credit with men. Hooker.

Of your brace of unpraisable estimations, this one is but frail, and the other casual. Shakspe.

To be of worth and worthy estimation, And not without desert so well reputed. Shakspe.

Shakspe. shall have estimation among the multitude, and honour with the elders. Wind. vii. 10.

A plain reason of the publick honours due to the magistrate, is, that he may be in due estimation and reverence. Atterbury.

ESTIMATIVE. adj. [from estimate.]

Having the power of comparing and adjusting the preference.

We find in animals an estimative orjudical faculty, an apperception, or aversion, and loco-citative faculty answering the will. Hale.

The error is not in the eye, but in the estimative faculty, which mistakenly concludes that colour to belong to the wall, which indeed belongs to the object. Boyle.

ESTIMATOR. n. s. [from estimate.] A settler of rates; a comptuist.

ESTIVAL. adj. [estivis, Lat.]

1. Pertaining to the summer.

2. Continuing for the summer.

ESTIVATION. n. s. [estivation, Lat.] The act of passing the summer.

A grotto is a place of shade, or estivation. Bacon.

ESTOPPEL. n. s. [law term.]

Such an act as bars any legal process.

ESTOVERS. n. s. [law term.]

Necessaries allowed by law.

ESTRÆDE. n. s. [Fr. stratum, Lat.] An even or level space. Dict.

To ESTRANGÉ. v. a. [estranger, Fr.]
1. To keep at a distance; to withdraw.

Had we not only cut off their corruptions, but also estranged ourselves from them in things indifferent, what needeth not estrangement from the house of God, but for instruction of man baptized, bred, and brought up in the bosom of the church.

2. To alienate; to divert from its original use or possession.

They have estranged this place, and have burnt incense in it to other gods.

3. To alienate from affection; to turn from kindness to malevolence or indifference.

How comes it now, my husband, oh, how comes it, that thou art thus estranged from thyself? Thyself I call it, being strange to me.

4. To withdraw or withhold.

We must estrange our belief from every thing which is not clearly and distinctly evidenced.

ESTRANGEMENT. n. s. [from estrange.]

Alienation; distance; removal; voluntary abstraction.

Desires, by a long estrangement from better things, come at length perfectly to lost, and fly off from them.

ESTRAPADE. n. s. [Fr.] The defence of a horse that will not obey, who, to get rid of his rider, rises mightily before, and while his forefoot is yet in the air, yeats furiously with his hind legs.

Estre'ate. n. s. [extractum, Lat.]

The true copy of an original writing: for example, of amencements or penalties, set down in the rolls of a court, to be levied by the bailiff, or other officer, of every man for his offence. A law term.

Estrépement. n. s. [of the French word estrepier.] Spoil made by the reversal for term of life upon any lands or woods, to the prejudice of him in the reversion.

Covet.

Estrich: n. s. [commonly written es-trich; struthio camelus.] The largest of birds.

Is to be frightened out of fear; and, in that mood, the dove will peck the estrich.

The peacock, not at thy command, assumes his glorious train; nor estrich her rare plumes.

Estimation. n. s. [from estuare, Lat.] An arm of the sea; the mouth of a lake or river, in which the tide reciprocates; a frith.

To ESTUATE. v. a. [estuo, Lat.] To swell and fall reciprocally; to boil; to be in a state of violent commotion.

Diet.

ESTUATION. n. s. [from estuare, Lat.]

The state of boiling; reciprocation of rise and fall; agitation; commotion.

Rivers and lakes that want fermenting parts at the bottom, are not excited into situations; therefore some dry flows are thereby others.

The motion of the will is accompanied with a sensible commotion of the spirits, and an excitement of the blood.

Diet.

ESTUATE. v. a. [estuo, Lat.]

To swell and fall reciprocally; to boil; to be in a state of violent commotion.

Diet.
3. Creech seems to have accentuated the first syllable.

4. Consider its name, that the grateful Jove Hath eren'd the glory of [his] love. Creech's Manil.

ETHER. n. s. [ether, Lat. aether.]
1. An element more fine and subtle than air; air refined or sublimed.
2. Celestial; heavenly.
3. Ethereal. adj. [from ether.]
1. Formed of ether.
4. Ethereal. adj. [from ether.]
1. Formed of ether; heavenly.
2. Ethereal. adj. [from ether.]
1. Moral; treating on morality.
2. Ethically. adv. [from ethical.]
1. According to the doctrines of morality.
2. Ethick. adj. [aether.]
1. Moral; delivering precepts of morality.

ETHICKS. n. s. without the singular. [aether.]
The doctrine of morality; a system of morality.

ETHICAL. adj. [aether.]
1. Moral; treating on morality.
2. Ethically. adv. [from ethical.]
1. According to the doctrines of morality.
2. Ethick. adj. [aether.]
1. Moral; delivering precepts of morality.

ETHOLOGICAL. adj. [aether.]
1. Treating of morality.

ETOLOGY. n. s. [aetologia.]
An account of the causes of any thing, generally of a distemper.
I have not particulars enough to enable me to enter into the etiology of this distemper. Arbuthnot.

ETYMOLOGICAL. adj. [from etymology.]
1. Relating to etymology; relating to the derivation of words.
2. To evacuate v. n. [evacuo, Lat.]
1. To make empty; to clear.
2. To evacuate; to evacuate; to nullify; to annul.
3. To void by any of the excrementary passages.
4. To make void; to evacuate; to nullify; to annul.
5. To quit; to withdraw from out of a place.

ETHOLOGY. n. s. [ethologia, Lat.]
1. Medicine that procures evacuation by any passage.

ETHOLOGIST. n. s. [from etymology.]
One who searches out the original of words; one who shows the derivation of words from their original.

ETOLOGY. n. s. [aetologia, Lat.]
1. The descent or derivation of a word from its original; the deduction of formations from the radical word; the analysis of compound words into primitives.
2. Ethic. adj. [aether.]
1. Of or pertaining to ethical, our moral, moral.

EVACUATION. n. s. [from evacuate.]
1. Such emissions as leave a vacancy; discharge.
2. Consider the vast emissions of men that England hath bid assistance lent to foreign kingdoms.
3. Abolition; nullification.

ETYMOLOGIST. n. s. [from etymology.]
One who searches out the original of words; one who shows the derivation of words from their original.

ETYMOLOGY. n. s. [aetologia, Lat.]
1. The doctrine of morality; a system of morality.

ETHICAL. adj. [aether.]
1. Moral; treating on morality.

ETHOLOGICAL. adj. [aether.]
1. Treating of morality.

ETOLOGY. n. s. [aetologia.]
An account of the causes of any thing, generally of a distemper.
I have not particulars enough to enable me to enter into the etiology of this distemper. Arbuthnot.

ETYMOLOGICAL. adj. [from etymology.]
1. Relating to etymology; relating to the derivation of words.
2. To evacuate v. n. [evacuo, Lat.]
1. To make empty; to clear.
2. To evacuate; to evacuate; to nullify; to annul.
3. To void by any of the excrementary passages.
4. To make void; to evacuate; to nullify; to annul.
5. To quit; to withdraw from out of a place.

ETHOLOGY. n. s. [ethologia, Lat.]
1. Medicine that procures evacuation by any passage.
EVA

God will indeed judge the world in righteousness; but 'is an evangelical, not a legal righteousness, and by the intervention of the man Christ Jesus, who is the Saviour as well as the Judge of the world.

Afterbury.

2. Contained in the gospel.

Those evangelical hymns they allow not to stand in our faith.

EVANGELISAM. n.s. [from evangelize.] The promulgation of the blessed gospel.

Thus was this land saved from indifference, through the apothetical and miraculous evangels. Bacon.

EVANGELIST. n.s. [eangelist, i.e. evangelist, that is, good tidings.] Good tidings; the message of purity and salvation; the holy gospel; the gospel of Jesus.

Good Locus, That first receiv'd Christianity, The sacred pledge of Christ's evangel. Tytler.

EVANID. adj [eavanised, Lat.] Faint; weak; evanescent.

Where there is heat and strength enough in the plant to make the leaves odorate, there the smell of the flower is rather enamid and weaker than that of the leaves.

The deccotions of simples, which bear the visable colours of bodies decoted, are dead and enamid, without the comination of allum, argol, and the like.

Brown.

I put as great disinterest between our new lights and ancient truths, as between the sun and an enamid meteor. Glanvile.

To EVArish. v. a. [eavanese, Lat.] To vanish; to escape from notice or perception.

EVAPORABLE. adj. [from evaporate.]

Easily dissipated in fumes or vapours.

Such cordial powders as are aromatic, their virtue lies in parts that are of themselves volatile and easily evaporable. Grew.

To EVAPORATE. v. n. [evaporate, Lat.] To fly away in vapours or fumes; to waste insensibly as a volatile spirit.

Poetry is of so subtle a spirit, that in the pouring out of our language into another it will all evaporate.

Denham.

Our works unhappily evaporated into words; we should have talked less, and done more.

Decay of Poetry.

Being weary with attending the slow consummation of the Sun, we set it in a digesting furnace to evaporate more nimible.

Boyle.

This vapour falling upon joints which have not heat enough to dispel it, cannot be cured otherwise than by burning, by which it evaporates. Temple.

The enemy takes a surer way to consume us, by letting our courage evaporate against stones and rabbid.

Swift.

To EVAPORATE. v. a.

1. To drive away in fumes; to disperse in vapours.

If we compute that prodigious mass of water daily thrown into the sea from all the rivers, we should then perceive that much is perpetually evaporated, and cast again upon the continents to supply those immense streams. Bentley.

Convents abroad are so many retreats for the speculative, the melancholy, the proud, the silent, the politics, and the morose, to spend themselves, and evaporate the anxious purings.

We perceive clearly that fire will warm or burn us, and will evaporate water. Watts's Logick.

To give vent to; to let out in ebullition or splashes.

My lord of Exeter evaporated his thoughts in a sonnet to be sung before the queen. Watts.

EVAPORATION. n.s. [from evaporate.]

1. The act of flying away in fumes or vapours; vent; discharge.

They are but the farts of adulterous choler, and the exhalation of a vituline spirit.

Emanations are at some times greater, according to the greater heat of the sun; so wherever they alight again in rain, 'tis superior in quantity to the rain of colder seasons. Woodward.

2. The act of attendating matter, so as to make it fume away.

Those waters, by rarefaction and evaporation, are ascended.

3. In pharmacy. An operation by which liquids are spent or driven away in steams, so as to leave some part stronger, or of a higher consistence than before.

Quincy.

EVASION. n.s. [evasum, Lat.] Excuse; subterfuge; sophistry; artifice; artful means of eluding or escaping.

We are too well acquainted with these answers; but his evasion, wing'd thus swift with scorn, cannot outfly our apprehensions. Shakesp.

Him, after all disputes, Forb'd I should exult in his absolution; and reasonings, though through mazes, lead me still But to my own conviction. Milton's Par. Los.

In vain thus strive to cover shame with shame; Thou by evasion thy crime uncover'st at more.

Milton.

EVASIVE. adj. [from evade.]

1. Practising evasion; elusive.

Thus he, though conscious of the theritel guest, Answer'd evasive of the sly request. Pope's Odys.

2. Containing an evasion; sophistical; dishonestly artful.

EvASIVELY. adv. [from evasive.] By evasion; elusively; sophistically.

EUCHARIST. n.s. [eucharistia.] The act of giving thanks; the sacramental act in which the death of our Redeemer is commemorated with a thankful remembrance; the sacrament of the Lord's supper.

Himself did better like of common bread to be used in the eucharist. Hooker.

Some receive the sacrament as a means to procure great graces and blessings, others as an eucharist and an office of thanksgiving for what they have received.

Taylor.

EUCHARISTICAL. adj. [from eucharist.] 1. Containing acts of thanksgiving.

The latter part of our eucharist, which began at the breaking and blessing of the bread. Brown.

It would not be amiss to put it into the eucharisted part of our liturgy: we praise thee, O God, for our lips and senses.

Rag.

2. Relating to the sacrament of the supper of the Lord.

ECHOLOGY. n.s. [eakholoJik.] A formulary of prayers.

EUERASIA. n.s. [eurasia.] An agreeable well proportioned mixture of qualities, whereby a body is said to be in a good state of health.

Quain.

EVE. n.s. [epe, Sax. evad, or Even, s. avad, Dut.] 1. The close of the day; the latter part of the day; the interval between bright light and darkness.

They, like so many Alexanders, Have in these parts from morn till even fought. Dryd.

Such sights as youthful poets dream.

On Summer even by haunted stream Milton.

O, nightingale, that on thy bloomy spray Ward not at even, when all th' earth's sounds are still. Mil.

Th' innocent by one sign shows the bane. Dryd.

With other, & all others consumes the breeze. Thomson's Spring.

The vigil or fast to be observed before an holiday. In this sense only eve is used, not even.

Let the immediate preceding day he kept as the eve to this great feast. Dupin's Rule to Denom.

EVEN. adj. [open, Sax. even, Dut. aequus, Lat.] 1. Level; not rugged; not unequal; smooth as opposed to rough.

To see a beggar's hut in riches flow.

Dryd.

The present face of our Redeemer is more even and level than it was formerly. Addisn on Joth.

The superficies of such places is not even, but have many cavities and swellings, which, how shallow soever, do a little vary the thickness of the plate. Newton's Opticks.

2. Uniform; equal to itself.

Lay the rough path of provident nature even, And open in each heart a little heaven. Prior.

3. Level with; parallel to.

That the net way be even to the midst of the altar. Euseb.

And shall lay thee even with the ground. Luke, xix. 44.

4. Not having inclination any way; nor leaning to any side.

He was a noble servant to them; but he could not Carry his honours even.

Shakesp. Coriol. 5. Not having any part higher or lower than the other.

When Alexander demanded of one what was the fittest seat of his empire, he laid a dry hedge before him, and desired him to set his foot on one side thereof; which being done, all the other parts of the hedge did rise; but when he did set his foot in the middle, all the other parts lay flat and even.

Livy.

6. Equal on both sides; fair; not favouring either.

Upheld by me, yet once more he shall stand On even ground against his mortal foe. Milton

7. Without any thing owed, either good or ill; out of debt.

We reckon with your several loves, And make us even with you; Henceforth be ears. Shakesp. Macbeth

If we are even with thee, doubt it not. Shakesp.

I do confess The blind led's power, while he inhabits there, But I'll be even with him nevertheless. Shakesp.

In taking revenge, a man is but even with his enemy, but in passing it over, he is superior. Bacon's Essay.

Even reckoning makes lasting friends, and the way to make reckonings even is to make them often. South.

The publick is always even with an author, who has not a just deference for them; the contempt is reciprocal. Addison.

The true reason of this strange doctrine was to be even with the magistrate, who was against them; and they resolved at any rate to be against him. Afterbury.

8. Calm; not subject to elevation or depression; not uncertain.

647
EVE

Desires compose’d, affections ever even.
Tears that delight, and sighs that want to be her’s.

9. Capable to be divided into equal parts; not odd. Let him tell me whether the number of the stars be even or odd. Taylor’s Rule of Living Holy. It is not much truth in that numerical conceit in the lateral division of man by even and odd, ascribing the odd unto the right side, and even unto the left. Browne’s Folly. Err. To EVEN. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To make even.
2. To make out of debt; to put in a state in which either good or ill is fully repaid. Nothing can, or shall content my soul, ’Till I am creased with him, wise for wife. Shakespeare.

3. To level; to make level. This temple Xerxes ered with the soil, which Alexander is said to have repaired. Raleigh. Beat, roll, and most carpet-walks and camanole; for now the ground is supple, and it will even all inequalities. Eccles.

To EVEN. v. n. To be equal to. Now disused. A like strange observation takes place here as at Stonehenge, that a redoubled numbering never exactly meets with the first. Carew.

EVEN. adj. [often contracted to e’n.]
1. A word of strong assertion; verily. Even so did those Gauls possess the coasts. Spanis. Thou wast a soldier Even to Cato’s wish; not force, and terrible Only in strokes. Shakespeare. Coriol. Act I. Sc. IV.
Dangers rocks, Which, touching but my gentle vessels side, Would scatter all the spices on the stream, And, in a word, yea, even now with this, And now with nothing. Shakespeare.

It is the chance that the good man ventures: after this life, if there be no God, he is as well as the bad; but if there be a God, is infinitely better, even so much as unanswerable and eternal happiness is better than extreme and endless misery. Tilottam. He might even have well employed his time, as some priests have done, in catching moles. Atterbury.

2. Notwithstanding; though it was so that. All I can say for those passages is, that I knew they were bad enough to please even when I wrote them. Dryden.

3. Likewise; not only so, but also. The motions of all the lights of heaven might afford measures of time, if we could number them; but most of those motions are not evident, and the great majority, and serve also to measure even the motions of those others. Holder. Here all their rage, and e’en their murmurs cease, and Sacred silence reigns, and universal peace. Pope.

4. So much as. Books give the same turn to our thoughts that company does to our conversation, without loading our memories, or making us even sensible of the change. Swift.

5. A word of exaggeration in which a secret comparison is implied; as, even the great, that is, the great like the mean. Nor death itself can wholly wash your stains. But long contracted ill e’en in the soul remains. Dryden.

I have made several discoveries which appear new, even to those who are versed in critical learning; that is in that numerial conceit in which I have a profound experience. Siddons’s Spectator.

6. A term of concession. Since you refined the notion, and corrected the malignity, I shall e’en let it pass. Collier.

EVENHANDED. adj. [even and hand.]
Impartial; equitable. Evenhanded justice Returns the ingredients of our poison’d chalice To our own lips. Shakespeare. Macbeth.

EVENING. n. s. [even, Sax. aestud, Dut.

The close of the day; the beginning of night. I shall fall Like a bright exclamation, even evening, And give no man see me more. Shakespeare. Henry VIII.

The devil is now more laborious than ever, the long day of mankind drawing towards an evening, and the world’s tragedy and time near an end. Dryden.

Mean time the sun descended from the skies, And made bright evening star began to rise. Dryden.

It was the sacred rule among the Pythagoreans that they should every evening thrice run over the actions and words of the day. Watts on the Mind.

EVENLY. adj. [evenly.
1. Equally; uniformly; in an equipoise. In an infinite chaos nothing could be formed; no particles could convene by natural attraction; for every one there must have infinite matter around it, and therefore must rest for ever, being evenly balanced between infinite attractions. Bentley.

2. Levelly; without aspersities. A polish cleanliness, evenly and smoothly spread not overthine and wavy, but of a pretty solid consistence. Wotton.

3. Without inclination to either side; in a posture parallel to the horizon; horizontally. The upper face of the sea is known to be level by my experience, and even distant from the centre, and waves deeper and deeper the farther one saileth from the shore. Breviary of the Port of Dunwich.

You serve a great and gracious master, and there is a most hopeful young prince: it behoves you to carry yourselves wisely and evenly between them. Both.

EVENNESS. n. s. [evenly.
1. State of being even.
2. Uniformity; regularity. The other most readily yieldeth to the revolutions of the celestial bodies, and the making them with that evenness and regularity is requisite in them all.

3. Equality of surface; levelness.

4. Freedom from inclination to either side. A crooked stick is not straitened, unless it be bent as far on the clear contrary side, that so it may settle itself at the length in a middle state of evenness between both. Hooker.

5. Impartiality; equal respect.

6. Calmness; freedom from perturbation. Though he speak these blessings as much as any man, yet lie bore the loss of them, when it happened, with great composure and evenness of mind. Atterbury.

EVENSONG. n. s. [even and song.

1. The form of worship used in the evening. There, ‘chantress of the woods among, I woo to hear thy evening song. Milton. If a man were but of a day’s life, it is well if he last till even-song, and then says his complaine an hour before the time. Taylor.

2. The evening; the close of the day. He curia’d his notes both evening and morrow. Dryden.

EVENTIDE. n. s. [even and tide.]
The time of evening. With a swarm of gnats at even-tide, Out of the tents of Allen do arise, Their murmuring small trumpets sounding wide. Fairy Queen.

Isaac went out to meditate at the even-tide. Gen. xxiv. 63.

EVENT. n. s. [eventus, Lat.

1. An incident; any thing that happens, good or bad. There is one event the righteous and to the wicked. Excl.

Oli heavy times, begetting such events! Shakespeare.

2. The consequence of an action; the conclusion; the upshot.
EVER.

I know a lord, who values nothing, even for a thousand years, nor any estate that is not for ever and ever.

Temple.

The meeting points the fatal lock discovered.

From the fair head, for ever and ever.

Pope.

5. At one time, as ever and anon: that is, at one time and another; now and then.

So long as Guyon with her communed,

Into the ground she cast her modest eye;

And ever and anon, with rosy red.

The bushful blood her snowy cheeks did dye.

The fat one s would be ever and anon making sport with the lean, and calling them starvelings, Elastrene.

He lay stretched along,

And ever and anon a silent tear

Stole down and trickled from his hoary beard.

Dryden.

6. In any degree.

Let no man fear that mortal creature ever the less, because he sees the apostle safe from that pestilence.

Holl.

Fora mine undiscovered, neither the owner of the ground or any body else are ever the richer.

Collier.

It suffices, in the name of any Idea, that it be considered as one representation or picture, though made up of ever so many particulars.

Locke.

There must be a rank as man.

And all the question, wrangle ever so long.

Is only this, If God has plac'd him wrong?

Pope.

7. A word of enforcement, or aggravation.

As soon as ever he had done it; that is, immediately after he had done it.

In this sense it is scarcely used but in familiar language.

That ever this fellow should have fewer words than a parrot, and yet the son of a woman.

Shak.

They break all their bones in pieces, or ever they came to the bottom of the sea.

Dan. iv. 24.

That purser in your hand has a twin-brother, as like him as ever he can look.

Dryg. Spanish Fry.

As sooner as ever the bird is dead.

Opening again, he lays his claim.

To half the profit, half the fame.

Prior.

The title of duke had been sunk in the family ever since the attainture of the great Duke of Suffolk.

Addison on Italy.

8. EVER A. Any. [as ever, that is, ever so or ever so each is one all.] This word is still retained in the Scottish dialect.

I am old, I am old.

—I love thee better than I love a scarce young boy of them all.

Shak. Henry IV.

9. It is often confounded with er.

It is much used in composition in the sense of always: as, evergreen, green throughout the ear; everlasting, enduring without end. It is added almost arbitrarily to neutral participles and adjectives, and will be sufficiently explained by the following instances.

EVERBUB'LING. adj. [ever and bubbling.] Boiling up with perpetual murmurs.

Pausing murmurs, still'd out of her breast;

That everlastingly, heady.

Crab.

EVERBURN'ING. adj. [ever and burning.]

Unextinguished.

His tail was stretched out in wondrous length,

That to the house of heavenly gods it reached:

And with that proud behaviour strength.

The everburning lamps from thence it brought.

Speck.

Torture without end.

Still urges, and a fiery deluge, fed

With everburning sulphur unconsum'd!

Milton.

EVERDUR'ING. adj. [ever and during.]

Eternal; enduring without end.

Our souls, piercing through the impurity of flesh, behold the highest heavens, and thence

Vol. I.

EVER.

I know a lord, who values nothing,

as for a thousand years, nor any estate that is not for ever and ever.

Temple.

The meeting points the fatal lock discovered.

From the fair head, for ever and ever.

Pope.

5. At one time, as ever and anon: that is, at one time and another; now and then.

So long as Guyon with her communed,

Into the ground she cast her modest eye;

And ever and anon, with rosy red.

The bushful blood her snowy cheeks did dye.

The fat one s would be ever and anon making sport with the lean, and calling them starvelings,

Elastrene.

He lay stretched along,

And ever and anon a silent tear

Stole down and trickled from his hoary beard.

Dryden.

6. In any degree.

Let no man fear that mortal creature ever the less, because he sees the apostle safe from that pestilence.

Holl.

Fora mine undiscovered, neither the owner of the ground or any body else are ever the richer.

Collier.

It suffices, in the name of any Idea, that it be considered as one representation or picture, though made up of ever so many particulars.

Locke.

There must be a rank as man.

And all the question, wrangle ever so long.

Is only this, If God has plac'd him wrong?

Pope.

7. A word of enforcement, or aggravation.

As soon as ever he had done it; that is, immediately after he had done it.

In this sense it is scarcely used but in familiar language.

That ever this fellow should have fewer words than a parrot, and yet the son of a woman.

Shak.

They break all their bones in pieces, or ever they came to the bottom of the sea.

Dan. iv. 24.

That purser in your hand has a twin-brother, as like him as ever he can look.

Dryg. Spanish Fry.

As sooner as ever the bird is dead.

Opening again, he lays his claim.

To half the profit, half the fame.

Prior.

The title of duke had been sunk in the family ever since the attainture of the great Duke of Suffolk.

Addison on Italy.

8. EVER A. Any. [as ever, that is, ever so or ever so each is one all.] This word is still retained in the Scottish dialect.

I am old, I am old.

—I love thee better than I love a scarce young boy of them all.

Shak. Henry IV.

9. It is often confounded with er.

It is much used in composition in the sense of always: as, evergreen, green throughout the ear; everlasting, enduring without end. It is added almost arbitrarily to neutral participles and adjectives, and will be sufficiently explained by the following instances.

EVERBUB'LING. adj. [ever and bubbling.] Boiling up with perpetual murmurs.

Pausing murmurs, still'd out of her breast;

That everlastingly, heady.

Crab.

EVERBURN'ING. adj. [ever and burning.]

Unextinguished.

His tail was stretched out in wondrous length,

That to the house of heavenly gods it reached:

And with that proud behaviour strength.

The everburning lamps from thence it brought.

Speck.

Torture without end.

Still urges, and a fiery deluge, fed

With everburning sulphur unconsum'd!

Milton.

EVERDUR'ING. adj. [ever and during.]

Eternal; enduring without end.

Our souls, piercing through the impurity of flesh, behold the highest heavens, and thence

Vol. I.
EVI

to Evestigate. v. a. [estigato, Lat.]
To search out.

Diquh. n. s. [This word is so written by most writers; but since the original p, Saxon, or Welch yew, more favours the easier orthography of yew, I have referred it thither.] A tree.

At the first stretch of both his hands he drew, And almost joined the horns of the toung edge.

Dryden's Evid.

To EVICTION. v. a. [eviscunc, Lat.]
1. To dispossess of by a judicial course. The law of England would specifically eject them out of possession, and therefore they held the best policy to cast off the yoke of English law.

Daxies on Ireland.

2. To take away by a sentence of law. His lands were eredit from him. K. James.

3. To prove; to evince. Little used.
This nervous fluid has never been discovered in live animals by the sense, however assisted; nor its necessity evicted by any experiment. Cheyne.

EVICTATION. n. s. [from eject.]
1. Dispossession or deprivation by a definite sentence of a court of judicature. If any of the parties be laid asleep under pretence of arbitration, and the other party doth cautiously get a writ in a common law, yet the pretended court will set back all things, and no respect had to ejection or dispossession. Bacon.

2. Proof; evidence; certain testimony.
A number of voices carries the question, in all our debates, rather as an expedient for peace than an evasion of the right.

EVIDENCE. n. s. [Fr.]
1. The state of being evident; clearness; indubitable certainty; notoriety.

2. Testimony; proof.
I had delivered the evidence of the purchase unto Baruch. Jer.

Unreasonable it is to expect the same kind of proof and evidence for every thing, which we have for some things.

Tholstom.

Cato major, who had made all the great offices, has left us an evidence, under his own hand, how much he was very in Company affairs.

They bear evidence to a history in defence of Christianity, the truth of which history was more evident than of Christianity itself.

3. Witness; one that gives evidence. In this sense it is sometimes plural; as, the evidence were sworn: but sometimes regularly augmented, as evidences.
To swear he saw three inches through a door, As Aristaeus evidences swore. Dryden's Journal.

There are books extant, which they must needs allow of as proper evidence; even the mighty volumes of visible nature, and the everlasting tables of right reason.

To EVIDENCE. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To prove; to evince.
The horses must be evidenced by good testimonies to have been bred in Ireland. Temple.

If they be principles evident of themselves, they need not evidence or evict them.

These things the Christian religion require, as might be evidenced from taxes. Tholstom.

2. To shew; to make discovery of.
Thus on earth hadst prosper'd, which thy books now also evidence. Milton's Par. Lost.

Although the same truths be elicited and expanded to enhance the contemplation of animals; they are more clearly evidenced in the contemplation of man.

Hale's Origin of Mankind.

EVIDENT. adj. [Fr.]
Plain; apparent.

It is evident, in the general frame of nature, that those who do a manifest good to some have procured obverse unto the understanding. Brown's Fulg. Err. They are incapable of making conquests upon their neighbours, which is evident to all that know their constitutions.

Matthew 11, 20; the word that was said, when it was evident to them that no attention was sufficient.

EVIDENTLY. adv. [from evident.]
Apparently; certainly; undeniably.

Laying the weight evidently prove.
The geni'l power and full effects of love. Prior.

The printing private letters is the worst sort of betraying friendship, as it evidently has the most extensive ill consequences. Pope.

EVIL. adj. [yfel, Sax. evel, Dut.]
1. Having bad qualities of any kind; not good.
He hath brought up an evil name upon his virgin.

Drum.

An evil disease cleaveth fast unto him; and now that he lieth, he shall rise up no more. Psalms.

The good girl's very good, and the evil evil, that cannot be eaten they are so. Jeremiah.

2. Wicked; bad; corrupt.
Is thine eye evil, because I am good? Matt.

The imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth.

Gen.

3. Unhappy; miserable; calamitous.
And the old men did see that they were in evil case. Exodus.

All the days of the afflicted are evil. Proverbs.

4. Mischievous; destructive; ravenous.
Is it my son's coat; an evil heart hath devoured him.

Gen.

EVIDENTLY. n. s. [from evident.]
Contrary to goodness; badness of whatever kind.
The moral goodness and congruity, or evil, unfitness, and unseasonableness of moral or natural probability, falls without the range of a brutal faculty.

Hale's Origin of Mankind.

EVIL SPEAKING. n. s. [evil and speaking.]
Slander; defamator; calumny; censurable.

Wherefore laying aside all malice and all guile, and hypocrisies and envies, and all evil speakings.

Peter.

EVIL MIND. adj. [evil and mind.]
Malignious; mischievous; malignant; wicked; insidious.

But most she fear'd, that travelling so late.
Some evinced beasts might lie in wait.

And, without witness, wreak their hidden hate.

Dryden.

EVILNESS. n. s. [from evil favored.]
Deformity.
The soul shall not suffer unto the Lord any bullock, or sheep, wherein is bliesz, or any evinfavored.

Deut.

EVILLY. adv. [from evil.]
Not well.

This act, so evil born, shall cool the hearts of all his people, and freeze up their zeal.

Shaksp.

EVIL MINDED. adj. [evil mind.]
Malignious; mischievous; malignant; wicked; insidious.

But most she fear'd, that travelling so late.
Some evinced beasts might lies in wait.

And, without witness, wreak their hidden hate.

Dryden.

EVIL DOER. n. s. [evil and doer.]
Malefactor; one that commits crimes.

Whereas they speak evil against you as evildoers, they may by your good works glorify God. Peter.

EVILOURED. adj. [evil and favour.]
Ill contermined; having no good aspect.

Machiavel well notes, though in an evinced manner, instance, there is no trusting to the force of nature, except it be corromonated by custom. Bacon's Essays.

EVILOUREDNESS. n. s. [from evil favored.]
Deformity.
The soul shall not suffer unto the Lord any bullock, or sheep, wherein is bliesz, or any evinfavored.

Deut.

EVILLY. adv. [from evil.]
Not well.

This act, so evil born, shall cool the hearts of all his people, and freeze up their zeal.

Shaksp.

EVIL WORKER. n. s. [evil and work.]
One who does wickedness.

Beware of dogs, beware of evildoers.

Phil.

EVILOUSE. v. a. [eviscunc, Lat.]
To prove; to shew; to manifest; to make evident.

Doubt not but that sin
Will reign among us as of time begot;
And therefore was it given them, to evince
Their natural pravity.

Milton's Par. Lost.

That religion, teaching a future state of souls, is a probability; and that its contrary cannot, with equal probability, be proved, we have evinced.

South.

The greater absurdities are, the more strongly they evince the falsity of that supposition from whence they flow.

Add.

EVIDENCE. adj. [from evinced.] Capable of proof; demonstrable.

Implanted instincts in brutes are in themselves highly reasonable and useful to their ends, and evinced by true reason to be such.

Hale.

EVIDIBLY. adv. [from evinced.] In such a manner as to force conviction.

To EVIDRATE. v. a. [evidatus, Lat.]
To deprive of manhood; to emasculate.

To EVIDRATE. v. a. [evidercor, Lat.]
To embowel; to draw; to deprive of the entrails; to search within the entrails.

EVIDIBLE. adj. [evabilis, Lat.]
Avoidable; that may be escaped or shunned.
Of divers things evil, all being not eatable, we take one; which one, saving only in case of so great urgency, were not otherwise to be taken.

Houer.

650
To EVITATE. v. a. [evitto, Lat.] To avoid; to shun; to escape.

Therein did she etrate and shun
A thousand iregulous cursed hours,
Which forced marriage would have brought upon her.

EVI TATION. n. s. [from evitate.] The act of avoiding.

In all bodies there is an appetite of union, and evisceration is consequent on devolution.

EvITeRNA. adj. [eviscerus, Lat.] Eviscerated or entirely voided of an organ or its substance.

EvITATION. adj. [eviscration, Lat.] In a limited sense only; of duration not infinitely but indefinitely long.

EvITERNITY. n. s. [existential, low Lat.] Duration not infinitely, but indefinitely long.

Æ'ULOgY. n. s. [æi and æy.] Prais; eunuchism; panegyric.

Many brave young minds have oftentimes, through hearing the praises and famous eulogies of worthy men, been stirred up to affect the like commendations.

On some men’s appetites find more melody and discord, than in the harmony of the angelic spheres; yet even these seldom misfits are affected with eulogies given of themselves.

DIARY OF PLUTARCH.

EUNUCIIL. n. s. [æyury.] One that is castrated or emasculated.

He hath gelded the common wealth, and made it an eunuch.

Shakes. Anthony V.

It hath been observed by the ancients, that much of Venus doth dim the sight; and yet eunuchs, which are unable to generate, are nevertheless also dimished.

Bacon’s Nat. Hist.

So charm’d you were, you came awhile to doat
On nonsense gorg’d in an eunuch’s throat.

Plato.

To EUNUCATE. v. a. To make an eunuch.

It was an impossible act to eunuchate or eunuch themselves.

Brown’s Vulgar Err.

EVCATION. n. s. [ενορατιον, Lat.] The act of calling out.

Would truth dispense, we could be content with Plato, that knowledge were but remembrance, that intellectual acquisition were but reminiscence or invocation.

Brown.

Instead of a descent into hell, it seems rather a conjuring up, or an evocation of the dead from hell.

Notes to Odyssey.

Evolution. n. s. [ævoleo, Lat.] The act of flying away.

To EVOLVE. v. a. [ævoleo, Lat.] To unfold; to disentangle.

The animal soul and the soul of plants and animals evolves itself to its full ebb and extremity, like the earth.

Hale.

This little active principle, as the body increases and dilates, exerts, dilates, and expands, if not its substantial existence, yet its energy. Hale.

To EVOLVE. v. a. To open itself; to disclose itself.

Ambrosial odours do sound the air, evoking scents diffusse.

The holy ground is wet with heavy dewy dews, Petor.

Evolution. n. s. [ævolutus, Lat.] The act of unrolling or unfolding.

The spontaneous coagulation of the little saline bodies was at first by almost immutable evolution, which were so various, that the little bodies came to obvert to each other those parts by which they might be best fastened together. Bayle.

The series of things unrolled or unfolded.

The whole evolution of ages, from everlasting to everlasting, is so collected and preternaturally represented as if all things, whatever were, were, or shall be, were at this very instant really present.

More’s Divine Dialogues.

[In geometry.] The equable evolution of the periphery of a circle, or any other curve, is such a gradual approach of the circumference to rectitude, as that all its parts do meet together, and equally evolve or unbend; so that the same line becomes successively a less arch of a recircrooply greater circle, till at last they turn into a straight line.

Harris.

4. [In tacticks.] The motion made by a body of men in changing their posture, or form of drawing up. And these evolutions are doubling of ranks or files, counter-marches, and wheelings.

Harris.

Evolution. n. s. [ævoluus, Lat.] The act of vomiting out.

Dict.

EvUATORY. n. s. [ævulatorum.] A plant.

Euphonical. adj. [from euphony.] Sounding agreeably.

Dict.

Euphony. n. s. [æuphonia.] An agreeable sound; the contrary to harshness.

Euphorbium n. s.

1. A plant.

It hath flowers and fruit like the spurge, and it is also full of an hot, sharp milky juice. The galls are angular, and shaped somewhat like the cerasus or twist-thistle. It is commonly beset with spines, and for the most part hath no leaves.

Hill.

2. A gum resin, brought to us always in drops or grains, of a bright yellow, between a straw and a gold colour, and a smooth glossy surface. It has no great smell, but its taste is violently acrid and nauseous. It is used medicinally in si-napses.

Hill.

EvPhrasy, n. s. [æuphrasia, Lat.] The herb eyebright; a plant supposed to clear the sight.

And so there was a tempestuous wind called evropical.

Eurus. As all other winds, must be drawn with blown cheeks, wings upon his shoulders, and his body the colour of the tawny moon. Peacham.

Evrythymy. n. s. [ætypsia.] Harmony; regular and symmetrical measure.

Euthanasia. n. s. [ευθναςια.] An easy death.

A recovery, in my case, and at my age, is impossible: the kindest wish of my friends is euthanasia.

Artaebnath.

Everyon, n. s. [æulsion, Lat.] The act of plucking out.

From a strict enquiry we cannot maintain the evisceration, or biting off any parts.

Brown’s Vulgar Err.

Evulagion. n. s. [ævelojo, Lat.] The act of devouling: publication.

Dict.

Eve. n. s. [copae, Sax.] The she-sheep; the female to the ram.

Rams have more wreathed horns than ever. Boc.

Haste the sacrifice!

Sev’n bullocks yet unyoked for Phereus chase;

And for Diana seven unspotted cows. Dryden’s En.

Ewe. n. s. [from evey, perhaps anciety

Ew. n. s. [from evey, perhaps anciety

E e

c w. water.] A vessel in which water is brought for washing the hands.

I dreamt of a silver basin and ever to-night Shaks.

Let one attend him with a silver basin.

Fode of rose-water, and last blood’d his fingers.

Another bear the eee; a third a diuer.

And say, Will your lordship cool your hands?

Shakes.

The golden ewer a maid obsequious brings

Replenish’d d from the cool, transparent springs;

With cupful ewers the bright vase supplies silver layer, of capacious size:

They wash.

Pepe’s Odysy.

Ewy. n. s. [from ecer.] An office in the king’s household, where they take care of the linen for the king’s table, lay the cloth, and serve up water in silver ewers after dinner.

Dict.

Ex. A Latin preposition often prefixed to compound words; sometimes meaning out, as exhauster, to draw out; sometimes only enforcing the meaning, and sometimes producing little alteration.

To EXACERBATE. v. a. [exacerbare, Lat.] To imbitter; to exasperate; to heighten any malignant quality.

Exacerbation. n. s. [from exacerbate.]

1. Encrease of malignity; augmented force or severity.

2. Height of a disease; paroxysm.

The patient may strive, by little and little, to overcome the symptom in exacerbation; and so, by time, turn suffering into nature.

Bacon’s Nat. Hist.

Watchfulness and delirium, and exacerbation, every other day.

Aurbach on Dict.

Exacerbation. n. s. [exacerbare, Lat.]

The act of heaping up.

Dict.

EXACT. adj. [æxactus, Lat.]

1. Nice; not failing; not deviating from rule.

All this, exact to rule, were brought about, Were but a combat in the lists left out.

Pepe.

2. Methodical; not negligently performed.

What if you and I enquire how money matters stand between us? With all my heart. I love exact dealing; and let Huncs nudi.

Aurbach; John Bull.

3. Careful; not negligent; of persons.

Many gentlemen turn out of the seats of their ancestors, to make way for such new masters as have been more exact in their accounts than themselves.

Spectator.

4. Honest; strict; punctual.

In my doings I was exact.

Eccles. ii. 12.

To EXACT. v. a. [æxigo, exactus, Lat.]

1. To require authoritatively.

Thus now exact the penalty.

Which is a pound of this poor merchant’s flesh.

Shakes.

Of a forger thou mayst exact it again; but that which is thine with thy brother, thine hand shall restore.

Dost.

Exact of servants to be faithful and diligent.

Taylor.

From this his friends pronounced he glad be exacted.

Milton.

The hand of fate is ever over, and Heaven Exacted severity from all our thoughts.

Addison.

2. To demand of right.

Years of service past.

From grateful suits exact reward at last.

Droedon.

Where they design a recompense for benefits received, they are less solicitous to make it when it is exacted.

Smibride.

3. To summon; to enjoin; to enforce.

Ius descend now therefore from this top:

Of speculation; for the hour precise

Exact our part hence.

Dut.

And justice in my father’s soul, exact

This cruel piety.

Demost. Sphyx.

651
To EXACT. v. n. To practise extortion.
The enemy shall not exact upon him.
Psalm lxv. 22.

EXACTER, n. s. [from exact.]
1. Extorter; one who claims more than his due or claims his due with outrageousness and severity.

The poller and exacter of fees justifies the common resemblance of the courts of justice to the bush, wherein while the sheep flees for defence in weather, he is sure to lose part of the fleece. Bacon's Essays.

I will also make thy officers peace, and thine exacters righteousness and peace. Isaiah, iv. 17.

2. He that demands by authority.
Light and lued persons, especially that the exacter of the oath did neither use extortion, nor examining of them for taking thereof, were easily sedan to make an affidavit for money. Bacon.

3. One who is severe in his injunctions or his demands.
No men are prone to be greater tyrants, and more rigorous exacters upon others, than such whose pride was formerly least disposed to the obedience of lawful constitutions. King Charles. Exac. xiv. 2.

As the first shaft did first great the greatness of that house, by Irish exactors and oppressions; so Gerald the last shaft did last it ruini by the like exactors now. Daniel's State of Ireland.

3. A tribute severely levied.
They have not made bridges over the river for the convenience of their subjects as well as strangers, who pay an unreasonable tribute, at every ferry upon the least using of the waters. Addison on Italy.

EXACTLY, adv. [from exact.]
Quite accurately; nicely; thoroughly.
Both of 'em knew mankind exactly well; for both of 'em began that study in themselves. Dryden.

The religion they profess is such, that the more exactly it is fitted by pure unbiassed reason, the more reasonable it will be found. Atterbury.

EXACTNESS. n. s. [from exact.]
1. Accuracy; nicey; strict conformity to rule or symmetry.
The experiments are all made with the utmost exactness and circumspection. Woodward on Eratics.

It will, as mere mere mere, what affects our hearts. Is not the exactness of peculiar parts; 'tis not a lip, or eye, we beauty call. But the joint force and full result of all. Pope.

The balance must be held by a third hand, who is to deal power with the utmost exactness into the several scales. Swift.

2. Regularity of conduct; strictness of manners; care not to deviate.
I preferred not the outward peace of my kingdom with men, before that inward exactness of conscience before God. King Charles.

That their exactness in one duty will stone for their neglect of another. Rogers.

To EXAGGERATE. v. a. [exaggero, Lat.]
1. To heap upon; to accumulate.
In the great level near Thonry, several rocks and first stones below the moor, and that contain three hundred years of still, covered by the fresh and salt waters and moist earth exaggerate upon them. Addison's Spectator.

2. To heighten by representation; to enlarge by hyperbolical expressions.
He had exaggerated, as pathetically as he could, the sense the people generally had, even despair of ever seeing an end of the calamities. Clarendon.

A friend exaggerates a man's virtues, an enemy inflames his crimes. Addison's Spectator.

EXAGGERATION. n. s. [from exaggerate.]
1. The act of heaping together; an heap; an accumulation.
Some towns that were anciently havens and ports, are now, by exaggeration of sand between these towns and the sea, converted into firm land. Hume's Origin of Mankind.

2. Hyperbolical amplification.
Exaggerations of the prodigious condescensions in the prince to pass good laws, would have an odd sound at Westminster. Swift.

To EXAGGRATE. v. a. [exagiaro, Lat.]
1. To shake; to put in motion.
The warm air of the bed exaggerates the blood. Arbuthnot.

2. To reproach; to pursue with invectives.
The sense is now disused, being purely Latin.

This their defect and imperfection I had rather lament in such case than exaggerate. Hooker.

EXAGGRATION. n. s. [from exaggerate.]
The act of shaking or agitating. Dict.

To EXALT. v. a. [exalar. Fr. altis, Lat. exalt, low, Lat.]
1. To raise on high.
And thou, Cepheram, which art exalted unto heaven, shalt be brought down to hell. Matt. xxi. 23.

2. To elevate to power, wealth, or dignity.
Exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high. Ex. xix.

As yet exalted thou thyself against my people, that thou wilt not let them go? Exodus, ix. 17. How long shall mine enemy be exalted over me? Psalm xlii. 2.

3. To elevate to joy or confidence.
The covenanters, who understood their own want of strength, were very reasonably exalted with this success. Clarendon.

How much theer the king's friends were dejected upon the passing those two acts, it is certain, they who thought they got whatsoever they lost were mightily exalted, and thought themselves now superior to any opposition. Dryden's Enocid. Deduct.

4. To praise; to exalt; to magnify.
O magnify the Lord with me, and let us exalt his name together. Psalm xxxiv. 3.

5. To raise up in opposition; a scriptural phrase.
Against whom hast thou exalted thy voice, and lift up thine eyes on high? 2 Kings, xix. 22.

6. To intend; to enforce.
Now Mars, she said, let fame exalt her voice; Nor let the conquests only be her choice. Brow.

7. To heighten; to improve; to refine by fire, as in chemistry.
The wild animals have more exercise, have their juices more elaborated and exalted; but for the same reason the fibres are harder. Arbuthnot on Aliments.

With chymick art exalts the mineral pow'r, And draws the aromatick souls ofRow. Pope.

EXALTATION. n. s. [from exalt.]
1. The act of raising on high.

2. Elevation to power, dignity, or excellence.
She put off the garments of widowhood, for the exaltation of those that were oppressed. Judith, xvi. 8.

The former was an humiliation of Deity, the latter an humiliation of mankind; for which cause there followed an exaltation of that which was humbled: for with power be created the world, but ruined it by obedience. Hooker.

3. Elevated state; state of greatness or dignity.
I wonder'd at my flight and change.

To this high exaltation. Milton's Par. Lost.

In God all perfections, in their highest degree and exaltation, are in his hands. Tillotson.

You are as much esteemed, and as much beloved, perhaps more dreaded, than even you were in your high exaltation. Swift.

4. In pharmacy. Raising a medicine to a higher degree of virtue, or an increase of the most remarkable property of any body.
Quincy.

5. Dignity of a planet in which its powers are increased.

Astrologers tell us, that the sun receives his exaltation in the sign Aries. Dryden.

EXAMEN. n. s. [Lat.] Examination; disquisition; enquiry.
This considered together with a strict account, and critical examen of reason, will also distract the witty determinations of argument. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

EXAMINATE. n. s. [examinatus, Lat.]
The person examined.
In an examination where a freed servant, who having power with Claudius, very saucily had almost all the words, asked in some one of the examinators, who was likewise a freed servant of Scribonianus; I pray, sir, if Scribonianus had been present, what would you have done? He answered, I would have stood behind his chair and held my peace. Bacon.

EXAMINATION. n. s. [examinatio, Lat.]
The act of examining by questions, or experiment; accurate disquisition.
I have brought him forth, that after examination had, I might have somewhat to write. Acts, xxvii. 30.

Different men leaving out or putting in some simple ideas, according to their various examination, skill, or observation of the subject, have different essences. Locke.

EXAMINATOR. n. s. [Lat.] An examiner; an enquirer.
An interference, not of power to persuade a serious examiner. Brown's Fulf. Errors.

EXAMINE. v. a. [examinare, Lat.]
1. To try a person accused or suspected by interrogatories.
Let them examine themselves whether they repent truly. Church Cat.

We must this day be examined of the good die done to the impudent man. Acts, iv. 9.

We ought, before it be too late, to examine our souls, and provide for futurity. Hales's Preparation.

2. To interrogate a witness.
Command his accusers to come unto thee, by examining of whom thyself mayest take knowledge of all these things. Acts.
EXA

3. To try the truth or falsehood of any proposition.
4. To try by experiment, or observation; narrowly sit; scan.
   To write what may securely stand the test
   Of being well read over thrice at least,
   Compare each phrase, examine every line,
   With care, and every thought refine. Pope.
5. To make enquiry into; to search into; to scrutinise.
   When I began to examine the extent and certainty of our knowledge, I found it had a new connection with what Locke.

EXAMINER. n.s. [from examine.]
1. One who investigates a criminal or evidence.
   A crafty clerk, commissioner, or examiner, will make a witness speak what he truly never meant.
2. One who searches or tries any thing; one who scrutinises.
   So much diligence is not altogether necessary, but it will promote the success of the experiments, and by a very scrupulous examiner things deserves to be applied. Newton's Opticks.

EXAMINATORY. adj. [from example.]
Serving for example or pattern; proposed to imitation.

EXAMPLICY. n.s. [from example.]
Example for example or pattern; proposed to imitation.

EXAMINATION. n.s. [from examine.]
Deposition of life.

EXAMINUM. adj. [examinus, Lat.]
Lifeless; dead.

EXANTHEMATA. n.s. [i.e. &c.,
Ellenrecessions; eruptions; breaking out; pustules.

EXANTHENTATUMUS. adj. [from exanthematize.]
Pustulous; efflorescent; eruptive.

EXANTULATE. v.n. [ex-an-tlo, Lat.]
1. To draw out.
2. To exhaust; to waste away.
   By time those seeds are wearied or exanctimated, or unable to act their parts no longer.

EXANCIDESCENCY. n.s. [ex-ancidescens, Lat.]
Disenchantment by a counter-charm.

EXBURNATE. v.a. [ex and cornes, Lat.]
To clear from flesh.

EXCABINATE. v.n. [ex and exaro, Lat.]
To hollow; to cut into hollows.

EXCADAVRE. n.s. [from exaurate.
1. The act of cutting into hollows.
2. The hollow formed; the cavity.
   While our eye measures the eminent and the hollow parts of pillars, the thing appears not the bigger; and so, as much as those excavations do subtract, is supplied by a fallacy of the sight.
   Wren's Architecture.

EXCEED. v.n.
1. To go beyond; to outgo.
   Nor did any of the crusts much exceed half an inch in thickness.
   Woodward on Fossils.
2. To excel; to surpass.
   Solomon exceeded all the kings of the earth.

EXCEED. v.a. [excedo, Lat.]
1. To go too far; to pass the bounds of fitness.
   In your prayers, and places of religion, use reverent postures and great attention, remembering that we speak to God, in our reverence to whom we cannot possibly exceed. Tayler.
2. To go beyond any limits.
   Forty stripes he may give him, and not exceed.
   Deut.
3. To hear the greater proportion.
   Justice must punish the rebellious deed.
   Yet punish so, as pity shall exceed. Dryden.

EXCEEDING. part. adj. [from exceed.]
Great in quantity, extent, or duration.

Exceed, that cities were built an exceeding space of time before the great flood.
Raleigh's History.
EXCEEDING. adv. [This word is not analogical, but has been long admitted and established.] In a very great degree; eminently.

The country is supposed to be exceeding rich.

Abbot.

The Genoese were exceeding powerful by sea, and contended often with the Venetians for superiority.

Talk no more so exceeding proudly; let not arrogance come out of your mouth.

1 Sam. ii. 5.

The action of the blind and that of the feeble were in themselves exceeding short; but are beautifully extended and diversified by the invention of epistles, and the machinations of the gods.

Addison.

The serum of the blood affords, by distillation, an exceedingly limpid water, neither acid nor alkaline.

Arbuthnot.

EXCEEDINGLY. adv. [from exceeding.]

To a great degree; greatly; very much.

They cried out more exceedingly, Crucify him.

Mark xv. 39.

Isaac trembled exceedingly. Gen. xxvi. 23.

The Earl of Surrey, lieutenant of Ireland, was not only the friend of the King's enemies, and exceedingly beloved of the king's subjects. Daniel, absolved.

Precious stones look exceedingly well, when they are set in those places which we would make to contain the one ability.

Dryden.

Is not this medium exceedingly more rare and subtle than the air, and exceedingly more clastic and diffusive, than the virility of Newton's universe?

Addison.

To EXCEL. n. o. [excello, Lat.]

To outgo in good qualities; to surpass.

Venus her myrtle, Phereus has his bays;

Tea both excels, which you vouchsafe to praise.

Waller.

How heroes rise, how patriots set,

Thy father's blum and death may tell;

Excelling others, these were great;

That greater still, beat these excels.

Prior.

To EXCEL. v. r. [exce
t]

To leave out, and specify as left out of a general precept, or position.

But when he said, All things are put under him, it is manifest, that he is excepted which did put all things under him.

Cor.

Adam, behold, Th'effects, which thy original crime hath wrought.

In some to spring from thee, who never touch'd

The excepted tree.

Milton's Par. Lost.

To EXCEPT. v. r. [except]

To object; to make objections.

A succession which our author could not except against.

Locke.

EXCEPT. prepos. [from the verb. This word, long taken as a preposition or conjunction, is originally the participle passive of the verb; which, like most others, had for its participle two terminations, except or excepted. All except one, is all, one excepted. Except may likewise be, according to the Trinitarian idiom, the imperative mood: all, except one; that is, all but one, which you must except.]

1. Exclusively of; without inclusion of. Richard except, those whom we fight against, Had rather have us win than him they follow.

Shakesp.

God and his son except, Nought valued he nor feared.

Milton.

2. Unless; if it be not so that.

It is necessary to know our duty, because 'tis necessary for us to do it; and it is impossible to do it, except we know it.

Tilottan.

EXCEPTING. prepos. [from except. See EXCEPT.] Without inclusion of; with exception of.

People come into the world in Turkey the same way they do here; and yet, excepting the royal family, they get but little by it. Collier on Duelling.

EXCEPTION. n. s. [except; exception; Lat.]

1. Exclusion from the things comprehended in a precept, or position; exclusion of any person from a general law.

When God renewed this charter of man's sovereignty over the earth to Noah and his family, we find no exception at all; but that Chasm stood as fully invested with this right as any of his brethren.

South.

Let the money be raised on land, with an exception to some of the more barren parts, that might be tax-free.

Addison.

2. It should have from before the rule or law to which the exception refers; but it is sometimes inaccurately used with to.

Pleads, in exception to all general rules, Your taste of follies, with our scorn of fools.

Pope.

3. Thing excepted or specified in exception. Every act of parliament was not previous to what it enacted; unless those two, by which the Earl of Stafford and Sir John Fenwick lost their heads may pass for杳ous.

Swift.

Who first taught souls ensnarl'd, and realms undone.

Th' enormous faith of many made for one;

That pious exception in Socrates' law,

Tivert the world and counterwork its cause. Pope.

4. Objection; evil: with against or to.

Your question hath drawn us to make search whether these be not exceptional to the customs of our church, when ye plead that they are the same which the church of Rome hath, or that they are not as some which some other reformed churches have devised.

Hooker. Preface.

He may have exceptions pretermitting against the jurisdiction which it is his cause. Spencer.

Revelations will soon discover is to be extremely conducing to reforming mens lives, such as will answer all objections and exceptions of flesh and blood against it.

I will answer what exceptions they can have against our account, and confute all the reasons and explications they can give of their own. Butler.

5. Peevish dislike; offence taken: sometimes with to.

I fear'd to shew my father Julia's letter.

Locke should take exception to my love.

Shakesp.

6. Sometimes with of.

He first took exception at this badge, Pronouncing, that the paleness of this flour'd

Bewray'd the faintness of my master's heart.

Shakesp.

Sometimes with against.

Roderigo, thou hast taken against me an exception; but I protest I have dealt most fairly in thy case.

Shakesp.

7. In this sense it is commonly used with the verb take.

He gave Sir James Trelil great thanks; but took exception to the place of their burial, being too close for them that were king's children.

Bacon.

EXCEPTIONABLE. adj. [from exception.]

Liable to objection.

The only piece of pleasantness in Milton is where the evil spirits rally the angels upon the success of their artillery; this passage I look upon to be the most exceptionable in the whole poem.

Addison.

EXCEPTIONS. adj. [from except.]

Peevous; froward; full of objections; quarrelsome.

They are so supercilious, sharp, troublesome, fierce, and exceptionable, that they are not only short of the true character of friendship, but become the very sorest of society.

South.

EXCEPTIONABLE. adj. [from exception.]

Including an exception.

EXCEPTIONAL propositions will make complex syllogisms, as none but physicians came to the consultation: the nurse is no physician, therefore the child can not come to Dr. Trot's Lecture.

EXCEPTIONLESS. adj. [from except.]

Omitting or neglecting all exception; general; universal. This is not in use.

Forgive my general and exceptionable rashness, Perpetual sober gods! I do proclaim

One honest man.

Shakesp. Timon.

(54)
EXC

EXCERPT, n. s. [from except.] Objector; one that makes exceptions.

The exception makes a reflection upon the improbability of the passage.

To EXCERN. r. a. [exerno, Lat.] To strain out; to separate or emit by strainers; to send out by excretion.

That which is dead, or corrupted or excrement, hath aptness with the same thing when it is alive and sound, and with those parts which do excrete.

Bacon's Nat. Hist.

Exercise first sendseth nourishment into the parts; secondly, it passes excreted by sweat, and so maketh the parts assimilate.

Bacon's Nat. Hist.

An unguent or pap prepared, with an open vessel to excere it into.

Rag on the Creation.

EXCEPTION. n. s. [exceptio, Lat.]

1. The act of gleaning; selecting.

2. The thing gleaned or selected.

Times have consumed his works; saving some few exceptions.

Raleigh.

EXCESS. n. s. [excessus, Lat.]

1. More than enough; faultily superfluity.

Amongst the leavens of these excesses and superfluities, there is the want of a principal part of duty.

Hooker.

Goodness answers to the theological virtue charity, and admits no excess but error; the power in excess caused the angels to fall; the desire of knowledge in excess caused man to fall; but in charity there is no excess, neither can angel or man come in danger by it.

Bacon's Essays.

Members are crooked or distorted, or disproportionately to the rest, either in excess or defect.

Rag.

2. Exuberance; state of exceeding; comparative exuberance.

Let the superfluous and lust dieted man, that boasts his ordinance, feel his power quickly.

So distribution shall undo excess, and each man have enough.

Shakespeare. King Lear.

The several rays in that white light return their colorless quickness, by which those of any sort, whenever they became more copious than the rest, do by their excess and predominance cause their proper color to appear.

Newton's Opticks.

3. Intemperance; unreasonable indulgence in meat and drink.

It was excess of wine that set him on, and on his more advice we pardon him.

Shakespeare.

There was a man of inordinate appetite in his body, once heavy with excess and surfeit, hangs plumpuntus on the nobler parts.

DuPpa.

5. Transgression of due limits.

A popular term for those things to give more than was fit for objects to receive.

Run to the same extremes; and one excess Made both, by striving to be greater, less.

Denham.

Hospitality sometimes degenerates into profuse- ness; even parsimony itself, which sits but upon a publick figure, is yet the more pardonneable excess of the two.

EXCESSIVE. adj. [excessif, French; from excess.]

1. Beyond the common proportion of quantity or bulk.

If the panish be laid low and about the bottom of a root, it will cause the root to grow to an excessive bigness.

Bacon.

2. Vehement beyond measure in kindness or dislike.

Be not excessive toward any.

Execls.

The people's property it is, by excessive favour, to bring great men to misery, and then to be excessive in pity.

Hoyward.

EXCESSIVELY. adv. [from excessive.]

Exceedingly; eminently; in a great degree.

A man must be excessively stupid, as well as uncharitable, who believes there is no virtue but on his own hill and his own exchange.

Addison.

To EXCHANGE. v. a. [exchanger, fr. excambiar, low Lat.]

1. To give or quit one thing for the sake of gaining another.

They shall not sell of it, neither exchange nor alienate the first fruits.

Ezek. xlvii. 11.

Exchange his sheep for shells, or wool for a shining pearl, or a diamond.

Atterbury.

Take delight in the good things of this world, so as to remember that we are to part with them, and to exchange them for more excellent and durable enjoyments.

Locke.

2. To give or take reciprocally.

Exchange forgiveness with me, saith Hamlet;

Misch and my father's blood, be not upon thee, nor thrust on me.

Shakespeare. Hamlet.

The word having naturally no signification, the idea must be learned by those who would exchange thoughts, and hold intelligible discourse with each other.

Here then exchange we mutually forgiving.

So may the guilt of all my broken vows,

My perjuries to thee all forgotten.

Rover.

3. It has with benevolence of him with whom the exchange is made, and for before the thing taken in exchange.

The king called in the old money, and erected exchanges where the weight of old money was exchanged for new.

Being acquainted with the laws and customs of his own country, he has something to exchange with those abroad.

Locke.

EXCHANGE, n. s. [from the verb.]

1. The act of giving and receiving reciprocally.

And thus they parted, with exchange of harms;

Much blood the monsters lost, and they their arms.

They lend their corn, they make exchanges; they are always ready to serve one another.

Addison.

2. Traffick by permutation.

The word having been interchanged; and the whole course of nature is a great exchange, in which one good turn is, and ought to be, the stated price of another.

South.

3. The form or act of transferrings, properly by bills or notes.

I have bills for money by exchange.

From Florence, and must here deliver them.

Shak.

4. The balance of the money of different nations.

It was skilled in the exchange beyond seas, and in all the circumstances and practices thereof.

Hoyward on Edward VI.

5. The thing given in return for something received.

If there appear to prove upon thy person

Thy beninous, manifest, and many treasons,

There is my pledge: I'll prove it on thy heart.

There's my exchange, what in the world he is

That names me traitor, villain-like he lives.

Shak.

Spent all I have, only give me so much time in exchange of it.

Shakespeare. Merry Wives of Windsor.

It made not the seller give for more than its value in all things to be bought; but just so much as the denomination was raised, just as much less of commodity had the buyer in exchange for it.

Locke.

If blood you see, I will my own resign:

O spare her life, and in exchange take mine.

Drayton's Ind. Emp. Fugio.

6. The thing received in return for something given.

The respect and love which was paid you by all, who had the happiness to know you, was a wise exchange for the hours.

Drayton. The Hours.

7. The place where the merchants meet to negotiate their affairs; place of sale.

He that uses the same words sometimes in one, and sometimes in another significavit, ought to pass, in the business so as fair a man, as he does or is in the market and exchange, who sells several things under the same name.

Locke.

EXCISE. n. s. [excrise, Dut. excisum, Lat.]

A hateful tax levied upon commodities, and adjudged not by the common judges of property, but wretches hired by those to whom excise is paid.

The people should pay a ratable tax for their sheep, and an excise for every thing which they eat.

Hoyward.

Ambitious now to take excise

Of a more fragrant paradise.

Cleveland.

Excise, with hundred rows of teeth, the shark exceeds;

And on all trades like Cassawara she feeds.

Muir.

Lire house large, and oppress the poor.

Dor. Excis.

To EXCISE. v. a. [from the noun.]

To levy excise upon a person or thing.

In South-sea days, not happier when enamour'd

The lord of thousands, than if now excis'd.

Pope.

Exciseman, n. s. [crise and man.] An officer who inspects commodities, and rates their excise.

EXCISION. n. s. [exci'sio, Lat.] Extirpation; destruction; ruin; the act of cutting off; the state of being cut off.

Pride is one of the fatalists instruments of excision.

Drayton's Piety.

Such conquerors are the instruments of vengeance on those nations that have filled up the measure of iniquities, and are grown ripe for excision.

Adder.

EXCITATION. n. s. [from excite to excite, Lat.]

1. The act of exciting, or putting into motion.

All putrefactions come from the ambient body, either by ingress of the ambient body into the body putrefied, or by excitation and solicitation of the body putrefied by the body ambient.

Bacon.

2. The act of rousing or awakening.

653
The original of sensible and spiritual ideas may be owing to sensation and reflection, the collection and fresh exposition of them to other occasions. [Hart's Logic.]

To EXCITE. r. a. [excite, Lat.]

1. To rouse; to animate; to stir up; to encourage.

The Lacedemonians were more excited of desire of honour with the excellent verses of the poet Tityrus, than with all the exhortations of their captains. That kind of poetry which excites to virtue the greatest men, is of greatest use to human kind.

2. To put in motion; to awaken; to raise.

EXCITEMENT. n. s. [from excite.] The motive by which one is stirred up, animated, or put in action.

How stand I then, that have a father kill'd, a mother stain'd, Excitement of my reason and my blood, And let all sleep? — Shakespeare, Tempest.

EXCITED. n. s. [from excite.]

1. One that stirs up others, or puts them in motion.

They never punished the delinquency of the turbulent, as their ancestors, during the reign of King Charles.

2. The cause by which anything is raised or put in motion.

Hope is the grand exciters of industry. — Dryden, A Ballad.

To EXCLAIM. r. n. [exclaim, Lat.]

1. To cry out with vehemence; to make an outcry; to cry out querulously and outrageously.

This ring, Which, when you part from, lose, or give away, Let it prestige the ruin of your love, And be my vantage to exclaim on you. — Shakespeare.

Those who exclaim against foreign tyranny, do, to this infinite usurper, make an entire defense of themselves. — Dryden, A Satyr.

The most inexpressible of tyrants exclaims against the exercise of arbitrary power. — Dryden, A Satyr.

2. To declare with loud vociferation.

Is Cade the son of Henry the Fifth, That thus do you exclaim you’ll go with him? — Shakespeare.

EXCLAIM. n. s. [from the verb.] Clamour; outcry. Now disused.

All the part I had in Gloster's blood Doth more excite me than your exclamations, To stir against the butcher of his life. — Shakespeare.

EXCLAIMER. n. s. [from exclaim.] One that makes vehement outcries; one that speaks with great heat and passion.

I must tell this exclaimor, that his manner of proceeding is very strange and unaccountable. — Atterbury, An Apology.

EXCLAMATION. n. s. [exclamation, Lat.]

1. Vehement outcry; clamour; outrageous vociferation.

The ears of the people are continually bidden with exclamations against abuses in the church. — Hooker, Dedication.

Either be patient, or intreat me fair, Or else the clamorous report of war, Thus will I drown your exclamations. — Shakespeare.

2. An emphatical utterance; a pathetical sentence.

O Misericordia! Misericordia! but what severe exclamations, where there are no ears to receive the sound? — Sidney.

3. A note by which a pathetical sentence is marked thus!

EXCLAMATORY. adj. [from exclaim.]

1. Practising exclamations.

2. Containing exclamations.

EXCIDE. v. a. [excludo, Lat.]

1. To shut up; to hinder from entrance or admission.

Fenced with hedges and deep ditches round, Excludo th' incroaching cattle from thy ground. — Dryden's Artizan's Wig.

Sure I am, unless I win in arms, To stand excluded from Emilia's charms. — Dryden.

Bodies do each singly possess its proper portion, according to the number of its solid parts, and therefore by exclude all other bodies from that space. — Locke.

Though these three sorts of substances do not exclude one another out of the same place, yet we cannot conceive that they must necessarily each of them exclude any of the same kind out of the same place.

If the church be so unhappily contrived as to exclude from its communion such persons as least to have great abilities, it should be altered. — Swift.

2. To debar; to hinder from participation; to prohibit.

Justice, that sits and frowns where publick laws Exclude soft mercy from a private cause, In your tribunal must herself do please; There once a family, because she lives at ease, Drap. This is Dutch partnership, to share in all our beneficial bargains, and exclude as wholly from their share. — Swift.

3. To except in any position.

4. Not to comprehend in any grant or privilege.

They separate from all apparent hope of life and salvation, thousands whom the goodness of Almighty God doth not exclude. — Hooker.

5. To dismiss from the womb or egg.

Others ground it is disruption upon their continued or protracted time of delivery, wheras with excluding but one day, the latter breed impatient, by a forcible protrusion, annihilates their period of exclusion. — Brown's Vulgar. Errors.

EXCLUSION. n. s. [from exclude.]

1. The act of shutting out or denying admission.

In bodies that need detention of spirits, the exclusion of the air doth good; but in bodies that need emission of spirits, it doth hurt. — Bacon.

2. Rejection; not reception in any manner.

If he is for an entire exclusion of fear, which is supposed to have some influence in every law, he opposes himself to every government. — Addison.

3. The act of debarring any privilege or participation.

4. Exception.

There was a question asked at the table, whether the French king would agree to have the disposing of the marriage of Bretagne, with an exception and exclusion that he should not marry herself. — Bacon's Henry VII.

5. The dismissal of the young from the egg or womb.

How were it possible the womb should contain the child ray, sometimes twins, till they come to their due perfection and maturity for exclusion? — Hay on the Creation.

EXCLUSION. n. s. [from exclu- sion.]

1. Having the power of excluding or denying admission.

They obviate find none Of membrance, joint, or limb, exclusive bars: Easier than air with air, if spirits embrace, yet steal they. — Milton's Par. Lost.

2. Debarring from participation.

EXCOMMUNICATION. n. s. [from excommunicate.]

In scripture there is no such thing as an heir that was, by right of nature, to inherit all, exclusive Locke.

3. Not taking into an account or number: opposed to inclusive.

I know not whether he reckons the drass, exclusive or inclusive, with his three hundred and sixty tons of copper. — Swift.

EXCUT. r. a. [excusus, Lat.]

1. Without admission of another to participation; sometimes with to, properly with of. — Locke.

It is not easy to discern among the many differing substances obtained from the same portion of matter, which ought to be esteemed, exclusively to all the rest, its inessential elementary ingredients; much less to reduce all the bodies, conveyed together, compose it. — Boyle.

Ulysses addresses himself to the queen chieftly or prudently, but not exclusively of the king. — Browne.

2. Without comprehension in an account or number; not inclusively.

The first part lasts from the date of the citation to the joining of issue, exclusively the second continues a conclusion in the cause, inclusively. — Agliè's Recit. de l'Émil.

EXCUT. r. a. [excusus, Lat.]

To boil up; to make by boiling.

Salt and sugar, exuded by heat, are dissolved by cold and moisture. — Bacon's Nat. History.

EXCUTATE. r. a. [excusate, Lat.]

To invent; to strike out by thinking.

If the wit of man had been to contrive this organ, what could he have possibly exquisited more accurately? — The tradition of the origin of mankind seems to be universal; but the particular methods of that origin exquisited by the heathens, were particular. — Hale's Origin of Mankind.

We shall find them to be little else than exquisited and invented models, not much arising from the true image of the things themselves. — Hale.

EXCOMMUNICABLE. adj. Liable or deserving to be excommunicated.

Perhaps excommunicable; yea, and for notorious impiety. — Hooker.

EXCOMMUNICATION. n. s. [from excommunicate.]

An ecclesiastical interdict; exclusion from the fellowship of the church.

If for excommunication, it neither shutteth out from the mystical, nor clean from the visible church; but only from fellowship with the visible in holy duties. — Hooker.

EXCUTATE. r. a. To flay; to strip off the skin.

An hæmorrhagy arises upon the excurated eyelid, and turneth it outward. — Warman's Surgery. A looseness proves often a fatal symptom in fevers; for it weakens, excurates, and inflames the bowels. — Arbuthnot.

EXCUTATE. r. a. To flay; to strip off the skin.

An hæmorrhagy arises upon the excurated eyelid, and turneth it outward. — Warman's Surgery. A looseness proves often a fatal symptom in fevers; for it weakens, excures, and inflames the bowels. — Arbuthnot.
EXC

1. Loss of skin; privation of skin; the act of flaying.

2. Plunder; spoil; the act of stripping of possessions.

EXCUTION. n. s. [from context, and cx, Lat.] Pulling the bark off any thing.

EXCRESCENCE. n. s. [from excresco, Lat.] Which grows out of another with preternatural superfluity.

EXCERPT. v. a. [excreto, Lat.] To eject at the mouth by hawking, or forcing matter from the throat.

EXCREMENT, n. s. [excrementum, Lat.] That which is thrown out as useless, noxious, or corrupted from the natural passages of the body.

EXCRETA, n. s. [excretus, Lat.] The act of excreting.

EXCRUCIABLE. adj. [from exc concerted.] That which is voided as excrement.

EXCRUCIATING adj. [from excruxed.] His disease was an asthma, oft occurring to an orthopneic; the cause, a translation of the organs from his joints to his lungs.

EXCURSION, n. s. [excursion, Lat.] A journey.

EXCURSIVE adj. [from excursion.] By going beyond the usual path.

EXCUSABLE. n. s. [from excuse.] Pardonableness; capability to be excused.

EXCUSE. v. a. [excusato, Lat.] 1. To extenuate by apology. 2. To disengage from an obligation; remit attendance.

EXCUSATORY, adj. [from excuse.] Pleading excuse; apologistical; making apology.

EXCUSATION. n. s. [from excuse.] Excuse; plea; apology.

EXCUSATION. n. s. [from excuse.] Excuse; plea; apology.

EXCUSEABLE, adj. [from excuse.] Pardonable; that for which some excuse or apology may be admitted.

EXCUSEUS, adj. [from excuse.] Paradoxable; that for which some excuse or apology may be admitted.

EXCUStABLE, adj. [from excuse.] Pardonableness; capability to be excused.

EXCUTED, adj. [from excuse.] Paradoxable; that for which some excuse or apology may be admitted.

EXCUStABLE, adj. [from excuse.] Pardonableness; capability to be excused.

EXCURSUS, adj. [from excursion.] Pardoning excuse; apologistical; making apology.

EXCURSUS, v. a. [excusato, Lat.] 1. To extenuate by apology. 2. To disengage from an obligation; remit attendance.

EXCURSUS, adj. [from excursion.] Pardoning excuse; apologistical; making apology.

EXCURSUS, v. a. [excusato, Lat.] 1. To extenuate by apology. 2. To disengage from an obligation; remit attendance.

EXCURSUS, adj. [from excursion.] Pardoning excuse; apologistical; making apology.

EXCURSUS, v. a. [excusato, Lat.] 1. To extenuate by apology. 2. To disengage from an obligation; remit attendance.

EXCURSUS, adj. [from excursion.] Pardoning excuse; apologistical; making apology.
EXECUTE

We find out some excuse or other for referring good resolutions, till our intended retreat is cut off.

2. The act of excusing or apologising.

Heaven put it in thy mind to take it hence. But that thou might'st win the more thy father's love.

[Exeunt.]

3. Cause for which one is excused.

Let no vain hope thy easy mind seduce; For rich ill poets are without excuse. Homer.

Nothing but love this patience could produce; And I allow your rage that kind excuse. Dryden.

EXCUSELESS. adj. [from excuse.] That for which no excuse or apology can be given.

The voluntary enlisting myself is excuseless. Decay of F opper.

EXCUSER. n.s. [from excuse.]

1. One who pleads for another.

In vain would his excuses endeavour to palliate his enormities, by imputing them to madness. Swift.

2. One who forgives another.

To EXCUSE. v.a. [excessus, Lat.] To seize and detain by law.

The person of a man ought not, by the civil law, to be taken for a debt, unless his goods and estate have been first assessed. Aylliff.

EXCUSION. n.s. [excessio, Lat.] Seizure by law.

If upon an execution there are not goods to satisfy the judgment, his body may be attached. Aylliff.

EXECRABLE. adj. [execrabilis, Lat.] Hateful; detestable; accursed; abominable.

For us to change that which he hath established, they hold it execrable pride and presumption. Hooper.

Of the visible church of Jesus Christ those may be properly esteemed as out of their outward profession; who, in regard of their inward disposition, are most estimably both hateful in the sight of God himself, and in the eyes of the sounder parts of the visible church most execrable. Hooper.

Give sentence on this execrable wretch, that hath been toad of these dire events. Shak.

When execrable Troy in ashes lay, Through fires, and swords, and seas, they forc'd their way. Dryden.

EXECAABLY. adv. [from execrable.]

Cursedly abominably, it is execrable; But if they will be fools, must you be mad? Dryden.

To EXECRATE. v.a. [execrav, Lat.] To curse; to implicate ill upon; to abominate.

Extermination of some tyranny, by the indignation of a people, makes way for some form contrary to that which they lately executed and detested. Temple.

EXECUTION. n.s. [from execute.]

Curse; imprecation of evil.

Mischance and sorrow go along with you, And threefold vengeance tend on your steps! —Caesar, gentle queen, these execrations. Shak. For we mean to mock Adam! but his heads Shall be the execration. Milton's Par. Lost.

The Indians, at naming the devil, did spit on the ground in token of execration. Stillingfleet.

To EXECUTE. v.a. [exeo, Lat.] To cut out; to cut away.

Were it not for the effusion of blood which would follow an execution, the liver might not only be excised, but its office supplied by the spleen and great heart. Paracelsus.

EXECUTION. n.s. [from excut.] The act of cutting out. See EXECUTE.

To EXECUTE. v.a. [exequor, Lat.]

1. To perform; to practise.

Against all the gods of Egypt 1 will execute judgment. Exod.

2. To put in act; to do what is planned or determined.

Men may not devise laws, but are bound for ever to use and execute those which God hath delivered. Hooker.

The government here is so regularly disposed, that it almost executes itself. Swift.

Abraha's sentence of death against his brother, and had it executed too. Locke.

3. To put to death according to form of justice; to punish capitably.

Ettore was executed under him, or discarded into foreign service for a pretty shadow of exilium. Spencer.

Sir William Beningham was executed for treason. Dryden.

4. To put to death; to kill.

The treacherous Falstaff wounds my peace, Whom with my bare fists I would execute, If I now had him. Shakesp. Henry VI.

To EXECUTE. v.n. To perform the proper office.

The case against St. Stephen's gate executed so well, that the portcullis and gate were broken, and entry opened into the city. Sir J. Hayward.

EXECUTOR. n.s. [from execute.]

1. He that performs or executes anything that earth.

Weep when she sees me work, and says such baseness.

Had we like this ever executed. Shak.

Sorochles and Euphrides, in their most beautiful pieces, are laparoexecutors of poetical justice. Donne.

I see it.

2. He that is intrusted to perform the will of a testator. In this sense the accent is on the second syllable.

Let's choose executors, and talk of wills; And yet not so; for what can we bequeath? Shak.

3. An executor; one who puts others to Death. Disused.

The eye and justice with his early burn Delivers o'er to executors pale. The lazy yawning drone. Shak. Henry V.

EXECUTERSHIP. n.s. [from executor.] The office of him that is appointed to perform the will of the defunct.

For falling for testaments and executorships it is worse, by how much men submit themselves to mean persons, than in service. Bacon.

EXECUTION. n.s. [from execute.]

1. Performance; practice.

When things are come to the execution, there is no scruple comparable to celerity. Bacon's Essays.

I wish no better.

Than have him hold that purpose, and put it to execution. Shak., Coriolanus.

I like thy counsel; and how well I like it, The execution of it shall make known. Shak.

The excellency of the subject contributed much to the happiness of the execution. Dryden.

2. The last act of the law in civil causes, by which possession is given of body or goods.

Sir Richard was committed to the Fleet in execution for the whole six thousand pounds. Clarendon.

3. Capital punishment; death inflicted by forms of torture.

Good rest, —As wretches have o'er night, That wait for execution in the morn. Shak.

When, after execution, judgment hath Repealed o'er his doom. Shak.

EXECUTIONER. n.s. [from execute.] A woman intrusted to perform the will of the testator.

He did, after the death of the earl, buy of his executrix the remnant of the term. Bacon.

EXECUTIONER. n.s. [execute, Lat.] An explanation.

EXEGETICAL. adj. [exegetico.] Expository; existent.}

I have here two interspersed some critical and some crotetical notes, for readers to know, and not omit for some teachers to read. Wacler.

EXEMPLAR. n.s. [exemplar, Lat.] A pattern; an example to be imitated.

The idea and exemplar of the world was first in God.

They began at a known body, a barleycorn, the weight whereof is therefore called a grain; which EXEMPT. adj. [from the verb.]
1. Free by privilege.
  Be it my wrong you are from me except;
  But wrong not that wrong with a mere contempt.
  Shakespeare.

2. Not subject; not liable to.
  Do not once hope, that thou canst tempt
  A spirit so resolved to tread
  Upon thy thron, and live exempt
  From all the nits that thou canst sprawl. B. Jonson.

3. Such as may be thus or thus exempted.
  No man, not even the most powerful among
  The sons of men, is exempt from the chances of human Life.

The god constrains the Greek to roam,
A hopeless exile from his native home,
  From death alone exempt. Pope's Odyssey.

4. Clear; not included.
  His dreadful impression hear;
  'Tis laid on all, not any one except. Lee's Oedipus.

5. Cut off from. Disused.
  Was not thy father for treason headed;
  And by his treachery not thou attained,
  Corrupted, and exempt from ancient gentry? Shakespeare.

EXEMPTION. n. s. [from exempt.]
Immunity; privilege from evil; freedom from impost or burdensome employments.

The like exemption hath the wret to enquire of a man's death, which also must be granted freely. Bacon.

The Roman laws gave particular exemptions to such as built ships or traded in corn. Arbuthnot.

EXEMPTIOUS. adj. [from exemptus, Lat.] Separable; that may be taken from another.
If the modum were loose or exemptios from matter, I could be convinced that it had extension of its own. More.

EXENTERATE, v. a. [exenterato, Lat.]
To embowel; to deprive of the entrails. Brown.

A toad contains not those urinary parts which are found in other animals to avoid that serious excretion, which may appear unto any that excretes or dissects them. Brown.

EXENTERATION, n. s. [exenteratio, Lat.]
The act of taking out the bowels; embowelling.
Beneath not only affirms that channelis feed on flies, caterpillars, beetles, and other insects, but upon creten the fire he found these animals in their bellies. Brown.

EXEQUIAL. adj. [from exequie, Lat.] Funeral; relating to funerals. Diet.

EXEQUIES. n. s. without a singular. [exequie, Lat.] Funeral rites; the ceremony of burial; the procession of burial. For this word obsqueoir is often used, but not so properly. Brown.

The noble Duke of Bedford late deceased, but see his exequies fulfilled in Roan. Shakespeare.

The tragic end of the two brothers, whose exeques the next successor had to perform. Dryden.

EXERCENT, adj. [exercens, Lat.] Practising; following any calling or vocation.
The judge may oblige every exercent advocate to give his patronage and assistance unto a litigant in distress for want of an advocate. Aylyson.

EXERCISE. n. s. [exercitio, Lat.]
1. Labour of the body; labour considered as active to the cure or prevention of diseases.

2. Something done for amusement.
As a watchful king, he would not neglect his safety, thinking nevertheless to perform all things as an exercise than as a labour. Bacon.

3. Habitual action by which the body is formed to gracesomeness; air, and gentleness.
He was strong of body, and so much the stronger as he, by a well-disciplined exercise, taught it both to do and to suffer. Sidney.

The French apply themselves more universally to their exercises than any nation: one seldom sees a young gentleman that does not prune, dance, or walk. Addison.

4. Preparatory practice in order to skill: as, the exercise of soldiers.

5. Use; actual application of any thing.
The sceptre of spiritual regiments over us in this present world, is at the length to be yielded up into the hands of the Father which gave it; that is, the use of exercise thereof shall cease, where being no longer on earth any militant church to govern. Hooker.

6. Prowess; outward performance.
Lewis refused even those of the church of England, who followed their master to St. Germain's, the publick exercise of their religion. Addison.

7. Employment frequently repeated.
The learning of the institutions and boundaries of kingdoms, being only an exercise of the eyes and memory, a child with pleasure will learn them. Locke.

Children, by the exercise of their senses about objects that affect them in the womb, receive some few ideas before they are born. Locke.

Exercise is very alluring and entertaining to the understanding, while its reasonings powers are employed without labour. Herra.

8. Task; that which one is appointed to perform.
Patience is more oft the exercise of saints, the trial of their fortitude; making them each his own deliverer, and victor over all that tyranny or fortune can inflict. Milton.

9. Act of divine worship, whether public or private.
Good sir John, I'm in your debt for your last exercise; come the next Sabbath, and I will content you. Shakespeare.

EXERCISE, v. a. [exercito, Lat.]
1. To employ; to engage in employment.
This faculty of the mind, when it is exercised immediately about things, is called judgment. Locke.

2. To train by use to any act.
The Roman tongue was the study of their youth: it was their own language they were instructed and exercised in. Locke.

3. To make skilful or dexterous by practice; to habituate.
Strong meat begeteth to them who, by reason of use, have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil. Hebr.

Reason, by its own penetration, wherein it is strong and exercised, usually sees quicker and clearer without syllabism. Locke.

And now the goddess, exerc'd in ill,
Who watch'd an hour to work her impious will,
Ascends the roof. Dryden's Anacreon.
EXE

4. To busy; to keep busy. He will exercise himself with pleasure, and without weariness, in that godlike employment of doing good. —Bunyan.

5. To task; to keep employed as a penal injunction. Some travel hath God given to the sons of man, to be exercised therewith. —I Esd. 13.

6. To practise; to perform. A man's body is confined to a place; where friendship is, all offices are granted to him and his deputy; for he may exercise them by his friend. —Bacon's Essay.

7. To exert; to put in use. Our work went on successfully, the bone exfoliating from the edges. —Wiseman's Surgery.

8. To practise or use in order to habitual skill. To you such scabb'd harsh fruit is given, as now Your busy active spirit exerts your exercings. —Dryden. Mean while I'll draw my Numidian troop Within the square, to exercise their arms. —Addison.

EXERCISER. n. s. [from exercise.] He that directs or uses exercise. —Dict.

EXERCITATION. n. s. [exercitatio.] 1. Exercise. 2. The state of exercising the cause, if in subre tumultu tuis were confinable unto corporal exercitations. —Browne.

Practise; use. By frequent exercitations we form them within us. —Felon.

TO EXERT. v. a. [exero.] 1. To use with an effort; to use with ardor and vehemence. When the service of Britain requires your courage and conduct, you may exert them both. —Dryden.

2. To put forth; to perform. When the will has exerted an act of command upon any faculty of the soul, or member of the body, it has done all that the whole man, as a moral agent, can do for the actual exercise or employment of such a faculty or member. —Dryden.

3. To enforce; to push to an effort. With the reciprocal pronoun. Strong virtue, like strong nature, struggles still; Exerts itself, and then throws off the ill. —Dryden.

4. To bring out. The several parts lay hidden in the piece. Odd occasion but exerted or that. —Dryden.

5. To emit; to push out; to put forth. The orchard loves to wave With Winter winds, before the germs exert Their fecile heads. —Philips.

The stars, no longer overlaid with weight, Exert themselves from underneath the mass, And upward shoot and kindle as they pass, And with diffusive light adorn the heavenly place. —Dryden.

EXERTION. n. s. [from exert.] The act of exerting; effort. —Dryden.

EXESION. n. s. [exesis.] The act of eating through. Theophrastus daint the exesion or forcing of vipers through the belly of the dam. —Brown.

EXSTUATION. n. s. [exstunio.] The state of boiling; tumultuous heat; effervescence; ebullition. Saltpeter is in operation a cold body; physiognomy and shadows give it in fountains, to the inward exsudations of the blood and humours. —Bogge.

TO EXFLATE. v. n. [ex and folium.] To shell off; to separate, as a corrupt bone from the sound part. A term of chirurgery. Our work went on successfully, the bone exfoliating from the edges. —Wiseman's Surgery.

EXFOLIATION. n. s. [from exfoliate.] The process by which the corrupt part of the bone separates from the sound. If the bone be dressed, the flesh will soon arise in that cut of the bone, and make exfoliation of what is necessary, and incant it. —Wiseman's Surg.

EXFOLIATIVE. adj. [from exfoliate.] That which has the power of procuring exfoliation. Dress the bone with the milder exfoliatives, till the burst be cut off. —Wiseman's Surg.

EXHALEABLE. adj. [from exhale.] That which may be evaporated or exhaled. The fire may resolve some of the more spirituous and exhalesable parts, whereof distillation has shown me that alabaster is not resistible, into exah'estless. —Bogge.

EXHALATION. n. s. [exhalatio.] 1. The act of exhaling or sending out in vapours; emission. 2. The state of evaporating or flying out in vapours; evaporation. 3. That which rises in vapours, and sometimes takes the form of meteors. No natural exhalation in the sky. No scope of nature, no distemper'd day. But they would pluck away its natural cause, And call them meteors, prodigies, and signs. —Shak.

Moving in so high a sphere, and with so vigorous a lustre, he must needs, as the sun, raise many envious exhalations; which, condensed by a popular air, are capable to cast a cloud upon the brightest merit and integrity. —King Charles.

A fabrick huge Rose like an alabaster, in the sound Of dulcet symphonies and voices sweet. —Milton.

It is no wonder if the earth be often shaken, there being quantities of exhalations within those mines, or cavernous passages, that are capable of rarefaction and inflammation. —Burn.

The growing town's like exhalations rise, And the huge columns heave into the skies. —Pop.

TO EXHALE. v. a. [exhalo.] 1. To send or draw out in vapours or fumes. You flight is not daylight, I know it well! It is some motion that the exhalo. To be so to those with the heart-bearer. —Shak.

I fluttered myself with the hopes that the vapour had been exhaled. —Temple.

Fear freezes mettle out love like heat. —Shak.

Exhalo the soul sublime to seek her native seat. —Dryden.

2. To draw out. See, dead Henry's wounds Open their congeald' mouthes, and bleed afresh! Blush, blush, thou lump of foul deformity! For'tis you must stir the whole body. —Shak.

From cold and empty veins, where no blood dwells! —Shak.

EXHALED. adj. [from exhale.] Material exhaled; vapor. Nor will publish'd amber, although it send forth a gross and corporeal exhalation, be found a long time defective upon the exactest scales. —Brown.

TO EXHAUST. v. a. 1. To drain; to diminish; to deprive of fuming. Single men be many times more charitable, because they keep not the的心 of charity exhausted. —Boa.

Spermatic matter of a vitious sort abounds in the blood, exhausts all its best spirits, and derives the flower of it to the seminal vessels. —Wiseman.

2. To draw out totally; to draw till nothing is left. Though the knowledge they have left us be worth our study, yet they exhausted us till their treasures be the least dealt for the industry and sagacity of after-ages. —Locke.

The murling grove Sings a fair tuneful, cherish'd with foster earth; But when the alien compost is exhaust, its native poverty again prevails. —Philips.

EXHAUSTION. n. s. [from exhaust.] The act of drawing or draining. Not to be emptied; not to be all drawn off, inexhaustible. Of heat and light, what ever enduring brought from the sun's exhausstless golden shores, through gulps immense of interventing air, Enrich the earth and every loss repair. —Blackm.

TO EXHIBIT. v. a. [exhibilo.] 1. To offer to view or use; to offer or propose in a formal or public manner. For some of these, for his benefit, they should exhibit their petitions in the street. —Shak.

2. To show; to display. One of an unfortunate constitution is perpetually exhibiting a miserable example of the weakness of mind and body. —Pop.

EXHIBITER. n. s. [from exhibit.] He that offers anything, as a petition or charge, in a public manner. He seems indifferent, or rather swaying more upon his part, Than cherishing't exhibitors against us. —Shak.

EXHIBITION. n. s. [from exhibit.] 1. The act of exhibiting; display; setting before. What are all mechanism works, but the sensible exhibition of mathematical demonstrations? —Greew.

2. Allowance; salary; pension: it is much used for pensions allowed to scholars at the university. I crave fit disposition for my wife, Of the place of place and exhibition, As levels with her breeding. —Shak.

What maintenance be from his friends receives, Like exhibition thou shalt have from me. —Shak.

All was assigned to the army and garrisons there, and she received only a pension or exhibition out of his coffers. —Bacon.

He is now neglected, and driven to live in exile upon a small exhibition. —Swift.

3. Payment; recompense. I would not do such thing for gowns, petticoats, nor caps, nor any petty exhibition. —Shak.

EXHIBITIVE. adj. [from exhibit.] Representative; displaying. Truths must have an eternal existence in some understanding; or rather, they are the same with that understanding itself, considered as variously exhibit or representative, according to various modes of immutability or participation. —Norris.

TO EXHILARATE. v. a. [ex hilaro.] To make cheerful; to cheer; to fill with mirth; to enliven; to glad; to gladden. The coming into a fair garden, the coming into a fair room richly furnished, a beautiful person, and the like, do delight and exhilarate the spirits much. —Bacon's Nat. Hist.
EXI

The force of that fallacious fruit,
That with exhilarating vapours bound
About their spirits that play'd, and most pow'r
Made err, was now exhald. Milton.

Let them thank
Boon nature, that thus annually supplies
Their vaults, as with her former liquid gifts
Exhales their languid minds, within
The golden mean confin'd. Philips.

EXHILARATION. n. s. [from exhilarate.]
1. The act of giving gaiety.
2. The state of being enlivened.

EXHORTATION. n. s. [from exhort.]
1. The act of exhorting; incitement to good.

EXHORTATION. v. a. [exhortor, Lat.] To be incitement to any good action.
We beseech you, and exhort you by the Lord Jesus, that as you have received of us, how you ought to walk, so ye would abound. 2 Pet.

My duty is to exhort you to consider the dignity of that holy mystery. Common Prayer.
Designing or exhorting glorious war. Milton.

EXHORATOR. n. s. [from exhort.]
Tending to exhort.

EXHORTATION. v. a. [exhort.] One who exorts or encourages by words.

EXHABICATE. n. s. [exicaco, Lat.] To dry; to dry up.

EXICATE. n. s. [exicag.] Ar-faction; act of drying up; state of being dried up.

EXICATIVE. adj. [exicag.] Drying in quality; having the power of drying.

EXIGENCE. n. s. [This word is prob.
EXIGENCY. bly only a corruption of exigents, vitiated by an unskillful pronunciation.]
1. Demand; want; need.
As men, we are at our own choice, both for time and place and form, according to the exigencies of our own occasions in private. Hooker.
You have heard what the present condition and exigencies of these several charities are. Atterbury.
While our fortunes exceed not the measure of real convenience, and are adapted to the exigencies of our station, we perceive the hand of Providence in our gradual and successive supplies.

2. Pressing necessity; distress; sudden occasion.
This dissimilation in war may be called stratagem and conduct; in other exigencies address and destiny. Broome.

Now in such exigencies not to need,
Upon my word you must be rich indeed!
A man's in misery if he cares,
Not for yourself, but for your foes and knaves. Pope.

EXIGENT. n. s. [exigenes, Lat.]
1. Pressing business; occasion that requires immediate help.

EXILE. n. s. [exilis, Lat.]
1. Place or state of being banished from one's country.
Our state of bodies would bewray what life.
We've led since thy exile.
Welcome is exile; welcome were my death. Shakespeare.

2. The person banished.
O must the wretched exile ever mourn,
Nor after length of rowling years return? Dryden.
Ulysses, sole of all the victor train,
An exile from his dear paternal coast,
Deplor'd his absent queen, and empire lost. Pope.

EXILE. adj. [exilis, Lat.]
Small; slender; not full; not powerful. Not in use, except in philosophical writings.

It was good to empirc what means may be to dry up the heat which is in the air, and that may be a secret of great power to produce cold weather. Bacon.

It is a vulgar thing, when the lid is down, it maketh a more exile sound than when the lid is open. Bacon.

To EXILE. v. a. [from the noun. This had formerly the accent on the last syllable, now generally on the first, though Dryden has used both.] To banish; to drive from a country; to transport.
Call home our exil'd friends abroad,
That fed the shores of watchful tyranny. Shak.
Foul subordination is predominant,
And equity exile'd your highness' hand. Shak.
For this purpose.
Immediately we do exile him hence.
Shak.
They, lettered with the bond of a long life,
That exile from the eternal Providence. 1555, xvii. 2.

His brutal manners from his breast exiled;
His men he fashion'd, and his tongue he dill'd. Dryden.

Arms and the man I sing, who fore'd by fate,
And taught Juno's unrelenting hate,
Vex'd and exiled by her banish'd fate. Dryden.

EXILEMENT. n. s. [from exile.] Banishment.
Fitzosborn was discarced into foreign service for a pretty shadow of exilement. Wetten.

EXILATION. n. s. [exilium, Lat.]
The act of springing or rushing out suddenly.
EXO

Many of your old creditors live a short life, and make a figure at their exit. Swift.

3. Passage out of any place.

In such a pervious substance as the brain, they might find an easy entrance or exit, almost at once.

Glaskell.

4. Way by which there is a passage out.

The fire makes its way, forcing the water forth through its ordinary exit, wells, or the Woodward.

EXITAL. adj. [exitalis, Lat.] Deleterious; beyond due proportion; excessive.

Their subjects would live in great plenty, were not the impositions so exorbitant; for the courts are too splendid for the territories. Addison.

So endless and exorbitant are the desires of men, that they will grasp at all, and form no scheme of perfect happiness with less. Swift.

To EXORBITATE. v. n. [ex and orbito, Lat.] To deviate; to go out of the track or road prescribed.

The plants sometimes would have approached the sun as near as the orb of Mercury, and sometimes have exorbitated beyond the distance of Saturn. Bentley.

To EXORCISE. v. a. [exorcise, Lat.] To adjure; to drive away spirits by certain forms of adjuration.

To EXORCISER. n. s. [from exorcise.] One who practises to drive away evil spirits.

EXORCISM. n. s. [exorcismus, Lat.] The form of adjuration, or religious ceremony by which evil and malignant spirits are driven away.

Will his lordship behold and hear our exorcisms? Shakspe.

Symptoms supernatural must be only curable by supernatural means; namely, by devout prayers or exorcisms. Harry.

EXORCIST. n. s. [from exorciser.] One who by adjurations, prayers, or religious acts, drives away malignant spirits.

Then certain of the vagabond Jews, exorcis, took upon them to call over them spirits which had evil spirits. Acts, xiv. 13.

2. An enchanter; a conjurer. Improperly, Soul of Rome! Thon, like an evangelist, had spread out my nostril power. Shakspe, Julius Cesar.

Is there no exorcist? Beau.

Beguils the true office of mine eyes? Shakspe.

EXORD. n. s. [from exordius, Lat.] A formal preface; the preeminent of a composition.

Nor will I thee detain
With poet fiction, and to press your eye
With circumstance, and long exordia here. May's Virgils.

I have been distasted at this way of writing, by reason of long prefaces and exordia. Addison.

EXORDINATION. n. s. [from oratio, Lat.] Ornament; decoration; embellishment.

It seemeth that some of these curious exordiations should rather cease. Hooker.

Herpetological exordia and elegancies many much affect. Hak.

EXORSATION. n. s. [from exorsa, Lat.] Devil-prived of bones.

EXOSTO. s. n. [ex and os, Lat.] Any protuberance of a bone that is not natural, as often happens in venereal cases. Quincy.

EXOSENSOUS. adj. [ex and ossa, Lat.] Wanting bones; boneless; formed without bones.

Thus we daily observe in the heads of fishes, as also in smalls and soft exosseous animals, nature near the level the placed a flat white stone, or testaceous concretion. Brown.

EXOTICK. adj. [exoticus, Lat.] Foreign; not produced in our own country; not domestic.

Some learned men treat of the nature of letters as of some exotic creature, whereas we had no knowledge but by fabulous relations. Holder.

Continue fresh hot-beds to entertain such exotic plants as arrive not to their perfection without Evelyn's Calendar.

EXOTICK. n. s. A foreign plant.

Chusian was seated on the other summit, which was barren, and produced, on some spots, plants that are unknown to Italy, and such, as the gardeners call exotica. Addison's Guardian.

To EXPAN. v. a. [expando, Lat.] 1. To spread; to lay open as a net or sheet.

To dilate; to spread out every way; to diffuse.

She used most the target to fence away the blow, and leaves all other weapons to the Alcheman to propagate and expanse itself. Howell.

Bellerophon's horse, framed of iron, and placed between two loadstones, with wings expanded, hang pendants in the air.

An animal growing, expands its fibres in the air as a fluid. Arbuthnot in Air.

Along the stream of time thy name Expended flies, and gathers all its fame. Pope.

EXPANSE. n. s. [expansion, Lat.] A body widely extended without inequalities.

A murmuring sound Of waters issue from a cave, and spread Into a liquid plain; then stood unvanish'd. Pope.

Pure as the expansion of heavy. Milton.

Bright in the ethereal glows the green expansion. Savage.

On the smooth expanse of crystal lakes, The sinking stone at first a circle makes; The trembling surface, by the motion stir'd, Spreads in a second circle, then a third; Wide, and more wide, the floating rings advance. Fill all the watry plains, and to the margin danc. Pope.

EXPANSIBILITY. n. s. [from expansible.] Capacity of extension; possibility to be expanded or spread into a wider surface.

With the rotundity common to the atoms of all fluids, there is some difference in bulk, by which the atoms in one fluid are distinguished from those of another, else all fluids would be alike in weight, expansibility, and all other qualities. Gradl.

EXPANSIBLE. adj. [from expansus, Lat.] Capable to be extended; capable to spread into a wider surface.

Bodies are not expansible in proportion to their weight, or to the quantity of matter to be expanded. Gradl.

EXPANSION. n. s. [from expand.] 1. The state of being expanded into a wider surface or greater space.

It demonstrated that the condensation and expansion of any portion of the air is always proportioned to the weight and pressure incumbent upon it. Bentley.

2. The act of spreading out.

The easy expansion of the wing of a bird, and the lightness, strength, and shape of the feathers, ... Gradl.

3. Extent; space to which any thing is extended.
EXP

The capacious mind of man cannot be confined by the limits of the world; it extends its thoughts even beyond the utmost expansion of matter, and makes incursions into that incomprehensible universe.

4. Pure space, as distant from extension in solid matter.

Distance or space, in its simple abstract conception, is but an idea to distinguish it from extension, which expresses this distance only as it is in the solid parts of matter. Locke.

It would for ever take an useless flight.

Lost in exposition, void and infinite. Blackmore.

EXPANSIVE. adj. [from expand.] Having the power to spread into a wider surface, or greater space.

The elastic or expansive faculty of the air, whereby it dilates itself when compressed, hath been made use of in the common weather glasses. Bay.

To EXPAND. v. a. [expand.] To increase in extent.

To range at large; to rove without any prescribed limits.

Religion contracts the circle of our pleasures, but leaves it wide enough for her votaries to exist in. Addison's Spectator.

He looks in heaven with more than mortal eyes, Bids his own soul expand in the skies; Amidst her kindred stars familiar noon, Survey the region, and consists her home. Pope.

Expand free o'er all this scene of man; A mighty maze! but not without a plan. Pope.

With wonder setl'd, we view the pleasing ground And walk delighted, and expand round. Pope.

2. To enlarge in language.

They had a custom of offering the tongs to Mercury, because they believed him the giver of eloquence: Dacier expatia on this custom. Browne.

3. To let loose; to allow to range. This sense, which is active, is very improper.

Make choice of a subject, which, being of itself capable of all that colours and the elegance of design can possibly give, shall afterwards afford an ample field of matter wherein to expatiate itself.

To EXPECT. v. a. [expect.] To look forward to.

1. To have a previous apprehension of either good or evil.

We expected immediate dissolution. Milton.

Needs must the serpent now his capital bruise Expect with mortal pain. Milton.

Good with bad Expect to hear, supernatural grace contending With sinfulness of man. Milton.

Eve, now expect great tidings. Milton.

2. To wait for; to attend the coming.

The guards, By me encompass'd on yonder hill, expect their motion. Milton.

While, expecting there the queen, he rais'd his wond'ring eyes, and round the temple gaz'd. Dryden.

To EXPECT. v. n. To wait; to stay.

Elihu had expected till Job had spoken. Shakespeare.

EXPECTABLE. adj. [from expect.] To be expected; to be hoped or feared.

Occult and spiritual operations are not explicable from ioni; for being but water congealed, it can never make such good qualities. Brown.

EXPECTANCE. n. s. [from expect.] The act or state of expecting; expectation.

Every moment is expectancy. Shakespeare, Othello.

EXPECTANCY. n. s. [from expect.] 1. The act or state of expecting; expectation.

Of more arravance. Shakespeare, Othello.

EXPECTRATION. n. s. [from expect-]

1. The act of discharging from the breast.

2. That discharge which is made by coughing, as bringing up phlegm, or any thing that obstructs the vessels of the lungs, and straitens the breath.

With water, vinegar and honey, in phlegms and inflammations of the lungs, be mix't with spices, for promoting expectoration. Arbuthnot on Materia.

EXPECTORATIVE. adj. [from expecto-] Having the quality of promoting expectoration.

Syrups and other expectoratives, in coughuits necessartly occasion a greater cough. Harvey.

EXPECTANCY. n. s. [from expedient.]

1. Fitness; propriety; suitableness to an end.

Solemn dedications of things set apart for Divine Worship, could never have been universally practised, had not right reason dictated the high expediency and great use of such practices. South.

2. It is used in Shakespeare for expedition; adventure; or attempt.

Let me hear What yesterday our plot did decry, In forwarding this dear expediency. Shakespeare.

3. It is also used by Shakespeare for expediency; haste; dispatch.

I shall break The cause of our expedience to the queen, And get her leave to part. Shakespeare.

Eight tall ships, three thousand men of war, Are making helicopter with all due expediency. Shakespeare, Rich. II.

EXPEDIENT. adj. [expedit. Lat.]

1. Proper; fit; convenient; suitable.

All things are not expedient: in things indifferent there is a choice; they are not always equally expedient. Hooker.

When men live as if there were no God, it becomes expedient for them that there should be none, and then they endeavour to persuade themselves so. Tilottson.

2. In Shakespeare, quick; expeditious.

The adverse winds Whose leisure I have staid, have given him time To land his legions all as soon as E:

His marches are expedient to this town. Shakespeare.

EXPEDIENTLY. adv. [from expedient.]

1. That which helps forward, as means to an end.

God does not project for our sorrow, but our innocence; and would never have invited us to the one, but as an expedient to the other. Decay of Piety.

2. A shift; means to an end which are contrived in an exigence, or difficulty.

The expedient pleas'd, where neither lost his right Mars had the day, and Venus had the night. Dryden.

He flies to a new expedient to solve the matter, and supposes an earth of a make and frame like that of Des Cartes. Woodward.

EXPEDIENTLY. adv. [from expedient.]

1. Fily; suitably; conveniently.

Let my officers of such a nature
Make an extent upon his house and lands: Do this expediently, and turn him going. Shakespeare.

2. Hastily; quickly. Not used.

To To expedite. v. a. [exped. Lat.]

1. To facilitate; to free from impediment.

By sin and death a way now is paved, To expedite your glorious march. Milton.
EXP

An exposition would still be a further improvement, and would explicate the conversion of the Papists.
Swift.

3. To dispatch; to issue from a publick office.

Though such charters be expedient of course, and as of right, yet they are varied by discretion.
Bacon.

EXPEDITE, adj. [expeditus, Lat.]

1. Quick; hasty; soon performed.

Wholesome advice, and expedite execution in feeling the state of these monsters.
Samuel.

2. Easy; disencumbered; clear from impediments.

Nature can teach the church but in part; neither so fully as is requisite for man’s salvation, nor so easily as to make the way plain and expedite enough, that many come to the knowledge of it, and so be saved, and therefore the Scripture has been given.
Hooker.

3. Nimble; active; agile.

The more any man’s soul is cleansed from sensual lusts, the more nimble and expedite it will be in its operations.

It seems to be used by Bacon for light armed in the Roman signification.

He sent the lord chamberlain with expedite forces to speed to Exeter, to the rescue of the Bacon’s Henry VII.

EXPEDITELY, adj. [from expedite.] With quickness, readiness, haste.

Nature left his ears naked, that he may turn them more expeditely for the reception of sounds from every quarter.
Green.

EXPEDITION, n. s. [from expedite.]

1. Haste; speed; activity.

Prayer, whereunto devout minds have added a piec’d kind of brevity, thereby the better to express that quick and speedy expedition where’with ardent affections, the very wings of prayer are delighted to present our suits in heaven.

Ev’n with the speciﬁd expedition I will dispatch him to the emperor’s court.
Shak.

2. A march or voyage with martial intentions.

Young Octavius, and Mark Antony, Come down upon us with a mighty power.
Benedict is an expedition toward Philippis. Shakspe.

EXPEDITIOUS, adj. [from expedite.]

1. Speedy; quick; soon done: as, an expeditious march.

2. Nimble; quick; swift; acting with celerity: as, an expeditious runner.

EXPEDITIOUSLY, adv. [from expeditious.]

Speedily; nimbly; with celerity.

To EXPED. v. a. [expello, Lat.]

1. To drive out; to force away.

The Lord your God shall expel them from before you, and drive them from out of your sight.
Josh xxxii. 5.

I may know the let by which gentle peace. Should not expel these inconveniences. Shakspe.

Suppose a mighty rock to fall there, it would expel the waters out of their places with such violence as to ﬂing them among the clouds.
Burnet.

2. To eject; to throw out.

Whatever cannot be digested by the stomach, is either put up by vomit, or put down to the guts and other parts of the body are moved to expel by consent.
Bacon’s Nat. Hist.

The virgin’s breast was not slow To expel the shaft from her contained bow. Dryd.

3. To banish; to drive from the place of residence.

Arms and the man I sing, who forc’d by fate, And most ambusc’d and most desiring hate, Expel’d and exil’d left the Trojan shore. Dryd.

4. To reject; to refuse.

And would you not poor fellowship cxpel, Myself would offer you another; in this adventurous chanceful jeopardy. Hubbard.

5. To keep off; to exclude; to keep out.

In this adventurous chanceful jeopardy. Hubbard.

Since she did neglect her looking-glass, And throw her bonnet in the water.
Shakspe.

Oh that such earth which kept her in awe Would patch a wall, expel the winter’s flame.
Shakspe.

EXPEDITOR, n. s. [from expedite.] One that expels or drives away.

To EXPEND, v. a. [expendo, Lat.]

To lay out; to expend.

If my death might make this island happy, I would expend it with all willingness.
Shakspe.

The king of England wasted the French king’s country, and thereby caused him to expend such sums of money as exceeded the debt.
Hayward.

The publick burnishes, though they be a good reason for our not expending so much in charity, yet will not justify in giving nothing.
Atterbury.

EXPENSE, n. s. [expensum, Lat.] Cost; charge; money expended.

Hence comes that wild and vast expense, that hath cost’d Rome’s virtue three times.
Dryd.

Which simple poverty ﬁrst made. Ben Jonson.

A feast prepar’d with rustic expense.
Dryd.

Much cost, more care, and more magniﬁcence.
Dryd.

Such provision made, that a country should not want so many springs as were convenient, and afford a supply every where suitable to the necessities and expenses of each climate.
Woodward.

I can no reason by which we are obliged to make those prodigious expenses.
Swift.

EXPENSEFUL, adj. [expensive, suffix.] Costly; chargeable; expensive.

No part of structure is either more expensive than windows or more ruinous.
Wotton’s Architect.

EXPENSELESS, adj. [from expense.] Without cost.

A physician may save any army by this frugal and expenseless menus only. Milton on Education.

What health promotes, and give men’s health.
Dryd.

Is all expenses, and procur’d with ease.
Blackm.

EXPENSIVE, adj. [from expense.]

1. Given to expense; extravagant; luxurious.

Frugal and industrious men are friendly to the established government, as the idle and expensive are dangerous.
Temple.

2. Costly; requiring as expense dress; an expensive journey.

3. Liberal; generous; distributive.

This requires an active, expensive, indefatigable goodness, such as our apostle calls a work and labour of love.
Sprat.

EXPENSIVELY, adv. [from expensive.]

With great expense; at great charge.

I never knew him live so great and expensively as he hath done since his return from exile. Swift.

EXPENSIVENESS, n. s. [from expensive.]

1. Addiction to expense; extravagance.

2. Costliness.

Their highways, for their extent, solidity or expensiveness, are some of the greatest monuments of the grandeur of the Roman empire. Arbuthnot.

EXPERIENCE, n. s. [expiratia, Lat.]

1. Practice; frequent trial.

Hereof experience hath informed reason, and time hath made those things apparent whose debts were hid.
Raleigh.

But apt the mind of fancy to be ravel’d, and yet not to be unravel’d; and the thread thereof, till warm’d, or by experience taught, she learn’d, that not to know at large of things remote from use, obscure and subtle, but to know that which before us lies in daily life.

2. Knowledge gained by trial and practice.

Boys immature in knowledge
Pawne their experience to their present pleasure.
Shakspe.

But if you will prosper, mark what I advise, Whom age and long experience render wise. Pope.

To EXPERIENCE, v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To try; to practise.

2. To know by practice.

He through the armed files
Darts his experience d eye.
Milton.

EXPERIENCER, n. s. [experienca, Lat.]

One who makes trials; a practiser of experiments.

A curious experiencer did affirn, that the like-ness of any object, if strongly enlighten’d, will appear to another, in the image that looks strongly and steadily upon it, ’till he be dazzled by it; even after he shall have turned his eyes from it.
Dryg.

EXPERIMENT, n. s. [experimentum, Lat.] Trial of anything; something done in order to discover an uncertain or unknown effect.

That which sheweth thee to be wise, is the gathering of principles out of their own particular experiments, and the framing of our particular experiments, according to the rule of their principles, shall make us such as they are.
Hooker.

It is good also not to try experiments in states, except the necessity be urgent, or the utility evident.
Bacon.

Adam! by sad experiment I know,
How little weight with thee my words can find.
Milton.

’Till his full man’s mind was ignorant of nothing but of sin; or, at least, it rested in the notion without the smart of the experiment.
South’s Sermons.

When we are searching out the nature or properties of any being by various methods of trial, this sort of observation is called experiment. Watts.

To EXPERIMENT, v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To try; to search out by trial.

Francis Redi experimented that no putrid flesh will of itself, if all insects be carefully kept from it, produce any. Ray on the Creation.

2. To know by experience.

When the succession of ideas ceases, our perception of duration ceases with it, which every one experiments whilst he sleeps soundly.
Locke.

EXPERIMENTAL, adj. [from experiment.]

1. Pertaining to experiment.

2. Built upon experiment; formed by observation.

To not my reading, nor my observations, Which with experimental seal do warrant, The tenor of my book. Shakspe.

The experimental testimony of Gillus is most considerable of any, who held the cause thereof.
Brown’s Fulg. Err.

3. Known by experiment or trial.

We have no other evidence of universal impertinability, besides a large experience, without an experimental exception.
Newton.

664
These are so far from being subservient to atheists in their audacious attempts, that they rather afford an experimental confirmation of the universal delusion.

EXPERIMENTALLY. adv. [from experimental.] By experience; by trial; by experiment; by observation.

The miscarriage being sometimes universal, has led me to think we have experimentally learned by our own observations.

Rogers's Sermons.

EXPERIMENTER. n. s. [from experiment.] One who makes experiments.

Galleus and Morenus, two exact experimenters do think they find this verity by their experiences, but surely this is impossible to be done. Diggory.

EXPERT. adj. [expertus, Lat.] 1. Skillful; addressful; intelligent.

Now we will take some order in the town, placing therein some expert officers. Shakep.

Again fair J. sitteth on Hoon's expert breast.

On his coming he/Avoid the virtuous rise to the highest pitch of perfection, there will be still in him so many secret sins, so many human frailties, so many omissions of ignorance, passion, and prejudice, so many unguarded words and thoughts, that without the advantage of such a practice and atonement, as Christianity has revealed to us, it is impossible he should be saved.

Addison.

3. Practices by which the threats of omni-

EXPLANATORY. adj. [from explicate.] Having the power of expiation or atonement.

His voluntary death for others prevailed with God, and had the force of an expiatory sacrifice.

Hooker.

EXPLANATION. n. s. [from explain.] Exposition; interpretation; explication; explanation; full account; expounding.

Such is the original design, however we may explain it away. Addison's Parumia.

You will have variety of commentators to explain the difficult passages to you. Gay.

Some explained the meaning quite away. Pope.

EXPLAINABLE. adj. [from explain.] Capable of being explained or interpreted. It is symbolically explainable, and implies purification and cleanliness.

Brown's Fugler Errors.

EXPLAINER. n. s. [from explain.] Expositor; interpreter; commentator.

EXPLANATION. n. s. [from explain.] The act of explaining or interpreting.

The word is explained by a dictionary. Sharp.

EXPETIVE. n. s. [expletivism, Lat.] Something used only to take up room; something of which the use is only to prevent a vacancy.

These are not only useless expletives to matter, but great ornaments of style. Sejuy.

While expletives their feeble aid do join. Pope.

Expletives, whether words or syllables, are made use of purely to supply a vacancy; do, before verbs plural, is absolutely such; and future refiners may explode this and do.

Pope.
EXP\textsc{licable}. adj. [from expli\textsc{c}ate.]
Explanation; possible to be explained.
Many difficulties, scarce expli\textsc{c}able with any certainty, occur in the fabric of human manners.
Hale.
Great variety there is in compound bodies, and little many of them seem to be expli\textsc{c}able.

To EXPLI\textsc{c}ATE. n. a. [expli\textsc{c}ate, Lat.]
1. To unfold; to expand.
They expli\textsc{c}ate the leaves, and open food
For the silk labourers of the mulberry wood.
Blackmore.

2. To explain; to clear; to interpret.
They do not understand that part of Christian philosophy which expli\textsc{c}ates the secret nature of this divine sacrament.
Although the truths may be elicited and expli\textsc{c}ated by the contemplation of animals, yet they are more clearly evidenced in the contemplation of man.
Hale’s Origin of Mankind.
The last verse of his last satyr is not yet suffi-

EXPLI\textsc{c}ATION. n. s. [from expli\textsc{c}ate.]
1. The act of opening; unfolding or expanding.

2. The act of explaining; interpretation; explanation.
The church preacheth, first publishing by way of testimony, the truth which from them she hath received, woven together in the sacred volumes of Scripture; secondly, by way of expli\textsc{c}ation, discovering the mysteries which lie hid therein.

Many things are needful for expli\textsc{c}ation, and many for application unto particular occasions.
Allowances are made in the expli\textsc{c}ation of our Saviour’s parables, which hold only as to the main scope.

3. Things given by an expli\textsc{c}ator; inter-

Pre\textsc{sented}.

To the substance of this theory I mainly depend upon; many single expli\textsc{c}ations and particularities may be rectified upon farther thoughts.
Burnet.

EXPLI\textsc{c}ATIVE. adj. [from expli\textsc{c}ate.]
Having a tendency to explain.
If the term which is added to the subject of a complex proposition be either essential or any way necessary to it, then it is called expli\textsc{c}ative for it only explains the subject; as, every mortal man is a son of Adam.
Watts’s Logick.

EXPLI\textsc{c}ATOR. n. s. [from expli\textsc{c}ate.]
Expounder; interpreter; expli\textsc{c}ator.

EXPLO\textsc{D}ER, adj. [expli\textsc{d}us, Lat.] Unfolded; plain; clear; obscure; not merely implied.
We must lay aside that lazy and fallacious method of censuring by the lump, and bring things close to expli\textsc{d} proof and evidence.
Burnet.

These speculations, when most refined, serve only to show how impossible it is for us to have a clear and expli\textsc{d} notion of that which is infinite.
South’s Sermons.

EXPLI\textsc{d}ELY. adv. [from expli\textsc{d}us, expli-fically; directly; not merely by inference or implication.

This querulous humour carries an implicit re-

8 precedence to God’s dispositions; but where it is indulged, it usually is its own expli\textsc{d}ator, and expli-8ication avows it.

Government of the Tongue.

TO EXPLO\textsc{D}E. v. a. [expl\textsc{d}o, Lat.]
1. To drive out disgracefully with some noise of contempt; to treat with open contempt; to treat not only with neglect, but open disdain or scorn.

Though you can be understood as thus, of

ly, and you do good

Exploded, and had seat’d with violent hands,
Had not a cloud descending snatch’d him thence Unseen amid the th’ round

Milton’s Parad. Lost.

TO EXPLO\textsc{D}ER. n. s. [from expl\textsc{d}o, Lat.]

Thus was the applause they meant
Turn’d to exploding his, triumph to shame,
Cast on themselves from their own mouth.

Old age explodes all but morality.

There is pretended, that a magnetic globe or terrella, being placed upon its poles, would have a constant rotation; but this is commonly expli-8ed, as being against all experience.

William’s Intermittence.

Shall that man pass for a professed in Christ’s school, who would have been exploded in the school of Zen?

South.

Provided that no word, which a society shall give a subscription to, be antiquated and exploded, they may receive whatsoever new ones they shall find occasion for.

2. To drive out with noise and violence.

But late the kindly powder did explode
The musny ball, and the brass tube unloosed.

Bacon.

EXPLOR\textsc{E}R. n. s. [from expl\textsc{e}re, Lat.]
An breeze; one who drives out any person or thing with open contempt.

EXPLOR\textsc{E}T. n. s. [expl\textsc{e}tem, Lat. re-private; a design accomplished; an at-chievement; a successful attempt.

Know’st thou not any whom corning gold
Would tempt to a close expli\textsc{d} of death?

Shake.

Flight cannot stain the honour you have won;
But mine it will that no expli\textsc{d} have done.

Shake.

How shall I relate
To human sense th’ invisible expli\textsc{d}es
Of warring spirits?

Milton’s Parad. Lost.

He breaks fierri Hannibals insulting hearts;

Of which expli\textsc{d}es thus our friend Ennius treats.

Desham.

Will you thus dishonest
Your past expli\textsc{d}es, and sully all your wars?

Addison.

To EXPLOR\textsc{E}T. v. a. [from the noun; to perform; to achieve. Not used.

He exploded great matters in his own person
In Gallia, and by his son in Spain.
Casden.

To EXPLOR\textsc{A}TE. v. a. [expl\textsc{o}re, Lat.]
To search out; to try searching; to explore.

South exclude their horns, and therewith expli-

8e their way.

Brown’s Vulg. Err.

EXPLOR\textsc{A}TION. n. s. [from expl\textsc{o}rate.

Search; examination.

For exact expli\textsc{a}tion scales should be suspended whence air is quite, that, on a little later

8ation, they may be the more freely convert upon their na-

8ural verity.

Brown’s Vulg. Err.

Use may be made of the like way of expli-8ation in that enquiry which puzzles so many modern naturalists.

Boyle.

EXPLOR\textsc{A}T\textsc{OR}. n. s. [from expl\textsc{o}rate.

One who searches; a searcher; an examiner.

Boyle.

EXPLOR\textsc{A}T\textsc{ORY}. adj. [from expl\textsc{o}rate.

Searching; examining.

To EXPLOR\textsc{A}TE v. a. [explor\textsc{are}, Lat.

Try; to search into; to examine by trial.

Abduct that sight endur’d not, where he stood
Among the mightiest, bent on highest deeds,

And thus his own undaunted heart explores.

Milton.

Divere opinions I have been inclined to question not only as a naturalist, but as a chymist, whether they be agreeable to true grounds of philosophy, or the exploring of the experiments of the fire.

Boyle.

But Cyp, and the rest of sounder mind,
The fatal present to the fames design’d,
Or to the watry deep; at least to bore

The hollow sides, and hidden frauds explore.

Dryden’s Anabalt.

EXPER\textsc{M}IENT. n. s. [from the verb.] Commodity carried out in traffic.

EXPER\textsc{M}IENT. n. s. [from exper\textsc{t}.

The act or practice of carrying out commodities into other countries.
The cause of a kingdom’s thrivingfulness of soil to produce necessaries, not only sufficient for the inhabitants, but for exportation into other countries.

EXPER\textsc{M}IERT. n. s. [from exper\textsc{t}.

He that carries out commodities, in opposition to the importer, who brings them in.

EXPOSING.

Money will be melted down or carried away in coin by the expounder, whether the pieces of each species be of less or more value than the others. Locke.

To EXPOSE. v. a. [expono, exposition, Lat. exposcr, expiator, expounder, Lat.] 1. To lay open; to make liable.

to explain; to interpret.

With physical; to expose thyself to feel what wretches feel. A nighthawk. &c. Drury.

EXPOSER. n. s. [expostulator, Lat. expostulator, expounder, interpreter.

A nighthawk, moving jet, who, with his tender tongue, delivers in such apt and gracious words, that aged ears play truant at his tales. Shakspear. In the picture of Abraham's sacrificing his son, Isaac is described as a little boy, which is not consonant unto the authority of expounders.

Durst I expound with Providence; I then might ask. Cotton. The bishop will expound, and the tenant will have regard to the reasonableness of the demand. Swift.

EXPOSITION. n. s. [from expostulate.]

1. Debate; altercation; discussion of an affair in private without rupture.

The expressions end well between lovers, but ill between friends. Spectator.

2. Charge; accusation.

This makes her bleeding patients to accuse. High, and these expostulations use could not have been done by no private woman grace, whom we might dare to love with such a face? Walker. Expounding is a private accusation of one friend touching another, supposed not to have dealt singly or conversely in the course of good friendship. Locke.

EXPLICATOR. n. s. [from expostulate.] One that debates with another without open rupture.

EXPLICATORY. adj. [from expostulate.]

Containing expostulation. This fable is an explanation of a legal duty between Bounty and Ingratitude. L'Estrange.

EXPLANATION. n. s. [from expostulate.]

The act of exposing or setting out to observation.

2. The state of being open to observation.

When we have our naked frailties hid, that suffer in exposture, let us meet. Shak. Much.

3. The state of being exposed, or being liable to any thing.

Determine on some course, more than a wild exposure to each chance. Shaksp. Coriolanus.

4. The state of being in danger.

Ajax sets Thersites to match us in comparisons with dirt; to weaken and discredit our expounder, how hard soever in danger. Shaksp.

5. Explication; the situation in which the sun or air is received.

The cold now advancing, set such plants as will not end the house, in pots, two or three inches lower than the surface of some bed, under a southern exposure. Evelyn.

EXPONDER. n. s. [from expostulate.] Expounder; interpreter.

This the body of the faithful witnesses; making more relation of what God himself had revealed unto them; and partly as careful expounders, teachers, and persuaders thereof. Hooker.

杼 5. To express; to express.

1. To copy; to resemble; to represent.

So kids and whelps their sires and dams express, and so the great I measure'd by the less. Dryden. Adorn a dream, expressing human form. The shape of him who suffered in the storm. Dry.

2. To represent by any of the imitative arts; as poetry, sculpture, painting.

Each skilful artist shall express thy form in animated gold. Smith's Phaedra and Hippolytus.

3. To represent in words; to exhibit by language; to utter; to declare.

You shall see half, and to express, Eavv bid conceal the rest. Miltton. Though they have learned those sounds, yet there are no determined ideas laid up in their minds, which are to be expressed to others by them. Loche.

In moral ideas we have no sensible marks that represent them to us, whereas, if we set them down: we have nothing but words to express them by. Loche.

True wit is nature to advantage drest. What oft was thought, but ne'er so well express. Pope.

Others for language all their care express, and value books, as women men, for dress. Pope.

To shed tears, among the ancients; when they should express their gratitude to the gods with joy expressed a profession. Brome.

4. To shew, or make known in any manner.

No longer shall thy bosom aptly fling, That air and shape of every thing express. Fine by degrees, and deliberately less. Prior.

5. To utter; to declare; with the reciprocal pronoun.

Mr. Philip did express himself with much indignation against us for sending. Pope.

6. To denote; to designate.

Moses and Aaron took these men expressed by their names. Num. i. 37.

7. To squeeze out; to force out by compression.

Among the watry juices of fruit are all the fruits of which drink is expressed; as the grape and the apple. Bacon.

8. To exert by violence, or elicit by art; a Latinism.

667
2. The form or mode of language in which any thoughts are uttered.

But ill expression sometimes give away
To noble thoughts, whose flame shall ne'er decay.
—Buckingham.

The poet, to reconcile Helen to his reader, brings her in as a penitent, condemning her own infidelity in very strong expressions.

3. A phrase; a mode of speech.

4. The act of squeezing or forcing out any thing by a press.

Those juices that are so fishesly, as they cannot make drink by expression, yet may make drink by mixture of water. —Farewell.

The juices of the leaves are obtained by expression: from this juice proceeds the taste. —Arbuthnot.

EXPRESSIONAL. n. s. [from expression.
Having the power of utterance or representation. With of before the thing expressed.

Each verse so swells expression of her woes,
And ev'ry tear in lines so mournful flows,
We, with spite of fame, her fate revers'd believe,
O'erlook her crimes, and think she ought to live! —Tickell.

And four fair queens, whose hands sustain a flow'.'s
Th'expression emblem of their sober power. —Pope.

A visible and exemplary obedience to God's laws is the most expressive acknowledgment of the majesty and sovereignty of God, and disposes others to glorify him by the same observances. —Rogers.

EXPRESSIONALLY. adv. [from expression.
In a clear and representative way.

EXPRESSIONLESS, n. s. [from expression.
The power of expression, or representation by words.

The musician has all the expressiveness that words can give; it was here that Virgil strained hard to outdo Lucan. —Addison.

EXPRESSILY. adv. [from expression.
In direct terms; plainly; not by implication; not generally:

It doth not follow, that of necessity we shall sin, unless we expressly extend this in every particular. —Hooker.

Articles of belief, and things which all sects must do, to the end they may be saved, are either expressly set down in Scripture, or else plainly thereby to be known. —Hooker.

Who dare cross 'em,
Bearing the king's will from his mouth expressly?
—Shakespeare.

The beginning of the worship of images in these western parts, was by the folly and superstition of the people, expressly against the will of their own king. —Hooker.

This account I expressly give of them, when I enter on the argument. —Atterbury.

All the duties that the best political laws enjoin, as conducive to the quiet and order of social life, are expressly commanded by our religion. —Rogers.

EXPRESSURE, n. s. [from express.
Now disused.

1. Expression; utterance. Not used.

There is a mystery in the soul of state, Which hath an operation more divine,
Than breath or print can give expression too. —Shakespeare.

2. The form; the likeness represented. Not used.

I will drop some obscure epistles of love, where-in, by the colour of his beard, the manner of his parts, expression of his eye, forehead, and complexion, he shall find himself personated. —Shakespeare.

3. The mark; the impression. Not used.

And nightly, meadow fairies, look you sing,
Like to the garlic-composed in a thing
Th' expression that he bears, green let it be,
More fertile fresh than all the field to see. —Shakespeare.

To EXPROBATE. v. a. [expribo, Lat.] To charge upon with reproach, to impute only with blame; to upbraid.

To exprobate their stupidity, he induces the providence of storks; now, if the bird had been unknown, the illustration had been obscure, and the exprobation not a reproach, but a observation not of reprobation, not of grief. —Hooker.

The Parthians, with exprobation of Cassius's third that-money, poured gold into his mouth after he was dead:

It will be a denial with scorn, with a taunting exprobation; and to be miserable without consimilation, is the height of misery. —South's Sermons.

No need such boasts, or exprobations false
Of cowardice: the military mood
The British files transcend in evil hour
For their proud foes. —Phillips.

To EXPRIOPRIATE. v. a. [exciprum, Lat.] To make no longer our own; to hold no longer as a property. Not in use.

When you have resigned, or rather consigned, your expriopriated will to God, and thereby entrusted it to will for you, all his dispensations towards you are, in effect, the acts of your own will. —Boyle's Sceptical Law.

To EXPUGN. v. a. [expugna, Lat.] To conquer; to take by assault.

EXPUGNATION. n. s. [from expugna.
Conquest; the act of taking by assault.

The expugnation of Vienna he could not accomplish.

To EXPULSE. v. a. [expulsus, Lat.] To drive out; to expel; to force away.

For ever should they be expuls'd from France, and have not title of an equal there. —Shakespeare.

Suppose a nation where the custom were, that after full age the sons should expulse their fathers and mothers out of possessions, and put them to their perdition. —Boyle's Holy War.

Inwardly received, it may be very diurectic, and expulse the stone in the kidneys. —Brown.

Diversity relateth, that Pelus was expuls'd by his kingdom from Acastus. —Hooker.

EXPULSION. n. s. [from expulse.
1. The act of expelling or driving out.

A woe,
More hateful than the soul expulsion is,
Of thy dear husband. —Shakespeare, Cymbeline.

Such victor from the expulsion of his foes,
Messiah his triumphant chariot turn'd! —Milton.

Others think it possible so to contrive several pieces of steel and a load-stone, that, by their continual attraction and expulsion of one another, they may cause a perpetual motion of a wheel. —Wilkins' Deitatum.

This magnificent temple was not finished till after the expulsion of Tarquin. —Tickell.

Coffee-coloured urine proceeds from a mixture of a small quantity of blood with the urine; but often prognosticates a resolution of the obstructing matter, and the expulsion of gravel or a stone. —Arbuthnot.

2. The state of being driven out.

To what end had the angel been sent to keep the entrance into Paradise, after Adam's expulsion, if the universe had been Paradise. —Boulainvilliers.

EXPULSIVELY. adj. [from expulse.
Having the power of expulsion.

If the member be dependent, raising of it up, and placing it equal with, or higher than the rest of members; the other members, thus restrained, and the part strengthened by expulsion bands. —Wiseman.
EXQUISITE. adj. [exquisitum, Lat.]

1. Farsought; excellent; consummate; complete.

His absolute exactness they imitate by tending unto that which is most exquisite in every particular.

Why should the state be troubled with this needless charge of keeping and maintaining so great a navy in such exquisite perfection and readiness? - Raleigh

2. Consummately bad.

With exquisite naivety they mixed the gull and vinegar of falsity and contempt.

King Charles

EXQUISITELY. adv. [exquisitum, Lat.]

Perfectly; completely: either in a good or ill sense.

We see more exquisitely with one eye shut than with both open; for that the spiritus visutale unite themselves, and become stronger.

A collection of rare manuscripts, exquisitely written in Arabic, and sought in the most remote parts by Epenius, the most excellent English politician.

The soldier then, in Greekian arts unskill'd, returning rich with plunder from the field, if cups of silver of gold be brought, with jewels set, and exquisitely wrought,

To glorious trappings strew the plate he turn'd, and with the gilt'ring spoil his admir'd arm'd.

The poetry of operas is generally as exquisitely ill as the music is good.

Addison on Italy.

EXQUISITENESS. n. s. [from exquisitum, Lat.]

Neatness; perfection.

We suppose the superscriptions of the two glases should be so exactly light and smooth, that no air at all can come between them; and experience has informed us, that they are extremely difficult to procure from our ordinary tradesmen either glasses or marbles so much as approaching such an exquisiteness.

Exquisite. Dryden.

To EXSICCATE. v. a. [exsiccato, Lat.]

To dry. If in a dissolution of steel a separation of parts be made by precipitation, the exsiccated powder ascends not into the loadstone.

Great heats and droughts exsiccate and waste the moisture and vegetable nature of the earth.

Martine's Husbandry.

EXSICCATIVE. adj. [from exsiccate.]

Having the power of drying.

A discharge of saliva by spitting.

Quincy.

EXSPUSION. n. s. [expuso, Lat.]

The act of sucking out, or draining out, without immediate contact of the power of sucking with the thing sucked.

If you open the valve and force up the sucker, after this first action, you will drive out almost a whole cylinder full of air.

To EXSU'OLUTION. v. a. [a word peculiar to Shakespeare.]

To whisper, to buzz in the ear: from the Italian verb soflar.

To ESU'ICATION. v. a. [exsicato, Lat.]

To purge up; to stir up.

EXTEMPORANEOUS. adj. [extemporaneus, Lat.]

Without premeditation; sudden.

Without premeditation; suddenly, readily; without any previous care or preparation.

You may do it extemporé: for it is but roaring.

Shakespeare

Nothing great ought to be ventured upon without preparation; but, above all, how solicitous is it to engage extemporé, where the concern is eternity.

South

Hast thou no mark at which to bend thy bow? or, like a bay, pursu'd the carrión-crow with strokes from tree to tree. A fruitless till, and live extemporé?

Dryden.
EXT

2. It is sometimes used as an adjective, but very improperly.

I have known a woman branch out into a long extension of his discourse, upon a petticoat. Addison.

EXTREMITY. n.s. [from extend.]
The faculty of speaking or acting without premeditation; the state of being unpremeditated.

To EXTREMORIZE. v.n. [from extremity.]
To speak extempore, or without premeditation.
The extemporing faculty is never more out of its element than in the pulpit; though even here, it is much more excusable in a sermon than in a prayer. South's Sermons.

To EXTEND. v.n. [from extend.]
1. To stretch out towards any part.
   See the figure of his lifefull friend, and his old sire, his helpless hand extend. Dryd. Should ring God's altar a vide image stands, Belles his features, and extends his hands. Pope.
2. To amplify; opposed to contract.
   It is a miserable in any to use what liberty they list in their own manner of writing; but the contraction, and extening the lines and sense of others would appear a thankless office. Wotton.
3. To spread abroad; to diffuse; to expand.
   He much magnifies the capacity of his understanding, himself, that he can extend his thoughts farther than God exists, or imagine any expansion where he is not. Locke.
4. To widen to a large comprehension.
   Few extend their thoughts towards universal knowledge. Locke.
5. To stretch into assignable dimensions; to make local; to magnify so as to fill some assignable space.
The mind, say they, while you sustain To hold her station in the brain; You grant, at least she is extended. Ergo the whole dispute is ended. Prior.
6. To enlarge; to continue.
   To Helen's bed the gods alone assign Hermia's she cut the regal line. Pope's Odyssey.
7. To increase by force or duration.
   If much you note him, You shall offend him, and extend his passion: Reck and regard him not. Shaksp. Macbeth.
The eyes of Tobit carrying in themselves some secret power, were more additionally promoted by that power which can extend their natures into production of effects, beyond created efficacies, Brown's Vols, Eri.

8. To enlarge the comprehension of any position.
   Seeing it is not set down how for the bounds of his speech concerning dissimilitude reach, we can assure that it extendeth farther than to those things only wherein the nations were idolatrous? Hooker.

9. To impart; to communicate.
   Let there be none to extend mercy unto him, Psalms.

10. To seize by course of law.
   The law, that settles all you do, And marriages where you did but woo; And if I am so wise, Will soon extend her for your bride; And put her person, goods or lands Or which you like best, int your hands. Hook.

EXTEND. v.n. To extend to any distance.
My goodness extendeth not to thee. Psalms.
The bigness of such a church ought to be no greater than that unto which the voice of a preacher of the word rung longest can easily extend. Grew.

EXTENDER. n.s. [from extend.]
The person or instrument by which any thing is extended.
The extension made, the extenders are to be loosened gentry. Wiseman.

EXTENDIBLE. adj. [from extend.]
1. Capable of extension; capable to be made wider or longer.
   Tubes, recently made of fluids, are easily lengthened; such a subject often suffers force, grow rigid, and hardly extendible. Arbuthnot.
2. That may be seized by law.

EXTENDIBILITY. n.s. [from extend.]
Unlimited extension. In this sense it is once found; but, I think, with little propriety.
Certain molecules seem must keep the world from an infinitude and other endlessness of excursions every moment into new figures and animals. Hale.

EXTENSIBILITY. n.s. [from extend.]
The quality of being extendible.
In what manner they are mixed, so as to give a blue extendibility, who can say? Grose's Cot. Sacred.

EXTENSIBLE. adj. [extensio, Lat.]
1. Capable of being stretched into length or breadth.
   The malleous being fixed to an extendible membrane, belongs to the tension of the muscles, and it is drawn inward. Holder.
2. Capable of being extended to a larger comprehension.
   That love is blind, is extendible beyond the object of poetry. Glanville.

EXTENSIBILITY. n.s. [from extend.]
Capacity of being extended.

EXTENSION. n.s. [from extendio, Lat.]
1. The act of extending.
   The extent of.
2. The state of being extended.
   The huge cornus of fullness, especially in children, which causeth an extension of the stomach. Bacon.
   This foundation of the earth upon the waters, or extension of it above the waters, doth agree to the antediluvian earth. Burnet.
   By this idea of solidity is the extension of body distinguished from the extension of space; the extension of body being nothing but the cohesion or continuity of solid, separable parts, separable, divisible, and the extension of space, the continuities of unseparable, inseparable, and immovable parts. Locke.

EXTENSIONAL. adj. [from extension.]
Long drawn out; having great extent.
You run into these extensional phantasms, which I never saw so contemptuously, as upon the minute wriggling up and down of pismires. More.

EXTENSIVE. adj. [extensus, Lat.]
1. Wide; large.
   I would not be inclined to recommend to a pursuit of those sciences, to those extensive lengths to which the moderns have added them. Watts.
2. That may be extended. Not used.
   Silver beaters chase the finest coin, as that which is most extensive under the hammer. Boyle.

EXTENSIVELY. adv. [from extensive.] widened; largely.
The impossible for any to pass a right judgment resembling, them without entering into most of these circumstances, and surveying them extensively, and comparing all alliances thou mayst think. Watts.

EXTENSIVENESS. n.s. [from extensive.]
1. Largeness; diffusiveness; wideness.
   As we have reason to admire the excellency of this contrivance, if thou canst, so applaud the extensiveness of the benefit. Government of the Tongue.
   An extensiveness of understanding and a large memory are the marks of Wits Logick. Bacon.
2. Possibility to be extended.
   We take notice of the wonderful dilatibility or extentiveness of the throats and gullets of serpents: I myself have taken two entire adult mice out of the stomach of an adder, whose neck was not bigger than the little finger. Bacon.

EXTENSIVES. n.s. [Lat.]
The muscle by which any limb is extended.

EXTENSORS. n.s. [Lat.]
Muscles are muscles so called, which serve to extend any part.

EXTENT. n.s. [extensio, Lat.]
1. Space or degree to which anything is extended.
   If I mean to reign David's true heir, and his full sceptre sway To just extent over all Israel's sons. Milton.
2. Bulk; size; compass.
   The serpent subterfinge beast of all the field, of humane and sometimes, Milton.
   Ariana, of Darins race, That mil'd th' extent of Asia. Glover.
3. Communication; attribution.
   An emperor of Rome, Troubled, confronted thus, and for the extent. Of equal justice as'd with such contempt. Shak.
4. Execution; seizure.
   Let my officers Make an extent upon his house and land, And turn him going. Shakep. As you like it.

EXTENDUTE. v.n. [extensio, Lat.]
1. To lessen; to make small or slender in bulk.
   His body behind his head becomes broad, from whence it is again extended all the way to the tail.
2. To lessen; to diminish in any quality.
   To persist.
   In doing wrong, extends not wrong, But makes it much more heavy. Shakep.
   But fortune there extends the crime; What's vice in me, is only mirth in him. Dryden.
3. To lessen; to degenerate; to diminish in honour.
   The lightest are thy decrees on all thy works; Who can extend thee? Milton's Parad. Lost.

4. To lessen in representation; to palliate; opposite to aggravate.
   When you shall those unlucky deeds relate, Speak of me, as I am, nothing extensum.
   Nor set down ought in malice, Shakep. Othello.
   Upon his examination he denied little of that wherewith he was charged, not endeavouring much to excuse or extenuate his fault; so that, not very wisely thinking to make his offence less by confession, he made it enough for condemnation. Bacon.
   Yet hear me, Samuel, not that I endeavour To lessen or extenuate my offence. Milton.

5. To make lean.
6. To make rare; opposed to dense.
   The race of all things here is to extenuate and turn things to be more pneumatized and rare, and not to retrograde from pneumatical to that which is dense. Bacon.

EXTENATION. n.s. [from extensio.]
1. The act of representing things less ill than they are, contrary to aggravation; palliation.
2. Mitigation; alleviation of punishment.
   When sin is to be judged, the kindest inquiry is what deeds of charity we can allude to extenuation of our punishment. Aitken.
3. Having the outward appearance; having to the view or outward perception any particular nature.

4. Having the outward appearance; having to the view or outward perception any particular nature.

Exterm. adj. [extermin., Lat.] Outward; external; not intrinsic.

Exterior adj. [exterior, Lat.] Outward; external; not intrinsic.

And what is faith, love, virtue, grace, or virtue, must be Alone, without exterior help sustained? Milton.

Seraphim and common lovers behold exterior beauties, as children and astronomers consider Galileo's optic glasses.

Further, blacker, and merrier, are words which, together with such a thing they denominate, imply also something else separate and exterior to the existence of that thing.

Locke.

Exteriorly adj. [from exterior] Outwardly; externally; not intrinsically.

You have slander'd nature in my form; Which, howsoever rude exteriorly, Is yet the cover of a fairer mind.

That is to be the grief of my child. Shak.

To EXTERMINATE v. a. [extermin., Lat.] To root out; to tear up; to drive away; to abolish; to destroy.

Unlucky vice, on which the exterminating lot happened to fall. Decay of Piety.

Alexander the Great, who, in his erection of Greek colonies in the islands; but they were exterminated by Sandrocotius.

Arbuthnot on Cato.

This discovery alone is sufficient, if the vices of men did not captivate their reason, to explode and exterminate rank atheism out of the world. Bentley.

Extermination n. s. [from exterminate.] Destruction; extinction.

The question is, how far an holy war is to be pursued, whether to displacing and extermination of people? Bacon.

Exterminator n. s. [exterminator, Lat.] The person or instrument by which any thing is destroyed.

To EXTERMINATE v. a. [extermin., Lat.] To exterminate; to destroy. Not used.

If you do sorrow of my grief in love.

By giving love, your sorrow and my grief Were both extermin'd. Shak. As you like it.

Extern. adj. [extermin., Lat.]

1. Exterior; outward; visible.

When my love's image doth confomal The native act and figure of my heart In compliment extern, 'tis not so long But I will wear my heart upon my sleeve For days to peck at. Shak. Othello.

2. Without itself; not inherent; not intrinsic; not depending on itself.

When two bodies be pressed one against another, the rare body not being so able to resist division as the dense, and being not permitted to retire back, by reason of the external violence impelling it, the parts of the rare body must be severed.

Digby.

EXTERNAL adj. [extermin., Lat.]

1. Outward; not proceeding from itself; operating or acting from without; opposite to internal.

We come to be assured that there is such a being, either by an internal impression of the notion of a God upon our minds, or else by such external and visible effects as our reason tells us must be attributed to some cause, and which we cannot attribute to any other, but such as we conceive God to be.

Shells being exposed loose upon the surface of the earth to the injuries of weather, to be trod upon by hogs and cattle, and to be on other external accidents, are, in tract of time, broken into pieces. Woodward.

2. To put out; to quench.

The soft god of pleasure that warm'd our desires, Has broken his bow, and extinguish'd his fires. Dryden.

EXTERMINATE v. a. [exterminate, Lat.]

1. To put out; to quench.

To EXTERMINATE v. a. [exterminate, Lat.]

1. The act of quenching or extinguishing.

Red-hot needles or wires, extinguished in quicksilver, do yet acquire a vertacity according to the laws of position and extinction. Brown's Vulgo. Err.

2. The state of being quenched.

The parts are consumed through extinction of their native heat, and dissipation of their redundant moisture. Harvey.

3. Destruction; extinction.

The extinction of nations, and the desolation of kingdoms, was but the effects of this destructive evil. Roger's Sermon.

4. Suppression.

They lie in dead oblivion, losing half the feeling moments of too short a life. Total extinction of the enlight'ning soul. Thomson.

To EXTINGUISH, v. a. [extinguish, Lat.]

1. To put out; to quench.

The soft god of pleasure that warm’d our desires, Has broken his bow, and extinguish’d his fires. Dryden.
EXTRACT. r. a. [extra, extractum, Lat.] 1. To draw out of something. The drawing one metal or mineral out of another, we call extracting. Bacon’s Physical Remains. Out of the ashes of all plants they extract a salt which they use in medicines. Bacon’s Nat. Hist. The most delicately delicate matter is so fascination amongst the crasser matter, that it would never be possible to separate and extract it. Woodward. 2. To draw by chemical operation. They Whom sunny Borneo bears, are sord’d with streams Egregious, rum and rice’s spirit extract. Phillips. 3. To take from something of which the thing taken was a part. I now see Bone of my bone, flesh of my flesh, myself. Before me woman is her name, of man Extracted. Milton’s Parad. Lost. 4. To draw out of any containing body or cavity. These waters were extracted, and laid upon the surface of the ground. Burnet’s Theo. of the Earth. 5. To select and abstract from a larger treatise. To see how this case is represented, I have extracted out of that pamphlet a few notorious falsehoods. Swift. EXTRACT. n.s. [from extractum]. 1. The substance extracted; the chief parts drawn from any thing. In tinctures, if the superfused spirit of wine be distilled off, it leaves at the bottom that thicker substance, which chemists call the extract of the vegetables. Boyle. To dip our tongues in gall, to have nothing in our mouth but the extract and exhalation of our inward bitterness, is no great luxury. Government of the Tongue. 2. The chief heads drawn from a book; an abstract; an epitome. I will present a few extracts out of authors. Camden. Some books may be read by extracts made of them by others, but only in the less important arguments, and the meaner books; else distilled books are like common distilled waters, flashed and boiled things. Bacon’s Essays. Send some hours every day in reading, and making extracts, if your memory be weak. Swift. 3. Extraction; descent. Not used. The apostle gives it a value suitable to its extract, bringing it with the most ignominious imputation of foolishness. South. 4. Derivation from an original; lineage; descent. One whose extraction is from an ancient line, Gives but fair cause, that well-born men may shine; The meaner is by nature mild and good, The noblest rest secured in your blood. Waller. Extractor. n.s. [from extract.] One who practises oppression; one who grows rich by violence and rapacious. There will be always murderers, and adulterers, extortioners, church-robbers, traitors, and other rabblerous. Camden. The notorious extortioner is involved in the next sentence. Decay of Patty.
1. Wandering out of his bounds. This is the primogeneal sense, but not now in use. At his warning
The extravagant and erring spirit flies
Shaksp. Hamlet.
To his confine.

2. Roving beyond just limits or prescribed methods.
I dare not ask for what you would not grant:
But wishes, madam, are extravagants;
They are not bounded with things possible;
I may wish means to tell. Dryden.

3. Not comprehended in any thing.
Twenty constitutions of pope John XXII. are called the extravagants; for that they were written in order or method, regnant extra corpus collectionum. Ayliiff’s Paternum.

4. Irregular; wild.
For a dance they would
Somewhat extravagant, and wild. Milt. Part. Lost.
There appears a mething nobly wild and extravagant in great natural geniuses, infinitely more beautiful than turn and publishing.
New ideas employed my fancy all night, and composed a wild extravagant dream. Add. mon.

5. Wasteful; prodigal; vainly expensive. An extravagant man, who has nothing else to recommend him but a false generosity, is often more beloved than a person of a more finished character, who is defective in this particular.

ExTRAPARO’CIAL. adj. [extra and parochial, Lat.] Not comprehended within any parish.

ExTRAPROVINCIAL. adj. [extra and provincia, Lat.] Not within the same province; not within the jurisdiction of the same archbishop.

ExTRAREGULAR. adj. [extra and regular, Lat.] Not comprehended within a rule.
His providence is extrarregular, and produces strange things beyond common rules; and he led Israel through a sea, and made a road by that sea water. Taylor’s Rule of Living Holy.

ExTRAVAGANCY. n.s. [extravaganis, Extravagancy. n.s. [extravagans, Extravagant.

1. Excursion or sally beyond prescribed limits.
I have troubled you too far with this extravagance: I shall make no delay to recall myself into the road again. Hamnmond.

2. Irregularity; wildness.

3. Outrage; violence; outrageous vehemence.
How many, by the wild fury and extravagancy of their own passions, have put their bodies into a combustion, and by stirring up their rage against others, have armed that fierce humour against themselves. Thomson.

4. Unnatural tumour; bombast.
Some verses of my own, Maximin and Almanor, cry vengeance upon me for their extravagance. Dryden.

5. Waste; vain and superfluous expense.
She was so expensive, that the income of those three dukes was not enough to supply her expenses. Arblaster.

EXTRAVAGANT. adj. [extravagans, Extravagant.]

1. Wandering out of his bounds. This is the primogeneal sense, but not now in use. At his warning
The extravagant and erring spirit flies
Shaksp. Hamlet.
To his confine.

2. Roving beyond just limits or prescribed methods.
I dare not ask for what you would not grant:
But wishes, madam, are extravagants;
They are not bounded with things possible;
I may wish means to tell. Dryden.

3. Not comprehended in any thing.
Twenty constitutions of pope John XXII. are called the extravagants; for that they were written in order or method, regnant extra corpus collectionum. Ayliiff’s Paternum.

4. Irregular; wild.
For a dance they would
Somewhat extravagant, and wild. Milt. Part. Lost.
There appears a mething nobly wild and extravagant in great natural geniuses, infinitely more beautiful than turn and publishing.
New ideas employed my fancy all night, and composed a wild extravagant dream. Add. mon.

5. Wasteful; prodigal; vainly expensive. An extravagant man, who has nothing else to recommend him but a false generosity, is often more beloved than a person of a more finished character, who is defective in this particular.

ExTRAPARO’CIAL. adj. [extra and parochial, Lat.] Not comprehended within any parish.

ExTRAPROVINCIAL. adj. [extra and provincia, Lat.] Not within the same province; not within the jurisdiction of the same archbishop.

ExTRAREGULAR. adj. [extra and regular, Lat.] Not comprehended within a rule.
His providence is extrarregular, and produces strange things beyond common rules; and he led Israel through a sea, and made a road by that sea water. Taylor’s Rule of Living Holy.
ExTRAVAGANS. n.s. [extravaganis, Extravagant.

1. Excursion or sally beyond prescribed limits.
I have troubled you too far with this extravagance: I shall make no delay to recall myself into the road again. Hamnmond.

2. Irregularity; wildness.

3. Outrage; violence; outrageous vehemence.
How many, by the wild fury and extravagancy of their own passions, have put their bodies into a combustion, and by stirring up their rage against others, have armed that fierce humour against themselves. Thomson.

4. Unnatural tumour; bombast.
Some verses of my own, Maximin and Almanor, cry vengeance upon me for their extravagance. Dryden.

5. Waste; vain and superfluous expense.
She was so expensive, that the income of those three dukes was not enough to supply her expenses. Arblaster.
She might hear, not far from her, an extremely doleful voice; but so suppressed with a kind of whining terror, that he could not consider the words distinctly.

Sidney.

2. Very much; greatly; in familiar language.

Whoever sees a scoundrel in a gown reeling home at midnight, he will be tempted to be executed in his own vices.

Swift.

EXTREMITIES, n. s. [extremites, Lat.]

1. The utmost point; the highest degree.

He that will take away extreme heat by setting the body in motion can, shall and ought remove the disease; but together with it the diseased too.

Hooker.

Shall any one be credul and mechanical to that extremity, yet this would not prove that propriety gave any authority.

Locke.

2. The utmost parts; the parts most remote from the middle.

In its proper colour it is inclining to white, excepting the extremities or tops of the wing feathers, which are black.

Brown.

The extremities of the joints must be seldom, hid, and the extremities or end of the feet never.

Drayton's Fugures.

The extremity of pain often creates a coldness in the extremities; but such a sensation is very consistent with an inflammatory distemper.

Arbuthnot on Diet.

3. The points in the utmost degree of opposition, or at the utmost distance from each other.

He's a man of that strange composition Made up of all the worst extremities.

Davenant's Sheep.

4. Remotest parts; parts at the greatest distance.

They sent fleets out of the Red Sea to the extremities of Ethiopia, and imported quantities of that part.

Arbuthnot.

5. Violence of passion.

With equal measure she did moderate

The strong extremities of their outrage.

Spenser.

If you do so colour for my extremity, let me be your table'ss

Shakespeare.

6. The utmost violence, rigour, or distress.

Why should not the same laws take good effect on that people, being prepared by the sword, and brought under by extremity.

Spenser.

Their hearts she guess'd,

And yields her to extremity of time.

F. Queen.

He that should be besieged, let him believe them before they should be reduced to extremity.

Clarendon.

It should be never so exposed to the extremities of war as to fall into those barbarous habits.

Clarendon.

I wish peace, and any terms prefer,

Before the extremities of war.

Dryden.

7. The most aggravated state.

The world is running mad after face, the extremity of bad poetry; or rather the judgment that is fallen upon dramatic writing.

Dryden.

To EXTRICATE, v. a. [extrico, Lat.]

To disembarass; to set free any one in a state of perplexity; to disentangle.

We run into great difficulties about free created agents, which reason cannot well extricate itself out of.

Leake.

These are relief to Nature, as they give him an opportunity of extricating herself from her oppressions, and recovering the several tones and springings of her vessels.

Addison.

EXTRICATION, n. s. [from extricate.] The act of disentangling; disentanglement.

Crude salt has a taste not properly acid, but such as predominates in brine; and it does not appear that an acid spirit did as such proceed in the salt which was obtained, so that we may suppose it to have been rather by transmutation than extrication.

Boyle.

EXTRICATE, v. a. [extricarut, Lat.]

External; outward; not intimately longing; not intrinsic. It is commonly written so, but analogy requires extrinsic.

EXTRINSICALLY, adv. [from extrinsic].

From without.

If to suppose the soul a distinct substance from the body, and extrinsically adherent, be an error, almost all the work hath been mistaken.

Glace.

EXTRINSIC, adj. [extrinsic, Lat.]

Outward; external.

When they cannot shake the main fort, they try if they can possess themselves of the outworks, raise some prejudice against his most extrinsic adherents.

Gow. of the Tongue.

EXTRINSICAL, n. s. [extrinsic, Lat.]

To EXTRACT. v. a. [extra, within, and Latin.]

To build; to raise; to form into a structure.

EXTRACTOR, n. s. [from extract.] A builder; a fabricator; a contriver.

To EXTRUDE. v. a. [extrudo, Lat.]

To thrust off; to drive off; to push out with violence.

If in any part of the continent they found the shells, they concluded that the sea had been extruded and driven off by the mud.

Woodrow.

EXTRUSION, n. s. [from extrude, Lat.]

The act of thrusting or driving out.

They suppose the outlet of the sea formed, and mountains and caverns, by a violent depressi

Burke.

sion of some parts of the earth, and an extrusion and elevation of others.

EXTRUSSIVE. n. s. [ex and tuber, Lat.]

Knobs, or parts protuberant; parts that rise from the rest of the body.

The gouge takes off the irregularities or extrusions that lie farthest from the axis of the creature.

Exercise.

EXUBERANCE, n. s. [ex and tuber, Lat.]

Overgrowth; superfluous shoots; useless abundance; luxuriance.

Men esteem the overflowing of gall the exuberance of zeal, and all the promises of the faithful combatant they confidently appropriate.

Decoy of Priests.

Though he expatiates on the same thoughts in different words, yet in his similes that exuberance is avoided.

Garth.

EXUBERANT, adj. [exuberans, Lat.]

1. Growing with superfluous shoots; overabundant; superfluously plentiful; luxurious.

Another flower there, of bolder hues,

Flays out the fields, and showers with sudden hand

Exuberant spring.

His similes have been thought such as belong and full of circumstances.

Pope.

2. Abounding in the utmost degree.

Such immense power, such unsearchable wisdom, and such innumerable, as may justly ravish us to an amazement, rather than a bare mention.

Boyle's Scrapbook Love.

A man of that exuberant devotion, with which the whole assembly raised and animated one another, catches a reader at the greatest distance of time and place.

Exuberantly, adv. [from exuberant.]

Abundantly; to a superfluous degree.
EYE

EX'ULTANCE. n.s. [from exult]. Transport; joy; triumph; gladness; exultation.

We have great cause of exultation and joy. The service being the most perfect freedom. God. Tong. (No. 2.)

EXultation. n.s. [exultatio, Lat.]

Joy; triumph; rapturous delight.

Good effects may grow in each day of the people towards others, in them all towards their pastor, and in their pastor towards every of them; between whom there daily and interchangeably pass, in the hearing of God himself, and in the presence of his holy angels, so many heavenly acclamations, exultations, provocations, petitions. Hooker.

Exultation inspires men with sentiments of religious gratitude, and swells their hearts with inward transports of joy and exultation. Add. Freck. (No. 2.)

To EXUNDADE. v.a. [exunda, Lat.]

To overflow.

Exudation. n.s. [from exundate.]

Overflow; abundance.

It is more worthy the Deity to attribute the creation of the world to the exudation and overflowing of his transcendent and infinite goodness. Bay.

Exu'terable. adj. (exuperabilis, Lat.)

Conquerable; superable; vincible.

Ex'Uperance. n.s. [exuperantia, Lat.]

Overbalance; greater proportion.

Rome hath less variation than London; for on the West side of Rome are seated France, Spain, and Germany, which take off the exequience, and balance the vigor of the Eastern parts. Brown.

To EXU'SCITATE. v.a. [exsuscitio, Lat.]

To stir up; to rouse.

Exu'stion. n.s. [exstusio, Lat.]

The act of burning up; consumption by fire.

ExuVIe. n.s. [Lat.]

Cast skins; cast shells; whatever is thrown off, shed by animals.

They appear to be only the skins or exuviae rather than entire bodies of fishes. Hendcreed.

Ex. May either come from irx an island, E.A. by melting the Saxon x into y, E.e. which is usually done; or from the plant, ex, which signifies a water, river, y.c. or last, from meag a field, by the same kind of melting. Gibson.

Ex'VAs. n.s. [nites, Fr.]

A young hawk, just taken from the nest, not able to prey for itself.

Hammer

An acey of children, little eyas, that cry out.

Shakespeare.

EYAS'MUSKET. n.s. A young unledged male hawk of the musket kind. Hammer.

Here comes little Robin. —How now, my young musket; what news with you? Shakespeare.

EYE. n.s. Obsolete plural eyre, now eyes.

[aug. Gothic; cœx, Saxon; oog, Dutch; ee, Scottish, plur. cœce.]

1. The organ of vision; the medium of the sense of sight.

Good sir John, as you have one eye upon my follies, turn another into the register of your own, that I may pass with a surer edge, the more safe, Vouchsafe, bright moon, and these timely rimes to shine.

Those clouds removed, upon our watry eye. Shakespeare.

Nor doth the eye itself, that most pure spirit of sense, behold itself. Not going from itself; but eyes opposed. Salute each other with each other's form. Shakespeare.

It kept him as the apple of his eye.

As long looking against the sun or fire harts the eye by dilatation; so curious printing in small volumes, and reading of small letters, do hurt the eye by contraction. Bacon.

His awful presence did the crowd surprise,

Nor durst the rash spectator meet his eyes;

Eyes that confess'd him born for kindly So they, therefore, doth intolerable day. Dryden.

But sure the eye of time beholds no name.

So blest as thine in all the rolls of fame. Pope.

2. Sight; ocular knowledge.

Who shall be a worm to thee, that you should not obey the truth, before whose eyes Jesus Christ hath been evidently set forth? Gal. iii. 1.

3. Look; countenance.

I'll say you grey is not the morning's eye.

'Tis but the pale reed of Cynthia's brow. Shak.

4. Front; face.

To justify this worthy nobleman,

Her shall you hear disproved to your eyes. Shak.

5. A posture of direct opposition, where one thing is in the same line with another.

Now pass'd, on either side they nimly tack.

Both strive to intercept and guide the wind;

And in its eye now come back. Hooker.

To finish all the deaths they left behind. Dryden.

6. Aspect; regard.

Having an eye to a number of rites and orders in the church of England, as marrying with the ring; sundry church-offices, dignities, and according with which they found no commandment in the holy Scripture, they thought by the one only strike of an ax to cut them come back. Hooker.

As in Scripture a number of laws, particular and positive, being in force, may not by any law of man be violated; we are, in making laws, to have thereunto an eye. Milton.

The man that is tender among you, and very delicate, his eyes shall not be evil towards his brother. Deut.

He that hath a bountiful eye shall be blessed. Prov.

None should be put into either of those commissions, with an eye of favour to their persons, to give them censure or reputation in the places where they live. Bacon to Villiers.

These are intrinsic difficulties arising from the text itself, as the uncertainty sometimes who are the persons he speaks to, or the opinions or practices which it has in the book. Winds and hurricanes at land, tempests and storms at sea, have always been looked upon with an eye of fear as evil omens. Wood, Nat. Hist. Several performance have been justly applaud'd for their wit, which have been written with an eye to the amusement of such as had no design in the work. Addison.

We were the most obedient creatures in the world, constant to our duty, and kept a steady eye on the end for which we were sent hither. Spectator.

In this disposal of my sister, I have had an eye to her being a wit, and provided that the bridegroom be a man of sound judgment. Butler.

Book sellers mention with respect the authors they have printed, and consequently an eye to the profit that attends them. Addison.

7. Notice; observation; vigilance; watch.

Not satisfied with our oats, he appointed a band of horsemen to have an eye that we should not go beyond appointed limits. Sidney.

Law-makers must have an eye to the place where, and to the men amongst whom, Hooker.

His Majesty hath cast his eyes upon you, finding you to be such as you should be, or hoping to make us, to be able to have you to be. Bacon.

If the English had driven the Irish into the open countries, where they might have an eye and observation upon them, the Irish had been easily kept. Dickes on Ireland.

Spenery has followed both Virgil and Theocritus in the charms which he employs for curing Britons of her love; but he had also our poet's Colossus in his eye. Dryden's Alexander.

8. Opinion formed by observation.

She told her husband she designed to be hospitable to all who entered at the door, and that they should have the habit of doing well, have many advantages.

It hath, in their eye, no great affinity with the form of the church of Rome. Hooker.

Like one of two contending in a prize, that thinks he hath done well in people's eyes. Shak.

I was as far from meditating a war, as I was, in the world, from having any preparations for one. King Charles.

Though he in all the people's eyes seen great, Yet greater he appeared'to his retirers. Behn.

9. Sight; view; the place in which any thing may be seen.

There shall be practice tilts and tournaments, Hear sweet discourse, converse with noblemen; And there, in eye of every exercise. Worthy his youth and honour of his birth. Shak.

10. Any thing formed like an eye.

We see colours like the eye of a peacock's feather, by pressing our eyes on either corner, whilst we look the other way. Newton.

11. Any small perforation.

This Ajax has not so much wit as will stop the eye of Helen's needle. Shakespeare's Troilus and Cressida.

Does not our surpass'd hero speak of the intolerable difficulty which they cause in men's passage to heaven? Do not they make the narrow way much narrower, and contract the gate which leads to life to the strictest of a needle's eye? South.

12. A small catch into which a hook goes.

Those parts if they adhere to one another but by rest only, may be much more easily disjoined, and put into motion by any external body, than they could be, if they were by little hooks and eye or other kind of fastenings entangled in one another. Boyle.

Prune and cut off all your vine shoots to the very root, save one or two of the stoutest, to be left with three or four eyes of young wood. Ervilin's Calendar.

The ground indeed is tawny. The sky is of a fasting green. Shakespeare, Tempest.

Red with an eye of blue makes a purple. Boyle.

The eyes of your understanding being enlightened. Eph. i.

A gift both blind the eyes of the wise. Deut. xvi, 10.

To EYE. v.a. [from the noun.] To watch; to keep in view; to observe; to look on; to gaze on.

When they are laid in garnison, they may better hide their defaults than when they are abroad, where they are continually eyed and noted of all men. Spanier on Ireland.

Fall many a lady, I've dy'd with best regard. Shakespeare, Tempest.

The kitchen Shaks pin her richest lye, keeps her neck, Charming the walls to eye him. Shakespeare, Coriolanus.

Bide the check be ready with a blash, Modest as morning, when the caddly eyes The youthful Phebus, Shakespeare, Troilus and Cressida.

Bold deed thou hast presum'd, aduentious Eve, And peri great provok'd, who thus hath dared, Having been only to covet the eye, That sacred fruit. Milton, Paradise Lost.

Such a story as the basilisk is that of the wolf, concerning pieti of vision, that a man becomes 675.
EYE

hoarse and dumb, if the wolf have the advantage first to eye him. Brown.

It was needful for the hare peremptorily to eye her pursuer. Eye's Antidote against Atheism. Then gave it to his faithful squire.

With lessons how to preserve and to prudently To eye him. And a white sheet with clouds and rain. And catch the manners living as they rise. Pope.

To have a box when enquiring the goods To the circle eye a kind. Pope's Horace.

To EYE n. To appear; to show; to bear an appearance. Not used.

Forgive me.

Since my becoming kill me when they do not eye well to you. Shaksp. Antony and Cleopatra.

Eye-ball. n. s. [eye and ball.] The apple of the eye, the pupil. To subject to no sight but mine; invisible To every eyeball else. Shaksp. Tempest.

I feel my hair grow stiff, my eyeball raw! This is the only room could shake my sense. Dryden.

Not when a gift baffled's reflected pride. Turns you from sound philosophy aside. Not taken from plate to plate your eyeballs roll. And the brain dances to the mantling bowl. Pope.

EYEBRIGHT. n. s. [emphrasia, Lat.] A plant, called by Milton Euphrasy.

EYEBROW. n. s. [eye and brow.] The hairy arch over the eye.

The lover,
Sighing like a furnace, with a woful ballad
Made to his mistress' eye. Shak. As you like it. On the seventh day shall have all his hair off his head, his beard and his eyebrows. Lev. xiv. 9.

When I have made a soft and dull-eyed fool. To shake the head, relent, and sigh, and yield To Christian intercessors. Shaksp.

EYEDROP. n. s. [eye and drop.] Tear.

That tyrannous which never quaff but blood.
World, by beholding him, have wash'd his knife With gentle eyewash. Shaksp. Henry VI.

EYEGLANCE. n. s. [eye and glance.] Quick notice of the eye.

His countenance was bold, and bashed not For Guzman's looks; but scumful eyewash at him shot. Fairy Queen.

EYEGLASS. n. s. [eye and glass.] Spectacles; glass to assist the sight.

Ha! not you seen Camilla. But that's your part, thou hast; your eye-glass Is thicker than a cuckold's horn. Shaksp.

By comparing it with a good perspective of four feet in length, made with a concave eyeglass, I could read at a greater distance with my own instrument than with the glass. Newton.

EYELASH. n. s. [eye and lash.] The line of hair that edges the eyelid.

EYELESS. adj. [from eye] Wanting eyes; sightless; deprived of sight.

A proclaim'd prize! most happy! That eyeless head of thine was first framed of flesh To raise my fortunes. Shaksp. King Lear.

Promise was, that I Should Israel from Pullistan yoke deliver.

EYE

Ask for this great deliverer now, and find him
Eyes in Zion, at the mill with slaves. Milton.

The cheated people, and the eyesless guide. Addition.

Meonides,
Poor eyeless pilgrim. Phillips.

Cyclop, if any pitying thy disgrace,
Ask who disfigur'd thus that eyesless face. Pope.

EYELET. n. s. [ailet, French, a little eye.] A hole through which light may enter; any small perforation for a lace to go through.

Slitting the back and fingers of a glove, I made eyelet holes to draw it close. Wremen's Surgery.

Eye lid. n. s. [eye and lid.] The membrane that shuts over the eye.

Mark when she smiles with amiable cheer,
And tell me wherefore can ye like it?
When on each eyelid sweetly do appear
An hundred glasses in as shade to sit. Spencer's Sonnets.

On my eyelids is the shadow of death.
Fetch me that flower; the herb I show'd thee once.
The juice of it, on sleeping eye's held.
Will make his woman madly dost Upon the next live creature that it sees. Shaksp. The Turks have a black powder, made of a mineral called charcoal, which with a fine long pencil they lay under their eyelids, which doth colour black, whereby the white of the eye is set off more white. Bacon's Natural History. I am loath to the cracking noise and distressful blast. Cal'd up some waking lover to the sight; And long it was e'er he could rise, Whose heavy eyelids yet were full of night. Dryden.

EYESERVANT. n. s. [eye and servant.] A servant that works only while watched.

EYESERVICE. n. s. [eye and service.] Service performed only under inspection.

Servants, obey in all things your masters; not with external service, but in singleness of heart. Col. iii. 20, 21.

EYESHOT. n. s. [eye and shot] Sight; glance; view.

I must not think of showing the booty before I am free from danger, and out of eyeshot from the other windows. Dryden.

I have preserved many a young man from her eyeshot by this means. Spectator.

EYESIGHT. n. s. [eye and sight.] Sight of the eye.

The Lord hath recompenced me according to my cleanliness in his eyeglass. 2 Sam. Methinks I see thee, now thou art below,
As one dead in the bottom of a tomb; Either my eyeshot fails, or thou look'st pale. Shaksp.

Though sight be lost,
Life yet hath many solaces, enjoy'd By other arts. Is this not your delight,
At home in leisure and domestic ease,
Exempt from many a care and chance, to which eyeglass exposes daily men abroad. Milton's Agonistes.

Josephus sets this down from his own eyeglass, being himself a chief captain at the siege of Jopha, where the Jews were. Wilkins.
He blinds the wise, gives eyeshot to the blind, And mends and staves anew the lover's mind. Dryden.

EYESORE. n. s. [eye and sore.] Something offensive to the sight.

Hath the church of Christ, from the first beginning, by a secret universal instinct of God's eyr

good spirit, always tied itself to another nor, almost any speech of moment, which had been pronounced, made, with its same special words of honour and glory to the Trinity, which we all adore; and is the like conclusion of psalms become now, and, as an eye, or a gazing to the ears that hear it? Holker.

Fy, doth this habit; shame to your estate,

And eye to our solemn festival. Shaksp.

As soon as the two lords came, thither they covered, to the trouble of the other; but having presently to speak, they were quickly freed from that eyecare. Clarendon.

Mordew was an eyecare to Haman. L'Estrange.

He's the best piece of man's flesh in the market;

not an eyecare in his whole body. Dryden's Don Sebastian.

eyespotted. adj. [eye and spot] Marked with spots like eyes.

Not Jone's bird, in her eyespotted train,
So many goodly colours doth contain. Spooner.

eyesstring. n. s. [eye and string.] The string of the eye; the tendon by which the eye is moved.

I would have broke mine eyestings; crack them, but To look upon him. Shaksp. Cymbeline.

I know whether the sheep around or not, see that their gams be red and the eyestings rungly. Mortimer.

eyes tooth. n. s. [eye and tooth.] The tooth on the upper jaw next on each side to the grinders; the fang.

The next tooth on each side stronger and deeper rooted, and more pointed, called canine, in English, eyestooth, to bear the more tough sort of aliment. Ray on the Creation.

eyes wink. n. s. [eye and wink.] A wink, as a hint or token.

They would have won any woman's heart; and, I warrant you, they could never get an eyewink of her. Shaksp.

eyes wit ness. n. s. [eye and witnes.] An ocular evidence; one who gives testimony to facts seen with his own eyes.

We made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and were eyewitnesses of his majesty. 2 Peter. 1:16 eyes meet him all the spectators, who silent stood Expectations of his almighty acts,

With jubilee advanced. Milton's Paradise Lost.

Our cousins, by laying together circumstances, attestations, and characters of those who are concerned in them, either receive or reject what at first but sometimes would absolutely believe or disbelieve. Addison on the Christian Religion.

eyes. n. s. [eye, Fr. iter, Lat.] The court of justices itinerants; and justices in eye are those only, which Brazen in many places calls justiciarios itinerantes. The eye also of the forest is nothing but the justice-seat, otherwise called; which is, or should, by ancient custom, be held every three years by the justices of the forest, journeying up and down to that purpose. Cowel.

eyes y. n. s. [from ey an egg.] The place where birds of prey build their nests and hatch.

But I was born so high,
Our eyrie buildeth in the cedars top,
And daileth with the wind, and scorns the sun.

The eagle, and the stork,
On cliffs and cedar-tops their eyrie build.

Milton.

Some haggard hawk, who had her eyry high,
Well pou'd to fasten, and well wing'd to fly.

Dryden.
A consonant generally reckoned by authors, and admitted by Scaliger, among the semi-vowels, and according to that opinion distinguished in the enumeration of the alphabet by a name beginning with a vowel, yet has so far the nature of a mute, that it is easily pronounced before a liquid in the same syllable. It has in English an invariable sound, formed by compression of the whole lips and a forcible breath. Its kindred letter is V, which, in the Islandic alphabet, is only distinguished from it by a point in the body of the letter.

FABACEOUS. adj. [fabaeceus, Lat.] Having the nature of a bean. Dict.

FABLE. n.s. [fable, Fr. fabula, Lat.] 1. A feigned story intended to enforce some moral precept. 2. A fiction in general. Triptolemus, so snug the nine, Strew'd plenty from his cart divine; But, spite of all those fablie-makers, He never sow'd on Almains acres. Dryden. Pelagius coming to die somewhere in the north part of Britain, may seem to give some kind of countenance to those fablie-makers that have made themselves famous many years among the Scots. Lloyd. 3. A vitiou s or foolish fiction. But refuse profound and old wives fablies. 1 Tim. iv. 7.

4. The series or contexture of events which constitute a poem epic or dramatic. The moral is the first business of the poet; this being formed, he contrives such a design or fablie as may be most suitable to the moral. Dryden's Dyscur. The first thing to be considered in an epic poem is the fablie, which is perfect or imperfect, according as the action, which it relates, is more or less so. Addison's Spectator.

5. A fable; a vitiou s falsehood. This sense merely familiar. It would look like a fablie to report that this gentleman gives away a great fortune by secret methods. Addison.

To FABLE. v. n. [from the noun.] 1. To feign; to write not but fiction. That Saturn's son receiv'd the three-fold reign Of heav'n, of ocean, and deep hill beneath, Old poets mention, fablie. Prior. Vain now the tales which fablie poets tell, That wav'ring conquest still desires to rove! In Marlbor. 's camp the goddess knows to dwell, Prior. 2. To tell falsehoods; to feign; a familiar use. He fables not I hear the enemy. Shak. Hen.VI.

To FABLE. v. a. To feign; to tell falsely. We mean to win, Or turn this heav'n itself into the hell Thou fablest. Milton's Par. Lost. Ladies of th' Hesperides, they seem'd Fairer than feign'd of old, or fabled since Of fairy dances met in forest-wide By knights. Milton's Par. Lost.

FABLER. n.s. [from fabile.] A dealer in fiction; a writer of feigned stories.

To FABRICATE. v. a. [fabricar, Lat.] 1. To build; to construct. 2. To forge; to devise falsely. This sense is retained among the Scottish lawyers; for when they suspect a paper to be forged, they say it is fabricated.

FABRICATION. n.s. [from fabricate.] The act of building; construction. This fabulosity of the human body is the immediate work of a vital principle, that forms the first rudiments of the human nature. Halc. FABRIC. n.s. [fabrica, Lat.] 1. A building; an edifice. There must be an exquisite care to place the columns, set in several stories, most precisely one over another, that the solid may answer to the solid, and the vacancies to the vacancies, as well for beauty as strength of the fabric. Prior. 2. Any system or compages of matter; any body formed by the conjunction of dissimilar parts. Still will ye think it strange, That all the parts of this great fabric change; Quit their old station and primeval frame. Prior. To FABRIC v. a. [from the noun.] To build; to form; to construct. Show what laws of life The cheese inhabitants observe, and how Fabrick their mansions. Philips.

FABULOUS. adj. [fabulos, Lat.] Feigned; full of fabiles, invented tales. A person terrified with the imagination of spectres, is more reasonable than one who thinks the appearance of spirits fabulous and groundless. Addison.

FABULOUSLY. adv. [from fabulous.] In fabulosity; in a fabulous manner. There are many things fabulosely delivered, and are not to be accepted as truths. Brown's Visage. Etc.

FACE. n.s. [face, Fr. from facies, Lat.] 1. The visage. The children of Israel saw the face of Moses, that the skin of Moses' face shone. Ex. xxxiv. 33. A man shall see faces, which, if you examine them part by part, you shall never find good; but take them together, they are not uncomely. Byron. From beauty still to beauty ranging, In every face I found a dart. Addison's Spectator. 2. Countenance; cast of the features; look; air of the features. Kick'd out, we set the best face one on't could. Dryden's First.

FACE AND FAB. See'd and ty'd down to judge, how wretched! Who can't be silent, and who will not weep? To laugh, were want of goodness and of grace; And to be grave, excess all power of face. P Mic. 3. The surface of any thing. A mist water'd the whole face of the ground. Genesis. 4. The front or forepart of any thing. The breadth of the face of the house, towards the East, was a hundred cubits. Ezek. xxvii. 14. 5. Visible state of affairs. He look'd and saw the face of things quite changed; The broken term of war had created to roar; All now was turn'd to jollity and game, To luxury and feast, and dance. Milton. This would produce a new face of things in Europe. Addison. 6. Appearance; resemblance; look. Keep still your former face, and mix again With these lost spirits; run all their mazes with them; For such are treasors. Ben. Jonson. At the first shock, with blood and powder stain'd, Nor hear'd nor see'd, their former face retain'd; Fury and art produce effects so strange, They trouble nature, and her visage change. Wal. His dialogue has so much the face of probability, that some have mistaken it for a real conference. Beh. 7. Presence; sight; state of confrontation. Ye shall give her unto Eleazar, and one shall slay her before his face. Num. xii. 3. That is but to tell me to deny, That I of all the gods am least in grace. Dry. Id. 8. Confidence; boldness; freedom from bashfulness or confusion. They're thinking, by his face, To fatten for our thoughts that they have courage; But 'tis not so. How many things are there which a man cannot, with any face or comeliness, say or do himself? A man can scarce allege his own merits with modesty, much less extol them; a man cannot sometimes break to supplicate or beg. Bos. You'll find the thing will not be done With ignorance and face alone. Hudibras. You, says the judge to the wolf, have the face to challenge that which you never lost; and you, says he to the fox, have the confidence to deny that which you have stolen. L'Estrange. This is the man that has the face to charge others with false citations. Tilloet, Preface. 9. Distortion of the face. Shame itself? Why do you make such face? Shak. Macbeth.
FAC
Hail and farewell they shouted three again,
Thrice facing to the left, and thence they turn'd again.
Dryden.

To FACE. n. a.
1. To meet in front; to oppose with confidence and firmness.

I'll face
This tempest, and deserve the name of king; Dryg.
We get intelligence of the force of the enemy, and cast about for a sufficient number of troops to face the enemy in the field of battle.

Addis. on War. They are as loth to see the fires kindled in Smithfield as his lordship; and, at least, as ready to face them under a religious persecution. Swift.

2. To move with impudence; commonly with down.

With pant's and state, and face'd it down
With plots and projects of our own. Hudibras.
Because he walk'd against his will, his face'd him down that he stood still. Prior.

3. To stand opposite to.

On one side is the head of the emperor Trajan; the reverse has on it the cirus Maximus, and a view of the side of the Pyrenean mountains that face it. Addison on Italy.
The temple is described square, and the four front doors open by four gates, facing the different quarters of the world. Pope.

4. To cover with an additional superstructure; to invest with a covering.
The fortification of Soloeus is faced with marble. Volney.
Where your old bank is hollow, face it with the first spit of earth that you dig out of the ditch.

FACELESS. adj. [from face.] Being without a face.

FACEPAINTER. n. s. [face and painter.] A drawer of portraits; a painter who draws from the life.

FACEPAINTING. n. s. [face and painting.] The art of drawing portraits.

Georgione, the cotemporary of Titian, excelled in portraits or facepainting. Dryden's Dunciad.

FACE. n. s. [facet, Fac.] A small surface; a superfluous cut into several angles.

Honour that is gained and broken upon another, that is the quickest reflection, like diamonds cut with carbuncles.

FACEIOUS. adj. [facious, Fr. facétie, Lat.] Gay; cheerful; lively; merry; witty.

It is used both of persons and sentiments.

Socrates, informed of some derogating speeches used of him behind his back, made this facetious reply. Let him beat me too, when I am absent. Government of the Tongue.

FACEITIOUSLY. adv. [from facetious.]
Gaily; cheerfully; wittily; merrily.

FACEITIOUSNESS. n. s. [from facetious.]
Cheerful wit; mirth; gaiety.

FACILE. adj. [facile, Fr. facilis, Lat.] Easy; not difficult; performable or attainable with little labour.

To the vehemence, which is now counted most hard, will be both facile and pleasant. Milton on Education.

To confuse the imagination is as facile a performance as the design of Noetis in the cokewalk. Gower.

By dividing it into parts so distinct, the order in which they shall find each disposed, will prevent the work facile and delightful. Evelyn's Colome.

This may at first seem perplexed with many difficulties, yet many things may be suggested to make it more facile and commodious. Wilkins.

2. Easily surmountable; easily conquerable.
The facile gates of hell too slighty bar'd. Milton.

3. Easy of access or converse; not haughty; not supercilious; not austerere.

I meant she should be courteous, facile, sweet, hastening that solemn vice of greatness, pride;
I meant each sect to know there should meet.
Fit in that softer bond to reside. Ben Johnson.
Raphael now, to Adam's doubt proposes.
Benvenuto's facile, thus Milton.

4. Plant the face; to persuade to good or bad; to ductile to a fault.

Too facile then, thus didst not much gaisay. Midsummer Night's Dream. Milton.
Lost Paradise, deceit'd by me.

Some men are of that facile temper, that they are wrought upon by every object they converse with, and after a serious meditation, in a public sermon, or any notable accident, shall put into a fit of religion, which yet usually lasts not longer than till somewhat else comes in their way. Calamy.

To FACILITATE. v. a. [facilitor, Fr.]
To make easy; to free from difficulty; to clear from impediments.

Choice of the likeliest and best prepared metal for the version will facilitate the work. Bacon.

They received the laws of Moses with three days' preparation, and planted cannon to facilitate their passage. The English in America. Swift.

Though perspective cannot be called a certain rule of picture, yet it is a great succour and relief to art, and facilitates the means of execution. Dryden's Dunciad.

What produce a due quantity of animal spirits, necessary facilitates the animal and natural motions. Aubrard on Dist.

A war on the side of Italy would cause a great division of the French forces, and facilitate the progress of our arms in Spain. Swift.

FACULITY. n. s. [facilitie, Fr. facultes, Lat.]
1. Easiness to be performed; freedom from difficulty.
Yet reason saith, reason should have ability To hold these joyous things in such proportion, As let them come or go, with equal facility. Sidney.
Puify could not be diverted from this to a more commodious business by any motives of profit or facility. Raleigh.

A war upon the Turks is more worthy than upon any other Gentiles, both in point of religion and in point of honour; though facility and hope of success may incline them. Bacon.

2. Readiness in performing; dexterity.
They who have studied have not only learned many excellent things, but also have acquired a great facility of profiting themselves by reading good authors. Dryden's Dunciad.
The facility which we get of doing things, by a custom of doing, makes them often pass in us without our notice. Locke.

3. Vitiöus dulcitude; easiness to be persuaded to good or bad; ready compliance.
Facility is worse than bribery; for bribes come now and then; but if you have easy principles let a man, he shall never be without them. Bacon.
'Tis a great error to take facility for good nature; tenderness without discretion, is no better than a more parricidal edge. Erasmus.

Facility is worse than bribery; for bribes come now and then; but if you have easy principles, let a man, he shall never be without them. Bacon.
'Tis a great error to take facility for good nature; tenderness without discretion, is no better than a more parricidal edge. Erasmus.

Facial. adv. [from face.] On the outside of any thing by way of decoration.
These offices and dignities were but the facings and fringes of his greatness. Milton.

FACTIOUS. adj. [faciatus, Lat.]
Wicked; seditious; detestably bad.

FACIOUSNESS. n. s. [from faciatus.]
Wickedness in a high degree.

FACT. n. s. [factum, Lat.]
1. A thing done; an effect produced; something not barely supposed or suspected, but really done.
In matter of fact they say there is some credit to be given to the testimony of man, but it is not in matter for such a conclusion: we see the contrary both acknowledged and universally practised all throughout the world. Hooker.

As men are not to mistake the causes of these operations, so much less are they to mistake the fact or effect, and rashly to take that for done which is not done. Bacon.

2. Reality; not supposition; not speculation.
If this were true in fact, I do not see any colour for a conclusion of such a nature.
Manifold sins, though in speculation they may be separable from sin, in reality and fact never fail to attend it.

3. Action; deed.
Unhappy man! to break the plow laws of nature, pleading in his child's cause;
Hence the doublet, and hence the pride,
His love of honour and his country's good.

The conserv, not the father, sheds the blood. Dryden.

FACTION. n. s. [faction, Fr. factio. Lat.]
1. A party at a state.
The queen was valued thirty thousand strong;
If the bards time to breathe, be well assured
Her faction will be as strong as ours. Shakespeare.
He has been known to commit outrages,
And sedition. Facts mix together. Tom syn.
By one of Simon's faction murders were committed.

With the weight of reason I should counterpoise
The even balance of any factions. King Charles.

2. Tumult; discord; dissension.
They remained at Newbury in great faction among themselves. Clarendon.

FACTIONARY. n. s. [factionaire, Fr.]
One of a faction; a party man. A word not in use.

P'r'yer, fellow, remember my name is Meneius,
Always a factionary of the party of your general. Shakespeare. Coriolanus.

FACIOUS. adj. [factic, Fr.]
1. Given to faction; loud and violent in a party; publically dissented; addicted to form parties and raise public disturbances.
He is a traitor: let him to the Tower,
And cruelly be he that factions pate of his. Shakespeare.

Be factions for redress of all these griefs. Shakespeare.

2. Proceeding from publick dissensions; tending to publick discord.
Grey-headed men and grave, with warriors mild,
Assemble, and harangues are heard; but soon
In factions opposition. Milton's Par. Lost.
Factions tumults over the forums and how Many of the two houses. King Charles.

Why these factions quarrel, controversies, and Battles amongst themselves, when they were all united in the same design? Dryden.

676
2. Powers of the mind, imagination, reason, memory.

   I understand in the prime end Of nature, her inferior in the mind. \ anon., Walpole.

   And inward faculties, which most excel. \ Millen.

3. Mechanical power.

   The fifth mechanical faculty is the wedge used in elevating wood.

   [Note: This is a Latin translation of a Greek original.]

5. A knack; habitual excellence; dexterity.

   He had none of those faculties, which the other had, of reckoning by his fingers. \ Chaucer.

   Our author found out monarchical absolute power in this text, that he had an exceeding good faculty to find it himself where he could not shew it others.

6. Quality personal; disposition or habit of good or ill.

   He traduced by tongues which neither knew My faculties nor person, yet will be \ My English colleague.

7. Natural virtue; efficacy.

   In enquir'd open heathen scrip, And shew me simples of a thousand names, Telling their strange and vigorous faculties. \ Milton.

8. Power; authority.

   This Duncan Hath born his faculties so meek, hath been So clear in his great office, that his virtues Will plead like a hero; Shakesp. Macbeth.

9. Privilege; right to do any thing.

   Law hath set down to what persons, in what causes, with what circumstances, almost every faculty or privilege, \ Blackstone.

10. Faculty, in an university, denotes the masters and professors of the several sciences: as a meeting of the faculty or faculties.

   FACUND. adj. [facundus, Lat.] Eloquent.

To FADDLE. v. n. [corrupted from To fiddle, or toy with the fingers.] To trip; to toy; to play. A low word.

To FADE. v. n. [fade, Fr. insipid, languid.]

1. To tend from greater to less vigour; to grow weak; to languish.

2. To tend from brighter to a weaker colour.

The greenness of a leaf ought to pass for apparent, because soon fading into a yellow, it scarce lasts at all, in comparison of the greenness of an emerald. \ Pope on Colour.

The spots in this stone are of the same colour throughout, even to the very edges; there being an immeasurable transition from white to black, and the colours not fading or declining gradually. \ Wodehouse.

3. To wither, as a vegetable.

Ye shall be as a tree whose leaf fadeth, and as a plant whose greenness fadeth. \ Isaias, i. 10.

4. To die away gradually; to vanish; to be worn out.

Where either through the temper of the body, or some other defect, the memory is very weak, ideas in the mind quickly fade. \ Locke.

5. To be naturally not durable, to be transitory; easily to lose vigour or beauty.

The glorious beauty on the head of the fat valley shall be a fading flower. \ Isaias, xviii. 4.

The pictures drawn in our minds are held in fancies, and if not sometimes refreshed, vanish and disappear. \ Locke.

Narcissus's change to the vain virgin shows; the beauty, transitory, trueth the fading rose; Gay.

To FADE. v. n. [to wear away; to reduce to languor; to deprive of freshness or vigour; to wither.

This is a man, old, wrinkled, fadeth, withered; And no a madman, as thou say'st he is. \ Shakespeare's Hamlet.

His pained, and nothing but a name remaineth; Still I live; no Winter could his laurels fade. \ Dry.

Restless anxiety, forlorn despair.

And all the faded family of care. \ Pope's Iliad.

To FADGE. v. n. [teg. gen. facets, Saxon. fugeo, Germ.] To suit; to fit; to have one part consistent with another.

How will this fudge? my master loves her dearly, And I, poor mortgage, fond as much on him; And neither, mistaken, see me, neither, \ Addison.

2. To agree; not to quarrel; to live in amity.

When they'd thiev'd they never fadge'd, \ But only by the ears engag'd; \ Dogs that dogs alone shall live with, \ And play together when they've none. \ Hudibras.

3. To succeed; to hit.

The fox hath a fitch; and when he saw it would not fadge, away goes he presently. \ Lycurgus.

4. This is a mean word not now used, unless perhaps in ludicrous and low compositions.

Ex. Facces, n. s. [Lat.] Excrement; settings after distillation and infusion.

Quini.

To FAG. v. a. [fatigo, Lat.] To grow weary; to faint with weariness.

Creighton with-hold his force 'till the Italian began to fag, and then brought him to the ground. \ Mackenzie's Lives.

FAGEND. n. s. [from fag and end.]

1. The end of a web of cloth, generally made of coarser materials.

2. The refuse, or menner part of any thing.

In the world's fagend A nation lies. \ Pope.

Fagane. When they are the worst of their way, and fast in the fagend of business, they are apt to look not kindly upon those who are in front of them. \ Collier.

FAGOT. n. s. [fagod, Welsh and Armorick; fagod, Fr.]

1. A bundle of sticks bound together for the fire.

About the pike of faggots, sticks, and hay, The bellows raised the newly-kindled flame. \ Fair.

Spare for no faggots, let there be enough. \ Pope.

Place pitchy barrels on the fatal stake. \ Shakspe.

Mists of faggots have been the rewards of different persons, according as they pronounced these consacrated syllables or not. \ Watts on the Mind.

2. A bundle of sticks for any purpose.

The Black Prince filled a ditch with faggots as successfully as the generals of our armies do it with fascines, that snort about their heads. \ Dry.

3. A soldier numbered in the muster-roll, but not really existing.

To FAGOT. v. a. [from the noun.] To tie up; to bundle together.

He was too warm on picking work to dwell, But fagot his notions as they fell, and ditty rhyms and inane, as well and well. \ Dry.
1. To be deficient; to cease from former plenty; to fall short; not to be equal to demand or use. The waters fail from the sea, and the flood decayeth withth. xiv. 11. Wherefore should not strength and might There fail where virtue fails, or weakest prove Where boldness, though to fight uncomparably? Milton. Where the credit and money fail, barter alone must do. Locke.

2. To be extinct; to cease; to be no longer produced. Help, Lords, for the guilty man escatet; for the faithful fail from among the children of men. Psalms v. 12. Whether such virtue spent of old now fail'd More angels to create. Milton.

3. To cease; to perish; to be lost. By fate the strength of Gods. And this empirical substance cannot fail. Milton. For Titan, by the mighty has dismay'd Among the heavens th' immortal fact display'd. Let the remembrance of his grief should fail. Addis.

4. To die: to lose life. Had the king in his last sickness fail'd, Their heads should have gone ed. Mark Hen. VIII. Both he that helpeth shall fail, and he that is help, shall fall down, and they all shall to gether. Isaiah, xxx. 5.

5. To sink: to be born down; to come to an end. Neither will I be always wroth; for the spirit should fail before me. Isaiah, xlii. 16. For us created, needs with us must fail. Dependent made. Milton.

6. To decay; to decline; to languish. Let every generation seek needless cause approve The faith they owe; when earnestly they seek Such proof, conclude, they then begin to fail. Milton. I receive Thy mortal sight to fail: objects divine Must needs impair and weary human sense. Milton.

7. To miss; not to produce its effect. Consider of deformity not as a sign, which is deceptive, but as a cause which seldom faileth of the effect. Bacon. All these pious legions, whose exile Hath emptied heart, shall fail to reascend. Milton. This beard was failst of th' other house's making. And, five times try'd, has never fail'd of faking. Dryden.

8. To miss; not to succeed in a design; to miscarry. I am confus'd, by earth, if I fail Of the right casket, never in my life To woo a maid in way of marriage. Shakespeare. At least our current for hath fail'd, who thought At all like himself reduced. Milton. In difficulties of state, the true reason of failing proceeds from failings in the administration. Addison.

9. To be deficient in duty. Or Nature fail'd in me, and left some part Not proof enough such object to sustain. Milton. Perhaps you are God's common to, to re- pent as often as you fail of it, and to hope for pardon of him. Faire.

F A I N

1. To be deficiency; to cease from former plenty; to fall short; not to be equal to demand or use. The waters fail from the sea, and the flood decayeth withth. xiv. 11. Wherefore should not strength and might There fail where virtue fails, or weakest prove Where boldness, though to fight uncomparably? Milton. Where the credit and money fail, barter alone must do. Locke.

2. To be extinct; to cease; to be no longer produced. Help, Lords, for the guilty man escatet; for the faithful fail from among the children of men. Psalms v. 12. Whether such virtue spent of old now fail'd More angels to create. Milton.

3. To cease; to perish; to be lost. By fate the strength of Gods. And this empirical substance cannot fail. Milton. For Titan, by the mighty has dismay'd Among the heavens th' immortal fact display'd. Let the remembrance of his grief should fail. Addis.

4. To die: to lose life. Had the king in his last sickness fail'd, Their heads should have gone ed. Mark Hen. VIII. Both he that helpeth shall fail, and he that is help, shall fall down, and they all shall to gether. Isaiah, xxx. 5.

5. To sink: to be born down; to come to an end. Neither will I be always wroth; for the spirit should fail before me. Isaiah, xlii. 16. For us created, needs with us must fail. Dependent made. Milton.

6. To decay; to decline; to languish. Let every generation seek needless cause approve The faith they owe; when earnestly they seek Such proof, conclude, they then begin to fail. Milton. I receive Thy mortal sight to fail: objects divine Must needs impair and weary human sense. Milton.

7. To miss; not to produce its effect. Consider of deformity not as a sign, which is deceptive, but as a cause which seldom faileth of the effect. Bacon. All these pious legions, whose exile Hath emptied heart, shall fail to reascend. Milton. This beard was failst of th' other house's making. And, five times try'd, has never fail'd of faking. Dryden.

8. To miss; not to succeed in a design; to miscarry. I am confus'd, by earth, if I fail Of the right casket, never in my life To woo a maid in way of marriage. Shakespeare. At least our current for hath fail'd, who thought At all like himself reduced. Milton. In difficulties of state, the true reason of failing proceeds from failings in the administration. Addison.

9. To be deficient in duty. Or Nature fail'd in me, and left some part Not proof enough such object to sustain. Milton. Perhaps you are God's common to, to re- pent as often as you fail of it, and to hope for pardon of him. Faire.

To Fail. v. a.

1. To desert; not to continue to assist or supply; to disappoint. The ship was now left alone, as proud lords be when fortune fail them. Suckley. So hast thou oft with guile thine honour blight;
The length of the image I measured from the faintest and utmost red at one end, to the faintest and utmost blue at the other end, excepting only a little penumbra, a Newton's Opticks.

From her naked limbs of glowing white.
In fossil leaves floating fell the faintest tranquility.

3. Not loud; not piercing.
The pump after this being employed from time to time, the sound grew fainter and fainter. Bozede.

4. Feeble of body.
Two neighbouring shepherders faint with thirst, standing at the common boundary of their grounds.
Handbill.

5. Cowardly; timorous; not vigorous; not ardent.
Faint heart never won fair lady.
Proverb in Camden's Rem.
Our faint Egyptians pray for Antony;
But in their servile hearts they own Octavius. Dry.

6. Dejected; depressed.
Consider him that endureth such contradiction against himself, lest he be wearied and faint in your midst.
Heb, xii. 3.

7. Not vigorous; not active.
The defects which hindered the conquest, were the faint prosecution of the war, and the looseness of the civil government. Du Bus on Ireland.

FAIN THEARTED. adj. [faint and heart].
Cowardly; timorous; dejected; easily depressed.

Faint, not, neither he faint-hearted. Is. vii. 4.
They should resolve the next day, as victorious conquerors, to take the city, or else they, as faint-hearted cowards, to end their days. Knolles.
Now the late faint-hearted ron Out of heart and scatter round about, Chac'd by the horror of their fear.
From bloody fray of knight and bear, Took heart again and fud'd about.
As they should fear to shoot out. Hudibras.

Villain, stand off! base, grumbling, worthless wretches, Mongrels in faction: poor faint-hearted traitors.
Addison.

FAIN THEARTEDLY. adv. [from faint-hearted].
Timorously; in a cowardly manner.

FAIN THEARTEDNESS. n. s. [from faint-hearted].
Cowardice; timorousness; want of courage.

FAINTING. n. s. [from faint.] Deliquium; temporary loss of animal motion.
These faintings her physicians suspect to proceed from passions. W. See. Surgery.

FAINTNESS. n. s. [from faint.] Weakness in a slight degree; incipient debility.
A certain degree of heat lengthens and relaxes the fibres; whence proceeds the sensation of faintness and debility in a hot day. Arbuth. on Air.

FAINTING. adj. [from faint.] Timorous; feebleminded. A burlesque or low word.
There's no having patience, thou art such a fainting silly creature. Arbuth. Hist. of John Bull.

FAINTLY. adv. [from faint.]
1. Feeably; languidly.
Love's like a torch, which, if scour'd from blushes, Will faintly burn; but then it longer lasts.
Exposed to storms of jealousy and doubt, The blaze grows greater, but 'tis sooner out.

2. Not in bright colours.
Nature affords at least a glimmering light; The lines, thu' touched but faintly, are drawn right.

3. Without force of representation.
I have seen what you have seen and heard but faintly; nothing like the image and horror of it. Shaks. King Lear.

FAI

An obscure and confused idea represents the object so faintly, that it doth not appear plain to the animal.

4. Without strength of body.
With his holl'nd tongue he faintly holds his prey, His warm breath blows her up as she lies. Dry.

5. Not vigorously; not actively.
Though still the fast'mest English, like pale glories,
Faintly besiege us one hour in a month. Shaks.

6. Timorously; with dejection; without spirit.
Loth was the ace, though praised, to adventure;
Yet faintly goss into his work to suffer. Hak. Tale.
He faintly now swells the fatal stele;
So much his love was dearer than his life. Denham.

FAINTNESS. n. s. [from faint.]
1. Langour; feebleness; want of strength.
If the prince of the lights of heaven, which now as a giant doth run his unpaid courses, should through a languishing faintness begin to stand.
Hooker.

This proceeded not from any violence of pain, but from that languishing and faintness of spirits, which made him think nothing worth the trouble of one careful thought.
Temple.

2. Inactivity; want of vigour.
This evil proceeds rather of the unkindness of the counsellors, or of faintness in following and effecting the same, than of any such fatal course appointed of God.
Spenser.

3. Timorously; dejection.
The paleness of this flow'r;
Bewray'd the faintness of my master's heart. Shaks.

FAINTLY. adj. [from faint.] Weak; feeble; languid; debilitated; enfeebled.
When Winter frosts constrain the field with cold,
The fainting root can take no steady hold. Dryden.
And they that faintly could not avert the breaths they drew, no longer air, but fire;
The fainting knights were scar'd, and knew not where
To run for shelter; for no shade was near. Dryden.

FAIR. adj. [true]. Sax. far. Dan.
1. Beautiful; elegant of feature; handsome.
Fair seems in the common acceptance to be restrained, when applied to woman, to the beauty of the face. He only fair, and what he fairest hath made, All other fair like flowers untimely fade. Spenser.
Thou art a fair woman to look upon. Gen. xii. 11.

2. Not black; not brown; white in the complexion.
He never yet saw man
But she would spell him backward; if fair faced, She'd swear the gentleman should be her sister;
If black, why, nature, drawing of an antic,

Let us look upon men in several climates: the Ethiopians or black, fat-nosed, and crisp-haired; the Moors tawny; the Neterian people large, and fair complexioned.

3: Pleasing to the eye; excellent or beautiful in general to the eye or mind.
That which made her fairness much the fairer
Was that it was but an ambassador of a most fair mind.
Sidney.
Carry him gently to my fairest chamber,
And hang it round with all my wanton pictures.
Shaks.
Thus he was he in his greatness, and in the length of his branches.
Ezek. xxxi. 7.
For as by deceptions wasps proclaim
The fairest fruit, so these the fairest fame.
Young.

4. Clear; pure.
A standard of a damask rose, with the root on, was set in a chamber where no fire was, upright in an eather pan, full of fair water, half a foot under the water. Boeot.
Even fair water, falling upon white paper or linen, will immediatly alter the colour of them, and make it sooner than that of the unwetted parts.

5. Not cloudy; not foul; not tempestuous.
Fair is soul, and foul is fair.
Hover through the fog and filthy air.
Shaks.

Johns.
The Calips obtained a mighty empire, which was in a fair way to have enlarged, until they fell out.
Rafael's Lises.

O pity and shame! that they who live well,
Enter'd so far, should turn aside to tread
Paths indirect, or in the midway faint.
Milton.

6. Equal; just.
The king did so much desire a peace, that no man need advise him to, or could divert him from it, if fair and honourable conditions of peace were offered to him.
Temple.

7. Not effected by an insidious or unlawful methods; not foul.
After all these conquests he passed the rest of his life in his own native country, and died a fair and native Subject.
Milton.

10. Not practising any fraudulent or insidious arts: as, a fair rival, a fair disputant.
Virtuous and vicious ev'n my man must be,
Few in th'e extreme, but all in the degree.
The rogue and thief by fits is fairest and wise.

11. Open; direct.
For still, methought, she sung not far away:
At last I found her on a laurel-spray;
Close by my side she sat, and fair in sight,
Full in a face, against her opposite.
Dryden.

12. Gentle; mild; not compulsory.
All the lords came in, and, being by fair means wrought thereunto, acknowledged King Henry.
Spenser on Ireland.

For to reduce her by main force
Is now in vain; by fair means, worse.
Hudibras.

13. Mild; not severe.
Not only do not degrade them, or remit
To life obscur'd, which were a fair dismission;
But throw'st them lower than thou didst exalt them high.
Milton's Agamem.

14. Pleasing; civil.
Good sir, why do you start, and seem to fear Things that do sound so fair?
Shaks.
When fair words and good counsel will prevail upon us, we must be frighted into our duty.

15. Equitable; not injurious.
His doom is fair.
And dust I bow, and shall to dust return.
Milton.

16. Commendable; easy.
Hereby, upon the edge of yonder coppice, A stand where you may make the fairest shot.
Shaks.
I looked for the jugular veins, opened the fairest, and took away a dozen ounces of blood.

17. Liberal; not narrow.
He through his virtue was as free from greediness, as through his fair livelihood, far from neediness.
Cureus.

FAIR. adv. [from the adjective.]
1. Gently; decently; without violence.
He who fair and softly goes steadily forward, in a course that points right, will sooner be at his journey's end, than he that runs after every one, though he gallop.
Locke.

2. Civily; complaisantly.
F A I

Well, you must now speak sir John Falstaff, fair, and Shakesp.
One of the company spoke him fair, and Shakesp.
and have stopt his mouth with a crust.
L'Estrange.
In this plain fable you' th' effect may see
Of negligence, and foul credulity;
And learn beshrews of thatters to beware,
Then most pernicious when they speak too fair.
Dryden.

His promise Palamon accepts; but pray'd
To keep it better than the first he made;
Thus fair they parted, till to morrow's dawn;
For each had held his plighted faith to pawn.
Dryden.
Kalib ascend, my fair spoke servant rise,
And soothe my heart with pleasing prophecies.
Dryden.

This promised fair at first, Addison onItaly.

3. Happily; successfully,
O, princely Buckingham, I'll kiss thy hand,
In sign of league and unity with thee;
No more the fair and thy noble house:
Thy garments are not spotted with our blood.Shak.

4. On good terms.
There are other sence, though inferior cases, in which a man must give him the intent to keep fair with the world, and turn the penny,
Callier on Popularity.

F A I R.  n. s.
1. A beauty; elliptically a fair woman.
Of sleep forsaken, to relieve his care.
He saw the conversation of the fair.Dryden.
Fab.  Gentlemen who do not design to marry, yet pay their devours to one particular fair.
Spectator.

2. Honesty; just dealing,
I am not much for that present; we'll settle it between ourselves; fair and square, Noe, keeps friends together.
Arbuthnot.

F a i r.  n. s.  [foir, Fr. ferie, or forum, Lat.]
An annual or stated meeting of buyers and sellers; a time of traffick more frequented than a market.
The privilege of holding fairs in England is granted by the king.
With silver, iron, tin and lead, they traded in thy fairs.
Edek.
His corn, his cattle, were his only care,
And his supreme delight a country fair.
Dryden.
The ancient Numidians, or fairs of Rome, were kept every ninth day; afterwards the same privileges were granted to the country markets, which were at first under the power of the consuls.
Arbuthnot on Cesars.

F a i r i n g.  n. s.  [from fair.]
A present given at a fair.
Sweetheart, we shall be rich ere we depart.
If fairies ever dance, like children;
Like children that esteem every trifle, and prefer a fairing before their fathers.
Ben Jonson.
Now he goes on, and slugs of fairs and shows;
For still new fairs before his eyes arose;
They are a very forward generation, children in whom is no faith.
Shakesp. on Beech.

F A I R L Y.  a d v.  [from fair.]
1. Beautifully; as, a city fairly situated.
2. Commodiously; conveniently; suitably to any purpose or design,
Waiting 'til willing winds their sails supply'd,
Within a trading town they long abide,
Full fairly situate on a haven's side.
Dryden.

3. Honestly; justly; without shift; without out the tiniest.
There is due from the judge to the advocate some commendation and gracing where causes are fairly pleaded.
Barcum.

Two of these advantages we may fairly lay claim
I wish we had as good a title to the latter.
Atter.
It is a church of England-man's opinion, that the strength of a state consists in an absolute unlimited legislative power, wherein the whole body of the people are fairly represented in an executive daily limited.
Swift.

4. Ingeniously; plainly; openly.
The stage how loosely does Astrea tread,
Who fairly puts all characters to bed!
Pope.

5. Candally; without sinisterus interpretations.
As I interpret fairly your design,
So look not with severe eyes on mine.
Dryden.

6. Without violence to right reason.
Where I have enlarged them, I desire the false crib-treaders of fairs and fairs in us, and that those thoughts are wholly mine; but that either they are secretly in the poet, or may be fairly deduced from him.
Dryden.

This nutritious juice, being a subtle liquor, scarce obtainable by a human body, the serum of the blood is fairly substitut'd in its place.
Arbuthnot on Aliments.

7. Without blots.
Here is that indiction of the good lord Hastings,
Which in a set hand fairly is engraved.
Shakesp.

8. Completely; without any deficiency.
All this they fairly overcome, by reason of the continual presence of their king.Spens State of Ire.
Let them say, 'tis grossly done; so be it fairly done,
Our love is not so great, Horstens, but we may blow our nails together, and fast it fairly out.
Shakesp.  Ingomar of the Shire.

F A I R N E S S.  n. s.  [from fair.]
1. Beauty; elegance of form.
That which made her fairness much the fairer,
was that it was but a fair emission of a most bright mind full of life, which delighted more to judge itself than to show itself.
Sidney.

2. Honesty; candour; ingenuity.
There may be somewhat of wisdom, but little of that which is best in conduct.
Atterbury.

F A I R S P O K E N.  a d j.  [from fair and speak.]
Bland and civil in language and address.
Arius, a priest in the church of Alexandria, a subtitled and a marvellous fairspoken man, but discovered that we should be placed before him in honour, whose superior he thought himself in desert; because through envy and stanch pride reason,
Thirly.

F A T R Y.  n. s.  [pepbl, Sax. fe, Fr. Ab.
Aira terra, &c. Macedonum dialecto;
unde epee, &c. Romanis inferi, qui Secuto-Saxobibus dicuntur feries, omostratiq; vulgo corruptus fairies,
In Fairy's Glossary.
kataygena daemones, sive di manes;

1. A kind of fabled beings supposed to appear in a diminutive human form, and to dance in the meadows, and reward cleanliness in houses, an elf; a fairy.

2. Fairies.
Then let them all encircle him about.
And fairy like too pinch the unclean knight;
And ask him, why, that hour of fairy revel,
In their so sacred paths he dares to tread
In shape professes to be, Shakesp. Merry Wives of Windsor.
By the idea any one has of faries, or centaurs,
he cannot know that things, answering those ideas,
exist.
Fays, fairies, genii, elves, and demons, hear.Pope.

2. Enchantress.
Warburton.
To this great fairy I'll commend thy acts,
Make her thank's bless thee.Shakesp. on Beech.

F A I R Y.  a d j.
1. Given by fairies.
Be secret and discrete; these fairies
Favors are lost when not concealed.
Dryden.  Spanish Fary.
Such fairies do; like fairy money, though it be gold in the hand from which he received it, will be but leaves and dust when it comes to the earth.
Locke.

2. Belonging to fairies.
F A L

1. With firm belief in religion.
2. With full confidence in God.
3. With strict adherence to duty and allegiance.

FALLOUT. n. [faldor] [faldor and stool.] A kind of stool placed at the south side of the altar, at which the kings of England knelt at their coronation.

To FALL. v. n. pret. I fell; compound pret. I have fallen or falt. [realan, Sax. fallon, Germ.]

1. To drop from a higher place.
   Thou shalt make a bottleneck for thy roof, that thou bring not blood upon thine house, if any man fall from thence.
   [Deut.]
   I shall fall
   Like a bright exhilaration in the evening,
   And no man see me more.
   [Shakespeare Henry VIII.]
2. To drop from an erect to a prone posture.
   Such fell all along on the earth.
   [1 Sam xxviii. 20.
   That is a step,
   On which I must fall down, or else o'erleap;
   For in my way there is a most rude smooth rock.
   [Micah.]]
3. To drop; to be held or adhere no longer.
   His chains fell off from his hands.
   [Acts, xii. 7.]
4. To move down any descent.
   All liquid bodies are diffusive; for their parts being congeries, have a mutual cohesion one with another; but glide and fall off any way, as gravity and the air presseth them.
   [T. Burnet.]
5. To drop ripe from the tree.
   As the leaf falleth off from the vine, and as a falling fig from the fig-tree.
   [Luke xxvi. 4.]
6. To pass at the outlet: as a river.
   Caesar therefore gave orders to build his galleys on the Lorn, and the rivers that fall into it.
   [Lor.]
7. To be determined to some particular direction.
   Birds and fowls that rest one foot to ease the other, naturally lay their heads under their wings, and the centre of gravity may fall upon the foot they stand on.
8. Apostatispe; to depart from faith or goodness.
   Labour to enter into that rest, lest any man fail after the same example of unbelief.
   [Heb. iv. 11.]

FALLOING. n.s. A kind of coarse cloth. Dict.

FALSTOOL. n.s. [fald or fold and stool.] A kind of stool placed at the south side of the altar, at which the kings of England knelt at their coronation.

FALCATION. n.s. [falces, Lat.] Crookedness; form like that of a reaper's hook.
   The hoes have antennae, or long horns, before, with a long falxation or incipient tail behind.

FALCHION. n.s. [enisis falcatus, in Fr. fauchon.] A short crooked sword; a cymeter.
   I've seen the day, with my good biting falchion,
   I would have made them skip:
   I am old now.
   [Shakespeare.]
   Old falchions are new tempered in the fire; the sounding trumpet every soul inspires.

FALCON. n.s. [falcon, Fr. falconne, Ital. falco, Lat.] Credo, a rostro falcatu sive advance, from the falcated or crooked bill.
   1. A hawk trained for sport.
   As Venus' bird, the white, swift, lovely dove,
   O! happy dove that art compar'd to her,
   Doth do and what seems wise, and acts as she.
   Finding the grip of falcon fierce not far.
   [Sidney.]
   Air stops not the high soaring of my noble falcon.

Falpe, n.s. Apraxia.

FALCONER. n.s. [foulenner, Fr.] One who breeds and trains hawks; one who follows the sport of fowling with hawks.
   For, if we the sport of falconry.
   [Shakespeare.]
   His heart that would fly, with falconry.
   [Dryden.]

FALCONEET. n.s. [falconette, Fr.] A sort of ordinance, whose diameter at the bore is four inches and a quarter, weight four hundred pounds, length six foot, load one pound and a quarter, shot something more than two inches diameter, and one pound and a quarter weight.
   [Harris.]
   Mahonnet sent jeruzalems and nimble footmen, with certain falconets and other small pieces, to take the strongest.
   [Knolles.]

FALDAGE. n.s. [faldaugium, barbarous Lat.] A privilege which anciently several lords reserved to themselves of setting up folds of sheep, in any fields within their manors, the better to manage them; and this not only with their own tenants but their tenants sheep. This fallage in some places they call a foldcouse or freehold.
   [Harris.]

FALDEE. n.s. [fald and fre.] A composition paid annually by tenants for the privilege of falldge.

FALD.
14. To come into any state of weakness, terror, or misery.
These, by ordaining the beginning of a change for the entire work of new life, will fall under the former guilt.
Hammond.
One would wonder how so many learned men could fall into so great an absurdity, as to believe this river could preserve itself unmixed with the lake.
Addison on Italy.
The best men fall under the severest pressures.
Hale.
15. To decrease; to be diminished, as in weight.
From the pound weight, as Pliny tells us, the Aa fell to two ounces in the first Punic war; when Hannibal, to one ounce, by the Papian law, to half an ounce. Arbuthnot.
16. To ebb; to grow shallow; as, the river falls.
17. To decrease in value; to bear less price.
When the price of corn falleth, men generally bear no more ground than will supply their own turn. Caro.
But now her price is full.
Shak.
For the will, and every day lessen, till industry and frugality, joined to a well- ordered trade, shall restore to the kingdom the riches it had formerly.
Looke.
18. The greatness of an estate, in bulk and territory, both fall under measure; and the greatness of finances and revenue doth fall under computation.
Bacon.
19. To be rejected; to become null.
This book must stand or fall with thee; not by any opinion I have of it, but by thy own. Locke.
20. To decline from violence to calmness; from intenseness to remission.
He was stir'd.
And something spoke in choler, ill and hasty; But he fell to himself again, and sweetly.
In all the rest she'd a most noble patience. Shak.
At length her fancy fell, her frowning ceased.
And exiling in her soul, the god decreas'd. Dryd.
21. To enter into any new state of the body or mind.
In sweet musick is such art.
Killing care and grief of heart.
Fall asleep or hearing die. Shak.
Solyman, charg'd with the loss of his galleys and妹子, and with the double injury done unto him by the Venetians, fell into such a rage that he curseth Barbarossa. Knolles.
When magnificence, upon the falsething of a lover, she felt distracted.
A spark like thee of the man-killing trade,
Fell sick, and thins to his physician said;
Shake off every step,
I feel a kind of trembling at my heart;
My pulse melancoly, and my breath is strong;
I feel a kind of trembling at my heart;
My pulse melancoly, and my breath is strong;
Is it not the disease of the times?
Fell asleep.
He died calmly, and with all the calmness of a man falling asleep.
Atterbury.
Fortunatus that falls in tears before
As if he mourn'd his rival's ill success. Addison.
For as his own bright image he survey'd,
He fell in love with the fantastic shade.
Addison.
I fell in love with the character of Pope, Sir John.
Atticus; I langued to imitate him.
Bacon to Pope.
22. To sink into an air of discontent or dejection of the look.
If thou persuade thyself that they shall not be taken away in the fall.
Culpep.
But if you have any other request to make, hide it not;
for ye shall find we will not make your countenance to fall by the answer ye shall receive.
Bacon.
I have observed, that the looks we fall,
O'ercast with gloomy cares and discontent.
Addison.
23. To sink below something in comparison.
Shone of the beauty and thy youth, Among the rest me hither brought,
Finding this fame short of truth,
Made me stay longer than I thought.
Walker.
24. To happen; to befal.
For such things as do fall scarce once in many ages, it did suffice to take such order as was requisite when they fell.
Hooker.
Of it fall out, that while one thinks too much of his doing, he leaves to do the effect of this thinking.
Sidney.
A long advertent and deliberate counsel of the consequeuts, which falls not in the common road of ordinary men.
Hale.
Since this fortune falls to you,
Be content and seek no new.
Shak.
If the worst fall that ever fell, I hope, I shall make shift to go without it.
Shak.
O, how few have got the power,
That if good fortune fall,
Cannot abet another hour,
Nor a lost head
Done.
Since both cannot possess what both pursue,
I'm griev'd, my friend, the chance should fall on Drogon.
I had more leisure, and disposition, than have since fallen to my share.
Swift.
25. To come by chance; to light on.
Seek Percy therm and yourself the field; But seeing thin's fell on me so luckily,
I will assay thee. Shak.
Shakespeare.
The Romans fell upon this model by chance, but the Spartans by thought and design. Swift.
26. To come to a stated method.
The odd hours at the end of the solar year, are not indeed thirty, but are deficient 1.
Times, which deficiency, in 131 years, collected, amounts to a whole day; and hence may be seen the reason why the East equators, which at the time of the Nicasian council fell upon the 21st of March, falls now about ten days sooner.
Holden on Time.
It does not lie within my subject to lay down the rules of odes.
Felon on the Classics.
27. To come unexpectedly.
I am fallen upon the mention of mercenaries. Boyle.
It happened this evening that we fell into a very pleasant walk, at a distance from his house. Addis.
28. To begin any thing with ardour and vehemence.
The king understanding of their adventure, suddenly falls to prise in making much of them.
Sidney.
Each of us fell in praise of our country mistresses. Shak.
And the next multitude fell a bustling. North.
It is better to sound a person off air, fell upon the point at first; except you mean to surprise him by some short question.
Bacon.
When a horse is hungry, and comes to a good pasture, he falls to his food immediately.
Hale.
They fell to blows, inasmuch that the Archers perform'd with all the show of them.
Hale.
29. To handle or treat directly.
We must immediately fall into our subject, and treat every part of it in a lively manner. Addison.
30. To come vindictively; as a punishment.
There fell wrath for it against Israel. 2 Chron.
31. To come by any mischance to any new possessor.
The stout bishop could not well brook that his province should fall into their hands.
Knolles.
32. To drop or pass by carelessness or imprudence.
Let those let no partial favours fall.
The people's parent, he protected all. Pope's Odes.
Some expressions fell from him, not very favorably to the people of Ireland. Swift.
33. To come forcibly and irresistibly.
Fear fell on them all.
Acts, xvi. 17.
A kind refreshing sleep is fallen upon him:
I saw him stretched at ease, his fancy lost
In pleasing visions. Addison's Cato.
34. To become the property of any one by lot, chance, inheritance, or otherwise.
All the lands, which will fall to her majesty thereabouts, are large enough to contain them.
Swift.
35. To languish; to grow faint.
Their hearts fell for the common cause rose or fell with your lordship's interest.
Addis. on Italy.
36. To be born; to be yeaned.
Lambes must have care taken of them at their first falling, else, while they are weak, the crows and magpies will be apt to pick out their eyes.
Rutem.
37. To fall away. To grow lean.
Wadry vegetables are proper, and fish rather than flesh; in a Lent diet people commonly fall away.
Arbuthnot on Diet.
38. To fall away. To revolt; to change allegiance.
The fugitives fell away to the king of Babylon.
2 Kings.
39. To fall away. To apostatise; to sink into wickedness.
These for a while believe, and in time of temptation fall away.
Say not thou, it is through the Lord that I fell away; for thou owest not to do the things that I have hated.
Eccles. xv.
40. To fall away. To perish; to be lost.
Still propagate; for still they fall away:
Thy providence to prevent entire decay. Dryd. Virg.
How can it enter into the thoughts of man, that the soul, which is capable of such immense perfections, and of receiving new improvement to all eternity, shall fall away into nothing, almost as soon as it is created?
Addison's Spectator.
41. To fall away. To decline gradually; to fade; to languish.
In a curious breed of cedelwork one colour falls away by such just degrees, and another so insensibly, that we see the variety, without being able to distinguish the total vanishing of the one from the first appearance of the other. Addison.
42. To fall back. To fall of a promise made.
We have often fallen back from our resolutions.
Taylor.
43. To fall back. To recede; to give way.
44. To fall down. [down is sometimes added to fall, though it adds little to the signification.] To prostrate himself in aloration.
All kings shall fall down before him; all nations shall serve him. Ps. liii. 11. 684
45. To fall down. To sink; not to stand. As she was speaking, she fell down for lassitude.
Ezek. xvi.

46. To fall down. To bend as a suppliant. They shall fall down unto them, and shall supplicate them.
Is. xl. 15.

47. To fall from. To revolt; to depart from adherence.
Cherence
Is very likely to fall from him.
Shak. Hen. VI.
The emperor being much solicited by the Scots not to be a help to ruin their kingdom, fell by degrees from the king of England,
Hayward.

48. To fall in. To concur; to coincide.
Objections fall in here, and are the clearest and most convincing arguments of the truth. Wotton.
His reasons in this chapter seem to fall in with each other; yet, upon a closer investigation, we shall find them proposed with great variety and particularity.
Attlee.
Any single paper that falls in with the popular taste, and leaves more than ordinary, brings it in a great return of letters.
Adison.
When the war was begun, there soon fell in other incidents at home, from which the making of the consequence of necessity.
Swift.

49. To fall in. To comply; to yield to.
Our fine young ladies readily fall in with the direction of the graver sort.
Spectator.
It is a good grace to men to a nation of which, it is thus given to change, when they have a sovereign that is prone to fall in with all the turns and veerings of the people.
Adison.
You will find it difficult to persuade learned men to fall in with your projects.
Adison on Medals.
That prince represented himself first to the church of England; and, upon their refusal to fall in with his measures, made the like advances to the dissenters.
Swift.

50. To fall off. To separate; to be broken.
Love cooks, friendship falls off, brothers divide; in cities, mutinies; in countries, discord.
Shak.

51. To fall off. To perish; to die away.
Languages need recruits to supply the place of those words that are continually falling off from the discourse.
Fenton.

52. To fall off. To apostatize; to revolt; to forsake.
Oh, Hamlet, what a falling off was there!
Shak.
Revolted Mortimer!
He never did fall off, my sovereign liege, but by the chance of war.
Shak. Hen. IV.
They, accustomed to afford at other times either silence or short assent to what he did purpose, did then fall off and forsake him.
Hayward.

53. To fall on. To begin eagerly to do any thing.
Some cause cold saltd is before the set;
Bread with the bran, perhaps, and broken meat;
Fall on, and try thy appetite to eat.

54. To fall on. To make an assault; to begin the attack.
They fell on to their proper good my place; at length they came to the brownstock with me; I denied e'm still.
Shaksp. Hen. VIII.

55. To fall over. To revolve; to desert from one side to the other.
And dost thou now fall over to my foes?
Thou wear a foe's hide! doff it, for shame!
And hang a calf's skin on those recrann'd limbs.

56. To fall out. To quarrel; to jar; to grow contentious.
Little needed those proofs to one who would have fallen off with another, rather than make any conjectures to Zelamine's speeches.
Sidney.
How fell you out, say that?
No contending, brother in antipathy,
Till I and such a knife.
Shaksp. K. Lear.
Meeting her of late behind the wood,
Seeking sweet favours for this hateful fool,
I did upbraid her, and fall out with her.
Shaksp.
The cedar, by the instigation of the loyalists, fell out with the household, who had elected him to be their king.
Howel.

57. To fall out. To happen; to fall foul of.
Whoso think you is your Dornus fallen out to be
Sidney.
Now, for the most part, it so falleth out, touching things which generally are received, that although in themselves they be most certain, yet, because of men's negligence, it is as certain that we hardestil able to bring proof of their certainty.
Hobbe's.

58. To fall out. To fall into, to overthrow those who are in authority.
We o'er-rod on the way: of those we told him.
Shaksp.
Yet so it may fall out, because their end.
Is, hate, not to help to me.
Miltion's Dramatic.
There fell out a bloody quarrel betwixt the frogs and the mice.
L'Estrange.
If it so fall out that you are miserable for ever, thou hast no reason to be surprised, as in some unexpected thing had happened.
Tilton.

59. To fall to. To begin eagerly to eat.
The men were fashion'd in a larger mould,
The women fit for labour, big and bold;
Gigantick hands, as soon as work was done,
To their huge pots of boiling pulse would run;
Fall to, with eager joy, on homely food.

60. To fall to. To apply himself to.
They would now, partaking his favours, be the most lively of those virtues which they before learned.
Sidney.
I know thee not, old man; fall to thy prayers:
How ill white hairs become a fool and jester.
Shaksp.
Having been brought up on an idle horseboy, he would never after fall to labour: but is only made fit for the halter.
Spenser.
They fell to raising money under pretence of the relief of Ireland.
Cherendon.
My lady falls to play: so bad her chance,
He must repair it.
Pope.

61. To fall under. To be subject to; to become the subject of.
We know the effects of heat will be such as will, with a fall under the dominion of men, if the force of it be altogether kept in.
Bacon's Nat. Hist.
Those things which are wholly in the choice of another, fall under our deliberation.
The idea of the painter and the sculptor is undoubtedly that perfect and excellent example of the mind, by imitation of which imagined form, all things are represented with the utmost human sight.
Dryd. Delineations.

62. To fall upon. To attack; to invade to assault.
Auria falling upon the galleys, had with them a cruel and deadly fight.
Knolles.
An infection in town first falls upon children, women, and soldiers, or those that are subject to other diseases; but, spreading farther, seizes upon the most healthy.
Temple.
May fall upon every thing that comes in his way; not a berry or mushroom can escape him.
Adison's Spectator.

63. To fall upon. To attempt.
I do not intend to fall upon nice philosophical disquisitions about this heavy subject.
Hobbe's.

64. To fall upon. To rush against.
At the same time that the storm bears upon the whole species, we are falling foul upon one another.
Adison.

65. Fall is one of those general words of which it is very difficult to ascertain or detail the full signification. It retains in most of its senses some part of its primitive meaning, and implies either literally or figuratively descent, violence, or suddenness. In many of its senses it is opposed to rise; but in others has no counterpart or correlative.

To FALL v. a.
1. To drop; to let fall.
To-morrow in the battle think on me,
And fall thy edgeless sword, despair and die.
Shaksp.
If that the earth could teem with woman's tears,
Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile.
Shaksp.

2. To sink; to depress; the contrary to raise.
If a man would endeavour to raise or fall his voice still by half notes, like the stops of a flute, or by whole notes alone without halfs, as far as an eighth, he will not be able to frame his voice unto this.
Bacon's Nat. Hist.

3. To diminish; to let sink; opposed to raise.
Upon lessening interest to four per cent, you fall the pressure of the gold, and those were Jacob's.
Shaksp.

FALL. n. s. [from the verb.]
1. The act of dropping from on high.
High over their heads in a cloud ring deck is placed. That promises a fall, and shakes at every blast.

2. The act of tumbling from an erect posture.
I saw him run after a gilded butterfly; and when he caught it, he let it go again, and after it again; and over and over he chases him up and down again, and caught it again; or whether his fall enraged him, or how it was, he did set his teeth, and did tear it.
Shaksp.

3. The violence suffered in dropping from on high.
My son coming into his marriage-chamber, happened to have a fall, and died.

A fever or fall may take away my reason.
Litch. 685
8. Diminution; decrease of value.
That the improvement of Ireland is the principal cause why our laws in purchase rise not, as naturally they should, with the fall of our interest, appears evidently from the effect the fall of interest hath had upon houses in London. Child.

9. Declination or diminution of sound; cadence; close of musick.
That strain again; it had a dying fall; O, it came o'er my ear, like the sweet South.
That breathes upon a bank of violets.
Stealing and giving edums. Shakesp. Twelfth Night.
How sweetly did they float upon the wings of silence, through the empty-vaunted night.
At several smoothing the raven down.
2. Deceitful; mocking expectation.
The force of that fallacious fruit.
That with exhibiting a vapour bland.
About their spirits had play'd, and longest pow'r,
Made err, was now expell'd. Milton's Par. Lost.
This philosophy inspires fallacious hopes.
Milton.

10. Declivity; steep descent.
Waters when beat upon the shore, or stratified, as the falls of bridges, or dashed against themselves by winds, give a roaring noise.
Bacon's Nat. Hist.

11. Cataract; cascade; rush of water down a steep place.
There will we sit upon the rocks,
And see the shepherds feed their flocks
By shallow rivers, to whose falls
Melodious birds sing madrigals. Shakesp.
A whistling wind, or a melodious noise of birds, among the spreading branches, or a pleasing fall of water running violently, these things make them to swoon for fear.

3. Deceitful; deceitful.
Liable to errors, to which men may be deceived.

4. Voidly; void; falsely.
Voidly; voidly you will make false accusation, and thereby make yourself to the mark, and thereby make your own righteousness to be void. Isaiah.
FAL

For how can that be false, which ev'ry tongue
Of ev'ry mortal man affirms for true?
Which truth hath been so strong, as
As loadstone like, all hearts it ever drew.

Shakespeare.

A face is in that poetry which grotesque is in a picture; for nothing of a face are all unnatural, and the manner false; that is, inconsistent with the characters of mankind.

Dryden.

3. Succedaneous; supposititious.

Take a vessel, and make a false bottom of coarse canvas: fill it with earth above the canvas. Bacon.

4. Deceiving expectation; not solid; not sound.

He fell, as a huge rocky cliff,
Whose false foundation waves had wad'd away.
With dreadful pulse is from the main lend rift.

Dryden.

5. Attest, v. t. to declare falsely.

Falsehood. n. s. [from false.]

1. Want of truth; want of veracity.

Artificer of fraud; he was the first
That traitor's falsehood under scanty show show'd. Milton.

All deception in the course of life is, indeed, nothing else but a lie reduced to practice, and falsehood passing from words to things. Southa.

2. Want of honesty; treachery; deceitfulness; perfidy.

Nothing wants, but that thy shape,
Like his, and color serpentine, may show
Thy inward fraud, to warn all creatures from thee Henceforth; lest that too heavily form, pretend
To hellish falsehood, snare them. Milton.

3. A lie; a false assertion.

In your answer there remains falsehood. Job.

4. Counterfeit; imposture.

For no falsehood can endure
Touching of God, as long as earth remains, but returns
Of force to its own likeness. Milton.

FALSELY. adv. [from false.]

1. Contrarily to truth; not truly.

Simeon and Levi spake not only falsely but in.

2. Erroneously; by mistake.

He knows that to be inconvenient which we falsely think convenient for us. Smollett's Sermon.

3. Perfidiously; treacherously; deceitfully.

FALSENESS. n. s. [from false.]

1. Contrariety to truth.

2. Want of veracity; violation of promise.

Suppose the reverse of virtue were solemnly avow'd, and instead of fraud and rapine, and perjury and falseness to a man's word, and all vice were established by a law, that which we now call vice gain the reputation of virtue, and that which we now call virtue grow odious to human nature?

Tillotson.

3. Duplicitly deceit; double dealing.

Fidelity is opposed to hypocrisy and insincerity, and all falseness or foulness of intention, especially to personated devotion. Hammond's Fundam.

4. Treachery; perfidy; traitors.

The prince is in no danger of being betrayed
By his false friends, or cheated by the avance of such a servant.

Shakespeare.

Rogers.

FALSE. n. s. [from false.]

A deceiver; an hypocrite. Now obsolete.

Such end had the kid; for he would beane'd
Of craft coloured with simple word falsity.

And such end, parde, does all remain,
That of such falsers friendship been faild.

Spenser.

FALSEifiable. adj. [from falsify.] Liable to be counterfeited or corrupted.

FALSIFICATION. n. s. [falsification, Fr. from falsify.]

1. The act of counterfeiting any thing so as to make it appear what it is not.

Concerning the word of God, whether it be by misrepresentation of the sense, or by falsification of the words, it is a matter of great and awful consideration whether any thing may seem divine which is not, is very plainly to abuse, and even to falsify Divine evidence, which injustice is offered but unto men, is most wretchedly counted heinous.

Hooker.

To counterfeite the dead image of a king in his coin is an high offence; but to counterfeit the livell image of a king in his person, exceedeth all falsifications; except it should be that of a Malboist, who counterfeites Divine honour. Bacon.

2. Conflation.

The poet invents this fiction to procure posterity from searching after this isle, and to preserve his story from detection of falsification. Brome.

FALSIFIER. n. s. [from falsify.]

1. One that counterfeiteth; one that makes anything to seem what it is not.

It happens in theories built on too obvious or too few experiments, what happens to falsifiers of coin; for counterfeit money will endure some one period of time after another, but all the falsehoods.

2. A liar; one that contrives falsehoods.

Boasters are naturally falsifiers, and the people, of all others, that put their sham's the worst together.

L'Estrange.

To FALSIFY. t. a. [Falsifier, Fr.]

1. To counterfeit; to forge; to produce something for that in which reality it is not.

We cannot excuse that church, which through corrupt translations of scripture, delivereth, instead of divine speeches, any thing repugnant unto that which God speaketh; or, through falsified additions, proposeth the people of God, as Scripture, which is in truth Scripture. Hooker.

The Irish birds use to forge and falsify every thing as they list, to please or displease an enemy. Spenser.

Falsifying the balance by deceit.

To confute; to prove false.

Our Saviour's prophecy stands good in the destruction of the temple, and the dissolution of the Jewish economy, when Jesus and Pagans united all their prejudices, under Julian the apostate, to falsify the predictions of Jeremiah.

To violate; to break by falsehood.

- It shall be thy work, thy shameful work, which is in thy power to shun, to make him live to see the falsify falsified, and his bed defiled.

Sidney.

The slyly falsified his fallacious tale; therefore did he slyly skew Selymes the king, as he was bathing himself, mistrusting nothing less than the falsehood of the flage.

This superadds treachery to all the other pestiferous ingredients of the crime; 'tis the falsifying the most important trust.

Decay of Folly.

To pierce; to run through.

His crest is rashly'd away, his ample shield
Is falsify'd, and round with javsins fill'd.

Dryden.

Of this word Mr. Dryden writes thus: My friend carcassd at the way, as a new improvement in our language. The fact is confessed; for I remember not to have read it in any English author; though perhaps it may be found in some author of the ancient language. But suppose it to be there: why am I forbidden to borrow from the Italian, a polished language, the word which is wanting in my native tongue? Also this gives us a rule for coin'd words, si finge seco causum, especially when other words are joined with them which explain the sense; we wound the word falsify, in this place, to mean that the shield of Turnus was not of proof against the spears and javelins of Aeneas, which had pierced through and through in many places. The words which accompany this new one, makes my meaning plain:

Ma a't Usberg d' Angli era perfection, et che mai poter falsarli in meum cantus.

Ariosto, cant. xxvi.
To falsehood; to contrary truth.

Neither are they able to break through those errors, wherein they are so determinedly settled, that they can not mistake the whole sum of whatsoever love is owing unto God's truth. Hooker.

And as a mortal the most wise delude? Sandys.

Probability does not make any alteration, either in the truth or falisy of things; but only imports a difference, and once their clearness or appearance to the understanding. South.

1. A lie; an error; a false assertion or position.

That Danubius ariseth from the Pyrenese hills, that Xeres is higher towards the North, and opinions truly charged upon Aristotle by the restorer of Epicurns, and all easily confutable falsities. Cell.

To falter. v. n. [falter to be wanting, Span. saltar to a stammerer, Islandick, which is probably a word from the same radical.]

1. To hesitate in the utterance of words.

With faltering tongue, and trembling ev'ry vein,
Tell on, quoth she.

The pale assistants on each other stare,
With gaping mouths for words issuing pared.

The still-born sounds upon the palatine hang,
And dy'd imperfect on the faltering tongue. Dryg.

He changes, gods! and falters at the question:
His fears, his words, his look, declare him guilty. Smith.

2. To fail in any act of the body.

This earth shall have a feeling: and these stones prove armed soldiers, ere her native king.

Shall only under foul rebellious arms. Shak.

He had lost all his old, familiar hopes. Witsman's Surgery.

3. To fail in any act of the understanding.

How far idios are concerned in the want or weakness of any or all faculties, an exact observation of their several ways of faltering would discover.

To falter. v. a. To sitt; to cleanse.

This word seems to be merely rustic or provincial.

Brayle for malt must be boil, dry, sweet, and clean faltered from frothiness, seeds and nets. Mortimer's Husbandry.

Falteringly. adv. [from falter.] With hesitation; with difficulty; with feebleness,

To famble. v. a. [famile, Dan.] To hesitate in the speech. This word I find only in Skinner.

FAM. n. s. [familiaris, Lat. ; chamer, Dorick.]

1. Celebrity; renown.

The house to be builded for the Lord must be exceeding magnificil, of fance and glory throughout all countries. Chr.

The three of fame will not suffer endowments to lie useless. Addition's Spectator.

What is this, for which we thought employ.

The name of Sir North, and other men enjoy? Pope.

2. Report; rumour.

We have heard the fame of him, and all that he did in Egypt. Jaa. ix. 9.

I shall shew what are true fames. Bacon.

FAMished. adj. [from fame.] Renowned; celebrated; much talked of.

He is fam'd for readiness, peace and prayer. Shak.

If purposes to seek the Christian god,
Avoiding Delphos, his more fam'd school.
Since Pilgrime reformed made the road. Dryg.

Aristides was an Athenian philosopher, fam'd for his learning and wisdom; but converted to Christianity. Addition.

FAMELESS. adj. [from fame.] Having no fame; without renown. Not in use.

Then let me, famelous, love the fields and woods,
The faithful wandering running floods. May.

FAMILIAR. adj. [familiaris, Lat.]

1. Domestick; relating to a family.

They range familiar to the dome. Pope.

2. Affable; not formal; easy in conversation.

Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar. Shak.

Be not too familiar with Piut, for he misses thys favour so much, that he swears thou art maruier his Gell. Shak.

3. Unceremonious; free, as among persons long acquainted.

Kalander straight thought he saw his niece Parthenia, and was about in such familiar sort to have spoken unto her, but she, in grave and bovnomournful manner, gave him to understand that he was mistaken. Sidar.

4. Well known; brought into knowledge by frequent practice of custom.

I see not how the Scripture could be possibly made familiar unto all, unless far more should be read in the people's hearing than by a sermon can be opened. Hooker.

Let us choose such noble counsel,
That war, or peace, or both, at once may be
As things acquainted and familiar to us. Shak.

Recess and only consultation left Familiar to our eyes! Milton's Par. Lost.

One idea which is familiar to the mind, connected with others which are new and strange, will bring those new ideas into easy remembrance. Watts.

5. Well acquainted with, accustomed; habituated by custom.

Or chang'd at length, and to the place conform'd
In temper and in nature, will receive
Familiar the fierce heat, and void of pain.Milton.

The sense of phenomena in particular ideas; the mind, by degrees, growing familiar with some of them, they are lodged in the memory, and came.

Lecce. He was amased how so importent and groveling an insect as I could entertain such inhuman ideas, and in so familiar a manner, as to appear wholly unmoved at all the scenes of blood and desolation. Gulliver's Travels.

Patient permit the sadly-pleasing strain,
Famile new with grief, your tears return. Pope.

6. Common; frequent.

To a wrong hypothesis may be reduced the errors that may be occasioned by a true hypothesis, but not rightly understood: there is nothing more familiar than this. Lecce.

7. Easy; unconstrained.

He unites
His name, and sports in loose familiar strains. Addition.

8. Too nearly acquainted.

A poor man found a priest familiar with his wife, whom he being on the road, and could not prove it, the priest sued him for defamation. Camden.

FAMILIARITY. n. s. [familiarité, Fr. from familiar.]

1. Easiness of conversation; omission of ceremony; affability.

We contract at last such an intimacy and familiarity with them, as makes it difficult and irksome for us to call off our minds. Afterbury.

2. Acquaintance; habitude.

They say any mortals may enjoy the most intimate famililrdies with these gentle spirits. Pope.

To familiarize. v. a. [familiariz, Fr.]

1. To make familiar; to make easy by habitude; to make common.

To bring down from a state of distant superiority.

The genius smiled upon me with a look of compassion and affability that familiarized him to my imagination, and at once dispelled all fear and apprehensions. Addition's Spectator.

FAMILIARITY. adv. [from familiar.]

1. Unceremoniously; with freedom like that of long acquaintance.

Because that I familiarly sometimes
Do use you for my fool, and cast you, with your sawdy is, let us with our love.

There is a sort of familiarity of John of Gaunt as if he had been oon brother to him; and I'll be sworn he was never seen but once in the Tillyard, and then he broke his head. Shak.

Shakespeare's. The governor came to us, and, after salutations, said familiarly, that he was come to visit us, and called for a chair and sat down. Bacon.

2. Commonly; frequently; with the unconcernedness or easiness of long custom.

Lesser mists and fogs than those which covered Greece with so long darkness, do familiarly present our scenes with as great alterations in the sun and moon. Raleigh's History.

3. Easily; without solemnity; without formality.

Horace still charms with graceful negligence, and without method talks as into sense; Will, like a friend, comes and sits lightly.

The true notions in the easiest way. Pope.

FAMILY. n. s. [famila, Lat. famile, Fr.]

1. Those who live in the same house; household.

Who in the commonwealth, where I am. Young.

The night made little impression on myself; but I cannot answer for my whole family; for my wife procured on me to take what he pleased. Swift.

2. Those that descend from one common progenitor; a race; a tribe; a generation.

Of Derham was the family of the Libraries. Nym.

3. A course of descent; a genealogy.

If thy mother but ignoble blood
Has crept through scandrels ever since the flood,
Go, and complain thy family is young,
Nor own thy fathers have been fools so long. Pope.

4. A class; a tribe; a species.

There are two great families of things, sublunary and mercurial, inflammable and not inflammable, mature and crude, oily and watery. Bacon.

FAMILY. n. s. [famile, Fr. famile, Lat.]

Scarcity of food; dearth; distress for want of victuals.
Our castle's strength

Will laugh a siege to scorn; here let them lie,
'Till famine and the age eat them up. Shaksp.

Famines have not been of late observed to be rare, partly because of the industry of mankind, partly by those supplies that come by sea, but principally by the goodness of God. Halle.

This city began to be crowded before
But from the lake receiv'd its daily store;
Which now shut up, and millions crowded here,
Famine will soon in multitudes appear. Dryden.

To FAMISH. v. a. [from fames, Lat. fami-
1. To kill with hunger; to starve; to destroy by want of food.
What, did he marry me to famish me? Shaksp.

The pains of famish'd Tantalus he'll feel,
And Sisyphus, that labours up the hill
The rowing rock in vain; and curst Eroton's wheel.

2. To kill by depravation or denial of any thing necessary to life. Milton uses it with of.

Thin air.
Above the clouds will pine its elements, gross,
And famish'd breath if not of bread. Milton.

To FAMISH. v. n. To die of hunger; to suffer extreme hunger.
You are all resolved rather to die than to famish. Shaksp.

FAMISHMENT. n. s. [from famish.] The pain of hunger; want of food.
A pieceth, thou didn't on thy gut bestow
Full ninety millions; yet, when this was spent,
Ten millions still remained to thee; which thou,
Feeding to suffer thirst and famishment, in Poison'd potsh'n drink'st. Hakewill on Prov'd.

FAMOSITY. n. s. [from famous.] Renown;
celebrity.

FAMOUS. adj. [fameur, Fr. famousus, Lat.]
1. Renowned; celebrated; much talked of and praised.
Henry the Fifth, too famous to live long
England ne'er lost a king of so much worth. Shak.

There rose up before Moses two hundred and fifty princes of the assembly, famous in the congregation, men of renown. Num. xvi. 2.
She became famous among women: for they executed judgment upon her. Exek. xxxii. 10.

Pyrene was only famous for counterfeiting all lost things, to sell them more dearly, a seller, rogue; together by the ears, and swine tumbling in the mire; whereupon he was surmised Hypocrates.

I shall be nam'd among the famousetest
Of women, sung at solemn festivals. Milton's Agon.

Many, besides myself, have heard our famous Waller own, that he derived the harmony of his numbers from the Godfrey of Bulloign, turned into English by Fairfax. Dryden.

2. It has sometimes a middle signification, and imports fame whether for good or ill.
Mencrates and Menas, famous pyrreus.
Make the sea serve them. Shaksp. Ant. and Cleop.

FAMOUSLY. adv. [from famous.] With great renown; with great celebration.
Then this land was famously enriched
With politick grave counsel; then the king
Had virtuous uncles to protect his grace. Shaksp.

They looked on the particulars as things famous only spoken of and believed, and worthy to be recorded and read. Grew's Can.

FAMOUSNESS. n. s. [from famous.] Celebrity; great fame.

FAN. n. s. [ranaus, Lat.]
1. An instrument used by ladies to move the air and cool themselves.

Vol. I.
fan

I have always had a fancy, that learning might be made a play and recreation to children. Locke.

3. Taste; idea; conception of things.

The idea of the Substance is very near, and built with a pretty fancy. Addison.

4. Image; conception; thought.

How now, my lord, why do you keep alone? Shakesp.; Macbeth.

5. Inclination; liking, fondness.

His fancy lay extremely to travelling. L'Estrange.

For you, fair Hermia, look you arm yourself, To fit your fancies to your father's will: Or else else laid you up upon a show, To death, or to a vow of single life. Shakesp.

A resemblance in humour or opinion, a fancy, for the same business or diversion, is a ground of affection. Collier.

6. In Shakespeare it signifies love.

Tell me where is fancy bred, Or in the heart, or in the head? How begot, how nourished? It is engender'd in the eyes, With gazng fled, and fancy free.

In the cradle where we lies. Shakesp. Mer. of Ven.

7. Caprice; humour; whim.

True worth shall gain me that, it may be said Desert, not fancy, enter a woman's bed. Dryden.

The system of Egypt kept a good correspondence with the Jacobites towards the head of the Nile, for fear they should take a fancy to turn the conversation that way, that they might not.

One that was just entering upon a long journey, took up a fancy of putting a trick upon Mercury. Addison.

8. False notion.

The altering of the scent, colour, or taste of fruit, by infusion, mixing, or cutting into the bark or root of the tree, herb, or flower, any coloured, aromatical, or medicinal substance, but fancies: the cause is, for those things have passed their period, and nourish not. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

9. Something that pleases or entertains without real use or value.

London-pride is a pretty fancy for borders. Morthimer.

To FANCY. v. r. [from the noun.] To imagine; to believe without being able to prove.

All are not always bound to hate and punish the true enemies of religion, much less any whom they may fancy to be so: all are always oblig'd to love their true friends, and to pray for their true enemies.

If our search has reached no farther than similar and superficial, we rather fancy than know, and are not yet penetrated into the inside and reality of the thing; but content ourselves with what our imaginations furnish us with. Locke.

To FANCY. v. a.

1. To pourtray in the mind; to image to himself; to imagine.

But he whose noble genius is allow'd, Who with stretch'd pinions soars above the crowd; Who can clothe with manly deeds, He whom I fancy, but can ne'er express. Dryden.

2. To like; to be pleased with.

Ninus both admiring her judgment and valour, together with her person and external beauty, fancied her so strongly, as, neglecting all princely respects, he took her from her husband. Raphael.

It is a little hard that the queen cannot desist from this game in whatever manner she pleases to fancy. Swift.

FANCY-MONGER, n. s. [from fancy.] One who deals in tricks of imagination.

It is a little known that the queen cannot desist from this practice in whatever manner she pleases to fancy. Swift.

FANCY-SICK. adj. [fancy and sick] One whose imagination is unsound; one whose distemper is in his own mind.

To be not necessary, but opinion, that makes men miserable; and when we come to fancysick, we have no measure. Shakesp. Hamlet.

FAND for found. It is retained in Scotland.

This when as true by tryald he out fand, He had to open with his brazen speare. Scot. Dryden's Enid.

To fancies repair'd, and humble rites Perform'd to Thor and Woden, fabled gods, Who with their vot'ries in one miniat. Shakesp. A sacred fancy in Egypt's fruitful lands, How from the Theban mountain's rocky Tomb. Tickell.

The fables are ravish'd from the industrious swains, From men their cities, and from gods their fancies. Pope.

FANFARONADE. n. s. [from Fanfaronade.] A blusterer; a boaster of more than he can perform.

There are fanciflous in the trials of wit too, as well in feasts of arms; and none so forward to engage in argument or discourse as those that are least able to go through with it. Dryden.

FANFARONADE. n. s. [from Fanfaronade.] A blusterer; a boaster of more than he can perform.

The bishop copied this proceeding from the fanciflous of Monsieur Bailleurs. Swift.

To FANG, n. v. a. [from Fang.] To seize; to grip; to clutch, To ravish; Fang is yet used in Devonshire. Shakesp. Timon.

Fang. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. The long tusks of a boar or other animal by which the prey is seized and held; any thing like 'em.

Here feel we but the penalty of Adam, The season's difference; as the keen fangs And shrill chiding of the Winter's wind; Which, when it tincts and blows upon my body, Ev'n till I shrink with cold; I smile and say, This is no matter. Shakesp. As you like it.

Some creatures have overlong or outgrowing teeth, where boars, bulls; or tusks; as bears, pikes, salmons, and dogs, though less.

Bacon's Nat. Hist.

Prepar'd to fly, The fatal fang drove deep within his thigh, And cut the nerves; the nerves no more sustain The bulk; the bulk unprou'd, falls headlong on his temple. Dryden.

Then charge, provoke the lion to the rage Of fangs and claws, and, stooping from your form, Kivet the panting savage to the ground. Add.

2. The nails; the talons.

3. Any shoot or other thing by which hold is taken.

The protruberant Fangs of the yucca are to be treated like the Prickles. F. E. Kalendar.

FANGED. adj. [from Fang.] Furnished with fangs or long teeth; furnished with any instruments of destruction, which can be exercised in imitation of fangs.

My two schoolfellow, Whom I will trust as I will adds Fang'd, That friendship in the world is, Shakesp. Hamlet.

Not Seychelles, nor fierce Daunens, onward rush With half the speed, nor half so swift retreat, In chagus, fang'd with scythes, they scour the field, Drive through our wedg'd battalions with a whirl, And strew a dreadful harvest on the plain. Philips.

FANGE, n. s. [from Fang.] A voyager, Sax. to attempt; Skinnet. Silly attempt; tripling scheme. It is never used, or rarely, but in contempt with the epithet new; as, new fangles, new fangleness.

FANGLED. adj. [from Fangle.] This word seems to signify gawy; ridiculously shewy; vainly decorated; new fangled, is therefore new-fashioned; dressed out in new decorations.

Quick wits be in desire new fangled, and in purpose unsound. Aeschyl.

A book! oh, rare one! Ne'er be, as in this fangled world, a garment Nobler than that it covers. Shakesp. Cymbeline.

FANGLESS. adj. [from Fangle.] Toothless; without teeth.

The king hath wasted all his roads On late offenders, that he now doth lack The very instruments of chastisement; So that his power, like to a fangless lion, May offer, but not hold. Shakesp. Henry IV.

FANGOT. n. s. A quantity of wares; as raw silk, &c., containing from one to two hundred weight three quarters. Dict.

FANNEL. n. s. [from Fan.] A sort of ornament like a scarf, worn about the left arm of a mass-priest when he officiates. Dict.

FANNER. n. s. [from Fan.] One that plays a fan.

I will send unto Babylon fannera that shall fan her. Jeremiah.

FANTASIED. adj. [from fancy.] Filled with fancies or imaginations.

As I travail'd hither through the land, I found the people strangely fantastick. Shak.

FANTASM. n. s. [See Phantasm.] A thing not real, but appearing to the imagination.

FANTA'STICAL. adj. [fantastique, Fr.] FANTA'STICK. { from fancy.]

1. Irrational; bred only in the imagination.

The delight that a man takes from another's sin, can be nothing else but a fantastical, pretentional complacency, arising from that which he really has not feeling of. South.

2. Subsisting only in the fancy; imaginary.

Phantasma, or phantastic fants.

Are less than horrible imaginings:

My thought, whose lurking yet is but a fantastical, Stakes so my single state of man, that function Is another'd in sunshine; and nothing is,

But what is not.

Men are so possessed with their own fancies, that they take them for oracles; and are arrived to some extraordinary revelations of truth, when indeed they do but dream dreams, and amuse themselves with the fantastick ideas of a busy imagination. Decay of Pity.

3. Unreal; apparent only; having the nature of phantoms which only assume visible forms occasionally

Are ye fantastick, or that indeed

Which outwardly ye show? Shakesp. Macbeth.

4. Uncertain; unsteady; irregular.
Not happiness can I, nor misery feel, From anything, but from my imagination. Prior.

5. Whimsical; fanciful; capricious; humorous; indulgent of one’s own imagination.

They put such words in the mouths of one of those fantastical mind-infected people, that children and Indians call each other, Sidney.

I’ll knit it up in silken strings, With twenty odd conceits true love-knots: To be fantastick, may become a youth. Of greater time than Shakespeare. Ten Cents. Of Ver. Dumddur is provided with an impetuous, expensive, and fantastick mistress; to whom he retires from the conversation of a discreet and affectionate wife. Tattle.

We are apt to think our medallists a little fantastick in any parts of her fantasies, they set upon their coins, without any regard to the metal of which they are composed. Addison.

FANTASTICALLY. adv. [from fantastical.]
1. By the power of imagination.

2. Capriciously; humorously; unsteadily.

England is so likely to supply her scriptre so fantastickly borne, By a vain, giddy, shallow, humorous youth, That fear attains not. Shakespeare. Henry V.

3. Whimsically; in compliance with imagination.

One cannot so much as fantastickly chance, even or odd, he thinks not why. Grew’s Comet.

FANTASTICNESS. n.s. [from fantastical.]
1. Humourousness; mere compliance with fancy.

2. Whimsicalness; unreasonable.

I dare not assume to myself to have put him out of conceit with this, by having convinced him of the fantasticalness of it. Titilson. Pref.

3. Caprice; unsteadiness.

FANTASY. n.s. [from fantaisie, Fr. phantasie, Lat. fantasia.]
1. Fancy; imagination; the power of imag.

2. Idea; image of the mind.

And with the sug’ry sweet thereof allure,
Chaste ladies ears to fantasie impure. Hubberd.

3. Humour; inclination.

I wish that both you and others would cease from interpreting the Scriptures to your fantas-

FANTOM. n.s. [See PHANTOM.] Something not real, but appearing to the imagination.

FAP. adj. Fuddled. drunk. It seems to have been a cant word in the time of Shakespeare.

The gentleman had drunk himself out of his...
The enter'd in roe of gold and pearl,
The forced title running for the king. Shakesp. (1603)
FARCE, n.s. [from the verb] or from farcr, Cr. to mock. A dramatick representation written without regularity, and studded with wild and ludicrous conceits. There is yet a lower sort of poetry and painting, which is esteemed a farce for a farce is that in poetry which grotesque is in a picture: the persons and actions of a farce are all unnatural, and the manner false; that is, inconsistent with the characters of the persons; grotesque painting is the just resemblance of this. Dryden's Dissecting.

Far should be to force. Prior. They often call a farce, because the irregularity of the plot should answer to the extravagance of the characters, which they say this play has, and that there is no farce. Gage.
FARCICAL, adj. [from farce.] Belonging to a farce; appropriated to a farce. They deny the characters to be farcical, because they are actually in nature. Gage.
FARCRY, n.s. [from Cary, Ital. farcino, Fr.] The revenge of those who have been slighted. It is probably of curious etymology.
FARDILO, n.s. [fardello, Ital. fardeun, Fr.] A bundle; a little pack.

Let us to the king: there is that in this fardeun will make him scratch his beard. Shakesp. (1603)
To fare, r. n. [from, Saxon, varen, Dut.] 1. To go; to pass; to travel. At last, resolving forward still to fare. Until the blustering storm is overblown. Fairy Q. His spirits, which are subject to our sight, Like to a man in shew and shape he farced. Fairf. So on he fare, and to the border comes. Of Eden. What! in the Prince's Parl. Lost. Sadly they far'd along the sea-beat shore; Still heav'd their hearts. Pope.
2. To be in any state good or bad. So bids the well to fare thy friendless heart. Fairy Queen. A stubborn heart shall fare evil at the last. Eccles. Well fare the hand, which to our humble sight Presents that beauty. Walker. So in this throng bright Sacharias far'd, Oppress'd with a hard fortune to be her guard. Wycher. As ships, though never so accomplished, fall Foul in a tempest on their admiral. Walker. So fares the stag among th' envenom'd hounds; Repells their force, and wounds returns for wounds. Denham.
But as a barren, that, in foul weather, Tous'd by the hard wind, froward and together, Is brain'd and beaten to and fro, and Knows not which to turn him to; So far'd the knight between two foes, And knew not which of them to oppose. Holidome. If you as I do, you may fare as I fare. E. Franklin. Thus fares the queen, and thus her fury blows Amidst the crowd. Dryden's Absalom. English ministers never fare so well as in a time of war with a foreign force, which diverts the private feuds and animosities of the nation. Addison
Some are comforted that it will be a common calamity, and they shall fare no worse than their neighbours. Swift.
3. To proceed in any manner of consequence good or bad. Thus it fareth when too much desire of contradiction causes our speeches rather to pass by number than to stay for weight. Husk. So far's it with truth, falsehood confounded. Milton.
4. To happen to any one well or ill: with it preceding in an impersonal form. When the hand finds itself well warned and covered, let it refuse the trouble of feeding the mouth, or give the meal, till the body be starved or killed, and then shall we see how it will fare with the hand. South.
FAR

If chance the radiant sun with farwell sweet
Extend his evening beam, the fields receive,
The birds their notes renew, and bleating herds
Attach their joy, that hill and valley ring. Milton.

As in this grove I took my last farewell,
As on the path I fell. Dryden.

Before I take my farewell of this subject, I shall advise the author for the future to speak his meaning more plain, but natural if they determine.

2. It is sometimes used as an adjective; leave-taking.

Several ingenions writers, who have taken their leave of the publick in farwell papers, will not give over so, but not to appear again; though perhaps under another form, and with a different title.

Spectator.

FARINAceous, adj. [from farina, Lat.] Mealy; tasting like meal or flower of corn.

The poorer food of the vegetable kingdom for mankind is taken from the farinaea or mealy seeds of some culineraeous plants; as oats, barley, wheat, rice, yea, maize, panick, and millet. Arboles in Alimenta.

FARM. n. s. [ferme, Fr. propm provision, provision.

1. Ground let to a tenant; ground cultivated by another man upon condition of paying part of the profit to the owner or landlord.

Teaching their particular complaint for reducing lands and farms to their ancient rents, it could not be done without a parliament. Hayward.

2. The state of lands let out to the culture of tenants.

The lords of land in Ireland do not use to set out their land in farm, for term of years, to their tenants; but only from year to year, and some during pleaders. Spencer in Ireland.

It is great wilderness in landlords who make no longer or fewer unto their tenants. Spencer.

To FARM. r. a. [from the noun.]

1. To let out to tenants at a certain rent.

We are enforc'd to our royal realm, the revenue whereof shall furnish us for our affairs in hand. Shakesp. Rich. II.

2. To take at a certain rate.

They received of the banks eighteent two shillings for thirty, which the Earl of Cornwall farmed of the king. Camden's Remains.

3. To cultivate land.

FARMER. n. s. [fermer, Fr. or from farm.

1. One who cultivates hired ground.

Thou hast seen a farmer's dog bark at a beggar, and the creature run from the cur; there thou might'st behold the great image of authority; a dog's obeyed in office. Shakesp.

2. One who cultivates ground, whether his own or another's.

Nothing is of greater prejudice to the farmer than the stocking of his land with cattle larger than it will bear. Mortimer's Husbandry.

FARmost. n. s. [superlativ of far] Most distant; remotest.

A spacious cave, within its farmost part, Was hewn & fashioned by laborious art,
Through the hill's hollow sides. Dryden's Xen.

FARNESS. n. s. [from far.] Distance; remoteness.

Their nearness on all quarters to the enemy, and their fartrue from timely succour by their friends, have forced the commanders to call forth the uttermost number of able hands to fight. Carew.

FARRAGOUS. adj. [from farrago, Lat.] Formed of different materials.

Being a confusion of knives and forks, and a farraginous concurrence of all conditions, temperers, sexes, sexes, and ages, it is but natural if their determinations be monstrous, and many ways inconsistent with truth. Brown's Vulg. Err.
FASCIA. n. s. [Lat.] A fillet; a bandage.

FASCICATED. adj. [from fascinat.] Bound with fillets; tied with a bandage.

FASCINATION. n. s. [from fascinat.] Bandage; the act or manner of binding diseased parts.

Three especial sorts of fascination, or rowling, have the virtues of our profession commended to posterity.

Wiens.

To FASCINATE, v. a. [fascino, Lat.] To bewitch; to enchant; to influence in some wicked and secret manner.

There be none of the affections which have been noted to fascinate or bewitch, but love and envy.

Such a fascinating sin this is, as allows men no liberty of consideration.

Decay of Piety.

FASCINATION, n. s. [from fascinate.] The power or art of bewitching; enchantment; unseen inexplicable influence.

He had such a crafty and bewitching fashion, both by what he said and by what he did, and as if he had a kind of fascination and enchantment to those that saw him or heard him.

Bacon.

The men having old rags, or such like ugly things, upon their fairest horses, and other goodly creatures, to secure them against fascination.

Wallace.

There is a certain heathwray or fascination in words, which makes them operate with a force beyond what we can naturally give an account of.

South.

FASCINE, n. s. [Fr.] A faggot. Military cant.

The Black Prince passed many a river without the help of pontoon, and filled a ditch with faggots as successfully as the generals of our times do with fascines.

Addison's Spectator.

FASCIOUS, adj. [fascinum, Lat.] Caused or acting by witchcraft, or enchantment. Not in use.

I shall not discuss the possibility of fascious diseases, farther than refer to experimented.

Hervey.

FASHION, n. s. [facion, Fr. facies, Lat.]

1. Form; make; state of any thing with regard to its outward appearance.

The Academies groved at our solennities in erecting churches, at their form and fashion, at the statelessness of them and costliness, and at the opinion which we have of them.

Holker.

The fashion of his countenance was altered.

Stand these poor people's friend.

-I will,

Or let me lose the fashion of a man.

Shakespeare.

2. The make or cut of cloaths.

I'll be at charges for a looking-glass, and entertain a score or two of tailors to study fashion to adorn my body.

Shakespeare.

You, sir, I entertain for one of my hundred; only, I do not like the fashion of your garments.

Shakespeare.

3. Manner; sort; way.

For that I love your daughter in such a righteous fashion as I do,

Perforce against all checks, reluctance, and manners, I must advance.

Shakespeare. Merry Wives of Windsor.

Black Casker by the sleeve.

And he will, after his soar fashion, tell you

What hath proceeded.

Shakespeare. Julius Caesar.

The commissioners either pulled down or defaced all images in churches; and in such unseasonable and unseasoned fashion, as if it had been done in hostility against them.

Huyghend.

4. Custom operating upon dress, or any domestic ornaments.
FAS

Not tasted, nor had appetite; that fast

To virtue I set foot, or count part

Of what I suffer here.

Milton.

Happy and innocent were the ages of our forefathers, who broke their fasts with herbs and roots; and when they were permitted flesh, eat it only dressed with hunger and fire.

Taylor.

She's gone unkindly, and refused to fast.

One glance to feed me for so long a fast, Dryden.

2. Religious mortification by abstinence; religious humiliation.

We humble ourselves before God this day, not merely by the outward solemnities of a fast, but by affecting our souls as well as bodies for our sins.

Nor pray'st not fast its stubborn pulse restrain:
Nor tears, for ages, taught to flow in vain.

Pope.

Fast. adj. [past, Sax.]

1. Firm; immovable.

He by his strength setteth fast mountains.

Psalm lv. 6.

Last, the tire and his three sons,
With their four wives; and God made fast the door.

Milton.

Be sure to find,
What I have foretold thee, many a hard essay
Of dangers and adversities, and pains
Lest thou of Israel's scripture get fast time.

Milton.

2. Strong; impregnable.

England, by report of the chronicles, was invested with robbers and outlaws; which lurking in woods and fast places, used often to break forth to rob and spoil.

Savage, in Ireland.

3. Fixed; adhering; not separable.

Lodronsius, with the breaking in of the horsemen, was driven into a marsh; where, after that he, being almost fast in the deep mud, had done the uttermost, he yielded himself.

Ames.

A man in a boat, who tugs at a rope that's fast to a ship, looks as if he resolved to draw the ship to the temple.

Swift.

4. Deep; sound.

I have seen her rise from her bed, take paper, fold it, seal it, and again return to her bed; yet all this while in a most fast sleep.

Shakespeare, Mac.

5. Firm in adherence.

Quick wits be in desire new-fangled; in purpose, unconstant; light to promise any thing, ready to forget every thing, both benefit and injury; and thereby neither fast to friend, nor fearful to foe.

Ascham's Schoolmaster.

6. [from fitst, Welsh, quick.] Speedy; quick; swift. It may be doubted whether this sense be not always adverbial.

This work goeth fast on, and prospereth.

Spenser, En. v. 8.

Skill comes so slow, and life so fast doth fly,
We learn so little, and forget so much.

Dacier.

The prince governeth, fast to be a man, and is of a sweet and excellent disposition; it would be a stain upon you if you should misdoubt, or suffer him to be mistrusted.

Bacon to Villiers.

7. Fast and loose. Uncertain; variable; inconstant; deceitful.

A rope of fair-pearl, which now hiding, now hidden by the hair, did, as it were, play at fast and loose each with other, giving and receiving richness.

Sidney.

If she perceived by his outward cheer,
That any would love by talk bewray,
Sometimes she heard him, sometimes stopt her ear.

And play'd fast and loose the live-long day.

Fairfax.

The folly and wickedness of men, that think to play fast and loose with God Almighty.

L'Estrange.

If they coveted, yet by the next conflict with other atoms they might be separated again; and so on in an eternal vicissitude of fast and loose, without ever consociating into the huge condensate bodies of planets.

Bentley.

FAST. n. a. [from fast.]

1. Firmly; immovably.

Bind the boy, which you shall find with me, to Fast to the chair.

Shakespeare, King John.

This leaf, whose own self they have often seen. Haply when they have judg'd me fast asleep.

Shakespeare.

2. Closely; nearly. In this sense it is united with some other word, as by or beside.

Barbarossa left fourteen galleys in the lake; but the tacking, sails, oars, and ordnance he had lay'd up in the castle fast by.

Knolles.

Sirly brook'd Fast by the oracle of God.

Milton's Par. Lost.

Let purling streams be in her fancy seen, and Bow'ry meads, and vales of cheerful green; And in the midst of deathless groves

Soft sighing wishes fyr,

And smiling hopes fast by.

And just beyond I ever-laughing loves.

Dryden.

Fast by the throne obsequious fame resides.

And wealth incessant in her golden veins.

Pope.

Well-known to me the palace you inquire;
For fast beside it dwells my honour'd seat.

Pope.

Here o'er the party-knight the marble weeps,
And fast beside him once fear'd Edward sleepe.

Pope.

3. Swiftly; nimbly.

I would gave a thousand pound I could run as fast as thou canst.

Davies.

There streams a spring of blood so fast.

From those deep wounds, as all emburr'd the face.

Swift.

The heaviest must the swiftest course has gone.

As clocks run fastest when most lead.

Pope.

You are to look upon me as one going fast out of the world.

Swift.

4. Frequently.

Being tried only with a promise, he gave full credit to that promise, and still gave evidence of his fidelity as fast as occasions were offered.

Hammond's Prat. Cathch.

To FASTEN. n. a. [from fast.]

1. To make fast; to make firm; to fix immovably.

A mantle coming under her right arm, and covering most of that side, had no fastening on the left.

Sidney.

Moses reared up the Tabernacle, and fastened its sockets.

Exodus.

By chance a ship was fastened to the shore.

Which from old Chisum king Osirisborne. Dryden.

2. To hold together; to cement; to link.

She had all magnetick force alone.

To draw and fasten several parts in one.

Donne.

In the sea-coast of Iudia there is no iron, which files not like a bird unto those mountains, and therefore their ships are fastened with wood.

Brown.

3. To affix; to conjoin.

The words Whig and Tory have been pressed to the service of many successions of parties, with very different ideas fastened to them.

Swift's Examiner.

4. To stamp; to impress; to fix.

Thinking, by this face,
To fasten in their thoughts that they have courage;
But 'tis not so.

Shakespeare, Julius Caesar.

5. To unite inseparably.

Their oppressors have changed the scene, and contrived the opinions in their true shape, upon which they could not so well fasten their dislike.

Dryden.

6. To lay on with strength.

Could he fasten a blow, or make a thrust, when not suffered to approach?

Dryden's En. Dedication.

To FASTEN. n. a. To fix himself.

This pacity of blood may be observed in other sorts of lizards, in frogs, and some fishes; and therefore an horse-deer will hastily fasten upon a fish.

Brown's Full. Err.

FAT

He fasten'd on my neck; and bellow'd out.

As he'd borne heaven.

Swift.

The wrong judgment that misleads us, and makes the will often fasten on the worse side, lies in misreporting on comparisons.

Locke.

FASTEN. n. a. [from fasten.]

One that makes fast or firm.

Faster. n. a. [from fast.]

He who abstains from food.

Ainsworth.

Fast-handed. adj. [fast and hand.] Avaricious; close-handed; close-fisted; covetous.

The king being fast-handed, and both to part with a second dowry, prevailed with the prince to be contracted with the princess Catharine.

Bacon.

FASTIDIOUS. n. a. [from fastidious.]

Disdainfulness; contemptuousness.

Swift.

FASTIDIOUS. adj. [from fastidious, Lat. fastidiosus, fastidieu, Fr.] Disdainful; squamish; delicate to a vice; insolently nice.

Reasons plainly delivered, and always after one manner, especially with fine and fastidious minds, enter but with a very small degree, and are not yet an acceptable thing.

Swift.

Let their fastidious vain
Commission of the brain,
Rum and sage, avarice and condescend,
They were not made for thee, less thou for them.

Ben Jonson.

A squamish fastidious neness, in meats and drinks, must be cured by starving.

Swift.

All hopes, raised upon the promises of supposed kindness of the fastidious and fallacious great ones of the world, shall fail.

Swift.

SUCH.

FASTIDIOUSLY. adv. [from fastidious.]

Disdainfully; contemptuously; squamishly.

Their sole talent is pride and scorn: they lock fastidiously, and speak disdainfully, concluding, if a man shall fall short of their expectations in his knees and elbows, he is much inferior to them in the furniture of his heart.

Gourn of the Tongue.

FASTIGIATED. adj. [fastigatus, Lat.]

Roofed; narrowed up to the top.

Diet.

Fastingday. n. a. [fast and day.] Day of mortification by religious abstinence.

Do not call it a fasting-day, unless also it be a day of extraordinary devotion and of alms.

Taylor.

FASTNESS. n. a. [from fast.]

1. State of being fast.

2. Firmness; firm adherence.

Such as had given the king distaste, did contend by their forwardness to shew it was but their fastness to the former government, and that those affections ended with the time.

Bacon.

3. Strength; security.

All the places are cleared, and places of fastness laid open, which are the proper walls and castles of the Irish, as they were of the British in the times of Agriculture.

Donne.

The fore had left the fastness of their place, Prevail'd in light, and laid his men in charge.

Dryden.

4. A strong place; a place not easily forced.

If his adversary be not well aware of him, he encompasseth himself with a fastness, and holds out the siege with a new artillery.

Swift.

5. Closeness; conciseness; not diffusion.

Not used.

Bring his sistle from all loose grossness to such firm fastness in Latin, as in Deomethenes. Asham.

FASTOUS. adj. [fastosus, Lat. fastucur, fastuscent, Fr.] Proud; haughty.

Dict.

FAT. adj. [past, Sax.]

1. Fullled; plump; fleshy; the contrary to lean.
FAT

When Gods have hot backs, what shall poor men do? For me, I am here a Windsor stag, and the fattest, I think, t’th’ forest. Shaksp.

Let our wives
Appoint a meeting with this old fat fellow. Shak.

Th’ is a true thing to be fat and smooth.

L’Estrange.

Spare diet and labour will keep constitutions, where this disposition is the strongest, from being fat; you may see in an army forty thousand foot-soldiers without a fat man; and I dare affirm, that by plenty and rest twenty of the forty shall grow fat. Arbuthnot.

2. Coarse; gross; [fat, Fr.]

fat, a’c hurry drew. That this phrase an adult-rate age; Nay, added fat pollutions of our own, T‘ increases the steaming ordures of the stage. Dryden.

3. Dull.

O souls! in whom no heavy fire is found, Fat minds, and ever-groving on the ground. Dryden.

4. Wealthy; rich.

Some are allured to law, not on the contemplation of equity, but on the promising and pleasing thoughts of literatum terms, fat contentsions, and flowing fees. Milton.

These were terrible alarms to persons grown fat and wealthy by a long and successful imposture. South.

A fat benefice is that which so abounds with an estate and revenues, that a man may expend a great deal in delicacies of eating and drinking. Ayliff.

FAT. n. s. An oily and sulphurous part of the blood; deposited in the cells of the membrana adiposa, from the innumerable little vessels which are spread amongst them. The fat is to be found immediately under the skin in most parts of the body. There are two sorts of fat; one yellow, soft, and lax, easily melted; another firm, white, brittle, and not so easily melted, called suet or tallow. Some reckon the marrow of the bones for a third sort of fat. Quincy.

In this ointment the strangest and hardest ingredients to come by, are the mos upon the skull of a dead man unburied, and the fats of a boar and a bear, known by the effect of generation. Aventurin.

This membrane separates an oily liquid called fat: when the fibres are lax, and the aliment too redundant, great part of it is converted into this oily liquid, expelit ad alimentum. To F A T. r. a. [from the noun.] To make fat; to fatten; to make plump and fleshy with abundant food.

Oh how this villany
Doth fat me with the very thoughts of it! Shak.

Ere this
I should have fatted all the region kites With this slave’s offal. Shaksp. Homelst.

They fear such enemies as they take in the wars, that they may devoure them. Abbott.

The Caribbeans were wont to gild their children, on purpose to fat and eat them. Locke.

Cattle fattted by good pasture, after violent motion, sometimes die suddenly. Arbuthnot on Diet.

To FAT. r. n. To grow fat; to grow full fleshted.

Cave, he is well repaid;
He is lured up to fattting for his pains. Shaksp.

The one labours in his duty with a good conscience, the other, like a beast, but fattting up for the slaughter. L’Estrange.

An old ox fats as well, and is as good, as a young. Mortimer.

FAT. n. [fat, Sax. vatte, Dut. This is generally written rat.] A vessel in which any thing is put to ferment or be soaked.
FAT

Jubal was the father of all such as handle the harp and organ. Gen. iv. 21.

Father of verse.

6. The ecclesiastical writers of the first centuries.

Men make talk of the fathers, and magnify the fathers, and seem to make the authority of the fathers next to infallible; and yet expose them to contempt. Stillingfleet.

7. One who acts with paternal care and tenderness.

I was a father to the poor. Job, xlii. 16. He hath made me a father to Pharaoh, and lord of all his house. Gen. xl. 8.

8. The title of a popish confessor, particularly of a Jesuit.

Formal in apparel, in gait and countenance surely like a father. Shaks. There was a father of a convent, very much renowned for his piety and exemplary life; and as persons under any great affliction applied themselves to the most eminent confessors, our beautiful votary took the opportunity of confessing herself to this celebrated father. Addison.

From hence the name of Alban fathers come, and the long glories of majestic Rome. Dryden.

10. The appellation of the first person of the adorable Trinity.

The eternal Son of God esteemed it his meat and drink to do the will of his Father, and for his obedience alone obtained the greatest glory. Tyger.

11. The compellation of God as Creator.

We have one Father, even God. John viii. 41. Almighty, everlasting Father. Com. Pray.

FATHER-IN-LAW. n.s. [from father.] The father of one’s husband or wife.

I must make my father-in-law a visit with a great train and equipage. Addison’s Spect.

To FATHER. v. a.

1. To take; to adopt as a son or daughter. Ay, good youth, and rather father thee than master thee. Shakesp.

2. To supply with a father, of certain qualities.

I am no stronger than my sex. Being so father’d and so husbanded. Shak. J. Cesa. How light and portable my pain seems now, when that which makes me bend makes the king bow. He christed as I father’d. Shakesp. King Lear.

3. To adopt a composition.

Men of wit, often father’d what he writes. Swift.

4. To ascribe to any one as his offspring, or production; with an.

And lest we seem to father any thing upon them more than is their own, let them read. Hooker. My name was made use of by several persons, one of which was pleased to father me in a new set of productions. Swift.

5. Magical relations comprehend effects derived and fathered upon hidden qualities, whereof, from received grounds of art, no reasons are derived. Brown.

FATHERHOOD. n.s. [from father.] The character of a father; the authority of a father.

Who can abide, that against their own doctors, both of the middle and latest age, six whole books should by their fatherhoods of Trent be, under the pain of a curse, impiously estrayed upon God and his church? We might have had an entire notion of this fatherhood, or fatherly authority. Ex. xxi.

FATHERLESS. adj. [from father.] Wanting a father; destitute of a father.

Ye shall not afflict any widow, or fatherless child. Ex. xxi.

Our fatherless distress was left uncomted. Your widow’s doles likewise be unmet. Shakesp. The fatherless hath no friend. Son.

FATHERLINESS. n.s. [from father.] The tenderness of a father; parental kindness.

FATHERLY. adj. [from father.] Paternal; like a father; tender; protecting; careful.

Let me but move one question to thy daughter, And, by that fatherly and kindly power That you have in her, bid her answer truly. Shak. The part which describes the fire, I owe to the piety and fatherly affection of our monarch subjects to his command. Dryden.

FATHERLY. adv. In the manner of a father.

Thus Adam, fatherly displayed’d:
O execrable soul! so to aspire!
Above his brethren! Milton.

FATHOM. n.s. [pæm, Sax.]

1. A measure of length containing six feet, or two yards; the space to which a man can extend both arms.

The extent of this fathom, or distance between the extremity of the fingers of either hand upon expansion, is equal unto the space between the sole of the foot and crown. Bacon.

The arms spread cross in a straight line, and measured from the end of the long finger on one hand, to that of the other, a measure equal to the stature, is named a fathom. Holin.

2. It is the usual measure applied to the depth of the sea, when the line for sounding is called the fathom-line.

Dive into the bottom of the deep, Where fathom-line could not touch the ground, Milton.

3. Reach; penetration; depth of contrivance; compass of thought.

Another of his fathoms he have none To lead their business. Shakesp. Othello.

To FATHOM. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To encompass with the arms extended or encircling.

2. To reach, to master, to overcome.

Leave, leave to fathom such high points as these; Nor be ambitious, ere the time, to please. Dryden.

3. To sound; to try with respect to the depth.

So strong for weak heads to try the heights and fathoms the depths of his flights. Fenton.

Our depths who fathoms, Pope.

4. To penetrate into; to find the bottom or utmost extent as, if, I cannot fathom his design.

FATHOMLESS. adj. [from fathom.]

1. Of that which no bottom can be found.

2. Of that which the circumference cannot be embraced.

Will you with counters sum The vast proportion of his infinite; And buckle in a waste most fathomless, With spans and inches so diminutive. As fears and reasons? Shakesp. Troll, and Crestida.

FATDICING. adj. [fatidicus, L. fatidiqué, Fr.] Prophectick; having the power to foretell future events. Fowle.

The oak, of all other trees only fatidical, told them what a fearful unfortunate business this would prove. Howel.

FATIFFEROUS. adj. [fattifer, Lat.] Deadly; mortel; destructive. Diet.

FATIGABLE. adj. [fatigo, Lat.] Easily wearied; susceptible of weariness.

To FATTIGE. v. a. [fatigo, Lat.] To weary; to fatigue; to tire; to exhaust with labour; to oppress with lassitude. Not in use.

By and by the din of war’gan to pierce His ready sense, when straight his doubled spirit Resilient to what in flesh was fATIGed. And to the battle came he. Shak. Coriol. mat.

FATIGUE. n.s. [fatigue, Fr. fatige, Lat.]

1. Weariness; lassitude.

To FATIGUE. v. a. [fatigc, Fr. fatige, Lat.] To tire; to weary; to harass with toil; to exhaust with labour.

The man who struggles in the fight, Fathigues left arm as well as right. Prior.

FATKIDNEYED. adj. [fat and kidney.]

Fat: by way of reproach or contempt. Peace, ye fatkined’d rascal! what a bawling dust thou keep! Shallot. Henry IV.

FATTING. n.s. [from fat.] A young animal fed fat for the slaughter.

The calf and the young lion, and the fatting shall lie down together, and a little child shall lead them. Is. xi. 6.

FATNESS. n.s. [from fat.]

1. The quality of being fat, plump, or full-fed.

2. Fat; grease; fullness of flesh.

And by his side rode loutiousome glutony, Deformed creature, on a filthy swine; His belly was upsworn with luxury, And eke with fatness swollen were his eyes. FAiry Queen.

3. Uncutious or greasy matter.

Earth and water, mingled by the help of the sun, gather a nitrous fatness. Bacon’s Nat. Hist.

4. Oleaginousness; slimness; uncutiousness.

But the olive-tree said unto them, Should I leave my fatness wherewith me they honour God and man, and go to be promoted over the trees? Judg.

By reason of the fatness and hardiness of the ground, Egypt did not produce metals good pitch, and some fruits. Arbathe.

5. Fertility; fruitfulness.

6. That which causes fertility.

When around The clouds drop fats, in the middle sky The dew suspended staid, and left unmoist The executable glebe. Philips.

Vappors and clouds feed the plants of the earth with the balm of dewes and the fatness of showers. Bentle.

To FATTEN. v. a. [from fat.]

1. To feed; to make fleshly; to plump with fat.

Frequent blood-letting, in small quantities, often increases the force of the organs of digestion, and fatness and increaseth the distemper. Arbathe.

2. To make fruitful.

Town of stuff to fatten land. Lib. Lond. margin.

Doxe not, on thy life, Touch aught of mine; This falthcun else, not thither withstand: These hostile fields shall fatten with thy blood. Drured.

3. To feed grossly; to increase.
FAV

Obscene Oromes
Conveys his whale to Tyber's hungry shores.
And fattens Italy with foreign whores.

Dreyden.

To FATTEN. v. n. [from fat.] To grow fat; to be pampered; to grow fleshy.
All agree to spoil the public good,
And villains laden with the brave man's labour.
Owey.
Apollo check'd my pride, and made me feed
My fatt'ning flocks, not dare beyond the field.
Dreyden.

Yet then this little spot of earth well fill'd,
A numerous family with plenty fill'd,
The good old man and th'irritate housewife spent
Their days in peace, and fatten'd with content;
Enjoy'd the dregs of life, and liv'd to see
A nation's de-crescent and a wealth unseen;
Tygers and wolves shall in the ocean breed,
The whale and dolphin fatten on the mead,
And every element exchange its Kind,
When trying honesty in courts we find.
Granville.

FATUOUS. adj. [fatuus, Lat.] 1. Stupid; foolish; feeble of mind.
We pity or laugh at those fatuous extravagant,
While yet ourselves have a considerable dose of what makes them so.
Glan.
2. Impotent; without force; illusionary; ad
luding to an ignis fatuus.
And when that flame finds combustible earth,
Theuece fatuous fires and meteors take their birth.
Denham.

FATUITY. n. s. [fatuité, Fr. from fatuus.]
Foolishness; weakness of mind; morbid feebleness of intellect.
It had argued a very short sight of things, and extreme fatuity of mind in me, to blind my own hands at their request.
King Charles.
These symptoms were so high in some as to pro duce a sort of fatuity of mind.
Arbuthnot.

FATWITTERED. adj. [fat and aet.] Heavy; dull; stupid.
There are so fatwittered with drinking old sack and unbottoming thee after supper, and sleeping upon benches in the afternoon, that thou hast forgetten.
Shakespeare. Henry IV.

FATTY. adj. [from fat.]
Uncountous; oleaginous; greasy; partaking of the nature of fat.
The like cloud, if oily or fatty, will not dis charge; not because it sticketh faster, but because air preyeth upon water, and flame and fire upon oil.
The gourd
And thirsty cucumber, when they receive
The approaching fumes, with revulsion
Her fatty liberis, and with tendril creep
Diverse, detesting contact.
The common symptoms of the unmitrated scurry are, a saline taste in the throat, and a distillate juice, sometimes with a fatty substance like a thin skin a-top.
Arbuthnot on Alam.

FAUCET. n. s. [faucet, Fr. fauces, Lat.]
The pipe inserted into a vessel to give vent to the liquor, and stopp'd up by a peg or spigot. It is sometimes improperly written fassou.
You can't put a good wholesome in a fassou in hearing a cause between an orange-wife and a fassou-seller, and adjourned a controversy of three years to a second audience.
Shakespeare.
If you are sent down to draw drink, and find it will not run, blow strongly into the fassou, and it will immediately pour into your mouth.
Swift.

FAUCON. s. [See FAUCON]
A crooked sword.
A stately torch, whose top a trumpet bore;
A soldier's faucion, and a scavanger's tool.
Dreyden.

FAUPEL. n. s. [Fr.]
The fruit of a species of the palm-tree.

FAVILLOUS. adj. [favilla, Lat.]
Consisting of ashes.

FAU.

As to foretelling of strangers, from the fungous particles about the wicks of the candle, it only signifieth a moistness about them, hindering the avolution of light and the luminous particles.
Brown.

Faulcon.
See FALCON.

FALCÓN.
See FALCON.

FAULT. n. s. [faute, faute. Fr. faltar.]
To be deficient; Spanish. The is sometimes sounded, and sometimes mute. In conversation it is generally suppressed.

1. Offence: a slight crime; somewhat liable to censure: a regret.
The prophet chuseth rather to charge them with the fault of making a law unto themselves, than the crime of transgressing a law which God had made.
Dryden.
He finds no fault with their opinion about the tree God, but only that it was not clear and distinct.
Swift.
He that bet conceives a crime in thought,
Contracts the danger of an actual fault:
Then what must he expect that still proceeds.
To commit sin, and work up thoughts to deeds?
If you like not my poem, the fault may possibly be in my writing; but none probably, its in your morals, which cannot bear the truth of it.
Dreyden.
They wholly mistake the nature of criticism,
who think its business is principally to find faults.

To be desirous of a good name, and careful to do everything that tends to the benefit of,
it is so far from being a fault, even in private persons, that it is their great and indispensible duty.
Afterby.
Before his sacred name flies every fault.
And each exalted stanza teems with thought.
Pope.
Which of our thron-cap's ancestors found fault,
For want of superstitious, or appos for salt King.
Behold him with all friendliness and eminence,
they never complain, nor find fault with the times.
Swift.
2. Defect; want; absence.
I could tell to thee, as to one it please me, for fault of a better, to call my friend, I could be sad, and sad indeed too.
Shakespeare.

3. Puzzle: difficulty; as, the enquirer is at a fault.
To Fault. v. n. [from the noun.]
To be wrong; to fail.
Which moved him rather in eclogues than oth wise to write, minding to furnish our tongue in this kind wherein it faileth.
Spenser.

To FAULTER. v. a. To charge with a fault;
to accuse.
For that I will not fault thee,
But for humbleness exact thee.
Old Sm.

FAULTER. n. s. [from fault.]
An offender; one who commits a fault.
Then also, behoil the faultier here in sight.
This hand committed that suppos'd offence.
Faint.

FAULTFINDER. n. s. [fault and find.]
A censor; an objector.

FAULTLY. adv. [from faulty.]
Not rightly: improperly; defectively; erroneously.

FAULTINESS. n. s. [from faulty.]
1. Badness; viciousness; evil disposition.
When her judgment was to be practised in courts of justice; things that he had undertaken, she was like a young town, who coming in the wind of the hunters, doth not know whether it be a thing or not to be eschewed.
Salvian.
2. Delinquency; actual offences.
The inhabitants will not take it in evil part, that the faultiness of their people ceretofore is laid open.
Hooke.

FAULTLESS. adj. [from fault.] Exempt from fault; perfect; completely excellen.

FAVOUR. n. s. [favor, Lat. favor, Fr.]
1. Countenance; kindness; kind regard; propitious aspect: with of before the favoured.
I pleased my majesty to turn your looks
Of favour from myself, and all our house.
Shak.
The child Samuel was in favour, both with the Lord, and also with men.
1 Samuel ii. 26. They shut not the door by their own sword:
but thy right hand and thine arm, and the light of thy countenance, because thine hast a favour unto them.
Psalm xxii. 3.
His dreadful navy, and his lofty mind.
Gave him the fear and favour of mankind.
Walker.
This favour, it had been employed on a more deserving subject, had been an effect of justice in your nature; but, as placed on me, is only charity.
Dryden's Aureng-Ze do Preface.

2. Support; defence; vindication; in clination to favour: with of before the thing favoured.
The pleasures which these Scriptures ascribe to religion, are of a kind very different from those in favour of which they are foreboded.
Reynos.
At play, among the strollers, we are apt to find our hopes and wishes engaged on a sudden favour of one who more than another.
Swift.
5. Kindness granted; benevolence shown.
   All favours and punishments pass’d by him, offices and importance of worship were distributed to his favorites.

6. Leave; good will; pardon.
   Worthy Macbeth, we stay upon your leisure.
   —Give me your favour; my dull brain was What with forget. Shakespeare
   Yet ere we enter into open act.
   With favour there is no loss: might we inquire
   What the condition of these arms be? Shakespeare
   Ben Jonson
   Come down, said Heynand, let us taste of peace:
   A peace, with all my soul, said Chastizer.
   But with your favour, I will treat it here. Dryden

7. Something given by a lady to be worn.
   And every one his hostess will advance unto his several mistresses, which they’ll know
   By favours several which they did bestow. Shak.
   It is received that it helps to continue if one wear the other, or party beloved;
   And perhaps a glove, or other like favour, may as well do it. Bacon’s Nat. Hist.
   A blue ribbon tied round the sword-arm, I conceive to be the remains of that custom of wearing a mistress’s favour on such occasions of old.

8. Any thing worn openly as a token.
   Here, Floduun, wear thou this favour for me, and stick it in thy cap. Shakespeare Henry V.

9. Feature; countenance.
   It is now little used.
   That is only suitable in laying a foul complexion upon a filthy favour, setting forth both in sulli
   Sidney.
   High staid through thou art, thin eye
   Haste staid upon some favour that it loves. Shakespeare
   Dissest thy favour with an unsunned head. Shak.
   There’s no goodness in thy face; if Anthony
   Be free and healthful, why so tart a favour
   To trumpet such good tidings? Shak. Ant. and Cleop.
   Yet well I remember
   The favours of these men: were they not mine?
   Did they not sometime cry, all hail! to me! Shak.
   A youth of fine favour and shape. Bacon.
   Be their virtues and their beauty as they compensate the hardness of their favour, and by the pockish ture of their souls, make up what is wanting in the beauty of the body. Burleigh.

Favourable, adj. [favorable, Fr. favorable, Lat.]
1. Kind; propitious; affectionate.
   Famous Plantagenet! most gracious prince, lend favourable ear to our requests. Shak. Rich III.
2. Palliative; tender; averse from censure.
   None can be more favourable to the public
   That to obey a tyrant’s will they fought. Dryden.
3. Conducive to; contributing to; propitious.
   People are multiplied in a country by the tem per of the climate, favourable to generation, health, and long life. Temple.
4. Accommodate; convenient.
FEA

Is it not strange that a rational man should worship a God that he should fear? Is he who is before a cat, and before a gutter? South.

To court servility,

To live to bear to fear upon their frowns;

What danger or what sorrow can befall them,

So long as Edward is thy constant friend? Shaksp.

And then, sly hypocrite, who now would sit the Patriot of liberty, who more than thou,

Once fawn’d, and cringe’d, and servilely ador’d,

Heax’s awful moment.

A moment, Milton’s Par. Lost.

But vain within, and proudly popular, Drudgen.

Dextros the craving frowning crowd to quit,

And pleas’d to scape from fable to will. Pope.

To bring forth a fawn.

Fawn. n. s. A servile cringe; low flattery.

You will rather shew our gentle lords

How you can fawn, than spend a fawn upon them

For the inheritance of their loves. Shakespeare, Coriol.

Fawner. n. s. [from fawn.] One that fawns; one that pays servile courtship.

By softness of behaviour we have arrived at the appellation of fawners. F. Ady.

Fawning. [from fawn.] In a cringing servile way.

Faxed. adj. [from fax, Saxx, hair.]

Hairy. Now obsolete.

They could call a comet a faxed star, which is all one with Stella eritum, or comets. Camden’s Rem.

Fay. n. s. [fé, Fr.]

1. A fairy; an elf.

And they that wander’d, to a child give ear;

Fay, fairies, genii, elves, and demons, hear! Pope.

2. [From fai, Fr.] Faith. Wholly obsolete.

Their ill favour garees men missay,

Both of their doctrine and their fay. Spencer.

Feaberry. n. s. [grossularia.] A gooseberry.

Diet.

To Feague. v. a. [Gower Uses To feigue, for to censure; Egen, Germ. to sweep; faken, Dut. to strike.] To whip; to chastise; to beat.

Fealty. n. s. [fælitty, Fr.] Duty due to a superior lord; fidelity to a master; loyalty.

I am in parliament pledge for his truth,

And lasting fealty to the new made king. Shakespeare.

Let my sovereign

Command my eldest son, may, all my sons,

As pledges of my fealty and love. Shakespeare, Hen. IV.

Man disobeying,

Disloyal, breaks his fealty, and sins

Against the high supremacy of Heaven. Milton.

Each bird and beast behold

After his kind; I bring them to receive

From thee their names, and pay thee fealty

With little subjection. Milton’s Paradise Lost.

Whether his first design be to withdraw

Our fealty from God, or to disturb Conjugal love. Milton’s Par. Lost.

FEAR. n. s. [peanam, Sax. to fear; eayer.

Dut. feake, Erse.]

1. Dread; terror; painful apprehension of danger.

Fear is an uncleaness of the mind, upon the thought of future evil likely to befal us. Locke.

Trembling fear still to and fro did gy,

And found no place where safe she showed him

Fair Queen.

We conclude was upon them, because of the people of those countries.

What are your fears? Are we depot to Wheat, and hope, that we have not, for fear of wishing ill? Dryden.

Fear, in general, is that passion of our nature whereby we are excited to provide for our safety upon the approach of evil. Roger.

2. Awe; dejection of mind at the presence of any person or thing; terror impressing with: of before that which impresseth.

And the fear of you, and the dread of you, shall be upon every beast. Genesis iv. 2.

3. Anxiety; solicitude.

The principal fear was for the holy temple. Mac.

4. That which causes fear.

Fear not thy enemy, lest thou be tempted to evil.

Thy demon, that’s the spirit that keeps thee, is

Noble, courageous, high, unmatchable;

Where Caustic darts of wit, thy angel

Becomes a fear, as being overpower’d. Shakespeare.

5. The object of fear.

Except the God of Abraham, and the fear of of Israel has been with me. Exodus xxix. 13.

6. Something hung up to scare deer by its colour or noise.

He who fleeth from the noise of the fear shall fall into the pit, and he that cometh up out of the midst of the pit, shall be taken in the snare.

Isaiah xliii.

FEAR. n. s. [peapan, Sax.] A companion.

Obsolelce.

But far Clarissa to a lovely fear

Was linked, and by him had many pabilities dear,

To Fear. v. a. [peapan, Sax.]

1. To dread; to consider with apprehensions of terror to be afraid of.

—Now, for my life, the monster fears his widow.

Then never trust me if I be afraid

You are very sensible, yet you miss my sense;

I mean Horsensio is afraid of you. Shakespeare.

To fear the foe, since foe apprehends strength,

Gives, in its weakness, strength unto your foe.

There shall rise up a kingdom, and it shall be fear’d above all the kingdoms before it.

When I view the beauties of thy face,

I fear not death, nor dangers, nor disgrace.

To Fear. v. a.

1. To live in terror; to be afraid.

Well you may fear too far,

—Safer than trust too far.

Let me still take away a thousand arms I fear,

Not fear still to be born’d.

If any such be here, if any fear

Less for his person than an ill report;

If any thing brave death entwists up life. Shakespeare.

2. To be anxious.

Then let the greedy merchant fear

For his ill-gotten gain; and pray to gods that will not hear,

While the debating winds and billows bear

His wealth into the main. Dryden’s Homer.

See, in the midst of different strife,

Thy struggling Albion’s bosom torn:

So much she fears for William’s life,

That she makes a shade, without a form. Prior.

FEARFULL. adj. [fear and full.]

1. Timorous; timid; easily made afraid;

His gentle, and not fearful.

Shakespeare.

Them that are of a fearful heart. Isaiah.

2. Afraid. It has of before the object of fear.

The Irish are more fearful to offend the law than the English. Dutens in Ireland.

I have made my heroine fearful of death, which neither Cassandra nor Cleopatra would have been 4.

FEAR. n. s. [fiall, Fr.]

Practiceable; such as may be effected; such as may be done upon.

We conclude many things impossibilities, which yet are easy feasiblities. Glanville’s Scipia.

Things are feasible in themselves; else the eternal proposition of the feasibilities, and things impossible for possibilities themselves.

Brown’s Vulg. Err.

FEASIBLE. adj. [faißaible, Fr.] Practicable.

A nation, whose distinguishing character it is to be more fearless of death and danger than any

FEASIBILITY. n. s. [feasible.]

1. Practicability.

A thing practicable.

Men often swallow fallacies for truths, delusions for certainties, and impossibilities for feasibilities, and things impossible for possibilities themselves.

2. That which is practicable.

Many things are impossible, which yet are easy feasible.

Glanville’s Scipia.

Things are feasible in themselves; else the eternal proposition of the feasibilities, and things impossible for possibilities themselves.

South.
FEAST. n.s. [feste, Fr. festum, Lat.] 1. An entertainment of the table; a sumptuous treat of great numbers.

Here's our chiefest. If he had been forgotten, It had been as a gap in our great feast. Shakesp.

On Friday his birthday he made a feast unto all his servants. Gen. xl. 20.

The lady of the leaf ordain'd a feast,
And made the lads of the flower's her guest;
When, lo! a bow ascended on the plain,
With sudden seats o'ertold, and large for either train.
Dryden.

2. An anniversary day of rejoicing either on a civil or religious occasion. Opposed to a fast.

This day is called the feast of Crispian. Shakesp.

3. Something delicious to the palate.

Many people would, with reason, prefer the guising of a hungry belly to those usages which are a feast to others. Locke.

To FEAST. v.n. [from the noun.] To eat sumptuously; to eat together on a day of joy.

Richard and Northumberland, great friends, Did feast together. Shakesp.

The parish finds, indeed; but our church-wards Feast on the silver, and give us the farthings. Gay.

To FEAST. v.a. 1. To entertain sumptuously; to entertain magnificently.

He was entertained and feasted by the king with great show of favour. Hayward.

2. To delight; to pamper; to gratify luxuriously.

All these are our's, all nature's elegance, Whose taste or smell can bless the feasted sense. Dryden.

FEASTER. n.s. [from feast.]

1. One that feasts deliciously.

These feasters could speak of great and many excellencies in manna. Taylor.

2. One that entertains magnificently.

FEASTFUL. adj. [feast and full.]

1. Festive; joyful.

The virgins also shall on feastful days
Visit his tomb with flowers, only bewailing
His lot unfortunato in nuptial choirs,
From whose captivity and loss of eyes. Milton.

Therefore be sure Thou, when the bridegroom with his feastful friend,
Passes in his glory and his glory's light,
Hast'nd thy entrance, virgin wise and wise.
Milton.

2. Luxurious; riotous.

The suitor train
Who crowd his palace, and with lawless pow'r
His herds and flocks in feastful rites devote. Pope.

FEASTRite. n.s. [feast and rite.] Custom observed in entertainments.

His hospitable gate,
Unbend'd to all, invites a numerous train Of daily guests; whose board with plenty crown'd.
Revives the feastful ode. Philips.

FEAT. n.s. [fait, Fr.]

1. Act; deed; action; exploit.

Pyrocles is his name, renowned far
For his bold feats, and hardy confidence.
Fell off approach, and many a cruel war.
Fairly Q.

Tarquin's self he met,
And struck him on his knee: in that day's feats,
When he might act the woman in the scene.
He prov'd th'best man in th' field. Shakesp.

Our soldiers are men of strong heads for action, and perform such feats as they are not able to express.
Addison's Spectator.

2. A trick artful, festive, or ludicrous performance.

The joints are more supple to all feats of activity now than with them afterwards. Bacon.

FEAT. adv. [fait, bien fait, Fr. homo facut ad usum.]

1. Ready; skilful; ingenious.

FEA

NEVER more hast a page so kind, so dutiful, serene
So tender over his occasions, true
So feast, so nurse-like.
Shakesp. Cymbel.

2. It is now only used in irony and contempt.

That feast man at controversy. Stillfeet.

3. Nice; neat.

... Much faster than before. Shakesp. Tempest.

FEATEOUS. adj. [from feast.] Neat; dexterous. Obsolete.

FEATEOUSLY. adv. [from feast.] Neatly; dexterously.

In not, use.
And with fine fingers cleft full feateously.
The hand so well astay garments sit upon me.
... Much faster than before. Shakesp. Tempest.

FEATHER. n.s. [p'rep, Sax. feder, fether.]

1. The plume of birds.

Look, as I blow this feather from my face.
Shak. Henry IV.

The brave eagle does with sorrow see
The forest wasted, and that lofty tree
Which held her nest, about to be o'er blown.
Before the feathers of this young crow;
She will not leave them, nor she cannot stay.
But bears them boldly on her wings away. Wagner.

When a man in the dark presses either corner of his eye with his finger, and turns away his eye from his finger, he will see a circle of colours like to the feathers of a peacock's tail.
Neve.

I am bright as an angel, and light as a feather. Swift.

2. Kind; nature; species; from the proverbial expression, birds of a feather; that is, of a species.

Clifford and the haughty Northumberlander.
And of their feather many more proud birds,
Have wrapt the easy-melting king like wax.
Shak. Henry VI.

I am not of that feather to shake off
My friend, when he most needs me. Shakesp.

[Upon a horse.] A sort of natural frizzing of hair, which, in some places, rises above the lying hair, and there makes a figure resembling the tip of an ear of corn.
Carver's Dict.

To FEATHER. v.n. [from the noun.]

1. To dress in feathers.

2. To fit with feathers.

3. To tread as a cock.

Dame Partlet was the sovereign of his heart;
Ardent in love, outrageous in his play,
He feather'd her with feathers of the noblest.
Dryden.

4. To enrich; to adorn; to exalt.

They stark not to say, that the king cared not to plume his nobility and people, to feather himself.
Bacon's Henry VII.

5. To feather one's nest.

[Alluding to birds which collect feathers, among other materials, for making their nest.] To get riches together.

FEATHERBED. n.s. [feather and bed.]

A bed stuffed with feathers; a soft bed.

The husband cock looks out, and strait is sped,
And meets his wife, which brings her featherbed.
Donne.

FEATHERDRIVER. n.s. [feather and drive.]

One who cleanses feathers by whipping them about.

A feather sheaf, most full of his tunes filled with the fine dust and down of others. Derham.

FEATHERED. adj. [from feather.]

1. Clothed with feathers.

I saw young Harry with his beaver on,
His casings on his lips, gallantly armed,
Rise from the ground; the 'feather'd Mercury.'
Shakesp. Henry IV.
To beat; to whip with rods. Ainsworth.

To ferricitate. n. [ferricitare, Lat.]

To be in a fever. Dict.

Ferriculose. adj. [ferriculosus, Lat.]

Troubled with a fever. Dict.

Ferrifuga. n.s. [ferris et fuga, Lat. ferrifuga, Fr.]

Any medicine serviceable in a fever.

Quinine, like other herbs, are the best soothing, and also the best ferrifugas. Fyer on the Harumers.

Ferrifuga. adj. Having the power to cure fevers.

Ferrifuga draughts had a most surprising effect. Arbuthnott.

Ferbille. adj. [fibrilis, Lat. fibrile, Fr.]

Constituting a fever; proceeding from a fever.

The spirits, emboiled with the malignity in the blood, and tinged and tainted by the ferriculate fermentation, are by all physicians relieved. Harvey.

February. n.s. [Febrarius, Lat.]

The name of the second month in the year.

You have such a February face.

Soul of frost, of stroma, and gloominess! Shak.

Feces. n.s. [feco, Lat. feces, Fr.]

1. Dregs; lees; sediments; subsidence.

Hence the surface of the ground with mud and slime besmeared, the fece of the food.

Feces: all the rays of our; and rolling in the seeds of heat, new creatures did begin. Dryd.

2. Excrement.

The symptoms of such a constitution are a sour smell in their feces. Arbuthnott on Aliments.

Feculent. n.s. [feculentius, Lat.]

Muddiness; quality of abounding with lees or sediment.

2. Lees; feces; sediment; dregs.

Pour upon it some very strong lece, to facilitate the separation of its feculentis. Bogle.

Whether the wilding's fibres are contrived to draw th' earth's purest spirit, and resist its feculenties, which in more porous stones, are less sieved. Philips.

Feculent. adj. [feculentius, Lat. feculent, Fr.]

Foul; dreary; excrementitious.

But both his hands, most filthy feculent, Above the water were on high extent, And fair and gentle themselves incessantly, Yet nothing cleaner were for such intent. Fairly Q.

They are to the body as the light of a candle to the dark, and from the least spirit, which as it is pent up in it, so neither doth it partake of its impurity. Glanv. Apol.

Fecund. adj. [fecundius, Lat, fecund, Fr.]

Fruitful; prolific.

The more sickly the yeares are, the less fecund or fruitful of children also they be. Granat.

Fecundation. n.s. [fecundate, Lat.]

The act of making fruitful or prolific.

She requested these plants as a medicine of fecundation, & c. to make her fruitful. Proov.

To fecundify. v. a. To make fruitful; to make prolific. Dict.

Fecundity. n.s. [from fecund; fecundate, Fr.]

1. Fruitfulness; quality of producing or bringing forth in great abundance.

I appeal to the animal and vegetable productions of the earth, the vast numbers whereby not only to justify the extreme luxuriance and fecundity of it. Woollard.

2. Power of producing or bringing forth.

Some of the ancients mention some seeds that retain their fecundate forty years; and I have found that melon-seeds, after thirty years, are best for raising of melons. Roy.

Fee.

God could never create so ample a world, but he could have made a larger; the fecundity of his creature power never growing lazier, nor being exhausted. Bentley.

Fed. Preterite and participle pass. of To feed.

For on the grassy verdure as he lay, And breathed the freshness of the early day, Devouring dogs the helpless infant tore, Fed on his trembling limbs, and lap'd the gore. Pepe.

Fedary. n.s. [fedus, Lat. or from feudum.]

This word, peculiar to Shakespeare, may signify either a confederate; a partner; or a dependent.

Darn'd paper!

Black as the sea, that's a thing, senseless balbie! Art thou a fedy for this act, and hoketz So virgin-like without? Shakesp. Cymbeline.

Federal. adv. [from fedus, Lat.]

Relating to a league or contract.

It is a federal rule between God and us, as eating and drinking, both among Jews and Heathens, was wont to be. Hamm.

The Roman law compelled them, contrary to all federal right and justice, both to part with Sardinia, their lawful territory, and also to pay them for the future a double tribute. Grew.

Fedary. n.s. [from fedus, Lat.]

A confederate; an accomplice.

She's a traitor, and Canillo is a fedy for her. Shak.

Federeate. adj. [federatus, Lat.]

Leagued; joined in confederacy.

Fee. n.s. [see, Sax, fee, Danish, cattle; feudo, low Lat. fec, Scottish.]

1. [In law.] All lands and tenements that are held by any acknowledgment of superiority to a higher lord. All lands and tenements, that by them hath a personal estate to him and his heirs, &c. are divided into allodium and feudum: allodium is every man's own land, which he possesses merely in his own right, without acknowledgment of any service, or payment of any rent to any other. Fudum, or fee, is that which we hold by the benefit of another, and in name whereof we owe services, or pay rent, or both, to a superior lord. And all our land in England, the crown-land, which is in the king's own hands, in right of his crown, excepted, is in the nature of feudum; for though a man have land by descent from his ancestors, or bought it for his money; yet is the land of such a nature, that it cannot come to any, either by descent or purchase, but with the burden that was laid upon him who had novel fee, or first of all received it as a benefit from his lord, to him, and to all such to whom it might descend, or be any way conveyed from him. So that no man in England has directum dominium, that is, the very property or demesne in any land, but the prince in right of his crown: for though he that has fee has juris perpetuum utile dominium, yet he owes a duty for it, and therefore it is not simply his own. Fee is divided into two sorts; fee-absolute, otherwise called fee-simple, and fee-conditional, otherwise termed fee-tail.—Fee-simple is that whereof we are seised in those general words, To us and our heirs for ever: fee-tail is that whereof we are seised to us and our heirs, with limitation; that is, the heirs of our body. And fee-tail is either general or special: general is where land is given to a man, and the heirs of his body: fee-tail special, is where a man and his wife are seised of land to them and the heirs of their two bodies. Cowl.

Now like a lawyer, when he land would let, Or sell fee-simples in his master's name. Hubbert's Tale.

Here's the lord of the soil come to seize me for a stray, for entering his fee-simple without leave. Shakesp. Henry VI.

2. Property; peculiarity.

What concern they? The general cause; or is it a fee-grief, Due to some single breath? Shak.

3. Reward; gratification; recompense.

These be the ways by which, without reward, Livings in courts he gotten, though full hard.

For nothing there is done without a fee. Hubbert.

A dying, death's my fee; But if I help what do I receive? Shak.

4. Payments occasionally claimed by persons in office.

Now that God and friends Have turn'd my every story, At our enlargement what are thy due fees? Shak.

5. Reward paid to physicians or lawyers. He does not refuse any good office for a man, because he cannot pay the fee of it. Addison.

6. Portion; pittance; share. Obsolete.

In pruning and trimming all manner of trees, Reserve to each cell their property fees. Tissot.

Fefarm. n.s. [fee and farm.]

Tenure by which lands are held from a superior lord.

John surrendered his kingdoms to the pope, and took them back again, to hold in fefarm; which brought him into such hatred, as all his lifetime after he was possess with fear. Davies.

To fee. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To reward; to pay.

No man fees the sun, no man purchases the light, nor earns if he walk in South. *Watch the disease in time; for when within The dropsey rages, and extends the skin, In vain for health did the patient cries, and fees the doctor; but too late is wise. Dryden.

2. To bribe; to hire; to purchase.

I have long loved her, and ingrossed opportunities to meet her; feel every slight occasion, that could but ingenuously give me sight of her. Shak.

3. To keep in hire.

There is not a shire of them but in his house I have a servant feed. Shakesp. Macbeth.

Feeble. adj. [faible, Fr.]

Weak; debilitated; sickly; infirm; without strength of body or mind.

The men carried all the feeble upon asses to Je-richo. 2 Chron.

Command th' assistance of a faithful friend, But feeble are the succours I can send. Dryden.

How I have lov'd, excuse my failing tongue; My spirits feeble, and my pangs are strong. Dryden.

We carry the imagery of God in us, a rational and immortal soul, and though we be now miserable and feeble, yet we aspire after eternal happiness, and finally expect a great exaltation of all our natural powers. Bentley.

There is a crutch that helps the weak along, Supports the feeble, but retards the strong. Smith.

To feeble. v. a. [from the noun.] To weaken; to enfeebles; to deprive of strength or power. Not in use.
FEE

Or as a castle reared high and round,
By subtle engines and malicious slight.
Its underrun from the lowest ground,
And her foundation fore'd and felled quite.
Fairy Queen.

Shall that victorious hand be felled here,
That in your chambers gave you chastisement?—
Shak. King John.

FEEBLEMINDED. adj. [flebbl and mind]. Weak of mind; defective in resolution and constancy.

Warn them that are unruly, comfort the ffebleminded, support the weak, be patient toward all men. 1 Thess.

FEEBLENESS. n. s. [from fleebly. Weakness: imbecility: infirmity: want of strength.

A better head Rome's glorious body fits.
Thas his that shakes for age and ffebleness. Shak.
Some in their latter years, through the feebleness of their limbs, have been forced to study up on their knees.
South.

FEEBRILY. adv. [from fleebly. Weakly: without strength.

Like mine, thy gentle numbers feebly creep.
Thy tragic music gives smiles, thy comic sleep.
Drayton.

To FEED. v. a. [fudan, Goth. pabam, freeban, Sax.]

1. To supply with food.
   Her heart and bowels through her back he drew,
   And fed the hounds that help'd him to pursue.
   Beorn.
   The frost will spoil the grass; for which reason take care to feed it close before Winter.
   Mortimer's Husbandry.

2. To supply; to furnish.
   A constant smoke rises from the warm springs,
   That fed the many baths with which the island is stocked.
   Addington.
   The breadth of the bottom of the hopper must be half the length of a barleycorn, and near as long as the rollers, that it may not feed them too fast.
   Mortimer's Husbandry.

3. To graze; to consume by cattle.
   Once in three years feed your mowing lands,
   If you cannot get manure constantly to keep them in check.
   Shakespeare.

4. To nourish; to cherish.
   How oft from pomp and state did I remove,
   To feed despair, and cherish hopeless love?
   Prior.

5. To keep in hope or expectation.
   Barbarossa learned the strength of the emperor,
   Craftily feeding him with the hope of liberty.
   Kinkel.

6. To delight; to entertain; to keep from satiety.
   The alteration of scenes, so it he without noise, feeds and relieves the eye, before it be full of the same object.
   Bacon.

7. To make fat. A provincial use.

To FEED. v. n.

1. To take food. Chiefly applied to animals.
   To feed were best at home;
   From thence the swan to meet is ceremony.
   Meeting were bare without it.
   Shak. Marth.

2. To prey: to live by eating.
   I am not covetous of gold;
   Nor care I, who doth feed upon my cost.
   Shak.
   Ye try against the noble senats, who,
   Under the gods, keep you in awe, which else
   Would feed on another.
   Shak. Coriolanus.
   Gideon speaketh of the curing of the scurvy of the liver by milk of a cow, that fedeth upon certain herbs.
   Bacon.
   Some birds feed upon the herries of this vegetable.
   Brown.

3. He feeds an fruits, which of their own accord,
   The willing groves and laden fields afford. Dryd.
   The Brachmans were all of the same race, lived in fields and woods, and fed only upon rice, milk, or herbs.
   Temple.
   All feed on one vain passion, and enjoy
   Tho extensive blessing of his luxury.
   Pope.

4. To pasture; to place cattle to feed.
   If a man shall not be fed, and shall put in his beast, and shall feed in another man's field, he shall make restitution. Ex. xxii. v.

5. To grow fat or plump. A provincial use.

FEED. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. Food; that which is eaten.
   A fearful deer then looks most about when he comes to the best food, with a shunning kind of tremour through all her principal parts.
   Sidney.
   An old work'd ox as well as a young one, their feed is much cheaper, because they eat no oats.
   Mortimer's Husbandry.

2. Pasture.
   Besides his cote, his flocks and bounds of feed
   Are now on sale.
   Shak. As you like it.

3. Meal; act of eating.
   Plenty hung
   Tempting so nigh, to pluck and eat my fill
   I spared not; for such pleasure till that hour.
   At feed or fountain never I had found.
   Milton.

FEEDER. n. s. [from feed.]

1. One that gives food.
   The beast obeys his keeper, and looks up,
   Not to his master's, but the feeder's hand.
   Desh.

2. An exciter; an encourager.
   When thou dost hear I am as I have been,
   Approach me, and thou shalt be as thou wnest,
   The tenter and the feeder of my ills.
   Shak.

3. One that eats.
   With eager feeding food doth chock the feeder.
   Shak.
   But that our feasts
   In every morn have felly, and the feeders
   Jest with it as a custom, I should blush
   To see you so attired.
   Shak.

   We meet in Aristotle with one kind of thirst,
   Called the missel thirst, or feeder upon misseltoe.
   Brown's Fug. Err.

4. One that eats in a certain mode; as, a nice feeder, a gross feeder.
   But such fine feeders are no guests for me;
   Rost agrees not with fragility.
   Then, that should act, the man am I,
   With me they'd starve for want of irony.
   Shak.

To FEEL. pret. felt; part. past. felt, v. n. [pelan, Sax.]

1. To have perception of things by the touch.
   The sense of feeling can give us a notion of extension, shape, and all other ideas that enter at the eye, except colours.
   Addison's Spect.

2. To search by feeling. See FEELER.
   They should seek the Lord, if happily they might feel after him, and find him.
   Acts.

3. To have a quick sensibility of good or evil, right or wrong.
   Man, who feels for all mankind.
   Pope.

4. To appear to the touch.
   Blind men ray black, feel rough, and white feels smooth.
   Dryden.
   Of these tumours one feels fessac and rumpled;
   the other more even, flatulent and springy.
   Shag. Stal. Evid.

To FEEL. v. a.

1. To perceive by the touch.
   Suffer me that I may feel the pillars.
   Judges.

2. To try; to sound.
   He hath writ this to feel my affection to your honour.

3. To have perception of.
   The air is thin, that a bird has therein no feeling of her wings, or any resistance of air to mount herself by.
   Raleigh.

4. To have sense of external pain or pleasure.
   Nor did they perceive the evil plight
   In which they were, or the fierce pains not feel.
   Milton.

   But why should those be thought to escape, who feel
   Those rods of scorpions and those whips of steel?
   Crotch.

5. To be affected by; to perceive mentally.
   Would I had never tied this English ear
   With the flatteries that grow upon it!
   Shak. Henry VIII.

   The well-sung woes shall sooth my passive ghost;
   He best can paint them who can feel them last.
   Pope.

   Not youthful kings in battle seized' alive,
   Felt such grief, such terror, and despair.
   Pope.

6. To know; to be acquainted with.
   His overthrow heap'd happiness upon him;
   For then, and not till then, he felt himself,
   And found the blessedness of being little.
   Shak. Henry VIII.

FEEL. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. The sense of feeling; the touch.
   The difference of these tumours will be distinguished by the feel.
   Sharp's Surgery.

FEELER. n. s. [from feel.]

1. One that feels.
   This hand, whose touch,
   Whose every touch would force the feeler's soul
   To th' oath of loyalty.
   Shak. Cymbeline.

2. The horns or antennae of insects.
   Insects clean their eyes with their forelegs as well as antennae; and as they are perpetually feeling and searching before them with their feelers or antennae, I am apt to think that besides wiping and cleaning the eyes, the uses here named may be performed.
   Lancr. Entom. Theolog.

FEELING, participial adj. [from feel.]

1. Expressive of great sensibility.
   O wretched state of man in self-defilement!
   O well thou say'st a feeling declaration.
   Thy tongue hath made of Cupid's deep incision!
   Sidney.

   Thy wailing words do much my spirits move;
   They utter in are in such a feeling fashion.
   Sidney.

   When will your infant tears, and your youth's
   Must it again; and frame some feeling line,
   That may discover such integrity.
   Shak.

2. Sensibly felt. This sense is not sufficiently analogical.
   A most poor man made tame to fortune's blows,
   Who, by the art of knowing and feeling sorrows,
   Am pregnant to good pity.
   Shak.

   I had a feeling sense
   Of all your royal favours; but this last Strikes through my heart, Southern.

FEELING. n. s. [from feel.]

1. The sense of touch.
   Why was the sight
   To such a tender ball as the eye confi'd
   So obvious and so easy to be speech'd?
   And not, as feeling, through all parts disd'd.
   That she might look at will through every pore?
   Milton.

2. Power of action upon sensibility.
   The apprehension of the good.
   Gives but the greater feeling to the worse.
   Shak. Richard III.

3. Perception; sensibility.
   Their king, out of a princely feeling, was sparing and compassionate towards his subjects.
   Bacon.
   Great persons had need to borrow other men's opinions to think themselves happy; for if they judge by their own feeling, they cannot find it.
   Bacon.

   As we learn what belongs to the body by the evidence of sense, so we learn what belongs to the soul by an inward consciousness, which may be called a sort of internal feeling.
   Watts.
FEELINGLY. adj. [from feeling.] 1. With expression of great sensibility.
2. So as to be sensibly felt.

Sidney.

Fel

FEELERS. n. s. Worms in hawks.

Fel

FEELICITATE. n. a. [felicit, Fr., felicitu, Lat.]

1. To make happy.
2. To congratulate.

Shakespeare.

Felicitously.

Felicitously. adv. [from felicitous.]

Felicitously.

Felicitous. adj. [felix, Lat.] Happy.

Felicitous.

Felicity. n.s. [felicitas, Lat., felicity, Fr.]

Felicitous.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitally, good; or, Felicitating the evil to follow.

Felicitating. n.s. [Fr., from felicitate.]

Felicitating.

Felicitous. adj. [felix, Lat.] Happy.

Felicitous.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.

Felicitously.
F E L

Chieftain of the rest
He cannot appropriate, he cannot inclose, without the consent of all his fellow-commoners, mankind.

5. One thing suited to another; one of a pair.

When virtue is lodged in a body, that seems to have been prepared for the reception of vice; the soul and the body do not seem to be fellow.

6. One like or equal to another; as, this knave hath not his fellow.

A familiar appellation used sometimes with fondness; sometimes with esteem, but generally with some degree of contempt.

This is Othello's ancient, as I take it.

—The same indeed; a very valiant fellow, Shakesp.

An officer was in danger to have lost his place, but his wife made his peace; whereupon a pleasant fellow said, that he had been blessed, but that he saved himself upon his horns. Bacon.

Full fifteen thousand lusty fellows
With fire and sword the fort maintain;
Each ward with brave fellows we'll tell us
Yet out they march'd like common men. Prior.

8. A word of contempt: the foolish mortal; the mean wretch; the sorry rascal.

Those great fellows scornfully receiving them, as foolish birds fallen into their net, it pleased the eternal justice to put them to sudden death by their hands.

Sidney.

Casso hath been set on in the dark
By Rodrigo, and fellows that are leap'd. Shakesp.

I have great comfort from this fellow: methinks he hath no drowning mark about him; his complexion is perfect gallows.

Shakesp. Tempest.

Opinion, that did help me to the crown,
Had still kept loyal to possession;
And let me in reprieve consequent,
A fellow of no mark or likelihood. Shakesp.

How oft the sight of men, to do ill deeds,
Makes deeds ill done? for had they done not by a fellow by the hand of nature mark'd,
Quoted, and signd'to do a deed of shame,
This murder had not come into my mind. Shakesp.

The Moor's abs'nd by some most villainous knave
Some base notorious knave, some scours fellow! Shakesp.

The fellow had taken more fish than he could spend while they were sweet. L'Estrange.

As next of kin, Achilles' arms I claim;
This fellow would chuse a foreign name.

Upon our stock, and the Sisyphean seed
By fraud and theft asserts his father's breed. Dryden.

You must contrive such an ordinariness as this Mr. Wood, could have got his Majesty's bread seal. Swift.

You'll find, if once the monarch acts the monk,
Or, coughs as if he were to drink.

Worth makes the man, and want of it the fellow; the rest is all but leather and prunella. Pope.

9. Sometimes it implies a mixture of pity with contempt.

The fervent command of his men to hang him up on the nearest tree: then the fellow cried out that he was not the miller, but the miller's man. Haywood.

To Fell, a. To suit with; to pair with; to match. Fellow is often used in composition to mark community of nature, station, or employment.

Imagination,
With what's real, thou co-active art,
And fellow'ist nothing. Shakesp.

Fellow-commoner, n. s.

1. Who has the same right of common.

F E L

2. Combination; joint interest: commonly in an ill sense.

Even your milk woman and your nurserymaid have a fellow-feeling. Addison.

Fellow-like. adj. [fellow and like.

Fellowly. s Like a companion; on equal terms; companionable.

All which good parts he grace with a good fellowlike, kind, and respectful carriage. Carew.

One seed for another to make an exchange, with fellowly neighbourhood sense not strange. T.auer.

Fellowship, n. s. [from fellow.

1. Companionhip; consort; society.

This boy cannot tell what he would have, but kneads and builds up hands for fellowship. Shak.

From blissful bours
Of amaranthine shade, fountain, or spring.

By th' waters of life, wherein they sat
In fellowship of joys, the same all blest.

Milton's Par. Lost.

There is no man but God puts excellent things into his possession, and gives to men mutual fellowship. Calvin's Sermons.

God having designed man, for a susceptible creature, made him not only with an inclination, and under the necessity to have fellowship with those of his own kind, but furnished him also with language, which was to be the great instrument and cement of society. Locke.

2. Association; confederacy; combination.

We [should] not die in that man's company,
That earns his fellowship to die with us. Shak.

Those laws do bind men absolutely, even as they are to all who shall have any settled fellowship, or any solemn agreement among themselves. Hobbes.

Most of the other Christian princes were drawn into the fellowship of that war. Knox.

You should not dare to serve a man of great estate, though not of a lower degree than yourself. Paradise Regained.

O love! thou sternly dost thy power maintain,
And will not bear a rival in thy reigns the common Tyrants and thou all fellowship disdain. Dryden.

5. Company; state of being together.

The great contention of the sea and skies,
When fellowship is distracted. Dryden.

6. Frequency of intercourse; social pleasure.

In a great town friends are scattered, so there is not that fellowship which is in less populous places. Bunyan.

Corusdes having, by extreme parsimony, saved thirty pounds out of a beggary fellowship, went to London and bought nothing. Swift.

7. Fitness and fondness for feste entertainments, with good prefixed.

He had by his excessive good fellowship, which was grateful to all the company, made himself popular with all the officers of the army. Clarendon.

8. An establishment in the college, with share in its revenue.

Corusdes having, by extreme parsimony, saved thirty pounds out of a beggary fellowship, went to London and bought nothing. Swift.

9. [In arithmetic.] That rule of plural proportion whereby we balance accounts, depending between divers persons, having put together a general stock, so that they may every man have his proportional gain, or sustain his part of loss. Cocke.

Felly, adv. [from fell.] Cruelly; inhumanly; savagely; barbarously.

Fair ye he sure, but cruel and unkind.

As is a tyger, that with bloody hand
Hunts after blood, when by chance doth find
A feeble beast doth felly him oppress. Spence.

4 X 705
F E M

Felo-de-se, n.s. [in law.] He that committeth felony by murdering himself.

Felon, n.s. [felen, Fr. felo, low Lat. fel, Sax.] 1. One who has committed a capital crime.
I apprehend thee for a felon here.

Felon. adj. Cruel; traitorous; inhuman.
Aye me! what thing on earth, that all things breeds.

Feloniously, adv. [from felon.] Wicked.
Not used.

Felm, the pretence of Feli, which see.

Felt, n.s. [felt, Sax.] 1. Cloth made of wool united without weaving.
It were a delicate stratagem to shoe
A troop of horses with felt. Shaksp. King Lear.

2. A hide or skin.
To know whether sheep are sound or not, see that the felt be loose.

Felt. v. t. a. [from the nom.] To unite without weaving.
The same wool one man felt into a hat, another wool another into a kirtle. Hals.

Feltre, v. a. [from felt.] To clot together like felt.
His fettered locks, that on his bosom fell,
On rugged mountains briers and thorns resemble.

FEL'CCA, n.s. [felen, Fr. felon, Arab.] A small open boat with six oars. Diet.

FEMALE, n.s. [femelle, Fr. femella, Lat.] A she; one of the sex which brings young; not male.
God created man in his own image, male and female he made them.

If he offer it of the herd, whether it be male or female, he shall offer it without blemish.

Indúd with intellectual sense and soul,
Are masters to their females, and their lords. Shak.
FEN

These, being polynhaled arts, could no more be learned alone than fencing or cudgel-playing.

Arthurist and Pope.

FENCELESS. adj. [from fence.] Without inclosure; open.

Each motion of the heart rises to fary.
And love in their weak bosoms is a rage
As terrible as hate, and as destructive:
So the wind, fenches to the ocean.
And heaves the billows of the building deep.
As like from North, as from South. Bow's Jane Shore.

FENCE. n. s. [from fence.] One who teaches or practises the use of weapons, or science of defence.

Canons is great advantage ; he that lets
Another chase, may war them at his fire.
Mark all his wand rings, and enjoy his frets;
As cunning fencers suffer heat to the fire.
Herbert.

A nimble fencer will put in a thrust so quick,
That the foil will be in your bosom when you thought it a yard off.

FENCIBLE. adj. [from fence.] Capable of defence.

Addison.

FENCINGMASTER. n. s. [fence and master.] One who teaches the science of defence, or the use of weapons.

FENCINGSCHOOL. n. s. [fence and school.] A place in which the use of weapons is taught.

If a man be to prepare his son for duels, I had rather none should be a good wrestler than an ordinary fencer, which is the most a gentleman can attain to, unless he will be constantly in the fencing-school, and every day exercising.

Locke.

FEN-CRAT. n. s. [fen-crat.] A small insect that digs itself holes in the ground.

To FEND. v. a. [from defend.] To keep off; to shut out.

Spread with straw the bedding of thy fold,
With fern beneath to fend the bitter cold.
Dryden.

To FEND. v. n. To dispute; to shuf off a charge.

The dexterous management of terms, and being able to fend and prove with them, passes for a great part of learning but it is learning distinct from knowledge.

Locke.

FENDER. n. s. [from fend.] 1. An iron plate laid before the fire to hinder coals that fall from rolling forward to the floor.
2. Any thing laid or hung at the side of a ship to keep off violence.

FENERATION. n. s. [feneratio, Lat.] Usury; the gain of interest; the practice of increasing money by lending.

The bare figure not only surpasseth and titillity from its temper, but endanger and party from its capacity and separation. Brown.

FENUGREEK. n. s. [senum Graecum, Lat.] A plant.

FENNEL. n. s. [fencium, Lat.] A plant of strong scent.

A sav'ry odour blown, more pleas'd my sense
Than smell of sweetest fenell, or the taint
Of ewe, or goat, drooping with milk at ev'n. Milton.

FENNELFLOWER. n. s. [nigella.] A plant.

FENNELGIANT. n. s. [ferula.] A plant.

FENNY. adj. [from fen.] 1. Marshy; boggy; moistish.
2. Inhabiting the marsh.

Fillet of a fenney snake,
In the cauldron boil and bake. Shakspere.

FENNYSONES. n. s. A plant.

FENSUCKED. adj. [fen and suck.] Suck out of marshes.

Infect her beauty,
You fenney'd fole, drawn by the powerful sun. Shakeps. King Lear.

FEOD. n. s. [feodum, low Lat.] Fee; tenure.

FEODAL. adj. [feodal, Fr. from feod.] Held from another.

FEODARY. n. s. [from feodum, Lat.] One who holds his estate under the tenure of suit and service to a superiour lord.

Hannen.

To FEEOFF. v. a. [feoff, feiffer, Fr. feoffaire, low Lat.] To put in possession; to invest with right.

FEOFFEE. n. s. [feoffatus, Lat. feiffer, Fr.] One put in possession.

The late earl of Desmond, before his breaking forth into rebellion, secretly all his lands to feoffees in trust, in hope to have cut off his majesty from the exchequ of his lands. Spencer.

FEORDER. n. s. [feoffatory, low Lat.] One who gives possession of any thing.

See FEEOFF.

FEOFFMENT. n. s. [feoffamentum, Lat.] The act of granting possession.

Any gift or grant of any honours, castles, lands, or other immovable things, to another in fee simple, that is, to him and his heirs for ever, by the delivery of seisin of the thing given: when it is in writing, it is called a deed of foendom; and in every foendom the giver is called the feoffor, and he that receiveth by virtue of that the feoffor, feoffatus. The proper difference between a lessee and a donor is, that the foessor gives in fee-simple, and the lessee in fee-fief.

Addison.

FERACITY. n. s. [feracitas, Lat.] Fruitfulness; fertility.

Feral. adj. [feralis, Lat.] Wilder; savage.

To FERREATION. n. s. [feriation, Lat.] The act of keeping holiday; cessation from work.

As though there were any feration in nature, this season is commonly termed the physicians of nature.

Brown.

FERINE. adj. [ferinus, Lat.] Wild; savage.

The only difficulty is touching those ferine, nosorous, and untameable beasts; as lions, tigers, wolves, bears.

FERICANESS. n. s. [from ferine.] Barbarity; savageness; wildness.

A ferine and accessors kind of life, a conversation with those who were fallen into a barbarous habit of life, would assimilate the next generation to barbarism and ferenceness.

Hace.

FERTILITY. n. s. [feritas, Lat.] Barbary; cruelty; wildness; savageness.

He reduced him from the most subject and stupid ferity to his senses, to a better reason.

Woodward's Natural History.

To FERMENT. v. a. [fermento, Lat. fermenter, Fr.] To exalt or raryfy by intestine motion of parts.

Ye vigorous swells! while youth fermenteth your blood,
And purer spirits swell the sprightly flood,
Now range the hills, the thickest woods beset,
Wind the shrill horn, spread the waving net. Pope.

To FERMENT. v. n. To have the parts put into intestine motion.

FERMENT. n. s. [ferment, fermentum, Lat.] 1. That which causes intestine motion.

FERMATE. adj. [from ferment.] Causing fermentation; having the power to cause fermentation.

Aromatic spirits destroy by their fermentive heat.

FERN. n. s. [fern, Sax.] A plant.

The leaves are formed of a number of small pinnules, dotted on the edge of another one by another on slender ribs. On the back of these pinnules are produced the seeds, small and extremely Numerous.
The country people esteem it a sovereign remedy decocted for the rickets in children.

Hild.

Black was the forest, thick with beech it stood, fiery with fern, and intricate with thorn; Few paths of human feet or tracks of beasts were found.

There are great varieties of fern in different parts of the world; but they are seldom cultivated in gardens.

Miller.

FERNY. adj. [from fern.] Overgrown with fern.

The herd suff'rd, did late repair
To ferny groves, and to their forest-lace.
Dryden.

FEROCIOUS. adj. [feror, Lat. ferocite, Fr.] 1. Savage; fierce.

Smould'ry rose in majesty of rad;
Shaking the horns of his ample brows,
And each ferocious feature grin with oze. Pope.

2. Ravacious; rapacious.

The hare, that becomes a prey unto man, unto beasts and fowls of the air, is fruitful even unto superfection; but the lion and ferocious animal hath younger ones but seldom, and but one at a time.

Brown. Fug!' Errors.

FEROCITY. n. s. [ferocitas, Lat. ferocite, Fr. ferocious.] Savageness; wildness; ferocity.

An uncommon ferocity in my countenance, with the remarkable flatness of my nose, and extent of my mouth, have procured me the name of lion.

Addison's Guardian.
One who keeps a ferry: one who for hire transports goods and passengers over the water.

I past, nethought, the melancholy flood.
With that grim ferryman who poises o'er
Unto the king's技术研发
Shakespeare.
The common ferryman of Egypt, that wafted
Over the dead bodies from Memphis, was made By the Greek@ technicians of hell, and doomsday stories raised after him.
Brown.

The greedy ferryman of hell deny'd
Access entrance, till he knew his guide. Reuben, FERTH or FORTH. Common terminations are the same as in English an army; coming from the Saxon word _gyth_.

Gibbon.

FERTILE. adj. [fertile, Fr. fertilité, Lat.]

1. Fruitful; abundant; plentiful.

I had hope of France,
As firm as I hope for fertile England. Shakespeare,
I have had a large, a fair, and a pleasant field, so fertile, that it has given me two harvests in a Summer.
Drapier.

I ask whether in the uncultivated waste of America,
a thousand acres yield as many conveniences of life as ten acres of equally fertile land do in direct: Dedic.

View the wide earth adorns with hills and woods,
Rich in her herbs, and fertile by her floods.
Blackmore.

2. With of before the thing produced.
The earth is fertile of all kind of grain. Camden,
This happy country is extremely fertile, as of these above, so likewise of its productions under ground.
Woodward.

FERTILITY. n. s. [from fertile.]

Fruitfulness; fecundity.

To FERTILIZE, v. a. [from fertile.]

To fecundate; to fertilize; to make fruitful or productive. Not in use.

A cock will in one day fertilize the whole reception of or cluster of eggs not excluded in many weeks after.
Brown.

FERTILITY. n. s. [fertilitas, Lat.]

Fecundity; abundance; fruitfulness; plentifulness.

I will go root away.
The noise wets, that without profit suck
The soil's fertility from wholesome flowers.
Shakespeare, Rich. II.
Paradise itself exceeded in beauty and fertility; and these places had but a resemblance thereof.
Rabine's History.
The quickness of the imagination is seen in the invention, the fertility in the fancy, and the accuracy in the expression of truth.

To inundate England, through which the Nile flows, and the Indies owe their extraordinary fertility, and those mighty crops they produce after these waters are withdrawn.
Woodward.

To FERTILIZE, v. a. [fertilizer, Fr.]

To make fruitful; to make plenteous; to make productive; to fecundate.

Rain-water carries along with it a sort of terrestrial fertiliz'd the kind, as being proper for the formation of vegetables.
Woodward.

FERTILY, adv. [from fertile.]

Fruitfully; plentifully; plentifully; abundantly.

FERVENcy. n. s. [fervens, Lat.]

1. Heat of mind; ardour; eagerness.

One day, dined in his house, which he
With fervency drew up.
Shakespeare.

2. Pious ardour; flame of devotion; zeal.

We have on all sides last lost most of our first fervour
To kindle God's perpetual fire. Hooker, Bellesis.

There must be zeal and fervency in him which propohest for the rest these suits and supplications, which they by their joyful asseverations must ratify.
Hooker.

FERVENTLY. adv. [from fervent.]

1. Eagerly; vehemently.

They all that charged with fervent apply
With greedy malice and impertinent toil. Fairy Q.

2. With pious ardour; with holy zeal.

Epaphras saluteth you, labouuring fervently for you in prayer. Col. iv. 12.

He cares not how or what he suffers, so he be suffering, and, he who so suffers, he may do it frequently, fervently, and acceptably.
Taylor.

FERVID. adj. [fervidus, Lat.]

1. Hot; burning; boiling.

2. Vehement; eager; zealous.

FERVIDity. n. s. [from fervid.]

1. Heat.

2. Zeal; passion; ardour.

FERVIDness. n. s. [from fervid.]

Adour of mind; zeal; passion.

FERVOUR. n. s. [fervor, Lat. fervent, Fr.]

1. Heat; warmth.

Were it an undeniable truth that an effectual fervour proceeded from this star, yet would not the same determine the opinion.
Brown.

Like bright Aurora, whose refugial ray
Forrestals the fervour of ensuing day.
And warns the shepherd with his rocks retreat
To leafy shadows, from the threatened heat. Waller.

These silver drops, like morning dew,
Forrestals the fervour of the day.
Shakespeare, Cymbeline.

So from one cloud do we view the other,
And blasting lightnings burst away.
Pope.

2. Heat of mind; zeal.

Obstinate must needs be had to abolish that which all had held for the space of many ages, without reason so great as might in the eyes of impartial men appear sufficient to clear them from all blame. But the application in fervour of zeal they had removed such holes.
Hooker.

Happy despair hath seized her;
Or, wing'd with fervour of her love, she's flown
To her tender Posthumus. Shakespeare, Cymbeline.

3. Ardour of piety.
The morning trumpets festoons proclaim'd
Through each high street,
Milton's Agonies.
Follow, ye,ymphs and shepherds all,
Come celebrate this festival,
And merrily sing and sport, and play;
'Tis Oriana's nuptial day.
Grasshille
By sacrifice of the toasts they purged away
Whatever they had spoken amiss during the festival.
Broome on the Odyseym.
The festival of our Lord's resurrection, we have Celebrated, and may now consider the chief consequences of his resurrection a judgment to come.
Afterbury's Sermons.
FESTIVE. adj. [festivus, Lat.]
Joyous; gay.
Joyous.
Festive circle round them yield their sounds
To festive mirth and wit that knows no goll.
Thomson.
FESTIVITY. n. s. [festivitas, Lat. from festive.]
1. Festival; time of rejoicing.
The daughter of Jephthah came to be worshipped as a deity, and had an annual festivity observed unto her honour.
There happened a great and solemn festivity, such as the shep-hearings used to be, David condescends to beg of a rich man some small reptast.
Festoon. n. s. [feston, Fr.]
An ornament of carved work in the form of a wreath or garland of flowers, or leaves twisted together, thickest at the middle,
and suspended by the two extremes,
whence it hangs down perpendicularly.
Harris.
FESTUCINE. adj. [festuca, Lat.]
Straw-coloured between green and yellow.
Therein may be discovered a little insect of a fes-tiline or pale green, resembling a locust or grass-hooper.
Brown.
FESTUOUS. adj. [festiva, Lat.]
Formed of straw.
We speak of straw, or fes-tual divisions, lightly drawn over with oil.
Brown's Pulp. Euphry.
To FEST. r. a. To fetch; to go and bring.
Get home with thy Jellation, make ready to fet.
The sooner the easier carriage to get.
Tasur.
But for he was unable to feter them.
A little boy did on him still attend.
Fairy Queen.
And they yet forth Urash out of Egypt to Je-holiak, who slew him with the sword.
South.
FET. n. s. [I suppose from fust, Fr. a part or portion.] A piece.
Not in use.
FET. n. s. [fet, fr. fets, Fr.]
1. To go and bring.
They have devils'd a mean
How he her chamber-widow will ascend,
And without further fetch down.
Shakesp.
We will take men to fetch victuals for the people.
Judges.
Go to the flock, and fetch me from those
Gen. 39.
Two of the monsters of the abyss profound,
Or fetch the aerial eagle to the ground.
Pope.
3. To derive; to draw.
On, you noblest English,
Whose blood is fetch'd from fathers of war-proof.
Shakesp.
3. To strike at a distance.
The conditions of weapons, and their improvements, are the fetching afar off; for that outruns the danger, as it is seen in ordnance and musters.
Shakesp.
4. To bring to any state by some powerful operation.
In smells we see their great and sudden effect in fetching men again, when they swoon.
Bocon.
At home any of those arts immediately thrive, under the encouragement of the prince, and may be fetched up to its perfection in ten or a dozen years, which is the work of an age in other countries.
Add. in Italy.
5. To draw within any confinement or prohibition.
General terms may sufficiently convey to the people what our intentions are, and yet not fetch us within the compass of the ordinance.
Sanderco.
6. To produce by some kind of force.
These ways, if there were any secret excellence among them, would fetch it out, and give it fair opportunities to advance itself.
Milton.
An human soul without education is like marble in the quarry, which shows some of its beauties, till the skill of the polisher fetches out the colours.
Add. in Spectator.
7. To perform: It is applied to motion or cause.
I fetch a turn about the garden, pitting
The pangs of bard's affections; though the king
Hath charg'd you should not speak together.
Shakesp.
When evening grey doth rise, I fetch my round
Over the mount.
Milton.
To come to that place they must fetch a compass three miles on the right hand through a forest.
Knolles's History.
8. To perform with suddenness or violence.
Note a wild and wanton herd
Or race of youthful and unhandled colts,
Fetching mid bounds, bellowing and neighing loud.
Shakesp.
The fox fetch'd a hundred and a hundred leeps at a delicious cluster of grapes.
L'Estrange.
Talk to her of an unfortunate young lad that lost her beauty by the small-pox, she fetch'd a deep sigh.
Add.
9. To reach; to arrive at; to come to.
Mean time flew our ships, and straight we fetch
The syrens isle; a spleeness wind to stretch
Her wings to waltz upon our heads.
Chap.
If earth, industrious of herself, fetch'd day
Travelling East; and with her part averse
From the sun's beam, met night; here pass
Still luminous by his ray.
Milton's Par. Lost.
The hare laid himself down, and took a nap;
for, says he, I can fetch up the torture when I
L'Estrange.
10. To obtain as its price.
During such a state, silver in the coin will never fetch as much as the silver in bullion.
Leke.
To FETCH. r. n. To move with a quick return.
Like a shifted wind unto a sail,
It makes the course of thoughts to fetch about.
Shakesp.
FETCH. n. s. [from the verb.] A strata-gey by which any thing is indirectly performed; by which one thing seems intended and another is done; a trick;
an artifice.
An envious neighbour is easy to find.
His cunning fetches are seldom behind;
His fetch is to flatter, to get what he can;
His purpose greater gotten, a pin for thee then.
Tasur.
It is a fetch of wit;
You laying these slight sullies on my son,
As 'twere a thing a little sail'd I'd 'tis working.
Shakesp, Hamlet.
709
FET

But Siderophel, as full of tricks
As rota men of politicians,
Straightly about you, and at your head.
I turn my way with a fetter. Hudibras.
With this fetter he laughs at the trick he hath played me. Johnson.
The fox has a fetter in.
From these instances and fetters
Thou makst of horses, monks, and witches,
Quoth Albinus, thou seemst to mean
That Alma is a mere machine.
Prior.

FETCHER. n. s. [from fetch.] One that fetches any thing.

FETID. adj. [festidus, Lat. fetide, Fr.] Stinking; rancid; having a smell strong and offensive.

FETRATION. n. s. [from fetter.] The quality of stinking.

FETLOCK. n. s. [feet and lock.] A tuft of hair that grows behind the outer joint of many horses: horses of a low size have scarcely any such tuft. Farrier’s Diet.

FETOR. n. s. [factor, Lat.] A stink; a strong and offensive smell.

Feter. n. s. [from feet; perepe, Sax.] Chains for the feet; chains by which walking is hindered.

FETTER. n. s. [from feet.] It is commonly used in the plural. Fetters. From feet; perepe, Sax.

FETUS. n. s. [fetus, Lat.] Any animal in embryo; any thing yet in the womb; any thing unborn.

Fever. n. s. [fever, Fr. febris, Lat.] A disease in which the body is violently heated, and the pulse quickened, or in which heat and cold prevail by turns. It is sometimes continual, sometimes intermitting.

Think’st thou the fiery fever will go out With titles blown from abdution? Will give place to flesue and low bending? Shakspeare, Henry V.

Duncan is in his grave;
After life’s feeble fever he sleeps well. Shakspeare.
Should not a kingly fever be removed,
Because it long has tag’d within my blood? Brutus.
And yet there’s less, perhaps, in Brutus’ life than had the fever he was then newly recovered. Locke.

To fever. v. a. [from the noun.] To put into a fever.

The white hand of a lively fever thrice
Shake to thee, shake. Shaft. Ant. and Cleopatra.
Her blood all fever’d, with a furious leap,
She sprang from bed distracted in her mind. Dryden.

Feveret. n. s. [from fever.] A slight fever; febricula.

A light fevered, or an old quaran tique, is not a sufficient excuse for non-appearance. Agisfe.

Feverfew. n. s. [febris and fugo, Lat.] A plant.

Common feverfew is the sort used in medicine, and is found wild in many parts of England. Miller.

FEVERISH. adj. [from fever.] 1. Diseased with a fever. 2. Tending to fever. 3. Uncertain; inconstant; now hot, now cold. When all our ease must come by lying still; For all the happiness mankind can gain, is not in pleasure, but in rest from pain. Dryden.

Feverishness. n. s. [from feverish.] A slight disorder of the feverish kind.

Feverous. adj. [feverous, Fr. from fever.] 1. Troubled with a fever or ariague.

Thou mad’st thine enemies shake, as if the world Were feverous, and did tremble. Shak. Coriol. 1. 1.

2. Having the nature of a fever. All feverous kinds.

3. Having a tendency to produce fevers. It hath been noted by the ancients, that southern winds, blowing much without rain, do cause a feverous disposition of the year; but with rain not. Baco’s Nat. History.

Feverry. adj. [from fever.] Diseased with a fever.

O Rome, thy head
Is drown’d in sleep, and all thy body fe’ry.
Ben Jonson’s Catiline.

FEUILLAGE. n. s. [Fr.] A bunch or wreath.

Of Homer’s head I inclose the outline, that you may determine whether you would have it so large, or reduced to make room for feuillages or branches of the foregoing order. Homer. Juven. to Pope.

FEUILLEMOIR. n. s. [Fr.] The colour of a faded leaf, corrupted commonly to philemt.

FEUTERER. n. s. A dogkeeper: perhaps the cleaner of the kennel.

FEW. adj. [fewo, poepea, Sax. fue, Dan.] 1. Not many; not in a great number.

We are left but few of many. Jer.
So much the throst of honour fires the blood; So many would be great, so few be good.
For who would virtue for herself reward?
Or would without the portion of reward? Dryden.

On Winter seas we fester storms behold.
Thus foul diseases that infect the fold. Dryden.

Men have fever or more simple ideas from without, according as the objects they converse with afford greater or less variety. The fever still you name, you wound the more; Bond is but one, but Harpain is a score. Pope.
The party is the madness of many, for the gain of a few. Swift.
The imagination of a poet is a thing so nice and delicate, that it is no easy matter to find out images capable of giving pleasure to one of the fees, who, in any age, have come up to that character. Dryden to Pope.

2. Sometimes elliptically; not many words. To answer both allegations at once, the very substance of that which they contain is in few but this. Hooker.

So having said, he thus to Eve in few: Say, woman, what is this which thou last done?
Thus Jupiter in few unfolds the charge. Dryden.

The firm resolve I here in few disclose. Pope.

FEXW. n. s. [feu, Fr.] Combustible matter; materials for keeping fire: as firewood, coal.

If a spark of error have thus far prevailed, falling even where the wood was green, and farthest in any inclination unto furious attempts, must not the peril thereof be greater in men, whose minds are as dry fuels, apt beforehand unto tumults, seditions and blood.

Pope. Harpiker, Dedication.

Others may give the feuer or the fire; But they the breath, that makes the flame, inspire. Despom.

A known quantity of feuer, all kindled at once, will cause water to boil, which being lighted gradually will never be able to do it. Bentley’s Serm.
To F E W E L. v. a. [from the noun.] To feed with fewel.

Never, alas! the dreadful name,
That feeds the infernal flame.
Cowley.

FEWNESS. n.s. [from few.]

1. Paucity: smallness of number.

These, these, fewness, I could not Distinguish between them as they were named.
Dryden.

2. Paucity of words; brevity; conciseness.

French and true, his Tus.
Shak.

To FEW, v. a. [whegn, Duth.] To cleanse a ditch of mud.

Such muddy deep ditches and pits in the field,
That all a dry summer no water will yield,
By freqent and continual amends.
Commenaries many the husbandman rejoys.
Trav.

FIB. n.s. [A cant word among children.]

A lie; falsehood.

Destroy his fib or sophistry; in vain,
The creature's at his dirty work again.
Pope.

I to often lie,
Searc Harvey's self has told more fibs than 1. Pope.

To FIB. v. n. [from the noun.] To lie; to tell lies; to speak falsely.

If you see any mark, thereby one may know when you fib, and when you speak truth, you had best tell it.
Arbuth.

FIBBER. n.s. [from fib.]
A teller of fibs.

FIBRE. n.s. [fibra, fr. fibra, Lat.]

1. A small thread or string; the first constituent of bodies.

Now sliding streams the thirsty plants renew,
And feed their fibres with reviving dew.
Pope.

2. A fibre, in physick, is an animal thread, of which some are soft, flexible, and a little elastic; and these are either hollow, like small pipes, or spongious and full of small cells, as the nervous and flabby fibres: others are more solid, flexible, and with a strong elasticity or spring, as the membranous and cartilaginous fibres; and a third sort are hard and flexible, as the fibres of the bones. Some so very small as not to be easily perceived; and others so big as to be plainly seen; and most of them appear to be composed of still smaller fibres: these fibres first constitute the substance of the bones, cartilages, ligaments, membranes, nerves, veins, arteries, and muscles.
Quincy.

My heart sinks in me while I hear him speak,
And every slack'd fibre drops its hold,
Like nature setting down the springs of life.

The name of father awes me still.
Dryden.

FIBRIL. n.s. [fibrile, Fr.] A small fibre or string.
The muscles consist of a number of fibres, and each fibre of an incredible number of little fibres bound together, and divided into little cells.
Chev.'s Phil. Princ.

FI BR OUS. adj. [fibræus, Fr. from fibræ.]

Composed of fibres or stamens.
The difference between bodies fibræs and bodies vicious is plain; for all wool and tow, and cotton and silk, have a greenness of moisture.
Bacon.

I saw Petrus' arm emboz'd around
A well-prow'ed oak, to root it from the ground;
This way and that where he wrenched the fibres bands,
The truth of it was in his hands.
Dryden.

The fibrous and solid parts of plants pass undisturbed through the intestines.
Arbuthnot on Anim.

FIBULA. [Lat.] The outer and lesser bone of the leg, much smaller than the tibia: it lies on the outside of the leg; and its upper end, which is not so high as the knee, receives the lateral knob of the upper end of the tibia into a small sinus, which it has in its inner side. Its lower end is received into the small sinus of the tibia, and then it extends into a large process, which forms the outer ankle.
Quincy.

FICKLE. adj. [psil, Sax.]

1. Changeable; inconstant; irresolute; wavering; unstable; mutable; changeful; without steady adherence.

Remember where we are,
In France amongst a fickle waverous nation.
Shak.

Dwells in the fickle grace of her he follows.
Shak.

Changeable is the fickle nature of man.

The fickle penmen of Morpheus' train.
Milton.

They know how fickle common lovers are;
Their oaths and vows are cautiously believed.

For few there are but have been once deceived.
Dryden.

We in vain the fickle sex pursue,
Who change the constant lover for the new.
Prior.

2. Not fixed; subject to vicissitude.

He would be list
To usher; lest the adversary
Triumph, and, by fickle their state, whom God
Most favour's!
Milton's Par. Lost.

FICKENESS. n.s. [from fickle.]

Inconstancy; uncertainty; unsteadiness.

Neither her great worthiness, nor his own suffering for her, could make her change; but, before his marriage-day, he had taken to wife that Becsea of whom she complained.
Sidney.

Beware of fickle ness of fickleness.

In choice and change of thy dear-loved dame.
Quincy.

FICKLY. ade. [from fickle.]

Without certainty or stability.

Do not now,
Like a young wasteful heir, mortgage the hopes
Of godlike majesty on broken terms.

To raise a present powr't that's fickle held
By the frail tissue, frail.

Southern.

FID. n.s. [Ital.]
An act of contempt done with the fingers, expressing a fig for you.

Having once recovered his fortress, he then gives the fig to his adversaries.
Core.

FIDAL, adj. [fidel, Lat.]
Moulded into form; manufactured by the potter.
The cause of fragility is an impotency to be extended; and therefore stone is more fragil than metal, and so fidel earth is more fragil than earth.

FICTION. n.s. [fetio, Lat. fiction, Fr.]

1. The act of feigning or inventing.

If the presence of God in the image, by a mere fiction of the mind, be a sufficient ground to worshipt that image, there is no presence in every creature a far better ground to worshipt it: Stilling it.

Fiction is of the essence of poetry, as well as of painting; there is a resemblance in one of human bodies, things, and actions, which are not real; and in the other of a true story by a fiction.
Dryden.

2. The thing feigned or invented.

If the king, in an oath, pieces any consolations,
By wise discourse, sweet tunes, or poetical fictions;
If I should ceaze these hideous exclamations,
While that my soul, she lives in afflictions, Sidney.

So also was the fiction of those golden apples kept by a dragon, taken from the serpent, which tempted Eve.

Reklegh.

3. A falsehood; a lie.

FICTIOUS. adj. [fetio, Lat. ficitious;
FIE
His greedy beard was long and thick, With which he strung his fiddlestick. Hudibras.
Fiddlestring. n. s. [fiddle and string] The string of a fiddle; that which makes the noise. A fiddlestring, moistened with water, will sink in a note of time, and consequently must be relaxed or lengthened one-sixteenth. Arbuthnot.
Fidelity. n. s. [fidelitas, Lat. fidelitatem, Fr.]
1. Honesty; veracity. The church, by her publick reading of the book of God, ground only as a witness; now the principal thing required in a witness is fidelity. Hooker.
2. Faithful adherence. They mistake credulity for fidelity. Clarke.
To Fidge. v. n. [A cant word] To move nimbly and irregularly. It implies in Scotland agitation. Tim, thou't the Punch to stir up trouble; You wigglie, fidge, and make a rout, Put all your brother puppets out. Swift.
Fiducial. adj. [fiducia, Lat.] Confident; undoubting.
Fie! The faith is cordial, and such as God will accept of, when the effect is fiducial reliance on the promises, and obdissuondum to the command. Hammond's Proct. Catech.
Fiduciary. n. s. [fiduciarus, Lat.]
1. One who holds any thing in trust.
2. One who depends on faith without works.
The second obtrusive is that of the fiduciary, that faith is the only instrument of his justification; and excludes good works from contributing anything toward it. Hammond.
Fiduciary. adj.
1. Confident; steady; undoubting; un-}
2. Not to be doubted. Elision can rely on no where upon mere love and fiduciary obedience, unless at her own home, where she is in her own hand. Hoo-}
FIEF. n. s. [fief, Fr.] A fee; a manor; a possession held by some tenure of a superiour. To the next realm she stretch't her sway, For place near adjoining lay, A plentiful province and alluring prey; A chamber of dependencies was from d, And the whole fief, in right of poetry, she claim'd. Dryden.
As they were honoured by great privileges, so their lands were in the nature of fiefs, for which the possessors were obliged to do personal service at sea. Arbuthnot on Coins.
FIELD. n. s. [pelb, Sax, field, Germ. veld, Dan.
1. Ground not inhabited; not built on. Live with me, and be my love, And we will all the pleasure prove, That hills and vallies, dale and field, And all the many mountains yield. By the civil law the corpse of persons deceased were buried out of the city in the fields. Yeardley.
2. Ground not enclosed.
A great Ostrich, who first taught the swain In Pharian fields to sow the golden grain. Pope.
3. Cultivated tract of ground.
Great Erith, where first taught the swain To fence fields to sow the golden grain. Pope.
4. The open country: opposed to house or quarters. Since his majesty went into the field, I have seen her from her bed. Shak. Macbeth.
FIE
The bell-hounds, as ungorg'd with flesh and blood, Pursue their prey, and seek their wonted food; The fiend remonstrates his countenance. Dryden.
O woman! woman! when to ill thy mind Is bent, all hell contains no fouler fiend. Pope.
Fierce. adj. [fier, Fr. feror, Lat.]
1. Savage; ravenous; easily enraged. Thus humain me as a feris relations, And to the noise of the drum in his head. Dryden.
2. Vehemence in rage; eager of mischief. Destruction cutters in the terebrous wood, And vengeful slaughter, fierce for human blood. Pope.
3. Fierceness, that unrelenting die. Pope.
4. With that the god, whose earths rocketh the ground. Fiercely to Phoebus art the vast profound. Pope.
5. Violent; outrageous; vehemence. Cursed be their anger, for it was fierce; and their wrath, for it was cruel. Gen. xiii. 6.
Fiercely. adv. [from fierce.] Violently; furiously.
Battle joint'd, and both sides fiercely fought. Shakesp.
The defences fiercely assailed by their enemies before, and beaten with the great ordinance behind, were grievously distressed. Kendall.
The air, if very cold, irritates the furnace, and makes it burn more fiercely, as fire scorcheth in frosty weather. Bacon.
Fierceness. n. s. [from fierce]
1. Fiercely; savagely.
The defect of heat which gives fierceness to our nature, may contribute to that roughness of our language. Swift.
2. Eagerness for blood; fury.
Suddenly there came out of a wood a monstrous lion, with a she-lion not far from him, of little less fierceness. Sidney.
3. Quickness to attack; keenness in anger and resentment.
The Greeks are strong, and skilful to their strength, Fierce to their skill, and to their fierceness valiant. Shakesp.
4. Violence; outrageous passion.
His pride and brutal fierceness I abhor; But scorn your mean suspicions of me, Dergy.
5. Vehemence; hasty force.
Fierificialis. ] [in law.] A judicial writ, that lies at all times within the year and day, for him that has recovered in an action of debt or damages, to the sheriff, as to the debt or the damages of his goods against whom the recovery was had. Coke.
Fieriness. n. s. [from fiery]
1. Hot qualities; heat; ceremony. The ashes, by their heat, their fieriness, and their dryness, belong to the element of earth. Boyle.
Fiery. adj. [from fire.]
1. Consisting of fire.
2. Scarcely had Phoebus in the gloomy East Yet harnessed his fiery footeed steed. Ne rest'd above the earth his flaming crest, When the last deadly smook alit did stream. Fairy Queen 712
L'Estrange. (six, Lat. fig. Span. figura, French.)
1. A tree that bears figs.
2. A luscious soft fruit; the fruit of the fig-tree.

FiguE. n.s. [ficus, Lat. figo, Span. figura, French.]
1. A tree that bears figs.
2. A luscious soft fruit; the fruit of the fig-tree.

FIFF, n.s. [fire, Fr.] A pipe blown to the drum; military wind music.

FIGHT. v.n. [fight, L. figet, figere, figere] To fight; to contend; to make war; to battle; to contend in arms.

3. To act as a soldier in any case.
Richard, that rob'd the lion of his heart, and fought the holy wars in Palestine, By this brave duke came early to his grave. Shaksp.

Greatly unfortunate, he fights the cause

4. It has with before the person opposed; sometimes against.
Ye fight with the Chaldens. Jer.
The stars in their courses fought against Sisera. Judges.

5. To contend.
The hot and cold, the dry and humid fight. Sands.

To FIGHT. v.a. To war against; to combat against.

FIGHTER. n.s. [from fight.] Warrior; duellist.

1. Qualified for war; fit for battle.
An host of fighting men went out to war by bands. 2 Chron.

2. Occupied by war; being the scene of war.
In fighting fields as far the spear I throw. As flies the arrow from the well-drawn bow. Pope.

FIGMENT. n.s. [figuremum, Lat.] An invitation; a fiction: the idea feigned.
Upon the like grounds was raised the figure of Briareus, who, dwelling in a city called Hexastochoria, the fancies of those times assigned him a hundred hands.
Those assertions are in truth the figments of those idle brains that brought romances into church history.
It carried rather an appearance of figment and invention, in those that bordered down the memory of it, than of truth and reality. Woodward.

FIGPECTER. n.s. [fig and peek; factula, Lat.] A bird.

FIGURATE. adj. [figulus, Lat.] Made of figures or clay.

FIGURABLE. adj. [figuro, Lat.] Capable of being brought to certain form, and retained in it. Thus lead is figurable, but not water.

The differences of impresible and not impresible, figurable and not figurable, scisible and not scisible, are plebeian notions.

FIGURABILITY. n.s. [from figurable.] The quality of being capable of a certain and stable form.

FIGURAL. adj. [from figure.] 1. Represented by delineation.
Incongruities have been committed by geographers in the figural resemblances of several regions.

2. Figural Number. Such numbers as do or may represent some geometrical figure, in relation to which they are always considered, and are either lineary, superficial, or solid.

Harris.

Figurate. adj. [figuratus, Lat.]

1. Of a certain and determinate form.

Plato and Descartes and determinate, which inanimate bodies are not; for look how far the spirit is able to spread and continue itself, so far goeth the shape or figure, and then is determinate.

Bacon.

2. Resembling any thing of a determinate form: as, figurate stones retaining the forms of shells in which they were formed by the deluge.

3. Figurate Counterpoint. [In music.]

That wherein there is a mixture of discords along with the concords. Harris.

4. Figurate Descant. [In music.]

That wherein discords are concerned, as well, though not so much, as concords; and may well be termed the ornament or rhetorical part of music, in regard that in this are introduced all the varieties of points, figures, syncope, diversities of measures, and whatever else is capable of depending the composition. Harris.

Figuration. n.s. [figuratus, Lat.]

1. Determination to a certain form.

Neither doth the wind, as far, as it carrieth a voice, with motion thereof confound any of the delicate and articulate figuration of living creatures perfect.

Boas's Nat. Hist.

2. The act of giving a certain form.

If motion be in a certain order, there followeth vividification and figuration in living creatures perfect.

Figurative. adj. [figuratif-ee, Fr. from figura, Lat.]

1. Representing something else; typical, representative.

This, they will say, was figurative, and served by God's appointment but for a time, shadow of the here-ever-existing glory of a more divine sanctity; wherein Christ being long since entered, it seemeth that all these curious exercises should rather cease.

Hooker.

2. Changed by rhetorical figures from the primitive meaning; not literal.

How often have we been misled at for understanding words in a figurative sense, which cannot be literally understood without overthrowing the plainest evidence of sense and reason.

This is a figurative expression, where the words are used in a different sense from what they signify in their first ordinary intention.

Rogers.

3. Full of figures; full of rhetorical exornations; full of changes from the original sense.

Sublime subjects ought to be adorned with the sublimest and with the most figurative expressions.

Dryden's Journal, Pref.

Figuratively. adv. [from figurative.]

By a figure; in a sense different from that which words originally imply; not literally.

The custom of the apostle is figuratively to transfer to himself, in the first person, what betides to others.

Homann.

Such words are different, but the sense is all the same; for therein are figuratively intended Usiah and Zacharias.

Brown.

SAVAT. A kind of poetry in which human voices are repeated, partly dramatically, partly simply; but for the most part, figuratively and occasionally.

Dryden's Journal, Dedication.

FIGURE. n.s. [figura, Lat.]

1. The form or anything as terminated by the outline.

Flowers have all exquisite figures, and the flower numbers are chiefly five and four; as prim-roses, briar-roses, single muskroses, single pinkroses, which have five leaves or sepal, filies, flowereludes, borac, buglass, which have four leaves.

Bacon.

Men find green clay that is so long as is in the water, so that one may print on it all kind of figures, and give it what shape one pleases.

Boyle.

Figures are properly modifications of bodies; for pure space is not any where terminated, nor can be; whether there be or be not body in it, it is uniformly continued.

Locke.

2. Shape; form; semblance.

He hath himself beyond the promise of his age, doing in the figure of a lamb the feats of a lion.

Addison.

3. Person; external form; appearance graceful or inelegant, mean or grand.

The blue German shall the Tigris drink, Ere I, forsaking grander and as with truth, Perch the bright and refulgent youth.

Dryden.

I was charmed with the gracefulfulness of his figure and delivery, as well as with his discourses.

Addison.

A good figure, or person, in man or woman, gives credit at first sight to the choice of either.

Clariss.

4. Distinguished appearance; eminence; remarkable character.

While fortune favour'd while his arms support The cause, and told the counsels of the court, I made some figure there, but not my name Dunciad.

Obscure, without my share of fame.

Dryden.

The speech, I believe, was not so much designed by the knight to inform the court, as to give him a figure in my eye, and keep up his credit in the country.

Addison's Spectator.

Not a woman shall be unexplained that makes a figure either as a maid, a wife, or a widow.

Addison's Guardian.

Whether or no they have done well to set you up for making another kind of figure, time will witness.

Addison.

Many princes made very ill figures upon the throne, when before were the favours of the people.

Chaucer's Freeholder.

5. Magnificence; splendour.

If it be his chief end in it to grow rich, that he may live in figure and negligence, and be able to retire, both a great estate and happy trade, as to him, loses all its innocence.

Law.

6. A statue; an image; something formed in resemblance of somewhat else.

Several statues which seemed at a distance of the whitest marble, were nothing else but so many figures in snow.

Addison.

7. Representations in painting; persons exhibited in colours.

In the principal figures of a picture the painter is to form personages, of which this consists the principal beauty of his work.

Dryden.

My favourite books and pictures sell;

Kilkennythrow'red of that figure.

And set the price upon the bigger.

Prior.

Arrangement; disposition; modification.

The figure of a syllogism is the proper disposition of the middle term with the parts of the question.

Watts's Logick.

9. A character denoting a number.

Hearts, tongues, figures, scritas, bars, poetical care.

Think, speak, cast, write, sing, number

His love to Antony.

Shakespeare. Ant. and Cleop.

He that seeketh to be eminent amongst men, hath a great task; but that is ever good for the publick; but he that plots to be the only figure among cyphers, is the decay of a whole age. Bac.

Brown.

As in accounts cyphers and figures pass for real sums, so in human affairs we pass for things themselves.

South's Sermons.

10. The oroscope; the diagram of the aspects of the astrological houses.

We do not know what's brought to pass under the profession of fortunetelling; she works by charms, hy spells, by the figure, and doubtful beyond our element.

He set a figure to discover

If you were tied to Rye or Dover.

Shakespeare.

Figure-fingers and star-gazers pretend to forecast the most illustrious events, but have no foresight in what concerns themselves.

L'Estrange.

Who was the figure of him that is come to come. Rem.

12. [In rhetoric.]

Any mode of speaking in which words are detorted from their literal and primitive sense. In strict acceptation, the change of a word is a trope, and any affection of a sentence a figure; but they are confounded even by the exactest writers.

Silken terms precise,

Three pild' hyperbolas, spuce affecation,

Figures technical, there Summer.

Have blown me for without distinction. Shaks.

Here is a strange figure invented against the plain and natural sense of the words; for by praying the nextest, must be understood only praying to pray.

Sellingfigurs.

They have been taught rhetoric, but never taught language; as if the names of the figures that embellished the discourse of those, who understand the art of speaking, were the very art and skill of speaking well.

Locke.

In grammar. Any deviation from the rules of analogy or syntax.

To Figure. v. a. [from figura, Lat.]

1. To draw or determine a figure or shape.

Trees and herbs, in the growing forth of their boughs and branches, are not figured, and keep no order.

Accept this goblet, rough with figure'd gold.

Dryden. Virg.

2. To show by a corporeal resemblance: as in picture or statue.

Archange figure'd how Jove did abuse Europa like a ball, and by his back Her through the sea did bear; so lively seen, That it true sea, and true ball ye would ween.

Spenser.

Now marks the course of rolling orbs on high, O'er figure'd world now travels with his eye. Pope.

3. To cover or adorn with figures, or images.

I'll give my jewels for a set of beads, My gorgeous palace for a hermitage, My gay apparel for an almsman's gown, My figure'd goblets for a dish of wood. Shaks.

4. To diversify; to variegate with adventitious forms or matter.

But this effusion of such manly drops, Starlike nine eyes, and make me more amaz'd Than had I seen the vanity top an e'en. Dryden.

There is a history in all men's lives, Figuring the nature of the times deceased. Shaks.

Thee, warrior-ring, how should I love? Oh! why should ought less precious or less tough Figure our loves? Danie.

An heroic poem should be more fitted to the common use of the human life, and not more like a glass of nature, figuring a more practicable virtue to us than was done by the ancients. Dryd.
FIL

There is also another kind, called the filler of Conventionalism, whose nostrums are even more virtual, and whose base in its head is enlightened and actuated by its brains. Addison.

To FILCH. r. a. [A word of uncertain etymology. The French word filer, from which some derive it, is of very late production, and therefore cannot be its original.] To steal; to take by theft; to pilfer; to pilage; to rob; to take by robbery. It is usually spoken of petty thefts. He shall find his wealth wonderfully enlarged by keeping his cattle in bucklores, where they are always having a saucy bearing, that none have continually filled and stolen. Spencer.

The common robloch by night, And fights andpeiishes by day. Tennyson. What steals my pore, steals trash; it is something, nothing: Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands; But he that filches from me my good name, Robs me of that which enrichts him, And makes me poor in having. Shaks. Orbello.

He could discern cities like hives of bees, wherein every bee did nouthe else but sting; Some like hortlets, some like fillets, some like drones. Burton on Melancholy.

What made the venture to betray, And filled the lusus, the rogue. Hudibras.

The piaule was formerly a household man, that secretly filled away his neighbour's goods. L'Estr. Fail would they fill that little food away. While unmerited they fill'd those streets, or file-strokes prey. Dry.

So speeds the wildy fox, alar'd by fear, Who lately fill'd the turkey's coule care. Gay.

FILCHER. n. s. [From filler.] A thief; a petty robber. FILCHE. n. s. [file, frum thread, Lat.] A thread; not used. But let me resume the file of my narration, which this object of books, best agreeable to my course of life, hath a little interrupted. Tennyson.

2. A line on which papers are strung to keep them in order. All records, wherein there was any memory of the king's attainer, be cancelled and taken off the file. Bacon.

3. A catalogue; roll; series. Our present masters grow upon the file To five and twenty thousand men of choice. Shaks.

4. A line of soldiers ranged one behind another. That o'er the files and muster of the war Have show'd like plated Mars, now bend, now turn Upon a furs front. Shaks. and Climp.

5. prol. Sax. rife, Dut. An instrument to rub down prominences. The rough or coarse-toothed file, if it be bare, is called a rasp, and is so called from the unevenness of your work which the hammer in the forging: the bastard-toothed file is to take out of the work, the decay of the fishtongues, the rough file made: the fine-toothed file is to take out those cuts, or file-strokes, the bastard file made; and the smooth file is to take out those cuts, or file-strokes, that the fine file made. Morton.

A file for the mantocks and for the cutters. Tennyson.

The smiths and armourers on palmyr's side, Dry.

FILLET. n. s. [file and cutter.] A maker of files.

Gad-steed is a tough sort of steel; file-cutter use it to make their chisels, with which they cut their files. Mason.

To FILE. r. a. [From filem a thread.] 1. To string upon a thread or wire. Whence to file a bill is to offer it in its order to the notice of the judge. From the day his first bill was filed he began to collect debts. Artabanus and Nepos.

2. [From pelan, Sax.] To cut with a file. They which would file away most from the largeness of that offer, do in more sparing terms acknowledge little less. Let us be careful how they attempt to cure a blemish by filing or cutting off the head of such an overgrown tooth. Hey.

3. To smooth; to polish. His humour is lofty, his discourse peremptory, his tongue filed, and his eye ambitious. Shaks.

4. [From filar, Sax.] To foul; to pollute. This sense is retained in Scotland. For Banquo's issue have I fill'd my mind, For them the glorious Duncan have I mur'd. Shaks.

His weeds divinely fashioned. All file'd and smog'd. Chapman.

To FILIC. r. n. [From the noun.] To march in a file, not abreast, but one behind another. All ran down without order or ceremony, 'till we drew up in good order, and filed off. Talier.

5. Did all the groser atoms at the cell Of chance file off to form the pondeous ball, And undetermin'd into order fall? Blackmore.

FILEMOT. n. s. [corrupted from feuille morte a dead leaf, Fr.] A brown or yellow-brown colour. The colours you ought to wish for are blue or filement, turned up with red. Swift.

FILER. n. s. [From file.] One who files; one who uses the file in cutting metals.

FILLIAL. adj. [filial-ile, fr. filius, Lat.] 1. Pertaining to a son; befitting a son. My mischievous proceeding may be the glory of his filial piety, the only reward now left for so great a virtue. Dry.

2. From imposition of strict laws, to free. Acceptance of large grace; from servile fear To fill; to work; to work for a snake of filth, Milton.

He grie'd, he wept, the sight an image brought Of his own filial love, a sadly pleasing thought. Dry.

3. Bearing the character or relation of a father. And thus the filial godhead awaking spoke. Milton.

Where the old myrtle her good influence shed, Springs of like leaf erect their filial heads; And when the parent rose decayed and dies, With a resembling face the daughter birds arise.* Dry.*

FILLATION. n. s. [from filius, Lat.] The relation of a son to a father; correlative to paternity. The relation of paternity and filiation, between the first and second person, and the relation between the sacred persons of the Trinity, and the denomination thereof, must needs be eternal, because the cause of relations between whom that relation inheres was eternal. Hale's Orig. Mason.

FILLINGS. n. s. [without a singular; from fill.] Filing the iron infused in vinegar, will, with a delection of galls, make good ink, without any copperas. Brown.
1. To fill store 'till no more can be admitted. Fill the waterpots with water; and they filled them up to the brim. John, ii. 7.

2. To fill abundantly. Be fruitful, multiply, and in the sea. Genesis ii. 11.

3. To satisfy; to content. He with his consent Erec. The story heard attentive, and was fill'd Milton.

4. To glut; to surfeit. Thou art going to lord Timon's feast. Ay, to see meat fill'd knives, and wine heat flows.

5. To fill out. To pour out liquor for drink.

6. To fill out. To extend by something contained. I only speak of him Whom pomp and greatness sits so loose about, That he wants majesty to fill then out. Dryden.

7. To fill up. [Up is often used without much addition to the force of the verb.] To make full. Hope leads from goal to goal, And opens still, and opens on his soul; Till lengthen'd on to faith, and unconfin'd, It pours the bliss that fills up all the mind. Pope.

9. To fill up. To occupy by bulk. There would not be altogether so much water required for the land as for the sea, to raise them to the height of the mountains and hills would fill up part of that space upon the land, and so make less water requisite. Burnet.

10. To fill up. To engage; to employ. Haste, far you ride! —As far, my lord, as will fill up the time. "Twixt this and supper. Shakesp. Macbeth.

11. To fill. v. n.

1. To give to drink. In the cup which he hath fill'd, fill'd to her double. Rev. xviii.

2. To grow full.

3. To glut; to satiate. Things that are sweet and fat are more filling: do swim and hang more about the mouth of the stomach, and go not down so speedily. Bacon.

4. To fill up. To grow full. Neither the Palus Moscus nor the Euxine, nor any other seas, fill up, or by degrees grow shallower. Woodward.

5. Fill. n. s. [from the verb.] 1. As much as may produce complete satisfaction. Her neck and breasts were ever open bare, That eye thereof her babies may suck their fill. Fairy Queen.
FIN

It is described like tissipeps, or birds which have their feet or claws divided; whereas it is palimpsest of purpose, like a weasel and other animals according to the method of nature in lustrative or flat-billed birds; which being generally swimmers, were removed out of the action, and they are framed with fins or ears upon their feet.

Brown.

FINABLE, adj. [from fine.] That admits a fine; that which deserves a fine.

This is the order for writs of covenant that be

FIN. [Fr., fain.] To desire.

He sent letters to the council, wherein he acknowledged himself favoured in bringing his FINISH, n.s. [from finish.] To percolate; to filter.

To finish a method by which liquors are procured fine and clear. The filtration in use is straining a liquor through paper, which, by the smallness of its pores, admits only the finer parts through, and keeps the rest behind.

Quincy.

We took then common nitre, and having, by the usual way of solution, filtration, and consummation, of the nitre, we put four ounces of this purified nitre into a strong new crucible.

Boyle.

FIN. [Fr., fain.] Revenue; income; profit. It is seldom used in the singular.

This sort of finance hath been increased. Bacon.

The residue of these ordinary finances be casual or uncertain; as be the escheats and forfeitures.

Bacon.

His pretence for making war upon his neighbours was their pyramids, though he practised the same nothing when his was left behind in the siege of Byzantium.

Arbuthnot.

FINANCER, n.s. [Fr.] One who collects or farms the publick revenue; one who understands the publick revenue.

FINARY, n.s. [from To fine.] In the iron works, the second forge at the iron mills.

Dict.

FINCH. n.s. [true, Sax.] A small bird, of which we have three kinds, the goldfinch, chaffinch, and bullfinch.

To FIN, v.r. [mean, Sax. vindu, Dut.] To obtain by searching or seeking.

Ask, and it shall be given to you; seek, and ye shall find.

Matt. vii. 7.

FINCH, n.s. [true, Sax.] A small bird, of which we have three kinds, the goldfinch, chaffinch, and bullfinch.

To FIN, v.r. [mean, Sax. vindu, Dut.] To obtain by searching or seeking.

Ask, and it shall be given to you; seek, and ye shall find.

Matt. vii. 7.

Whereas thou hast searched all my stuff, what hast thou found of all the household stuff?

Gen. xxxi. 37.

She disappears, and left me dark; I wak'd To find her, or for ever to deplore

Her, I threw it out, and hurled it against the cage, ending at last up passage out, It sits and sings.

Cowley.

2. To obtain something lost.

When he hath found his sheep, he layeth it on his shoulders rejoicing.

xv. 5.

In my school days, when I had lost one shaft, I shot his fellow of the self-same flight The selfsame way, with the same wan watch To find the other forth; by wearing both, I left found both.

Shakesp. Mer. of Venice.

3. To obtain something desired.

Thus I embolden'd to speak, and freedom acted Permissive, and accept found.

Milton.

Our voluntary service he requires, Not our necessitated, such as himself finds no acceptance, nor can find.

Milton.

4. To meet with; to fall upon.

There watchful at the gate they find

Suspicion with her eyes behind.

Dodd's Miscell.

Milton.

The bad must nis, the good unsought shall find.

Fope.

5. To know by experience.

How oft will be

Of thy chang'd faith complaint!

And his fortunes, find to be so airy and so vain.

Cowley.

The torrid zone is now found habitable.

Cowley.

6. To come to; to attain.

The sun that barren shines,

Whose virtue on itself works no effect,

But in the fruitful earth; there first received

His beams, uneative, else, their vigour found.

Milton.

7. To discover by study, or attention.

The fox that first this cause of grief did find,

"Gain first truth by this sense with wandering mind.

Hubbard.

Physicians

With sharpen'd sight, some remedies may find.

Dry.

Thy said! ah, find some noble theme,

Whereon they doubts to place.

Cowley.

8. To discover what is hidden.

A curse on him who found the oar.

Cowley.

9. To hit on by chance; to perceive by accident.

They build on sands, which if mudder they find,

Tis but because there was no wind.

Cowley.

10. To gain by any mental endeavours.

I was conversing with a wise man

From prone, nor in their ways compleance find.

Milton.

If we for happiness could leisure find,

And wandering time into a method bind,

We should not then the great men's favour need.

Cowley.

We oft review, each finding like a friend

Something to blame, and something to commend.

Pope.

11. To remark; to observe; to perceive.

Thus far to try thee, Adam, I was pleased,

And found thee know what is and what is not.

Thou thoughtest rightly nam'd, but of thyself.

Milton.

Beauty or wit in all I find.

Cowley.

12. To detect; to deprr hend; to catch.

When first found in a sin, talk to him of it as a strange monstrous matter, and so shame him out of it.

Lecky.

13. To reach; to attain.

They are glad when they can find the grave.

Job, iii.

They also know,

And reason not concerning with these;

Find pastime, and bear rule.

Milton.

In solitude What happiness, who can enjoy alone.

Or all enjoying, what contentment find? Milton.

He did the utmost bounds of knowledge find,

Yet found them not so large as was his mind.

Cowley.

717
14. To meet. A clear conscience and heroic mind, In all their business and their glory find. Cowley.

15. To settle; to fix any thing in one's own opinion. Some men
The marks of old and fast would find. Cowley.

16. To determine by judicial verdict. They would enforce to find as they would desire; and if they did not, convert, imprison, and fine them. Bacon.

17. To supply; to furnish: as he finds me in money and in victuals. A war with Spain is like to be lucrative, if we go roundly on at first; the war in consequence will find them. Bacon.

Still govern thou my song,
Urania, and fit audience find, though few, Milton.

18. [In law.] To approve: as to find a bill.

19. To determine: as to find for the plaintiff.

20. To find himself. To be; to fare with regard to ease or pain, health or sickness.

Pray, sir, how d'ye find yourself? says the doctor. L'Estrange.

21. To find out. To unfind; to solve. The finding out of parable is a wearisome labour of the understanding. Eccles. xiii. 26.

22. To find out. To discover something hidden.
Canst thou by searching find out God? Canst thou find the Almighty to perfection? Job, ii. 10.

There are agents in nature able to make the particles of bodies stick together by very strong attractions, and it is the business of experimental philosophers to find them out. Bacon.

What hinders then, but that you find her out, and hurry her away by main force? Addison. Cato.

23. To find out. To obtain the knowledge of.
The principal part of painting is to find out, and thoroughly to understand, what nature has made most beautiful.

24. To find out. To invent; to excogitate. The art of Tyre, skillful in work of gold, and to find out every device which shall be put to him. 2 Chron. ii. 18.

25. The particle out is added often without any other use that it adds some force or emphasis to the verb.

While she proudly march'd about, Greater conquests to find out, She beat out Susan by the way. Cale.

It is agreeable to compare the face of a great man with the character, and to try if we can find out in his looks and features either the haughty, cruel, or merciful temper. Addison.

He was afraid of being insulted with Greek; for which reason he desired a friend to find him out a clergyman rather of plain sense than much learning. Addison's Spectator.

26. To find, a word of very licentious and capricious use, not easily limited or explained; its first idea is the consequence of search; the second, equally frequent, is mere occasion.

FINDER. n. s. [find.] 1. One that meets or falls upon any thing. We give the device to the sea, and crown thee for a finder of madness. Shak. Twelfth Night.

2. One that picks up any thing lost. Some lewed speaking cryer, May call the finder's conscience, if they meet. Donne.

O yes! if any happy eye This roving wanton shall descry Let the fair seer surely know Mine is the wag; 'tis that one The wag'd wand'erer. Croswell.
FIN

FINE, adj. [fine and finger.] Nice; artful; exquisite. The most finelinger'd workman on the ground, A circumstance of ease must be stood upon, in case it were not upon some fineene. Haywood.

FINELY, adv. [from fine.]

1. Beautifully; elegantly; more than justly. Plutarch says very finely, that a man should not allow himself to hate even his enemies; because if you indulge this passion on some occasions, it will rise of itself in others. Addition.

2. Keenly; sharply; with a thin edge or point. Get you black lead, sharpened finely, Peckam.

3. Not coarsely; not meanly; guilty. He was alack, save that he had two persons of honour, on either hand one, finely attired in white. Bacon's New Atlantis.

4. In small parts; subtly; not grossly. Salt-petre was but grossly beaten; for it should not be finer powder than that. B. of N. Hist.

5. [Ironically.] Wretchedly; in such a manner as to deserve contemptuous notice. Let him be made to obey, and not to be obeyed, and you will find that kingdom finely governed in a short time. South.

For him she loves! She nam'd not me; that may be Torridonism, Which, if it privy seen this day, Then is finelinger'd in my own snare. Dryden.

FINENESS, n. s. [from fine.]

1. Elegance; beauty; delicacy. Everything was full of a choice fineness, that, if wanted any thing in making, it supplied such an increase in pleasantness; and if at the first it struck not admiration, it ravished with delight. Sidney.

As the French language has more fineness and smoothness, it had more of the common spirit, and force in Montaigne's days. Temple.

The softness of her sex, and the fineness of her genius, conspire to give her a very distinguishing character. Prior.

2. Show; splendour; gaiety of appearance. The fineness of clouts destroys the ease: It often helps men to pain, but can never rid them of any; the body may languish under the most splendid cover. Decoy of Piety.

3. Subtily; artfulness; ingenuity. Those, with the fineness of their souls, Shall keep alive their dignity. Shakesp.

4. Purity; freedom from dross or base mixtures. Our works are, indeed, nought else But the purest tryals of great Jove, To find perspicuous constancy in men. The fineness of which metal is not found In fortune's love. Shakesp. Troilus and Cressida.

I am doubtful whether men have sufficiently refined metals; as whether iron, brass, and tin be refined to the height; but when they come to such a fineness as serveth the ordinary use, they are no finer powders than that. B. of N. Hist.

The ancients were careful to coin their money in due weight and fineness, only in times of exigencies; they have diminished both the weight and fineness. Atholbutch on Coins.

FINERY, n. s. [from fine.] Show; splendour of appearance; gaiety of colours. Dress up your houses and your images, And put on all your finery, To consecrate this day a festival. Southern.

The capacities of a lady are sometimes apt to fall short in cultivating cleanliness and finery together. Do not chance your place of study by the finery of the prospects, or the most various scenes of sensible things. Swift.

They want to grow rich in their trades, and to maintain their families in such some figure and degree of finery, as a reasonable Christian life has no occasion for. Law.

FINESE. n. s. [Fr.] Artifice; stratagem; an unnecessary word which is creeping into the language. A circumstance of ease must be stood upon, in case it were not upon some fineness. Haywood.

FINER, n. s. [from fine.] One who purifies metals. Take away the dross from the silver, and there shall come forth a vessel for the finer. Prov. xxxv. 4.

FINING, n. s. [from fine.] Six or from finage to hold. The flexible member of the hand by which men catch and hold. The fingers and thump in each hand consist of fifteen bones, there being three to each finger. Quincy.

You seem to understand me, By each at once her clumpky finger laying Upon her skinny lips. Shak. Mac.

Diogenes, who is never said, For aught that ever I could read, To whine, put finger i' th' eye, and sob, Because he had never a fiNing hand. [Footnote: Libibras.] The hand is divided into four fingers, bending forward, and one opposite to them bending backwards, and of greater strength than any of them. The thumb is so highly inclined, which with them severally united; whereby it is fitted to lay hold of objects of any size or quantity. Bayle.

A hand of a vast extension, and a prodigiously number of fingers playing upon all the organs pipes of the world, and making every one sound a particular note. Keist against Burnet.

Poor Dog sewed, spun, and knit for a livelihood, 'till her fingers ends were sawed. Arathy, John Bail.

3. A small measure of extension; the breadth of a finger. Go now, go trust the wind's uncertain breath, Because' d four fingers from his broken death. Or seven at most, when thickness is the test. Dryden.

One of these bows with a little arrow did pierce through a piece of steel three fingers thick, Willius.

The hand; the instrument of work; manufacture; art; Fool, that forgets her stubborn look, This softness from thy finger took. Woller.

To finger. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To touch lightly; to toy with. Go, get you gone, and let the papers lie; You would be fingering them to anger me. One that is so highly pleased with the near sight and fingering of money, as with the thoughts of his being considered as a wealthy man. Leech's Complete Sec.

2. To touch unseasonably or trivishly. His ambition would need be fingering the sceptre, and hoisting him into his father's throne. South.

3. To touch an instrument of music. She hath broke the lute; I did but tell her she mistook her frets, And bow'd her hand to touch her fingeering. Shak.

4. To perform any work exquisitely with the fingers. Not any skill'd in loops of fingering fine, With this so curious net-work might compare. Spearer.

FINFER, n. s. [finger and corn; asplenium, Lat.] A plant. Finger-fern.

FINERSTONE, n. s. [finger and stone; delictes, Lat.] A fossil resembling an arrow. Finglefangle.

FINELANGE, n. s. [from fangles.] A trifle; a burlesque word. We agree in nothing but to wrangle About the slightest finglefangle. Hudibras.

FINICAL, adj. [from fine.] Nice; foppish; pretending to superfluous elegance. A whoreson, glassglazing, super servicable, finical rogue. Shakep. King Lear.

FINISH. v. a. [fair, Fr. finito, Lat.] 1. To bring to the end purposed; to complete. For which of you, intending to build a tower, sighteth not down first, and cometh the cost, whether he have sufficient to finish it? Luke, xiv. 29. As had began, so he would also have finished in the same grace. 2 Cor. vii. 11.

2. To make perfect. A poet uses episodes; but episodes, taken separately, finish nothing. [Footnote: Brome on the Odyssey.]

3. To perfect; to polish to the excellency intended. Though here you all perfection should not find, Yet is it all th' Eternal Will design'd; It is a finish'd work, and perfect in its kind. Blackmore.

I would make what bears your name as honour'd as the work ought to be; that is more finish'd than the rest. Fig.

4. To end; to put an end to.

FINISHER, n. s. [from finish.]

1. Performer; accomplisher.

He that of greatest works is finisher, Oft does them by the weakest minister. Shakep.

2. One that puts an end; ender.

This was the condition of those times; the world against Atheanaxis, and Athanaxis against it; half an hundred years spent in doubtful trials which of the two, in the end, would prevail; the side which had all, or else that part which had no friend but God and death, the one a defender of his innocence, the other a finisher of all his troubles. Hooker.

3. One that completes or perfects. The author and finisher of our faith. Hebrews.

O prophet of glad tidings! finisher Of utmost hope! Milton's Par. Lost.

FINITE, adj. [finitus, Lat.] Limited; bounded; terminated.

Serving conceives no more thereby than a finite number for indeXability. Bowens. Err.

Finite of any magnitude limits not any proportion to infinite. Leets.

That supposed infinite duration will, by the very supposition, be limited at two extremes, though never so remote asunder, and consequently be in itself finite. Litt.

FINITELESS, adj. [from finite.] Without bounds; unlimited.

It is ridiculous unto reason, and finiteless as their desires. Brown's Vulg. Err.

FINITELY, adv. [from finite.] Within certain limits; to a certain degree.

They are creatures limited, and that sets them at an infinite distance from God; whereas all their excellencies can make them but finely distant from other things. Seguer.

FINITENESS, n. s. [finite.] Limitation; confinement within certain boundaries.

I sought now to unbay the current of my passion, and love without other boundary than what is set by the nature or capacity of one another; infinitem, the unboundedness of these degrees of affections, or properties. Chene.

FINLESS, adj. [from fin.] Wanting fins.
They spied many parts of the city, and fired the houses of those whom they esteemed not to be their friends; but the rage of the fire was at first kindred, and then appeased by the fall of a sudden shower of rain. Hayward.

The breathless body thus bewailed they lay, And fire the pile.

A second Paris, diffusing flame, Shall fire his country with a second flame. Dryden.

2. To inflame the passions; to animate.

Yet, if desire of fame, and thirst of pow'r, A fortunate prince with a crown in d'vour, So fire your mind, in arms assert your right. Dryden.

3. To drive by fire.

He parts that us shall bring a brand from heav'n And fire us hence. Shaks. King Lear.

To FIRE, v. n.

1. To take fire; to kindled.

2. To be inflamed with passion.

3. To discharge any firearms.

The fainting Dutch remotely fire, And the fam'd Eugene's iron troops retire. Smolik.
FIRBRAND. n. s. [fire and brand.]
1. A piece of woodkindled.

I have caus'd my father-in-law of a firebrand, to set upon him house by house. —Shak."n.

2. An incendiary; one who inflames factions; one who causes mischief.

'Troy must not be, nor gladly Ilium stand: Out firebrand brother, Paris, burns us all. —Shak."n.

He sent Surrey with a complot of wood to enrage the rebels, who fought with the principal branch of them, and defeated them, and took alive John Chamber, the firebrand, and 160 men. —Bacon.

FIRECROSS. n. s. [fire and cross.] A token in Scotland for the nation to take arms: the ends thereof burnt black, and in some parts smeared with blood. It is carried from one place to another. Upon refusal to send it forward, or to raise, the last person who has it shoots the other dead.

He sent his heralds through all parts of the realm, and commanded the firecross to be carried, namely two firebrands set in fashion of a cross, and pitched upon the point of a spear. —Hogwood.

FIRELOCK. n. s. [fire and lock.] A soldier's gun; a gun discharged by striking steel with flint.

Prime all your firelocks, fasten well the stake. —Gay.

FIREMAN. n. s. [fire and man.] 1. One who is employed to extinguish burning houses.

The fireman sweat beneath his crooked arms; a leather casque his venturous head defends. Boldly he climbs where thickest smoke ascends. —Gay.

2. A man of violent passions.

I had last night the fate to drink a battle with two of these fire-wagons. —Tatler.

FIREPLAN. n. s. [fire and pan.] 1. A pan for holding fire.

2. [In a gun.] The receptacle for the priming powder.

FIRESHIP. n. s. [fire and ship.] A ship filled with combustible matter to fire the vessels of the enemy.

Our men that thrice met themselves of the fireship, by cutting the spirits tackle. —Weseman.

FIREHOVEL. n. s. [fire and scowl.] The instrument with which the hot coals are thrown up in kitchens.

Culinary utensils and irons often feel the force of fire. As tongues, firehovals, prongs, and irons. —Brown.

The neighbours are coming out with forks and firehovals, and spits, and other domestic weapons. —Dryden's Spanish Fridge.

FIRESTONE. n. s. [fire and stone.] The firestone, or pyrites, is a compound metallic fossil, composed of vitrified, sulphur, and an unmetallic earth, but in very different proportions to the several masses. The most common sort, which is used for kindling, is a greenish shapeless kind found in our clay-jets, out of which the green vitriol or copperas is procured. It has the name of pyrites, or firestone, from its giving fire on being struck against a steel much more freely than a flint will do; and all the sparks burn a longer time, and grow larger as they fall, the inflammable matter of which being broken off from the stone burning itself out before the spark becomes extinguished. —Hill's Mat. Med. Firestone, if broke small, and laid on cold grounds, must be of advantage as a combustible power again.

FIREWOOD. n. s. [fire and wood.] Wood to burn; fuel.

FIRING. n. s. [from fire.] Flew.

They burn the cakes, firing being there scarce. —Mortimer.

To FIRE. r. a. [fire, Lat.] To whip; to beat; to correct; to chastise.

Vol. 1.
F IR

First-begotten. n. s. [first-born and fruits] and begotten.] The eldest of children. Milton.

First-born. n. s. [first born] and first. Eldest; the first by the order of nativity. Last, with one midday stroke, all the first-born of Egypt must die. Milton's Par. Let. Hall, holy light, offspring of he'av'n first-born! The first-born has not a sole or peculiar right, by any law of God and Nature; the younger children have an equal title with him. Locke on Education.

First-fruits. n. s. [first fruits] and fruits. 1. What the season earliest produces or matures of any kind. A sweaty reaper from his tillage brought First-fruits, the green ear, and the yellow sheaf. The blooming hopes of my then virgins young patron have been confirmed by most noble first-fruits, and his life is going towards a plentiful harvest. Prior.

2. The profits of any thing which are soonest gained. Although the king loved to employ and advance his servants, because, having rich bounties, they carried their reward upon themselves; yet he did use to raise them by steps, that he might not lose the profit of the first-fruits, which by that course of graduation was multiplied. Prior.

3. The earliest effect of any thing. See, Father, what first-fruits are on earth are sprung, from thy implanted grace in man. Milton.

First-listing. n. s. [from first] That which is first produced or brought forth. All the first-fruits males that come of thy herd, and of thy flock, thou shalt sanctify unto the Lord thy God. Deut.

First-listing. n. s. [from first] 1. The first produce or offspring. A shepherd next. More meek, came with the firstlings of his flock. Choicer and mildest, Milton's Par. Let. List. Many a one under firstlings of my woody beech, shall on his holy alter often bleed. Milton's Virgils. The firstlings of the flock are doomed to die. Pope.

2. The thing thought or done before another. Our play Leaps over the vacant and firstlings of these bolls, Glimm'ring 't middle. Shaksp. Trew. and Crew.

FISH. n. s. [fish, catch, etc.] 1. An animal that inhabits the water. Fish is used collectively for the race of fishes. The beasts, the fish, the winged flies. And many a fishy word and phrase. Spenser, Com. of Err. And now the fish glide safe to escape. Since Venus ow'rd her safety to the shape. Creech. There are fishes, that bring their eggs, that are not strung to the airy region; and there are some birds that inhabit the water, whose blood is as cold as fishes; and their flesh is so like, in taste, that the scrumpulous are allowed them on fish-days. Locke.

2. The flesh of fish opposed to that of terrestrial animals, by way of eminence called flesh. I fight when I cannot chuse, and I eat no fish. Shaksp. Lear.

We mortify ourselves with the diet of fish, and think we fare cosily if we abstain from the flesh of other animals. Brown.

To FISH. v. n. 1. To be employed in catching fishes. 2. To endeavour at any thing by artifice. While others fish, with craft for great opinion, With great truth catch so simplicity. Shaksp. To FISH. v. n. a. To search water in quest of fish, or any thing else. Some have fished the very jakes for papers laid there by men of wit. Swift. Oft, as fish caught in heretrealms for wit. The goddess favou'rd him, and favours yet. Pope.

Fish-hook, n. s. [fish and hook]. A hook baited, with which fish are caught. A sharp point, bend'd upward and backward, like a fish-kettle. Great's Museum.

Fish-pond, n. s. [fish and pond]. A small pool for fish. Fish-ponds are no small improvement of witty bogy lands. Mortimer's Husbandry.

Fish ponds were made wide for forests shooting. And hills were level'd to the extend the view. Prior. After the great value the Romans put upon fishes, it will not appear strange, that C. Hirius should serve them with a virtuus. Prior.

Fishers, n. s. [from fish] One who is employed in catching fish. In our sight three were taken up, by fishermen of Corinth, as we thought: At length another seiz'd on us, and would have seiz'd the fishers of their prey, Had not they been very slow of all. Shaksp.

We know that town is but with fishers fraught, Where Theseus govern'd and where Plato taught. Sandys.

Lest he should suspect, it draw it from him, As fishes do the boll, to make him follow it. Pope.

A soldier now he with his cost appears; A fisher vow, his trembling angle bears. Pope.

Fisherman, n. s. [fisher and boat]. A boat employed in catching fish. Fisherman. n. s. [fisher and man]. One whose employment and livelihood is to catch fish.

How careful, and dizzy 'tis to cast one's eyes so low! The fishermen that walk upon the beach Appear like those that go a-wandering. Shaksp. Lear.

At length two monsters of unequal size, Hard by the shore, a fisherman espies. Waller.

Do see how it be yet of this exactness; You might have 'bought the fishersmen for less. Dryd.
FIT
FIT

FISTULA. n. s. [Lat. fistula, Fr.] A sinuous ulcer callous within; any sinuous ulcer.

That fistula which is recent is the easiest of cure; those of a long continuance are accompanied with ulcerations of the gland, and carries in the bone.

Wm.SONs's Surgery.

2. Fistula Lacrymalis. A disorder of the canals leading from the eye to the nose, which obstructs the natural progress of the tears, and makes them trickle down the cheek; but this is only the first and mildest stage of the disease: in the next there is matter discharged with the tears from the puncta lacrymalis, and sometimes from an orifice broke through the skin between the nose and angle of the eye. The last and worst degree of it is when the matter of the eye, by its long continuance, has not only corroded the neighbouring soft parts, but also affected the subjacent bone. Sharp's Surgery.

FISTULAR. adj. [from fistula.] Hollow like a pipe.

FIT
FIT

By fits my swelling grief appears,
In rising sighs and falling tears. Addison. On Italy. Thus o'er the desolate steppes of time
Hangs quivering on a point, leaped off by fits,
And falls again as lost to quit its hold. Addison. Religion is not the business of some fits only and irregular hours; but a system of precepts to be regarded in all our conduct. Rogers. And balanced by an equal degree of pain or languor: 'tis like spending this year, part of the next.

Swift.

3. Any violent affection of mind or body, the life did not cease, and all his senses were with deadly fit opprest. Fairy Queen.

An ambitious man puts it in the power of every malicious tongue to throw him into a fit of melancholy. Addison.

4. Disorder; distemperature.

For your husband,
He's noble, wise, judicious, and best knows
The fit of the season. Shakesp. Macbeth.

5. It is used without an epithet of discrimination, for the hysterical disorders of women, and is no rare visit of children; and by the vulgar for the epilepsies of the brain.

Mrs. Bull was so much enraged, that she fell downright into a fit. Arbuthnot's John Bull.

6. It was anciently used for any reconnaissance after intermission. The parts of a song orcantus of a poem were called fits.

Fits.

FITCH, n. s. [fist, fr. fr. fesse, fr. fische, fr. Dutch.] A stinking little beast, that robs the hen-roost and warren. Skinner calls him the stinking ferret; but he is much larger, at least as some provinces distinguish them, in which the polecat is termed a fitchet, and the stinking ferret a stoat.

'Tis such another fitchet naery, a perfamed one What do you mean by this hauint of me? Shak.

The fitchet, the salamand, and the like creatures, live upon the face and within the bowels of the earth.

Walten's Angler.

FITAL. adj. [fit and full.] Varied by paroxysms; disordered by change of maladies.

Dunce is in his grave; after life his fitts feverish to all. Shak. Mach.

FITLY. adv. [from fit.]

1. Properly; justly; reasonably.

Even so much ffit.
As you nulgin our senator. Shakesp. Coriol. Where a man cannot fully play his own part, if he have not a friend, he may quit the stage. Bacon. I cannot fitcher compare marriage to any other sort; for, in both, he that ventures may succeed, and may miss; and if he draw a prize, he hath a rich return of his venture; but in both lotteries the misfortunes of others he must bear.

The whole of our duty may be expressed most ffit by departing from evil.

2. Commonly; meetly; aptly.

To take a latitude.
Sun or stars are fittish view'd At their brightest; but to conclude Of longitudes, what other way have we But to mark when and where the dark eclipses be.

Demor.

An animal, in order to be moveable must be flexible; and therefore is fittish made of separate and small solid parts, with proper fluids. Arbuth.

FITNESS. n. s. [from fit.]

1. Propriety; meetness; justness; reasonableness.

In things the fitness wheresof is not of itself apparent, nor easy to be made sufficiently manifest unto all, yet the judgment of antiquity, concerning with that which is received, may induce them to think it not unparticular.

Hakker. The queen being absent, 'tis a needful fitness That we adjourn this court. Shakesp. Henry VIII.

We try our fittness.
To let these hands obey my bleeding blood, They're apt enough to dissolve and scatter Free and bare branches. Shakesp. King Lear.

2. Convenience; commodity; the state of being fit.

Nur time nor place
Did then coherence, and yet you would make both:
They've made themselves, and that their fitness now

FITMENT. n. s. [from fit.] Something adapted to a particular purpose. Not used.

Poor because, 'twas a fittent for
The purpose I then follow'd. Shakesp. Cymbeline.

FITTER. n. s. [from fit.]

1. The person or thing that confers fitness upon any thing.

Sowing the sandy gravelly land in Devonshire and Cornwall with French furze seed, they reckon a great improver of their land, and a fitter of it for corn.

Mortimer's Husbandry.
FIX

2. [from fæta, It. feto, Ger.] A small piece; as, to cut into fillets. Skinner.

FIXTURE. n. s [Norman, from fis a son, Fr.]
A son. Only used in law and genealogy as Fitcher, the son of Herbert; Fitzthomas, the son of Thomas; Fitzroy, the son of the king. It is commonly used of illegitimate children.

FIVE. adj. [p. or Sax.]
Four and one; half of ten.

And ofe of them were wise and ofe were foolish. Matt.

No person, no incident, but must be of use to carry on the main design: all things else are like fingers to the hand, when nature, which is superfluous in nothing, can do her work with five.

Dryden.

Five herbs, five bleeding flox's, his pastures fold'd.

Dryden.

Our British youth lose their figure by that time they are five and twenty. Addison.

FIVELEAVED Grass. n. t.
Cinquefoil; a species of clover.

FIXEDLY. adv. [from fixed.]
1. Certainly; firmly; in a manner settled and established.

If we pretend that the distinction of species, or sorts, is fixed and established by the real and secret constitutions of things.

Leake.

2. Stedfastly.

Omnipotency, omniscience, and infinite goodness enlarge the spirit while it fixeth on them.

Burnet.

FLACCID. adj. [flaccidus, Lat.]
Weak; limber; not stiff; lax; not tense.

The bowing and inclining the head is found in the great flower of the sun; can I take it to be, that the part against which the sun beareth the loathsome root and fishted in the stalk, and thereby less able to support the flower. Bacon.

Thev whose muscles are weak or fixated, are untap to pronounce the letter r. Holdier.

The surgeon ought to vary the diet as he finds the fibres are too supple, or too tough, or as they harden and produce callilities. Arbuthnot.

FLACCIDITY. n. s. [from flaccid.]
Laxity; limbernness; want of tension; want of stiffness.

There is neither flusion nor pain, but flaccidity joined with inertia. Surgeon's Surgery.

To FLAG. n. n. [flaggen, Dut. ploggen, Sax. to fly.]
1. To hang loose without stiffness or tension.

Beds of cotton wool hang up between two trees, not far from the ground; in which, flagging down between the middle, men, wives and children lie together.

Abbt.

2. To flag the drapery melancholy, night.

Who with their drowsy, slow, and flagging wings
Clip dead men's graves.

Shakespeare, Henry VI.

It keeps their slender and tired bodies separated and stretched out, which otherwise, by reason of their flexibility and weight, would flag or curve.

Boyle's Essays of the Air.

Like a fiery meteor sunk the sign.

The promise of a storm; the shifting gales.

Forsake by fits, and fill the flagging sails.

Dryden.

3. To grow feeble or deserted.

Flaggy soil flues under her own pitch.

Like bowl in air too damp, and bags along
As if she were a body in a body.

My senses too are dull and stupify'd.

Their edge related: sure some ill approaches.

Dryden's Don Sebastian.

3. To grow feeble: to lose spirit.

Juice in language is somewhat less than blood:
for if the words be but becoming and signifying, and the sense gentle, there is juice: but where that wanteth, the language is thin, flagging, poor, starved, scarce covering the bone, and shews like stones in a sack: some men, to avoid redundancy, run into that; and while they strive to hinder ill blood or juice, they lose their good.

Ben Jonson's Discoveries.

His stomach will want vitals at the usual hour, either fretting itself into a troublesome exess, or flagging into a downright want of appe-

Leake.

Fame, when it is once at a stand, naturally flags and languishes. Addison's Spectator.

If on sobbmer wings of love and praise,
My love above the weary vault I raise.

Lir'd by some vain conceit of pride or lust,
I flag, 1 drop, and tatter in the dust. Arbuthnot.

He is a man balanced against himself, and he only watches till it begins to flag: he goes about watching when to devour us. Swift.

The flagging of the sun, the flag and grow languid, giving way daily to cool mists from the spleen.

Swift.

To FLAG. n. n.
1. To let fall into feebleness; to suffer to droop.
FLAG

Take heed, my dear, youth flies apace; As well as Cupid, Time is blind: Soon must those glories of thy face The fate of vulgar beauty find: The thousand loves, that arm thy potent eye, Must drop their quivers, flag their wings, and die.

2. [From flag, a species of stone.] To lay with broad stone. The sides and floor were all flagged with excellent marble. Several.

FLAG, n. s. [from the verb.] A water stone used for flagging floors. Woodward.

FLAGLET, n. s. [flaglet, Fr.] A small flute; a small instrument of wind music. Play us a lesson on your flaglet.

FLAGELATION, n. s. [from flagello, Lat.] The use of the scourge. By Bridewell all descended, As morning prayer and flagellation, Garth.

FLAGGINESS, n. s. [from flaggy.] Laxity; limberness; a want of tension.

FLAGGY, adj. [from flag.] 1. Weak; lax; limber; not stiff; not tense. His flaggy wings, when forth he did display, Were like two sails, in which the hollow wind Is gather'd full, and worketh speedily.

2. Weak in taste; insipid. Graft an apple-cion upon the stock of a cow-wort, and it will bear a great flaggy apple.

FLAGITIOUS, adj. [from flagitius, Lat.] 1. Wicked; villainous; atrocious. No villainy or flagitious action was ever committed by a man, but upon a due enquiry into the causes of it, it will be found, that a lye was first or last the principal engine to effect it. Smith.

2. Guilty of crimes. He dies, and outcast of each church and state; And harder still, flagitious yet not great. Pope.

FLAGITIOUSNESS, n. s. [from flagitius.] Wickedness; villany.

FLAGON, n. s. [fla'geon, Welsh; plaxe, Sax. flaske, Dan. flacon, Fr. flasce, Ital. flasce, Span.] A vessel of drink with a narrow mouth. A mad rogue! he pour'd a flagon of Rhenish on my head once.

FLAG-ROOM, n. s. [from flag and broum.] A broom for sweeping flags or pavements, commonly made of birch-twig, or of the leaves of the dwarf palm, imported from Spain.

FLAG-OF-CODE, n. s. [flag and officer.] A commander of a squadron.

FLAG-OF-UNIT, n. s. [flag and ship.] The ship in which the commander of a fleet is.

FLAG-WORM, n. s. [flag and worm.] A grub bred in wet places among flags or sedge.

FLA

He will in the three hot months bite at a flagworm, or a green gente. Walton's Angler.

FLAGELET, n. s. [flaglet, Fr.] A small flute; a small instrument of wind music. Play us a lesson on your flaglet.

FLAGELLATION, n. s. [from flagello, Lat.] The use of the scourge. By Bridewell all descendent, As morning prayer and flagellation, Garth.

FLAGGINESS, n. s. [from flaggy.] Laxity; limberness; a want of tension.

FLAGGY, adj. [from flag.] 1. Weak; lax; limber; not stiff; not tense. His flaggy wings, when forth he did display, Were like two sails, in which the hollow wind Is gather'd full, and worketh speedily.

2. Weak in taste; insipid. Graft an apple-cion upon the stock of a cow-wort, and it will bear a great flaggy apple.

FLAGITIOUS, adj. [from flagitius, Lat.] 1. Wicked; villainous; atrocious. No villainy or flagitious action was ever committed by a man, but upon a due enquiry into the causes of it, it will be found, that a lye was first or last the principal engine to effect it. Smith.

2. Guilty of crimes. He dies, and outcast of each church and state; And harder still, flagitious yet not great. Pope.

FLAGITIOUSNESS, n. s. [from flagitius.] Wickedness; villany.

FLAGON, n. s. [fla'geon, Welsh; plaxe, Sax. flaske, Dan. flacon, Fr. flasce, Ital. flasce, Span.] A vessel of drink with a narrow mouth. A mad rogue! he pour'd a flagon of Rhenish on my head once.

FLAG-ROOM, n. s. [from flag and broum.] A broom for sweeping flags or pavements, commonly made of birch-twig, or of the leaves of the dwarf palm, imported from Spain.

FLAG-OF-CODE, n. s. [flag and officer.] A commander of a squadron.

FLAG-OF-UNIT, n. s. [flag and ship.] The ship in which the commander of a fleet is.

FLAG-WORM, n. s. [flag and worm.] A grub bred in wet places among flags or sedge.
FLAM. n. s. [A cant word of no certain etymology.] A falsehood; a lie; an illusory pretext.

FLAMBEAU. n. s. [Fr.] A lighted torch.

FLAME. n. s. [flamme, Lat. flamme, Fr.]

1. Light emitted from fire.

2. Fire.

3. Arduour of temper or imagination; brightness of fancy; vigour of thought.

4. Ardour of inclination.

5. Passion of love.

6. To shine like flame.

FLAMCOLOURED. adj. [flame and colour.] Of a bright yellow colour.

FLAMEN. n. s. [Lat.] A priest; one that officiates in solemn offices.

FLAMMABILITY. n. s. [flammable, Lat.] The quality of admitting to be set on fire, so as to blaze.

FLAMMATION. n. s. [flammatio, Lat.] The act of setting on flame.

FLAMMIFEROUS. adj. [flammiferus, Lat.] Brining flame.

FLAMMIVOMOUS. adj. [flammus and vome, Lat.] Vomiting out flame.

FLAMY. adj. [from flame.] 1. Inflamed; burning; blazing.

2. Having the nature of flame.

FLANK. n. s. [flanke, Fr. according to Menage, from spay; more probably from latus, Lat.]

1. That part of the side of a quadruped near the hinder thigh.

2. [men.] The lateral part of the lower belly.

3. The side of any army or fleet.

4. [in fortification.] That part of the bastion which reaches from the curtain to the face, and defends the opposite face, the flank and the curtain.

To FLANK. v. a.

1. To attack the side of a battalion or fleet.

2. To be posted so as to overlook or command any pass on the side.

FLAP. v. a.

1. To move with a flap or noise made by the stroke of any thing broad.

2. To ply the wings with noise.

3. To fall with flaps or broad parts depending.

FLAPDRAGON. n. s. [from a dragon supposed to breathe fire.]

1. A play in which they catch raisins out of burning brandy, and, extinguishing them by closing the mouth, eat them.

2. The thing eaten at flapdragon.
To Flash Dragon, v. a. [from the noun.] To swallow; to devour. Low cant.

To Blare, v. a. [from blared to flutter, Dut. Skinner; perhaps accidentally changed from glare.]

1. To glitter with transient lustre. Doctrine and life, colours and light, in one When they combine and mingle, bring A strong regard and awe; but speech alone.

2. To glitter offensively. Then the Bourdeaux you may freely ask; But the Champaigne is to each man his flash. King.

FLASH. n. s. [flak, Minstrel.]

1. A sudden, quick, transitory blaze. When the canvas blue lightning seemed to open
The breast of heav'n, I did present myself.
Ev'n in the smoky and the instant flash of it.

2. A powder-well. Powder in a skill'd soldier's flash
Is set on fire.

3. A sudden burst of wit or meriment. The silver stands with golden fletches gild'd.

To glitter with a quick and transient flame.

This salt powdered, and put into a crucible, was, by the injection of well kindled charcoal, made to flash divers times, almost like melted nitre.

Boyle.

To burst out into any kind of violence. By day and night he wrongs me; ev'ry hour He flashes into one gross crime or other.

That sets on all at odds.

Shaks., King Lear.

3. To break out into wit, meriment, or bright thought. They flash out sometimes into an irregular greatness of thought. Felton in the Classtics.

To Flash, v. a. To strike up large bodies of water from the surface.

With his raging arms he rudely flash'd
The waves about, and all his armour swept, That all the blood and fait was wash'd away.

Carman.

FLASHILY. adv. [from flashy.] With empty show; without real power of wit, or solidity of thought.

FLA SHY. adj. [from flash.]

1. Empty; not solid; showy without substance.

Flashy wits cannot fathom the whole extent of a large discourse. Dryden on the Soul, Dedication. When they list, his heat and flashy songs

Grate on their scambered pipes of wretched straw.

Milton.

This mean conceit, this dry matter, [boy] Which thou wouldst think little and fine,

Car. I shall not

Nor will I change for all the flashy wit. Dryden.

2. [From faccious, Skinner.]

Insipid; without force or spirit.

Distilled books are, like common distilled waters, flashy things. The tastes that must offend in fruits, herbs and roots, are bitter, harsh, sour, waterish or flashy.

Bacon's Natural History. Bacon. His writings, &c.

FLASK. n. s. [flaque, Fr.]

1. A bottle; a vessel.

Then for the Bourdeaux you may freely ask; But the Champaigne is to each man his flash. King.

2. A powder-well. Powders in a skill'd soldier's flask

Is set on fire.

FLASKET. n. s. [from flask.] A vessel in which viands are served.

The silver stands with golden fletches gild'd.

FLAT. adj. [plat, Fr.]

1. Horizontally level without inclination.

Thou, all-thundering thunder, strike flat the thick clouds of earth, planet. Shakespeare.

2. Smooth; without protuberances.

In the dawning of the next day we might plainly discern it was a land flat to our sight, and full of hospice.

Bacon.

3. Not elevated; fallen; not erect.

Cense 'tadmir, and admiring its planes
Flat fall, and shrink into a trivial toy.

At every sudden slighting quite abashed.

Bacon.

4. Level with the ground. In them is plainest taught, and easiest learnt,

What makes a nation happy, and keeps it so,

What ruins kingdoms, and lays cities flat.

Milton.

That Christ-church stands above ground, and that the church of Westminster lies not flat upon the earth, South.

5. Lying prostrate; lying along.

The wood-born people fall before her flat,

And worship her as goddess of the wood. F. Queen.

Which laid that wretched prince flat on the ground.

Daniel.

6. [In painting.] Wanting relief; wanting prominence of the figures.

7. Tasteless; insipid; dead.

He, like a piling cackled, would drink up

The lies and drags of a flat tamed piece.

Shaks.

Taste so divine! that what of sweet before

Hath touch'd my sense, seems flat to this and harsh.

Milton.

8. Dull; unmanned; frigid.

Short speeches fly abroad like darts, and are thought to be shot out of secret intencions; but as for long discourses, they are flat things, and not so much noted.

Bacon.

FLATTERER. n. s. [from flat.] A man of more appearance of wit than reality. Dict.

FLASHER. n. s. [from flash.] A man of more appearance of wit than reality.
Not any interpreters allow it to be spoken of such as flatter deny the being of God; but of them that believing his existence, exclude him from directing the world.

FLATNESS. [from flat.]

1. Evenness; level extension.
2. Want of relief or prominence. It appears so very plain and uniform, that one would think the coinier looked on the flatness of a figure, as one of the greatest beauties in sculpture. Addison on Medals.

3. Deadness; insipidity; vapidness. Deadness or flatness in cyder is often occasioned by the too free admission of air into the vessel. Moritmer's Husbandry.

4. Dejection of fortune. The emperor of Russia was my father.

5. Evenness of mind. How fast does obscurity, flatness, and impermeability of soul grow in our meditations? *Tis a difficult task to talk to the purpose, and to put life and perspicuity into our discourses, Collier.

6. Dulness; insipidity; frigidity. Some of Homer's translators have swelled into fustian, and others sunk into flatteries. Pope.

7. The contrary to shrillness or acuteness of sound. Take two saucers, and strike the edge of the one against the bottom of the other within a palm of water, and you shall find the sound groweth more flat and low, while the saucer is above the water; but that flatness of sound is joined with a harshness. Bacon.

To FLATTEN. v. a. [flatter, Fr. from flat.]

1. To make even or level, without prominence or elevation.
2. To beat down to the ground.
3. To compress; to depress; to dissipate.

To FLATTEN. v. n.

1. To grow even or level.
2. To grow dull and insipid. Here joys that are pleasing, fresh, and in vogue, are opposed to satisfactions that are attended with satiety and surfeits, and flatteries in the most vapid.

3. To make flat or even.

To FLATulent. adj. [from flatulent, L.]

1. Turgid with wind; windy. Turgid with wind, whose anger is a great deal of air, which expands itself, producing all the disorders of flatulence. Arbuthnot.

2. Emptiness; vanity; levity; airiness. Whether most of them are not the genuine derivations of the hypothesis they claim to, may be determined by any that considers the natural flatulence of that airy species of animals. Glaucus.

FLATulence. n. s. [from flatulent, L.] Windiness; fulness of wind; turbulence by wind confined. Vegetable substances contain a great deal of air, which expands itself, producing all the disorders of flatulence. Arbuthnot.
FLA

spirit of wind, which is the principal cause of tension in the stomach and belly. Bacon.

FLATN. adj. From flat, Lat.] Windy; full of wind.
Rhubarb in the stomach, in a small quantity, both digest and overcome, being not flatulent nor lothsome; and so sourness to the stomach, and, being opened, it helps to set down urine. Bacon.

FLATUS. n. s. [Lat.] Wind gathered in any cavities of the body, caused by indigestion and a gross internal perspiration; which is therefore discussed by warm aromatics.

FLAT, flat, flat and wise; or flat. It should be written, not flatways. With the flat downwards; not the edge. Its posture in the earth was flat, and parallel to the side of the stratum in which it was reposted. Woodward on Fossils.

To Flaunt, v. n.
These courteous of applause deny themselves things proper to be flaunted out, being frequently enough vain to immolate their own desires to their vanity.
Boyle.
Here, at our pleasure, we go, for useless ornamental and flaunting show: We take on trust, in purple robes to shine, And promise to display them to be fine. And you, you seek to being to be fine. You set, you loiter about shawls, or flaunt about the streets in your new-gilt chariot, never mindin your numerous family. Arthuk.
2. To be hung with something loose and flying. This seems not to be proper: the words flaunt and flatter might have more propriety have changed their places.
Fortune in men has some small difference made; One flaunts in rage, one flaunts in brocade. Pope.

FLAUNT. n. s.
Any thing loose and airy. How would he look to see his work so noble, Wildly bound up, what would be say! or how Should I in these my bow'rd flaunts behold The sternness of his presence? Shakesp.

FLAVOUR. n. s.
1. Power of pleasing the taste. They have a certain flavour, at their first appearance, from several accidental circumstances, which they may lose, if not taken early. Addison's Spectator.
2. Sweetness to the smell; odour; fragrance. Myrtle, orange, and the blushing rose. With these, that wrap, touch their bloom disclose, Each seems to smell the flavour which the other blows. Dryden.

FLAVOROUS. adj. [from flavour.] 1. Delightful to the palate. Sweet grapes degenerate there, and fruits decline From their first flav'rous taste, renowne their kind. Dryden.
2. Fragrant; odorous.

FLAW. n. s. [Fr or Pr, to break; plough, Sax. a garment.] 1. A crack or break in any thing.
Or else weep. Shakesp. King Lear.

Weed, new-sown, bring laid casually upon a vessel of verjuice, after some time had drunk up a great part of the verjuice, though the vessel were yet full, but without any flaw, and had not the bong-hole open. Bacon's Nat. Hist.
We found it exceeding difficult to keep out the air from getting in to any imperceptible hole or flaw. Boyle.

A flaw is in thy ill-laid vessel found 'Tis follow, and returns a jarring sound. Dryden.

As part of a ship, from his height. Should sink beneath his heavey weight; Vol. I.

And with a mighty flaw the flaming wall, as once it shall, Should burst immense, and rushing down, over which that bell. Dryden.
Whether the nymph shall break Diana's bow Or some frail Cupid's arrow receive a flaw. Pope.
He that would keep his house in repair, must attend every little breach or flaw, and supply it immediately, else time alone will bring all to ruin. Swift.

2. A fault; defect; something that weakens or invalidates. Yet certain though it, be it hath flaws; for that the screechers and brokers do value unsoundness in their own turn. Bacon's Essays.

Traditions were a proof alone, Could we be certain such there, so known: But since some flaws in long descent may be:

They make not truth, but probability. Dryden.
And laid her dowry out in law, To null her joyners with a flaw. Hudibras.

Their judgment has found a flaw in what the generality of mankind admire. Addison's Spect.

Or to the earth's dark basis underneath, Are to the main inconsiderable. Milton's Par. Lost.

4. A tumult; a tempestuous uproar, And this fell tempest shall not cease to rage, Until the golden sun sets Hymen's tapestry. Do calm the fury of this madbraun's flaw. Shakesp.
The fort's revoluted to the emperor, The gates are open, the portcullis drawn, And deluges the town Came pouring in: I heard the mighty flaw; When first it broke, the crowding ensigns saw To the English standard and the flaw's Duragize. Dryden.

5. A sudden commotion of mind. Oh these flaws and starts, Impostors to fear true, would become A woman's story at a Winter's fire. Shak. Macbeth.

To FLAW. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To break; to crack; to damage with fissure. But his flaw'd heart, Alack, too weak the conflict to support, Twixt two extremes of passion, joy, and grief. Burn'ting triumphs on my head. Shakesp. King Lear. The cup was flawed with such a multitude of little cracks, that it looks like a white, not like a crystal. Binnie.
The brazen cauldrons with the flaws are flaw'd, The garment still with ice, at hearts is thaw'd. Dryden.

2. To break; to violate. Out of use. France hath flaw'd the league, and the league hath attack'd Our merchant's goods. Shakesp. Henry VIII.

FLAWLESS. adj. [from flaw.] Without cracks; without defects.
A star of the first magnitude, which the more high, more vast, and more distant heaven's flaws, shines only bright enough to make itself conspicuous. Boyle.

FLAWN. n. s. [Jena, Sax. flaw, Fr. fauve, Dut.] A sort of custard; a pie baked in a dish, Fill oven full of flawn, Ghury pass not for sleep, To-morrow thy father his wake-day will keep. Tamer.

To Flawter. v. a. To scrape or pare a skin.

FLAWY. adj. [from flaw.] Full of flaws.

FLAX. n. s. [peax, pleyx, Sax. vlas, Dut.] The fibrous plant of which the finest thread is made.

2. The fibres of flax cleansed and combed for the spinner. I'll fetch some flaw, and white of eggs, To apply to its bleeding face. Shakesp. King Lear. Then on the rock a scanty measure place of vital flaw, and then 'round the wheel space, And turning sung. Dryden's Oxid.

FLAXCOMB. n. s. [flax and comb.] The instrument with which the fibres of flax are cleansed from the brittle parts.

FLAXDRESSER. n. s. [flax and dress.] He that prepares flaw for the spinner.

FLAXEN. adj. [from flaw.]
1. Made of flaw.

The matron, at her nightly task, With pensive labour draws the flaws thread. Thomas's Winter. The best materials for making flaws are the flaws thread that shoemakers use. Sharpe's Surgery.

2. Fair, long, and flowing, as if made of flaw.
I bought a fine flaw leng long wig. Addis.

FLAXWEED. n. s. A plant.

To PLAY. v. a. [ad flaw, Islandick; flaw, Dan. fraan, Dut.] 1. To strip off the skin.

I must have been eaten with wild beasts, or have fallen into the hands of the Spaniards, and been flaw'd alive. Raleigh.

Whilst the old levitical hierarchy continued, it was part of the ministerial office to play the sacrifices. South.

Then give command the sacrifice to haste; Let the flaw'd victim in the plagues last. And sacred vows, and mystick song, apply'd To grisly Pluto and his gloomy bride. Pope's Ody.

2. To take off the skin or surface of any thing.

To play their skin from off them, break their bones, and chop them in pieces. Mor.

Neither should that odious custom be allowed of cutting scars, which is faying off the great surface of the ground, to cover their cabinets. Swift.

FLAYER. n. s. [from flaw.] He that strips off the skin of any thing.

FLEA. n. s. [plea, Sax. vloe, Dut, flesh, Scott.] A small red insect remarkable for its agility in leaping, which sucks the blood of larger animals.

While wornowwood hath seed, get a handful or two. To save against March to make flaw to refrain: Where chamber is swept, and wormwood is sown, No flaw for his life dare abide to be known. Tamer. A valiant flaw, that dares eat his breakfast on the lip of a lion. Shakesp. Henry V.

Let the flaw'd victims in the plagues last. Those were prized principally of strange flowers, where there had been a little moisture. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

To FLEA. v. a. [from the noun.] To clean from fleas.

FLEABANE. n. s. [flea and bane.] A plant.

It hath undivided leaves, which, for the most part, are cuttick, and have a strong scent: the cup of the flower is for the most part sallow, and of...
FLE.

1. Mockery expressed either in words or looks.

2. To skimp the water.

(continued)
3. In the country.] To skin milk; to take off the cream: whence the word floting dish.

FLEETINGDISH. n. s. [from fleet and dish.] A skimming bowl.

FLÉE'TLY adj. adv. [from fleet.] Swiftly; nimbly; with swift pace.

FLÉETNESS. n. s. [from fleet.] Swiftness of course; nimbleness; celerity; velocity; speed; quickness.

FLESH. n. s. [flæch, plæch, Sax. fleše, Dut. vleesch, Erse.]

1. The body distinguished from the soul. As this flesh, which walls about our life, Were here unrecognized. Shak. Richard II.

2. The muscles distinguished from the skin, bones, tendons.

3. Animal food distinguished from vegetable.

Flesh should be farbored as long as he is in coats, or at least till he is two or three years old. Locke. Flesh, without being qualified with acids, is too alkaline a diet. Archibald on Aliments. Acidity in the infant may be cured by a fish diet in the nurse. Archibald on Aliments.

4. The body of beasts or birds used in food, distinct from fishes.

There is another indictment upon thee, for suffering flesh to be eaten in thy house, contrary to the law. Shak. Henry IV. We mortify ourselves with fish; and think we fare corably, as we abstain from the flesh of other animals. Brown.

5. Animal nature.

The soul of any flesh is come before us. Gen. vi. 13.

6. Carnality; corporal appetites.

Name not religion; for thou lov'st the flesh. Shak. Fasting serves to mortify the flesh, and save the last thereon. Snodgrass's Sermon.

That they are in the flesh cannot please God. Rom. viii. 8. The flesh lusteth against the spirit, and the spirit against the flesh. Gal. v. 16.

8. Near relation: a scriptural use. Let not our hand be upon him; for he is our flesh. When thou seest the naked, cover him; and hide not thyself from thine own flesh. Isa. liii. 7.

9. The outward or literal sense. The Oriental term is the immediate or literal signification of any precept or type the flesh, and the remote or typical meaning of the spirit. This is frequent in St. Paul. Ye judge after the flesh. John viii. 15.

To FLESH. v. a.

To initiate: from the sportsman's practice of feeding his hawks and dogs with the first game that they take, or training them to pursue by giving them the flesh of animals.

Full bravely lust thou flesh They that are in the flesh, says Shak. Henry IV. Every puny swordsman will think him a good tame quarry to enter and flesh himself upon. Government of the Tongue.

To harden: to establish in any practice, as dogs by often feeding on any thing.

To FLESH. v. n.

3. To glut; to satiate. Harry from curb'd licence plucks The muzzle of restraint; and the wild dog Shall flesh his teeth on every innocent. Shak. He hath perverted a young gentlewoman, and this might he fleshes his will in the will of her heart. Shak. The kindred of him that hath been flesh'd upon us; And he is bred out of that bloody strain, That hunted in our familiar paths. Shak. H. V.

FLESHBROATH. n. s. [flesh and broth.] Broth made by decocting flesh. Her leg being enainted, I advised bathing it with flesh-broth, wherein had been decocted emollient herbs. If the driver's surgery.

FLESHCOLOUR. n. s. [flesh and colour.] The colour of flesh.

A complication of ideas together makes up the single complex idea which he calls man, whereas the colour of flesh contains one. A loose ear of a pale flesh-colour, that is, white with a blush of red, is found in a mountain in Cumberland. Woodward.

FLESHFISH. n. s. [flesh and fly.] A fish that feeds upon flesh, and deposits her eggs in it. I would no more endure This wooden slavery, than I would suffer The fishesly brook, says Shak. Tempest. It is a wonderful thing in fishesfies, that a fly-maggot in five days space after it is hatched, arrives at its full growth and perfect magnitude. Roy.

FLESHHOOK. n. s. [flesh and hook.] A hook to draw flesh from the caldron. All that the flesh-hook brought up the priest took. 1 Sam. xi. 12.

FLESHLESS. adj. [from flesh.] Without flesh.

FLESHLINES. n. s. [from fleshly.] Carnal passions or appetites. When strong passions or weak fleshliness Would from the right way seek to draw him wide, He would, through temperance and stedfastness, Teach his will the virtue to strengthen, and the strong to suppress, says Spencer. Corrupt manners in living, breed false judgment in doctrine; sin and fleshliness bring forth sects and heresies. Acharn.

FLESHLY. adj. [from flesh.]

1. Corporal.

Nothing resembles death so much as sleep; Yet then our minds themselves slumberless keep, When from their fleshly bondage they are free. Dryden.

2. Carnal; lascivious.

Belial, the dissolute spirit that fell, says the sensuously; and, after Asmodeus, The fleshliest incinus. Paradise Regained.

3. Animal; not vegetable.

To then for thought that mother earth provides, The stores of all she shows, and all she hides, If men with fleshly morsels must be fed, says Dryden. And chew with bloody teeth the breathing bread.

4. Human; not celestial; not spiritual.

Else, never could the force of fleshly arm Ne moist metal in his flesh embrac, Fairy Queen. The earthly Lord in fleshly shine Enwrapped was, from wretched Adam's line, To purge away the guilt of sinful crime. Fairy Q. Much extroversion, vain fleshly arm, And of frail arms, much instrument of war Before mine eyes thou'rt set. Milt. Par. Regained.

FLESHMEAT. n. s. [flesh and meat.] Animal food; the flesh of animals prepared for food.

These princes finding them so flesh'd in cruelty, as not to be reclaimed, secretly undertook the matter. The women ran all away, saving only one, who was so flesh'd in malice, that neither during nor after the fight she gave any trace to her cruelty. Sidney.

FLESHMONGER. n. s. [flesh.] One who deals in flesh; a pimp.

Was the duke a fleshmonger, a fool, and a coward, as you then reported him? Shak. Measure for Measure.

FLESHPOT. n. s. [flesh and pot.] A vessel in which flesh is cooked; thence plenty of flesh.

If he takes away the fleshpots, he can also alter the appetite. Taylor's Rule for Living Holy.

FLESHQUAKE. n. s. [flesh and quake.] A tremor of the body; a word formed by Jonson in imitation of earthquake.

They may, blood-shaken then, feel such a fleshquake to possess their powers, as they shall cry like oxen in sound of peace or wars, no harp e'er hit the stars. Ben Jonson's New Inn.

FLESHY. adj. [from flesh.]

1. Plump; full of flesh; fat; muscled. All Ephesians are fleshly and plump, and have great hips; all which by motion and rest is drawn out. Bacon.

We say it is a fleshly stile when there is much EMPHASIS and circuit of words, and when which with more than enough it grows fat and corpulent. Ben Jonson.

The sole of his foot is flat and broad, being very fleshly, and covered only with a thick skin; but very fat to travel in sandy places. Ray.

2. Pulpos; plump; with regard to fruits. Those fruits that are so fleshly, as they cannot make drink by expression, yet may make drink by mixture of water. Bacon.

FLETCHER. n. s. [from fleche an arrow, Fr.] A manufacturer of bows and arrows. It is commended of our fletchers for bows, next onto yew. Monthermer's Husbandry.

They drank flesh milk, which they just warm. Mortimer.

FLEW. The preterite of fly, not of fle. The single up, says Dryden, xir. 32. 'Till now the distant island rose in view. Pope's Od.

FLEW. n. s. The large chaps of a deep-mouthed hound. Hamur.

FLEWED. adj. [from flew.]

Chapped; mouthed.

My hounds are bred out of the Spartan kind, So famed, so sudden, and their heads are hung With ears that sweep away the morning dew. Shak.

FLEXAN'IOUS. adj. [flexan'ious, Lat.] Having power to change the disposition of the mind. Diet.

That flexan'ious and golden-tongued orator. Howell.

FLEXIBILITY. n. s. [flexibility.] Fr. from flexible.

1. The quality of admitting to be bent; pliancy.

Do not the rays which differ in refrangibility differ also in flexibility? And are they not, by their different inflections, separated from one another, so as after separation to make the colours? Near.

Coruscates of the same set agree in every thing; but those that are of diverse kinds differ in specific gravity, in hardness, and in flexibility, as in bigness and figure.

2. Easiness to be persuaded; ductility of mind; compliance; facility. Resolve rather to err by too much flexibility than too much perverseness, by meekness than by self-love. Hammond.

FLEXIBLE. adj. [flexibilis, Lat. flexible, French.]
1. Possible to be bent; not brittle; easy to be bent; pliant; not stiff.
When splitting winds
Make flexible the branches of knotted oaks. Shakespeare.
Take a stock gillyflower, tie it upon a stick, put them both into a glass full of quicksilver, so that the flower be covered: after four or five days you will find the flower fresh, and the stalk harder and less flexible than it was. Bacon.
2. Not rigid; not inexcusable; compressible; obsequious.
Phlemon was a man of great severity, and no way flexible to the will of the people. Bacon.
3. Ductile; manageable.
Under whose curse soever a child is put to be brought, during the tender and flexible years of its life, it should be one who thinks Latin and language the least part of education Locke.
4. That may be accommodated to various forms and purposes.
This was a principle more flexible to their purpose and necessity than universal Rogers.

FLEXIBILITY. n.s. [from flexible.]
1. Possibility to be bent; not brittleness; easiness to be bent; not stiffness; pliantness; pliancy.
I will rather choose to wear a crown of thorns, than to exchange that of gold for one of lead, whose embossed flexibility shall be forced to bend. King Charles.
Keep those slender aerial bodies separated and stretched out, which otherwise, by reason of their flexibility and weight, would flag or curl. Bpke.
2. Facility; obsequiousness; compliance.
3. Ductility; manageableness.
The flexibleness of the former part of a man's age, not yet grown up to be headstrong, makes it more governable in many things. Locke.
FLEXILE. adj. [flexilis, Lat.] Pliant; easily bendable; obsequious to any power or impulse.
Every flexible wave
Obey the blast, the aerial tumult swells. Thomson.

FLEXION. n.s. [from flexible. Lat.]
1. The act of bending.
2. A double; a bending; part bent; joint.
Of a sinuous pipe that may have some four flexions, trial would be made. Bacon's Nat. Hist.
3. A turn towards any part or quarter.
Fifty caustic sometimes tears, and a fission or east of the eye aside. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

FLEXOR. n.s. [Lat.] The general name of the muscles which act in contracting the joints.
Flatterers, who have the flexor muscles so strong that they are always bowing and cringing, might in some measure be corrected by being tied down upon a tree by the back. Arbuthnot.

FLEXUOUS. adj. [flexuosus, Lat.]
1. Winding; full of turns and meanderings; tortuous.
In regard of the soul, the numerous and crooked narrow canals, and the restrained flexuous rivulets of corporeal things, are all contemptible Digby.
2. Bending; not straight; variable; not steady.
The trembling of a windy discover a wind, that otherwise we did not feel; and the flexuous burning of flames both shew the air begin to be unquiet. Bacon's Natural History.

FLEXURE. n.s. [flexura, Lat.]
1. The form or direction in which anything is bent.
Contrary is the figure of the joints of our arms and legs to that of quadrupeds: our knees bend forward, whereas the same joint of their hind legs bends backward. Ray.
2. The act of bending.
The elephant hath joints, but none for courtesy; his legs are for necessity, not figure. Shakespeare.
3. The part bent; the joint.
His mightly strength lies in his able joints, and where the figure of his navel joins. Sandys.
4. Obsequious or servile cringe. Not used.
Think'st thou the fiery fever will go out with titles blown from adulatation? Will give place to figure and low bends? Shakespeare, Hen. V.

To FLECKER. v.a. [fligthen, Dut. plecuen, Sax.] To flutter; to play the wings; to have a fluttering motion.
The wreath of radiant fire
On flexing Phoebus' front. Shakespeare, King Lear.
Was ebbing darkness, past the mid' of night, And, Phoebus, on the light Prom' st the sun, ere day began to spring;
The teneal kark already stretch'd her wing, And flexing on her nest made short essays to sing. Dryden.
At her atretch her little wings she spread, And with her feather'd arms embrac'd the dead; Then flexing on his belly, she strove
To print a kiss, the last essay of love. Dryden.

FLIER. n.s. [from fly.]
1. One that runs away; a fugitive; a run-away.
The gates are open, now prove good seconds; To for the fortunate fortune without them, Not for the fliers. Shak. Coriolan.
Now the fliers, and from of their places, carry the parliamentary power along with them. King Charles.
2. That part of a machine which, by being put into a more rapid motion than the other parts, equalizes and regulates the motion of the rest; as in a jack.
The flier, that had led heaven, Turn'd so small a space could see. Swift.

FLIGHT. n.s. [from To fly.]
1. The act of flying or running from danger.
And now, too late, he wishes for the flight, That strength he wasted in ignoble flight. Dryden.
He thinks by flight, which must be done,
And claims the prize because he best did run. Dryden.
As eager of the chase, the maid
Beyond the forest's verdant limits stray'd;
Pan saw and lov'd, and, burning with desire,
Purs'd her flight; her flight increas'd his fire. Pope.
2. The act of using wings; volation.
For he so swift and nimble was of flight,
That from his lower tract he dar'd to fly
Up to the clouds, mid thence with pinions light,
To mount aloft unto the crystal heaven. Spenser. A child, by a constant course of kindness, may be accustomed to bear very rough usage without fainting or complaining. Locke. Now the fliers, and from of their places, carry the parliamentary power along with them. King Charles.
And on her wicker wings, sublimed through night,
She to the Latian palace took her flight. Dryden.
Ere the bat hath flown
His cloister'd flight. Shakespeare, Macbeth.
The owls shall take their flight away together. Shakespeare, Fa. v. 6.
Fowls, by Winter force'd, forsoke the fields, And wing their quieter lairs. Dryden.
3. Removed from place to place by means of wings.
Three, from the place to place by means of wings.

To FLY. v.t. [from the verb.] He who shrinks or fails in any matter.

To FLYING. v.t. [part. flaying or fling. v.a. [from fling. Lat. Skinner.] According to others from flying; so to fling is to set flying.
1. To cast from the hand; to throw.
FLIGHT, n. s. [from flirt.] A quick sprightly motion. A cant word among women.

A muslin flounce, made very full, would give a very agreeable animation.

To FLIT, v. n. [To fleet; or from flitter, Dan. to remove.]

1. To fly away.

Liest, it seemeth, in my simple wit,
Unto the far-sunny in Summer's day,
That when a dreamful form from wide the sky
Through the broad world doth spread his glossy ray.

Spenser.

2. To remove; to migrate. In Scotland it is still used for removing from one place to another at quarterday, or the usual term.

His guiding ghost did strive
With the frail flesh; at last it fitted is,
Whither the souls do die of men that live.

Fairy Queen.

So hardly be the fitted life does win,
Unto her native prison to return.

Fairy Queen.

It became a received opinion, that the souls of men, departing this life, did out of one body into some other.

Hooke.

3. To flutter; to rove on the wing.

He made a glancing shot, and miss'd the dove;
Yet missed it so narrowly, that he cut the word
Which fasten'd, by the foot, the flitting bird.

Dryden.

Fear the just gods, and think of Scylla's fate
Chang'd to a bird, and sent to fill in air.

Fairy Queen.

And the free soul to flight dying air's
Dryden's Amen.

4. To be flux or unstable.

Himself uplifted he lifted from the ground,
And with strong flight did forcibly divide
The yielding air, which might too far he found
Her flitting parts, and element unsusod.

Fairy Queen.

He stopt at once the passage of his wind,
And the free soul to flight resign'd.

Dryden's Amen.

FLIT, adj. [from fleet.] Swift; nimble; quick. Not in use.

And in his hand two darts exceeding flit,
And deadly sharp, he held; whose heads were dight
In poison and in blood, of malice and despatch.

Fairy Q.

FLITCH. n. s. [place, Sax. flytke. Dan. fleche, flecher, Fr. Skinner.] The side of a hog salted and cured.

But heretofore 'twas thought a sumptuous feast,
On birthday, festivals, or days of state,
A salt dryhatch of bacon to prepare;
If they had fresh meat, 'twas delicatrices.

Dryden's Juvenal.

While he from out the chimney took
A fitch of bacon off the hook,
Cut large slices to be fry'd.

Swift.

He sometimes accompanies the present with a fitch of bacon.

Addison.

FLITTERMICE. n. s. [respect to; from flit and mouse.] The bat; the winged mouse.

FLIGHTING, n. s. [flit, Sax. scandal.] An offence; a fault; a failure; a desert.

Thou tellst my flights, my tears into thy bottle.

Pascal.

FLIX. n. s. [corrupted from flix.] Down; fur; soft hair.

With his blood'd tongue he faintly licks his prey;
His warm breath blows his fleshy up as she lies
She trembling creeps upon the ground away,
And looks back to him with beseeching eyes.

Dryden.

FLIXWOOD. n. s. A plant.

To FLOAT, v. n. [flotter, Fr.]

1. To swim on the surface of the water.

When the sea was calm, all boats alike
Stowed mast upon mast in floating.

Shakespeare.

The ark no more now floats, but seems on ground,
Fast on the top of some high mountain fir'd.

Milton. 732
FLO

That men, being drowned and sunk, do float the ninth day, when their gull breaketh, are popularly termed.

Three bustling nights, born by the southern blast.
I floated; and discover'd land at last. Dryden.
His very breath was dropping long before.
Born by the tide of wine, and floating on the floor.
Dryden.

On foamy billows thousands float the stream.
In cumbrous sail.
Carp are very apt to float away with fresh water.

2. To move without labour in a fluid.
What divine monsters, O ye gods, were these that float in air, and fly upon the seas! Dryden.
Swift the red-wing'd, with wing to wing conjoint.
Stretched their broad plumes, and float upon the wind.

3. To pass with a light irregular course:
perhaps mistaken for fleet or flot.
Floating visions make not deep impressions enough to leave in the mind clear, distinct, lasting ideas.

To FLOAT. v. a.

To cover with water.

Proud Pausolus floats the fruitful lands,
And leaves a rich mantle of golden sands.
Dryden's En
Venice looks, at a distance, like a great town half floated by a deluge.
Addison on Italy.
Now smocks with show'ss the misty mountainside.
And floated fields lie undistinguish'd round.
Popc.
The vast pertresses a thousand hands shall make :
Lo! Cobham comes, and floats them with a lute.
Popc.

FLOAT. n. s. [from the verb.]
1. The act of flowing; the flux; the contary to the ebb. A sense now out of use.
Our trust in the Almighty is, that with us contentions are now at their highest float.
Hooker.
There is some disposition of bodies to remain, particularly from East to West; of which kind we conceive the main float and refloat of the sea is, which is by consent of the universe, as part of the diurnal rotation.
Bacon's Nat. Hist.

2. Any body so contrived or formed as to swim upon the water.
They took it for a ship, and, as it came nearer, for a boat; but it proved a float of weeds and rushes.
A passage for the weary people make.
With oyer floats the standing water strow,
Of many stows make bridges, if it float.
Dryden.

3. The cork or quill by which the angler discover'd the bite of a fish.
You will find this to be a very choice bait, sometimes casting a little of it into the place where your float swims.
Wotton.

4. A cant word for a level.
Banks are measured by the float or floor, which is eighteen foot square and one deep.
Mortimer.

FLO'ATY. adj. Buoyant and swimming on the surface.

The hindrance to stay well is the extreme length of a ship, especially if she be floaty, and want sharpness of way forwards.
Raleigh.

FLOCK. n. s. [ploc, Sax.]
1. A company; usually a company of birds or beasts.
She that hath a heart of that fine frame,
To pay this debt of love hot to a brother,
How will she love when the rich golden shaft
Hath kindled of all affection else?
That live in her.
Shakespeare, Twelfth Night.

2. A company of sheep, distinguished from herds, which are of oxen.
The cattle in the fields, and meadows green,
Those rare and solitary; these in flocks
Panting at ease, and in broad herds upsprung.
Milton.

FLO'EGATE. n. s. [from flos and gater.] Gate or shutter by which the watercourse is closed or opened at pleasure.
As if the opening of her mouth had opened some great floodgate of sorrow, whereas her heart could not abide the violent issue, she sunk to the ground.
Sidney.
Yet there the steel staid not; but bate
Deep in his flesh, and opened wide a red floodgate.
Sidney.

His youth, and want of experience in maritime service, made him somewhat shrewdly touched, before the sluices and floodgates of human liberty were yet set open.
Wotton.
The rain descanded for forty days, the cutlets or floodgates of heaven being thus opened.
Burnet.

FLOOD. n. s. [flying a plow, Germ.]
1. The broad part of the anchor which takes hold of the ground.
2. A flounder; a flat river fish.

FLOOR. n. s. [plop, plape, Sax.]
1. The pavement: a pavement is always of stone, the floor of wood or stone;
the part on which one treads.
His stepmother, making all her gestures coun-tree and indignant, lay almost groveling upon the floor of her chamber.
Sidney.
He rent that iron door
Where entered in, his sword could find no floor,
But all a deep descent as dark as hell.
"Fairy Queslook.
Look how the floor of heavy
Is thickly laid with pates of bright gold:
There's not the smallest orb which thou beholdst,
But in his motion like an angel sings,
Still quiring to the young ey'd cherubins.
Shakespeare.
The ground by strewn with pikes so thick as a floor is usually strewn with rushes.
Hayward.
He winnow'd barley to-night in the threshing floor.
Rut.

2. A story; a flight of rooms.
He that building stays at one
Floor, or the second, hath erected none.
Jenson.

To FLOOR. v. a. [from the noun.] To cover the bottom with a floor.
Hewn stone and timber to floor the houses.
2 Chron. xxiv.

FL'ORD. n. s. [from floor.]
Bottom; pavement.
The flooring is a kind of red plaister made of brick, ground to powder, and afterwards worked into mortar.
Addison.

To FLOOR. v. a. [from fleap.] To clap the wings with noise; to play with any noisy motion of a broad body.
A blackbird was frighted almost to death with a large fluttering kite that she saw over her head.
L'Estrange.

FLO'RAL. adj. [floralis, Lat.] Relating to Flora, or to flowers.
To celebrate sports and floral play
Be set aside.
Prior.

FLO'RENCE. n. s. [from the city Florence.]
A kind of cloth.
Diet.

FLO'REN. n. s. [so named, says Camden, because made by Florentines.] A gold coin of Edward III. in value six shillings.

FLO'RET. n. s. [fioret, Fr.] A small imperfect flower.

FLO'RID. adj. [florus, Lat.]
1. Productive of flowers; covered with flowers.
2. Bright in colour; flushed with red.

Our beauty is in colour inferior to many flowers; and when it is most florid and gay, three fits of fainting, or groans, by which the ague can change it into yellowness and long ness.
Taylor's Rule of Living Holy.
The qualities of blood in a healthy state are to be florid, when let out of the vessel, the red part concealing strongly and root.
Arbuthnot.
3. Embellished: splendid; brilliant with decorations.

The florid, elevated, and figurative way is for the passions; for love and hatred, fear and anger, are begotten in the soul, by showing their objects out of the natural frame of things.

Dryden.

How did they the florid youth off?
Whose speech you took, and gave it to a friend?

FLORIDITY. n. s. [from florid.] Freshness of colour.

There is a floridity in the face from the good digestion of the red part of the blood.

Finger.

FLORIDNESS. n. s. [from florid.] 1. Presence of colour; splendour.

2. Embellishment; ambitious elegance.

Though a philosopher need not delight readers with his floridness, yet he may take a care that he should not be by nature.

Boyle.

FLORIFEROUS. adj. [florifer, Lat.] Productive of flowers.

FLORELL. n. s. [Fr.] A coin first made by the Emperor Napoleon. That of Germany is in value 2s. 4d. that of Spain 4s. 6d. halfpenny; that of Palermo and Sicily 2s. 6d. that of Holland 2s.

In the Imperial chamber the princes have a half florin taxed and allowed them for every substantial motion of the head.

Aspinaly.

FLORIST. n. s. [floriste, Fr.] A cultiver of flowers.

Some botanists or florists at the least. Dunciad.

And while they break
On the charm’s eye, ’tis exclam’ning florist marks
With secret pride the wonders of his hand. Thom.

FLORULENT. adj. [floris, Lat.] Flowery; blossoming.

FLORUSCULUS. adj. [floruscus, Lat.] Composed of flowers; having the nature or form of flowers.

The outward part is a thick and carnose covering, and the second a dry and floriforous coat.

Brown.

To FLOTE. v. a. [See To frit.] To skim.

Such cheeses, good Chisle, ye floted too nigh.

Tasso.

FLOTSON. n. s. [from flote.] Good that swim without an owner on the sea.

FLOTTEN. part. [from flote.] Skimmed. Skinner.

To FLOUNC. v. n. [plonsen, Dut. to plunge.]

1. To move with violence in the water or mire; to struggle or dash in the water.

With his broad fins and forked tail he laves
The rising surge, and flows and waves in the waves.

Addison’s Ode.

2. To move with weight and tumult.

Six flouncing Flanders horses
Are even as good as any two of theirs.

Prior.

3. To move with passion; passionate agitation.

When I’m taller than a post,
Nor can the pleasant word pronounce,
You neither turn, nor fret, nor flounce.

Swift.

To FLOUNCE. v. a. To deck with flowers.

She was flounced and flutilowed from head to foot; every ribbon was crinkled, and every part of her garments in curl.

Addison.

They are all the fashion of florencing the petticoat so very deep, that it looks like an entire coat of lutestrings.

Flounce.

n. s. [from the verb.] Any thing sewed to the garment, and hanging loose so as to swell and shake.

May, off in dreams invention we bestow,
To change a flounce, or add a furfelow.

A muslin flounce, made very full, would be very agreeable.

Pope.

To FLOUNCE. v. n. [from the verb.] To adorn with embellishments of language; to grace with eloquence ostentatiously diffusive.

The labours of Hercules, though flounced with much fabulous matter; yet notably set forth the consent of all nations and ages in the approbation of the extirpating and debellating giants, monsters and tyrants.

Shaksp.

As they are likely to over-flourish their own case, so their flattery is hardiest to be discovered. Collier.

6. To adorn; to embellish; to grace.

To bring you thus together, ’tis no sio
Sith that the justice of your title to him
Both flourish the deceit.

Shaksp.

FLOURISH. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. Bravery; beauty; ambitious splendour.

I call’d thee then vain flourish of my fortune,
I call’d thee then your shadow, painted queen;
The presentation of but what I was.

Shaksp.

The flourish of his sober youth,
Was the pride of naked truth.

Crashaw.

2. An ostentatious embellishment; ambitious copiousness; far-fetched elegance.

This is a flourish; there follow excellent parables.

Bacon.

We can excuse the duty of our knowledge, if we only bestow the flourish of poetry thereon, or those complimentary conceits which popularly set forth the eminence of this creature.

Brow.

The sensation of the eye may be fixed upon my mind, that such rhetorical flourishes cannot but loosen or brush it out.

More.

Flourishes have not the same connotation, when there are great interests, plausible colours, and flourishes of wit and rhetoric interposed between the sight and the object.

L’A’range.

Our mock ornament and ornament of their former speeches were commonly the trusty word they spoke, though least believed by them.

South’s Sermons.

Studious to please the genius of the times;
With periods, points, and tropes he shuns his crimes;
He lards with flourish’s long harangue;
’Tis fine, say thou: what, to be prais’d and hang!

Dryden.

3. Figures formed by lines curiously or wantonly drawn.

A child with delight looks upon emblems fancily drawn and painted, and takes some pleasure in beholding the next characters and flourishes of a Bible curiously pricketed.

Shaksp.

They were intended only for ludicrous ornaments of nature, like the flourishes about a great letter that signify nothing, but are made only to delight the eye.

More. Hence Addison.

FLOURISHER. n. s. [from flourish.] One that is in prime or in prosperity.

They count him of the green-hair’d eld, they may, or in his flour.

For not our greatest flourisher can equal him in profit. Chapman.

To FLOUT. v. a. [from flouten, Dut. flowere; Fric. To mock; to insult; to treat with mockery and contempt.

You must flout my insufficiency.

Shaksp.

The Norwegian hammers flow the sky,
And fan our people cold. Shaksp., Marcbth.

He mock’d us when he begg’d our voices;
Certainly he flout’d us downright.

Shaksp. Shall the day be so immemorial to write to one she knew would flout her. Shaks.

Philida flout me.

Watson’s Angle.

To FLOUT. v. n. To practise mockery; to behave with contempt; to sneer.

Though nature hath given us wit to flout at fortune, hath not fortune sent us in this fool to cut off this argument?

Shaks.

With talents well end’d
To be scorning and rude;
When you gently raise your snout,
Fleer and gibe, and laugh and flout.

Swift.

FLOUT. n. s. [from the verb.] A mock; an insult; a word or act of contempt.

He would ask of those that had been at the other’s table, Tell’d truly, was there never a flout or dry blow given?

Bacon.
FLO

She opened it, and read it out;
With many a smile and laughing flood. Hudibras.
Their doors are bard against a bitter flood;
Snarl, if you please; but you shall snarl without.

How many floods and jeers must I expose myself to by this repentance? How shall I answer such an old acquaintance when he invites me to an interminable cup?
Calamy's Sermons.

FLOU'TER, n. s. [from flout]. One who jeers.

To FLOW. v. n. [plemp, Sax.]

1. To run or spread as water.
The god am I, whose yellow water flows.
Aftren these flood, and frets as it goes.
Dryden.
Fields of light and liquid either flow,
Pang'd from the pond'rous dregs of earth below.
Dryden.

Endless tears flow down in streams. Swift.

2. To run; opposed to standing waters.
With osier thatts the standing water strow;
Of many stones make bridges, it is flow. Dryden.

3. To rise; not to ebb.
This river hath thrice flow'd, no ebb between.
Shakespeare.

4. To melt.
Oh that thou would'st rent the heavens, that the mountains might flow down at thy presence.
Is. vii. 1.

5. To proceed; to issue.
I'll use that tongue I have; if wit flow from't, I shall do good.
Shakespeare. Winter's Tale.
The knowledge drawn from experience is quite of another kind from that which flows from speculation or discourse.
South.

6. To glide smoothly without asperity: as, a flowing period.
This discourse of Cypryan, and the flowers of rhetoric in it, shew him to have been of a great wit and flowing eloquence. Hakewill on Providence.

7. To write smoothly; to speak volubly.
Virgil is sweet and flowing in his lamentations.
Dryden.

Did sweeter sounds adorn my flowing tongue
Than ever man pronounced, or angels sang. Prior.

8. To abound; to be crowdéd.
The dry streets flow'd with men. Pope's Odyssey.

9. To be copious; to be full.
Then shall our names
Be in their flowing cups freely remember'd.
Shakespeare. Hen. V.

There every eye with splendid boughs she deck'd
And dash'd the flowing goblet to the ground.
Pope's Odyssey.

10. To hang loose and waving.
He was clothed in a flowing mantle of green silk, interwoven with flowers. Spectator.

To FLOW. v. a. To overflow; to deluge.
Watering hops is scarce practicable, unless you have a stream at hand to flow the ground. In Morer's Husbandry.

FLOW. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. The rise of water; not the ebb.
Some, from the diurnal and annual motion of the earth, endeavour to solve the flows and motions of these seas, illustrating the same by water in a bowl, that rises or falls according to the motion of the vessel. This the ebbs of tide, and their mysterious flow.
Brook's Valye. Err. 8.
We art as elements shall understand.
Dryden.

2. A sudden plenty or abundance.
The noble power of suffering bravely is as far above that of enterprising greatly, as an unbleached conscience and inflexible resolution are above an accidental flow of spirits, or a sudden tide of blood.
Pope.

3. A stream of diction; volatility of tongue.

FLOWER. n. s. [fleur, fr. flours, flores, Lat.]

1. The part of a plant which contains the seeds.
Such are reckoned perfect flowers which have petals, a stamen, apex and stylum; and whatever flowers want either, are reckoned imperfect.
Perfect flowers are divided into simple ones, which are not composed of other smaller, and which usually have but one single style, and compounded, which consist of many Roscioli, all making but one flower. Simple flowers are monopetalous, which have the body of the flower all of one entire leaf, though sometimes cut or divided a little way into many seeming petals, or leaves; as in borage, bugloss; or polypetalous, which have distinct petals, and those falling of singly, and not altogether, as the seeming petals of monopetalous flowers always do: but those are further divided into uniform forms.

2. The flower, the human flower have their right and left hand parts, and the forward and backward parts all alike; but the diaphragm have no such regularity, as in the flowers of sage and dead-nettle.
A monopetalous flower is likewise divided further into, first, semi-fuscular, whose upper part resembles a pipe cut off obliquely, as in the astreuse; 2d. labiate; and this either with one lip only, as in the acanthus and scorodon, or with two lips, as in the far greater part of the labiate flowers, and here the upper lip is sometimes turned upwards, and so turns the convex part downwards, as in the echinacius; but most commonly the upper lip is as above, and turns the hollow part downwards to its fellow below, and represents a kind of helmet, or monshod; and from these these are frequently called galatèa, carunculéa, and galactéa flowers; and in this form are the flowers of the lantian, and most verticillate plants.
Sometimes the lamina is fusciculéa, and sometimes jagged or divided. 3d. Cor- sica, or daisy; that is, such hollow flowers as have on their upper part a kind of spur, or little horn, as in the linaria, delphinium, &c. and the carunculéa, or calcar, is always impervious at the tip or point. Compounded flowers are, first, discous, or discoidal; that is, whose Roscioli are set so close, thick, that on the surface of the flower plain and flat, which, because of its round form, will be like a discus; which disk is sometimes radiated when there is a row of petals standing round in the disk, like the points of a star, as in the matricaria, chamomelum, &c. and sometimes deformed, having the petals leaves round the limb of its disk, as in the tuscacentum: 3d. plaufoluis, which is composed of plain flowers, set together in chains, and sometimes jagged, and whose face is usually indented, notched, and jagged, as the hieracium. 3d. Fistular, which is compounded of long hollow little flowers, like pippes, all divided into large jars at the ends. Imperfect flowers, because they want the petals, are called staminous, speculatus, and capilaccaes; and those which have none by fine threads, like the juli, are by Turnefort called amamentaeus, and we call them cats-tail. The term canindiscent is given to such as are in the shape of a bell, and infundibuliform for such as are in the form of a funnel.

3. Good man's lives
Expire before their roses are in their cups.
Dying or ere they sicken. Shaksp. Macbeth.
With flower's invenos tresses torn,
The umbilis in twilight shade of thangled ketts, black, moon.
Milton.

Beautiful flowers why do we spread
Upon the blossom's head?
Cowley.
Though the sun's beam with all-diffusive myra
Blursh in the rose, and in the diamond blaze,
We praise the stronger effort of his power,
And always, praise the flower.
Pope.

If the blossom of the plant be of most importance,
We call it a flower; such are daisies, tulips, and carnations.
Mallet.

12. An ornament; an embellishment.

The nomination of persons to those places being so prime and inseparable a flower of his crown, he would reserve to himself. Clarendon.

This discourse of Cypryan, and the excellent flowers of rhetoric in it, shew him to have been a sweet and powerful orator. Hakewill.

Truth needs no flower's of speech.
Pope.

3. The prime; the flourishing part.
Also, young man, your days can ne'er be long;
In flower's of age you perish for a song.
Pope.

4. The edible part of corn; the meal.
The bread I would have in flower, so as it might be baked still to serve their necessary want.
Spenser.

I can make my audit up, that all
From me do back receive the flower of all,
And leave me but the bran.
Shakespeare.
The flowers of grains, mixed with water, will make a sort of glue. Arbuthnot on Aliments.

But by thy grace, for sweetness and beauty of its Next these in worth, and firm those uns be seal'd;
Be twice ten measures of the choicest flower
Prepar'd, ere yet descends the evening hour.
Pope's Odyssey.

5. The most excellent or valuable part of any thing; quintessence.
The choice and flower of all things profitable the Psalms do more briefly contain, and more manifestly express, by reason of their poetical form.
Hooker.

Thou hast slain
The flower of France for his chivalry.
Shakespeare.
The French monarch is exhausted of its bravest subjects; the flower of the nation is consumed in its wars.
Addison.

6. That which is most distinguished for any thing valuable.
Miller specifies thirty-four species of this plant; and among them the Persian flower of dace is greatly esteemed for the sweetness and beauty of its variegated flowers, which are in perfection in February, or the beginning of March.
Dropd are the flower's of dace in your arms:
Of England's coat one half is cut away. Shen.
The iris is the flower de luce.
Peacham.

To FLOWER. v. n. [fleurir, fr. or from the noun.]

1. To be in flower; to be in blossom; to bloom; to put forth flowers.
So forth they marched in this goodly sort,
To take the solace of the open air,
And in fresh flowering fields themselves to sport.
Fairy Queen.

Sacred hill, whose head full high,
Is, as it were, for endless memory to be fill'd,
Of that dear Lord, who oft thereon was found,
For ever with a flower'd garland crown'd.
Fairy Queen.

Then herbs of every leaf, that sudden flower'd,
Op'ning their various colours.
Milton.

Mark well the flower'd almonds in the wood
If odour blooms the bearing branches load.
Dryd. Georg.

To leafless shrubs the flower'd palms succeed,
And odous myrtle to the muskane woman give.
Pope.

2. To be in the prime; to flourish.
Wildebe, in youth, when flower'd my youthful
As like swallow swift, I wandered here and there;
For heat of heedless lust me did confine,
That I of doubled danger had no fear.
Spenser.

This cause detain'd me all my flower'd youth.
Within a leaseless dungeon there to tire.
Shakespeare. Henry VI.

3. To froth; to ferment; to mantle, as new bottled beer.
The above water were best, and that heat did fill with little; whereas that under water did not, though it was fresh. Bacon.

An extreme clarification doth spread the spirits so smooth through them that it destroyeth, and the drink dead, which ought to have a little flowering.

Bacon's Natural History.

4. To come as cream from the surface.

If you can accept of these few observations, which have flowered off, and are, as it were, the bringing up of many sublunary and contemplative years, give them to dispose of. Milton.

To FLOWER. v. a. [from the noun.] To adorn with fictitious or imitated flowers.

FLOWERAGE. n. s. [from flower.] Store of flowers.

FLOWERET. n. s. [floweret, Fr.] A flower; a small flower.

Sometimes her head she fondly would assume With garden garlands, or fresh flowerets bright;
About her neck, or rings of rushes tight. F. G.
That same dew, which sometimes on the bards Was wont to swell, like round and orient pearls, Stood now within the pretty floweret's eyes,
Like tears that did their owne disgrace bewail. Shakespeare

So to the sylvan lode
They came, that like Pomona's arrow smil'd,
With flowerets deck'd, and fragrant-smells. Milton.

Then sought the childish year with flowerets crownd,
And lavishly performs the fields around;
But no resident remain to the leaves endure;
Infra the stalks, unless are the leaved. Dryden.

FLOWERGARDEN. n. s. [flower and garden.] A garden in which flowers are principally cultivated.

Observing that this rarene produced flowers in the field, I made my gardener try those shells in my flowergarden, and I never saw better caritations of flowers. Mortimer's Husbandry.

FLOWERINESS. n. s. [from flowerey.] 1. The state of abounding in flowers.
2. Floridness of speech.

FLOWERINGBUSH. n. s. A plant.

FLOWERY. adj. [from flower.] Full of flowers; adorned with flowers real or fictitious.

My mother Circe, with the syrens there,
Amidst the flowery kirtled Naiades. Milton.

Day's harbinger
Comes darting from the East, and leads with her
The flowery May, who from her green lap throws
The yellow cowslip and the pale primrose. Milton.

Over such a floweret was he thrown. Pope.
To her the shady grove, the flowery field,
The streams and fountains so delight could yield. Pope.

FLOWingly. adv. [from flow.] With volubility; with abundance.

FLOWK. n. s. [fluke, Scott.] A flounder; the name of a fish.

Among these the flounders, sole, and plaice, follow the tide up into the fresh waters.

Where the high majesty of David's throne? Prior.

2. Puffed; inflated; stale.

And when night
Darkens the streets, then wander forth the sons
Of Belial, flow with insolence and wine. Milton.

Is the fally feast
Or from your deeds I rightly may divine,
Unconly flow with insolence or wine. Pope

FLUC. It is not malleable, but yet is not fluent, but stupefied.

FLUC. It is not malleable, but yet is not fluent, but stupefied.

FLUC. To be longing for this thing to-day, and for that thing to-morrow; to change likings for loathings, and to stand wishing and hankering at a venture, here is it possible for any one to be at rest in this fluent wandering humour and opinion.

L'Estrange.

To FLUCTUATE. v. n. [fluctuate, Lat.] To roll to and from, as in agitation.

The fluctuating fields of liquid air,
With all the curious motions having there,
And the wide regions of the land, proclaim
The flow'ret Divine, that raise the mighty frame.

Theocritus

2. To float backward and forward, as with the motion of water.
3. To move with uncertain and hasty motion.

The temper
New parts on; and, as to passion mov'd, Fluctuates disturb'd. Milton's Paradise Lost.

4. To be in an uncertain state; to feel sudden vicissitudes.

As the greatest part of my estate has hitherto been of an unstable and volatile nature, either cast upon seas, or fluctuating in funds, it is now fixed and settled in substantial accums and tenements.

5. To resort; to be undetermined.

The alternate motion of the water.

Fluctuations are but motions subservient, which winds, storms, shores, shelves, and every interjacency irregular,:

That they were caused by the impulses and fluctuation of water in the hollows of the earth. Wood.

2. Uncertainty; indetermination.

It will not hinder it from making a proselyte of a person, that loves fluctuation of judgment little enough to be willing to be cas'd of it by any thing but error.

FLUE. n. s. [A word of which I know not the etymology, unless it be derived from flow of fly.] 1. A small pipe or chimney to convey air, heat, or smoke.
2. Soft dawn or fur, such as may fly in the wind.

FLUELINN. n. s. The herb SPEEDWELL.

FLUENCY. n. s. [from fliment.] 1. The quality of flowing: smoothness: freedom from harshness or asperity.

Fluency of numbers, and most expressive figures for the poet, morals for the serious, and lexicons for admirers of points of wit.
Earth.
2. Readiness; copiousness; volubility.

Our publick liturgy must be ascharmed, the better to please those men who gloried in their extraordinary vein and fluency. King Charles.

We reason with such fluency and fire.

The beaux buffle, and the learned tire.

Tickel.

The common fluency of speech in many men, and most women, is owing to a scarcity of matter, and a scarcity of words; far whoever is master of language, and hath mind full of ideas, will be at, in speaking, to hesitate upon the choice of both. Swift.

3. Affluence; abundance. This sense is obsolete.

Those who grow old in fluency and ease,
Behold him lost on seas. Sandys.
God riches and renown to men impart.

Even all they who are dull and empty heads
Cannot so great a fluency receive,

But their fruition to a stranger leave. Sandys.

FLUENT. adj. [fluens, Lat.] 1. Liquid.
2. Flowing; in motion; in flux.

Motion being a fluent thing, and one part of its duration being indepenent upon another, it doth not follow that because any thing moves this moment, it must so to the next. Bayle on the Creation.

3. Ready; copious; voluble.

Those have some natural dispositions, which have given grace in youth than in age, as such is a fluent and luxurious speech. Bacon.

I shall lay before you all that's wise, and with most fluent oration. Dryden's Soph. Phy.

FLUENTLY. adv. [from fluent.] With ready flow; volubly; readily; without obstruction or difficulty.

FLUID. adj. [fluidus, Lat. fluidus, Fr.] Having parts easily separable; not solid.

Or serve them as a flow'ry verge to bind
The thinly skirts of that smile 'ry cloud.

Leech.

Let it again dissolve, and show the earth?Milton.

If particles slip easily, and are of a fit size to be aggregated by heat, and the heat is big enough to keep them together, the body is fluid; and if it be apt to stick to things, it is bound. Newton.

FLUID. n. s. 1. Any thing not solid.
2. In [physick.] Any animal juice; as the blood.

Consider how luxury hath introduced new diseases, and with them, not improbably, altered the whole course of the fluids. Arbuthnot.

FLUENCY. n. s. [fluidité, Fr. from the Latin fluidius.] The quality in bodies opposite to stability; want of coherence between the parts.

Hat's preserve fluidity very much, by diminishing the tenacity of bodies; it makes many bodies fluid, which are not fluid in cold, and increases the fluidity of tenacious liquids; as oil, balsam, and honey; and thereby decreases their resistance.
Newton.

A disease opposite to this spissitude is too great dryness. Boyle.

FLUIDITY. n. s. [from fluid.] That quality in bodies opposite to stability.

What if we should say that fluidity and stability depends so much upon the texture of the parts, or by the change of that texture the same parts may be made to constitute either a fluid or a dry body, and that permanently too? Boyle.

FLUMBERRY. n. s. A kind of food made by conglomeration of wheatflower or oatmeal.

Milk and flumbery are very fit for children.

FLUNG. participle and preterite of fling.

Thrown; cast.

Several statues the Roman themselves flung into the river, when they would revenge themselves. Addison on Italy.

FLUOR. n. s. [Lat.] 1. A fluid state.

The particles of fluids, which do not cohere too strongly, and arc of such a smallness as renders them to be most scarce; of those agitation which keeps them in a fluid are, most easily separated and rarified into vapours. Newton's Opt.

2. Hurry; a violent commotion.

To FLUSH. v. n. [flusyen, Dut. to flow; flus, or flux, Fr]
1. To flow with violence.

The pulse of the heart he attributes to an exhibition and sudden expansion of the blood in the veins, after the manner of the milk, which, being heated to a degree, doth suddenly and all at once, flash up and run over the vessel. Rag.

It flashes violently out of the cock for about a quart, and then stops. Morison's Husbandry.

2. To come in haste.

If the place but affords Any store of lofty birds, As I make 'em to flash, Each owl out of his bush. Ben Jonson's Odes.

3. To glow in the skin; to produce a color in the face by a sudden afflux of blood. It is properly used of a sudden or transient heat of countenance; not of a settled complexion. Ere yet the salt of most magnificent tears Had left the flushing in her gazed eyes, She married. Shakespeare, Hamlet.

Thus Eve with countenance blite her story told, But in her cheek dissembler flushing glow'd. Milton.

What can be more significant than the sudden flushing and confusion of a blush? Collier.

What means that lovely fruit? What means, alas, that blood, which flushes guilty in your face? Dryden.

At once, in all the colors of the flushing year, The garden glows. Thomson's Spring.

4. To shine suddenly. Obsolete.

Take of eve that flushing in his beard, Him all amaz'd. Speni.

To FLUSH. v. a.

1. To colour; to reddent: properly to reddent suddenly.

The glowing damns of Zama's royal court Live faces flush'd with more exultate change. Addison, Cato.

Some court, or secret corner seek, Nor flush with shame the passing virgin's cheek. Gay's Frie.

2. To elevate; to elevate; to give the appearance of sudden joy.

As prosperous people, flushed with great victors and successes, are rarely known to conceal their joys within the bounds of modesty and innocence. Addison's Sermons.

FLUSH. n. S.

1. A gloss; sudden impulsion; violent flow. This is commonly corrupted to flush: as, a flush of water.

No he had any man such a loss, cries a widower, in the flush of his extravagancies and a dead wife. L'Estrange.

The pulse of the arteries is not only caused by the pulsation of the heart, driving the blood through them in manner of a wave or flush, but by the motion of the arteries themselves. Rag.

Success may give him a present flush of joy; but when the short transport is over, the apprehension of losing succeeds to the care of acquispting. Addison's Spectator.

2. Cards all of a sort.

To FLUSTER. v. a. [from To flush.] To make hot and rosy with drinking; to make half drunk.

Three kids of Cyprus, noble swelling spirits, Have I to-night flushed with drinking cups, And they watch too Shakespeare, Othello.

FLUTER. n. S. [flute, flute, Fr. flûte, Dut.*

1. A musical pipe; a pipe with stops for the fingers.

The ears were silver, Which to the tune of flutes kept stroke. Shakespeare.

The soft complaining flute is dying out. The voices of hopeless lovers, Whose dirge is whisper'd by the warbling lute. Dryden.

2. A channel or furrow in a pillar, like the concave of a flute split.

To FLUTE. v. a. To cut columns into hollows.

To FLUTTER. v. n. [jlopean, Sax. flottar, Fr.*

1. To take short flights with great agitation of the wings.

As an eagle stirs up her nest, fluttereth over her young, and spreadeth abroad her wings, to the Lord alone did he lead her. Deut.

Think you've an angel by the wings; One that slowly will rise. Watt.

T. wait upon each morning-sigh; To flutter in the balmy air Of your well-performance. Crashaw.

They fed, and, fluttering, by degrees withdrew. Dryden.

2. To move about with great show and bustle without consequence.

Excess modulates the best wit, and only makes it flutter and froth high. Gower.

No rag, no scrap of all the beau or wit, That once so flutter'd, and that once so writ. Pope.

To be crossed with quick vibrations or undulations.

Ye spirits! to your charge repair; The fluttering fan be Zephyretta's cure. Pope.

Fly the fair maid above the vessel rear, Or teach the fluttering sail to float in air. Pope.

To be in agitation; to move irregularly; to be in a state of uncertainty.

The relation being brought him what a glorious victory was got, and how long we fluttered upon the wings of doubtful success, he was not surprised. Herbert's Fiscal Forest.

It is impossible that men should certainly discover the agreement or dissonance of ideas, whilst their thoughts flutter about, or stick only in sounds of doubtful signification. Leeds.

Excitement would be my friends! event and change! Product by atoms from their fluttering dance! Prior.

His thoughts are very fluttering and wandering and cannot be fixed attentively to a few ideas successively. Watts.

To FLUTTER. v. a.

1. To drive in disorder; like a flock of birds suddenly roused.

Like an eagle in a dovecot, I flutter'd your Volcanos in Coriolis. Shakespeare.

2. To hurry the mind.

To FLUTTER. v. n. [from the verb.]

1. Vibrations; undulation; quick and irregular motion.

An infinite variety of motions are to be made use of in the flight of a fan: there is the angry flutter, the maddened flutter, and the timorous flutter. Addison's Spectator.

2. Hurry; tumult; disorder of mind.

3. Confusion; irregular position.

FLUVIATIC. adj. [fluvialis, Lat.*

Belonging to rivers.

FLUX. n. S. [fluxus, Lat. flux, Fr.*

1. The act of flowing; passage.

The simple and primary motion of fire is flux, in a direct line from the centre of the fuel to its circumference. Dugby.

FLY. By the perpetual flux of the liquids, a great part of sublimation is thrown out of the body. Culpeper.

2. The state of passing away and giving place to others.

Whether the heat of the sun in animals whose parts are successive, and in a continual flux, can produce a deep and perfect gloss of blackness. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

What the state of interest should be, in the constant change of affaires, and flux of money, is hard to determine.

In the constitutuion matter of one body, turning naturally to another like body, the stock or find can never be estimated, nor the flux and attention sensible. Wardara.

Languages, like our bodies, are in a perpetual flux, and stand in need of simples to supply those words that are continually failing. Leeton.

3. Any flow or issue of matter.

Quinces stop fluxes of blood. Arabian.

4. Dysentery; disease in which the bowels are excoriated and bleed; bloody flux.

East eastern spice, secure From burning fluxes and hot catarrh. Holifax.

5. Excrement; that which falls from bodies. Cyst is the very uncleanly flux of a cat. Shak.

6. Concourse; confusion.

Left and abandon'd of his velvet friends; 'Tis right, quoth he; thus ninny doth part The flux of company. Shakespeare. As you like it.

7. The state of being melted.

6. That which mingled with the body makes it melt.

FLUX. adj. [fluxus, Lat.*

2. Not durable; maintained by a constant succession of parts.

To FLUX. v. a.

1. To melt.

2. To sublate; to evacuate by spitting.

He might fashionably and genteelly have duched or fluxed into another world. South.

FLUXiITY. n. S. [fluxus, Lat.*

Ease of separation of parts; possibility of liquidation.

Experiments seem to teach, that the supposed aversion of nature to a vacuum is but accidental, or in consequence, partly of the weight and fluidity, or at least fluidity of the bodies here below. Boyle.

FLUXION. n. S. [fluxus, Lat.*

1. The act of flowing.

2. The matter that flows.

The fluxions increased, and abscesses were raised. Wiernman.

3. [In mathematics.] The arithmetick or analysis of infinitely small variable quantities; or it is the method of finding an infinite small or infinitely small quantity, which, being taken an infinite number of times, becomes equal to a quantity given. Harris.

A penetration into the abstruse difficulties and depths of modern algebra and fluxions, are not wth the labour of those who design the learned professions as the business of life. Watts.

To FLY. pret. flew; pld; past. fled; flew. v. n. [plegean, Sax. To fly is properly to use wings, and gives flux and flown. To flee is to escape, or to go away, pleam, Sax. and makes fled. They are now confounded.]

1. To move through the air with wings.

Ere the bat hath flown His cloister'd flight, Shakespeare, Macbeth.

Fowl that may fly above the earth in the open firmament of heaven. Gen. 1. 20.

These men's business the water sort of you do not comprehend: ye wish they had themselves longer in, and not flown so dangerously abroad before the feathers of the cause were all grown.

Hooker.

Hos.

beard who, Pope.

to speak mean, To mean O—Dl To Spenser.

henlth To komson's One Thatpiirtofa One Milt.

[lean, To to hack [pam. make

As strifes whip the top for sport,

The wooden engine flies and whirrs about. Dryd

6. To part with violence.

Glad to catch this good occasion,

Most thoroughly to be winnow'd, where my chaff

And corn shall fly sander. Shakesp.

He basses heads, to save his own, made fly;

And now, the sultan to preserve, must die. Waller.

7. To break; to shiver; to burst asunder with a sudden explosion.

Behold, a forthy substance rise;

Be cause of my bottle flies. Swift.

[plean. Sax. flichen. Germ.] To run away; to attempt escape. [Inc this sense the verb is properly to flee, when fled is formed; but the following examples shew that they are confounded: they are confounded often in the present than in the praper tense.]

Which when the valiant efl perceiv'd he kept, As he fled the flying prey. Spenser.

Ye shall flee, as ye fled from before the earthquake. Zech. xiv. 3.

Ah! had the sable wing been swift, Rev'd the drooping arts again;

If science ran'd her head,

And soft humanity, that from rebellion fled. Dryd.

He oft desir'd to fly from Isreal's throne,

And live in shades with her and love alone. Prior.

I'll fly: they shall fly and thee I'll leave. Shakesp.

And his toad's limbs are weary'd into rest.

Then dreams invade. Dryden's Journal.

Nature flies him like enchanted ground. Dryden.

3. To quit by flight.

Dedalus, to fly the Cretan shore,

His heavy limbs on jointed pinions bore,

The first who said 'tis done in air. Dryden's Alex.

4. To attack by a bird of prey.

If a man can tame this monster, and with her fly other ravenging foul, and kill them, it is some-what worth. Bacon.

5. It is probable that flew was originally the preterite of fly, when it signified volition, and fled when it signified escape: flown should be confined likewise to volition; but these distinctions are now confounded. I know not any book except the Scriptures in which fly and flee are carefully kept separate.

FLY. n. s. [pleoge, Sax.] 1. A small winged insect of many species. As flies to wanton boys, are we to their gods; They kill us for their sport. Shakesp.

My country neighbours begin to think of being in general, before they come to think of the fly in their sheep, or the darts in their corn. Locke.

To prevent the fly, some propose to tow ashes with the seed. North'me's Husbandry.

To heedless flies the window proves a constant death. Thomson's Summer.

2. That part of a machine which being put into a quick motion, regulates and equalizes the motion of the rest.

If you suppose a man tied in place of the weight, it were easy, by a single hair fastened unto the fly or balance of the jack, to draw him up from the ground.

3. That part of a vane which points how the winds blow.

To FLY-BLOW. n. s. [fly and blow.] To taint with flies; to fill with maggots.

FOA

I am unwilling to believe that he designs to play tricks, and to figbblow my words, to make others distaste them. Shakesp. Isettings feet.

Like a frighten cake of tallow: "Or, on frahly, ink turn'd yellow. Swift.

So morning insects, that in muck beguine, Seem to the eye in mud, and the figbblow of a destructive mire. Pope.

FLYBOAT. n. s. [fly and boat.] A kind of vessel nimble and light for sailing.

FLYCA'TChER. n. s. [fly and catch.] One that hunts flies.

There was more need of Brutus in Domitian's days, to mend, than of Horace, to laugh at a figbblower. Dryden.

The swallow was a figbblower as well as the sparrow. L'Espruche.

FLYER. n. s. [from fly.]

1. That flies or runs away. This is written more frequently flier.

They hit one another with darts, as the others do with their hands, which they never throw counter, but at the back of the fly, Sand's Flowel.

He grieves so many Britons should be lost; Taking more pains, when he beheld them yield, To save the flies than to win the field. Waller.

2. One that uses wings.

3. The fly of a jack.

4. [In architecture.] Stairs made of an oblong square figure, whose fore and back sides are parallel to each other, and so are their ends: the second of these fliers stands parallel behind the first, the third behind the second, and so are said to fly off from one another.

Mason's Mech. Eerr. To FLYFISH. r. n. [fly and fish.] To angle with a hook baited with a fly, either natural or artificial.

I shall give you some directions for flyfishing. Walpole.

FOAL. n. s. [pala, Sax.] The offspring of a mare, or other beast of burden. The custom now is to use colt for a young horse, and foal for a young mare; but there was not originally any such distinction.

Also flew his steed.

And with his winged heels did tread the wind, As he had been a foal of Pegasus's kind. F. Q. Twenty she-asses and ten foals. Gen. xxiii. 1.

To FOAL. v. a. [from the noun.] To bring forth. Used of mares.

Give my horse to Timon: it feeds me straight Ten able horses, Shakesp. Timon. Much as are.

Soils call as are.

Of generous race, straight, when they first are foaled, Walk proudly. May's Georgick.

To FOAL. v. n. To be disburthened of the foals. Used of beasts of burden.

About September take your mares into the house, where keep them till they foal. Mortimer's Husbandry.

FOLABIT. n. s. Plants.

F.O.A.

FOLIOOT.

FOAM. n. s. [pan, Sax.] The white substance which agitation or fermentation gathers on the top of liquors; froth; spume.

The foam upon the water. Hor. n. 7.

Whitening down their mossy tinctur'd stream. Descends the bellow'd foam. Thomson's Spring.

To FOAM. r. n. [from the noun.]

1. To froth; to gather foam.

When, buzz, and flyblow. To break out into the general use, and foam'd at mouth, and was s, ceaseless. Shakesp.
FOG

To Pallas high the foaming bowl he crow’d in, And sprink’d large Biass on the ground. Pope.

There followed a man of royal port and rie. I

FOAMY, adj. [from foam.] Covered with foam; frothy.

More-white than Neptune’s foam face. Dry.

When the singing rocks he would enshroud and en- Dried.

Behold how high the foamy shoulders rise! Shak. Mark, ii. 11.

FOB. n. s. [Jupp, Jup’sack, Germ.] A small pocket.

Which’d a job at holding forth. Hudibras.

When the dice with more profusion throw’d. Dry.

The well-fill’d job, not empty’d now alone. Dry.

He put his hand into his job, and presented me Filled.

in his name with a tobacco-stopper. Dry.

Two pockeats he call’d his jobs; they were two Filled.

large ads squeezed close by the pressure of his Ankle.

belly. Orphans.

The winds and waves are on the juster side. Dried.

FOB. v. a. [Jupp, Germ.] 1. To cheat; to trick; to defraud,” I think it is scurry, and begin to find myself Filled.

fool’d. Shak.

Shall there be a gallows standing in England Filled.

when thou art king, and resolution thus fill’d as it Filled.

with the rusty eath of old father anticke ther- Law.

law, Shak. Henry IV.

He goes pressing forward, till he was fool’d Filled.

again with another stow. Add.

2. To job off. To shift off; to put aside with an Filled.

artifice; to delude by a trick.

You must not think

To job off your disguises with a tale. Shak.

that they were glad to cheat, To get their wives and children meat; But these will not be fool’d off so, They must have wealth and power too. Hudibras.

Upon a foaming horse.

Dry.

Shall there be a gallows standing in England when thou art king, and resolution thus fill’d as it with the rusty earth of old father anticke the law.

Shak. Henry IV.

He goes pressing forward, till he was fooled again with another stow. Add.

FOCAL, adj. [from focus.] Belonging to the focus. See Focus.

Schlemmader demandeth whether the convexity or concavity of the drum collects rays into a focal point or scatters them. n. t. Devion.

FOCAL, n. s. [facilis, Fr.] The greater or less bone between the knee and ankle, or elbow and wrist.

The fracture was of both the facets of the left leg. Nicoll.

FOCILLATION. n. s. [facilito, Lat.] Comfort; support. Diet.

FOCUS. n. s. [Lat.] 1. In optics. ‘T’he focus of a glass is the point of convergence or concurrence, where the rays meet and cross the axis after their refraction by the glass.

2. A focus of a Parabola. A point in the axis within the figure, and distant from the vertex by a fourth part of the parameter, or lotus rectum. Harris.

3. Focus of an Ellipsis. A point towards each end of the longer axis; from whence two right lines being drawn to any point in the circumference, shall be together equal to that longer axis. Harris.

FOG. n. s. [fogarium, low Lat. Gramen in forst regis locutae pce fogagio. Leges forest. Scotiae.] Aftergrass; grass which grows in Autumn after the hay is mown.

FOGGILY. adv. [from foggy.] Mistily; darkly; cloudily.

FOGGINESS. n. s. [fremcy/foggy.] The state of being dark or misty; cloudiness; mistiness.

FOGGY. adj. [from fog.] 1. Misty; cloudy; dank; full of moist vapours.

Bats, while we are wrapped in foggy mist. Our self-love, so passions do deceive, We think they hurt, when most they do assist. Sidney.

And Phoebus flying so, most shameful sight, His blushing face in foggy cloud implied, And hides for shame. Spencer.

To whence have they this mettle? Is not their climate foggy, raw and dull? Shaks. Henry V.

As elecere Phoebeus, when some foggy cloud His brightness from the world a while doth showed, Both by degrees began to shew his light. Dry.

Fo’t to be shewn. Let not sirbe be subject to any foggy noisomeness, from fens or marshes near adjoining. Horat. Architectura.

About Michaelmas, the weather fair, and by no mean foggy, retic your rarest plants. Evens. Eccles. Calendar.

2. Cloudy in understanding; dull. Foi. interject. [from gah, Sax. an enemy.] An interjection of abhorrence: as if one should at sight of any thing hate. I cry out a fce! Not to affect many proposed matches Of her own elaine, complexion and degree, Where we see in all things nature tends, Foh! one may smell in such a will most rank, Foul disproportions, thoughts unnatural. Shak.

FOIL B.L.E. n. s. [Fr.] A weak side; a blind side; a failing.

He new the fables of human nature. Friend.

The witty men sometimes have sense enough to know their own failings, and therefore they craftily shun the attacks of argument. Watts’s Logick.

To FOILL. v. a. [afforder to wound, old Fr.] 1. To put to the worst; to defeat; though without a complete victory.

Amagements. The rebel thrones; but greater rage to see Thus foul’d their mightiest. Milton.

Leader of those nations bright, Which but the omnipotent move might have had it! Milton.

Yet these subject not I to these discourses. What inward thence I feel, I not therefore fould: Who meet with various objects, from the sense Variously representing; yet still free, Approve the best, and fellow what I approve. Milton.

Strange, that your fingers should the pencil flout, Without the help of office or art of dill. Filler. He had been foud in the cur, and had left it to nature. Nicoll’s Sarcory.

In their conflicts with sin they have so often failed, that they now despair of ever getting the day. Calamy’s Sermons.

Victory, disdain, despair, I oft have try’d; And, fould, I have with new arms my foe def’d. Dryden.

But I, the consort of the thunderer, Have war’d a long and unsuccessful war; With various arts and arms in vain have toll’d, And by a mortal man at length am toll’d. Dryden.

2. [Fouiller, Fr.] To blurt; to droll.

When light with joy.

Of feather’d Cupid fell, with wanton dulness, My speculative and idle instrumants. Shak.
3. To defeat; to puzzle.

While I am following one character, I am cross'd in my way another, and put up such a variety of cut animals in both sexes, that they foul the scent of another, and puzzle the chase.

Addison.

FOLIOL. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. A defeat; a miscarriage; an advantage gained without a complete conquest.

We of that cunning had no disidence; One stabel never beat another. Shak.

Whenever overthroweth his mate in such sort, as that either his back, or the one shoulder, and eye, chance to be an idle one, the thing shall be accounted to give the full; if he be disengaged, and make a narrow escape, it is called a fall. Carece.

So after many a fall the tendering ground, Extending his assurance, and in all pride, Fell wherein he stood to his victor fall. Milton.

When age shall level me to impotence, And fleeting pleasure leave me on the Southern.}

Death never won a stake with greater toil,

Hector was left so near a fall. Dryden.

2. [Fuelle, Fr.] Leaf gilding.

A stately palace, built of squared brick, Which cunningly was without mortar laid, Whose walls were high, but nothing strong nor golden foil all over them display'd. Fairy Q.

Fane is no plant that grows on mortal soil, Nor in the abstraying set off to the world, nor in broad rumour lies. Milton.

3. Something of another colour near which jewels are set to raise their lustre.

As she a black silk cap on him began To set for foil of his milk-white to serve. Sidney.

Like bright metal on a sullen ground, Mirror of glory on my face, Shall show more gradually, and attract more eyes, Than that which hath no foil to set it off. Shak.

The sullen passage of thy weak steps Extelling with his doleful sound, to set The precious jewel of thy name. Shak.

'Tis the property of all true diamonds to unite the foil closely to itself, and thereby better augment its lustre; the foil is a mixture of mastich and burnt ivory. Grew's Museum.

A Foliage of pinnas to set him off; and we oppose the incontinence of Passus to the temperance of Hector. Brome on the Odyssey.

4. [From fouiller, Fr.] A blunt sword used in fencing.

He saw the king shall be welcome; his majesty shall have tribute of me; the adventurous knight shall use his foil and target. Shak.

FOILER. n. s. [from foil.] One who has gained advantage over another.

To FOIN, v. n. [fiondre, Fr. Skinner.]

To push in fencing.

He baw'd and lash'd, and found, and thunder'd shows, And every way did seek into his life; Ne plate, ne nail, could ward so mighty thieves, But yielded passage to his cruel knife. Fairy Q.

He cars not what mischief he doth, if his weapon be out; he will found like any devil; he will spare neither man, woman, nor child. Shak.

Then both, no moment lost, at once advanced Against each other, armed with sword and lance; They lash, they found, they pass, they strive to bore Their corses whilst, and the thinnest parts expire. Dry.

Foin. n. s. [from the verb.] A thrust; a push.

FOININGLY. adv. [from foin.] In a punishing manner.

FOISON. n. s. [poison, Sax.] Plenty; abundance. A word now out of use.

Pay justly thy titles, whatsoever thou be, That God may bless in blessing send to thee. Taz.
FOL

FOLIO. n. s. [in folio, Lat.] A large book of which the pages are formed by a sheet of paper once doubled.

Plutarch and Plutarch made less progress in knowledge, though they had read more folios. Watts on the Mind.

FOLIOMORT. adj. [folium mortuus, Lat.] A yellow color; the color of a leaf faded: vulgarly called philomel. Woodward on Fossils.

FOLK. n. s. [polec, Sax. volk, Dut.: it is properly a noun collective, and has no plural but by modern corruption.]
1. People, in familiar language.

Never troubling him, either with asking questions, or finding fault with his melancholy, but rather fitting to his dolorous discourses of their own and other folk's misfortune. Sidney.
2. Any kind of people as discriminated from others.

The river three hath flow'd, no ebb between; And the old folk, time's doting chronicles. Swift.
3. It is now used only in familiar or burlesque language.

Old good man Dobson of the green. Remembers be the tree has seen, And goes with folk now that the light. Swift.
4. There are many more folk than upon earth.

FOLKMOTE. n. s. [from folk and mote.]

Those bills were appointed for two special uses, and built by two several nations: the one is that which you call folkmotes, built by the Saxons, and signified in the Saxon a meeting of folk. Spooner on Ireland.

FOLICILE. n. s. [folliculus, Lat.]
1. A cavity in any body with strong costs.

Although there be no eminent and circular follicle, or vesicle, which long contains this humour; yet is there a certain receptacle of choler from the liver into the guts.
2. Follicle is a term in botany, signifying seed-vessels, capsula seminalis, or case, which some fruits and seeds have over them; as that of the allgenc, peduncularis, &c. Quincy.

To FOLLOW. v. a. [polgyn, Sax.; volgen, Dut.]
1. To go after; not before, or side by side.

I had rather, forsooth, go before you like a man, than follow you like a buffer. Shaksp.

2. To pursue as an enemy; to chase.

He would not let us guess what it was indeed the place. Shakespeare.

3. To accompany; not to forsake.

Yet doubt not but in valley and in plain God is as here, and will be and alike

FOLK

FOLLOVER. n. s. [from follow.]
1. One who comes after another; not before him, or side by side.

Little gallant, you were wont to be a follower; but now you are a leader; whether you rather lead mine eyes, or eye your master's heels. Shakep.
2. One who observes a guide or leader.

The understanding that should be eyes to the blind, fingers to the blind, and so brings all the inconveniences that attend a blind follower, under the conduct of a blind guide. South's Sermons.

3. An attendant or dependant.

No follower, but a friend. Pope.

4. An associate; or companion.

How accompanied, can't thou tell that?—Sir John, and other his continual followers. Shaksp. Henry IV.

5. One unter the command of another.

I hold it no strange thing to leave unto the Irish chiefs too much power over their kindred, but rather with whom their followers from them as much may be, and gather them under the command of law. Spencer's State of Ireland.

And since their Eman, when his ships were lost, To leave his followers on a foreign coast. Dryg. En.

6. A scholar; an imitator; a copier.

Be ye followers of me, even as I am of Christ. 1 Corinthians.

The true profession of Christianity indispensably engages all its followers to do good to all men. Spence's Serm. for All.

Every one's idea of identity will not be the same that Pythagoras and thousands of his followers have. Locke.

The church of Smyrna professed they worthily loved the martyrs, as the disciples and followers of Our Lord: and because of the exceeding great affection to their king and their master. Newton.

The studious head or generous mind, Following of God, or true patriot, or patriot, rose to but restore The faith and moral nature gave before. Pope.

7. One of the same faction or party.

FOLLY. n. s. [folie, Fr.]
1. Want of understanding; weakness of intellect.

This is folly: childhood's guide. This is childhood at her side. Hakeworth.

2. Criminal weakness; depravity of mind.

Think'st thou, that duty should have dread to speak. When power to flatter bow'd? To plainness honour Is bound, when majesty to folly falls. Shakep.

3. Act of negligence or passive, or unbecoming gravity or deep wisdom. In this sense it has a plural.

Love is blind, and lovers cannot see. The pretty follies that themselves commit; For if they did, Cupid himself a thief To see me transformed into a boy. Shakep.

Thy human vein, thy pleasing folly, Lies all neglected, all forgot. Prior.

Leave such toIMA with more grace and ease, Whom folly pleases, or whose follies please. Pope.

782
FOREM. v. a. [fomentor, Lat. foment, Fr.] 1. To cherish with heat. Every kind that lives, Fomented by his birth, by his virtue, and warm'd, Milton. 2. To bathe with warm lotions. He fomented the head with ointments to procure sleep, and a solution of opium in water to foment the bowels, Dryden. 3. To encourage; to support; to cherish. They love their givings, and foment their deeds no less than parents do their children. Burton. Hence they who stand in reason's law require: Since nature gave, and thou fomented my fires, Drayden. They are troubled with those ill humours, which they themselves intusied and fomented in them, Locke.

FOMENTATION. n. s. [fomentation, Fr. from foment.] 1. A fomentation is partial bathing, called also stupeing, which is applying hot flannels to any part, dipped in medicated decoctions, whereby the steams breathe into the parts, and discuss obstructions. Quinque. Fomentation calleth forth the humour by vapours; but yet, in regard of the way made by the poultis, drawn into the surface of the humour out; for it is a gentle fomentation, and laith without a mixture of some stupefactive. Bacon's Natural History. 2. The lotion prepared to foment the parts. This lotion is prepared by the physicians, and the lotions of fomentation by the nurses. Arberthut.

FOMENTER. n. s. [from foment.] One that foment: an encourager; a supporter. These fatal distempers, as they did much hurt to the body politic at home, being like humours stirred in the natural without evaporation, so did they produce disadvantageous effects abroad; and better had it been, that the raisers and fomenters of them had never sprung up, Houel.

FOX, n. s. [Scott. A word now obsolete.] A fool; an idiot; Sicker I hold him for a greater fox, That love's the thing he cannot purchase, Spenser. FOND. n. s. [fom, Scott. A word of which I have found no satisfactory etymology. To fomme is in Chaucer to doat, to be foolish.] 1. Foolish; silly; indiscreet; imprudent; injudicious. The Grecians or Gentiles ever did think it a fond or unlikely way to seek men's conversion by sermons, we have not heard, Hooker. He was beaten out of all love of learning by a fond school-master, Ascham. Fell these sad women, To fond to wait imitable strokes, As 'tis to laugh at them, Shakespeare. Coriolanus. Grant I may never prove so fond To trust man on his oath or bond, Shakespeare. Tempest. I am weaker than a woman's tear, Tanner than sleep, fonder than ignorance, Shakespeare. Fond thoughts may fall into some idle brain; But one belief of all, is ever wise, Duties. Thou seest How subtly to detain thee I devise, Having my fruition, while I debate; Fond! were it not in hope of thy reply, Milton. S. fond are mortal men, Fall into wrath divine, As their own ruin on themselves invite. 'Tis never for grief'd Apollo's wrong That make their ears on Midas' temple hang. But fond repentance of his hapless wish. Waller. But reason with your fond religion lights; For many gods are many vanities, Dryden. This is fond, because it is the way to cherish thyself, Tickell. 2. Trifling; valued by folly.

FOOD. n. s. [fod, Sax. veoden, Dut. to feed; feed, Scott.] 1. Virtuats: provision for the mouth. On my knees I beg, That youll vouchsafe me raiment, bed, and food, Shakespeare. Much food is in the tillage of the poor. Proverbs, iii. 23. Under my lowly roof thou hast vouchsafed To enter, and assort these earthy fruits to taste; Fed not of angels, yet accepted so, As that more willingly thou couldst not seem At heaven's high feast, 't is fed. Milton. They give us food, which may with nectar vie, And was that does the absent sun supply, Waller. 2. Any thing that nourishes. Give me some musick; musick, moody food Of us that trade in love, Shakespeare. Ant. and Cleop. They are not for the food of thy abased father's wrath, Might I but live to see thee in my touch, I'd say, I had eyes again. Shakespeare. King Lear. FOODFUL. adj. [food and full] Fruitful; full of food; plentiful. There Titius was to see, who took to his birth From heav'n, his nursing from the fruitful earth, Dryden.

FOOF. adj. [from food.] Eatable; fit for wood.
FOOT  3.

Three times a day my footcloth burst at stumps.

And started when he looked upon the Tower,
As boats to bear me to the clattle-house, shriek.

FOOTED. adj. [from foot.] Shaped in the foot.

Sounded and rallied as a boar, and footed like a bull.

FOOTFIGHT. n.s. [foot and fight.] A fight made on foot, in opposition to that on horseback.

So began our footfight in such sort, that we were well entered to blood of both sides.

FOOT HOLD. n.s. [foot and hold.] Space to hold the foot; space on which one may tread surely.

All fell to work at the roots of the tree, and left it so little foothold, that the first blast laid it flat on the ground.

L'Estrange.

He's at his top; he has nothing above him to aspire to, nor any foothold left him to come down by.

L'Estrange.

doer, and so...
Footlicker. n.s. [foot and lock.] A slave; an humble fawner, one who kicks the foot.

Do that good mischief which may make this island
Thine for ever; and I, thy Caliban,
For thy footlicker. Shakespeare. Tempest.

Footman. n.s. [foot and man.] 1. A soldier that marches and fights on foot.

The numbers levied by her lieutenant did consist Of footmen three millions, of hercules one million. Shakespeare’s History of Ireland.

2. A low menial servant in livery.

He was in a rich erccoli, litererwise, with two horses at either end, and two footmen on each side.

Beau.

Like footmen running before coaches.
To tell the inn what lod approaches. Prior.

Footman. n.s. [foot and man.] The art or faculty of a runner.

The Irish archers enjoying this, suddenly broke up, and committed the safety of their lives to their nimble footman. Heywood.

Yet says the fox, I have baffled more of them with my wiles and shifted than ever you did with your footmen. L’Estrange.

Footpace. n.s. [foot and pace.] 1. Part of a pair of stairs, whereon, after four or five steps, you arrive to a broad place, where you make two or three paces before you ascend another step, thereby to ease the legs in ascending the rest of the stairs. Moron.

2. A pace no faster than a slow walk.

Footpad. n.s. [foot and pad.] A highwayman that robs on foot, not on horseback.

Footpath. n.s. [foot and path.] A narrow way which will not admit horses or carriages.

Know’st then the way to Dover?—Both side and gate, horseway and footpath. Shakespeare.

Footpost. n.s. [foot and post.] A post or messenger that travels on foot.

For carrying such letters, every thoroughfare weekly appointed a footpost, whose dispatch is well near as speedy as the horses. Careae.

Footstall. n.s. [foot and stall.] A woman’s stirrup.

Footstep. n.s. [foot and step.] 1. Trace; track; impression left by the foot.

Clear-sighted reason, wisdom’s judgment leads,
And sense, her veil, in her footstep tread. Denh.

A man shall never want crooked paths to walk in, for think that he is in the right way, whereby ever he has the footstep of others to follow. Locke.

2. Token; mark; notice given.

Let us turn our thoughts to the frame of our system, if there we may trace any visible footstep of Divine wisdom and beneficence. Bentley’s Sermon.

3. Example.

Footstool. n.s. [foot and stool.] Stool on which he that sits places his feet.

Thus have we swept suspicion from our seat,
And made our footstool of security. Shak. Hen. VI.
The footstool and erccoli’s to bring to
Kings to obey their God, and men their king,
By these mysterious legs to fly and fly
Men to the footstool of the Deity. Dryden’s Sopy.

Let echoing anthems make his praises known
On earth, his footstool, as in heaven his throne.

Fop.

By the phrase of worshipping his footstool, no more is meant than worshipping God at his footstool.

Fop. n.s. [A word probably made by chance, and therefore without etymology.] A simpleton; a coxcomb; a man of small understanding and much ostentation; a pretender; a man fond of show, dress, and flatter; an impertinent.

A whole tribe of fops,
Got t'ween ask and awake. Shak. King Lear.

When such a fellow as a fop,
Leans. Among his numerous absurdities,
Stumbles upon some tolerable line,
If feet to see through. Rouseman.

The leopard's beauty, without the fox's wit, is no better than a fop in a gay coat.

In a dull stream, which moving slow,
You hardly see the current flow;
When a small breeze obstructs the course,
It works about for want of force,
And in its narrow circle gathers
Nothing but chaff, and straws, and feathers.

The current of a female mind
Stops thus, and turns with every wind;
Thus whirling round, together draws
Fops, fools, and rakes, for chaff and straw, Swift.

Fopdoodle. n.s. [fop and doodle.] A fool; an insignificant wretch.

We where stone your nodle,
And handled you like a fopdoodle. Hudibras.

Foppery. n.s. [from fop.] 1. Folly; impertinence.

Let not the sound of shallow foppery enter
My sober house. Shak. Merchant of Venice.

I was three or four times in the thought they were not fair, and yet the gulliness of my mind, the sudden surprise of my powers, drove the greatness of this foppery as a received belief, in despight of the teeth of all rhyme and reason, that they were fair.

Sh. Lik. Merry Wives of Windsor.

This is the excellent folly of the world, that when we are sick in fortune, often the surfeits of our own behaviour, we make guilty of our disasters, the son, the moon, and stars, as if we were villains on necessity. Shak. King Lear.

2. Affectation of show or importance; showy folly.

Foolery; vain or idle practice; idle affectation.

They thought the people were better let alone in their fopperies, than to be suffered to break loose from that subjection which your superstition kept them in. Shakespeare.

But though wefetch from Italy and France Our fopperies of tone and modes of dance, Our sturdy Britons seem to borrow sense. Grave.

I wish I could say against fopperies were wholly absent from grave subjects. Swift.

Foppish. adj. [from fop.] 1. Foolish; idle; vain.

Fools we're less happy grace in a year;
For wise men are grown foppish,
And know not how their wits to wear,
Their manners are so apish. Shak. King Lear.

2. Vain in show; foolishly ostentations; vain of dress.

With him the present still some virtues have;
The vain are shewy, and the stupid grave;
The doleful neglect, the foppish neat;
The few and disdaining grace. Gay.

The Romans grew extremely expensive and foppish so that the emperor Aurelian forbid men that variety of colours on their shoes, still to wound their own face. Arbeuthnot.

You would know who is rude and ill-natured,
Who is vain and foppish, who lives too high,
And who is the noblest and the greatest,
Tell him that is the truest. Addison.

Foppishly. adv. [from foppish.] Vainly; ostentatiously.

Foppishness. n.s. [from foppish.] Vanity; showy or ostentatious vanity.
FOR

Rather our state’s defective for requital,
Than we to sketch it out. Shakesp. Coriolanus.

A paltry ring
That she did give me, whose poyzy was,
For all the world, like cutler’s poetry.
Upon a knife; love me and leave me not.
Shakesp.

For all the world.

As the art at this hour was Richard then. Shak.
It was well contrived for the persons, and violent counsel for the matters. Bacon’s Essay. Authority followed old men, and favour and popular youth; but for the moral part, perhaps, youth will have the pre-eminence, as age hath for the politic. Bacon’s Essay. Considered is absolute Carretson. beneficial and.
There towards.
but

4.

3.

And

For Forward

For the served served

the

served

For the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the

served

the
30. Noting accommodation or adaptation.
F or
F or

31. With intention of.
F or

32. Becoming; belonging to.
F or

33. Notwithstanding.
F or

34. To the use of; to be used in.
F or

35. In consequence of.
F or

36. In recom pense of; in return of.
F or

37. In proportion to.
F or

38. By means of; by interposition of.
F or

39. In regard of; in preservation of; I cannot for my life is, I cannot if my life might be saved by it.
F or

40. For all. Notwithstanding.
F or

41. Neither doubt you, because I wear a woman's apparel, I will be the more womanish; since you do love me in this apparel, there is nothing I desire more than fully to prove myself a man in this enterprise.
F or

42. For so much. In consideration of.
F or

43. For why. Because; for this reason.
F or

44. To forage. v. n. [from foris abroad, L.]
F or

45. To wander far; to rove at a distance.
F or

46. To ravige; to feed on spoil.
F or

47. To forage. v. a. To plunder; to strip; to spoil.
F or

F or

Besides, in gratitude for such high matters, know I have yow'd two hundred gladiators.
Dryden.

First the wily wizard must be caught;
Dryden.

He is not in very tall, yet for his years he's tall.
Shaksp.

As he can see deal, for these times, through supervision so he would be blinded, men and thence, by human policy.
Bacon.

Lauded Socrates! divinely brave!
Dryden's Juvenal.

Injur'd he felt, and dying he forgave.
Dryden's Juvenal.

To the noble for revenge.

By means of; by interposition of.
Moral consideration can no way move the sensible appetite, were it not for the will.

Of some calamity we have no relief but from God alone; and what would men do in such a case, if it were not for God?
Tillotson.

In regard of; in preservation of; I cannot for my life is, I cannot if my life might be saved by it.

I bid the roused knight upon your gate;

But could not get him for my heart.

I cannot for my heart leave a room, before I have thoroughly examined the papers pasted upon

The wall.

Solicity.

For all the carefulness of the Christians the English bawcock was undermined by the enemy, and upon the fourth of September part thereof was blown up.

But as Noah's pigeon, which return'd no more, Did shew she fondness for all the do.

They resolute, for all this, do proceed

Unto that judgment.

If we apprehend the greatest things in the world of the emperor of China or Japan, we are well enough contented, for all that, to let them govern at home.

Slighting.

Though that very ingenious person has anticipated part of what I should say, yet you will, for all that, expect that I should give you a fuller account.

Her pertness.

For all her vast plot, down was he cast from all his greatness, and forced to end his days in a mean condition.

South.

For to. In the language used two centuries ago, for was commonly used for to, the sign of the infinitive mood, to note the final cause.

As, I come for to see you, for I love to see you; in the same sense with the French pour. Thus it is used in the translation of the Bible. But this distinction was by the best writers sometimes forgotten; and for, by wrong use, appearing superfluous, is now always omitted.

Whoso shall let me now

On this vile body for to wreak my wrong?
Fair Q.

A large hostility
Up to your happy palaces may mount,
O blessed as art to you I dedicate the court. Spencer.

These things may serve for to represent how just cause of fear this kingdom may have towards Spain.
Bacon.

FOR. conj.
1. The word by which the reason is introduced of something advanced before.
Heav'n doth with us as we with torches deal,
Not light them for themselves; for if our virtues

Did not go forth of us, were all alive
As if we had them not.
Shaksp. Men, for Men.

Old husbandmen i' the country I am
Who for another year dig, plough, and sow;
For never any man was yet so old,
But hop'd his life one Winter more would hold.
Draughton.

Tell me what kind of thing is wit;
Shaksp.Merchant of Venice.

For the first matter loves variety less. Cowley.

Thus foolishly; for they are jealous.
Shaksp. Othello.

Heaven defend your good souls, that you think
I will your serious and great business scant;
For she is with me.
Shaksp. Othello.

Old husbandmen I at Salisbury, when fear of any thing in this world, venturous to displeasure God; for in so doing he runs away from men, and falls into the hands of the living God.
Tillotson.

2. Because, on this account that it is in this sense properly followed by that, and without it is elliptical. This sense is almost obsolete.
I doubt not but great troops would be ready to run; yet for that the worst men are most ready to remove, I would wish them chosen by discretion of wise men.
Spenser on Ireland.

Jealous souls will not be answer'd so;
They are not ever jealous for a cause.
Shaksp. Othello.

Neither doubt you, because I wear a woman's apparel, I will be the more womanish; since you do love me in this apparel, there is nothing I desire more than fully to prove myself a man in this enterprise.

Many encroaches of trees grow chieflly where the tree is dead or faded; for that the natural sap of the tree corrupteth into some preternatural distemper.
Dean's Nat. Hist.

3. For as much. In regard to that; in consideration of.
For as much as in publick prayer we are not only to consider what is needful, in regard of God; but there is also in men that which we must regard; we somewhat incline to length, lest our quick dispatch should give occasion to deem, that the thing itself is but little accounted of. Harte.

He who is the thirteenth, the patient may be indulged the free use of spaw water.
Browne.

To forage. v. n. [from foris abroad, L.]
1. To wander far; to rove at a distance. Not in use.
Forage, and run.

To meet displeasure farther from the doors,
And grapple with him, ere he come so nigh. Shak.

2. To wander in search of spoil, generally of provisions.
As in a stormy night,
Wolves, urged by their raving appetite,
Forage for prey.

There was a brood of young larks in the corn, and the dam went abroad to forage for them. L'Estrange.

Nor dare they stay.

When rain is promised or a stormy day;
But near the city walls their waiting lake,
Nor forage far, but short excursions make. Dryden.

3. To ravage; to feed on spoil.
His most mighty father on his hill
Stood smiling, to behold his Ben's whelp
Forage in blood of French nobility.
Shaksp.

To forage. v. a. To plunder; to strip; to spoil.

They will both strengthen all the country round,
And also as cruelly hold for her majesty,
If the people should revolt; for without such it is easy to forage and over-run the whole land.
Spenser.

748
FOR

The victorious Philistines were worsted by the captivated airs, which forsook their country more than the enemy, by South.

FORAGE. n. s. [furopean, Germ. and Fr. from ferre, Lat.] 1. Search of provisions; the act of feeding abroad.
   One way a band select from forage drives
   A herd of bieves, far oxen, and fast kine,
   From a fat meadow ground; or theychock,
   Ewes and their bleeding lambs, over the plains
   Their hoity. Milton's Par. Lost.

   Some o'er the publick magistrates preside,
   And some are sent new forage to provide. Dryd.

   Provided forage, our spent arms renew'd. Dryd.

FORA'MINOUS. adj. [from foramen, Lat.]
   Full of holes; perforated in many places; porous.
   Soft and foraminous bodies, in the first creation of the sound, will deade it; but in the passage of the sound they will admit it better than harder bodies. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

To FORBEAR. v. n. pret. I forbore, anciently forbode; part. forboren, [opobcan, Sax. For has in composition the power of privation; as, forbear; or deprecation; as, forswear, and other powers not easily explained.

1. To cease from anything; to intermit.
   Who can forbear to admire and adore him who Weighed the mountains in scales, and the hills in a balance. Cheyne.

2. To pause; to delay.
   I pray you, stay, pause a day or two,
   Before you hazard; for in choosing wrong,
   I lose your company; therefore forbear a while. Shaksp.

3. To omit voluntarily; not to do; to abstain.
   He forbore to go forth. 1 Sam. xiii.
   At this he started, and forbore to swear. 1 Sam. xiii.
   Not out of conscience of the sin, but fear. Dryd.

To FORBIDDING. part, adj. [from forbidd.] Raising abhorrence; repelling approach; causing aversion.

   Tragedy was made forbidding and horrible. A. Hud.

FORCE. n. s. [force, Fr. fortis, Lat.]
1. Strength; vigour; might; active power.
   He never could maintain his part but in the Force of his will. Shaksp. Much ado about Nothing.
   A ship, which hath striked sail, doth run
   By force of that force which before it went. Dryd.

2. Violence.
   Thus got the house of Lancaster the crown,
   Which now they hold by force, and not by right.
   They shew not the same, but but force.
   The shepherd Paris bore the Spartan bride.
   By force away, and then by force enjoy'd; Dryd.

   3. Virtue; efficacy.
   Manifest it is, that the very majesty and holiness of the place where God is worshipped, hath, in regard of us, great virtue, force and efficacy; for that it serveth as a sensible help to stir up devotion. Hooker.
   No definitions, no suppositions of any sect, are of force enough to destroy constant experience. Locke.

4. Validness; power of law.
   A testament is of force after men are dead.
   Not long in force this charter stood; Dryd.
   Wanting that seal, it must be seal'd in blood. Dech.

5. Armament; warlike preparation. Often forces in the plural.
   O Thou! whose captain I account myself,
   Look on my forces with a gracious eye. Shaksp. R. III.
   The secret of the power of Spain consisteth in a veteran army, compounded of miscellaneous forces of all nations, Bacon. A greater force than that which here we see, Ne'er press'd the ocean, nor employ'd the wind. Waller.

   Those victorious forces of the rebels were not able to sustain their arms. Dryd.

6. Destiny; necessity; fatal compulsion. To FORCE. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To compel; to constrain.
   Dangers are light, if they once seem light; and more dangers have deceived men than forced them. Bacon.
   I have been forced to use the cant words of Whig and Tory. Sylph's Examiner.
   The actions and operations did force them upon dividing the simple idea. Bouvres View of Epic Poem.

2. To overcome by strength.
   O that consummate
   Had brought me to the field where thou art fam'd
   To have wrought such wonders with an ass's jaw,
   I should have forc'd thee soon with other arms. Milton.

   With fates averse, the rout in arms resort,
   To force their monarch, and insult the court. Dryd.

3. To impel; to press; to draw or push by main strength.
   Thou shalt not destroy the trees by forcing an ax against them. Deut. xx. 19.
F OR

Stooping, the spear descended on his chine,
Just where the bone distinguish'd each bone:
It stuck so deep as he fell, and lay,
That scarce the force'd the steel away. Dryd.

4. To enforce; to urge.
Three blustering nights, born by the southern 1 floated, and discovered land at last:
High on a mounting wave my head I bore,
Forcing my strength, and galling to the shore. Dryd.

Ye myrtles brown, with ivy never see,
I come to pluck your berries harsh and crude,
And with force'd fingers take:
Shatter our leaves before the mellowing year.

5. To drive by violence or power.
This way of flattering their willing benefactors out of part, contrived another of forcing their un-will ing neighbours out of all their possessions.
Dryden's En.

To free the ports, and ope the Punica land
To Trojan guests; lest, ignorant of fate,
The queen might force them from her town and state. Dryd.

6. To gain by violence or power.
My heart is yours: but, oh! you left it here
Abandoned with my hopes and fears:
If they force'd from me one kind look or word,
Could not you not, that not that small part afford?

7. To storm; to take or enter by violence.
Troy wall'd so high,
Attitudes might as well have force'd the sky, Wither.
Here from all ages, deeply did prostrate,
This wealth, for the brave nation's sake:
Who with four hundred foot, and forty horse,
Dare boldly go a new found world to force. Dryd.

8. To make force; to violate by force.
For her,—I like it not. Dryd.

9. To constrain; to disturb; not to obtain naturally or with ease.
Our general taste in England is for epicum, turns of wit, and force'd conceits. Addison's Spec.

10. To man; to strengthen by soldiers;
garrison.
Here let them lies,
Till famine and the ague eat them up: force'n,
Were they not forced with those that should be
We might have met them dear, heard to bear.
Shakespeare.

If you find that any great number of soldiers be necessary to be sent to Oregonique, and that the pass-eges he already forced, then be well advised how you land.

11. To force out. To extort.
The heat of the dispute had force out from Luther expressions that seemed to make his doctrine run higher than really it did. Atterbury.

To FORCE, v. a. To lay stress upon. This word I have only found in the following passage.
That morning that he was to join battle with Harold, his armorer put on his backpiece before, and his breastplate behind; the which being espy'd
by some that stood by, was taken among them, for an ill taken, and therefore advised him not to fight that day: to whom the duke answered, I force my name, but if I have any impression made in soothsaying, as in sooth I have none, it doth prophesie that I shall change copy from a dead to a living.
Calvola. Dryd.

FORCEFULLY, adv. [from force.] Violently;
constrainedly; unnaturally.
This foundation of the earth upon the waters must in all ways agree to that structure of the abysses of antique nature; but very imperpert and forcefullly to the present form of the earth

FORCEFUL, adj [force and full.] Violent;
strong; driven with great might; impetuous.

Why, what need we
Commune with you of this, but rather follow

Against the steed he threw
His forceful spear, which, lodging as it flew,
Fell'd through the yield'd plastra. Dryd. En.

Were it by chance, or forceful destiny,
Which forms in cause first what'ler shall be,
Assisted by a friend, or unlook'd night,
This Palæmon from prison took his flight. Dryd.
He pass'd in air, the javan sent.
Through Paris shield the forceful weapon went. Pope.

FORCEFULLY, adv. [from forcful] Violently; impetuously.

FORCELESS, adj. [from force.] Having little force; weak; feeble; impotent.

FORCEPS. n. s. [Lat.]
Fors exhibitions in pairs of tongues; but is used for an instrument in chirurgery, to extract any thing out of wounds, and the like occasions.
Quinsey.

F ORCER. n. s. [from force.]
1. That which forces, drives, or constrains.
2. The embosom of a pump working by pulsion, in contradiction to a suckter, which acts by attraction.
The usual means for the ascent of water is either by suckers or forces. Wits Jenkins's Daddas.

FO RCEBLE, adj. [forceful.]
1. Strong; mighty; opposed to weak.
That punishment, which hath been sometimes forcible to bridle sin, may grow afterwards harder and feeble. Hooker.

2. Violent; impetuous;
The Sax.violent force.
Jersey, behov'd by all, for all must feel
The influence of a form and mind,
Where comes grace and constant virtue dwell,
Like ming'd streams, more forcible when join'd:
Jersey shall at the altar stand,
Shall then receive the azure band.
Prior.

3. Efficacious; active; powerful;
Sweet smells are most forcible in dry substances,
when broken; and so likewise in oranges,
the ripping of their rind giveth out their smell more.
Bacon's Natural History.

4. Prevalent; of great influence.
How forcible are right words?
Job.
God hath assured us, that there is no inclination or temptation so forcible which our humble prayers and desires may not frustrate and break avar.
Raleigh's Apology.

5. Done by force; suffered by force.
He swifter far,
He overtook, his mother all dismay'd,
And in embraces forcible and foul
Ingend with me. Milton.

The abjurations of king James, the advocates on that side look upon to have been forcible and unjust, and consequently void. Sect.

6. Valid; binding; obligatory.
F ORCELLENCE, n. s. [from forcible.]
Force; violence.

FORCEFULLY, adj. [force and full.] Violent;
strong; driven with great might; impetuous.

This doctrine brings us down to the level of horse and mule, whose mouths are forcible holden with bit and bridle.
Hammond.

FORCIPATED. adj. [from forceps.]
Forcipated, adj like a pair of pincers to open and inclose.
The foulds have antennae, or long horns before,
with a long fluctuation or forcipated tail.
Brown.

When they have seized their prey, they will so transport it, hold it with their forcipated mouth, that they will not part therewith, even when it be out of the waters. Derham.

FORD. n. s. [ford, Sax. from fapan to pass.]
1. A fallow part of a river where it may be passed without swimming.
Her men the paths rode through made by her sword;
They pass the stream, when she had found the ford.
Racine.

2. It sometimes signifies the stream, the current, without any consideration of passage or shallowness.
Medusa with Gorgonian terror guards
The ford, and of itself the water lyes
All taste of living wight.
Milton's Par. Lost.

Rise, wretched widow! rise; nor unpeop'd
Permit my ghost to pass the Stygian ford;
But rise, and in black to burn thy per-ish'd ford. Dryd.

To FORD, v. a. [from the noun.]
To pass without swimming.
A dom's shine-holes must contain a thousand fathom, and much more, if he had for'd the ceil, Raleigh's History.
Forcing his current where thou findst it low.

F O R D A B L E, adj. [from ford.]
Passable without swimming.
Pliny placeth the Scenitae upon the Ephrates, where the same beginneth to be forcable.
Racine.

A countryman sounded a river up and down, to try where it was most forcable; and where the water ran too smooth, he found it deepest; and,
on the contrary, shallowest where it made most noise.
L'Estrange.

FORE. adj. [pope, Sax.]
1. Anterior; that which is before; not behind.
Though there is an orb or spherical area of the sound, yet they move strongest and go farthest in the fore lines from the first local impression.
Bacon.

2. That which comes first in a progressive motion.
Resistance in fluids arises from their greater pressing on the fore than blind part of the bodies turning in them.
Cheyne.

FORE, adv. 1. Anteriorly; in the part which appears first to those that meet it.
Each of them will bear six demiculverins and four sakers, needing no other addition than a slight spar deck fore and aft, which is a slight deck throughout.

To FOREADVISE, v. n. [fore and advice.]
To counsel early; or to counsel before the time of action, or the event.
Thus to have said,
As you were forcipated, I had touch'd his spirit,
And tried his inclination. Shakespeare. Coriolanus.

To FOREAPPOINT, v. n. [fore and appoint.] To order beforehand.

To FOREARM. v. a. [fore and arm.] To provide for attack or resistance before the time of need.

750
To FORECLOSE. r. a. [fore and close.]
1. To shut up; to preclude; to prevent.
   The embargo with Spain foreclosed this trade.

2. To foreclose a Mortgage, is to cut off the power of redemption.

To FOREDECK. n. s. [fore and deck.]
The antepurier part of the ship.
I to the foredeck went, and thence did look Forikey Scylla.
           Chapman's Odyssey.

To FOREDESIGN. r. a. [fore and design.]
To plan beforehand.
All the steps of the growth and vegetation both of animals and plants, have been foreseen and foreordained by the wise Author of nature, Cheyne.
To FOREDO'. r. a. [for and do, do not.]
1. To ruin; to destroy. A word obsolete. Other than ruined happy.
   Beseeching him, if either salves or oils
   A foredoomed wight from door of death might raise.
   He would at her request prolong her husband's days.
   Fairy Queen.
   This was on men God's hatred and his wrath;
   And many souls in doleful foredoom.
   Fairy Q.
   This doth betoken,
   Or terror they fell with desperate hand
   Foredoom'd his own.
   Shakesp. Hamlet.
   This is the night
   That either makes me, or foredoom'd me quite.
   Shaks.
2. To overdo; to weary; to harass.
   While the heavy plowman sweats,
   With all weary task foredoom'd.
   Shaks.
To FOREDOOM. r. a. [fore and doom.]
To predestinate; to determine beforehand.
Through various hazards and events we move
   To Latium, and the realms foredoom'd by Jove.
   Dryden's En.
   The willing metal will obey thy hand,
   Following with ease; if favour'd by thy fate,
   Thou art foredoom'd to view the Sician state.
   dryden.
   Fate foredoom'd; and all things tend
   By course of time to their appointed end.
   Dryden. Here Britain's statesmen out the fall foredoom'd
   Of foreign tyrants, and of nympher at home.
   Pope.
   FORE-END. n. s. [fore and end.]
   The antepurier part.
   I have live a honest freedom; paid
   More plenteous debts to heaven than in all
   The fore-end of my time.
   Shakesp. Cambiine.
   In the fore-end of it, which was towards him,
   Great was the joy of it.
   Shaks.
   FOREFATHER. n. s. [fore and father.]
   Ancestor; one who in any degree of ascending genealogy preceades another.
   The custom of the people of God, and the decrees of our forefathers, are to be kept, tonching those things whereof the Scripture hath neither one way or other given us charge.
   Hooker.
   If it be a generous desire in men to know from whence their own forefathers have come, it cannot be displeasing to understand the place of our first ancestor.
   Raleigh's History.
   Conceit is still deriv'd
   From some forefather's grief; mine is not so.
   Shak.
   Shall I not be distraught,
   And madly play with my forefathers joints? Shak.
   Our forefathers had left him a right to conquer but his country.
   Addison.
   When a man sees the prodigious pains our forefathers have been at in these barbarous buildings, one cannot but fancy what miracles of architecture they would have left us, had they been instrocted in the right way.
   Addison on Italy.
   Best Peer! his great forefathers ev'ry grace
   Reflecting, and reflected in his race.
   Pope.
   To FOREFEND. r. a. [it is doubtful whether from fore or for and defend.]
FOR
This is the very ecstasy of love,
Whose violent property foregoes itself,
And leads the will to desperate undertakings. Shake.
FOREGOER. n.s. [from forego.] Ancestor; progenitor.
Shakesp.
FOREGROUND. n.s. [fore and ground.] The part of the field or expanse of a picture which seems to lie before the figures.
All agree that white can subsist on the foreground of the picture; the question therefore is to know, if it can equally be placed upon that which is behind, and is being universal, and the figures supposed to be in an open field. Dryden.
FOREHAND. n.s. [fore and hand.] 1. The part of a horse which is before the rider.
2. The chief part. Not in use.
The great Achilles whom Odin's Crowns
The snout and the forehead of our host. Shakesp.
FORDMORD. adj. Done sooner than is regular.
You'll say she did embrace me as a husband,
And so commit the forehand sin. Shakesp.
FOREHAND. n.s. [from fore and hand.] 1. Early; timely. If by thus doing you have not secured your time by an early and forehanded care, yet be sure, by time, to lend your assistance and apply.
2. Formed in the foreparts. He's a substantial true-bred beast, heavily fore-handed: mark but the cleanliness of his shapes too. Dryden.
FOREHEAD. n.s. [fore and head.] 1. That part of the face which reaches from the eyes upward to the hair.
The breast of Hebe, when she did suckle Hector, look'd not lovelier than Hector's forehead when it spirt forth blood.
At Grecian swords contending. Shakesp. Coriolanus.
Sons angel copy'd, while I slept, each grace, and montaged every feature from my face; such majesty goes from her forehead, her cheeks such blushes cast, such rays her eyes. Dryden.
2. Impudence; confidence; assurance; audaciousness; audacity. The forehead is the part on which shame visibly operates.
A man of confidence preseth forward upon every appearance of advantage; where his force is too difficult to be reckoned with, and he is not the least disposed to be left behind; these men of forehead are magnificient in promises, and inapplicable in their prescriptions. Collier.
I would fain know to what branch of the legislature they have this forehead to apply. Swift.
FOREHOLDING. n.s. [fore and hold.] Predictions; ominous accounts; superstitions prognostications.
How are superstitions men haggled out of their wits with the fancy of omens, foretellings, and old wives tales! L'Estrange.
FOREIGN. adj. [from forain.] Fr. forane, Span. from foris, Lat.
1. Not of this country; not domestick. Your son, that with a fearful soul Leads discontented steps in foreign soil,
This fair alliance quickly shall come into shape. Shakesp.
The learned correspondence you hold in foreign parts. Milton.
The positions are so far from being new, that they are commonly to be met with in both ancient and modern, domestic and foreign writers. Atterbury.
The same thing is curious and obvious amongst us may several ways bring destruction upon our country, at the same time that our united force would secure us against all the attempts of a foreign enemy. Addison's Frech.
2. Alien; remote; not allied; not belonging; without relation. It is often used to; but more properly with from.
I must dissemble,
And speak a language foreign to my heart. Addison.
Families are in a manner to intimate to us that we have no faculty in the soul adapted to it; nor any organ in the body to relish it, placed out of the possibility of fruition. Addison.
This design is not foreign from some past discourses. Swift.
3. Excluded; not admitted; held at a distance.
They will not stick to say you envi'd him;
And fearing he would rise, he was so virtuous,
Kept him a foreign man still: which so grie'd him,
That he ran mad and died. Shakesp. Henry VIII.
4. [in law.] Foreign plea, placita foriasociis; as being a plea out of the proper court of justice.
5. Extraneous; adventitious in general.
There are who, fondly studious of increase,
Rich foreign mould in their ill-natured hand. Indus.
FOREIGNER. n.s. [from foreign.] A man that comes from another country; not a native; a stranger.
Joy is such a foreigner,
So mere a stranger to my thoughts, I know
Not how to entertain him. Dryden's Sophy.
To this false foreigner you give your throne,
And wrong'd a friend, a kinsman, and a son. Dryden's En.
Water is the only native of England made use of in punch; but the lemons, the brandy, the sugar, and thequinines, are all foreigners. Addison.
He could not think the matter of the English crown appear in a greater likeness, either to foreigners or subjects. Swift.
FOREIGNNESS. n.s. [from foreign.] Remoteness; want of relation to something.
Let not the foreigners of the subject hinder you from endeavouring to set me right.
To FOREIMAGINE. v.a. [from and imagine.] To conceive or fancy before proof.
We are within compass of a foreimagined possibility in that behalf. Dryden's Beaux.
To FOREJUDGE. v.a. [from and judge.] To judge beforehand; to be prepossessed; to prejudge.
To FOREKNOW. v.a. [from and know.] To have prescience of; to foresee.
We foreknow that the sun will rise and set, that all men are born again; and that Winter the Spring shall come; after the Spring, Summer and Harvest; yet is not our foreknowledge the cause of any of those. Dryden's Alexander.
He foreknew John should not suffer a violent death, but go into his grave in peace. Brown.
Calculs the sacred seer, who had in view things present and the past, and things to come foreknew. Dryden's Hind.
Who would the miseries of man foreknow?
Not knowing, we but share our part with war Dryd.
FOREKNOWABLE. adj. [from foreknow.] Possible to be known before they happen.
It is certainly foreknowable what they will do in such and such circumstances. More.
FOREKNOWLEDGE. n.s. [fore and knowledge.] Presence; knowledge of that which has not yet happened.
Our being in Christ by eternal foreknowledge, save us not without our actual and real adoption into the fellowship of his saints in this present world.
I told him you was asleep: he seems to have a foreknowledge of that too and therefore chooses to speak with the natives. Shakesp.
If I foreknew, Foreknowledge had no influence on their fault,
Which had no less prov'd certain unforeknowledge. Milton.
I hope the foreknowledge you had of my esteem for you, is the reason that you do not dislike any letters. Pope.
FORELAND. n.s. [from fore and land.] A promontory; headland; high land jutting into the sea; a cape.
As a ship, when by skilful seamen wrought, Nigh river's mouth, or foreland, where the wind Veers off, as of so steers, and shifts her sail. Milt.
To FORELAW. v.a. [from fore and lay.] 1. To lay wait for; to intrap by ambush. A serpent shoots his sting at unawares; an animal'd thief forelays a traveller. Addison.
The man lies murdered, while the thief and snake, One gains the thickets, and one thrids the brake. Dryden.
2. To contrive antecedently.
To FORELIFT. v.a. [from fore and lift.] To raise aloft any interior part.
So dreadfully he towards him did pass,
ForfTing up aloft his speckled breast;
And often bounding on the leisured grass,
As for great joy of his new comen guest. Spencer.
FORELOCK. n.s. [from lock and.] The hair that grows from the forepart of the head.
Tell her the joyous time will not be staid,
Unless she do him by her care. Spencer.
Hyacinthine locks.
Round from his parted forelock many hang, Chast, but not beneath his shoulders broad.
Milton.
Zeal and duty are not slow,
But on occasion decks watchful wait. Mit.
Time is painted with a lock before, and bald behind, signifying thereby that we must take time by the forelock; for when once it is there, there is no finding out it. Swift.
FOREMAN. n.s. [fore and man.] The first or chief person.
He is a very sensible man, shoots flying, and has been several times foreman of the petty jury. Addis.
FOREMENTIONED. adj. [from and mention.] Mentioned or recited before.
It is observable that many particles are compounded with fore, whose verbs have no such composition. Dryden.
Dacier, in the life of Ausonius, has not taken notice of the forementioned figure on the pillar. Addison on Italy.
FOREMOST. adj. [from fore.] 1. First in place.
All these are set among the foremost ranks of fame, for great minds to attempt, and great force to perform what they did attempt. Sidney.
Our women in the foremost ranks appear;
March to the fight, and meet you victors there. Dryden.
The bold Scipio, That still broke foremost through the crowd of patriots,
As with a hedge of zeal transported,
And virtuous even to madness! Addison's Cato.
2. First in dignity.
These rise foremost in the field,
As they the foremost rank of honour held. Dryden.
FORENAAMED. adj. [from fore and name.] Not mentioned before.
And such are rare ones, As Carius and the forenamed Lentinus. B. Jenson.
FORENOON. n.s. [from fore and noon.] The time of day reckoned from the middle point, between the dawn and the meridian, to the meridian: opposed to after-noon.
The manner was, that the forenoon they should run into the afternoon in a broad field: in manner of a battle, 'ill either the strangers or the country knights won the field. Sidney.
Carlo, at the funeral of his father, built a temple theatre, consisting of two parts turning on brings, according to the position of the sun, for the convenience of forerunners of the evening's diversions.
FOR

FOR

FOR

FORENOTICE. n. s. [fore and notice].

Information of an event before it happens.

So strange a revolution never happens in poetry, but either heaven or earth give some notice of it.

Rome's Tragedy.

FORENISK. adj. [forensis, Lat.]

Belonging to courts of judicature.

Person is a forensisk term, appropriating actions and the form of trials only to judge men of good and bad manners, capable of a law, and happiness and misery. This personality extends itself beyond present existence to what is past, only by consent of judges.

The forum was a public place in Rome, where lawyers and orators made their speeches before the proper judges in matters of property, or in criminal cases; thence all sorts of disputations in courts of justice, where several persons make their distinct speeches, may come under the name of foreneisk disputes.

Watts on the Mind.

To FOREORDAIN. v. a. [fore and ordain.]

To predestinate; to predetermined; to preordain.

The church can disengage, in manner convenient, the whole book of so profound a subject, by foreordaining some short collect wherein briefly to mention thanks.

Hooker.

To FOREPAST. n. s. [fore and part.]

1. The past in time.

Had it been so raised, it would deprive us of the sun's light all the forerun of the day.

Raleigh.

2. To place anteriour in place.

The ribs have no cavity in them, and towards the forepart of upper breast and thin, to bend and give way without danger of fracture.

Ray.

FOREPROOSED. adj. [fore and possess.]

Preoccupied; presupposed; engaged.

The testimony either of the ancient fathers, or of other classical divines, may be clear and abundantly answered to the satisfaction of any rational man, not extremely possessed with prejudices.

Sanderson.

FOREANK. n. s. [fore and rank.] first rank; front.

Yet leave our cousin Catherine here with us; She is our capital demand, compris'd within the forerun of our articles.

Shakespeare.

FORERECITED. adj. [fore and recite.]

Mentioned or enumerated before.

Bird him recount.

The forerecited practices, whereas

We cannot feel too little, hear too much. Shakespeare.

To FORERUN. v. a. [fore and run.]

1. To come before as an earnest of some thing following; to introduce as a harbinger.

Against ill chances men are ever merry; But heaviness foreruns the good event. Shakespeare.

Was set, and twilight from the East came on, Forerunning night. Milton's Parad. Lost.

Shakes me hope: oh heavy, she pities me! And pity still foreruns the coming love. As lightning does the thunder.

Dryden.

2. To precede; to have the start of.

I heard it be a maxim at Dublin to follow, if not forerun, all that is or will be practiced in London.

FORERUNNER. n. s. [from forerun.]

1. An harbinger; a messenger sent before to give notice of the approach of those that follow.

The six strangers seek for you, nadam, to take their leave; and there is a forerunner come from a seventh, the prince of Morocco. Shakespeare. A cock was sacrificed as the forerunner of day and the sun, thereby acknowledging the light of life to be derived from the divine bounty, the daughter of Providence.

Stilling fight.

My elder brothers, my forerunners came.

Rough draughts, I designed, and lane: Blown off, like blossoms, never used to bear; Till I came finish'd, her last labour'd care. Dryden.

2. A forerunstick; a sign forshowing anything.

Or else some further change awaits us nightly. Which heavy, by these mute signs in nature, shews forerunners of his purpose. Milton's Par. Lost.

Loss of sight is the misery of life, and usually the forerunner of death. South.

The keeping insensible perspiration up in due measure is the cause as well as sign of health, and the least deviation from that due is a forerunner of a disease. Arbuthnot.

Already opera prepares the way.

The sure forerunners of the event to follow. Pope.

To FORESAV. v. a. [fore and say.]

To predict; to prophesy; to forecast.

Let ordainance.

Come as the gods forsyed it. Shakesp. Cymbeline.

To FORESEE. v. a. [fore and see.]

1. To see beforehand; to see what has not yet happened; to have prescience; to forsee.

The first of them that could things to come forsee; The next, could of things present advise; The third, things past could keep in memory.

Fairy Queen.

If there be any thing forseen that is not usual, be armed for it by any hearty though a short project, and an earnest resolution beforehand, and then watch when it comes. Taylor.

At his foresseas approach, already quake The Caspian kingdoms and Mevician lake; Their seen behold the tempest from afar, And threaten oracles denounce the war. Dryden.

2. To provide for: with fo. Out of use.

A king against a storm must foresee to a contempt stock of a convenient store.

Bacon.

To FORESHAME. v. a. [fore and shame.]

To shone; to bring reproach upon.

Oh bill, forshaming.

These ribb, left heirs, that let their fathers lie Without a monument. Shakesp. Cymbeline.

To FORESHEW. v. a. [See FORSHOW.]

FORESHIP. n. s. [fore and ship.]

The anterior part of the ship.

The shipment would have cast anchors out of the forship.

Shakespeare.

To FORESHORTEN. v. a. [fore and shorten.]

To shorten figures for the sake of shewing those behind.

The greatest parts of the body ought to appear foremost; and he forbids the forshortenings, because they make the parts appear too little. Dryden's Drafismy.

To FORESHOW. v. a. [fore and show.]

1. To discover before it happens; to predict; to prognosticate.

Christ had called him to be a witness of his death, and resurrection from the dead, according to that to which the prophets and Moses had foreshown.

Hocker.

Next, like Aurora, Speiser rose.

Whose purple blushe the day foreshows. Denham.

You chose to withdraw yourself from publick business, when the face of heaven grew troubled, and the frequent shifting of the wind foreshewed a storm. Dryden.

2. To represent before it comes.

What else is the law but the gospel forseen? What other the gospel than the law fulfilld?

Hocker.

FORESIGHT. n. s. [fore and sight.]

1. Prescience; profession; for foreknowledge. The accent anciently on the last syllable.

He had a sharp foresight, and working wit. That never idle was, else he could rest a while. Spenser.

In matters of arms he was both skilful and industrious, and as well in foresight as resolution present and great. Hayward.

Difficulties and temptations will more easily be born or avoided, if with prudent foresight we arm ourselves against them. Roger.

2. Provident care of futurity.

He gave him no such panic as the forseen fire he had of his silly successor. Sidney.

To FORESIGNIFY. v. a. [fore and signify.]

To betoken beforehand; to foresignify; to typify.

Discoveries of Christ alone present, whose future coming the Psalms did but forseenigh, Hook. Yet as being past times noxious, where they light On man, beast, plant, wasteful and turbulent. They oft forsignify, and threaten ill. Milton.

FORESKIN. n. s. [fore and skin.]

The prepuce.

Their own hand.

An hundred of the falsehood for shall say, And for a doo they will for their foreskin pay. Be Michol thy reward. Cowley's Dives.

TO FORESIP. n. a. [fore and stalk.]

To neglect by illness.

It is a great pity that so good an opportunity was omitted, and so happy an occasion forseised, that might have been the eternal good of mankind.

Sweeney's State of Ireland.

TO FORESLOW. v. a. [fore and slow.]

1. To delay; to hinder; to impede; to obstruct.

No stream, no wood, no mountain could foreslow their lusty pace.

Fairfax.

Now the illustrious nymph return'd again.

Brings every grace triumphant in her train; The wound ring Nereids, though they rais'd no storm. Furrow'd her passage to behold her form. Dryden.

2. To neglect; to omit.

When the rebels were on Blackheath, the king knowing well that it stood upon him, by how much the more he had hitherto protracted the time in not encountering them, by so much the sooner to dispatch with them, that it might appear to have been no coldness in forerslowing, but wisdom in chusing his time, resolved with speed to assail them. Bacon's Henry VII.

Our good purposes foreslowed are become our tormentors upon our deaths-bed.

Bishop Hall.

Chremes, how many fishers do you know That take their boats and use their nets aright, That neither wind, nor time, nor tide foreslow.

Some such have been; but, ah! by tempests spite Their boats are lost; while we may sit and moan, That few were such, and now these few are none. P. Fletch.
To FORETELL, v. a. [foretell]—pass.
1. To predict; to prophesy.
What art thou, whose heavy looks foretell
Some dreadful snare hanging on thy tongue?—Shak.

To FORETELLER, n. s. [from foretell]—dictator; foreshower.
Others are proposed, not that the foretold events should be known; but that the accomplishment that expounds them may evince, that the foreteller of them was able to foresee these.

To FORTEPHINT, v. a. [fore and think].
1. To anticipate in the mind; to have prescience of.
The soul of every man
Prophetically does forethink thy fall.
Shak.

To FORD, n. s. [from for and spurst].
On that ride before.
A day in April never came so sweet,
To show how costly Summer was at hand,
As this foreteller comes before his lord.

To FOREST, n. s. [forest, Fr. forêt, Ital. foresta].
1. A piece of ground interspersed with wood.
By many tributaries we enter into the king
Dom of heaven, because, in a forest of many wolves,
Sheep cannot chase but in continual danger of its enemies.

2. [In law.] A certain territory of woody grounds and fruitful pastures, privileged for wild beasts, and fowls of forests, chase, and warren, to rest and abide in, in the safe protection of the king for his pleasure. The manner of making forests is this: the king sends out his commission, directed to certain persons, for viewing, perambulating, and bounding the place that he has a mind to forest: which returned into Chancery, proclamation is made, that none shall hunt any wild beasts within that precinct, without licence; after which he appoints ordinances, laws, and officers for the preservation of the vert and venison; and this becomes a forest by matter of record. The properties of a forest are these: a forest, as it is strictly taken, cannot be in the hands of any but the king, who hath power to grant commission to a justice in eyre for the forest; the courts; the officers for preserving the vert and venison, as the justices of the forest, the warden or keeper, the verders, the foresters, agisters, warders, bailiffs, and beekeepers. The chief property of a forest is the swain, which is no less incident to

To FORGET, v. a. [forget]—pret. and part. pass. foretold; [fore and tell].
1. To forget; to prophesy.
What art thou, whose heavy looks foretell
Some dreadful snare hanging on thy tongue?—Shak.

To FORGET, n. s. [from forget].
The new-created world, which fame in heaven
Long had foretold.
Milton.

To FORETOLD, v. a. [foretell].
To foretell.
To FOREST, n. s. [from forest]—to prophesy.
All the prophets from Samuel, and those that Follow after, have likewise foretold of these days.

To FORESTALL, n. s. [from vert and stal].
1. To anticipate; to take up beforehand.
If thou be master-gunner, spend not all
That thou canst shoot at once; but husband it,
And give heed toward of speech; do not forestall
By lavishness thine own and others wit;
As if thou mad'st thry will:
What need a man forestall his date of grief,
And run to meet what he would most avoid.
Mitt.

2. To hinder by precaution or prevention.
And though good lock's prolonged hath thy date,
Yet death then would the like mischance forestall.
Fair Queen.

What's in prayer, but this twofold force
To be forestalled ere we come to fall,
Or pardon'd being down.
Hamlet.

3. Bestowed before.
We must receive him.
Accord to the honour of his sender;
And towards himself, his goodness forestall us;
We must extend our notice.
Shak.

To FORESPRUNGER, n. s. [fore and spur it].
On that ride before.
A day in April never came so sweet,
To show how costly Summer was at hand,
As this foreteller comes before his lord.

To FORESTALLER, n. s. [from forestall].
One that anticipates the market; one that purchases before others to raise the price.

Commodities, good or bad, the workman must take at his master's rate; or sit still and starve; whilst, by this means, this new sort of ingrossers or forestallers having the feeding and supplying this numerous body of workmen, set the price upon the poor landsfeller.

To FORESTEN, adj. [forest and born].
Born in a wild.
This boy is forest born,
And hath been tutor'd in the rudiments
Of desperate studies.
Shak. As you like it.

To FORESTEMER, n. s. [from forest].
1. An officer of the forest.

2. An inhabitant of the wild country.

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel].

To FORESTEMER, adj. [from for and swel]
F O R

FOREVO'UCHED. part. [fore and vouch].
Affirmed before; formerly told.
Sure her offence.
Must be of such an unbroken degree,
That monsters it: or your foresworn'd affection
Fall'n into taint.
Shakesp. King Lear.
F O R E W A R D. n. s. [fore and ward].
The van; the front.
They that marched in the forward were all mighty men.
1 Mac. xii. 11.
T O F O R E W A R N. v. a. [fore warn and warn].
1. To admonish beforehand.
I will forwarn you whom you shall fear: fear him whom I first bath bathed, bath power to cast into hell.
Luke, xii. 5.
2. To inform previously of any future event.
Divine interpreter, by favour sent Down from the empyrean, to forerun
Us timely of what might else have been our loss.
Unknown.
Milton's Par. Lost.
3. To caution against any thing beforehand.
- Well I will arm thee, being thus forwarn'd.
Shakesp. Henry VI.
Thy pride.
And wanding vainly when least was safe,
Rejected my forwarning, and disdain'd
Not to be trusted.
Milton's Paracl. Lost.
The bo'ards had forewarned him of singing wars,
yet the search of nature was free.
Shakesp. V. London.
Young Choromans, who by love was led
To win renown and fair Cassandra's bed,
Had lately brought his troops to Priam's side;
Forwards 0 in vain by the prophetick maid.
Dryd. to ForServe.
To dispose; to destroy. Out of use.
Vespuian, with great spoil and rage,
Forewast all, until Genissa gent
Fenimbled him to cease.
Shakesp. Faerie Queen.
High time 'gan it wax for Una fair.
To think of those her captive parents dear,
And their forewasted kingdom to repair.
Shakesp. Faerie Queen.
T O F O R E W A R Y. v. a. [for and wary].
To dispirit with labour.
By your toil
And labour long, through which ye hither came,
The better sever'd be: therefore a while;
I read your rest, and to your lowering recoil.
Why should they?
F. Queen.
T O F O R E W I S H. v. a. [fore and wish].
To desire beforehand.
The better sever'd be, even as much as what in them lies,
To procure that the good commonly foresuffed might in time come to effect.
Knolles.
F O R E W O R N. part. [fore and warn, from warn.]
Worn out; wasted by time or use.
Neither the light was enough to read the words,
And the ink was already forwarn'd, and in many places blot'ted.
Salvy.
F O R E W I T. n. s. [forfeit, Fr. forfet, Welsh].
1. Something lost by the commission of a crime; something paid for expiation of a crime; a fine; a mullet.
Thy sleders I forgive, and therewithal
Remit thy other forfeits.
Shakesp. Th' execution lev'd, high disposalty,
And let another hand, not thine, exact
Thy penal forfeit from thyself.
Milton's Agonistes.
Thy life, Melanctha: I am come to take,
Of which foul treason does a forfeit make.
Waller.
2. A person obnoxious to punishment; one whose life is forfeited by his offence.
Now obsolete.
You must lose your forfeit of the law,
And you but waste your words.
Shakesp. Claudio whom here you have warrant to execute.
To FORFEIT. v. a. [for, old Fr.]
1. To form by the hammer; to beat to shape.
The queen of martials,
And Mars himself conducted them; both which Must needs have golden furniture.
Chapman's H. Tyger with tyger, bear with bear, you'll find
In leagues offensive and defensive join'd;
But lawless man the anvil dares profane,
And forge that steel by which a man is slain,
Which first for earth, but has since his strokes did afford,
Nor yet the smith had learn'd to form a sword.
Tate's Jovial.
2. To make by any means.
He was a kind of nothing, titleless,
Till he had for'd himself a name 7 th' fire
Of burning Rome.
Shakesp. Coriolanus.
His heart's his mouth.
What his breast forges, that his tongue must vent.
Shakesp.
Those names that the schools forged, and put into the mouths of authors, could never get admittance into common use, or obtain the licence of public approbation.
Locke.
3. To counterfeit; to falsify.
These were king,
I should cut off the nobles for their lands;
For my more having would he but as sauce
To make me hunger more, that I should forge
Quarrels unjust against the good and loyal Destroying them for wealth.
Shakesp. Macbeth.
F O R G E R. n. s. [forge].
1. One who makes or forms.
2. One who counterfeits any thing; a falsifier.
As in stealing, if there were no receivers there would be no thieves: so in slander, if there were fewer spreaders, there would be fewer forgers of libels, and less contempt of the Tongue.
No forger of lies willingly and willingly furnishes out the means of his own detection. West.
F O R G E R Y. n. s. [from forge].
1. The crime of falsification.
Has your king married the lady Gray?
And now, to soothe your forger'y and his,
Sends me a paper to persuade me patience. Shok.
Nothing could have been easier for the Jews, the enemies of Jesus Christ, to have disproved these facts, had they been false, to have shewn their falsity, and to have convinced them all.
Stephen's Sermon.
A forger, in setting a false name to a writing, which may prejudice another's fortune, the law behaves the forger in this, as if he had inflicted no adequate penalty for doing the same thing in print, though books sold under a false name are so many forgeries.
Sewc.
The man who is formed into a work, and
And weaponless himself,
Made arms ridicules, unless the forgery
Of brass shield and spears, the hammer'd cuirass,
Chalybean temper'd steel, and flock of mail
Ancient and most complete proof.
To FORGET. r. a. preter. forget; part.
Forgotten, or forget. [ponyczan, Sax.
European, Dut.]
1. To lose memory of; to let go from the remembrance.
That is not forget
Which never I did remember; to my knowledge.
I never in my life did love him.
Shakesp.
When I am forgotten, as I shall be,
And sleep in dull cold marble, where no mention
One must more be heard.
Shakesp.
Forget not thy friend in thy mind, and be not Mindful of him in thy riches.
Eccles. xxvi. 6.
No sooner was our deliverance accomplished, but we forgot our danger and our duty.
Atterbury.
Alive, ridiculous; and death, forget.
Pope.
2. Not to attend; to neglect.

To FORGET. v. a.
FOR

Can a woman fear her sucking child? Yea, they may forger; yet I will not forget thee. Is. lix. 5.

If we might forget ourselves, or forget God; if we might disregard our reason, and live by humour and fancy in any thing, or at any time, or at all times, it would be as lawful to do the same in every thing, at every time, and every place. Law.

The mass of mean forgetten things. Ashm.

FORGETFUL, adj. [from forget.] 1. Not retaining the memory of. 2. Causing oblivion; oblivious. But when a thousand rolling years are past, So deathly punishments and penance last, Whole droves of minds are by the driving God Compell'd to drink the deep Lethean flood, In large forgetful dainties to steep the cares Of their past labours, and their sins. Dryden's Aeneid.

3. Inattentive; negligent; neglectful; careless.

Be not forgetful to entertain strangers. Heb. xii. 2. The queen is comfortless, and we forgetful. In our long absence. Shake. Henry VIII. Have you not love to bear with me, When this sheep baw, which my mother gave me, Makes me forgetful? Shake. Julius Caesar. 1. I in his interest have, Which to my own advantage I would save; And, with the usual contriver's trick, intend To make myself, forgetful of my friend. Prior. Wroxeter.

FORGETFULNESS, n. s. [from forgetful.] 1. Oblivion; cessation to remember; loss of memory.

O gentle sleep! Nature's soft nurse, how have I frigted thee, That with this hand, I will weigh my eyelids down, And steep my senses in forgetful's sleep! Shake. All birds and beasts lie husht'd; sleep steals away.

The wild desires of men and toils of day; And brings, descending through the silent air, A sweet forgetfulness of human care. Pope's Status.

2. Negligence; neglect; inattention.

The church of England is grievously charg'd with forgetfulnes of her duty. Hooker.

FORGETIVE, adj. [from forge.] That may orge or produce. A word, I believe peculiar to Shakespeare. Good naure rakes itself into the brain, drives me there all the foolish, dull vapours, makes it apprehensive, quick, forgettive, full of nimble shapes, which, delivered to the voice, becomes exult wit.

FORGETTER, n. s. [from forget.] 1. One that forgets.

2. A careless person.

To FORGIVE. v. a. [forgyan, Sax.] 1. To pardon a person; not to punish. Then have forgine him too! Shake. I do besor your grace for charity; if ever any malice in your heart Were hid against me, now forgne me frankly. Shake. I am so free for you, as I would be forgene; I forgive all. Shake. Slowly provok'd, she easily forgies. Prior.

2. To pardon a crime.

The people that dwell therein shall be forgiven their iniquity. Is. xxxviii. 26.

If prayers Could alter great decrees, I to that place Went with a speed more swifte, and more tender hearted, That on my head all might be visited, Thy frailty and infirm sex forgien, To come commisser, and by me expound. Miller.

3. To remit; not exalt debt or penalty.

The lord of that servant was moved with compassion, loosed him, and forgien him the debt. Mat. xviii.

FORGIVENESS, n. s. [forgyanisse; Sax.] 1. The act of forgiving.

To the Lord our God belongeth mercies and forgiveness. Du. 2. Pardon of an offender. Thus has promised repentance and forgiveness to them that have sinned against thee. Proverb of Ma. Exchange forgiveness with me, noble Hamlet; Mine and my father's death come not upon thee. Not thine on me. Shak. Forgiveness to the injured doth belong; But they not'er pardon who commit the wrong. Dryden.

3. Pardon of an offence. God has certainly promised forgiveness of sin to every one who repents.

South.

4. Tenderness; leniency to pardon. Here are introduced more heroic principles of meekness, forgiveness, bounty and immortality, than all the learning of the heathens could invent. Spratt.

Mercy above did hourly plead For her resemblance here below; And mild forgiveness interceded To stop the coming blow. Dryden.

5. Remission of a fine, penalty, or debt. FORGIVER, n. s. [from forgien.] One who pardons. FORGOT, part. pass. of forgot.

FORGOTTEN. n. s. Not remembered.

This song shall not be forgotten. Deut. xxxii. 21. Great Spirit of that name, thouest all of thee could be forgotten, but thy fall. Denham. The soft ideas of the cheerful note, Lightly receiv'd, were easily forgot. Prior. To FORGIVE, v. a. [An old word, probably for, forhale, for from and haul.] To harass; tear; torment.

All this long tale Nought easeth the care that doth me forhale. Spenser's Past.

FORK, n. s. [forke, Lat. forchel, Welsh, fourche, Fr.]. 1. An instrument divided at the end into two or more points or prongs, used on many occasions.

At Midsummer down with the brambles and brakes, And after abroad with thyr forks and thy rakes. Tusser.

The ricas first, and after him the crew With forks and staves the fenon to pursue, Ran Coll our dog. Dryden's Nun's Priest.

I dine with forks that have but two prongs. Swift.

2. It is sometimes used for the point of an arrow.

The bow is bent and drawn; make from the fork. —Let it fall rather, though the fork invade The region of my heart. Shakes. King Lear.

3. A point.

Several are amazed at the wisdom of the ancients, that represented a thunderbolt with three forks, since nothing could have better explained its triple quality of piercing, burning and mellowing. Addison.

To FORK, v. n. [from the noun.] To shoot into blades, as corn does out of the ground. The corn beginneth to fork. Mortimer's Husb. FORKED, adj. [from fork.] Opening into two or more parts.

Ye dragons, whose contageous breath People the dark retaires of death, Change your fierce hissing into joyful song, And praise your Maker with your forked tongue. Roshcommon.

FORKEDLY, adv. [from forked.] In a forked form.

FORKEDNESS, n. s. [from forked.] The quality of opening into two parts or more.

FORKHEAD, n. s. [fork and head.] Point of an arrow.

It seling, no way enter might; But back resounding, left the forkhead keen. Esbous it fled away, and might no where be seen. Fairy Queen.

FORKY, adj. [from fork.] Forked; furcated; opening into two parts.

The smilling infant in his hand shall take The crested basilisk and speckled snake; Pleas'd the green lustre of the scales survey, And with their forked tongue and pointess sting shall play. Pope's Messiah.

FORLIER. [The preterite and participle of the SAXON popcean in Dutch verloren.] Deserted; forsook; forsaken. Obsolete.

Such as Dian by the sandy shore Of swift Eurus, or on Cynthia's green, Where all the nymphs have her forlorn. P. Queen. There was a weight in her old world, And mortal life 'gan loth as thing forlorn.

Fairy Queen. Thus fell the trees, with noise the desots roar; The heasts their caves, the birds their nests forlorn. Fairy Queen.

FORLORN, adj. [popilen, from popenein, Sax. verloren, Dut.] 1. Deserted; destitute; forsaken; wretched; helpless; solitary.

Make them seek for that they want to secur; Of fortune and of hope at once forlorn. Hubberd. Tell me, good Hoblins, what gars thee greet; What! hatts some wol thy tender lams yorn? Or is thy haggpipe broke; that sounds so sweet? Or art thou of thy loved lass forlorn? Spenser. In every place was heard the lamentations of women and children; every thing showed the heaviness of the time, and seemed as altogether lost, and forsaken. Knolles's History.

How can I live without thee! how forego Thy sweet converse, and love so dearly joint, To live again in those good forlorn? Milton. Their way Lies through the perplex'd paths of this drear wood; The nodding horror of those shandy bows, Threat the forlorn and wand'ring passenger. Milt. My only strength and stay! forlorn of thee, Whilster shall I betake me, where substib! Milton. Like a declining statesman, left forlorn To his friends pity and pursers scorn. Denham. The good old man, forlorn of human aid, For vengeance to his heavily patron pray'd. Dry. Philonem laments forlorn.

Some poor sad tatter, too lost to love deplor'd, Thus, far from Delia, to the winds I mourn; Alike unheard, unpry'd, and forlorn. Pope.

2. Taken away. This sense shews that it is the participle of an active verb, now lost.

When a day night hath us of light forlorn, I wish that day would shortly resound. Spenser. What is become of great Arcates's son? Or where hath he hung up his mortal blade, That hath so many haughtie conquests won? Is all his force forlorn, and all his glory done? Fairy Queen.

3. Small; despicable: in a ludicrous sense.

He was so forlorn, that his dimensions to any thick sight were invisibile. Shak. Henry IV.
1. A lost, solitary, forlorn man.

Henry

Is of a king become a banishment man, And for'd to live in Scotland forlorn. Shakesp.

2. Forlorn. adj. The soldiers who are first to the attack, and are therefore doomed to perish. Crickets in plume, Who lolling on our foremost benches sit, And still charge first, the true forlorn of wit. Dryden.

FORLORNNESS. n. s. [from forlorn.]

Disposition; misery; solitude.

Men displeased God, and consequently forfeit ed a right of life in Him, and even whilst they com plished the forlornness of their condition by the lethargy of not being sensible of it. Boyle.

To FORLYE, v. n. [from forlorn and lye.]

To lye before. Knit with a golden braid, which forlorned her snowy breast, and did divide her dainty paps, which, like young fruit in May, Now little 'gan to swell; and being lyed,'Through her thin weed, their places only signified Kings.

FAIRY QUEEN. n. s. [from forlorn and lye, and churches. Dryden.]

1. The external appearance of any thing; representation; shape.

What you say seems to be far too, —Ay, as the glasses where they view themselves Which are as easy broke as they make forms.

It stood still; but I could not discern the form thereof. Job.

Gold will endure a vehement fire, without any change, and after it has been divided by corrosive liquors into invisible parts; yet may presently be precipitated, so as to appear again in its forms. Greek's Camel. Sir.

Matter, as wise logicians say, Cannot without a form subsist; And as I must tell you well, Their frame, as well as they, Must fall, if matter brings no grace. Swift.

2. Being, as modified by a particular shape.

When noble benefits shall prove Not well dispay'd, the mind grown once corrupt, They turn to vicious forms, ten times more noble Than ever they were fair. Shakesp. Hen. VIII.

Here toils and death, and death's half-brother, sleep, Forms terrible to view, their sentry keep; With anxious pleasures of a guilty mind, Deep fears before, and open force behind. Dryden.

3. Particular model or modification.

He that will look into many parts of Asia and America, will find men reason there perhaps as acutely as himself, yet never heard of a syl logism, nor can reduce any one argument to those forms. Locke.

It lengthens out every act of worship, and produces more lasting and permanent impressions in the mind, than those which accompany any trans vertent form of words that are uttered in the ordinary method of religious worship. Addition.

4. Beauty; elegance of appearance.

He hath no form nor comeliness. Isa. lxi. 2.

5. Regularity; method; order.

What he spoke, though it lack'd form a little, Was not like madness. Shakesp. Hamlet.

6. External appearance without the essential qualities; empty show.

Then those whom form of laws condemn'd to die, when traitors judge their cause. Dryden.

They were young heirs sent only for forms from schools, where they were not suffered to stay past three years. Swift.

7. Ceremony; external rites.

Though well we may not pass upon his life, Without the form of justice; yet our pow'r Shall do a court'sy to our wrath, which men May blame, but not control. Shakesp. King Lear.

FOR.

1. To make out of materials. God formed man of the dust of the ground. Gen. ii. 7.

2. To model to a particular shape or state.

A long table, and a square table, and a seat about the walls, seemed things of form, but are things of substance; for at a long table, a few at the upper end, in effect, stay all the business; but in the other form, there is more use of the councillors or who sit at the lower chair. Baron's Essays.

That the parliaments of Ireland might want no decent or honourable form used in England, he caused a particular form to be prepared that the lords of Ireland should appear in parliament robes. Davies.

Their general use, in all dispatches made by himself, to observe all decency in their forms. Clarendon.

12. To model for speaking; changes the wind, and leaves the Scythe's arrow far behind. Dryden.

FAIRY QUEEN. adj. [from fair and Queen.]

1. Ceremonious; solemn; precise; exact to affectation.

The justice, In fair round blythe, and carven cap in'ed, With eyes severe, and board of formal cut, Full of wise saws and modern instances, And so he did, as others. As you like it. Formal in apparel.

In gait and countenance surely like a father. Dryden.

Ceremonies be not to be omitted to strangers, and formal natures; but the exciting them above the mean is not only tedious, but doth diminish the credit of him that speaks. Bacon.

2. Done according to established rules and methods; not irregular; not sudden; not extemporaneous.

There is not any positive law of men, whether it be general or particular, received by formal express consent, and not by secret ap probation, as in customs it cometh to pass, but may be taken away, if occasion serve. Hooker. As are forms of speech, by which peculiarities, particular to a person or place, are expressed, are not the same, as in former ages; nor is there a natural and tacit consideration amongst all men against the common enemies of human society, so as there needs no intimation or denunciation of war; but all those formalities of the laws of nature supplies, as in the case of pirates. Bacon.

3. Regular; methodical.

The formal stars do travel so, As we whose names and courses know ; And he that on their changes looks, Would think them his, by the stars' known, Waller.

4. External; having the appearance but not the essence.

Of formal duty, make no more thy boast. Thou disobey'st't where it concerns me most. Dryden.

5. Depending upon establishment or custom.

Still in constraint your suffering sex remains, Or bound in formal or in real chains. Pope.

6. Having the power of making any thing what it is; constitutive; essential.

Of letters the mouth, with part is breath and voice; the formal of speech constitutes the motions and figure of the organs of speech affecting breath with a peculiar sound, by which each letter is discriminated into an individual element of speech. Belsham.

Bellarmine argues in making the formal act of adoration to be a subjection to a superior, but withal FORMALIST. n. s. [formaliste, Fr. from form.] One who practises external ceremony; one who prefers appearance to reality; one who seems what he is not.

FORMALITY. n. s. [formalité, Fr. from form.] 1. Ceremony; established mode of behaviour.

FORMALIZE. v. a. [formaliser, Fr. from formal.] 1. To model; to modify. A word not now in use.

FORMALLY. adv. [formal.] 1. According to established rules, methods, ceremonies or rites.

FORMALLY, according to our law, Depose him. Shakespeare, Richard II.

FORMALLY; stiffly; precisely.

To be stiff and formally received, as if the company did not deserve our familiarity, is a downright challenge of homage. Collier on Pride.

In open appearance; in a visible and apparent state.

You must, ye folowers do stand formally divided against the authorised guides of the church, and the rest of the people. Hooker.

FORMATIONS. n. s. [formation, Fr. from forme, Lat.] 1. The act of forming or generating.

The mass discharged forth of volcanos, and other spindles, contributes to the formation of meteoric Woodcock.

The solids are originally formed of a fluid, from a small point, as appears by the gradual formation of a thin diamond. Arithmet.

Complicated ideas, growing up under observation, give not the same confusion, as if they were all offered to the mind at once, without your observing the original and formation of them. Hartsook.

2. The manner in which a thing is formed.

The chorion, a thick membrane obscuring the foetal formation, the don door lay under. Brown.

FORMATIVE. adj. [formule, Fr. formule, Lat.] Having the power of giving form; plastic.

As we have established our assertion of the musical production of all kinds of animals; so likewise we affirm, that the meanest plant cannot be raised without seed, by any formative power residing in the soil. Bentley's Sermons.

FORMER. n. s. [from form.] He that forms; maker; contriver; planner.

The wonderful art and providence of the contriver and former of our bodies, appears in the multitude of intentions he must have in the formation of several parts for several uses.

FORMER. adj. [from popna, Sax. first; whence former, and formerist, now commonly written foremost, as if derived from before. Foremost is generally applied to place, rank, or degree, and former only to time; for when we say the last rank of the procession is the former, we respect time rather than place, and mean that which we saw before, rather than that which had precedence in place.

1. Before another in time.

Thou other gold-brown bow, is like the first:—A third is like the former. Shakespeare, Macbeth.

2. Mentioned before another.

A bad author deserves better usage than a bad critic: a man may be the former merely through the misfortune of an ill judgment; but he cannot be the latter without both that and an ill temper. Pope.

Past: as this was the custom in former times.

The present point of time is all thou hast. The future doubtful, and the former past. Harte.

FORMERLY. adv. [from former.] In times past.

The places were all of them formerly the cool retreatments of the Romans, where they used to hide themselves among the woods and mountains, during the excessive heats of their Summer. Add.

As an animal degenerates by diseases, the animal salts, formerly benign, approach towards an alkaline nature. Arbuthnot.

FORMIDABLE. adj. [formidable, Lat. formidable, Fr.] Terrible; dreadful; tremendous; terrific: to be feared. Swell my pride, and make it formidable, when you see so many pages behind. Dryden's En. Dedication.

They seem'd to fear the formidable sight, And roll'd their billows on, to speed his flight. Dryden.

FORMIDABleness. n. s. [from formidable.]

1. The quality of exciting terror or dread.

2. The thing causing dread.

They rather chose to shew the formidableness of their danger, than by a blind embracing it, to perish. Dryden, Decay of Piety.

FORMIDABLY. adv. [from formidable.]

In a terrible manner.

Behold! e'en to remote shores, A conquering navy proudly spread; The British cannon formidable roars. Dryden.

FORMLESS. adj. [from form.] Shapeless; without regularity or form.

All form is formless, orderless.

Save what is opposite to England's love. Shak.

FORMULAE. n. s. [formulae, Fr. formula, Lat.] A set or prescribed model.

To FORNICATE. v. a. [from fornix, Lat.] To commit lewdness.

It is a new way to fornicate at a distance. Brown.

FORNICATION. n. s. [fornication, Fr. fornicatio, Lat.] One that has commerce with unmarried women.

Bless me! what a fray of fornication is at the time! Lord, I can’t prevent it, like a Fool. Shakespeare.

The law ought to be strict against fornications and adulteries; for, if there were universal liberty, the increase of mankind would be too like that of foxes at best. Grant.

2. In Scripture, sometimes idolatry.

Thou didst trust in thine own beauty, thou playedst at the harps, because of thy renown, and pouredst out thy fornications on every one that passed by. Ezek. xvi. 15.

FORNICATOR. n. s. [fornicator, Fr. from fornix, Lat.] One that has commerce with unmarried women.

A fornicator or adulterer steals the soul, as well as dishonours the body of his neighbour. Taylor.

FORNICATION. n. s. [from fornicator.] A woman who without marriage cohabits with a man.

See you the fornicator be removed; Let her have needful but not slavish means. Shak.

To FORSAKE. v. a. preter. forsook; part. pass. forsook, or forsaken. [verxaeken, Dut.]

1. To leave in resentment, neglect, or dislike.

'Twas now the time when first Saul God forsook, God Saul; the room in his heart wild passions took. Cony.
FOR

Daughter of Love, whose arms in thunder wield
Th' almighty bolt, to shake the dreadful shield,
Forsake by thee, in vain I sought thy aid.
 Pope.

2. To leave; to go away from; to depart from.

Unwilling I forsake thy friendly state.
Commanded by the gods, and fate by fate.
 Dryden.

3. To desert; to fail.

Truth, modesty, and shame the world forsake;
Fame, vater, and force their places take.
 Dryden.

When even the flying sails were seen no more,
Forsaken of all sight she left the shore.
 Dryden.

[In my journey's progress,
And all the outward shows which we call great-
Languish and droop, seem empty and forsaken,
And the wide world in its eyes borer.
Ruskin.]

FORSAKER, n. s. [from forsake.]
Deserter; one that forsakes,

Thou didst deliver us into the hands of lawless enemies, most hateful forswears of God. Apocryphal.

FORSOOTH. adv. [poppSse, Sax.]
1. In truth; certainly; very well.
It is used almost always in an ironical or contemptuous sense.

Wherefore doth Lysander
Deny thy love, so rich within his soul,
And tender me, forsworn, affection!
Shak.

2. A man, forsworn, to govern a realm, who had so goodly government in his own estate. Hayward.

Unlearned persons use such letters as jolly express power or some taint of pride; yet forsworn, we say, write not true English, or true French.
Hodgson on Speech.

In the East Indies a widow, who had any regard to her character, threw herself into the flames of her husband's funeral pile, to shew, forsaken, that she is faithful to the memory of her deceased lord. Addison's Frendoher.
She would cry out murder, and disturb the whole neighbourhood; and when John came running down, did not forsee who the matter was, nothing, forsworn, only her maid had stuck a pin through her gown. Arbuth. Hist. of John Bull.

Some question the genuineness of his books, because, forsaken, they cannot discover in them
the firmness orationis that Cicero speaks of. Baker.

2. It is supposed once to have been a word of honour in address to women. It is probable that an inferior, being called shewed his attention by answering in the way you, forsworn; hoping, no doubt, to lose the meaning; and instead of a more exemplary interjection, was supposed a compellation. It appears in Shakespeare to have been used likewise to men.

Our old English word forsworn has been changed for the French madam. Guardian.

To FORSWEAR. v. a. proter, forswore; part. forsworn. [poppSse, Sax.]
1. To renounce upon oath.
I firmly vow
Never to weare her more; but do forswear her,
As one unworthy all the former favors
That, with a false heart, I forswore.
Shak.

2. To deny upon oath.
And that soft strain about his neck,
Which he forswore most monstrously to have,
Shak.

Observe the wretch who hath his faith forsworn,
How clear his voice, and how assured his look
Like innocence, and as serenely bold
As truth, how loudly he forswear the word?
Dryden. Juw.

3. With the reciprocal pronoun: as, to forswear himself to be perjured; to swear falsely.

To leave my Julia, shall I be forsworn?
To keep my promise, shall I be forsworn?
Shak.

To wrong my friend, shall I be much forsworn?
Ev'n that power which gave me first my oath,
Provokes me to this threefold perjury. Shak.

One says, he never should endure the sight
Of that forsworn, that wrongs both hands and laws,
Daniel.

I too have sworn, ev'n at the altar sworn,
Eternal love and endless faith to Theus,
And yet am false, forsworn; the hollow'd shrine,
That heard me swear, is witness to my falsity.
Smith.

To FORSWEAR. v. n. To swear falsely;
to commit perjury.

Take heed; for he holds vengeance in his hand,
To hurl upon their heads that break his law.
And that same vengeance doth on him
Forswear, and for murder too. Shak.

FORSWEARER. n. s. [from forswear.]
One who is forsworn.

FORT. n. s. [fort, Fr.] A fortified house; a castle.

They erected a fort, which they called the fort de For; and from thence they bolted like hearts of the forest.
Bacon.

Now to their feet they are about to send
For the lead engines which their brave defend.
Wall.

He that views a fort to take it,
Plants his artillery's against the part. Dryden.

My fury does not that jealous forts, pursue
With death ev'n strangers who but come to view.
Dryden.

FORTED. adj. [from fort.] Furnished or guarded by forts. Not used now.

Your desert speaks loud, and I should wrong
To lock it in the wards of covert bosom,
When it deserves with characters of
A fortified residence, against the tooth of time

FORTH. adj. [poppS Sax. Whence furth and furthest.]

1. Forward; onward in time.
From that day forth I'll do that face divine;
From that day forth I cast in careful mind
To seek her out. Fairy Queen.

2. Forward in place or order.
Look in the second advertisement, and so forth, where they speak in most unchristian manner.
Whitegift.

Mad Pandarn steps forth, with vengeance vov'd
For Titus's death.
Dryden's Xerxes.

3. Abroad; out of doors.
Uncle, I must come forth. Shakep. Othello.
I have no mind of feats forth for to-night. Shak.
Attend you of the door of our stern daughter.
Shak.

Will she not forth? Shak.

When Winter past, and Summer scarce begun,
Invites them forth to labour in the sun. Dryden.

4. OutWard; beyond the boundary of any place.
They will privily relieve their friends that are forth; they will send the enemy secret advertisements; and they will not also stick to draw the curtain privately upon them.
Shak.

Ev'n that sunshine brew'd a show for him,
That wist'd his father's fortunes forth of France.
Shak.

5. Out into a public character; public view.
You may set forth the same with farmhouses,
How shall you meet them at the beacham.
Shak.

But when your troubled country call'd you forth,
Your flaming courage, and your matchless worth,
To fierce contention gave a prosperous end. Wall.

6. Thoroughly; from beginning to end.
Out of use.
You, cousin,
Whom it concerns to hear this matter forth,
Do with your issues as seems you best. Shak.

7. To a certain degree. Obsolete.
Hence we learn, how far forth we may expect justification and salvation from the sufferings of Christ; no farther than we are wrought on by his resuming grace.
Hammond.

8. On to end. Out of use.
I repeated the Ave Maria: the inquisitor bad me say forth; I said I was taught no more.
Memoir in St跑pe.

FORTH, prep. Out of.
And here's a prophet, that I brought with me
From the streets of Pontefract.
Shak.

Such forths as the current, deep.
And trembling ask, what news, and do fear so
As jealous husbands, who they would not know.
Donne.

FORTHCOMING. adj. [forth and coming.]
Ready to appear; not absconding; not lost.

Carry this mad knife to jull. I charge you see that he be forthcoming. Shak. Taming of a Shrew.
We'll see your trinkets here forthcoming all.
Shak. Henry VI.

FORTHISSING. adj. [forth and issue.]
Coming out; coming forward from a covert.

Forthissuing thus, she gave him first to wield
A weighty ax, with truest temper steel'd.
And double edg'd.
Pope's Odyssey.

FORTHRIGHT. adv. [forth and right.]
Strait forward; without flexions. Not in use.

He ever going so just with the horse, either forswear or turning, when he borrowed the horse's body, so he lent the horse his mind.
Sidney.

The river not running forthright, but almost continually winding, as if the lower streams would return to their spring, or that the river had a delight to play with itself.
Sidney.

Wherefore, he is forthright in

For still to all the gate stood open wide. Fairy Q.

Thither forthright he rode to raise the prey. Dry.

FORTHRIGHT. n. s. A straight path.

Here's a mean trod, indeed.

FORTHWITH. adv. [forth and with.]
Immediately; without delay; at once; straight.

Forthwith he runs, with feigned honest haste.
Unto his guest; who, after troubles sights
And dreams, 'gan now to take more sound rest.
Spenser.

Few things are so restrained to any one end or purpose, that the same being extinct, they should forthwith utterly become frastur.
Hooker.

Neither did the martial men daily prosecute the serviceary, but did forthwith quench that fire.
Davies on Ireland.

Forthwith began these fury-moving sounds,
The noise of wrath, the music from hell,
The rattling drums.
Daniel's Civil War.

The winged heralds, by command
Of sovereigns, forthwith make the land
A solemn council forthwith to be held
At Pandemonium.
Milton's Paral. Lost.

In his passage this other one, this bound a note of the whole conspiracy, desiring him to read it forthwith, and to remember the giver of it as long as he lived.
South.

FORTIETH. adj. [from forty.]
The fourth tenth; next after the thirty-ninth.

What doth it avail
To be the fortieth man in an entail? Donne.

Burnet says, Scotland is not above a fortieth part in value to the rest of Britain; and, with respect to the profit that England gains from hence, not the four thousandth part.
Swift.

FORTIFIABLE. adj. [from fortify.]
What may be forttied.

FORTIFICATION. n. s. [fortification,
Fr. from fortifie.]
1. The science of military architecture.

Fortification is an art shewing how to forttie a place with ramparts, parapets, moats, and others bulwarks; to the end that the cittie within may be able to defend themselves, for a considerable time, against the assaluts of a numerous army without; so that the enemy, in attacks within, may be compelled to retire with great loss.
It is either regular or irregular; and, with respect to time, may be divided into durable and temporary.
Harri.
The Phenomenic, though an unwarlike nation, yet of instanced art of fortification. Broune.

2. A place built for strength.

The hounds were uncoupled, and the stag thought it best to trust to the nimbleness of his feet, than to the slender fortification of his lodging.

Sidney.

Excellent devices were used to make even their springers, battles, and fortifications being then delivered to their memory, which, after stronger judgments, might dispense some advantage.

Sidney.

3. Addition of strength. Not much used.

To strengthen the infected parts, give some few advices by way of fortification and antidote.

Government of the Tongue.

FORTIFIER. n. s. [from fortify.] 1. One who erects works for defence.

The fortifier of Frenodius made his advantage of the commodity afforded by the ground. Carew.

2. One who supports or secures; one who upholds.

He was led forth by many armed men, who often had been the fortifiers of wickedness, to the place of execution. Sidney.

To FORTIFY. v. a. [fortifier, Fr.] 1. To strengthen against attacks by walls or works.

Great Dunstan in he strongly fortifies. Shakes.

He fortified himself; no man could have his fortune. Dryden.

A young man, before he leaves the shelter of his father's house, should be fortified with resolution to secure his virtues.

Locke.

To FORTIFY. v. n. To raise strong places.

Thou as impov'd

To fortify thus far and overlay

With this portentous bridge the dark abyss. Milt.

FORTILAGE. n. s. [from fort.] A little fort; a blockhouse.

Yet was the fence thereof but weak and thin, Nought fasten'd their force that fortification to win.

Spenser.

In all straight and narrow passages there should be some little fortillage, or wooden set, which should keep and command the straight. Spenser.

FORTIN. n. s. [Fr.] A little fort raised to defend a camp, particularly in a siege.

Thou hast talk'd

Of palisadoes, fortins, parapets. Shakes.

FORTITUDE. n. s. [fortitude, Lat.] 1. Courage; bravery; magnanimity; greatness of mind; power of acting or suffering well.

The king-becoming graces.

Devotion, patience, courage, fortitude, I have no relish of them. Shakes. Macbeth.

The better fortitude

Of patience, and heroic martyrdom

Unsam'l'd, Milton, Par. Lost.

Fortitude is the guard and support of the other virtues; and without courage, a man will scarce keep his friends to his counsels, and kill up the character of a truly worthy man.

Locke.

They thought it reasonable to do all possible honours to the memories of martyrs; partly that others might be encouraged to the same patience and fortitude, and partly that virtue, even in this world, might not lose its reward. Nelson.

FORTUENESS. n. s. [from fortune.] Happiness; good luck; success.

Oh me, saith she, whose greatest fortune is more unfortunate than my sister's greatest unfortunateness. Sidney.

FORTUNE. n. s. [fortuna, Lat. fortune, Fr.] 1. The power supposed to distribute the lots of life according to her own humour.

Fortu:ne, that art revenge, Ne'er turns the key to th' poor. Shak. King Lear.

Though fortune's malice overturn my state, My mind exceeds the scale of her wheel. Shak.

2. The good or ill that befalls man.

Rejoice, said he, to-day.

In you the fortune of Great Britain lies:

Among the gods, who are they Whom heav'n has chosen to fight for such a prize. Dryden.

The adequate meaning of chance, as distinguished from fortune, in that the latter is understood to befall only rational agents, but chance to be among inanimate bodies.

Bentley.

3. The chance of life; means of living.

His father dying, he was driven to London to seek his fortune. Swift.

4. Success, good or bad; event.

This terrestrial globe has been surrounded by the fortunates and baldest of many navigators. Tempest.

No, he shall eat, and die with me, or live.

Our equal crimes shall equal fortune give. Dry.

5. Estate; possessions.

If thou dost,

And this instructs thee, thou dost make thy way to noble fortunes. Shakes. King Lear.

That eyesless hand of thine was first from'd, at'shild,

To raise my fortunes. Shakes. King Lear.

But tell me, Titius, what heavenly power

Preserv'd your fortune in that fatal hour? Dryd.

The fate which governs poets thought it fit

He should not raise his fortunes by his wit. Dryd.

He was younger son to a gentleman of a good estate, but small fortune. Swift.

6. The portion of a man or woman; generally of a woman.

I am thought some hellich rich in lands,

Fled to escape a cruel guardian's hands;

Which may produce a story worth the telling.

Of the next sparks that go a fortune stealing.

Prologue to Orphan.

The fortune hunters have already cast their eyes upon some, and take to care plant themselves in her view.

When meet delights in her spinner,

A rider may a fortune get. Swift.

7. Futurity; future events.

You who means fortunes in their faces read,

To find out mine, look not, alas, on me;

But mark her face, and all the features heed;

For only there is writ my destiny. Cowley's Mist.

To FORTUNE. v. n. [from the noun.] To befall; to fall out; to happen; to come casually to pass.

If fortune, as fair it then befell

Behind his back, unscared, where he stood,

Of ancient time there was a springing well,

From which fast trickled forth a silver flood.

Fair Queen.

It fortuned the same night that a Christian, serving a Turk in the camp, secretly gave the watchmen warning. Knolles.

Knows.

FORTUNED. adj. Supplied by fortune.

Of the full fortune'd Caesar ever shall

Be brook'd with me. Shakes. Ant. and Cleop.

FORTUNEBOOK. n. s. [fortune and book.] A book consulted to know fortune or future events.

Thou know'st a face, in whose each look

Beauty lays ope love's fortune-book;
FOR

On whose fair revolutions wait
The obsequious motions of love's fate. Crashaw.

FORTUNEHUNTER. n. s. [fortune and hunt.] A man whose employment is to enquire after women with great portions, to enrich himself by marrying them.

We must, however, distinguish between fortune hunters and fortune tellers.

To FORTUNETELLER. v. [fortune and telll.] 1. To pretend to the power of revealing futurity.

We are simple men; we do not know what's brought to pass under the profession of fortunetelling. Shakesp.

I'll conjure you, I'll fortunetell you. Shakesp.

The gypsies were to divide the money got by stealing lines, or by fortunetelling. Walton's Angler.

2. To reveal futurity.

Here, while his casting done pipe scan'd
The mystick figures of her band,
He tipples palmistry, and dines
On all her fortunetelling lines. Cleaveland.

FORTUNETELLER. n. s. [fortune and teller.] One who cheats common people, by pretending to the knowledge of futurity.

They brought one Pinch, a hungry je'an-fac'd
A thread-bare jingler, and a fortuneteller. Shakesp.

A Welchman being at a sessions-house, and seeing the lawyers and orators make their speeches before the bar, related to some of his acquaintance that the judges were good fortunetellers; for if they did but look upon them, they could certainly tell whether they should live or die. Bacon's Apothegms.

Hast thou given credit to vain predictions of men, to dreams or fortunetellings, or gone about to know any secret things by lot? Dippy's Rules for Devout Men.

There needs no more than impudence on one side, and some superstitious credulity on the other, to the setting up of a fortuneteller. L'Estrange.

Long ago a fortuneteller
Exactly said what now befell her. Swift.

FORTY. adj. [forty, Sax.] Four times ten.

On fair ground I could beat forty of them. Shakesp.

He that upon levity quits his station, hopes to be better, 'tis forty to one losses. L'Estrange.

FORUM. n. s. [Lat.] Any public place.

The forum was a public place in Rome, where law and orators made their speeches before their proper judge in matters of property, or in criminal cases, to accuse or excuse, to complain or defend. Watts on the Mind.

Close to the bay great Neptune's fate adjoins, And near a forum flanked with marble shines, Where the bold youth, the numerous fleets to store, Shape the broad sail, or smooth the taper oar. Pope.

To FORWARD. v. a. [forward and wander.] To wander wildly and warily.

The better part now of the lingering day
They travelled had, when as they far espied
A weariness by the way. F. Queen.

FORWARD. adv. [poppeped, Sax.] Towards; to a part or place before; onward; progressively.

When fervent sorrow shooked was,
She up arose, resolving him to find
Alive or dead, and forward forth doth pass.
Fair Queen.

From smaller things the mind of the hearers may be lost, and ignorance of greatness, and climb up from the lowest to the highest things.

Hooker.

He that is used to go forward, and finnishes a step, falleth oft his own favour, and is not the thing he was. Bacon's Essay.

VOL. I.

FORWARD. adj. [from the adverb.]

1. Warm; earnest; not backward.

They that remember not poor, which I also was forward to do. Gal. ii. 10.

2. Ardent; eager; hot; violent.

You'll still be too forward.

Two Gentlemen of Verona.

Unskil'd to dart the pointed spear,
Or lead the forward youth to noble war. Prior.

3. Ready; confident; presumptuous.

Premature; early ripe.

Short Summer lightly has a forward Spring. Shakesp.

4. Not reserved; not over modest.

'Tis a perilous boy,

Bold, quick, ingenious, forward, capable; He's all the mother's from the top to toe. Shakesp.

5. Not behindhand; not inferior.

My good Camillo,

She is as forward of her breeding, as Shakspeare's Winter's Tale.

To FORWARD. v. s. [from the adverb.] To hasten; to quicken; to accelerate in growth or improvement.

As we house hot country plants, as lemons, to save them; so we may house our own country plants to forward them, and make them ripe in the cold season. Bacon's Nat. History.

Whenever I slince,

I forward the grass and I ripen the vine. Swift.

To patroon; to patronize.

FOWARDER. n. s. [from forward.] He who promotes anything.

FOWARDLY. adv. [from the adjective.]

Eagerly; hastily; quickly.

The sudden and surprising turns we ourselves have felt, should not suffer us too forwardly to admit presumption.

FOWARDNESS. n. s. [from forward.]

1. Eagerness; ardour; readiness to act.

Absolutely we cannot dissemble, we cannot absolutely approve either willingness to live, or forwardness to die. Hooker.

Is it so strange a matter to find a good thing furnished by ill men of a sinister intent and purpose, whose forwardness is not therefore a bane to such as favour it, the same the better and more precious? Hooker.

Is it possible to show who are the great ones in forwardedness, the people in rarities, entertaining this airy phantasm with incredible affection. Bacon.

2. Quickness; readiness.

He had such a dextrous prudence, as his teachers were forwardly to be his brothers, who were under the same training, might hold pace with him. Wotton.

3. Earliness; early ripeness.

4. Confidence; assurance; want of modesty.

In France it is usual to bring their children into company, and to cherish in them, from their infancy, a kind of forwardness and assurance. Addison.
FOUL.

The goddess thus he called,
With pleasant stories, her false foster-father. Addison.

FOSTERED. n. s. [Foster and dun.]
A nurse; one that performs the office of a mother by giving food to a young child.

There, by the wolf, were laid the tender twins;
In spite of danger, they hung
The foster-dam's loll'd out her fav'ring tongue. Dray.

FOSTERED, n. s. [foster and earth.]
Earth by which the plant is nourished, though it did not grow at first in it.

In vain the nursing grew
Seems fair a while, and shelter'd with a foster earth
But when the alien compost is exhaust,

FOSTERER. n. s. [from foster.]
A nurse; one who gives food in the place of a parent.

To Ireland they put their children to fosterers:
The rich men selling, the meaner sort buying the alterage of their children in the opinion of the Irish, fostering has always been a stronger alliance than blood. Davis on Ireland.

FOSTERFATHER. n. s. [parr-epenab, Sax.]
One who gives food in the place of the father.

In Ireland fosterchildren do love and are beloved by the parents, and, when they are not, rather than of their own natural parents and kindred. Davis.

The duke of Bretagne having been an a host and a kind parent or foster-father to the king, in his tenderness of age and weakness of fortune, did force aid this time from king Henry. Bacon.

Tyrethens, the fosterfather of the beast,
Then clinched a hatchet in his hony fist. Dryden.

FOSTERMOTHER. n. s. [foster and mother.
A nurse.

FOSTERNURSE. n. s. [foster and nurse.
This is an improper compound, because foster and nurse mean the same.]
A nurse.

Our foster-nurse of nature is repose,
The which he lacks. Shakesp. King Lear.

FOSTERSON. n. s. [foster and son.]
One fed and educated, though not the son by nature.

Nature in years, to ready honours more;
Of celestial seed! O fostered of Jove! Dray. Virg.

FOUGADE. n. s. [Fr.]
In the art of war, a sort of little mine in the manner of a wheel, which had ten feet wide and twelve deep, dug under some work or fortification, and charged with barley or sacks of gunpowder to blow it up, and covered over with earth. D'Uit.

FOUGHT.
The preterite and participle of fight.
Though unknown to me, they sure fought well,
Whom Repton led, and who were British born.

FOUGHTEN. [The passive participle of fight. Rarely used.]
Contested; disputed by arms.

On the foughten field
Michael and his angels, prevalent
Encamping, placed in guard their watch and rounds
Cherubick waving fires.
Milton's Par. Lost.

FOUL. adj. [fals, Gothick; ful, Sax.]
1. Not clean; filthy; dirty; miry. Through most of its significations it is opposed to fair.
My face is foul with weeping.
Job, xvi, 16.
It's monstrous labour when I wash my brain.
And it grows fouder. Shakesp. Antony and Cleopatra.
He that tarries in deep and foul ways, ought not to say that he cannot walk, in fair.
Tillotson.
The stream is foul with stains
Of rushing torrents and descending rains. Addison.

2. Impure; polluted; full of filth.
With foul mouth.
And in the world's unclean place,
To call him villain, Shakesp. Measure for Measure.
Kill thy physician, and the face bestow
Upon the foul disease.
Shakesp. King Lear.

Latent appearance and sensuality base minds, clothe their spirits, and make them gross, foul, listless and uncouth. Ticklem.

3. Wicked; detestable; abominable.
Jesus rebuked the foul spirit.
Mark, ix, 25.

He hates foul heurings and vile flattery,
Two filthy blows in noblest gesture. Hubberd's Tale.

This is the greatest and most irrational superstitious action, as well as the foulest atheism, that can be imagined.

Satire has always shone among the rest,
And is the boldest if not the best,
To tell men truly of their foulest faults.
To laugh at their vain dreads, and vainer thoughts.

4. Not lawful; not according to the established rules.
By foul play were we he'd thence,
But blessedly help'd thither.
Shakesp. Tempest.

5. Hateful; ugly; loathsome.
Th' other half did woman's shape retain,
Most loathsome, filthy, foul, and all of vile distain.
Fair Queen.

Hast thou forgot
The foul witch Syraca, who with age and envy
Waj grown into a hoop?
Shakesp. Tempest.

Foul sights do much offend.
Thomas's Priest.

All things that seem so foul and disagreeable in nature, are not really so in themselves, but only relatively.

6. Disgraceful; shameful.
Too well I see and rue the dire event,
That with too much and wanton fault
Hath lost us hea'n.
Milton's Par. Lost.

Who first seduced them to the foul revolt? Milton.
Reason half extinct,
Or impotent, or else approving, sees
The foul disorder.

7. Coarse; gross.
You will have no notion of delicacies if you table with them; they are all for rank and foul feeding, and spoil the best preparations in cooking. Felton.

8. Full of gross humors, or bad matter;
Wanting purgation or munnification.
You perceived, the body of the whole kingdom,
Foul it is; what rank diseases grow,
With what danger near the heart of it. Shaks.

9. Not bright; not serene.
Who's there besides foul weather?
One mind like the weather, most inequitably.
Sick. Be fair or foul, or rain or shine,
The joys I have professed, in spite of fate are mine.
Dryden.

10. With rough force; with unseasonable violence.
So in this throng bright Suchariss fah'd,
Oppress'd by those who strive to be her guard:
As ships, though not so obsequious, fail
Foul in a tempest on their admiral.
Waller.

Is his sallies their men might foul each other?
St. Claremont.

The great art of the devil, and the principal
Decret of the heart is to keep fair with God himself,
While men foul upon his laws. South.

11. [Among seamen.] Entangled: as, a rope is foul of the anchor.
To Foul. v. a. [fulan, Sax.] To daub; to bemire; to make filthy; to dirty.
Sweep ye your decks from autumnal leaves, lest
The worms draw them into their holes, and foul your garden.
Evelyn.

While Tobacco all his ordure scatters,
To foul the man he chiefly flatters.
Swift.
The soul is a smash more in one hour than the kitchen-maid dath in a week. Swift's Direct. to Serv.
FOU

They Obian walls, and strong Fidelice rear,
Noratoba, but Pumilia found,
And raise Colatian tow’rs on rocky ground. Dryd.

3. To establish; to erect.
This also shall they gain by their delay
In the wide lands; there they shall found
Their government, and their great senate chuse,
Through the twelve tribes, by rule of laws Obedient.

He founded a library, gathered together
The acts of the kings and prophets. 2 Mar. ii. 33.

4. To give birth or original to; as, he founded an art; he founded a family.

5. To raise upon, as on a principle or ground.

Though some have made use of the opinion of some schoolmen, that dominion is founded in grace; were it admitted as the most certain truth, it could not warrant any such sanguine method.

Dryd.

Decay of Piety.

A right to the use of the creatures is founded originally in the right a man has to subsist. Locke.

Power, founded on contract, can descend only to him who has a right by that contract. Locke.

The they could not believe, d. They found upon the ignorance of his time. Pope’s Preface to the Iliad.

6. To fix firm.

Pleasure is escap’d.
—Then comes my fit again: I had else been perfect.
Whole as is the rock on which he stood. Shaks.

To FOUNTAIN. v. a. [founding, Lat. fonder.
Fr.] To form by melting and pouring into moulds; to cast.

A second multitude

With wondrous art founded the mazy ore,

Severing each kind, scum’d the dunlin drawer. Milton.

FOUAD. n. s. [foundation, Fr.]

1. The basis or lower parts of an edifice.

The swells of house, the goodliness of trees, when we behold them, delighteth the eye; but that foundation which beareth up the one,
that root which ministrs unto the other ornament, is in the bosom of the earth concealed. Hooker.

That is the way to make the city flat,
To bring the roof to the foundation,
To bury all.
O Jove, I think,

Fountations fly the wretched; such I mean,
When we set up our house,

Shaks. Coriolanus.

I draw a line along shore;

I lay the deep foundations of a wall,
And Ears, the city call. Dryd.

2. The act of fixing the basis.

Ne’er to these chambers where the night’s rest,
Since their foundation, came a nobler guest. Tickell.

3. The principles or ground on which any notion is raised.

If we give way to our passions, we do but gratify ourselves for the present; in order to our future disquiet; but if we resist and conquer them, we lay the foundation of perpetual peace in our minds.

Tillotson.

That she should be subject to her husband, the laws of mankind and customs of nations have ordered it so; and there is a foundation in nature for it. Locke.

4. Original; rise.

Throughout the world, even from the first foundation thereof, all men have either been taken as lords or lawful kings in their own houses. Hooker.

5. A revenue settled and established for any purpose, particularly charity.

He had an opportunity of going to school on a foundation. Swift.

6. Establishment; settlement.

FOUNDER. n. s. [from found.]

1. A builder; one who raises an edifice;
one who presides at the erection of a city.

Of famous cities we the founders know;

But rivers, with which they give are nature’s bounty: ties of more renown

To make a river than to build a town. Waller.
FOUL
He shall restore the lamb foullite, because he had no play.

FOURFOOTED. adj. [four and foot.] Quadrupled; having twice two feet.
Angus Athysos, whose art in vain
From fight dissuaded the fourfooted train.
Now belched, and with Nessus on the plain. Dry.

FOURS'O'RE. adj. [four and score.]
1. Four times twenty; eighty.
When they were out of reach, they turned and crossed the ocean to Spain, having lost fourscore of their ships, and the greater part of their men. Bacon's War with Spain.
The Chieftains were first a free people, being a commonwealth, maintaining a navy of four-score ships.

FOURSQUARE. adj. [four and square.]
Quadrangular; having four sides and equal angles.
The temple of Bel was enwrought with a wall carried fourscore, of great height and beauty; and on such square certain broken gates curiously engraven. Raleigh's History.

FOURTEN. adj. [peepopeyn, Sax.] Four and ten; twice seven.
I am not fourscore on the score for sheer.

FOURTHE'NTH. adj. [from fourteenth.]
The ordinal of four; the fourth after the tenth.
There have not been any that see the ninth day, few before the twelfth, and the eyes of some not open before the fourteenth day. Brown's Vulg. Errors.

FOURTH. adj. [from four.]
The ordinal of four; the first after the third.
A third is like the former; filthy bags!
Why do you show me? to the fourth.

FOURTHLY. adv. [from fourth.]
In the fourth place.
Fourthly, plants have their seed and seminal parts uppermost, and living creatures have them lowermost. Bacon's Nat. History.

FOURWHE'ELED. adj. [four and wheel.]
Running upon twice two wheels.
Scarcely twenty fourwheeled carts, compact and strong.

FOUTRA. n. s. [from foutry, Fr.]
A fig; a soul; a word of contempt. Not used.

FOUL. n. s. [pugel, puli, Sax. vogel, Durt.]
A winged animal; a bird. It is colloquially used of edible birds, but in books of all the feathered tribes. Fowl is used collectively: as,喂efined upon fish and foule. The beasts, the fishes, and the winged fowles, Are their mates subjects, and at their command. Shakes.

Lucullus entertained Pompey in a magnificent house: Pompey, said, this is a marvellous home for the Summer; but methinks very cold for Winter. Lucullus answered, do you not think me as wise as divers fowles, to change my habitation in the Winter season? Bacon's Apothegmus.

This mighty breath
Instructs the foule of heaven. Thomson's Spring.
To FOUL. v. n. [from the noun.] To kill birds for food or game.

FO'WLER. n. s. [from foule.]
A sportsman who pursues birds.
The fouler, war'd
By those good omens, with swift early steps
Treads the crisp earth, ranging through fields and Glades,
Offer'd to the birds. Phillips.
With slaughters guns th' unweary'd fouler roves,
When frosts have whiten'd all the naked groves. Pope.

FO'WLINGPIECE. n. s. [fowl and piece.]
A gun for birds.
Tis necessary that the countryman be provided with a good fouling-piece.

FOX. n. s. [fox, Sax. ros, roch. Dut.]
1. A wild animal of the canine kind, with sharp ears, and a bushy tail, remarkable for his cunning, living in holes, and preying upon fowls or small animals.
The fox by arts not when he would steal the lamb.

2. By way of reproach, applied to a knave or cunning fellow.

FOXCASE. n. s. [fox and case.]
A fox's skin.

One had better be laughed at for asking a fox-case, for a fox, than be destroyed by taking a live fox for a case. E. Strange.

FOXCHASE. n. s. [fox and chase.]
The pursuit of the fox with hounds.
See the same man, in vigour, in the gout;
Alone, in company; in place or out;
Early at business, and at hazard late;
Mad at a falseone, wise at a debate. Pope.

FOXEVIL. n. s. [fox and evil.]
A kind of disease in which the hair sheds.

FOXFISH. n. s. [rapulcida piscis.]
A fish.

FOXGLOVES. n. s. [digitalis.]
A plant.

FOXHUNTER. n. s. [fox and hunter.]
A man whose chief ambition is to shew his bravery in hunting foxes. A term of reproach used of country gentlemen.
The foxhunters went their way, and then out steals a fox. E. Strange.
John Wildfire, fox-hunter, broke his neck over a six-bar gate. Spectat.

FOXSHIP. n. s. [from fox.]
The character or qualities of a fox; cunning; mischievous art.
Had'st thou foxship
To banish him that struck more blows for Rome,
Than thou hast spoken words. Shakes. Coriol. 1. 1.

FOXTAIL. n. s. [alupcirus.]
A plant.

FOXTRAP. n. s. [fox and trap.]
A gin or snare to catch foxes.
Answer a question, at what hour of the night to set a foxtrap? Butler.

FOY. n. s. [foi, Fr.] Faith; allegiance; an obsolete word.
He esteem'd himself abused, and Denmark won,
And of them both did joy and tribute raise. Fairy Q.

TO FRAC'T. v. a. [fractus, Lat.] To break; to violate; to infringe. Found perhaps only in the following passage:
His days and times are past,
And my reliance on his frac'd dates
Has smit my credit. Shakes. Timon.

FRACTION. n. s. [fraction, Fr. fraction, Lat.]
1. The act of breaking; the state of being broken.
The surface of the earth hath been broke, and the part of it dissolved; whereas several parcels of nature retain still the evident marks of fraction and ruin. Burnet's Theory of the Earth.

2. A broken part of a whole.
The fractions of her faith, arts of her love,
The fragments, scraps, the bits and greasy relics... O'er her eaten faith, are bound to Diomedee.
Shakes.

Neither the motion of the moon, whereby months are computed, nor the sun, whereby years are accounted for,eth forth nothing, but subtleivities of fractions and broken parts. Brown's Vulg. Err. Pliny put a round number near the truth, rather than to make the broken bones unit together. Arth. on Coins.

FRACTIONAL. adj. [from fraction.]
Belonging to a broken number; comprising a broken number.
We make a cypher the medium between increasing and decreasing numbers, commonly called absolute or whole numbers, and negative or fractional numbers. Cock's Arithmetic.

FRACTION. n. s. [fractura, Lat.]
1. Breed; separation of continuous parts.
That may do it without any great fraction of the stable and fixed parts of nature, or the infringement of the laws thereof. Hale.

2. The separation of the continuity of a bone in living bodies.
But thou wilt sin and grief destroy, That so the broken bones may joy.
And tune together in a well-set song, Full of his praises, Who didst raise men's.
Fractura well cur'd, make us more strong. Her. Fracturae of the scall are dangerous, not in consequence of the injury done to the bone itself, but as the bone becomes affected. Shapar's Surgery.

To FRACTION. v. a. [from the noun.] To break a bone.
The leg was dressed, and the fractured bones united together. Wiseman's Surgery.

FRAGILE. adj. [fragile, Fr. fragiles, Lat.]
1. Brittle; easily snapped or broken.
To ease them of their griefs,
Their pangs of love, and other incident throes,
That nature's fragile will both sustain,
In life's uncertain voyage. Shakes. Timon.
The stalk of ivy is tough, and not fragile. Bacon. The little blade that have spun their threads too fine,
Tis weak and fragile, like Arche's line. Deiam.
A dry stick will be easily broken, when a green one will maintain a strong resistance; and yet in the most minute resistance there is less rest than in what is drier and more fragile.
Glasst.

2. Weak; uncertain; easily destroyed.
Such ostentation, vain of fleshly arms, And fragile arms, much instrument of war, Long in preparing, soon to nothing brought.

FRAGILITY. n. s. [from fragile.]
1. Britteness; easiness to be broken.
To make an induration with toughness, and less fragility, decayed bodies in water for two or three days. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

2. Weakness; uncertainty; easiness to be destroyed.
Fear the uncertainty of man's fragility, the common chance of war, the violence of fortune. Knolles.

3. Frailty; liability to fault.
All could not be right, in such a state, in this low age of fragility. Watten.

FRAGMENT. n. s. [fragmentum, Lat.]
A part broken from the whole; an imperfect piece.
He who late a sceptre did command,
Now grasps a floating fragment in his hand. Dry.
Cowley, in his unfinished fragment of the Daidales, has shown us this way to improvement.

Watts en the Mind.

764
Astronomers, to solve the phenomena, frame to their comet eccentricities and epicycles. Bacon.

FRAME. n. s. [from the verb.]
1. A fabric; any thing constructed of various parts or members.

If the frame of the heavenly arch should dissolve itself, if celestial spheres should forget their wonted motions, and by irregular volatility turn themselves any way, as it might happen.

In case of storms or snow, the trees of frames of timber, with turrets and arcades, were cautiously matters of magnificence.

These are the glorious works, parent of good! Almighty life this universal frame. Milton.

Divine Cecilia came.

Inventress of the vocal frame.

Which, he'ld by Mars himself, from Indian quarters came.

The labour of a god; and all along

Thus iron plates were clench'd to make it strong.

Dryden.

We see this vast frame of the world, and an innumerable multitude of creatures in it; all which we, who believe a God, attribute to him as the author.

Tillotson.

2. Any thing made or as to inclose or admit something else.

Put both the tube and the vessel it leaned on into a convenient wooden frame, to keep them from mischances.

Boyle.

His picture scarcely would deserve a frame.

A globe of glass, about eight or ten inches in diameter, put into a frame where it may be swiftly turned round its axis, will, in turning, strike, where it rubs against the palm of one's hand.

Newton.

3. Order; regularity; adjusted series or disposition.

A woman, that is like a German clock, Still a repairing, ever out of frame,

And never going right.

Shaksp.

Your steady soul preserves her frame;

In good and evil times the same.

Swift.

4. Scheme; order.

Another party did resolve to change the whole frame of the government in state as well as church.

Clarendon.

5. Contrivance; projection.

John the Bastard,

Whose spirits toil in frame of villains. Shaksp.

6. Mechanical construction.

Shape; form; proportion.

A bear's savage beast,

Whelp'd without form, until the dam

Has l'd him into shape and frame.

Huialias.

FRA'MER. n. s. [from frame; pzemman, Sax.] Maker; former; contriver; schemer.

The forger of his own fate, the framer of his fortune, should be improper, if actions were pre-determined.

Hammond.

There was want of accurateness in experiments in the first original frame of those medals.

Archibnot.

FRA'MPOLD. n. s. [This word is written by Dr. Hacket, fraumpul. I know not its original.] Peevish; boisterous; rugged; cross-grained.

Her husband! alas, the sweet woman leads an ill life with him; she leads a very frampul life with him. Shaksp.

The frumpul man could not be pacified. Hacket.

FRANCHISE. n. s. [franchise, Fr.]

1. Exemption from any onerous duty.

2. Privilege; immunity; right granted.

They granted them markets, and other franchises, and erected corporate towns among them.

Daniel in Ireland.

His judicious elicit the same franchise yields

To all the wild increase of woods and fields. Dryd.

3. District; extent of jurisdiction.
There are other privileges granted unto most of the corporations, that they shall be the same as the Queen's State of Irel.

To Franchi's, v. a. [from the noun.] To disfranchise; to make free; to keep free.

I lose no honour
In seeking to augment it; but still keep
My bosom free from all their欺蒙 clearance, clear. Shakesp. Frangible.

Fra nible. adj. [frango, Lat.] fragile; brittle; easily broken.

Though it seems the solidest wood, if wrought before it be well seasoned, it will shew itself fragm. Florck.

Francon. n. s. [Of this word I know not the derivation.] A paramour; a boon companion.

First, by her side did sit the bold Sandysly, Fit mate for such a mixing limb.

Who in her looks took exceeding joy,
Might not be found a franker francon. Fairy Queen.

Frank. adj. [Franç, Fr.]
1. Liberal; generous; not niggardly.

The pestiferous sorts of trees yield little moss, for the reason of the frank putting up of the sap into the boughs. Bacon.

They were left desolate, either by narrow provision, or by the frank they cut themselves, and their charity towards others. Sprout's Sermons.

To the ordinary practice of the world to be free from civil wars is much the same thing. L'Estrat.

2. Open; ingenuous, sincere; not reserved.

Without conditions; without payment.

Thou hast it won; for it is of frank gift, and he will care for all the rest to shift. Hubberd.

Frank. n. s. [from the adjective.]
1. A place to feed hogs in; a sty; so called from liberality of food.

Where saps he? Both the old heir freed in the old frank? Shakesp. Henry IV.

2. A letter which pays no postage.

You'll have immediately, by several franks, my epistle to lord Cobham. Pope to Swift.

3. A French coin.

To Frank. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To shut up in a frank or sty. Hamner.

In the sty of this most bloody boar, My soul in mercy, and as frank'd up in bold,Shak.

2. To feed high; to fatten; to cram.

Junius and Ainsworth.

3. [from the adjective.] To exempt letters from postage.

My lord Orrery writes to you to-morrow; and you shall send this under his cover, or at least frank'd by him.

Gazette sent gratis down, and frank'd, For which my patron's weekly thank'd. Pope.

Frankalmoigne, n. s. The same which we in Latin call libera eleanosys, or free alms in English; whence that tenure is commonly known among our English lawyers by the name of a tenure in frank amone, or frankalmoigne, which, according to Britton, is a tenure by divine service. Ayliffe's Paragon.

Frankence. n. s. [from and incense; so called perhaps from its liberal distribution of colour.]

Frankence is a dry resinous substance in pieces or droplets, of a yellowish white colour; a strong smell, but not disagreeable, and a bitter, acrid, and resiny taste. It is very inflammable.

The earliest historians among us, that frankence was used among the sacred rites and sacrifices, as it continues to be in many parts. We are still uncertain as to the place whence frankenence is brought, as it is a tree which produces it. Hill. Take unto thee sweet spices, with pure frankenence. Ezchad.

I find in Dioscorides record of frankincepe gotten in India, Breviary of Langenigm. Black chou only will in India grow, and od'rous, frankincepe on the Sahoban bough.

Cedar and frankincepe, an od'rous pile, Flam'd on the hearth, and wide perfum'd the isle. Pope.

FRANKEN. n. s. [from frank.] A stew ar; a bafif of land. It signifies originally a little gentleman, and is not improperly Englished a gentleman servant.

Not in use.

A spacious court they see,
Both plain and pleasant to be walked in,
Where they meet a frank kirk fair and free. Fairy Queen.

Frankly. adv. [from frank.]
1. Liberally; freely; kindly; readily.

Oh, were it but my life,
1'd throw it down for your deliverance,
As frankly as a pin. Shakesp. Measure for Measure. Shakesp. Henry VIII.

When they had nothing to pay, he frankly forgave them both. Luke, vili. 42.

By the greatness of the earth, that they caused us to get up to spread so frankly as it should do. Bacon.

I value my garden more for being full of black birds than the flowers, and very frankly give them fruit for their songs. Spectator.

2. Without constraint.

The lords mounted their servants upon their own horses; and, they, with the volunteers, Frankly fired themselves, amounted to a body of two hundred and fifty horse. Clarendon.

3. Without reserve.

He entered very frankly into those new designs, which were carried into effect. Clarendon.

Frankness. n. s. [from frank.]
1. Plainness of speech; openness; ingenuousness.

When the Conde duke had some elaboration with the duke, in which he made all the protestations of his sincere affection, the other received his protestations with all contempt; and declared with a very unnecessary frankness, that he would have no friendship with him. Clarendon.

Tom made love to a woman of sense, and always treated her as such during the whole time ofcourtship. B. Johnson. He hindered him from doing any thing disagreeable, as his sincerity and frankness of behaviour made him converse with her before he was in a manner he knew would be afterwards. Add. Guard.

2. Liberality; bounteouness.

He delivered with the frankness of a friend's tongue, word by word, what Kalendar had told him touching the strange story. Sidney.

The ablest men that ever were, had not all an openness and frankness of dealing, and a name of certainty and veracity. Addison.

3. Freedom from reserve.

He delivered with the frankness of a friend's tongue, word by word, what Kalendar had told him touching the strange story. Sidney.

The ablest men that ever were, had not all an openness and frankness of dealing, and a name of certainty and veracity. Addison.

Frankly. adv. [from frank.]
1. Madly; distractedly; outrageously.

Fie, fie, how frantickly I square my talk. Shak.

Frandickness. n. s. [from frank.]
1. Madness; fury of passion; distraction.

Fraternal. adj. [frater, Fr. fratervs, Lat.] Brotherly; pertaining to brothers; becoming brothers.

One shall arise
Of proud ambitious heart; who, not content
With fair equality, fraternal state,
Will arrogate dominion undeserved
Over his brethren. Milton's Paradise Lost.

The admonitions, fraternal or paternal, of his fellow dominion, the governors of the church, then more publick reprehensions; and upon their unsuccessfulness, the censures of the church, united against it, and return. Hammond.

Fraternal. adv. [from fraternal.]
1. With all the strength and heats of eloquence Fraternal love and friendship can inspire. Addison.

Fraternally. adv. [from fraternal.]
1. In a brotherly manner.

Fraternity. n. s. [fratinit, Fr. fratervitas, Lat.]
1. The state or quality of a brother.

2. Body of men united; corporation; society; association; brotherhood.

'Tis a necessary rule in alliances, societies, and fraternities, and all manner of civil contracts, to have a great regard to the honour of those we have to do withal. L'Esprince.

3. Men of the same class or character.

With what terms of respect knaves and sots will speak of their own fraternities. South's Sermons.

Fra triciud. n. s. [fratricidium, Fr. fratricidium, Lat.] The murder of a brother.

Faud. n. s. [fraus, Lat. fraud, F.]
Deceit; cheat; trick; artifice; subtlety; stratagem.

Our better part remains
To work in close design, by fraud or guile,
With force effectual not. Milton.

None need the friens of aly Ulysses fear. Dryd.

If success a lover's fond attends,
Who asks if force or fraud adorns his ends. Pope.
FRAUDFUL. adj. [fraud and full.] Trencherous; artful; trickish; deceitful; subtle.

The welfare of us all
Hangs on the cutting short that fraudulent man.

Shakesp., Henry VI.

He, full of fraudulent arts
This well-invented tale for truth imparts.

Drayton.

FRAUDULLY. adv. [from fraudulent.] Deceitfully; artfully; subtly; treacherously; but by stratagem.

FRAUDULIENCE. n. s. [fraudulentia, fraudulently.] Deceitfulness; trickishness; promiscuous to artifice.

We advise the Providence of God in the continuance of Scripture, notwithstanding the endowments of infants to abolish, and the fraudulence of heretics always to deprave the same.

Hooker.

FRAUDULENTLY. adv. [from fraudulent.] By fraud; by deceit; by artifice; deceitfully.

He that beat word, or sign, either fraudulently or falsely, does hurt to his neighbour, and is bound to make restitution.

Taylor.

FRAUGHT, particip. pass. [from fraught, now written freight.] 1. Laden; charged.

In the narrow seas that part
The French and English there miscarried
A vessel of our country, richly fraught.

Shakesp. Winter's Tale.

With joy
And tidings fraught, to hell he now return'd.

Milton's Par. Lost.

And now approach'd their fleet from India,
With all the riches of the rising sun,
And precious sand from southern climates brought.

Drayton.

2. Filled; stored; thronged.
The Scripture is fraught even with laws of nature.

Hooker.

By this sad Una, fraught with anguish sore
Arrived, where they in earth their blood had split.

Spenner.

I am so fraught with curious business, that I leave out ceremony.

Shakesp. Winter's Tale.

Whosoever hath his mind fraught with many thoughts, his wits and understanding do clarify and break up in the communicating and discoursing with another.

Boein.

Hell, their fit habitation, fraught with fire.

Unquestionable, the house of woe and pain.

Milton.

Abraham and Belforn were so fraught with all kinds of knowledge, and possessed with so constant a passion for each other, that their solitude never lay heavy on them.

Addison.

FRAUGHT. n. s. [from the participle.] A freight; a cargo.

Yield up, oh love, thy crown and parted throne
To tyrannous hate! swell, bosom, with thy fraught;

For this incensed
Shakesp. Othello.

The bark that all our blessings brought,
Charg'd with thyself and James, a doubly royal prize.

Dryd.

To FRAUGHT. v. a. [for freight, by corruption.] To load; to crowd.

Hence from my sight:
If after this command thou fraught the court
With thy unworthiness, thou dy'st.

Shakesp. Cymb.
FRÆ

CASTALIO, I have doubts within my heart;
Will you be free and caudial to your friend? Otsay.
Acquainted; conversing without reserve.

1. To say my feelings are a well, loves company, is free of speech, plays, sings, and dances well,
So wise, these make more virtue. Shak.
Being one, say very free, at great heart. He suddenly breaks forth with great laughter. Hakewell.
Free and familiar with misfortune grow,
Bewail to sorrow, and joyful to see.

6. Liberal; not parsimonious: with of,
O'changing your free purse with large fines,
That seeks to overthrow religion. Shakesp.
Next in his favour says,
How free or frugal I shall pass my days;
I, who at some times spend as others spare. Pope.

An Alexandrian verses, of twelve syllables, should never be allowed but when some remarkable beauty or propriety in them attunes for the liberty:
Mr. Dryden has been too free of these in his latter works.

9. Frank; not gained by importunity; not purchased.
We wanted words to express our thanks: his noble free offers left us nothing to ask. Bacon.

10. Clear from distress,
Making mud, the guilty, and appel the free,
Confirmed the ignorant. Shakesp. Hamlet.
My hands are guilty, but my heart is free. Dryden.

11. Guiltless; innocent,
Make mad the guilty, and appall the free,
Confounded the ignorant. Shakesp. Hamlet.
Their seeds around,
Free from the barren, great flow'ry ground.
Shakesp.
The will, free from the determination of such desires, is left to the pursuit of nearer satisfactions. Locke.

12. Exempt; with of; more properly from.
These are such say'd infamies, that honesty is never free of.
Shakesp. Winter's Tale.
Who fears not to do ill, yet fears the name:
And free from conscience, is a slave to fame. Dryden.
Let envy, then, those crimes within you see,
From which the happy never must be free. Dryden.

Thee, and their
Free from the barren, great flow'ry ground.
Shakesp.
The will, free from the determination of such desires, is left to the pursuit of nearer satisfactions. Locke.

13. Invested with franchises; possessing anything without vassalage; admitted to the privileges of any body: with of.
He therefore makes all birds of every sect free of his favor and protection, not to party to the anger of the king, nor guilty of,
If any be, the trespass of the queen. Shakesp.
He recovered the temple, freed the city, and upheld the laws which were going down.

2. Can't thou on no other master understand,
Than him that free'd thee by the prudent wand? Dryden.

Should thy coward tongue
Spread its diffidence through the martial throng,
My javelin shall revenge so base a part,
And free the soul that quivers in thy heart. Pope.

3. To ride from; to clear from any thing ill: with of or from.
It is so marvellous, that he could think of no better way to be free'd of these inconveniences the passions of those meetings gave him, to dissolve them. Clarendon.

Hercules.
Free'd Erymanthus from the foaming boar. Dryden.
Our land is from the rage of tyrant freed. Dryden.

3. To clear from impediments or obstructions.
The chaste Sylla shall your steps convey,
And blood of offer'd victims free the way. Dryden.
Fierce was the fight; but hastening to his prey,
By force the furious lover freed his way. Dryden.

This master-key
Frees every lock, and leads us to his person. Dryden.

4. To banish; to send away; to rid.
Not in use.
We may again
Give to our tables meat, sleep to our nights,
Free from our feasts and banquet flowers bloomy knives.
Never any Sabbath of release
Could free his travels and affections deep. Daniel. Shakesp.

5. To exempt.
For he that is dead is free'd from sin. Rom. vi. 7.

FREEO'TED. n. s. [free and footed.]
A robber; a plunderer; a pillager. Perkin was not followed by any English name, his followers consisted mostly of base people and freebooters, fit to soil a coast than to recover a kingdom.

Bacon.
The earl of Warwick had, as often as he met with any Irish frigates, or such freebooters as sailed under their commission, taken all the seamen.

Clarendon.

FREEO'TING. n. s. Robbery; plunder; the act of pillaging.
Under it he may cleanly convey any fit pillage, that cometh handomely in his way; and when he goeth abroad in the night on freebooting, it is his best and surest friend.

FREEO'BORN. n. s. [free and born.]
Not a slave; inheriting liberty.
O baseness, to support a tyrant's throne,
And crush your free-born brethren of the world!

Dryden.
I shall speak my thoughts like a free-born subject, such things perhaps as no Dutch commentator could, and I am sure no Frenchman durst. Dryden.

Shall free-born men, in humble awe,
Submit to servile shame;
Who from exorbitant custom draw
The same right to be ruled by law,
Whose kings pretend to reign?

Dryden.

FREEO'CHAPPEL. n. s. [free and chappell.]
Such chappells are as are of the king's foundations, and by him exempted from the jurisdiction of the ordinary. The king may also license a subject to found such a chappell, and by his charter exempt it from the ordinary's visitation. Covel.

FREEO'CO'ST. n. s. [free and cost.]
Without expense; free from charges.
We must not vouch any man for an exact master in the rules of our modern policy, but such a one as has brought himself so far to hate and despise the absurdity of being kind upon freecost, as not so much as to tell a friend what it is o'clock for nothing.

SOUTH.

FREEO'MAN. n. s. [frecd and man.]
A slave manumitted.
The free-born, and will be preferr'd;
First come, first serv'd, he cries. Dryden's Juvenal.

FREEO'MOM. n. s. [from free.]
1. Liberty; exemption from servitude; independence.
The laws themselves do specially rage at, as most repugnant to their liberty and natural freedom. Spenser on Ireland.
O freedom! first delight of human kind!
Not that which bondmen from their masters fists,

FRE.

The privilege of churls; nor yet to inscribe
Their names in this of other Roman tribe;
That false enfranchisement with ease is found;
Slaves are made citizens by turning round. Dryden.

Privileges; franchises; immunities.
By our holy Sabbath have I sworn.
To have the due and forfeit of my bond.
If you deny it, let the danger light
Upon your charter, and your God's freedom, Shak.

This prince first gave freedom to servants, so as to become citizens of equal privileges with the rest, which very much increased the power of the people.

Swift.

4. Exception from fate, necessity, or pre-determination.
I love most change.
Their nature, and envoke the high degree
Uncorrigible, eternal, which ordain'd
Their freedom; they themselves ordain'd their fall.

Milton.
In every sin, by how much the more free will is in its choice, by so much is the act more sinful; and where there is nothing to importune, urge, or provoke the will to any act, there is so much an higher and perfecter degree of freedom about that act.

South.

5. Unrestraint.
I will that all the feasts and sabbaths shall be all days of immunity and freedom for the Jews in all the South.

6. The state of being without any particular evil or inconvenience.
The freedom of their state lays them under a great necessity of always abusing and doing the greatest.

Law.

7. Ease and facility in doing or showing anything.
FREEO'TED. adj. [free and foot.
Not restrained in the march.
We will setters put upon this fear,
Which now goes too free'ted. Shakesp. Hamlet.

FREEO'ARTED. adj. [free and heart.
Liberal; unrestrained.
Love must free'arted be, and voluntary:
And not inbent, or by fate constraint. Davin.

FREEO'HOL. n. s. [free and hold.
That land or tenement which a man holdeth in fee, fee-tail, or for term of life. Freedom in deed is the real possession of lands or tenements in fee, fee-tail, or for life. Freedom in law is the right that a man has to such land or tenements before his entry or seizure. Freedom is sometimes taken in opposition to vellage. Land, in the time of the Saxons, was called either hockland, that is, holden by book or writing, or foreland, that is, holden, without writing. The former was held by far better conditions, and by the better sort of tenants, as noblemen and gentlemen, being such as we now call freehold. The latter was commonly in the possession of clowns, being that which we now call at the will of the lord. Covel.

No alienation of lands holden in chief should be available, touching the freedom or inheritance thereof, but only where it was made by matter of right, or by Act of Parliament.

There is an unspeakable pleasure in calling any thing gave-down: a freehold, though it be but ice in snow, will make the country pleased in the possession, and stout in the defence of it. Addison.

My friends here are very few, and fixed to the place, and do not wish anything but death will remove them.

Swift.

I should be glad to possess a freehold that could not be taken from me by any law to which I did not give consent.

Swift.
To give a civil education to the youth of this land in the time to come, provision was made by another law, that there should be one freehold at least erected in every parish; and the freeholders were to be as many as the number of the English seamen and sailors holding the small seafarers; a gentleman who happened to have a better understanding than his neighbours, procured the place for himself and his heirs.

To FREIGHT. v. a. freighted; part, freight; which being now used as an adjective, freighted is adopted. [fretter, Fr.]

1. To load a ship or vessel of carriage for goods for transportation.

The pins
Have to the part Athens sent their ships,
With the minsters and instruments
Nor is, indeed, that man less mad than these,
Who freight a ship to venture on the seas;
With one frail interposing plank to save
From certain death, set on by every stray. Dryd.
Frighted with iron, from my native land
I steer my voyage. Pope's Odyssey.

2. To load as the burthen; to be the thing with which a vessel is freighted.

Without any thing with which a ship is loaded.
He clears the deck, receives the nightly freight;
The leaky vessel grinds beneath the weight. Dryd.

To FREIGHTED. n. s. fretter, Fr.
He who freighted a vessel.

FREN. n. s. A stranger. An old word wholly forgotten here; but retained in Scotland.
But now from me his madding mind is start,
And woes the widow's daughter of the glen;
And now fair Rosedale hath bred his heart,
So now his friend is changed for a frc. Spencer.

FRENCH Chalk, n. s.
French chalk is an indurated clay, extremely dense, of a smooth glossy surface, and soft and unctuous to the touch; of a greyish white colour, variegated with a dusky green. HILL.

French chalk is a touch to the touch, as stingers is to pins, and harder and nearer approaching the consistence of stone. If soad.

To FRENSH. v. a. [from French.]
To infect with the manner of France; to make a coxcomb.
They mislike nothing more in King Edward the Conditor than that he was frenched; and accounted the desire of foreign language then to be a forefront of bringing in foreign powers, which indeed happened. London's Taleman.

Has he familiarly dislik'd your yellow starbuck, or said your doubled?

FRENZY. n. s. [epilepsy; phrenitis, Lat. whence phrenetis, phrenyx, phreny, or frenzy.] Madness; distraction of mind; alienation of understanding; any violent passion approaching to madness. That knave, Ford, hath the first mad devil of jealousy in him that ever governed frenzy. Shakesp.
True fortitude is seen in great exploits, That temperance, and that wisdom guides; All else is touring frenzy and distraction. Addison.

Why such a disposition of the body includeth sleep, and distracts all the operations of the soul, and occasionally a lethargy or frenzy, this knowledge exceeds our narrow faculties. Bent.

FREQUENCY. n. s. [frequent, Fr. frequentia, Lat.] Crowd; concourse; assembly.

The frequency of degree, From high to low throughout. Shakspe., Timon. He, in full frequency bright Of all the tuneful maenads. Milton.

FREQUENCY. n. s. [frequentia, Lat.]

1. Common occurrence; the condition of being often seen or done. Should a miracle be attributed to one, others would think it not capable of being so. Franklin.

2. Frequent; full assembly. Thou canst as well come into this senate: who of such a frequency, so many friends, and kindled thou hast hither, solaced thee? Ben Jonson.

FREQUENT. adj. [frequent, Fr. frequens, Lat.]

1. Often done; often seen; often occurring. The frequent these times are, the better, Duty of Man.

2. Used often to practise any thing. The Christians of the first times were generally frequent, and the first are the best. Dryd.

3. Of full concourse. Every man thinks he may pretend to any employment, provided he has been loud and frequent in declaring himself hearty for the government.

To FREQUENT. v. a. [frequent, Lat. frequentar, Fr. frequenter, Lat.] To visit often; to be much in any place; to resort often to. They in latter day, Finding in it its ports for fishes trade. Cowper.

There were synagogues for men to resort unto: our Saviour himself and the apostles frequenting them. Ferrier.

This fellow here, this thy creature, By night frequent his house. Shakspe, Timon.

At that time this land was known and frequented by the ships and vessels. Bacon.

With tears Waiting the ground, and with our sighs the air Frequenting, sent from hearts contente, in sign Of sorrow unfign'd, and humiliation meit. Milton.

To serve my friends, the senate I frequent; And there what I before digested, vent. Dryd.

That he frequenting the court of Augustus, and was well received in it, is most undoubted. Dryd.

FREQUENTABLE. adj. [from frequent.] Conversable; accessible. A word not now used, but not inelegant. While youth lasted in him, the exercises of that age and his humour not yet fully discovered, made him somewhat the more frequentable and less dangerous. Dryd.

FREQUENTATIVE. adj. [frequentativus, Lat.] A grammatical term applied to verbs, signifying the frequent repetition of an action.

FREQUENTER. n. s. [from frequent.] One who often resorts to any place. Persons under bad imputations are no great frequenters of churches. Swift.

FREQUENTLY. adv. [frequenter, Lat.]

Often; commonly; not rarely; not seldom; a considerable number of times; manifold times. I could not, without much anguish, observe how often both of my friends and ladies are at a loss for questions and answers. Swift.

FRESH. n. s. [from fresh.]

1. Coolness; shade; dizziness; like that of the evening or morning. Heilis sprints. Love more the freshness of the nights. Prior.

2. A picture not drawn in glaring light, but in dusk. Here thy well-studied marble fix our eye; A fading fresco here demands a sigh. Pope.

FRESHLY adv. [from fresh.]

1. Coolly. The freshest breeze. They are now freshly in difference with them. Bacon.

2. With a healthy look; ruddily. Looks he as freshly as he did the day he wrestled! Shakspe.

FRESHNESS. n. s. [from fresh.]

1. Newness; vigour; spirit; the contrary to vapidity. Most odours smell best broken or crushed; but flowers pressed or beaten, do lose the freshness and sweetness of their odour. Bacon.

2. Freedom from diminution by time; not staledness. For the constant freshness of it, it is such a pleasure as can never cloy or overwork the mind; for surely no man was ever weary of thinking, that he had done well or virtuously. South.

3. Freedom from fatigue; newness of strength. The Scots had the advantage both for number and freshness of men. Haydow.

4. Coolness; freshness. There are some rooms in Italy and Spain for freshness, and gathering the winds and air in the midst of Summer; but they are but pennings of the winds, and enlarging them again, and making them reverberate in circles. Bacon.

Say, if she please, she will repair, And breathe the freshness of the open air. Dryd.

And to the winds expost glorying breast, To take the freshness of the morning air. Addison.

5. Ruddliness; colour of health. The secret venom, as the best in men, Works through her skin, and bursts in boiling stains; Her cheeks their freshness lose and wasted, And an unusual paleness spreads her face. Gray.

6. Freedom from saltiness. Freshwater. [A compound word of fresh and water, used as an adjective.] Raw; unskilled; unacquainted. A low term borrowed from the sailors, who stigmatise those who come first to sea as freshwater men, or novices.

These nobility, as the freshwater soldiers which had never seen but some light skirmishes, in their vain bravery made light account of the Turks. Knolles.

FRET. n. s. [Of this word the etymology is very doubtful; some derive it from pretan to eat; others from preata to adorn; some from φερτον; Skinner more probably from fero, or the French fretiller: perhaps it comes immediately from the Lat. frettum.

1. A frith, or strait of the sea, where the water by confinement is always rough.

2. Any agitation of liquors by fermentation, confinement, or other cause.

3. That stop of the musical instrument which causes or regulates the vibrations of the strings.

4. Work rising in protruberances.

5. Agitation of the mind; commotion of temper; passion.

Calmness is great advantage: he that lets another chafe, may warm him at his fire. Mark all his wandring, and enjoy his frets. As cunning fencers suffer heat to tire. Herbert.

2. To wear away by rubbing.

Till they have fretted us a pair of graves within the earth. Shak. Rich. II.

In the rivers of rivers, with the washing of the water, there were divers times fretted or broken pieces of gold. Abbott.

3. To hurt by attrition.

Is valiant and deserted; and, by starts, his fretted fortunes give him hope and fear. Of what else has and has not. Shak. Ant. and Cleop.

4. To carry off to eat away.

It is fret inward, whether it be bare within or without. Lor. xiii. 55.
FR I

1. The act of rubbing two bodies together.
   Do not all bodies which abound with terrestrial parts, and especially with sulphureous ones, emit light as often as those parts are sufficiently agitated, whether they be made by heat, friction, percussion, putrefaction, or by any vital motion? Neutron's Optics.

2. The resistance in machines caused by the motion of one body upon another.
   Medical rubbing with the flesh of a horse or other animal.

3. Medical rubbing with the flesh of one horse or other animal.
   Friction makes the parts more flexible and pliable, as we see both in men and in the carriage of horses, so that they draw a greater quantity of spirits to the parts.

FRIDAY. n.s. [fryd ee. Sax.] The sixth day of the week, so named of Freya, a Saxon deity.

An' she was not kin to me, she would be as fair on Freshwater as Helen is on Sunday.

For Venus, like her day, will change her cheer.

And seldom shall we see a Friday clear. Dryden.

FRIEND. n.s. [friend, Dut. vriend, Sax.] This word, with its derivatives, is pronounced friend; friendly: the i of friend is often neglected.

1. One joined to another in mutual benevolence and intimacy; opposed to foe or enemy.
   Friends of my soul, you twain
   Rule in this realm, and the god's state sustain.
   Shaks.
   Some man is a friend for his own occasion, and will not abide in the day of trouble. Eccl. viii. 6.
   God's benison go with you, and with those who would make good of bad, and friends of foes.
   Shaks.
   Wonder not to see this soul extend
   The bounds, and seek some other self, n'tfriend. Dry.

2. One without hostile intentions.
   Who comes so fast in silence of the night?
   —A friend.
   —What friend? your mune.
   Shaks.

3. One reconciled to another; this is put by the custom of the language somewhat irregularly in the plural number.
   He's friends with Caesar,
   In state of health thou say'st, and then say'st thee,
   With much delight the same.
   Shaks.

4. An attendant or companion.
   The king orders his train, and ascends his regal seat, surrounded by his friends. Dryden.

5. Favourer; one propitious.
   Aurora rising upon Pegram sheweth her swiftness,
   And how she is a friend to poetry and all ingenious inventions.
   Pausam.

6. A familiar companion.
   Friend, how camest thou in hither? Mat. xxiii. 12.
   What supports me, dost thou ask?
   The confidence, friend, have lost mine eyes in her.
   In liberty's defence, Milton.

To FRIEND. v. a. [from the noun.] To favour; to befriend; to countenance; to support.
   If not in friendship, live at least in peace. Dryden.
   Thou couldst not have been a better friend.
   Shaks.

FRIENDEN. adj. Well disposed; inclined to love.

Not his friends by his wish to his high person,
   His will is most malignant, and it stretches
   Beyond you to your friends.
   Shaks.

FRIENDLESS. adj. [from friend.] 1. Wanting friends; wanting support; without countenance; destitute; forlorn.
F R I

The rugged breas', or spotted lynx's brood,
Freight the valleys and infest the wood.Prior.
FRIGHTFUL. adj. [from fright.]
1. Terrible; dreadful; full of terror.
Tetchy and wayward was thy infancy,
Thy smiling days a frightful, desolate, wild, and furious.
Shakespeare.
Without aid you durst not undertake
This frightful passage o'th' Stygian fake, Dryden.
2. A caution among women for any thing unpleasing.
FRIGHTFULLY. adv. [from frightful.]
1. Dreadfully; horribly.
This will make a prodigious mass of water, and is frightfully to the imagination; 'tis huge and great.
Bunyan.
2. Disagreeably; not beautifully. A woman's word.
Then to her glass; and Betty, pray,
Don't I look frightfully to-day?
Swift.
FRIGHTFULNESS. n. s. [from frightful.]
The power of impressing terror.
FRIGID. adj. [frigidus, Lat.]
1. Cold; wanting warmth. In this sense it is seldom used but in science.
In the torrid zone the heat would have been intolerable, and in the frigid zones the cold would have destroyed both animals and vegetables.
Chambers' Phil. Price.
2. Wanting warmth of affection.
As justice Phillips's coarse head
Some frightful thoughts aslumber.
They shall be Persian tales to read, and glad both babies and nurses.
Swift.
FRIGIDITY. n. s. [frigida, Lat.]
1. Coldness; want of warmth.
2. Dullness; want of intellectual fire.
Driving at these as at the highest elegancies, which are but the frigidities of wit.
Brown's V. Err. of the two extremes, one would sooner pardon phreny than frigidity.
Pope.
3. Want of corporeal warmth.
The boiling blood of youth hindereth that sensibility which is necessary to so severe intenseness; and the frigidity of the intellect as much as its sensibility is injured, by reason of its dulness amounting.
Clemens's Deesp.
4. Coldness of affection.
FRIGIDLY. adv. [from frigid.]
Coldly; dully; without affection.
FRIGIDNESS. n. s. [from frigid.]
Coldness; dullness; want of affection.
FRIGORIFIC. adj. [frigorificus, frigus and facio, Lat.]
Causing cold. A word used in science.
Frigorific atoms or particles mean those nitrous sublimes which float in the air under cold weather, and occasion freezing.
Quincey.
To FRILL. v. n. (from frollae, Fr.) To quack or shiver with cold. Used of a hawk; as the hawk frills.
Diet.
FRINGE. n. s. [frigja, Ital. frigo, Fr.]
Ornamental appendages added to dress or furniture. It is in conversation used to denote separate threads.
These offices and dignities were but the falsities or fringes of his greatness.
Wotton.
The golden fringe ev'n set the ground on flame.
And doting on a precious trull.
Dryd. Flower and Leaf.
The shadows of all bodies, in this light, were bordered with three parallel fringes, or bands of colour, which was so contiguous to the shadow was broadest and most luminous; and that which was remotest from it was narrowest, and so faint as not easily to be visible.
Newton's Opticks.
To FRINGE. v. a. [from the noun.]
To adorn with fringes; to decorate with ornamental appendages.
Either side of the bank, fringed with most beautiful trees, resisted the sun's darts.
Sidney.
Of silver wings he took a shining pair,
Fringed with gold and silver.
Foras.
Here, by the sacred shining tinde, my petition is doubly fringed.
Swift.
FRIPPERER. n. s. [from friper, Fr.]
One who deals in old things vamp'd-up.
FRIPPERY. n. s. [friperie, Fr. fripperie, Ital.]
The place where old clothes are sold.
1. The place where old clothes are sold.
Larum is a frippery of bankrupts, who fly thither from Drains to play their after-game.
Flower.
2. Old clothes; cast dresses; tattered rags.
The fighting-place now seems no savage rage.
And all the tackling is a frippery.
Dana.
Regate is a place in the Tower of London, where old clothes and frippery are sold.
Pope.
To FRISK. v. n. [frizzare, Ital.]
1. To leap; to skip.
Put water into a glass, and wet your finger, and draw it round about the lip of the glass, pressing it somewhat, so as to bring it some few times about it, will make the water frisk, and spring up into a fine dew.
Bacon's Nat. Hist.
The wind in the est. L'Entrage.
Watching every one hath experienced this troublesome intrusion of some frisking idées, which thus impede the understanding, and hinder it from being better employed, I know not.
Leake.
2. To dance in frolick or gaiety.
We are as twin'd lambs, that did frisk i' th' sun,
And blew the one at the other; what we chang'd,
Was innocence and innocence; we knew not.
The doctrine of ill-doing.
Shakespeare.
To about them frisking play.
All beasts of the earth.
Milton's Paradise Lost.
A wanton heifer frisk'd up and down in a meadow, as ease and pleasure.
L'Entrage.
Then sever their fury with the rushing male.
Dryd.
So Bacchus through the conquer'd Indus rode,
And breathes in gambals frisk'd before the honor'd god.
Dryd.
Oft to the mountains airy tops advanc'd,
The frisking satyr's on the summits dance'd.
Add.s.
Those merry souls,
That frisk it under Pandas' shades.
Prior.
Frolick.
Fingles at the sound of an organ, and yet will dance and frok it a la bagpipe.
Arth.
Hy hunters thus, in Borne'se's tale,
To catch a monkey by a wile,
The minikick animal amuse
They place before him gloves and shoes;
Which when the brute puts awkward on,
All his agility gone.
In vain to frisk or clumb he tries;
The huntsmen seize the ginning prize.
Swift.
FRISK. n. s. [from the verb.] A frolick; a fit of wanton gaiety.
FRISKER. n. s. [from frisk.] A wanton; one not constant or settled.
Now I will wear this, and now I will wear that;
Now I will wear it that I cannot call what.
All new fashions be pleasant to me.
Now I am a frischer, all men on me look;
What should I do but set cock on the hup's green.
Swift.
FRISKINESS. n. s. [from frisk.] Gaiety; liveliness. A low word.
FRISKY. adj. [frise, Fr. from frisk.] Gay; airy. A low word.
FRICTION. n. s. [among chemists.] Ashes or salt baked or fried together with sand.
FRIENT. n. s. [from frictum, Lat.]
To FRIZE. v. a. [from friser, Fr.]
To curl in short curls like nap of frieze.
David celebrates the glory of God from the consideration of the greatness of his works. Tilton. We thank God from the bottom of our hearts.

Grieve for her sorrow, grieve for her despair. Prior.

Relaxation from peregrine is caused by spare diet, and from any cause by which that is contrary to it. Jonathan Swift. On the Hermit of Almas.

12. Of. Noting the ground or cause of any thing.

By the sacred radiance of the sun, The mysteries of Hecate, and the night; By all the operations of the orb of day, From whom we do exist, and cease to be, Here I disclaim all my paternal care. Shakespeare. I believe that the passages which arise from Valour are appropriate to those which proceed from any other virtues, have not considered.

Dryden. Entertainment can be raised from so pitiful a machine! We see the success of the battle from the very beginning.

Dryden. "Tis true, from force the strongest tile springs, I therefore hold from that which first made kings.

Dryden.

13. Not near to; noting distance.

His regimen lies half a mile at least South from the magnificent power of the king. Shakespeare. From whom we do exist, and cease to be, Here I disclaim all my paternal care. Shakespeare. I believe that the passages which arise from Valour are appropriate to those which proceed from any other virtues, have not considered.

Dryden. Entertainment can be raised from so pitiful a machine! We see the success of the battle from the very beginning.

Dryden. "Tis true, from force the strongest tile springs, I therefore hold from that which first made kings.

Dryden.

15. Noting exemption or deliverance.

From jealousy's tormenting strife, For ever be thy bosom free'd.

Prior.

Our father he hath writ, so hath our sister, Of differences, which I best thought it fit To answer from our house. Shakespeare. King Lear.

17. Noting derivation.

I lay the deep foundations of a wall, And Etos, nain'd me, the city, call'd Dryden.

The flood was not the cause of mountains, but there were mountains from the creation. Religie. I had from my childhood a wart upon one of my fingers. Bacon. The other had been trained up from his youth in the war of Flanders. Clarendon. The milk of tygers was his infant food, Taught from his tender years the taste of blood.

Dryden. Were there, from all eternity, no memorable actions done 'till about that time? Tillopton.

Anything so overdone is to the purpose of playing; whose end, both at the first and now, was and is to hold, as 'twere, the mirror up to nature. Dryden. Do not believe, That from the sense of all civility, I thus would play and strive with you reverence.

Shakespeare. Hamlet. No. Did you draw hands to forget? Sign, to break, or must we read you quite from what we speak, And find the truth out the wrong way? Donna.

Tires from the ground she leap'd. Dryden.

21. From. Very frequently joined by an ellipsis with adverbs: as, from above, from the parts above; from below, from the places below; of which some are here exemplified.

22. From above.

He, which gave them from above such power, for miraculous confirmations from that which they taught, ended them also with wisdom from above, to teach that which they did confound. Hooker. No sooner were his eyes inhuman and demoniz'd. When, from above, a more than mortal sound Induces his ears. Dryden. Anemic.

23. From afar.

Light diminutions from afar they throw. Dryden.

24. From beneath.

Frolick. n. s. [frolick.] 1. A dress; a coat.

Frolicksomeness. n. s. [frolicksome.] Wildness of gaiety; pranks.

Frolicksome. adj. [from frolick.] Full of wild gaiety.

1. Away; noting privation.

2. Noting reception.

3. Noting abstraction or vaction.

5. Of; noting premisses from inferences.

6. With; following to succession.

7. Of; noting emission.

8. Noting progression from premises to inferences.

9. Noting the place or person from whom a message is brought.

10. Out of; noting extraction.

11. Because of. Noting the reason or motive of an act or effect.

12. Of. Noting the ground or cause of any thing.

13. Not near to; noting distance.

15. Noting exemption or deliverance.

17. Noting derivation.

21. From. Very frequently joined by an ellipsis with adverbs: as, from above, from the parts above; from below, from the places below; of which some are here exemplified.

22. From above.

23. From afar.

24. From beneath.
The square will be one of the most beautiful in Italy when this statue is erected, and a town house built one at end to front the church that stands at the other.

Addison on Italy.

To FRONT. n. To stand foremost.

I front but in that file.

Where others tell steps with me. Shak. Hen. VII

Frontal n.s. [frontale, Lat. frontal, Fr.] Any external form of medicine to be applied to the forehead, generally composed among the ancients of coolers and hypo-salts.

Quinsey.

We are apt to over-estimate the number of mastics: frontales may also be applied. Wiedman.

The torpedo, alive, stumped at a distance; but after dead proceeds in the same direction; which had they retained, they might have supplied opium, and served as frontales in phrenesis.

Brown.

Frontated. adj. [from frontal, Lat.] In botany, the frontated leaf of a flower grows broader and broader, and at last perhaps terminates in a narrow line, used in opposition to cuspated, which is, when the leaves of a flower end in a point.

Quinsey.

Frontal box. n.s. [front and box.] The box in the playhouse from which there is a direct view to the stage.

How vain are all these stories, all our pains, Unless good sense preserve what beauty gains! Then may we say, when we the frontal grace, Behold the first in virtue, as in face. Pope.

Fronted. adj. [from frontal] Formed with a front.

Part frontal brigades form. Milton.

Frontier. n.s. [frontiere, Fr.] The marches; the limit; the utmost verge or extension; a border; properly that which terminates not at the sea, but fronts another country.

Draw all the inhabitants of those borders away, or plant garrisons upon all those frontiers about him. Spenser on Ireland.

I upon my frontiers here keep residence.

That little which is left to defend. Milton.

Frontier. adj. Bordering; connibor.

A place there lies on Gallia's utmost bounds,
Which rising seas insult the empire. Add.

Frontispiece. n.s. [frontispicium, id quod in fronte conspicitur; frontispice, Fr.] That part of any building or other body that directly meets the eye.

With frontispiece of diamond and gold
Embellish'd, tick with sparkling orient gems.

The portal alone.

Milton's Paradise Lost.

Who is it has informed us that a rational soul can inhabit no tenement, unless it has just such a sort of frontispice of astonishment. Locke.

The frontispice of the townhouse has pillars of a beautiful black marble, streaked with white. Add.

Frontless. adj. [from frontal] Not blushing; wanting shame; void of diffidence. There, frontless man, we follow'd from afar.

Their instruments of death and tools of war. Dryden.

For vice, though not; and of hardened face, Is dammed at the sight of awful grace. Dryden.

Strike a blush through frontless beauty.

Pope.

Frontlet. n.s. [from frontal, Lat. fronteau, Fr.] A bandage worn upon the forehead.

How now, daughter, what makes that frontlet on you? You are too much of late i' th' front. Shak.

They shall be as frontals between thine eyes. Дент. vi. 8.

To the forehead frontlets were applied, to restrain and prevent the influx of Hairlock's shaggery.

Frontroom. n.s. [from room and.
An apartmen, in the forepart of the house.

If your shop stands in an eminent street, the frotroom are commonly more airy than the backrooms; and it will be inconvenient to make the frotroom, shallielow.

Morn. Morn.

FROE. adj. [berozen, Duf., frozen.

Frozen. This word was not used since the time of Milton.

The parching air
Burns froe, and cannot perform the effect of fire. Milton

FROESE. adj. [berozen, frozen, Duf., frozen; congealed with cold. Obsolete.

O, my heart-blood is now as right as froe I feel, and my galge gnow fast to my hee. Spenser's Past. Odes.

FROST. n. s. [froze, Sax.]

1. The last effect of cold; the power or act of congelation.

This is the state of man; to-day he does put forth
The tender leaves of hope, to-morrow blossoms bear our Hit is the day a frost, a killing frost,
And when he thinks, good easy man, full sorely
His generow is a ripening, nips his root,
And then he falls.

Shap. Henry VIII.

2. The appearance of plants and trees sparkling with congelation of dew.

Believe the groves that shine with silver frost.
Their beauty wither'd, and their verdure lost. Pope.

FROSTBITEN. adj. [frost and bitten.]

Nipped or withered by the frost.

The leaves are too much frost bitten. Mortimer.

FROSTED. adj. [from froest.]

Laid on in inequalities like those of the hoar frost upon plants.

The rich brocaded silk unfolded,
Where rising slow the froes still with froates gold. Gay.

FROSTILY. adv. [from frosty.]

1. With frost; with excessive cold.

2. Without warmth of affection.

Courting, I rather think'st utterly Disprivy my work, than praise it frostily. B. Jourson.

FROSTINESS. n. s. [from frosty.]

Cold; freezing cold.

FROSTNAIL. n. s. [from frost and nail.]

A nail with a prominent head driven into the horse's shoes, that may pierce the ice. The laws are strait only to take hold, for better progression; as a horse that is shod with frost nails.

Grew's Cosmol.

FROSTWORK. n. s. [frost and work.]

Work in which the substance is laid on with inequalities, like the dew congealed upon shrubs.

By nature shap'd to various figures, those
The fruitful rain, and those the hail compose;
The snowy fleece and curious frost work these,
Produce the dew, and those the gentle breeze. Black.

FROSTY. adj. [from frost.]

1. Having the power of congelation; excessive cold.

For even a breath in Rome's great quadril shed,
For all the frosty nights that I have wath'd,
Be pitiful to my condemned sons.-Shak. Tit. Androm.

The air, if very cold, irritate the flame, and make the fire burn more fiercely; as fire scorcheth in frosty weather. Barce.

A great half-starved with cold and hunger, went out one frosty morning to a bee hive. L'Espr.

2. Chill in affection; without warmth of kindness or courage.

What a frosty spirited rogue is this! Shakes.

FROW. n. s. [from frow.] Where is loyalty?

Frow it if he banish'd from the frosty hear.
As he will it find a harbour in the earth. Shak.

FROWTIL. n. s. [from Dun, and Scott.]

1. Spume; foam; the bubbles caused in liquids by agitation.

His hideous tail thus hurled he about
And therewith all envelop the nimble thighs
Of his froth steam'd at.

Every drop.

When wind expir'd from the under sea, as it causes some corresponding of the water, so it causes some light motions of the bubbles, and white circles of froth.

Bonon's Nat. Hist.

Surgins waves against a solid rock,
Though all to shivers dash'd, the assault renew'd.

Valiant, engraven in froths and bubbles, end, Milton.

The useless froth swins on the surface, but the pearl lies covered with a mass of waters. Gianote.

The scatter'd ocean flies:

Black sands, dissolud froth, mangled mud. Trac.

These were the froth my raging folly mood,
When it build'd up: I knew not then I lov'd,
Yet lov'd them most.

Dryden's Androgyn.

If now the colours of natural bodies are to be mingled, let water and snow be as thick as: agitated to raise a froth: and after that froth has stood a little, there will appear, to one that shall view it at a distance, the various colours in the surfaces of the bubbles; but to one that shall go so far off that he cannot distinguish the colour from the froth; the whole froth will be more white, with a perfect whiteness. Newton.

A painter, having finished the picture of a horse, exceeding the beauties of his subject and his brush; and after many unsuccessful essays, despairing to do that to his satisfaction, in a great rage threw a sponge at it, all besmeared with the colours, which, fortunately having upon the right place, by one bold stroke of chance most exactly supplied the want of skill in the artist. Bent. Serm.

2. Any empty or senseless show of wit or eloquence.

3. Any thing not hard, solid or substantial.

Who estish a veal, pig and lamb being froath.
Shal. twice in a week to go to bed without broth. Tuz.

To FROTH. v. a. [from the noun.] To foam; to throw out spume; to generate spume.

He fests within, froath treath at his mouth,
And churns it through his teeth. Dryden.

Excess mudds the best of wit, and only makes it flutter and froath high. Gray.

FROTHILY. adv. [from frothly.]

1. With froth, with spume.

2. In an empty trifling manner.

FROTHEN. adj. [from froth.]

1. Full of foam; froth, or spume.

The sap of trees is of differing natures; some watery and clear, as vines, beeches, pears; some thick, as apples; some gummy, as cherries; and some frothy, as elm.

Brown.

Behold a froth substance rise.

Be cautious, or your bottle flies.

2. Soft; not solid; wasting.

Their bodies are frothy and cold as you need not fear that burning should make them froth. Bac.

3. Vain; empty; trifling.

What a voluptuous dinner, and the frothy vanity
Of discourse. What is it but a mortification to a man of sense and virtue? L'Espr.

Every man, the principles of religion were never so clear and evident, yet they may be made ridiculous by vain and frothy men; as the gravest and wisest persons in the world may be abused by being put in a froth's coat.

Tolstoy.

FROWN. n. s. [from the verb.] A wrinkled look; a look of displeasure.

Patiently endure that frown of fortune, and by some notable exploit win again her favour. Childes

Prior. In his half-closed eyes, straining against the hard world stand; his brow yet threatens, and his frown's command.

FROWNINGLY. adv. [from frown.] Sternly; with a look of displeasure.

What, look'd he frowningly?

—A cantemence more sorrow in than anger. Shakes.
FRUITY.

FRUITY. n. s. [fruitier, Fr.] One who trades in fruit.
I o'd fight with one Sampson Stockfish, a fruitier, behind Gray's-inn.
Shakespeare. Henry IV.
Walnut in the fruitier's hand in Autumn fair; Blue plums and juicy pears augment his gain.
Gav.

FRUITY. n. s. [fruitier, Fr.]
1. Fruit collectively taken.
Oft, notwithstanding all thy care
To help thy plants, on the small fruitier
Except from ills, an oriental blast
Philips.

2. A fruit-loft; a repository for fruit.

FRUITFUL. adj. [fruit and full.]
1. Fertile; abundantly productive; liberal of vegetable product.
If she continued cruel, he could no more sustain his life than the earth remain fruitful in the sun's continual absence.
Sidney.

The Earth,
Though in comparison of Heaven so small;
Nor glittering, may of solid good contain
More plenty than the sun that harrows shines;
Whose virtue on itself works no effect,
And on the earth doth her own works.
Hilton.

2. Actually bearing fruit.
Adonis' gardens,
That one day bloom'd, and fruitful were the next.

3. Prolific; childbearing; not barren.
Hear, Nature, hear dear goddess, hear a father
Suspend thy purpose, if thou didst intend
To make this creature fruitful.
In her womb convey sterility.
Shakespeare. King Lear.

Male he created thee, but thy consort
Female for race; then bless'd mankind, and said,
Be fruitful, multiply, and fill the earth
Subdue it, and throughout dominion hold.
Hilton.

I have copied Nature, making the youths angrier and the damsel fruitful.
Shakespeare.

4. Plenteous; abounding in any thing.
While you, my lord, the rural shades admire,
And from Britannia publick posts retire,
Me into foreign realms my fate conveys.
Addison.

FRUITFULLY. adv. [from fruitful.]
1. In such a manner as to be prolific.
How sacred seeds of sea, and air, and earth,
And purer fire through universal night,
And empty space did fruitfully expansive Reason.

2. Plenteously; abundantly.
You have many opportunities to cut him off: if your will want not, time and place will be fruitfully offered.

FRUITFULNESS. n. s. [from fruitful.]
1. Fertility; fecundity; plenteous production.
Neither can we ascribe the same fruitfulness to any part of the earth, nor the same virtue to any plant therein growing, that they had before the flood.
Reynolds's History.

2. The quality of being prolific, or bearing many children.
The goddess, present at the match she made,
So blessed the bed, such fruitfulness convey'd
That ere ten months had sharpen'd either horn,
To crown their bliss, a lovely boy was born.
Dryden.

The remedy of fruitfulness is easy, but no labour will help the contrary: I will like and praise some things in a young writer, which yet, if he continues in it, I cannot but justly reprove him.
Ben Jonson's Discoveries.

FRUITGROVES. n. s. [fruit and groves.
Shades, or close plantations of fruit trees.
To tend the fruitgrovew.
T. Pope's Odyssey.
FRUITION. n. s. [fruor, Lat.] Enjoyment; possession; pleasure given by possession or use. Man doth not seem to rest satisfied either with fruition of that which his life is preserved, or with performance of such actions as advance him most deservedly in estimation. Hooker.

I am dr viv, by breath of her renown, Either to seek shipwreck, or to arrive. Where I may have fruition of her love. Shak. God rich and renown to men imports, Even all they wish; and yet their narrow hearts Cannot so greatly fancy receive, But their fruition to a stranger leave. Sanays. Wit, without, an unadorned, could find success; Till by fruition, novelty destroyed. The nymphe must find new charms to be enjoyed. Granville.

Affliction generally disables a man from pursuing those vices in which the guilt of men consists: if the afflictee be on his body, his appetites are weakened, and capacity of fruition destroyed. Roger's Sermons.

FRUITIVE. adj. [from the noun.] Enjoying; possessing; having the power of enjoyment. A word not legitimate. To whet our longings for fruition or experimental knowledge, it is reserved among the prerogatives of being in heaven, to know how happy we shall be, when there. Boyle.

FRUITLESS. adj. [from fruit.] 1. Barren of fruit; not bearing fruit. The Spaniards of Mexico, for the first forty years, could not make our kind of wheat bear seed; but it grew up as high as the trees, and was fruitless. Raleigh's History. 2. Vain; productive of no advantage; idle; unprofitable. Oh! let me not quoth be, return again. Back to the world, whose joys so fruitless are; But let me here for ay in peace remain, Or straightway on that last long voyage is. Spenser. Serpent! we might have sparring our coming ' hither. Fruitless to me, though fruit be here ' excess. Mil. The other is for entirely waving all searches into antiquity, in relation to this controversy, as being either fruitless or unprofitable. Waterland. 3. Having no offspring. Upon my head they plac'd a fruitless crown, And put a barren sceptre in my gripe; No son of mine succeedeth. Shak. Macbeth. FRUITLESSLY. adv. [from fruitless.] vainly; idly; unprofitably. After this fruitless curiosity fruitlessly enquireth, and confidence blindly determineth. Brow. Walking they talk'd, and fruitlessly divin'd What friend the priestess by those words design'd. Dryden. FRUIT-TIME. n. s. [fruit and time.] The Autumn; the time for gathering fruit. FRUITREE. n. s. [fruit and tree.] A tree of that kind whose principal value arises from the fruit produced by it. Lady, by yonder blessed moon I vow, That tips with silver all these fruitree tops, Shak. They were once houses full of good wells, digged, vineyards and olives, and fruittrees in abundance. Néx, 1. 25. All with a border of rich fruittrees crown'd, Whose loaded branches hide the lofty mound. Waller. FRUMENTACIOUS. adj. [from frumentum, Lat.] Made of grain. Dicit. FRUMENTY. n. s. [frumentum, corn, Lat.] Food made of wheat boiled in milk. To FRUMP. v. a. To mock; to browbeat. Skinner. FRUSTRATE. v. a. [from frustrare, Fr. To break, bruise, or crush. Hammer. I like thy armor well; I'll frustrate it, and under the rivets all, But I'll be master in it. Shak. FRUSHER. n. s. [from the verb.] A sort of tender horn that grows in the middle of the sole, and at some distance from the toe: it divides into two branches, running towards the heel, in the form of a fork. Farrier's Dict.

FRUSTRATE. v. a. [frustra, Lat.] Vain; useless; unprofitable; without advantage. Their attempts being so fruitless, and the demonstration to the contrary so perspicuous, it is a marvel that any man should be zealously affected in a cause that has neither truth nor any honest usefulness in it. More. He timely withdraws his fruitless bafled kindnesses, and sees the folly of endeavouring to stroke a tyrant into a laub, or to court an Eblis pin out of his color. South.

To FRUSTRATE. v. a. [frustra, Lat., frustrer, Fr.] 1. To defeat; to disappoint; to baulk. It is an axiom of nature, that natural desire cannot utterly be frustrated. Hooker. I survive, To mock the expectations of the world; To frustrate all species, and to raise out Rotten opinion. Shak. Henry IV. Stern look'd the freed, as frustrate his will; Not half suffic'd, and greedy yet to kill. Dryden. Not more almighty to resist our might, Than wise to frustrate all our pluts and wits. Mil. 2. To make null to nullify. The act of parliament which gave all his lands to the queen, did cut off and frustrate all those conveyances. Now thou hast aveng'd Supplant'd and ruin'd, and by vanquishing Temptation, hast gain'd that prodigious And frustrate the conquest fraudulent. Milton. The peculiar strength of the motive may of itself perhaps contribute to frustrate the efficacy of it, rendering it liable to be suspected by him to whom it is addressed. Atherbury.

FRUSTRATE. participial adj. [from the verb.] 1. Vain; ineffectual; useless; unprofitable. He is drown'd Whom thus we stray to find, and the sea mocks Our frustrate search on land. Shak. Tempest. The ruler of Judæa being by Julian besid'd in the re-ediifying of that temple, flaming balls of fire issuing near the foundation, and oft consuming the workmen, made the enterprise frustrate. Raleigh's History. All at once employ their thronging darts; But out of order thrown, in air they join, And multitude makes frustrate the design Dryden. 2. Null; void. Few things are so restrained to any one end or purpose, that the same being extinct, they should forthwith with by some frustrate. Hook. utter'd FRUSTRATION. n. s. [frustratio, Lat. from frustrate.] Disappointment; defeat. In states notoriously irreligious, a secret and irresistible power countermands their deepest projects, splits their resolutions, and smiled at or frustrated. Addison. In states of profound political disunion, we see the great body of mankind almost equally frustrate. Davenant. FRUSTRATIVE. adj. [from frustrate.] Falsacious; disappointing. Ausiworth. FRUSTRATORY. adj. [from frustrate.] That which makes any procedure void; that which vacates any former process. Bartolus restrains this to a frustratory appeal. Add.

from this day to that day, that it is a shame to be thought on.

F U G

Fug. n. s. A plump chubby boy. Ainur.

FUGATED. adj. [fugatus, Lat.]

1. Painted; disguised with paint.
2. Disguised by false show.

FUCUS. n. s. [Lat.] Paint for the face.

Not now in use.

Of this kind, and of that, Ben Jonson.

Those who paint for debauchery should have the fueus painted off, and the countenance understood discovered.

To FUDGLE. v. a. [Of unknown etymology.] To make drunk.

The table floating round, and pavement futile to the fudgled feet. Thom.

To FUDGLE, v. n. To drink to excess.

Men will be whoring and fuddling on still.

L'ESTRANGE.

FUEL. n. s. [from feu fire, Fr.] The matter or aliment of fire.

This shall be burning and fuel of fire. Is. ix. 5.

This spark will be a raging fire, if wind and fuel be brought to feed it. Shak.

Mover thy charms, with them thou love may cease;

And as the fuel sinks, the flame decrease. Prior.

To FUEL, v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To feed fire with combustible matter.

And yet she cannot write by this,

Nor long endure this torturing writing;

For more corruption needless is,

To fuel such a fever long.

Never, alas! the dreadful name

That feds the infernal flame. Dryden.

The fuel'd chimney blazes wide. Thomson.

2. To store with firing.

Some men think it economical, as that the sea be well watered, and well fuelled. Wallon's Architect.

FUEILLEMORTE. n. s. [Fr.] Corruptly pronounced and written philomote.

Fueillemore colour signifies the colour of withered leaves in Autumn.

FEGACIOUS. adj. [figur, figacis, Lat.]

Volatile.

FEGACIOUSNESS. n. s. [figur, Lat.] Volatility; the quality of flying away.

FUGACITY. n. s. [figur, Lat.]

1. Volatility; quality of flying away.

Spiritively, that is to say, by their propriety, colour, smell, taste, and divers experiments that properly made to examine them, were like the salt and spirits of urine and sour. Boyes.

2. Uncertainty; instability.

A very filthy fellow: how odiously he smells of his country garlic! fig. how he stinks of Spain! Dryden's Don Sebastian.

FUGITIVE. adj. [fugitiv, Fr. fugitivus, Lat.]

1. Not tenable; not to be held or detained.

Our idea of infinity is a growing and fugitive idea, still in a boundless progression, that can stop no where.

Happiness, object of that wakking dream.

Which we call life, mistaking; fugitive theme Of my pursuing verse, ideal shade,

National good. Fugacy only made. Prior.

2. Unsteady; unstable; not durable.

8. Volatile; apt to fly away.

The more tender and fugitive parts, the leaves, of many of the most sturdy vegetables, fall off for want of the supply from beneath; those only which are more tenacious, making a shift to subsist without such retreat. Woodward's Nat. Hist.

4. Flying; running from danger.

WHILST yet with Parthian blood thy sword is warm,

The fugitives Parthians follow, Shak. Ant. and Cleop.

The Trojan chief

Three fugitives about Troy wall.

5. Flying from duty; falling off.

Can a fugitive-daughter enjoy herself, while her parents are in these wars? Clariss.

6. Wandering; runnagate; vagabond.

The most refractory surmise was countermannered by a libellous pamphlet of a fugitive physician. Wotton.

FUGITIVE. n. s. [from the adjective.]

1. One who runs from his station or duty.

Unmarried men are best friends, best masters, best tutors, but not always best subjects; they are light to run away from, and almost all fugitives are of that condition. Bacon.

2. Fugitive sense, false fugitive and to thy speech add wings, lest with a whip of scorpions I pursue Thy fyinging. Milton's Par. Lost.

We understand by some fugitives that he hath commanded

The generals to return with victory, or expect

A shameful slaughter. Dryden's Sack.

2. One who takes shelter under another power from punishment.

Too many, being men of good inheritance, are fled beyond the seas, where they live under princes which are not so often terrorized. And converse and are confederates with other traitors and fugitives there abiding. Spenser on Ireland.

Every royal fugius is too great and too just, either to want or to receive the homage of rebellious fugitives. Dryden.

3. One hard to be caught or detained.

What must be his Nature's beauties bit,

Or catch that airy fugitive, call'd wit? Hars.

FUGITIVENESS. n. s. [from fugitive.]

1. Volatility; fugacity.

That divers salt, emerging upon the analysis of many concretur, are very volatile, is plain from the fugitiveness of salt and of burnish adhering in distillation. Boyle.

2. Instability; uncertainty.

FUGUL. n. s. [from fugul, Fr.]

In music, some point consisting of four, five, six, or any other number of notes begun by some one single part, and then seconded by another, and so on, fourth, fifth and sixth part, if the composition consists of so many; repeating the same or such like notes, so that the several parts follow, or come in one after another in the same manner, the leading parts still flying before those that follow. Harris.

The reports and fugues have an agreement with the figures in the notation of repetition and traduction.

The skilful organist piles his grave and fancied descent in lofty fugues. Milton on Education.

His violent touch

Instinct through all proportions, low and high, and high, and low, and transverse the resonant fugue. Milton.

Long has a race of heroes fill'd the stage,

That rant by note, and through the gamut rage;

In songs and airs express their martial fire,

And Combat in cells, and in a fugue expire. Addison.

FULCIMENT. n. s. [fulciment, fulcimentum, Lat.]

That on which a body rests, which acts or is acted upon at each end, as a balance or a lever.

The power that equiperates with any weight, must have the same proportion unto it, as there is between their several distances from the centre or fulciment. Wilkins.

To FULFIL. v. a. [full and fill.]

1. To fill till there is no room for more.

This sense is now not used.

Six gates to the city, with many staples,
And correpsonsive and fulfilling bolts.

Spare up the sons of Troy.Subscribe. To Feruus, and Cersa.

2. To answer any prophecy or promise by performance.

They knew him not, nor yet the voices of the prophets which are read every sabbath-day, they have fulfilled them in confessing him, 2 Cor. iii. 7.

The Forty-fifth them in each other's beds.

Then, having fill'd the fight, exulting dies,

And bears fulfilled her promise to the skies. Dryden.

3. To answer any purpose or design.

Here nature seems fulfilled in all her ends. Milton's Paradise Lost.

4. To answer any design by compliance or gratification.

If on my wounded breast thou dost a tear,

Think for whose sake my breast that wound did bear;

And faithfully my last desires fulfill,

'tis I perform my cruel father's will. Dryden's Ode.

5. To answer any law by obedience.

Love worketh no ill to his neighbour, therefore love is the fulfilling of the law. Rom. xiii. 10.

This I my glory account

My exaltation, and my whole delight,

That thou in my soul pleas'd declar'st thy will fuller'd, which to fuller'd is my all bliss. Milton.

FULFRAUGHT. adj. [full and fraught.]

Fully stored.

The fall hath left a kind of blot

To mark the fullfroght man, the best end'd,

With some suspicion. Shaks. Henry V.

FULGENCY. n. s. [fulgens, Lat.] Splendour; glitter.

FULGENT. adj. [fulgens, Lat.] Shining; dazzling; exquisitely bright.

As from a cloud his fullfent head,

And shape sat'哩 bright, appeared. Milton's Par. Lost.

The illumination is not so bright and fulgent as to obscure or extinguish all perception of reason. More's Divine Dial.

FULGID. adj. [fulgidus, Lat.] Shining; glittering; dazzling.

FULGIDITY. n. s. [fulgid.] Splendour; dazzling glitter.

FULGOUR. n. s. [fulgor, Lat.] Splendour; dazzling brightness like that of lightning.

Glow-worms alive project a lustre in the dark; which fulgour, notwithstanding, ceaseeth after death. Brow.

When I set my eyes on this side of things, there shines from them such an intellectual fulgor, that methinks the very glory of the Deity becomes visible to them. More.

FULGURATION. n. s. [fulguration, Lat.]

The act of lightening.

FULHAM. n. s. A cant word for false dice.

Hamer.

Let valtures grize thy gats, for gourd and Fulham's hold.

And high and low beguile the rich and poor. Shaks.

FULGINOUS. adj. [fulginosus, Fr. fulginosus, Lat.] Sooty; smoky.

Durgage hath an excellent spirit to repress the fulginoius vapours of dusky melancholy, and to confine madness. Brow.

Thereby history should be the torch of truth, he makes her in divers places a fulginoius link of lies. Hocel.

FULMART. n. s. This word, of which Skinner observes that he found it only in this passage, seems to mean the same with float.A kind of stinking ferret.

The gale of stinking hearkens on the face, and within the bowels of the earth. Walton's Jager.

FUL. [fulle, Sax. vol, Dut.]

779
1. Replete; without vacuity; having no space void.
   Better is a handfull with quietness, than both the hands full with travel and vexation of spirit.
   —Ps. 39, 6.

2. Abounding in any quality good or bad.
   With prentice from Stephmon he guard.
   He met her full, but full of warefulness. Sidney.
   You shou'd tread a course.
   Pretty and full of view. Shakes, Cymbeline.
   Followers, who make themselves as trumpets of the commendation of those they follow, are full of his glory; they taint business;
   want of secrecy, and export honour from a man, and make him a return in envy.
   Bacon.
   To be no more; sad care; for who would lose,
   Though full of pain, this intellectual being,
   These thoughts that wander through eternity!
   Milton.

3. Stored with any thing; well supplied with any thing.
   Full of days was he.
   Two ages past, he liv'd the third to see. Tickell.

4. Plump; sagitated; fat.
   A gentleman of a full body having broken his skin by full of spirits and inflamed Wiseman's Surg.

5. Satured; satel.
   I am full of the burnt offerings of mans. Isa. 1. 11.
   The alteration of scenes seeds and relieves the eye, before it be full of the same object. Bacon.

6. Crowded with regard to the imagination or memory.
   Every one is full of the miracles done by cold baths on decayed and weak constitutions. Locke.

7. That which fills or makes full; large; great in effect.
   Water digesteth a full meal sooner than any liquor.

8. Complete; such as that nothing further is desired or wanted.
   That day had see the full accomplishment
   Of all his travels. Daniel's Civil War.
   What remains, ye gods,
   But up and enter now into bliss? Milton.
   Being tried at that time only with a promise, he gave full credence to that promise, and still gave evidence of his fidelity as fast as occasions were offered.
   Hammond's Proct. Cathedam.
   The resurrection of Jesus from the dead hath given full assurance of another life.

9. Complete without abatement; at the utmost degree.
   At the end of two full years Pharaoh dreamed.
   Genesis.
   After hard riding plunge the horses into water, and allow them to drink as they please: but gallop them full speed, to warm the water in their
   Swift.

10. Containing the whole matter; expressing much.
   Where my expressions are not so full as his, either our language or my art were defective; but where mine are fuller than his, they are but impropiety. And the often reading of them, have left upon my thoughts.
   Denham.
   Should a man go about with never so set study

11. Strong; not faint; not attenuated.
   I did never know so full a voice an issue from so empty a heart; but the empty vessel makes the greatest noise. Shakespeare.
   Barrels placed under the floor of a chamber, make all noises in the same full and resounding.
   Bacon's Nat. Hist.
   Dryden taught to join
   The varying verse, the full resounding line. Pope.

12. Mature; perfect.
   In the salutary of the Mammakises, slaves reign'd over families of free men; and much like were the case, if you suppose a nation, where the custom was that after full age the sons should expel their fathers out of their possessions. Bacon.
   So law appears imperfect, and but given
   With purpose to remain in full time
   Up to a better covenant.
   Milton.

13. [Applied to the moon.] Complete in its orb.
   Towards the full moon, as he was coming home one morning he felt his legs failure. Wineman.

14. Not continuous, or a full stop.
   Therewith he ended, making a full point of a hearty sigh.
   Sidney.

15. Spread to view in all dimensions.
   Till about the end of the third century, I do not remember to have seen the head of a Roman emperor drawn with a full face; they always appear in profile. Addams on Medall.

FULL, n. s. [from the adjective.]
1. Complete measure; freedom from deficieny.

   When we return,
   We'll see those things affected to the full. Shakes.
   He liked the pump and absolute authority of a general well, and preserved the dignity of it to the full.
   Clarendon.
   The picture of Pudency Philopater is given by authors to the full. Dryden.
   Sicilian torturers and the brazen bull,
   Are emblems, rather than express the full
   If where the rules not far enough extend,
   Some lucky licence answer to the full.
   Th' intent propos'd, that licence is a rule. Pope.

2. The highest state or degree.
   The an',s down feather.
   That stands upon the swell at full of tide,
   Neither way inclines. Shakes. Ant. and Cleopatra.

3. The whole; the total.
   The king hath won, and hath sent out
   A speedy pow'r to encounter you, my lord.
   This is the news at full. Shakes. Hen. IV.
   But what at full I know, thou know'st no part;
   I knowing all my part, thou no art. Shakes.

4. The state of being statiuated.
   When had I fed them to the full.
   Jer. v. 7.

5. [Applied to the moon.] The time in which the moon makes a perfect orb.
   Brains in rabbits, woodcock's, and calves, are fullest in the full of the moon.
   Bacon's Nat. Hist.

FULL, adj.
1. Without abatement or diminution.
   He full.
   Replevieth all his Father manifest
   Express'd. Milton.
   In the unity of place they are full as scrunous; which many empaths to the stick's limit to the sport of ground, where the play is supposed to begin. Dryden.
   A modest blush she wears, not formed by art.
   Free from deceit his face, and full as free his heart.
   Dryden.

   The most judicious writer is sometimes mistaken after he has seiz'd the justly critic, who judges on a view, is full as liable to be deceived.
   Dryden.

Since you may
   Suspect my courage, if I should not lay
   The pawn I profess shall be full as good. Dryden's Virgil.

2. With the whole effect.
   In the pencil, throw luckily full upon the house's mouth to express the foam, which the painter, with all his skill, could perform without it.
   Dryden's Virescence.
   This universal frame began:
   From harmony, from heavenly harmony,
   To tell of the classical closing full in man.
   Dryden.

3. Exactly.
   Full in the centre of the sacred wood,
   An arm amidst of the Mygdon stream.
   Addison.
   Full of the virtues that both the ships.
   A sole of nineteen dolphins round her play.
   Addison.

4. Directly.
   He met her full, but full of warefulness. Sidney.
   He then confronts the bull,
   And on his ample forehead alighting full
   The deadly strike descending pierc'd the skull. Dryden.

5. It is placed before adverbs and adjectives, to intend or strengthen their signification.
   Tell me why on you shew'd, so giddily scor'd,
   Bear ye the picture of that lady's head?
   Full liest the semblant, though the substance dead.
   Swift.

   Among my masts; full little, God knows, looking Either for such men or such business. Shakes.
   Full well ye reject the commandment.
   1 Sam. iv. 9.
   Adam was all in tears, and to his guide
   Lamenting turn'd full said.
   Milton's Par. Los.

   You full little think that you must be the beginning of such a discourse. Pope.

   Full little thought of him the gentle knight.
   Dryden.

   Full well the god his sister's eye knew,
   And what her aims and what her arts pursue. Dryden.

   There is a perquisite full as honest, by which you have the best part of a bottle of wine for yourself.
   Swift.

   Full is much used in composition to intimate anything arrived at its highest state, or utmost degree.

FULL-BLOWN. adj. [full and blown.]
1. Spread to the utmost extent, as a perfect blossom.
   My glories are past danger; they're full-blown:
   Things that are blasted, no life in the bud. Dryden.

   My full-blown youth already fades space;
   Of our short being lits the shortest space! Dryden.

2. Stretched by the wind to the utmost extent.
   He who with bold Creatius is inspir'd,
   With zeal and equal indignation fir'd;
   Who at enormous villany turns pale,
   And steers against the wind, with full-blown sail. Dryden.

FULL-BOTTOMED. adj. [full and bottom.]
   Having a large bottom.
   I was obliged to sit at home in my morning-gown, having pawned a new suit of clothes and a full-bottomed wig for a sum of money. Guardian.

FULL-EDRED. adj. [full and car.]
   Having the heads full of grain.

   As flames roll'd by the winds conquiring force,
   O'er full car'd corn, or torrents raging coarse.
   Denham.

FULL-EY'D. adj. [full and eye.]
   Having large prominent eyes.

FULL-FED. adj. [full and fed.]
   Sated; fat; sagitated.

   All as a partridge plump, fullfed and fair.
   Swift.
Full

Full-laden, adj. [full and laden.] Laden 'till there can be no more added.

It was unfit that so excellent a reward as the Gospel promises should stop short, like fruit upon a full-laden bough, to be plucked by every idle and wanton hand. Trench.

Full-spread adj. [full and spread.] Spread to the utmost extent.

How easy 'tis, when destiny proves kind, With full-spread sails to run before the wind; But that a favorable wind will still gales layering Must be at once resolved and skillful too. Dryden.

Full-summed. adj. [full and summed.]

Complete in all its parts.

The cedar stretched forth its branches, and the king of birds nested within its leaves, thick feathered, and with full-summed wings fasting his talons East and West; but now the eagle is become half naked.

Hooke's Vocol Foren.

To FULL. v. a. [fullo, Lat.] To cleanse cloth from its oil or grease.

FULLAGE, n. s. [from full.] The money paid for fulling or cleansing cloth.

FULLER, n. s. [from fullo.] One whose trade is to cleanse cloth.

The clothiers have put off

The spinsters, carders, fullers, weavers. Shaksp. His framework became shining, exceeding white as snow; so as no fuller on earth can whitens them. Mar. 1. 3.

FULLERS Earth, n. s.

Fullers earth is a mass of a close texture, extremely soft and suctuous to the touch: when dry it is of a greyish colour, in all degrees, from very pale to almost black, and generally has a greenish cast in it. The finest fullers earth is dug in our own island. Hill's Med. Medic.

The raiment of English very much exceeds any yet discovered abroad in goodness; which is one great reason why the English surpass all other nations in manufacture. Woodward.

FULLERS Thistle, or Weed. n. s. [dipsacus.] A plant.

FULLERY, n. s. [from fuller.] The place where the trade of a fuller is exercised.

FULLINGMILL. n. s. [full and mill.] A mill where the water raiseshammers which beat the cloth 'till it be cleansed.

By large hammers, like those used for paper and fullingmills, they beat their hemp. Mortimer.

FULLY. adj. [from full.]

1. Without.

2. Completely; without lack; without more to be desired.

There are many graces for which we may not cease hourly to saw, graces which are in bestowing always, but never come to be fully had in this present life; and therefore, when all things here have an end, endless thanks must have their beginning in a state which brings the full and final satisfaction of all such perpetual desires. Hooker.

He fully possessed the entire revelation he had received from God, and had thoroughly digested it.

The goddess cry'd.

It is enough, I'm fully satisfied. Addison's Ovid.

FULMINANT. adj. [fulminant, Fr. fulminans, Lat.] Thundering; making a noise like thunder.

To FULMINATE. v. n. [fulmine, Lat. fulminans, Fr.] Thundering: making a voice.

Fulminates, v. s. [fulminate, Lat. fulminans, Fr.] Thundering: making a voice.

To FULMINATE. v. a. To throw out as an object of terror.

As excommunication is not greatly regarded here in England, as now fulminated; so this constitution is not of use among us in a great measure. Dryden.

FULMINATION, n. s. [fulminate, Lat. fulmination, Fr. from fulminate.]

1. The act of thundering.

2. Denunciations of censure.

The fulminations from the vatican were turned into ridicule.

Ayliff's Parergon.

FULNESS. n. s. [from full.]

1. The state of being filled so as to have no part vacant.

Your hearty-offering shall be reckoned the fulness of the winepress. Numb. xviii. 27.

2. The state of abounding in any quality good or bad.

A state of fulness, freedom, and truth. Charles.

3. Completeness; such as leaves nothing to be desired.

Your enjoyments are so complete, I turn wishes into gratulations, and congratulating their fulness only wish their continuance.

South.

4. Completeness from the coalition of many parts.

The king set forwards to London, receiving the addresses and applauses of the people as he went; which indeed were true and unfeigned, as might well appear in the very demonstration and fulness of the try. Bacon's Hawaii VII.

5. Completeness; freedom from deficiency.

In thy presence is fulness of joy. Psalms.

He is the half part of a blessed man, Left to be finished by such as she.

And she a fair divided excellence.

Whose fulness of perfection lies in him. Shaksp.

6. Repleton; satiety.

I need not here mention the habitual intemperance of rich tables, nor the evil accidents and effects of fulness, pride and lust, wantonness and softnes. Taylor's Rule of Living Holy.

7. Plenty; wealth.

To lapis in fulness

Is sorer than to lie for need; and fulness

8. Struggling perturbation; swelling in the mind.

A principal fruit of friendship is the ease and discharge of the fulness of the heart, which passions of all kinds do cause and induce. Bacon's Essays.

9. Largeness; extent.

There wanted the fulness of a plot, and variety of characters to form it as it ought; and perhaps something might have been added to the beauty of the story. Dryden.

10. Force of sound, such as fills the ear; vigour.

This sort of pastoral derives almost its whole beauty from the natural ease of thought and smoothness of verse; whereas that of most other kinds consists in the strength and fulness of both. Pope.

FULSOME. adj. [from fule, Sax. foul.]

1. Nausious; offensive.

He that brings fulsome objects to my view,
With nausious images my fancy fills,
And all goes down like oxymel of squilles. Rosem.

2. Full of fulsome objects.

How fulsome must it be to stay behind,
And die of rank diseases here at home? Otway.

3. Luxurious.

He stuck them up before the fulsome eyes. Shaksp.

4. Tending to obscurity.

A certain epigram, which is ascribed to the emperor, is this: 'If more fulsome than any passage I have met with in our poet.' Dryden.

FULSOMELY. adv. [from fulsome] Naussiously; rankly; obscenely.

FULSOMENESS. n. s. [from fulsome.]

1. Nausiousness.

2. Rank smell.

3. Obscurity.

No decency is considered, no fulsomeness is omitted, no venom is wanting, as far doth fulsomeness supply it. Dryden.

FULMADO. n. s. [fumes, Lat.] A smoked fish.

Fish that serve for the hotter countries, they used at first to fume, by hanging them up upon long sticks one by one, drying them with the smoke of a slow and continual fire, till they purchased the name of fulmados. Care.

FULMAGE. n. s. [from fumeus, Lat.] Hearth-money.

FULMATURE. n. s. [fumaria, Lat. fumic-terre, Fr.] An herb.

Her fellow fear

The danel, hemlock, and rank fumatur.

Duth root upon. Shaksp. Henry V.

To FULMBLE. v. n. [fummen, Dut.]

1. To attempt any thing awkwardly or ungracefully.

Our mechanicists will have their storms never once to have fumbled in these their motions, nor to have produced any inept system. Cudworth.

2. To puzzle; to strain in perplexity.

Am I not a friend to help you out? You would have been fumbling half an hour for this excuse. Dryden's Spanish Friar.

3. To play childish.

I saw him fumble with the sheets, and play with flowers, and smile upon his finger's end. Shaksp.

FULMATE, v. a. To manage awkwardly.

As many frivolous as be stars in heav'n,
With distant breasts and livid faces to them,
He fumblers up all in some hopeful adieu. Shaksp.

His greedy bald pate choir

Came fumbling over the heads, in such an agony
They told 'em false for fear. Dryd. Span. Friar.

FULMBLER. n. s. [from fumble.] One who acts awkwardly.

FULMBLINGLY. adv. [from fumble.] In an awkward manner.

FUM. n. s. [fum, Fr. fumus, Lat.]

1. Smoke.

Thus fighting fires while themselves consume. But straight, like Turks, forc'd to win or die,
They first lay tender, bridges of their fume.
And o'er the breach in sturdious vapours fly. Dryd.

2. Vapour; any volatile parts flying away.

Let us smoke 'em, seeing we have the same sights: Being pur'd, a fire sparkling in lovers' eyes. Shaksp.

It were good to try the taking of fumes by pipes, as we do in tobacco, or other things, to dry and comfort. Bacon.

In Winter, when the heat without is less, breath becomes, or condenses us to be visible, flowing out of the mouth in form of a fume, or cresser vapour; and may, by proper vessels, set in a strong and fuming mixture, be collected in a consider- able quantity. Woodward.

3. Exhalation from the stomach.

The fumes of drink discompose and stupify the breath of a man unchallenged with it. South.

Plung'd in sloth we lie, and sure aspire,
As fill'd with fumes of undigested wine. Dryd. 781.
FUM

To Fum. r. n. [fumet, Fr. fume, Lat.] To smoke; to dry in the smoke.

1. To smoke; to dry in the smoke.

Those that serve for hot countries they used at first to fume, by hanging upon long stakes one by one, and drying them with the smoke of a still fire.

Carew.

2. To perfume with odours in the fire.

She fumed the temple with an odious flame, And oft before the sacred ears came.

To pray for him who was an empty name. Dru. The fuming of the holes with brimstone, garlic, and other unseasy things, will drive moles out of the ground.

Mortimer.

3. To disperse in vapours.

The heat will fume away most of the scent.

Mortimer.

FUMET. n. s. The dung of the deer.

FUMETTE. n. s. [Fr.] A word introduced by cooks, and the pupils of cooks, for the stink of meat.

A launch of veal's made her sweat. Unless it had the right fumette. Swift.

FUMID. adj. [jumidus, Lat.] Smoky; vaporous.

FUMI'DITY. n. s. [from fumid.] Smokiness; tendency to smoke.

Dict.

To FUMIGATE. r. n. [from fumigato, Lat. fumigation, Fr. fumigeve.] To smoke; to perfume by smoke or vapour.

1. To smoke; to perfume by smoke or vapour.

Would you preserve thy familiars' family, With fragrant thyme the city fumigate.

And break the wanx walls to save the state. Dryd.

2. To medicate or heal by vapours.

FUMIGATION. n. s. [fumigation, Lat. fumigation, Fr. fumigatone.] To make use of fumigation in some cases, as to kill lice, etc.

1. Scents raised by fire.

Fumigation, often repeated, are very beneficial.

Arbuthnot.

My fumigation is to Venus, just
The scents of rose and violet's dust:
And last, to make my fumigation good,
'Tis mixt with sparrows brains and pigeons blood. Dryd.

2. The application of medicines to the body in fumes.

FUMILY. adv. [from fume.] Angrily in a rage.

That which we more for our better learning and instruction sake, turneth unto anger and choler in them who get together out of quickness with it; they answer fumily, that they are ashamed to defile their pens with making answer to such idle questions.

Hoole.

FUMICER. n. s. A plant.

Why, was he met even yet,
As mad as the next vex; singing aloud,
Crow'd with rank fumicer and furrow weeds. Sh.

FUMO'S. adj. [fumetous, Fr. from fume.] Producing fumes.

Fumy. [fume.] Producing fumes.

From dice and wine the youth retir'd to rest,
And fum'd the fogy god out of his breast:
E'en then he dreamt of drink and lucky play;
More lucky had it last'd till the day.

Dryd.

FUM'S. n. s. [A term of contempt.] Sport; high merriment; frolicksome delight.

Don't mind me, though, for all my fun and jakes, You hard may find us bloods good-natur'd souls.

More.

FUNCTION. n. s. [functionia.]

1. Discharge; performance.

There is a difference between two things than there is between a representing commiser in the function of his publick calling, and the same person in private life.

Swift.

2. Employment; office.

The ministry is now not bound to any one tribe; now none is secluded from that function of any degree, state, or calling.

Whig. Dr.

You have paid the head of your function, and the prisoner the very other debt of your calling.

Shake, Measure for Measure.

Nor was it any policy or obstinacy, or partiality of affection either to the men or their function, which fixed me.

King Charles.

That double function of the godless gives such a considerable light and beauty to the ode which Ho- race has addressed to her.

Addison.

Let not these indulgences discourage us from asserting the just privileges and pre-eminence of our holy function and character.

Atterbury.

Without difference those functions cannot, in order just, be executed.

They have several offices and prayers against fire, tempests, and especially for the dead, in which fumstruments they use divers garments. Stillingfleet.

4. Trade; occupation.

Follow your function; go, and bathe on cold hits.

Shake.

5. Office of any particular part of the body.

The bodies of men, and other animals, are excellently well fitted for life and motion; and the several parts of them well adapted to their particular functions.

Bentley's Sermons.

6. Power; faculty: either animal or intellectual.

Power in his eyes, distinction in his aspect, A broken voice, and his whole function suitting With forms to his conceit.

Shake, Hamlet.

In all her functions weary of herself,
My race of glory ran, and race of shame;
And I shall shortly be with them there, Miltion.

Whate' er harms the heart, or fills the head,
As the mind employs, and its functions spread,
Imagination pleads for human arts,
And pours it upon the peccant part. Pope.

Though every human constitution is morbid, Yet are their diseases consistent with the common function of life. Arbuthnot.

FUND. n. s. [fond, Fr. fondu a bag, Lat.] 1. Stock; capital; that by which any enterprise is supported.

He touches the passions more delicately than Ovid, and performs all this out of his own fund, without diving into the arts and sciences for a sup- ply. Dryd.

Part must he left, a fund when foes invade,
And part employ'd to roll the watry tide. Dryd.

In present times, no man who does not trust entirely to the stock or fund of his own reason, advanced indeed, but not overlaid with common books. Swift.

2. Stock or bank of money.

As my estate has been hitherto either lost upon seas, or fluctuating in funds, it is now fixed in substantial acres. Addison.

FUNDAMENT. n. s. [fundamentum, Lat.] The back part of the body.

FUNDAMENTAL. adj. [fundamentalis, Lat. from fundamentum.] Serving for the foundation; that upon which the rest is built; essential; important; not merely accidental.

Until this can be agreed upon, one main and fundamental cause of the most grievous war is not like to be taken from the earth, Bachel. You that will be less careful than discreet,

That love the fundamental part of state, More than you double the charge of it. Shake.

When they were brought to allow the throne vacant, thought the succession should go to the next heir, according to the fundamental laws of the kingdom, as if it was not actually disputed. Swift's Examiner.

Gain some general and fundamental truths, both in philosophy, in religion, and in human life. Watts.

Such we find they are, as can control,
The servile acts of our wav'ring soul,
Can fight, can alien, or can claim the will;
Their ill's all built on life, that fundamental ill. Prior.

Yet some there were among the sounder few,
Of those who less presum'd, and better knew,
Who durst assert the jurer ancient cause,
And here rest'd with fundamental laws. Pope.

FUNDAMENTAL. n. s. Leading proposition; important and essential part which is the groundwork of the rest.

We propose the question, whether those who hold the fundamentals of faith may deny Christ damnedly in respect of superstructures and consequences that arise from them. South.

This is a very proper path, that there should be so much violence and hatred in religious matters among men who agree in all fundamentals, and only differ in some ceremonies, or mere speculative points. Swift.

FUNDAMENTALLY. adv. [from fundamental.] Essentially; originally.

As virtue is seated fundamentally in the intellect, so perspective in the fancy; so that virtue is the force of reason, in the conduct of our actions and passions to good end. Great Religion is not only useful to civil society, but fundamentally necessary to its very birth and continuance.

The unlimited power placed fundamentally in the body of a people, the legislators endeavour to deposit in such hands as would preserve them.

FUNERAL. n. s. [funus, Lat. funeralis, French.]

1. The solemnization of a burial; the payment of the last honours to the dead; obsequies.

2. The pomp or procession with which the dead are carried.

FUNERAL adj. Used at the ceremony of interring the dead.

Our instruments to melancholy bells, Our wedding cheer to a sad funeral feast. Shakesp.

Let such honours

And funeral rites, as to his birth and virtues Are due, he first perf'om'd. Denham's Sophy.

Thy hand over the fun'ral torch displays, And forms a thousand ills ten thousand ways. Dryd.

FUNERAL adj. [funerea, Lat.] Suiting a funeral; dark; dismal.

But if his soul hath wing'd the destined flight, Inhabitant of deep despirate night, Homeward with pious speed repass the main, To the pale shade funeral rites ordain. Pope.

FUNGENCY. n. s. [from fungus.] Unsolid excrecense.

Fungous. adj. [from fungus.] Excrecent; spongy; wanting firmness.

Fungus. n. s. [Lat.] Strictly a mushroom; a word used to express such excrecences of flesh as grow out upon the lips of wounds, or any other excrecences from trees or plants not naturally belonging to them; as the agaric from the larch-tree, and auricula Jude from elder. Quinney.

FUR. n. s. [from fetus, Lat.] A piece of stuff plated and puckered together, either below or above, on the petticoats or gowns of women. This, like a great many other words, is the child of mere caprice.

FURBELOW. n. s. A piece of stuff plated and puckered together, either below or above, on the petticoats or gowns of women. This, like a great many other words, is the child of mere caprice.

FURRIER. v. a. [from fourrier, Fr.] To burnish; to polish; to rub to brightness. It may enter Mowbray's waxen coat, And burnish now the name of John o' Gaunt. Shakesp. Rich. II.

Fur-bish the spears, and put on the brigandines. Triv. Dict.

Some others who furnish up and reprint his old errors, hold that the sufferings of the damned are too, in a strict sense, eternal; but that, after a certain period of time, there shall be a general good-delivery of the souls in prison, and that not a further execution, but a final release. South.

As after Nunn's peaceful reign, The martial Ancus did the sheape wield; Furbish'd the rusty sword again, Resolv'd the long-burnt shield, and led the Latins to the dusty field. Dryd.

FURBISHER. n. s. [fourbisseur, Fr. from furnish.] One who polishes any thing.

FURCATION. n. s. [furcæs, Lat.] Forkiness; the state of shooting two ways like the blades of a fork.

When stags grow old they grow less branched, and first lose their brow-antlers, or lowest furca.

FURFEUR. n. s. [Lat.] Husk or chaff; scurf or dandrift, that grows upon the skin, with some likeness to bran. Quinney.

FURFURACEOUS. adj. [furfuraceus, Lat.] Husky; branny; scaly.

FURIOUS. adj. [furivus, Fr. furious, futius, Lat.]

1. Mad; phrenetic.

No man did ever think the hurtful actions of furious men and innocents to be punishable. Hooker.

2. Raging; violent; transported by passion beyond reason.

To be furious, Is to be frighted out of fear; and in that mood The dove will peck the carcasse. Shaks.

Noise, other than the sound of dance or song, Torrent, and loud lament, and furious rage. Milt.

3. Violent; impetuously agitated.

With clamour thence the rapid currents drive Towards the retreating streams. Milt.

FURIOUSLY. adv. [from furious.] Madly; violently; vehemently.

Which when his brother saw, wrought in great wrath, and with him to him left furiously. Fairy Queen. They obverse countenance to attend the practice; and this carries them on furiously to that which suffices of themselves, they turn their heads. South. She heard not half, so furiously she files; Fears gave her wings. Dryd.
FUR

FURIOUSNESS. n. s. [from furious.]
Phrenzy; madness; transport of passion.

To FURL. v. a. [fresler, French.] To draw up; to contract.
When fortune sends a stormy wind,
These waters show their present mind
And when with too indulgent gales
She swells too much, then furl thy sails. Crenek.

FURLONG. n. s. [caplang, Sax.] A measure of length; the eighth part of a mile.
It's man stand in the middle of a field and speak aloud, he shall be heard a furling in round, and that in articulate sounds.
Coming within a few furlongs of the temple,
They passed through a very thick grove. Add.ition.

FURLOUGH. n. s. [furlof, Dutch.] A temporary dismission from military service; a leave given to a soldier to be absent.

FURNOSE. n. s. [furnos, Lat.] An enclosed fireplace.
Heat not a furnace for your foe so hot
That it may sting yourself. Shak. Henry VIII.
The folding is for silver and the furnace for gold. Proverbs.
We have also furnaces of great diversities, that keep great diversity of heats. Bocc.\nThe kings of Spain have erected divers furnaces and forges, for the tryng and fining of their gold. Abbot.
Whose fallet not down and worshippeth, shall the same hour he cast into the midst of a burning furnace. Dan.

To FURNACE. v. a. [from the noun.]
To throw out as sparks from a furnace, a bad word.

He furnaces
The thick sighs from him. Shaks. Cymbeline.

To FURNISH. v. a. [fournier, French.]
1. To supply with what is necessary to a certain purpose.
   She had directed
How I shall take her from her father's house;
What gold and jewels is furnish'd with. Shak.
   His trading such,
That he may furnish and instruct great teachers,
And never seek for aid out of himself. Shak.
   Thou shalt furnish him liberally out of thy fleet. Dunt. xxv.
   Come, then stranger, and furnish a table, and feed me of that thou hast ready. Execls.
   Auris, having driven the Turks from Conmino, both by sea and land, furnished the city with corn,
Knolles's History.
   I shall not need to heap up instances; every one's reading and conversation will sufficiently furnish him, if he wants to be better stored. Locke.

2. To give; to supply.
   These simple ideas, the materials of all our knowledge, are suggested and furnished to the mind only by these two ways, sensation and reflection.
   It is not the state, but a compact among private persons that hath furnished out these surprising re- mitances. Add.ition.

3. To fit up; to fit with appendages.
   Something deeper,
   Whereof perchesse these are but furnishings. Shakesp.
FUR

FURTHERMORE, adv. [further and more.]
Moreover; besides. This ring I do accept most thankfully. And so, I pray you, tell him: furthermore, I pray you, show my old female Stylock a house. Shaksp.

FURTIVE. adj. [furtive, Fr. furtif, Lat.]
Stolen; gotten by theft. Or do they, as your scribes, I think, have shown, dart furtive looks and glory not their own. All servants to that source of light, the sun? Prior.

FURUNCLE. n. s. [furuncle, Fr. furunculus, Lat.]
A boil; an angry pustule. A furuncle is in its beginning round, hard, and inflamed; with warmth, it ritheth up with an acute head, and sometimes a pustule; and then it is more inflamed and painful, when it arrives at its state, which is about the eighth or ninth day. Wiseman.

FURY. n. s. [furor, Lat. furet, Fr.]
1. Madness. 2. Rage; passion of anger; tumult of mind approaching to madness. I do oppose my patience to his fury; and am ready. To suffer with a quietness of spirit The very tyranny and rage of his. Shaksp. He knew the natures of living creatures, and the fouls of wild beasts. Hwd. vii. 20.

3. Enthusiasm; exaltation of fancy. Taken upon his hat, her wit began to lie with a divine fury inspired; and her voice in so beloved an occasion, second her wit. Sidney. A sybil, that had no marker in the world. The aim to course two hundred compasses. In her propitious fury sew'd the work. Shaksp. Greater than human kind she seem'd to look, And with an accent nobler than mortal space. Her staring eyes with sparkling fury roll, When all the god came railing on her soul. Dryden's Enid.

4. [From furius, Lat.]. One of the deities of vengeance, and thence a stormy, turbulent, violent, raging woman. The sight of any of the house of York, Is as a fury to torment my soul. Shaksp.

FURZ. n. s. [furz, Sax. genista spinosa, Lat.]
Gorse; goss. The whole place is gossthyory; the flowers, which are of the pea-loon kind, are disposed in short thick spikes, which are succeeded by short compressed pods, in each of which are contained three or four kidney-shaped seeds. Miller. Carry out gravel to fill up a hole, Both timber and furzis, the turf and the coke. Turn, for fewel, there growth great store of furze, of which the shrubbye sort is called tame, and the better grown French. Ceres. We know, And when to reap the grain, and when to sow, Or when to sell the furzes. Dryden's Virgil.

FUZZY. adj. [from furze]. Overgrown with furze; full of gorse. Wide through the fuzzy field their rout they take, Their bleeding bosoms for the thorny brake. Gay.

Fuscation. n. s. [fuscus, Lat.]
The act of darkening or obscuring. Dict. To FUSE. v. a. [fundo, fusam, Lat.]. To melt; to put into fusion; to liquify by heat.

To FUSE. v. n. To be melted; to be capable of being liquified by heat.

FUSEE. n. s. [fuseau, Fr.]
1. The cone round which is wound the cord or chain of a clock or watch.

FUS. n. s. [flute, Fr.]
1. The trunk or body of a column.
2. [From fustre, Fr.]. A strong smell, as that of a musty barrel.

FUSTIAN. n. s. [fustaine, Fr. from fustre a tree, because cotton grows on trees.]
1. A kind of cloth made of linen and cotton, and perhaps now of cotton only. Is suppos'd proper, the house trim'd the serving-man in their new fustian and their white stockings. Shaksp.
2. A high swelling kind of writing made up of heterogeneous parts, or of words and ideas ill associated; bombast. Not will you raise in me comhition, By dint of high heroick fustian. Hudibras.

What fustian have I heard these gentlemen find out in Mr. Cowley's odes? In general, I will say, that nothing can appear more beautiful to me than the strength of those images which they condemn. Dryden.

Fustian is thoughts and words ill sorted, and without the least relation to each other. Dryden.

Chance thoughts, when govern'd by the coarse, Out of fustian, or descend'd to prose. Smith.

FUSTIGATE. v. a. [fustigo, Lat.]. To beat with a stick; to cance. Dict.

FUSTIANIAN. n. s. [from fusty]. A low fellow; a stankard; a scoundrel. A word used by Shakespeare only. Away, you scoundrel, you ranpallian, you fustiarian: I'll tickle your catastrophe. Shaksp.

FUSTINESS. n. s. [from fusty]. Mouldiness; stink.

FUSTY. adj. [from fust]. Ill-smelling; mouldy.

FUSTY. adj. [from fusty]. A sort of wood brought from the West Indies, used in dying of cloth. Dict.

FUSTILIAN. n. s. [from fusty]. A low fellow; a stankard; a scoundrel. A word used by Shakespeare only. Away, you scoundrel, you ranpallian, you fustiarian: I'll tickle your catastrophe. Shaksp.

FUTILE. adj. [fitile, Fr. futilis, Lat.]
1. Talkative; loquacious. One futille person, that makest his glory to tell, will do more hurt than many that know it. Dict. Penn.
2. Trifling; worthless; of no weight.
3. Trillingness; want of weight; want of solidity. Trilling futility appears in their signs of the zodiac, and their mutual relations and aspects. Bent.

FUTTICKS. n. s. [corrupted from foot hooks. Skinner.]. The lower timbers that hold the ship together.

FUTUR. adv. [futurum, Lat. futur, Fr.]
5 H 755
F U T
That which will be hereafter; to come; as, the future state.

Glory they sung to the most High! good will
To future men, and in their dwellings peace. Milt.
He saw the teeth of Jaffa's command;
And flings the future people from his hand.
Addison's Ovid.

FUTURE. n. s. [from the adjective.] Time to come; somewhat to happen hereafter.

Thy letters have transported me beyond
This ignorant present time; and I feel now
The future in the instant. Shakesp. Macbeth.
The mind, once jaded by an attempt above its power, either is disabled for the future, or else checks at any vigorous undertaking ever after.

FUTURELY. adv. [from future.] In time to come.

This prescience of God, as it is prescience, is not the cause of any thing futurely succeeding; neither does God's aforesaid power impose any necessity, or bind.

Futurity. n. s. [from future.] The state of being to be; the condition of being hereafter.

F U T
Is it imaginable that the great means of the world's redemption should rest only in the number of possiblilities, and hang so low in respect of its futurity, as to leave the event in an equal poised, whether ever there should be such a thing or no?

Futurity, n. s. [from future.]
1. Time to come, events to come.
Not my servant now, nor present sorrows,
Nor purpose's merit in futurity.
To warrant me. Shakesp. Othello.
I will contrive some way to make it known to futurity, that I had your lordship for my patron.
Seiff.

2. Event to come.
All futurities are naked before that All-seeing Eye, the sight of which is no more hind by distance of time than the sight of an angel can be determined by distance of place.
South.

This, great Amphiareus, lay hold on thee,
Thou skill'd in fate and dark futurity.
Pope.

3. The state of being to be; futurity.
It may be well reckoned among the bare possibilities, which never commence into a futurity; it requiring such a free, sedate and intellect mind, as it may be, is no where found but among the philosophical ideas.
Glanville's Sceptics.

G A B
G HAS two sounds, one from the Greek γ, and the Latin, which is called that of the hard G, because it is formed by a pressure somewhat hard of the forepart of the tongue against the upper gum. This sound G retains before a, o, u, l, r; as, gate, go, gall. The other sound, called that of the soft G, resembles that of j, and is commonly, though not always, found before i, e; as, gem, gibbet. Before n, at the end of a word, g is commonly melted away; as in the French, from which these words are commonly derived: thus, for benign, malign, condemn, we pronounce, benine, maligne, condine. It is often silent in the middle of the words before h, t, m. The Saxon L, G, seems to have had generally the sound of y consonant; whence gate is by rustics still pronounced yate.

GARBARDINE. n. s. [garbadina, Ital.] A coarse frock; any mean dress.
My best way is to creep under his garbardine;
where there is no other shelter hereabouts.
Shakesp.

You call me misbeliever, cut-throat dog,
And spit upon my Jewish garbardine.
Shakesp.
The knight did strait submit,
And laid his weapons at her feet;
Next he dichted his garbardine.
And with it did himself resign.
Hudibras.

To GABBLE. v. n. [gabbarre, Ital. gabbery, Dut.] 1. To make an inarticulate noise.
When thou couldst not, savage,
Shew them their meaning, but wouldst gabble like
A thing most brutish, I endow'd thy purposes
With words that made them known.
Shakesp.

G A B
Flocks of fowl, that when the tempest roars,
With their hoarse gabbling seek the silent shore.
Dr. Dryden.

2. To prate loudly without meaning.
Have you no wit, manners, nor honesty, but to Gabble like tinkers at this time of day? Do you
Make a alehouse of my lady's house?
Shakesp. Twelfth Night.
Which made some think, when he did gabble,
'Tis had three labours of Babel. Hudibras.
Such a rout, and such a rabble,
Run to game Jack Pudding gallantly.
Swift.

G A B B L E. n. s. [from the verb.]
1. Inarticulate noise like that of brute animals.
Not to know what we speak one to another, so that we seem to know, is to know straight our purpose;
clown's language, gabble enough and good enough.
Shakesp. All's well that ends well.

2. Loud talk without meaning.
For thus a hideous gabble rises loud
Among the builders; each to other calls,
Not understood.
Milton's Paradise Lost.

GABBLER, n. s. [from gabble.] A prater; a chattering fellow.

GABEL. n. s. [gavello, Fr. gabello, Ital.]
[1. An excise; a tax.
The gabel of Naples are very high on oil, wine, and tobacco.
Addison in Ion.]

2. A wicker basket which is filled with earth to make a fortification or entrenchment.
His battery was defended all along with gabions, and casks filled with sand. Hudibras.

GABEL. n. s. [gabul, Welsh; gable, Fr.]
The sloping roof of a building.
Take care that all your brick-work be covered with the tiling, according to the new way of building, without gable ends, which are very heavy, and very apt to let the water in.
Mortimer's Husbandry.

G A D
To FUZZ. v. n. [without etymology.] To fly out in small particles.

FUZZBALL. n. s. [fuzz and ball.] A kind of fungus which, when pressed, bursts and scatters dust in the eyes.
Fr. interj. [fuy, Fr. and Flem. φυ, Gr. φυ, Lat.] A word of blame and disapprobation.
And fy on fortune, mine avowed foe,
Whose wanton weaknesses themselves do now assail.
Spenser.

Fy, my lord, fy a soldier, and afraid?
What need we fear who knows it, when none can call our power to account?
Shakesp.
A lawd, sir, fy upon him!
Shakesp.
But fy, may wand'ring muse, how thou dost stray!
Expectance calls thee where another way. Milton.
 Thy, fy, what mean you in this fair open place?
Unhand me, or, I swear, I'll scratch your face:
Let go, for shame; you make me mad for spite;
My mouth's my own; and if you kiss, I'll bite.
Dryden.
Fy, madam, he cried, we must be past all these gaudies.

tatter.
GAFFER. n. s. [Cape companion, Sax.] A word of respect now obsolete, or applied only in contempt to a mean person. For gaffer Treadwell tell us by the by, Excessive sorrow is exceeding dry. Gay, Patrons.

GAFFERING. n. s. [gaffer's slumber, Sax.] Artificial spurs put upon cocks when they are set to fight. 2. A steel contrivance to bend cross-bows.

GAG. n. v. [from gashel, Dut. the palate, Minshew.] To stop the mouth with something that may allow to breathe, but hinder to speak.

GAG, or gag. v. [from the verb.] Something thrown into the mouth to hinder speech or eating.

GAGE. n. v. [gaze, Fr.]. A pledge, a pawn; a caution; any thing given in security.

GAGE, or gage. n. v. [gaze, Fr.].
1. A pledge, a pawn; a caution; any thing given in security.
2. A measure; a rule of measuring.
3. To wager; to depone as a wager; to impawn; to give as a caution, pledge, or security.
4. To measure; to take the contents of any vessel of liquids particularly. More properly gage.

GAGGLY. adv. [from gapy.] In a garbling, roving manner.

GADDER, n. s. [from gard.] A rambler; one that runs much abroad without business. A drunken woman, and a gadder abroad, cause great anger, and she will not cover her lazy shame. Eccles. xxvi. 8.

GAUNDLINGLY. adv. [from gard.] In a garbling, roving manner.

GADDY, n. s. [goad and fly; but by Skinner, who makes it the original of gadd, it is called goodfly. Supposed to be originally from good, in Saxon 2ad, and fly.] A fly that when he stings the cattle makes them gad or run madly about; the breeze. The fly called the goodfly brethren of somewhat that swimeth upon the top of the water, and is most about ponds. Bacon's Nat. History. Light fly his slumber, if perchance a flight Of angry goodflies rise among their kind. Thomson.

GAFF. n. s. A harpoon or large hook.

AINSWORTH. n. v.

GAIN. n. s. [gaine, gagen, gagen, Dut.] To make a noise like a goose.

GAIN. n. v. [from gage, Fr.]
1. Profit; advantage, contrary to loss.
2. To gain something.
3. To measure; to take the contents of any vessel of liquids particularly. More properly gage.

GAILEY. adv. [from gay.] 1. Airily; cheerfully.
2. Splendidly. See Gayly.

GAIN. n. s. [gaine, Fr.]
1. Profit; advantage, contrary to loss.
2. To gain something.
3. Praise; appreciative, courteous, sentiments.
4. Law; unlawful advantage.
5. To gain something.

GAIN. v. a. [gage, Fr.]
1. To obtain as profit or advantage.
2. To win; not to lose. A leper once he lost, and gain'd a king. Milton.
3. To have the overplus in comparative computation.
4. To obtain a; to procure; to receive credit or acceptance found, which was gaine.

GAIN. v. a. [gaine, gagen, Dut.]
1. To wager; to depone as a wager; to impawn; to give as a caution, pledge, or security.
2. To measure; to take the contents of any vessel of liquids particularly. More properly gage.

Gentry. See Gentleman. Some moderns make gentry, a name for gentility.

GAILEY. adv. [from gay.] Airily; cheerfully.

GAIN. n. s. [gaine, Fr.]
1. Profit; advantage, contrary to loss.
2. To gain something.
3. Praise; appreciative, courteous, sentiments.
4. Law; unlawful advantage.
5. To gain something.

GAIN. v. a. [gage, Fr.]
1. To obtain as profit or advantage.
2. To win; not to lose. A leper once he lost, and gain'd a king. Milton.
3. To have the overplus in comparative computation.
4. To obtain a; to procure; to receive credit or acceptance found, which was gaine.

GAIN. v. a. [gage, Fr.]
1. To wager; to depone as a wager; to impawn; to give as a caution, pledge, or security.
2. To measure; to take the contents of any vessel of liquids particularly. More properly gage.

GAIN. v. a. [gage, Fr.]
1. To wager; to depone as a wager; to impawn; to give as a caution, pledge, or security.
2. To measure; to take the contents of any vessel of liquids particularly. More properly gage.

GAIN. v. a. [gage, Fr.]
1. To wager; to depone as a wager; to impawn; to give as a caution, pledge, or security.
2. To measure; to take the contents of any vessel of liquids particularly. More properly gage.

GAIN. v. a. [gage, Fr.]
1. To wager; to depone as a wager; to impawn; to give as a caution, pledge, or security.
2. To measure; to take the contents of any vessel of liquids particularly. More properly gage.

GAIN. v. a. [gage, Fr.]
1. To wager; to depone as a wager; to impawn; to give as a caution, pledge, or security.
2. To measure; to take the contents of any vessel of liquids particularly. More properly gage.

GAIN. v. a. [gage, Fr.]
1. To wager; to depone as a wager; to impawn; to give as a caution, pledge, or security.
2. To measure; to take the contents of any vessel of liquids particularly. More properly gage.

GAIN. v. a. [gage, Fr.]
1. To wager; to depone as a wager; to impawn; to give as a caution, pledge, or security.
2. To measure; to take the contents of any vessel of liquids particularly. More properly gage.

GAIN. v. a. [gage, Fr.]
1. To wager; to depone as a wager; to impawn; to give as a caution, pledge, or security.
2. To measure; to take the contents of any vessel of liquids particularly. More properly gage.

GAIN. v. a. [gage, Fr.]
1. To wager; to depone as a wager; to impawn; to give as a caution, pledge, or security.
2. To measure; to take the contents of any vessel of liquids particularly. More properly gage.
3. To get ground; to prevail against:—

With one.
The English have not only gained upon the Venetians in the Levant, but have their cloth in Venice itself.

Addison.

4. To take influence with:—With one.

My good behaviour had gained so far on the emperor, that I began to conceive hopes of liberty.

Swift.

GAIN. adj. [an old word now out of use.]

Handy; ready; dexterous.

From physic.

Prejudice to the Accidence.

GA'INER. n. s. [from gain.] One who receives profit or advantage.

The client, besides retaining a clear conscience, is always a gainer, and by no means can be at any loss, since, as if the composition be overhand, he may relieve himself by recourse to his own notions.

Addison's Freeholder.

GA'INFUL. adj. [gain and full.]

1. Advantageous; profitable.

He will dazzle his eyes, and bait him in with the hocus-pocus proposal of some gainful purchase, some rich match, or advantageous project.

South.

2. Lucrative; productive of money.

Now he increases his gainful care.

Dryden.

Mars's name commodious precepts gives,

Instructive to the swains, nor wholly bent

On what is gainful; sometimes she diverts

From solid counsel.

Philostr. Philipp.

GA'INFULLY. adv. [from gainful.] Profitably; advantageously.

GA'INFULNESS. n. s. [from gainful.]

Profit; advantage.

GA'INGIVING. n. s. [gainst and give.]

The same as misgiving; a giving against; as, gainsaying which is still in use, is saying against, or contradicting.

It is but folly; but it is such kind of gainsaying as would, perhaps, trouble a woman.

Shakes. Hamlet.

GA'INLESS. adj. [from gain.] Unprofitable; producing no advantage.

GA'INLESSNESS. n. s. [from gainless.]

Unprofitableness; want of advantage.

The parallel holds good to the gainlessness as well as laboriousness of the work: miners, buried in earth and darkness, were never the richer for all the one they dig; no more is the insatiable miser.

Den of Prolix.

GA'INLY. adv. [from gain.] Handily; readily; dexterously. Out of use.

To GA'INSAY. v. a. [gainst and say.]

1. To contradict; to oppose; to controvert with; to dispute against.

Speeches which gainsay one another, most of necessity be applied both unto one and the same subject.

Too facile then, thou didst not much gainsay.

Nay, didst permit, approve, and fair dismiss.

Milton.

2. To deny any thing.

I never heard yet That any of those bolder Vices wanted

Less impudence to gainsay what they did,

Than to deny what they did see.

Shakes.

GA'INSAVER. n. s. [from gainsay.] Opponent; adversary.

Such as may satisfy gainsayers, when suddenly, and beyond expectation, they require the name at our hands.

We are, for this cause, challenged as manifest gainsayers of Scripture, even in that which we read for Scripture unto the people.

Hooker.
GAL
She still distrusts, and you must still adore;
Grant that the honey's much, the gall is more.
-Dryden's Ion. 4.

Rancour, malignity.
They did great harm unto his title, and have left a perpetual gall in the minds of the people.
-Spenser on Ireland.

Anger; bitterness of mind.
Suppose your hero was a lover,
Though he before had gall and rage;
He grew distempered and low,
He hates the light, and thus the blow.
-Prior

A slight hurt by fretting off the skin.
[From the verb.]
This is the fatal wound; as much superior to the former, as a gangrene is to a gull or scratch.

Government of the Tongue.

[From galla.]
Galls or galnuts are preternatural and accidental tumours, produced on trees; but those of the oak only are used in medicine. We have Oriental and European galls: the Oriental are brought from Aleppo, of the bigness of a large nutmeg, with thick hard substances on their surface, of a very firm texture, and a disagreeable, acerb, and astringent taste.
The European galls are of the same size, with perfectly smooth surfaces; they are yellowish, spongy, and cavernous within, and always of a light texture. They have a less astringent taste, and are not so much valued as the first general.
Shakesp.

GALLTOP. adj. [gallant, Fr. from galle fine dress, Span.]
1. Gay; well dressed; showy; splendidly:
magnificent.
A place of broad rivers, wherein shall go no galley with oars, neither shall galleys pass through the mill. 2. The gay, wise, the gallant, and the grave.

GALLANTLY. adv. [from gallant.]
1. Gayly; splendidly.
2. Bravely; nobly; generously.
You have not dealt to gallanty with us as we did in a former age; last year a paper was brought here from England, which we ordered to be burnt by the common hangman.
-Swift.

GALLANTRE. n. s. [galanterie, Fr.]
1. Splendour of appearance; show; magnificence; glittering grandeur; ostentatious finery.
Make the sun shine with galanterie, and all
The English youth flock to their admiral.
-Waller.
2. Bravery; nobleness; generosity.
The eminence of your condition, and the gallantry of your principles, will invite gentlemen to the useful and enviable study of nature.
-Galiano's Seaps Preface.

3. A number of galleys.
Hector, Delphus, and all the galleantry of Troy, I would have arm'd to-day.
-Shakesp.

4. Courtship; refined address to women.
The martial Moors, in galleantry resolv'd,
Invent new arts to make their charmers wifely.
-Granite.

5. Vicious love; levendus; debauchery.
It looks like a sort of combing between vice and love, as if a woman were allowed to be vicious; provided she be not a profligate; as if there were a certain point where galletry ends, and infamy begins.
-Swift.

GALLEss. n. s. [galenas, Fr.]
A heavy low-built vessel, with both sails and oars. It carries three masts, but they cannot be lowered, as in a galley. It has thirty two seats for rowers, and six or seven slaves to each. They carry three tire of guns at the head, and at the stern there are two tire of guns.
-Diet.
The Venetians pretend they could set out, in case of great necessity, thirty men of war, a d hundred galleys, and ten galleasses.
-Addison on Troy.
My father built no less
Than three great argosies, besides two galleasses.
And twelve small galleys.
-Shakesp.

GALLEON. n. s. [galiion, Fr.]
A large ship with four or sometimes five decks, not much used by the Spaniards.
I assumed that I would stay for them at Trinidad, and that no force should drive me thence, except I was sunk, or set on fire by the Spaniards.
-Ralegh's Apology.
The number of vessels were one hundred and thirty, whereof galleasses and galleons seventy-two, good ships, like laying Down or Caerlebon.
-Baron's War with Spain.

GALLERY. n. s. [gallerie, Fr. derived by Du cange from galeria, low Latin, a fine room.]
1. A kind of walk along the floor of a house, into which the doors of the apartments open; in general, any building of which the length much exceeds the breadth.
In most part there had been framed by art such pleasant arbours, that in a parallel case: last year a paper became a gallery shift from tree to tree, almost round about, which below gave a perfect shadow.
-Dryden.

2. By their sides lay up many lofty houses.
And goodly galleries fair overlaid.
-Swift.

Your gallery
Have we pass'd through, not without such consideration.
-Shakesp.

The row of return on the banquette side, let it be all stately galleries, in which galleries let there be three cupboards.
-Bacon.

A private gallery 'twixt th' apartments led,
Not to the foe yet known.
-Dryden.
GAL

Not is the shape of our cathedrals proper for our preaching auditories, but rather the figure of an amphitheatre, with galleries gradually overlapping each other; for into this condition the partial churches of London are driving space, as appears by the many galleries every day built in them. There are covered galleries that lead from the lower to five different churches.

GALLEY. n. s. [gale, galere, Fr.] A vessel, or vessel of war, made of one piece of wood, or of metal, and of sufficient dimensions to carry a number of men in it, for the purpose of carrying cannon or muskets.

1. A vessel large with arms, much in use in war or navigation; hence, any vessel made to carry cannon or muskets, or any vessel made to carry heavy ordnance.

2. It is proverbially considered as a place of toilsome misery, because criminals are condemned to row in them.

The most voluptuous persons, were to be tied to follow his hands and his motions, his dice and his courtships every day, would find it the greatest torment that could befall him; he would fly to the mines and the galleys for his recreation, and to the chase and the mattock for a diversion from the unity of a continual uninterrupted pleasure. South.

GALLEY-SLAVER. n. s. [gallow and slave.] A man condemned for some crime to row in the galleys.

As if one chain was not sufficient to hold poor men, both with incalculable other chains, this is just such another freedom as the Turkish galleys do enjoy. Bacon.

Hardwax galleys slaves despite munition.

Decay of the Party.

The surge gently dash against the shore,

Yields quit the plains, and galleys slaver their war.

Garth.

GALLIARD. n. s. [gaillard, Fr.] Imagined to be derived from the Gaulish ard-genuis, and gray.

1. A gay, brisk, lively man; a fine fellow.

Selden is a galliard by himself. Cleveclamb.

2. An active, nimble, sprightly dance.

It is in both senses now obsolete.

I did think, by the even proportion of thy leg, it was form'd under the star of a galliard. Shaksp. Twelfth Night.

There's nothing in France.

That can be with a nimble galliard won:

You cannot revel into dukedoms there. Shaksp.

If thou desire, that would take up all the time, let him find means they take off them, and bring others on; as musicians used to do with those that dance too long galleiards. Bacon.

The idea of changing of times have an agreement with the changes of motion; as when galleried time and measure time are in the medley of one dance. Bacon.

GALLIARDISE. n. s. [Fr.] Merriment; exuberant gaiety. Not in use.

If by my nature my ascendant was the wooden sign of Scrojuncus: I was born in the planetary hour of Saturn, and I think I have a piece of that leonian planet in me; I am no way facetious, not disposed for the mirth and galliardise of company. Bacon.

GALLICISM. n. s. [gallicisme, Fr. from galleys, Lat.] A mode of speech peculiar to the French language; such as, he figured in controversy; he hold this conduct; he hold the same language that another had held before; with many other expressions to be found in the pages of Bolingbrooke.

In English I would have gallissiers avoided, that we may keep to our own language, and not follow the French mode in our speech. Felton on the Class.

GALLIGASKINS. n. s. [Coligny Galleys, Skinner.] Large open hoes.

Not used in our languag.

GALLIMATIA. n. s. [galimathias, Fr.] Nonsense; talk without meaning.

GALLMA'NYRE. n. s. [gallimafric, Fr.]

1. A hoach-poch, or hash of several sorts of broken meat; a medley.

Hammer. They have made of one English tongue a gali-mafric, or hodge-podge, c of all other speeches. Spens.

2. Any inconsistent or Ridiculous medley.

They have a dance, while the woekers say is a gallimafric of gambols, because they are not in.

Shaksp. Winter's Tale.

The painter who, upon inspection of directing the eyes, will find his picture such variety's after the truth of history, would make a ridiculous piece of painting, and a mere gallimafric of his work.

3. It is used by Shakespeare ludicrously of a woman.

Sir John afflicts my wife.

Why, sir, my wife be not young.

He wore both high and low, both rich and poor.

He loves thy gallimafric friend. Shaksp.

GALLIOT. n. s. [gelliot, Fr.] A small swift galley.

Bartholomew desparing out of Hellepontus with eighty galleys and certain galleots, shaped his course towards Italy. Knolles History.

GALLON. n. s. [gley, Dut. shinning earth. Skinner.] The true derivation is from gala, Span. finery. Gala, or gallopot, is a fine painted pot. A pot painted and glazed, commonly used for medicines.

That said his master Socrates was like the apothecary's gullots, that had on the outside apes, owls, and satyrs; but within, precious drugs. Bacon's Apothec.

Here phials in nice discipline are set;

Their gullots are rang'd in alphabet. Garth.

Alexandrians thought it unsafe to trust the real secret of his phial and gullot to any man. Spri.

Then that dost Asclepius decide.

And on his gullots, in triumph ride. Fenim.

Gallon. n. s. [glo, low Lat.] A liquid measure of wine.

Beat them into powder, and boil them in a gallon of wine, in a vessel close stopped. Wiuenam's Sorg.

GALLOON. n. s. [gallon, Fr.] A kind of close lace made of gold or silver, or of silk alone.

To GALLIPOT, v. n. [galopar, Fr.] Derived by all the etymologists, after Baud, from xalcaton; but perhaps it comes from gant all, and open to run, but that is, to go on full speed.

Shaksp.

The galooping of horses who can't be come by? Shaksp.

His steeds will be restrained,

But galoop lively down the western hill.

Donne.

In such a shape grim Saturn did restrain

His headily limbs, and flow'd with such a mane,

When half surpris'd, and fearing to be seen,

Thus the galooper's from his jealous queen. Dryd.

To ride at the pace which is performed by leaps.

Shaksp.

Such seeing streams of blood as threatened a drowning life, we galooped toward them to part them.

Sidney.

They 'gan esp'y

An armed knight towards them galoop fast.

That seem'd from some scared foe to fly. Fairy Q.

He who fair and softly goes steadily forward, in a course that points right, will sooner be at his journey's end than he that runs after every one he meets, though he galoop all day full speed. Locke.

GALLOPER. n. s. [from gallon.]

1. A horse that galoops.

Mules bred in cold countries are much better to ride than horses for their walk and trot; but they are commonly rough galoopers, though some of them are very fleet.

Mortimer's Husbandry.

2. A man that rides fast, or makes great haste.

GALLOWAY. n. s. A horse not more than fourteen hands high, much used in the North; probably as coming originally from Galloway, a shire in Scotland.

To GALLOWY. n. a. [gallowy implies from, Sax.] To terrify; to fright.

The wrathful skyes

Gallow the very wand'rs of the dark,

And make their keep their caves. Shaksp.

GALLOWGLASSES. n. s.

It is worn likewise of的原因 under their shirts of mail, which the footmen the Irish call gallowglass; the which name doth discover them also to be ancient English; for gallowglasses signifies an English servant or yeoman. And he be any one arm'd in a shirt of mail, down to the calf of his leg, with a long broad ax in his hand, then is pedes gratius armature; and was instead of the footman that now weareth a corset, before the corset was used, or almost invented.

Spenser on Ireland.

2. [Hammer, otherwise than Spenser.] Soldiers among the wild Irish, who serve on horseback.
A gentleman had got a favourite spaniel, that would stroll toying and leaping upon guns, and playing a thousand pretty gambols. 1. Estrange.
Bacchus through the conqu’d Indies role;
And pots in gambols trick’d before their honest god.

2. A frolick; a wild prank.
For who did ever play his gambols,
With such unsavourable rambles! 2. Hubertus.

3. Insolement; sportive insult.
Do you not seek occasion of new quarrels,
On my refusal, they say he may be angry.

4. A single match at play.

5. Advantage in play.

6. Scheme pursued; measures planned.
This seems to be the present game of that crown, and that they will be no other till ‘twixt them.

Field sports: as, the chase, falconry.
If about this hour he make his way,
Under the colour of his usual game,
He shall find his friends with horse and men,
To set him free from his captivity.

What arms to use, or nets to frame
Wild beasts to combat, or to tame,
With all the mysteries of that game.

Some sportsmen, that were abroad upon game,
Sped in company of hounds and cranes. L’Estrange.

7. Animals pursued in the field; animals appropriated to legal sportmen.
Hunting, and such sport shall be his game,
With war, and hostile snare, such as refuse
Subjection to his empire tyrannous.

Hunters, and such sport shall be his game,
With war, and hostile snare, such as refuse
Subjection to his empire tyrannous.

8. Solemn contests, exhibited as spectacles to the people.
The games are done, and Caesar is returning.

9. Proud Nimrod first the bloody chase began,
A mighty hunter, and his prey was man:
Our hunting Nimrod boasts that Barb’s renown,
And makes like tyrants slaves the royal game.

Pope.

Go, with thy Cynthia hurl the pointed spear
At the rough bear, or chase the flying deer;
And I shall take my nobler aim.
At human hearts we fling, nor ever miss the game.

Prior.

The monsters of the A-od
Gambol around him in the wat’ry way,
And heavy whales in awkward measures play.
Pope.

To GAMBOIL. v. n. [gambiller, Fr.]
1. To dance; to skip; to frisk; to jump for joy; to play merry frolicks.

2. To leap; to start.
’Tis not madness
That I have utter’d; bring me to the test,
And I am sure will record, which madness

GAMBOIL. n. s. [from the verb.]
1. A skip; a hop; a leap for joy.
GAMUT. n. s. [gana, Ital.] The scale of musical notes.

Madam, before you touch the instrument, to learn the order of my fingers, I must begin with the notes of a gap.

To teach you gamut in a brief sort. Shakspe.

When by the gamut some musicians make a perfect song, others will undertake,
By the same gamut, to equal it:

Things simply good can never be unit. Donne.

Long has a race of heroes fill'd the stage,
That ran by note, and through the gamut:
In songs and airs express their martial fire, Combat in trails, and in a feige expire. Addison.

'Gan, for begen, from qan for begin.
The noble knight in red
His vital force to faint. Speaker.

To GANCHE. v. a. [ganciare, from gaciuo a hook, Ital. gancio, Fr.], To drop from a high place upon hooks by way of punishment; a practice in Turkey, to which Smith alludes in his Pococius.

Cohors cedita praedid striolitis
Gentium auxilii Christo trium iactum
Luctantia acta, penultiuie
Santigna tacitum in unci.

GANDER. n. s. [gander, Sax.] The male of the goose.

As deep drinketh the goose as the gander, Camd.
One gander will serve five geese. Mortimer.

To GANG. v. n. [gang, Dut. ganger, Sax. gang, Scott.] To go; to walk; an old word not now used, except ludicrously.

But let them gang alone,
As they have browsed, so let them bear blane. Speaker.

Your fluating beast gang with their breasts open. Arbuthnot.

GANG. n. s. [from the verb.] A number herding together; a troop; a company; a tribe; a herd. It is seldom used but in contempt or abhorrence.

O, you pandery rascals! there's a knot, a gang, a pack, a conspiracy against me. Shakspe.

As a gang of thieves were robbing a house, a mastiff fell a barking. L'Etrog.

Admitted in among the gang,
He set among, and they befriended him. Prior.

GANGHON. n. s. [Fr.] A kind of flower.

Ainslie.

GANGLION. n. s. [gâlgâno, L.] A tumour in the tendinous and nervous parts.

Bonesetters usually reproduce every bone dislocated, though possibly it be but a ganglion, or other erode tumour or ptericular protuberance of some part of a joint. Warton.

To GAGNERATE. v. a. [from gangrene.] To produce a gangrene; to mortify.

Parts conterated, gangrenated, sludated, and mortificed, become black, the radical moisture or vital sulphur suffering an extinction. Brown's Vade. Err. Nat. Hist.

She saves the lover, as we gangrene stay.
By cutting hope, like a loft limb, away. Wafer.

A dissoluer in the part was supposed an approach of a gangrene. Witenam's Surgeon.

If the substance of the soul is fettered with these passions, and gangrene is gone too far to be excised; these inflammations will rage to all eternity. Addison's Spectator.

To GAGNERE. v. a. [gangreneer, Fr.] from the noun. To corrupt to mortification.

In cold countries, when men's noses and ears are mortified, and, as it were, gangrened with cold, and they are not to be cure but by an open apoplexy, for that the few spirits that remain in those parts, are suddenly drawn forth, and so putrefaction is made complete. Bacon.

Gangren'd members must be lop'd away,
Before the nobler parts are tainted to decay. Dryd.

To GANGRENE. n. n. To become mortified.

Wounds imediate
Rankle and for works of gangrene
To black mortification. Milton's Agonistes.

As phlegmons are subject to mortification, so also are fat bodies, they are apt to gangrene after opening, if that fat be not speedily digested out. Wiseman.

GANGRENOUS. adj. [from gangrene.] Mortified; producing or betokening mortification.

The blood, turning serisonious, corrodes the vessels, producing humours, palestus red, lead-coloured, black and gangrenous. Arthuk. on Alim.

GANGWAY. n. s. In a ship, the several ways or passages from one part of it to the other. Gyang.

GANGWEEK. n. s. [gang and week.] Rogation week, when processions are made to lustre, the bounds of parishes. Dict.

GANTELOPE. n. s. [gantele, gant, all; and loopen to run, Dut.] A kind of wild goose, by a flock of which a virtuous was fabled to be carried to the lunar world. Brome.

They are but idle dreams and fancies, And favour strangely of the gantlet's. Hudsia.

GAON. n. s. [gane, Span. a goose.] A prison; a place of confinement. It is always pronounced and too often written jail, and sometimes goal.

Then am I the prisoner, and his bed my goal. Shakspe. King Lear.

If I have been ever free, and must my house.

Shakspe. If we mean to thrive and do good, break open the goal, and let out the prisoners. Shakspe.

To GAO. v. a. [from the noun.] To imprison; to commit to goal.

Ganding vagabonds was chargeable, pesternous, and of no use. Shakspe. Oth. and Cleop.

GAOLELIVERY. n. s. [gaoel, Welsh; gleo, Fr.] A prison; a place of confinement. It is always pronounced and too often written jail, and sometimes goal.

To be his friends, and his bed my goal. Shakspe. King Lear.

GAOLER. n. s. [from goal.] Keeper of a prison; he to whose care the prisoners are committed.

This is a gentle provost; seldom, when
The Steele-gaoler is the friend of men. Shakspe.

GAP. I know not how or why my early goaler,
Hard as his iron, and insolent as pow'r
When put in vulgar hands, Cleanthes.

Put off the brute. From the polite part of mankind she had been banished and immured, till the death of her goaler. Taitler.

GAP. n. s. [from gap.] 1. An opening in a broken fence.

Behind the despair, By custom and covetous pates, By gaps and open places, Taitler's Husbandry.

With terrours and with furies to the bounds And crystal wall of heav'n; which, opening wide, Rollo'd inward, and discharging to the wasteful deep. Milton's Paradise Lost.

Bushes are most lasting of any dead hedges, or garden gaps. Mortimer's Husbandry.

I didst it for man, says God, that should make up the hedge, and stand in the gap before me, for the hand that I should not destroy it. Rogers.

2. A breach.

The loss of that city concerned the Christian commonweal: manifold miseries afterwards ensu'd by the opening of that gap to all that side of Christians. Knolles.

3. Any passage.

So stands the Thracian herdman with his spear Full in the gap, and hopes the hunted bear May lick the snare, or come through the gap. Dryden.

4. An avenue; an open way.

The former kings of England passed into them a great part of their prerogatives; which though then it was well interlaced, and perhaps well deserted, yet now such a gap of mischief lies open thereby, that I could wish it were well stopt. Speer.

5. A hole; a deficiency.

If you violently proceed against him, mistaking his purpose, it would make a great gap in your honour. Shakspe. King Lear.

Is it any both or gap in the works of nature. More.

6. Any intercourse; a vacuity.

Each one demand, and answer to his part Performed in his wide gap of time, since first We were dissever'd. Shakspe. Winter's Tale.

That I might sleep out this great gap of time my Antony was away. Shakspe. Oth. and Cleop.

To make 'twist words and lines huge gaps Wide as meridians in maps. Hudsia.

One survive a languishing conversation of sudden surprising sentence; another is more deserts in seconding; a third can fill the gap with laughing. Swift.

7. An opening of the mouth in speech during the pronunciation of two successive vowels.

The hiatus, or gap between two words, is caused by two vowels opening on each other. Pepe.

8. To stop gap, is to escape by some mean shift; alluding to hedges mended with dead bushes, 'till the quicksets will grow. His policy consists in setting traps, In finding ways and means, and stopping gaps. Swift.

9. To stand in the gap. To make defence; to expose himself for the protection of something in danger.

What would become of the church if there were none more courageous for her rights than this? Who would stand in the gap? Lesly.

GAP-TOOTHEED. adj. [gap and tooth.] Having interstices between the teeth.

The receive, miller, and cook, are distinguished from each other, as much as the naming lady pro considered and broad speaking gap-tothed wife of Bath. Dryden.

To GAPE. v. n. [gapean, Sax.] 1. To open the mouth wide to yawn.
The men there were at all times gaping pigit.

Some, that are mad, if they behold a cat. Shakspe.

Gaping or yawning, and stretching, do pass from man to man, for that the mouth gaping and stretching is when the spirits are a little heavy by any vapour. Arbuthnot.
GAR

GARD. n. s. [garde, Fr.] Wardship; care; custody.

GARDEN. n. s. [gardd, Welsh; jardin, Fr.; giardino, Ital.]
1. A piece of ground inclosed, and cultivated with extraordinary care, planted with herbs or fruits for food, or laid out for pleasure.

Thy promises are like Adonias' gardens, Which one day bloomed, and fruitful were the next. Shakespeare

My lord of Ely, when I was last in Holland, I saw good strawberries in your garden there. Shaks.

In the old ordering of gardens, there ought to be gardens for all the months in the year. Bacon.

In every garden should be provided flowers, fruit-trees, and water. Temple.

My garden takes up half my daily care, And my field asks the minutes I can spare. Harte.

2. A place particularly fruitful or delightful.

I am arriv'd from fruitful Lombardy, The pleasant garden of great Italy. Shaks.

Peas and beans are what belong to garden-tillage as well as that of the field. Mortimer's Husband.

GARDENER, n. s. [from garden.] He that attends or cultivates gardens.

Our bodies are our gardens, to which our wills are governors; so, if we plant nettles, or sow lettuce, the power lies in our will. Shaks.

Gardener tread down any loose ground, after they have sown onions or turnips. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

The gardener may lop religion as he pleases. Howel.

The life and felicity of an excellent gardener is preferable to all other diversions. Eraston's Kalendar.

Then let the learned gardner mark with care The kinds of stocks, and what those kinds will bear. Bacon.

GARDENING. n. s. [from garden.] The act of cultivating or planning gardens.

My compositions in gardening are after the Pindarick manner, and run into the beautiful wildness of nature, without affecting the sicker elegancies of art. Spectator.

GARE. n. s. Coarse wool growing on the legs of sheep. Dict.

GARGARISM, n. s. [gargarizmus; gargarisme, Fr.] A liquid form of medicine to wash the mouth with. Quincy.

Aphlogistic qualities, gargarism draws the strength of every part. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

To Gargarize, v. a. [gargarize; gargarista, Fr.] To wash the mouth with medicated liquors. Bacon.

Vinegar, put to the nostrils, or gargarized, doth ease the hiccough; for that it is astringent, and inhibiteth the motion of the spirit. Bacon.
GAR

This being relaxed, may make a shaking of the larynx; as when we gargarize. t

GARRET, n. s. A distemper in cattle. t

GARLICK, n. s. 1. A species of garlic. 2. A sweet, pungent, and aromatic herb. 3. A vernal or autumnal wildlife; as when it rises to the height of thirty or forty feet, and spreads into many branches. When the flowers fall off the pointant, it becomes a round fruit, which, when ripe, has a rough, brownish rind, and a mealy sweet pulp, but a strong scent of garlic. Miller.

GARLICKET, n. s. A plant.

GARMENT, n. s. [garmenent, old Fr.] Any thing by which the body is covered; clothes; dress.

GARLAND, n. s. [garland, L.] 1. A wreath of branches or flowers.

2. To wear a garland on the head, as a mark of victory. 3. To wear a garland of leaves, as a sign of victory. 4. A coronet of flowers, or a wreath of flowers, as a mark of honor or distinction.

GARLIE, n. s. [garlie, Fr.]

GARNERSH. n. s. [from garnish.] Ornament; embellishment.

The church of Santa Gaustiana in Padua is a sound piece of good art, where the materials being ordinary stone, without any garnishment of sculpture, raise the beholders. Wotton.

GARNITURE, n. s. [from garnish.] Furniture; ornament.

They conclude, if they fall short in garniture of their knees, that they are inferior in furniture of their hands, to the gods of the Tongue. Plain sense, which pleased your sires an age ago, is lost without the garniture of show. Grenville. A nature has preserved her charms upon the female part of our species, so they are very assiduous in bestowing upon themselves the finest garniture of art. Addison's Spect.

GARLIE, n. s. [garlie, Fr.]

1. Ornamentation; decoration; embellishment. Shakesp. Matter and the Frenchmen produce; For garnish this, and they can read. They seek to feed and please their guests. Prior.

2. Things strewed round a dish.

3. [In gaols.] Fetters. A cant term.

4. Penitentia decorarum; an acknowledgment in money when first a prisoner goes into a gaol. Ainsworth.

GARRISON, n. s. [from garnish.] Ornament; embellishment.

The church of Santa Gaustiana in Padua is a sound piece of good art, where the materials being ordinary stone, without any garnishment of sculpture, raise the beholders. Wotton.

GARRIS. n. s. [garrison, L.] An inhabitant of a garret.

1. Soldiers placed in a fortified town or castle to defend it.

How oft he said to me, Thou art no soldier fit for Capitain's garrison. Sidney.

2. Fortified place stored with soldiers. Whom the old Roman wall so ill conf'd, With a new chain of garrisons you bind. WaIler.
GAS

3. The state of being placed in a fortification for its defence.
Some of them that are hid in garrison will do no great hurt to the enemies. Specie on Ireland.
To Garrison. v. a. [from the noun.]
To secure by fortresses.
Others those forces join,
Which garrison the conquists near the Rhine.
Dryden's Journal.
GARRULITY. n. s. [garrulitas, Lat.]
1. Loquacity: incontinence of tongue; inability to keep a secret.
2. The quality of talking too much; talkativeness.
Surfaces of speech must carefully be avoided; first of all, loquacity or garrulity. Ray on the Great.
GARRULOUS. adj. [garruluses, Latin.]
Prattling; talkative.
Old age looks out,
And garrulity recounts the feats of youth. Thoms.
GARTER. n. s. [gordus; Welsh; jartier, Fr. from gare, Welsh, the binding of the knee.]
1. A string or ribbon by which the stocking is held upon the leg.
Let their heads be sleekly comb'd, their blue coats brash'd, and their garters of an indifferent knit.
Shakep. Taming of the Shrew.
When we rest in our clothes we loosen our garters, and other ligatures, to give the spirits free passage.
Rany. Handsome garter at your knees. Swift.
There lay three garters, half a pair of gloves,
And all the trophies of his former loves. Pope.
2. The mark of the order of the garter, the highest order of English knighthood.
Now by my george, my garter.
—The george profound, hath lost his holy honour.
The garter, blesse'd, p.'n'd, p.'n'd his knightly virtue.
Shakep. Rich. III.
You owe your Ormond nothing but a son,
To fill in future times his father's place,
And wear the garter of his mother's race. Dryden.
3. The principal king at arms.
To Garter. v. a. [from the noun.]
To bind with a garter.
He, being in love, could not see to garter his hose.
Shakep. A person was wounded in the leg, below the gartering place. WBM's Surgery.
GARTH. n. s. [as if girth, from gird.]
The bulk of the body measured by the girdle.
GAS. n. s. [A word invented by the chymists. It is used by Van Helmont, and seems designed to signify, in general, a spirit not capable of being coagulated: but it uses it loosely in many senses.
Harris.
GASCONADE. n. s. [Fr. from Gascon, a nation eminent for boasting.] A boast; a bravado.
Was it a gasconade to please me, that you said your fortune was increased to one hundred a-year since I left you?
To Gasconade. v. n. [from the noun.]
To boast; to brag; to bluster.
To GASS. v. a. [from hacher, to cut, Fr. Skinner.]
To cut deep so as to make a gapping wound; to cut with a blunt instrument so as to make the wound wide.
Where the Englishmen at arms had been defeated, many of their officers were found formerly gashed or gored to death.
To GAST. v. a. [from gare, Saxon. See Aghast.]
To make aghast; to fright; to shock; to terrify; to fear; to affray.
GAT

When he saw my best alarum spirits
Bold in the quadrant's right, rose to his encounter,
Or whether gartered by the note I made,
Fall suddenly he fled. Shakesp. King Lear.
GASTRICK. adj. [from gasc.]
Belonging to the belly.
GASTROGRAPHY. n. s. [gasc. and παίνει.]
In strictness of etymology signifies no more than sewing up any wound of the belly; yet in common acceptation it implies, that the wound of the belly is complicated with another of the intestines.
Sharp's Surgery.
GASTROMY. n. s. [gasc. and τίραμ.]
The act of cutting open the belly.
GAT. The pretender of get.
Moses got him up into the mount. Ex. xiv. 18.
GATE. n. s. [gat. Sax.]
1. The door of a city, castle, palace, or large building.
Open the gate of mercy, gracious God!
My soul flit through these wounds to seek thee.
Shakep. Gates of mansions
Are arch'd so high, that giants may jet through,
And keep their impious turbans on, without
Good-morrow to the sun. Shakep. Cymbel.
2. A frame of timber upon hinges to give a passage into enclosed grounds.
Know'st thou the way to Dover?
—Both stile and gate, horseway, and footpath.
Shakep.
3. An avenue; an opening.
Arms had done nothing but wisely and politicly,
In setting the Venetians together by the ears with the Turks, and opening a gate for a long war. Kehlles.
GATEVEIN. n. s. The vena porta.
Bringing a king that loved wealth, he could not endure to have trade sick, nor any obstruction to continue in the gatrein which disperseth that blood.
Horon's Henry VII.
GATEWAY. n. s. [gate and way.]
A way through gates of enclosed grounds.
Gateways between inclosures are so miry, that they cannot cut between one field and another.
—Mr. Mortimer's Husbandry.
To GATIER. v. a. [gatieran, Sax.]
1. To collect; to bring into one place.
Gather stones—and they took stones and made an heap.
Gen.
2. To get in harvest.
The seventh year we shall not sow, nor gather in our increase.
Lev. xxv. 20.
3. To pick up; to glean.
His opinions
Have satisfied the king for his divorcer,
Gather'd from all the famous colleges.
Shakep.
Cast up the highway, gather out the stones.
Is. bll. 10.
I will spend this preface upon those from whom I have gathered my knowledge; for I am but a gatherer.
Wotton.
To pay the creditor, that lent him his rent, he must gather up money by degrees.
Licie.
4. To crop; to pluck.
What have I done?
To see my youth, my beauty, and my love.
No sooner gain'd, but slighted and betray'd;
And like a rose just gather'd from the stalls,
But only smelt, and cleanly thrown aside.
To wither on the ground! Dryden's Span. Fryar.
5. To assemble.
They have gathered themselves together against me.
All the way we went there were gathered some people on both sides, standing in a row. Bacon.
Job.
6. To heap up; to accumulate.
He that by sly and unjust gates increaseth his substance, shall gather it for him that will pity the poor.
Prov.
GATHERER. n. s. [from gather.]
1. One that gathers; one that collects a gatherer.
I will spend this produce after whom I have gathered my knowledge; Dryden.

2. One that gets in a crop of any kind.
A heretof and gainer of yecamare fruit.

GATHERING. n. s. [from gather.] Collection of charitable contributions.
Let every one lay by him in store, that there be no gathering when I come. 1 Cor. xvi. 2.

GATTEN-TREE. n. s. A species of Cornelian cherry.

GAUDE. n. s. [The etymology of this word is uncertain; Skinner imagines it may come from gaud, a yellow flower, yellow being the most coloured, Janius, according to his custom, talks of gaudus; and Mr. Lyte finds gaud, in Douglass, to signify deceit or fraud, from gaudwido, Weleh, to cheat. It seems to me most easily deducible from gaudium, Lat. joy; the cause of joy; a token of joy: thence aptly applied to any thing that gives or expresses pleasure. In Scotland this word is still retained, both as a showy bawble, and the person fooled. It also in Scotland denotes a yellow flower. An ornament; a fine thing; anything worn as a sign of joy. It is not now much used.

It should impress her fantasy,
With bracelets of thy hair, rings, gauds, conceits,
Knacks, trifles, nosegay, sweetmeats. Shakesp.

The sun is in the heaven, and the proud day,
Attended with the pleasures of the world,
Is all too wanton, and too full of gauds,
To give me audience. Shakesp. King Lear.

GAUDEL. v. a. [gaudeo, Lat.] To exult; to rejoice at any thing.
Go to a gaydles feast, and gaudle with me,
After so long grief such nativity. Shakesp.

GAU'DER. n. s. [from gaude.] Finery; ostentations luxury of dress.
The triumph was not pageants and gaudery, but one of the wisest and noblest institutions that ever was. Bacon's Essays.

Age, which is but one remove from death, and should have none. But what looks like a decent preparation for it, scarce ever appears, of late, but in the high mode, the florishing garb, the garb of the gaydles, and as much in the fashion, as the person that wears them is usually grown out of it, South.

A plain suit, since we can make but one, is better than to be tarnish'd gaudy grown. Dryden.

GAUDI.LY. adv. [from gaudy.] Showly.

GAU'DINESS. n. s. [from gaudy.] Showiness; this dross. Dryden.

GAUDY. adj. [from gaudy.] Showy; splendid; pomposous; ostentatically fine.
Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
But not express in fancy; rich, not gaudy.

For that apparel oft proclaims the man. Shakesp.
GAY

Those ears and dukes have been privileged with royal jurisdiction; and appointed their special officers, as sheriff, admiral, governor, and exchequer.
Carew on Cornwall.

GAUNT. adj. [As if goose, from geese-man, to lessen, Sax.] Thin; slender; lean; meagre.
Oh, how that name befits my composition!
Old Gaunt, indeed, and gaunt in being old:
Within me grief hath kept a tedious fast;
And who abstains from meat that is not gaunt?
For sleeping England long time have I watch'd;
Watching breeds leanness, leanness is all gaunt;
The pleasure that some fathers feed upon
Is yet my lot; I tend my child's looks;
And therein fasting, thou hast made me gaunt;
Gaunt am I for the grave, gaunt as a grave;
Whose hollow wound inheritors might lust.
Shaksp. Richard II.

Two mastiffs, gaunt and grim, his light pursu'd
And oft their fasten'd fangs in blood embrued; Dryg.

GAUNTLY. adv. [from gaunt.] Leanly; slenderly; meagrely.

GAUNTLET. n. s. [gantalet, Fr.] An iron glove used for defence, and thrown down in challenges. It is sometimes in poetry used for the custos, or boxing glove.
A sealy gauntlet now, with joints of steel;
Most glove this hand.
Shaksp. Henry IV.
Feel the sweet grateful sense, soft and rough.
This a gauntlet, that a muff.
Cowper.
Some shall in swiftness for the goal contend,
And others with a twang of bow to bend;
The strong with iron gauntlets arm'd shall stand,
Opp'd in combat on the yellow sand.
Dryg.
Who naked wrestled best, besmear'd with oil;
Or who with gauntlets gore'd or took the foil.
Dryg.
The funeral of some valiant knight
May give this thing its proper light;
View it two gauntlets; these declare
That both their hands were us'd to war.
Prior.
So to repel the Vandal's of the stage,
Our very heart's most tragic rage;
He throws the gauntlet Oway used to wield,
And calls for Englishmen to judge the field.
Southern.

GAVOT. n. s. [gravete, Fr.] A kind of dance.
The disposition in a fiddle to play tunes in preludes, sarabands, jigs, and gaunts, are real qualities in the instrument.
Arbuthn.

GAUZE. n. s. A kind of thin transparent silk.
Silken cloths were used by the ladies; and it seems they were thin, like gauze; Arbuthn.
Because of their fineness, and tabbies and gauze are lately brought over.
Seft.

GAWK. n. s. [gaac, Sax.] 1. A cuckoo.
2. A foolish fellow. In both senses it is retained in Scotland.

GAWN. n. s. [corrupted for gawn.]
A small tub, or lading vessel. A provincial word.

GAWNTREE. n. s. [Scott.] A wooden frame on which beer-casks are set when taken baptised.

GAZ. adj. [gaze, Fr.] 1. Airy; cheerful; merry; frolic.
Smooth flow the waves, the zephyrs gently play,
Belinda snail'd, and all the world was gay.
Pope. Ev'n rival wits did Voltaire's fate deplore,
And the gay mound, who never mournd before.
Pope.
2. Fine; showy.
A virgin that loves to go gay.
Bar. vi. 9.

GAZ. n. s. [fiftheen, collective.] An ornement; an embellishment.
Morose and untractable spirits look upon precepts in emblem, as they do upon gauze and pictures, the fooleries of so many old wives tales. Esronge.

GAZETY. n. s. [gazet, Fr. from gay.] 1. Cheerfulness; airiness; merriment.
And from those gazettes our youth requires
To exercise their minds, our age retires.
Denham. 3. Finery; show.
Our gazettes and our guilt are all besmirch'd,
With rainy marching in the painful field.
Shaksp.

GAYLY. adv. 1. Merrily; cheerfully; airyly.
2. Spiritedly; pompously, with great show.
The ladies, gaiety the day adorn
With curious dies, and paint the sunny morn.
Gay. Like some fair flow'r, that early Spring supplies,
That gay show of gaiety in blooming Dept.
Pope.

GAZENESS. n. s. [from gazety.] Gaiety;
finery. Not much in use.
To GAZE. v. n. [gavotte, or rather gavane, to see, Sax.] To look intently and earnestly; and to look with gaiety.
What see'st thou there? King Henry's diadem,
Inchas'd with all the honours of the world:
If so, gaze on.
Shaksp. Henry IV.
From some she cast her modest eyes below;
At some her gazing glances flowing flew.
Fairfax. Gaze not on a maid, that thou fall not into those things that are precious in her.
Eccl. ix. 5.
A lover's eyes will gaze an eagle blind.
Shaksp.
High stations blay, care;
None think the great unhappy, but the great;
Foals gaze and envy; Envy darts a sting,
While he who in a gauntlet stands as a king.
To GAZE. v. a. To view stedfastly.
Strait toward heav'n my wondering eyes I turn'd,
And gaz'd awhile the amply sky.
Milton.

Gaze. n. s. [from the verb.] 1. Intent regard: look of gaiety and wonder; fixed look.
Being lighted by her beauty's beam,
And thereby filled with happy influence;
And lifted up above the world's gaze,
To sing with angels her immortal praise.
Spenser.
Do not note her; if any air of music touch their ears,
You shall perceive them make a mutual stand,
Their savage eyes turn'd to a modest gaze.
By the sweet power of music.
Shaksp.
Not a month
'Fore your queen dy'd, she was more worth such gaze
Than what you look on now.
Shaksp.
With secret gaze,
Or open admiring, they look'd.
On whom the great Creator hath bestow'd Worl'ds.
Milton's Par. Lost.
Peace is a dark writer, wants connexion as our understanding, soars out of sight, and leaves his readers at a gaze.
Dryg.
After having stood at gaze before this gate,
He discovered an inscription.
Addison's Freindholder.

2. The object gazed on.
I must die
Betray'd, captiv'd, and both my eyes put out;
Made of mine enemies the scorn and gaze;
To grin in brutish fletters, under task,
With my heart's aveng'd strength.
Milton's Agon.

GAZEL. n. s. An Arabian deer.

GAZER. n. s. [from gazer.] He that gazes;
one that looks intently with gaiety or admiration.
In her cheeks the vernial red did shine,
Like roses in a bed of lilies shed;
The which ambrosial odours from them threw,
And gazer sense with double pleasure fed.
Fairly Q. Shall I play more gazer than the basilisk.
Shaksp.
Bright as the sun, her eyes the gazers strike;
And, like the sun, they shine on all alike.
Pope.

GAZELFUL. adj. [gaze and full.] Looking intently.
The brightness of her beauty clear,
The raviest hearts of gazer men might rear
To admiration of that heavenly light.
Spenser.

GAZEHOUND. n. s. [gaze and hound; canis agassizei, Skinner.] A hound that pursues not by the scent, but by the eye.
Seest thou the gazehound! how with glance severe
From the close herds he marks the destin'd deer;
Tickeet.

GAZETTER. n. s. [gazette is a Venetian half-breed. New editions of a newspaper of which the first was published at Venice.] A paper of news; a paper of public intelligence. It is accentuated differently on the first or last syllable.
And sometimes when the loss is small,
And danger great, they challenge all;
Print new editions to their feats,
And emendations in gazettes.
They.
An English gentleman, without geography, cannot understand a gazette.
Lickel.
One cannot bear a name mentioned in it that does not bring to mind a piece of the gazette.
Addl. All, but all facts, tells dead-born from the press.
Pope.

GAZETTERER. n. s. [from gazette.] 1. A writer of news.
2. An officer appointed to publish news by authority, whom Steele calls the lowest minister of state.
Satire is no more. I feel it die;
gazetter more insensible than I.

GAZINGSTOCK. n. s. [gaze and stock.] A person gazied at with scorn or abhorrence.
These things are offences to us, by making us gazingstocks to others, and objects of their scorn and derision.
Ray.

GAZON. n. s. [Fr.] In fortification pieces of fresh earth covered with grass, cut in form of a wedge, about a foot long and half a foot thick, to line parapets and the traverses of galleries.
Harris.

GEAR. n. s. [garman, to clothe; zeppa, furniture, Sax.] 1. Furniture; accoutrements; dress; habit; ornaments.
Array thyself in her most gorgeous gear.
Fair-Q.
When he found her bound, strip't from her gear,
And vile tormentors ready saw in place,
He broke through.
Fair-Q.
Whom shefov kept up about his country gear.
Mil.
Fancy every observer as I walk the street,
and long to be in my old plain gear again.
Addison's Guardian.

To see some radiant nymph appear
In all her glittering birthday gear,
Yoo think some goddess from the sky
Descended, ready cut and dry.
Seft.

2. The traces by which horses or oxen draw.
Apollo's steed Phaethon discerned, and flew to Tyre's sun.
His scowre reacht, and his horse made fresh;
Then took her angry rary.
king Lemuel, brake his gear.
Chapman's II.
The frands he learned in his frantick years
Made him uneasy in his lawful gear.
Dryg.

3. Stuff. If fortune be a woman, she is a good wench for this gear.
Shaksp. Merch. of Venice.

4. [In Scotland.] Goods or riches; as, he has gear enough.

5. The furniture of a draught-horse.

GEASON. adj. [A word which I find only in Spenser.] Wonderful.
It leeches seemed strange and gason.
Hubb.

GEAT. n. s. [corrupted from jet.] The hole through which the metal runs into the mold.
Moxon.
G E L

GECK. n. s. [geek, a cackow; geck, Ger., a fool; gueck, Scott.] A bubble easily imposed upon. Homner. Obsolete.

GEESE. The plural of goose. G E L A B L E. adj. [from gelu, Lat.] What may be concealed, or concreted into a gelly.

GELATINE. adj. [gelatous, Latin.] GELATINOUS. Formed into a gelly: viscous; stiff and cohesive.

GELD. n. [from gelu, Lat.] One that performs the act of castration. Geld bull-calf and ram-lamb as soon as they fall.

GELDER. n. s. [from gelf.] One of the better gellers, as many one do. GELDER-ROSE, n. s. [suppose brought from Guilderland.] The leaves are like those of the maple-tree: the flowers consist of one leaf, in a circular rose form.

GELID. adj. [gelidus, Lat.] Extremely cold. GELIDITY. n. s. [from gelid.] Extremely cold. GELIDNESS. n. s. [from gelid.] Extremely cold. GELLY. n. s. [gelatous, Lat.] Any viscous body; viscosity; glue; gluey substance.

G E M

GEM. My best blood turn.*

To an infected self. Shakesp. Winter's Tale.

The tapers of the gods,
The sun and moon, became like waxen globes,
The shadows fail, all end in purple gels.

And chaos is at hand. Daven and Lee's Oedipus.

The white of an egg will esquagare by a moderate beat, and the hardest of the animal solids are reducible to gels. Arbuthnot.

GELT. n. s. [from gelt.] A castrated animal; gelling. Not used.

The spayed gelsa they esteem the most profitable. Martiner.

GELT. The participle passive of gelt. Let the others be gel't for oxen. Morin. Hub.

1. A jewel; a precious stone of whatever kind.

Love his fancy drew;

And so to take the gem Urania sought. Sidney.

But the little rings, their precious gems new lost, became his guide, Led him, begg'd for sav'd him from despair.

Shakesp. It will seem a hard matter to shadow a gem, at well pointed diamond, that hath many sides, and give to the gourte where it ought. Penn, on Draw. Stones of small worth may lie unseen by eyes of natural sense, But night itself does the rich gem betray. Cowley.

The basis of all gems is, when pure, wholly diaphanous, and either crystal or an adamantine matter: but we find the diaphanity of this matter changed, by means of a fine metalick matter.

GEMMY. n. s. [gemmous, Lat.] Gemmous.

2. The first bud. From the joints of the prolific stem A swelling knot is raised, called a gem; Whence, in short space, itself the cluster shows. Desharn. Embolden'd out they come,

And swell the gems, and burst the narrow room. Daven.

To GEM. v. a. [gemat.] To adorn, as with jewels or buds.

To GEM. v. n. [geminate, Latin.] To form the first buds.

Last rose, in dance, the stately trees, and spread Their generations among eloquent fruits, Their blossoms. Milton's Paradise Lost.

GEMELLIPAROUS. adj. [gemelli and pario, Lat.] Bearing twins. Dict.

To GEMINATE. v. a. [gemino, Latin.] To double.

GEMINATION. n. s. [from geminate.] Repetition; reduplication.

Fear not, of them that kill the body: fear them, which, after he hath killed, hath power to cast into hell: yea, I say unto you, with a gemination, which the present controversy shews not to have been casuall, he is a beast. Tho. Brad. Gemmary. n. s. [gemini, Lat.] Twins; a pair; a brace; a couple.

I have granted upon my good friends for three reprieves for you, and your confederate, Nim; or else you had looked through the gate, like a gemy any of baboons. Shakesp.

A geminy of asses split will make just four of you. Congress.

GEMINOUS. adj. [geminous, Lat.] Double.

Christians have baptized these geminous births, and double consecutories, with several names, as according to the division of souls. Breton. GEMMARY. adj. [from gem.] Pertaining to gems or jewels.

The principle and gemmary affection is its transluency: as for iridancy, which is found in many gems, it is not conceivable in this brow. Gemmous. adj. [gemmeus, Lat.]

1. Tending to gems.

2. Resembling gems.

GEMMOSITY. n. s. [from gem.] The quality of being a jewel. Dic.

GEMOTE. n. s. A meeting; the court of the hundred. Obsolete.

GENDER. n. s. [gender, Lat. gendre, Fr.] 1. A kind; a sort. Not in use.

Our bodies are our gardens, to which the wills are gardeners; s. that if we will supply it with one gender of herbs, or distract it with many, the power and curribile authority of this lies in our will.

The other motive, Why to a publick count I might not go, Is the great love the general gender bare me. Shak.

2. A sex.

3. In grammar. A denomination given to nouns from their being joined to an adjective in this or that termination. Clker.

Cubitus, sometimes cubinm in the neutral gender, signifies the lower part of the arm on which we lean. Arbuthn.

Ulysses says of Nausicaa, yet immediately changes the words into the masculine gender. Bromde.

To GENDER. v. a. [engender, Fr.] 1. To beget.

To produce; to cause.

Foolish and unlearned questions avoid, knowing that they do gender strife. 2 Tim. ii. 23.

To GENDER. v. n. To copulate; to breed.

A chesn for foul loads To gender in. Shakesp. Obstelo.

You shall not let thy cattle gender with a diverse kind. Lev. xix. 19.

GENERAL. adj. [from galenology.] Pertaining to descents or families; pertaining to the history of the successions of houses.

GENEALOGIST. n. s. [genazard; genealogical, Fr.] He who traces descents.

GENEALOGY. n. s. [gene and lege.] History of the succession of families; enumeration of descent in order of succession; a pedigree.

The sires of these races were the most distinguished from anther, as if it were a pedigreed or genealogy. Baran. The.

GENERABLE. adj. [from genera, Lat.] That may be produced or begotten.

GENERAL. adj. [general, Fr. generalis, Lat.] 1. Comprehending many species or individuals; not special; not particular.

To conclude from particular to general is a false way of arguing. Bromde.

3. In signification; not restrained to any special or particular import.

Where the authority speaks more strictly and particularly on any theme, it will explain the more loose and general expressions. Huts.

Not restrained by narrow or distinctive limitations.

A general idea is an idea in the mind, considered there as separated from time and place, as so capable to represent any particular being that is convertible to it. Locke.

4. Relating to a whole class or body of men, or a whole kind of any being.

They, because some have been admitted without trial, made that fault general which is particular.

5. Publick; comprising the whole.

Nor would we deign him barab of his men, Till be disbursed at St. Colm'skhill isle. Shaksp.

Ten thousand dollars to our general use. Shaksp.
The generality of the English have such a fa-von opinion of treason, nothing can them. They publish their ill-natured discoveries with a secrepride, and applied themselves for the satisfaction of their judgment, which has found as little what the generality of mankind admires. Addition.

The wisest were distracted with doubts, while the generality wandered. Rogers.

Generally, adv. [from general.]

1. In general; without specification or exact limitation. I am not a woman to touch'd with so many great favours as he hath generally taxed with.

Shakesp.

2. Extensively, though not universally.

3. Commonly; frequently.

4. In the main; without minute detail; in the whole taken together. Generally speaking, they live very quietly. Add.

5. Generally speaking, they have been gaining even since, though with frequent interruptions. Swift.

6. Generally speaking, persons designed for long life, though in their former years they were small creatures, yet find their appetites exercized with their age.

Guickmore.

GENERALNESS. n. s. [from general.]

Widest extent, though short of universality; frequency; commonness. They had, with vulgar fancy springing by the generality of the cause of than any artificial practice, set themselves in arms. Sidney.

GENERALITY. n. s. [from general.] The whole; the totality. The municipal laws of this kingdom are of a vast extent, and it is generally true that those several laws which are allowed as the rule of justice and judicial proceedings. Hale.

GENERANT. n. s. [generans, Lat.] The begetting or productive power. Some believe the soul made by God, some by angels, and some by the generant; whether it be immediately created or produced hath been the great ball of contention. Galvani's Essay.

In such pretended generations the generant or active principle is supposed to be the sun, which, being an infinite machine, cannot act otherwise than by his heat.

Galvani.

To GENERATE. v. a. [genera, Lat.]

1. To beget; to propagate.

Those creatures which being wild generate seldom, being tame, generate often. Bacon.

2. To produce to life; to procreate.

God created the great whales, and each

Soul living, each that crept, which plenteously

The waters generated by their kinds. Milton.

Or find some other way to generate.

Mankind. Milton's Par. Lost.

3. To cause; to produce.

Sounds are generated where there is no air at all.

Bacon.

Whatever generates a quantity of good chive, must likewise generate milk.

Arabidou.

GENERATION. n. s. [from generant; ge-eration, Fr.]

1. The act of beget ting or producing.

Seals make excellent impressions; and so it may be thought of sounds in their first generation: but then the different impressions, by any sealing, shews they cannot be impressions. Bacon.

He longer will delay, to hear thee tell His generation, and the rising birth

Of nature, from the unapparent deep. Milton.

If we deduce the several races of mankind in the same particular to the world from generation, we must imagine the first numbers of them, who are each one agree upon any civil constitutions, to assemble as so many heads of families whom they represent. Temple.

2. A family; a race.

3. Progeny; offspring.

The barb'rous Scythians, Orde that make his generations,

To gorge his appetite, shall to my bosom

Be as well neighbour'd. Shakesp. King Lear.

4. A single succession; one gradation in the scale of genealogical descent.

This generation shall not pass 'till all these things be fulfilled.

Matthew.

5. An age. By some of the ancients a generation was fixed at an hundred years; by others at an hundred and ninety, by others at thirty-three.arness.

GENERATIVE. adj. [generatif, Fr. from genere, Lat.]

1. Having the power of propagation.

He gave to all, that have life, a power generative, thereby to continue their species and kinds.

GENERATIVE. adj. [generique, Fr. from genereus, Latin.] That comprehends the genus, or distinguishes from another genus, but does not distinguish the species.

The word consumption being applicable to a proper, and improper to a true and bastard consumption, requires a generative quadrature to both.

Harvey on Consumption.

Though wine differs from other liquids, in that it is the juice of a certain fruit; yet this is but a general or generick difference; for it does not distinguish wine from cider or perry; the specific difference of wine, therefore, is its pressure from other liquids, and the property of the incorporation with wine.

GENERICALLY. adv. [from generick.]

With regard to the genus, though not distinguishing the species.

These have all the essential characteristics of sexuals, and shew that they are of the very same specific gravity with those to which they are so generically allied. Woodward.

GENEROUS. adj. [generosus, Latin;

genereus, Fr.] The quality of being generous; magnanimity; liberality.

Can he be the disbeliever of the grounds of true virtue and generosity than his young tutor?

Locke on Education.

It would not have been your generosity, to have passed by such a fault as this. Locke.
GEN

A generous virtue of a vigorous kind,
Partakes of the liveliness of the mind. Dryden.

That generous boldness to defend
An innocent or absent friend.
Swift.
The generous critic found the poet's fire,
And taught the world with reason to admire. Pope.
Such was — Rose common, not more learned than good,
With manners generous as his noble blood. Pope.

And ripes spirits as he ripes mine. Pope.

His generous spouse, Theano, heavily faint.
Nourished in the dell under a mother's care. Pope.

Pray for others in such forms, with such length, importunity, and earnestness, as you use for yourself, and the gods shall find it ill-natured to pass them.

A generous act, a generous hand;
That, should you err, may do you good.

For, sweet disposition! —
And the kind ness of it is as pleasant as it is generous.

The blight of men below and gods above! Dryden.

That gives cheerfulness, or supports life.

But will the light of life continue long,
But yields to double darkness high at hand;

So much I feel my generous spirits droop.

The natural, the native.

It chasely proceeds from natural incapacity, and generous inclination.

Vexation. Evr. Ge.

Generically. adv. [from generic.]

1. By genius; naturally.

Some men are genetically disposed to some op-

Genuinely, adv.

1. Not meanly with regard to birth.

2. Magnanimously; nobly.

2. In the largeness of his soul, and in the breadth of his conceptions.

3. Liberal, nobly.

Generosity. n.s. [from generous.]

The quality of being generous.

It is possible to conceive that the overflowing generous of the divine nature would create immortal beings with meaner powers.

Generically. adj. [from generic.]

In grammar, the name of a case, which

GENIUS. n.s. [genius, genet, Lat.]

Generation; the first book of Moses, which

NET: n.s. [Fr. The word originally signified a horseman, and perhaps a gentleman or knight.] A small-sized well-proportioned Spanish horse.

You'll have your nephew negligent, and your friend courteous for ever.

Shakespeare

Shakespeare

The science of calculating natures or predicting the future events of life from the stars predominant at the birth.

The truth of astrological predictions is not to be referred to the stars, but the geniuses con-

The genius of that royal age is a prodigious gen.

3. Mental power or faculties.

4. Disposition of nature by which any one is qualified for some peculiar employment.

A happy genius is the gift of nature. Dryden.

Yours is sagacity, and happy genius for natural history, in which you are well qualified for en- quiries of this kind than all the dead learning of the schools.

Burnet's Theory, Preface.

One science only will ever suit me.

So vast is art, so narrow human wit. Pope.

The Romans, though they had no great genius for trade, yet were not entirely neglective of it. Dryden.

Studios to please the genius of the ages,

The genius of the old. Gent.

Gent. adj. [gent, gentile] Elegant; soft; gentle; polite. Disguised.

Vespasian, with a gentle manner.

Foremost all: telli: genus gentil

Persuaded him to cease.

Gentilis. n.s. [gentilis, Lat.]

A man of a particular turn of mind.

Some geniuses are not capable of immediate satisfaction; and a man is born with talents for it as much as poetry, or any other science.

Tatler.

GENTILIS. n.s. [gentilis, Latin, Lat.]

Parts belonging to generation.

Ham is conceived to be Jupiter, who was the youngest son, who is said to have cut off the Gentile. n.s. [from gentilis.]

1. Elegantly; politely.

Those that would be genteelly learned, need not purchase it at the dear rate of being artists.

Gentile. n.s. [gentilis, Latin, Lat.]

Felwort or baldmony.

The root of gentile is large and long, of a tolerable firm texture, and remarkable tough; it has a faintish and disagreeable smell, and an extremely bitter taste.

If it be fistulous, and the office small, dilute it with gentian root.

Gentianella, n.s. A kind of blue colour.

Gentile. n.s. [gentilis, Latin, Lat.]

1. Of an unconverted nation; one who knows not the true God.

Tribulation and anguish upon every soul that doth evil, the Jew first, and also of the gentile.

Ravens.

Gentiles or infidels, in those actions, upon both the spiritual and temporal good, have been in one

Fine Basil desirish it may be her lot.

To grow, as a galliflower, trim in her pot;
GEN

That ladies and gentiles, for whom we do serve,
May help him as needeth, poor life to preserve.

Tueser.

GENTLESSE. n. s. [Fr.] Complaisance; civility. Not used.
She with her wedding-clad attendants
Her complaisance and gentilesse.

Hudibras.

GENTILISM. n. s. [gentilisme, Fr. from gentile.] Heathenism; paganism.

If invocation of saints been produced in the apostolical times, it would have looked like the introduction of gentilism again.

Stillingfleet.

GENTILIOUS. adj. [gentilitious, Lat.]

1. Endemical; peculiar to a nation.
That an unsavory odour is gentilious, or national unto the Jews, reason or sense will not induce.

Brown.

2. Hereditary; entailed on a family.
The common cause of this distemper is a particular and perhaps a gentilious disposition of body.

Arbuthnot.

GENTILITY. n. s. [gentilte, Fr. from gentil, fr. gentilis, Lat.]

1. Good extraction; dignity of birth.
2. Elegance of behaviour; gracefulness of mien; nicety of taste.
3. Gentry; the class of persons well born.
Gavelkind must needs, in the end, make a poor gentility.

Davies on Ireland.

4. Paganism; heathenism.
When people began to espy the falshood of oracles, whereupon all gentility was built, their hearts were violently inverted.

Hostet.

GENTLE adj. [gentilis, Lat.]

1. Well born; we descended; ancient, though not noble.
They entering and killing all of the gentle and rich faction, for honesty sake broke open all prisons.

Sidney.

These are the studies within our noble and gentle youth ought to bestow their time. Milt. on Ed. of gentle blood, part shed in honour's cause, each parent spring.

Gentlemanly.

2. Soft; bland; mild; tame; meek; peaceable.

I am one of those gentle ones that will use the devil himself with curtesie. Shakesp. Twelfth Night.

His voice was ever soft.

Gentle and low; an excellent thing in woman.

Shakesp.

As gentle, and as jocund, as to jest.

Go. I say, Shakesp.

A virtuous and a good man, revered in conversation, and gentle in condition. 2 Mnc. xvi. 12.

The gentle heart on earth is prov'd unkind.

Shakesp.

Your change was wise; for had she been devilish, a swift revenge would have follow'd her pride:

You from my gentle nature had no fear:

All my revenge is only in my tears. Dry. Ind. Emp.

He had such a gentle method of reprieving their faults, that they were not so much afraid as ashamed to repent them.

After.

3. Soothing; pacific.
And through this scene first gentle musicak found,

And his proper object is the speech of men.

Davies.

GENTLE adj. n.s.

Gentle, do not repreheud;

If you pardon, we will mend.

Shakesp.

Where is my lovely bride?

How does my father? Gentle, methinks you frown.

Shakesp.

2. A particular kind of worm.
He will in the three hot months bite at a flag-worm, so as to make gentle. Wal. on Angler.

To GENTLE. v. t. To make gentle; to raise from the vulgar. Obsolete.

He to-day that sheds his blood with me, shall be my brother: he be never so vile, this day shall make his condition. Shakesp.

VOL. I.
The tradition and remembrance, and love and fear of God, have so great influence to make men religious, that where any of these is, the rest, together with the true and genuine effects of them, are supposed to be.

A sudden darkness covers all;

True genuine night: night added to the groves.

Spelling corrected: "le" instead of "ly".

GEO

Experiments were at one time tried with genuine materials, and at another time with sophisticated ones.

The chief and remembrance, and love and fear of God, have such great influence to make men religious, that where any of these is, the rest, together with the true and genuine effects of them, are supposed to be.

A sudden darkness covers all;

True genuine night: night added to the groves.

GEO

GEO

Also, and in the largest sense of all, it extends to the various customs, habits, and governments of nations.

Watts.

Olympus is exulted by the Greeks as ascending unto heaven; but geography makes slight account hereof, when they discourse of Andes or Teneriff.

According to ancient fables the Argonauts sailed up the Danube, and from thence passed into the Adriatic, carrying their ships upon their shoulders: a mark of proof, a geographical Archaism.

The doctrine of the earth: the knowledge of the state and nature of the earth.

Eòmancer. n. s. [yi and märte]: a fortuneteller; a caster of figures; a cheat who pretends to foretell futurity by other means than the astrologer.

Fortunetellers, jugglers, geomancers, and the incantatory impostors, though commonly men of inferior rank, daily delude the vulgar.

Boyl.

GEOMANCY. n. s. [yi and marìte]: geomancy, Fr.

The act of casting figures; the act of foretelling by figures what shall happen.

According to some there are four kinds of divination: hydromancy, pyromancy, acromancy, and geomancy.

Agile.

GEOMANTICK. adj. [from geomancy].

Pertaining to the act of casting figures.

Two geometric figures were displayed.

Above his head, a warrior and a maid;

One when direct, and one when retrograde.

Dy.

GEOMETER. n. s. [geômêter]: geometry, Fr.

One skilled in geometry; a geometrician.

He became one of the chief geometers of his age.

Watts.

GEOMETRICAL. adj. [geometrical from geometry]. Pertaining to geometry.

Dict.

GEOMETRICAL. adj. [geômetrik]: metric, Fr. from geometry.

1. Pertaining to geometry.

A geometrical scheme is let in by the eyes, but the demonstrative is discerned by reason.

More.

This mathematical discipline, by the help of geometrical principles, doth teach to conceive several things.

2. Prescribed or laid down by geometry.

Must men take the measure of God just by the same geometrical proportions that he did, that others feel the height and bigness of Hercules by his foot?

Stilling-felt.

Does not this wise philosopher assert,

That the vast orb, which casts so fair beams,

Is such, or not much bigger than he seems?

That the dimensions of his glorious face,

Two geometrick feet do scarce surpass?

Blackmore.

3. Disposed according to geometry.

Geometrick Jasper seemeth of affinity with the lapis sanguinæus described by Boethius; but it is certainly one sort of lapis cruciforæ.

Grew.

Gemetrically. adv. [from geometrically]. According to the laws of geometry.

This possible geometrically to contrive such an artificial motion as shall be of greater swiftness than the revolutions of the heavens.

Wilkins.

All the motions of the vessels of Noah are contrived most geometrically, according to the strictest rules of mechanicks.

Bay.

Geometrician. n. s. [geôme'trik]: one skilled in geometry; a geometer.

Although there be a certain truth, geometricians would not receive satisfaction without demonstration thereof.

Brown.

How easily does an expert geometrician, with one glance of his eye, take in a complicated diagram, made up of many lines and circles?

Watts.

GER

To GEOMETRIZE. v. a. [gômet'rize]. To act according to the laws of geometry.

We obtrude good store of the figures, whose figures were differing enough, though prettily shaped, as if nature had at once affected variety in their figureation, and yet confined herself to geometric figures.

Boyl.

GEOMETRY. n. s. [gôme'tri'a]: geometry, Fr.

Originally signifies the art of measuring the earth, or any distances or dimensions on or within it: but it is now used for the science of quantity, extension, or magnitude abstractedly considered, without any regard to matter.

Geometry is usually divided into speculative and practical; and the former on some makes the foundations and the latter applies these speculations and theorems to use and practice.

Harr.

In the muscles alone there seems to be more geometry than in all the artificial engines in the world.

Ray on the Creation.

Him also for my censor I disdain,

Who thinks all science, as all virtue, vain;

Who counts geometry and numbers toys,

And with his foot the sacred dust destroys.

Dry.

Geo'ponical. adj. [geôponical. Fr.]. Relating to agriculture; relating to the cultivating of the ground.

Such expressions are frequent in authors geo-nicus, the son of a bridist.

Geo'ponick's. n. s. [yi and marìte]. The science of cultivating the ground; the doctrine of agriculture.

George. n. s. [Georgius, Lat.]

1. A figure of St. George on horseback worn by the knights of the garter.

Look on my George, I am a gentleman;

Rate me at what thou wilt.

Shakep. Henry VI.

2. A brown leaf. Of this sense I know not the original.

Cab'lld in a cabin, on a mattress laid,

On a brown george, with lowly swobbers fed.

Dry.

Geo'rick. n. s. [geôrik]: georgics.

Some part of the science of husbandry put into a pleasing dress, and set off with all the beauties and embellishments of poetry.

Addison.

Geo'rick. adj. Relating to the doctrine of agriculture.

Here I perceive the Mantuan's georgick strains,

And learn the labours of Italian swains.

Gay.

Geo'Tick. adj. [from geô]. Belonging to the earth; terrestrial.

Dic.

Ger'ent. adj. [gerens, Lat.]: Carrying; bearing.

Dict.

Ge'rfalcon. n. s. A bird of prey, in size between a vulture and a hawk, and of the greatest strength next to the eagle.

Batley.

Ger'man. n. s. [germain, Fr. germanus, Lat.]. Brother; one approaching to a brother in proximity of blood: thus the children of brothers or sisters are called cousins german, the only sense in which the word is now used.

They knew it was their cousin german, the famous Amphius.

Sidney.

And to him said, go now, proud miscreant,

Thyself thy message do to german deus.

Fairy Q.

Went thou a bear, thou wouldst be kill'd by the horse; went thou a horse, thou wouldst be slain

by the leopard; went thou a leopard, thou wast germin to the lion, and the species of thy kindred were juris on thy life.

Shakep. Timon.
GE

You'll have your nephews neigh to you; you'll have coursers for cousins, and geese for geese. Shaksp.

GERMAN. adj. [germanus, Lat.] Related. Obsolete.

Not he alone shall suffer what wit can make heavy, and vengeance bitter; but those that are Germans, his; if much fortunate times, shall come under the hangman. Shaksp.

GERMANDER. n.s. [germander, Fr. chamadres, Lat.] A plant. Miller.

GERM. n.s. [germen, Lat.] A sprout or shoot; that part which grows and spreads.

Whether it be out made of the germe, or the head of the egg, doth seem of lesser duration. Brv.

GERMIN. n.s. [germen, Lat.] A shooting or sprouting seed. Out of use.

Though palaces and pyramids do slope, their heads to their foundations; though the trea of nature germinis tumble altogether, [sure Even 'till destructions sicken; answer me To what I ask you. Shaksp. Macbeeth.

Thou all-shaking thunder, Strike flat the thick rotundity o' the world; Crack the dogs of germis spils and quare That make negetate man. Shaksp. King Lear.

To GERMINATE. v.n. [germinate, Lat.] To sprout; to shoot; to bud; to put forth.

This action is furthered by the chemicals, which hath in itself a spirit that will put forth and generate, as we see in chemical trials. Bar. Nat. Hist.

The seeds of all kinds of vegetables being planted near the surface of the earth, in a convenient soil, amongst matter proper for the formation of vegetables, would germinate, grow up, and replute with the face of the earth. Wortward.

GERMINATION. n.s. [germination, Fr. from germinate]. The act of sprouting or shooting; growth.

For acceleration of germination, we shall handle the subject of plants generally. Bacon.

The duke of Buckingham had another kind of germination; and surely, had he been a plant, he would have been reckoned among the sprouts natives.

There is but little similitude between a teresious humidity and planlt germinations, Glasstro.

Suppose the earth should be carried to the great distance of the sun, the whole glass would be one frigid zone; there would be no life, no germination. Bentley's Sermons.

GERUND. n.s. [gerundium, Lat.] In the Latin grammar, a kind of verbal noun, which governs cases like a verb.

GEST. n.s. [gestum, Lat.]

1. A deed; an action; an achievement.
Who fair them quites, as he besessed best, And goodly can discourse with many a noble gest. Spenser.

2. Show; representation.
Gests should be interlarded after the Persian manner, by ages, young and old.

3. The roll or journal of the several days, and stages prefixed, in the progresses of our kings, many of them still extant in the heraldic office. [from geste or geste]. Hannier.

I'll give you my commission, To let him there a month, behind the gest, Prefix'd for aming. Shaksp. Winter's Tale.

4. A stage; so much of a journey as passes without interruption. In all senses obsolete.

He distinctly sets down the gest and progress thereof. Brown.

GESTATION. n.s. [gestatio, Lat.] The act of bearing the young in the womb.

Aristotle affirmeth the birth of the infant, or time of its gestation, extends sometime unto the cleventh month; but Hippocrates saith that it exceeds this time, in his time of woman. Thirw.

Why in viviparous animals, in the time of gestation, should the nourishment be carried to the embryo in the womb, which at other times goeth forth out of the same? This point I shall lay on the hangman. Shaksp.

GET.

The king seeing this, started from where he sat, and from behind his heavy and his weapon got. Dan.

All things, but one, you can restore; The heart you get returns no more. Waller.

3. To win by contest.

To get war lost All which Henry the fifth had gotten. Shak.

He got his pen, his great honour, and he made battles, protecting the host with his word. 1 Mar. iii. 3.

To get the day of them of his own nation, would be a most unhappy day for him. 2 Mar. v. 6.

Arms held that course to have drawn the gates within his great ships, who thundering amongst them with their great ordnance, might have spread away unto his galley to have gotten a victory. Knollett.

4. To have possession of; to have. This sense is common in the compound preterite.

Then forcing thee, by fire he made bright: Nay, thou hast get the face of man. Hippocr.

5. To beget upon a female.

Those boys are boys of ice, they'll none of her; they sure are bastards to the English, the French never get them. Hammond.

Women with study'd arts they vex: Ye gods, destroy that impious sex: And sometime must be seized and his sword Your pow'r, and make your altars smoke. Come down yourselfs, and, in your place Get the embers and soot of your flame. Waller.

Children they got on their female captives. Locke.

If you'll take 'em as their fathers get 'em, so and well; if not, you must stay till they get a better alteration. Dryden.

Has no man, but who has kill'd a father, right to get a child? Prior.

And when the weary thrift is grave and wise, Take a tariff of known ability, Who shall so settle lasting reformation; First get a son, then give him education. Dryas.

The god of day, descending from above, Mix the day with, and get the queen of the garden. Hook.

6. To gain as profit.

Though creditors will lose one fifth of their principal and use, and landlords one fifth of their income, yet the debtors and tenants will not get. Locke.

To get a gain or superiority.

If they get ground and 'vantage of the king, Then join you with them like a rib of steel. Shak.

To earn; to gain by labour.

Having no mines, nor any other way of getting or keeping of riches but by trade, so much of our trade as is lost, so much of our riches must necessarily go with it. Locke.

If it be so much pains to count the money I would spend, what labour did it cost my ancestors to get it? Locke.

9. To receive as a price or reward.

Any tax laid on foreign commodities in England raises their price, and makes the importer get more for them; but a tax laid on your home-made commodities lessens their price. Locke.

10. To learn.

This defect he frequently lamented, it being harder with him to get one sermon by heart than to pen twenty. Seth.

Get him the more the common and useful words out of some judicious vocabulary. Watts.

11. To procure to be.

I shall shew how we may get it thus informed, and afterwards preserve it so it. South.

12. To put into any part.

Nature taught them to make certain vessels of a tree, which they got down, not with cutting, but with fire. Abbot.

Take no repulse, whatever she doth say; For, get you gone, she doth not mean away. Shak.

If he presents this man to his absolute power, does thereby put himself into a state of war with him. Locke.

Before your eyes bring forth, they may be pretty well, but get them a little to heart Martineau.

Helm, who was taken up enbalming the bodies, visited the place very frequently; his greatest perplexity was how to get the lurers out of it, the gates being watched. Guardiun.
To extract the plain text from the image, I will transcribe the visible text and then format it as a natural, readable passage. This will involve converting any hand-drawn text to standard written English, correcting any errors, and ensuring the text flows coherently. Once transcribed, I will format it into a logical, readable document.
GHO

At children, when they throw one toy away,
Straight a more foolish gape comes in play.
Dryden.

A heavy gape, call'd a crow, that spread
About his temples, drown'd his narrow head,
And would have crush'd it. Dryden's Jour.

Some lose the bands
Of ancient friendship, cancel nature's laws
For pagantry and tawdry gapes. Philips.

The lips of soft, sly, ribbous, laces,
And many other gapes, which lay so thick
That the whole heart was nothing else but a toy
Of Nature's Guardians.

Gewgaw. adj. Splendidly trifling; showy without value.

Let him that would learn the happiness of reli-tion, see the poor gowgaws happiness of Pelican's.

Ghostly adj. [from ghostly].

Horrible of countenance; resemblance of a ghost; paleness.

GHOSTLY, adj. [gastly, or ghost and like.]

1. Like a ghost; having horror in the countenance; pale; dreadful; dismal.

Why looks your grace so heavily to-day?
—O, I have past a miserable night; So full of ugly sights, of ghostly dreams, So full of dismal terror was the time. Shaks.

Envy quickly discovered in count Solyman's changed countenance upon the great bass, and began now to show other ghostly fact. Knttles.

Death Grind'd horrible a ghostly smile, to hear His famish should be fill'd. Milton's Par. Lost. These departed friends, whom at our last separation we saw disfigured by all the ghastly horrors of death, we shall then see assaying about the majestick throne of Christ, with whose once vile logros, mingling their glad hallucinations with the hellishfuffs of thrones, principalties and powers.

Bogle.

He came, but with such alter'd looks,
So wild, so ghastly, as if some ghost had met him,
All pale and speechless. Dryden's Spanish Friar. I did not for these ghastly visions send;
Their sudden coming does some ill portend. Dry.

2. Horrible; frightful; ghastly.

To be less than gods Dishin'd; but meaner thoughts learnt in their flight,
Mangled with ghastly wounds through plate and mail.

I who make the triumph of to-day,
May of to-morrow's pompe our part appear,
Ghastly with wounds, and lifeless on the hie! Prior.

GHOSTLESS. n. s. [from gasteless, Sax.]

Ghastliness; horror of look. Not used.

Do you perceive the ghastliness of the eye? Shakes.

Gherkin. n. s. [from gurke, Germ. a cucumber.] A small pickled cucumber.

Skinner.

To Ghess. v. n. [See To Guess. Ghess is by critics considered as the true orthography, but guess has universally prevailed.] To conjecture.

GHOST. n. s. [gaste, Sax.]

1. The soul of man.

Vex not his ghost: O, let him pass! he hates
That would upon the rack of this rough world
Stretch him out longer. Shakes. King Lear.

GIA

Often did I strive
To yield the ghost; but still the curious fiend
Kept in my soul. Dryden 111.

2. A spirit appearing after death.

The mighty ghost of our great Harrys rose,
And armed Edwards look'd with anxious eyes.

To see this flagging soul
By which fate pronoun'd them their Charles should rise.

Dryden.

To give up the ghost. To die; to yield up the spirit into the hands of God.

A canopy most falat, under which
Our army lies ready to give up the ghost. Shaks.

4. The third person in the adorable Trinity, called the Holy Ghost.

To GHOST, v. n. [from the noun.] To yield up the ghost; to die. Not in use.

Eurypalus taking leave of Lucrette, precipitated her into such a love-fit, that within a few hours she died.

Sidney.

To GHOST, v. a. To haunt with appar-itions of departed men. Obsolete.

GHOSTLIKE adj. [from giant and GHOSTLY.]

Like; vast; bulky.

Single courage his often, without romance, overcame giants difficulties. Dryden.

Giantess. n. s. [from giant.] A she of the vast; a woman of unnatural bulk and height.

I had rather be a giantess, and live under Mount Pelor.

She kep this subject to the cedar, she would be able to make head against that huge giantess. How.

Giantlike. adj. [from giant and giant-ly.]

Gigantic; vast; bulky.

Gib. n. s. Any old worn-out animal.

Hammer.

For who's that but a queen, fair, sober, wise,
Would from a publick, from a bat, a gibe.

Such dear reversings hide! Shaks. Hamlet.

To GIBBER. v. n. [from jabber.] To speak inarticulately.

The sheathed dead
Did squack and gibe in the Roman streets. Shak.

Gibberish. n. s. An unexpanded by Skinner from giber, Fr. to cheat; by others conjectured to be formed by corruption from jabber. But as it was antiquely written gibberish, it is probably derived from the cymenial cant, and originally implied the jargon of Geber and his wive. Cant; the private language of rogues and gipsies; words without meaning.

Some, if they happen to hear an old word, albeit very natural and significant, cry out straightway, how they spake no English, but such a gib

Some of both sexes writing down a number of letters, just as it came into their heads; upon reading this gibberish, that which the other had had wrote sounded like High Dutch, and the other by the women like Italian. Smith.

Gibbet. n. s. [gibet, Fr.]

1. A gallows; the post on which maleffactors are hanged, or on which their carcases are exposed.

When was there ever cursed atheist brought
Unto the gibbet, but he did die there.

That blessed pow'r which he had set at naught?

Davies.

You secredit the stack of verse, a race
Able to bring the gibbet in disgrace. Clevel.

Haman suffered death himself upon the very gibbet that he had provided for another. V. F.
GIB

Papers lay such principles to the Tories, as if they were true, our next business should be to erect gibbets in every parish, and hang them out in the way.

Swift.

2. Any traverse beams.

To GIBBET. v. n. [from the noun.]

1. To hang or expose on a gibbet.

To gibbet up his name.

Oldham.

2. To hang on anything going traverse; as the beam of a gibbet.

He shall come off and on swifter than he that gibbets on the brewer's bucket.

Shaksp.

GIBBIER. n. s. [French.] Game; wild foul.

GIBBOSITY. n. s. [gibbosité, Fr. from gibbus.] Convexity; prominence; protruberance.

When ships sailing contrary ways, lose the sight one of another, which should take away the sight of ships from each other, but the gibbosity of the water is not less.

Addison on Italian.

GIBBOUS. n. s. [from gibbus.]

Convexity; prominence.

To make the convexity of the earth discernible, suppose a man lifted in the air, that he may have a spacious horizon; but then, because of the distance, the convexity and gibbosity would vanish away, and he would only see a great circular flat.

Beaumont's Hen. IV.

GIBCAT. n. s. [gibcat.]

An old worn-out cat.

I am as melancholy as a gibcat, or a hagg'd heart.

Swift.

To GIBE. v. n. [gaber, old Fr. to sneer, to ridicule.] To sneer; to join coarseness with contempt.

They seem to imagine that we have erected of late a frame of some new religion, the furniture whereof we should not have borrowed from our enemies, lest they should afterwards laugh and gibe at our party.

Hamer.

When he saw how toy, and gibe, and geer, and did pass the bounds of modesty merey.

And his dailiness desir'd.

Why that's the way to choke a gibing spirit,
Whose influence is begot of that loose grace
Which shallow laughing hearers give to fools.

Shak.

Thus with talents well end'd,

To be scurrilous and rude.

When you partly raise your snout,

Fleer and gibe, and laugh and shout.

Swift.

To GIBE. v. a. To reproach by contemptuous hints; to flout; to scoff; to ridicule; to treat with scorn; to sneer; to taunt.

Whilst visiting in Alexandria, you did pocket up my letters, and with taunts Did gibe my missive out of audience.

Shaksp.

Draw the beasts as I describe them, From which they, while I gibe them, Swift.

GIBE. n. s. [from the verb.] Sneer; hint of contempt by word or look; scoff; act or expression of scorn; taunt.

Mark the fican, the gibe, and notable scorns
Then would every region of his face.

Shaksp.

The rich have still a gibe in store,

And will be monstrous witty on the poor,

Dryden.

If they would hate from the bottom of their hearts, their union would be too strong for little gibes every moment.

Spectator.

But the dean, if this secret should come to his ears,

Will never have done with his gibes and his jeers.

Swift.

GIBBER. m. s. [from gibbe.] A sneerer; one who gurms other to ridicule by contemptuous hints; a scoff; a taunter.

You are well understood to be a more perfect giber of the table, than a necessary bencher of the capital.

Shaksp. Coriolanus.

He is a giber, and our present business

Is of a more serious consequence.

Ben Jonson.

GIBBINGLY. adv. [from gibe.] Scornfully; contemptuously.

His present purport

Gibbly and gibbously, I say, did he fashion

After the ivaterate bane he bears to you.

Shaksp.

GIBBETS. n. s. [according to Minshew from gobbled, gobbleth: according to Juvenis, more properly from gibber; game, Fr.]

The parts of a goose which are cut off before it is roasted.

"This holyday, give me better cheer:"

'Tis holyday; and shall be round the year:

Shaksp.

Shall I my household gods and genius cheast,

To make him rich who grudges me my meat?

That he may toll at ease; and pamper'd high.

When I am laid, may I feed on giblets? said Dryden.

GIBSTAFF. n. s.

1. A long staff to gage water, or to shove forth a vessel into the deep.

2. A weapon used formerly to fight beasts upon the stage.

GIDDILY. adv. [from giddy.]

With the head seeming to turn round.

GIDDLY. adv. [inconstantly; unsteadily.

To roam

Giddily, and be every where but at home,

Such freedom doth a banishment become.

Donne.

3. Carelessly; heedlessly; negligently.

The partickly saved bestow'd on him,

Tell her, I hold as gibbly as fortune.

Shaksp.

GIDDINESS. n. s. [from giddy.]

1. The state of being giddy or vertiginous; the sensation which we have when every thing seems to turn round.

Megrims and giddiness are rather when we rise after long sitting, than while we sit.

Beacon.

This blessed thistle, which is so sovereign a medicine against the giddiness of the brain; 'tis this will settle it.

Holoday.

Vain show and noise intoxicate the brain,

Begin with giddiness, and end in pain.

Young.

2. Incostancy; unsteadiness; mutability;

changeable.

There lies but delight in giddiness, and count it a bondage to fix a belief.

Beacon.

Quick rotation; inability to keep its place.

The inclination of Heaven rolling and turning us all, tho' such a giddiness seized upon government, that it fell into the very dregs of sectaries.

South.

3. Frollick; wantonness of life.

Thus like a contrite penitent,

Chastly warri'd of thy sins, do'st repent

These vanities and giddinesses.

Donne.

GIDDY. adj. [giddy.] Sax. I know not whether this word may not come from gads, to wander, to be in motion, gaid, giddy.

1. Vertiginous; having in the head a whirl, or sensation of circular motion, such as happens by disease or drunkenness.

Then reviling thus the Tentyrites invade,

By stagg'ring legs betray'd. Tutt.

2. Rotatory; whirling; running round with celerity.

As Lyson fix'd, the wretch shall feel

The giddy motion of the whirling mill.

Pope.

3. Inconstant; mutable; unsteady; changeful.

Our fancies are more giddy and unform.

More longling, wavering, sooner lost and won.

Than women's art.

Shaksp. Twelfth Night.

It may be groats and dyes have their imagination more mutable and giddy, as small birds likewise have.

Bacon.

Thanks to giddy chance, which never bears

That moral bliss should last for years of age.

She cast us headlong from this high estate.

And here in hope of thy return we wait.

Dryden.

The giddy vulgar, as their fancies guide,

With noise say nothing, and in parts divide.

Dryden's Annid.

You are as giddy and volatile as ever, the reverse of Pope; who hath always loved a domestic tick.

Swift to Gay.

4. That causes giddiness.

The frequent errors of the pathless wood,

The giddy precipice, and the dangerous flood.

Pope.

How inexusable are those giddy creatures, who, in the same hour leap from a parent's window to a husband's bed.

Clarissa.

5. Obtuse; round.

To giddy foolish hours are gone,

And in fantastick measures done'd away.

Row.

How whether those peas of praise be his or no.

Shaksp.

To GIDDY. v. n. [from the noun.] To turn quick.

Obsoleto.

A sodainne north-wind fetch'd,

With an extreme sea, quite about again.

Our whole endeavours; and our course constrain to giddid round.

Chapman.

GIDDY-BRAINED. adj. [giddy and brain.

Careless; thoughtless.

Turn him out again, you unnecessary, useless,
giddy-brain'd ass!

Otway's Ven. Preserv.

GIDDY-HAEDED. adj. [giddy and head.

Without thought or caution.

GIDDY-PACED. adj. [giddy and pace.

Moving without regularity.

More than light airs, and recollected terms.

Of these most trivial giddy-paced times.

Swift.

GIER-EAGLE. n. s. [Sometimes it is written jer-eagle.]

An eagle of a particular kind.

These fowls shall not be eaten, the swan, and the pelican, and the gier-eagle.

Levites.
G I G

1. A thing given or bestowed; something conferred without price.
2. The act of giving.
3. The right or power of bestowing.
4. Oblation; offering.

G I L

1. To wash over with gold; to cover with filleted gold.
2. To cover with any yellow matter.
3. To adorn with lustre.
4. To brighten; to illuminate.
5. To recommend by admittances or ornaments.
6. Of any kind, or in any way.
7. From gilt.

G I M

The leviathan, stretched like a promontory, sleeps or swims, and seems a moving land, and at his gills draws in air, and at his trunk spouts out a sea. Milt. Finishes perform respiration under water by the gills. Ray. He hath two gilt-fins; not behind the gilt, as in most fishes, but before them. Walten. To Gill, of from the fish: paint with gilt enamel'd' lef. King.

2. The fins that hang below the beak of a fowl.

The turkey-cock hath great and swelling gills, and the hen hath less. Bacon's Natural History.

3. The flesh under the chin.

In many there is no paleness at all; but, contrariwise, redness about the cheeks and gills, which is by the sending forth of spirits in an appetite to retain or be given. Bacon's Natural History.

4. [Gilla, barbarous Latin.] A measure of liquids containing the fourth part of a pint.

5. In the northern counties it is half a pint of liquid measure.

6. From gillian, the old English way of writing Julian, or Juliana. The application of a woman in ludicrous language.

7. Can for I will. Here at Burley o'th' Hill, Give you all your fill.

8. With his Gill, Ben Jonson's Gogions.

9. The name of a plant; ground-ivy.

Malt liquor medicated with ground-ivy.

GILLHOUSE, n. s. [gill and house] A house where gill is sold. There shall each alchemist, thee each gillhouse, and his gills and gills over seignor signes return Pope.

GILLFLOWER, n. s. Either corrupted from Julyflower, or from girolée, Fr. Gillflowers or rather Julyflowers, so called from the month they blow in, may be reduced to these sorts, red, yellow, and white, purple and white, scarlet and white, Mortimer's Husbandry.

In July come Gillflowers of all varieties. Bacon.

Fair is the many gold, for pasture meet Great Pax. Gill. Fair is the many gold, for pasture meet Great Pax. Pace.

GILT, n. s. [from gilt.] Golden show; gold laid on the surface of any matter.

New obsolete. Our gynaeus and our gills are all bennish'd, with noyce marking in the painful field, Shakesp. When thou wast in thy gill, and thy perfume, they mock thee for too much curiosity: in thy rags thou know'st none, but art despis'd for the Shakesp. Tymon of Athens.

GILT. The participle of GILD, which see.

Where the gilt chariot never mark'd its way.

2. A bird. Bred he whose head, the ligheart of the gillheads, the brains of placemats and peacocks, tongues of phrenologists, and the metals of lamps. Hakewell.

GILT-TAIL. A worm so called from his yellow tail.

GIM. adj. [An old word.] Neat; spence; well dressed.
GIN

GINCRACK. n. s. [Supposed by Skinner to be ludicrously formed from gin, derived from engine.] A slight or trivial mechanism.

For though these ginracks were away, However, made it deal and plain,
The watch would still a watch remain; But if the hour orbit cease,
The watch stands still; or breaks to pieces. Prior.

What's the meaning of all these trangrass and ginracks? Jumping over my master's hinges, and running your lines cross your grounds! Arbuth.

GINLET. n. s. [ginlet, ginlet, Fr.] A borier with a screw at its point.
The ginlet hath a worm at the end of its bit.

GIMMAL. n. s. [Supposed by Skinner and Ainsworth to be derived from gimmell, Lat, and to be used only of something consisting of correspondent parts, or double. It seems rather to be gradually corrupted from geometry or geometrical.]

In this thing done by occult means is vulgarly said to be done by his geometry.] Some little quaint devices or pieces of machinery.

Hammer.

I think by some odd gimmals or device Their arms are set like clocks, still to strike on,
Else they could not hold out so as they did do. Shak.

GIMME. n. s. [See Gim] Movement; machinery.

The holding together of the parts of matter has so confounded me, that I have been prone to conclude with myself, that the glimmers of the world hold together not so much by geometry as some natural magic.

Marv's Divine Dialogues.

GIMP, n. s. [See Gin. Gimp, in old English, is neat, spruce.] A kind of silk twist or lace.

GIN, n. s. [from engine.]

1. A trap; a snare.

As the day begins,
With twenty gins we'll will the small birds take.
And pastime make.

Sir Jee.

2. A girdle, or a band, either of cloth or leather, with which a person is girded to the waist, and at the same time serves as a support for the body. It is used by those who are of a large build, or who have a tendency to be fat. It is also used in the case of those who are of a slender build, but have a tendency to be lean.

GIRD. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. A shrill resounding noise.

2. Affectation in the sound of periods.

Ginglymoid. adj. [gîngy-loyd'] A hinge, and head. Resembling a ginglymus; approaching to a ginglymus.

The malleus lies along, fixed to the tympanum, and on the other end is joined to the incus by a ginglymus; and the incus is joined to the stapes, which is also a ginglymus.

Wiseman.

GINNET. n. s. [ginсет'] A rag; a mule; a degenerated breed. Hence, according to some, but I believe, erroneously, a Spanish genius, improperly written for gisnet.

GINSENG. n. s. [I suppose Chinese.] A root brought lately into Europe, of a brownish colour on the outside, and somewhat yellowish within; and so pure and fine, that it seems almost transparent.

It is of a very agreeable and aromatic smell, though not very strong. Its taste is acrid and aromatic, with somewhat bitter in it. We have it from China and America. The Chinese value this root at three times it weight in silver. Hill.

To GIP, v. a. To take out the guts of herring.

Bailey.

GIPSY, n. s. [Corrupted from Egyptian; for when they first appeared in Europe, they declared, and, perhaps, truly, that they were driven from Egypt by the Turks. They are now mingled with all nations.]

1. A vagabond who pretends to foretell futurity, commonly by palmarist or physiognomy.

The barger, though he is sure to lose a knife, a fork, or a spoon every time his fortune is told him, shifts himself up in the pantry with an old gipsy for above half an hour.

A frantick gipsy now, the house he haunts, And in wild phrases dissemblance wants. Pri. To hold him by the hand, and to him say, A frantick gipsy now, the house he haunts, In the other a prophetic sieve and sheers. Garth. I hear you tell of force so many gipsies met; Upon my hand they cast a poring look, Bid me beware, and thrice their heads they shook. Gay.

2. A reproachful name for a dark complexion.

Laura, to her lady, was but a kitchen wench; Didoa dowdy; Cleopatra a gipsy; Helen and Hero bawds and bastards. Shak. Romeo and Juli. etc.

3. A name of slight reproach to a woman.

The widow play'd the gipsy, and so did her confidant too, in pretending to believe her. L'Estr. A slave I am to Clore's eyes.

The gipsy knows her power, and files. Prior.

GIRASOLE. n. s. [girasol, Fr.]

1. The herb turnspur.

2. The opal stone.

To GIRD. v. a. pret. girded, or girt. [gypban, Sax.]

1. To bind round.

The sprinkled earth upon their heads, and girded their loins with sackerth. 2 Mac. x. 3.

2. To put on so as to surround or bind.

Cords of the bigness of pack threades were fastened to bandages, which the workmen had gird round about neck. Swift.

3. To fasten by binding.

He girt his warslik embrace about him. Mac.iii.85. My bow and thunders, my alnently arms Gird on, and sword upon thy hussiant thigh. Milt. No, let us rise at once, gird on our swords, and, at the head of our remaining troops, Attack the foe. Addison's Cat. The combatant too late the field declines, When now the sword is girded to his loins. Prior.

4. To invest.

Stoop then, and set your knee against my foot: And in resolution of that duty done, I gird thee with the valiant sword of York. Shak. The son appear'd, Girt with omnipotence. Milton's Paradise Lost.

5. To dress; to habit; to clothe.

I girded thee about with fine linen, and I covered thee with silk. Exk. xvi. 10. Girt gone there keeps the ward.

6. Girt in liern sanguine gown, by night and dey Observant of the soul that pass the downward path. Dryden.

7. To cover round as a garment.

These, with what skill they had, together stood, To gird their waist: vain covering, if it hide Their guilt, and dress it not! Milt. Par. Lost. 1068.

8. To furnish; to equip.

So to the coast of Jordan he directs His easy steps, girded with mailey wiles. Milton.
of it does not feed it with his own stock, but takes in other cattle to graze. Bailey.

Gisle. Among the English Saxons, signifies a pledge; thus, Fredgisle is a pledge of peace; Gischbert an illustrious pledge, like the Greek Homeres. Gibs. Camden.

Gith. n. s. [nigilla.] An herb called Guinea pepper.

To GIV. E. v. To confer, to give; part. pass. given. [from A. gyven, L. dedit.]

1. To bestow; to confer without any price or reward; not to sell.

I had a master that gave me all I could ask, but thought fit to take something else from me again. Temple.

Constant at church and change; his gains were sure.

His giving rare, save furlongs to the poor. Pope.

While tradesmen starve, these philosophers are gay; for girt lords must not give but pay. Young.

Half useless don't do to live,

Pray's and advice are all I have to give. Harte.

2. To transmit from himself to another by hand, speech, or writing; to deliver.

The woman whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat. Gen. iii. 12.

They were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage. Matt. xxv. 26.

Those bills were printed not only every week, but also a general account of the whole year was given in the Thursday before Christmas, Grumont.

We shall give an account of these phenomena. Burnett.

Aristotle advises not poets to put things evidently false and impossible into their poesies, nor give them license to run out into wildness. Brooks.

3. To put into one's possession; to confine; to impart; to communicate.

Give us of your oil, for our lamps are gone out. Matt. xiv.

Nature gives us many children and friends, to take them away; but takes some away to give them us again. Temple.

Give me, says Archimedes, where to stand firm, and I will remove the earth. Temple.

If the agreement of a master first a girt: a necklace into any one's hand, or a crown on his head, that almost must direct its conveyance. Locke.

4. To pay as a price or reward, or in exchange.

All that a man hath will be given for his life. Job, iv. 14.

If you did know to whom I gave the ring, if you did know for whom I gave the ring, and would receive for me I gave the ring, and how unwillingly I left the ring, you would abate the strength of your displeasure. Shakespeare.

He would give his nuts for a piece of metal, and exchange his sleep for shells, or wool for a sparkling pebble. Locke.

5. To yield; to not withhold.

Philip, Alexander's father, gave sentence against, a prisoner at a time he was drowsy, and seemed to give small attention. The prisoner, after sentence was pronounced, cried out: If you would have me, do not sleep. The king, some what stirred, said. To whom do you appeal? The prisoner answered, from Philip, when he gave me ear, I am sure I have no ear. Bacon, the ante.

Constantia accused herself for having so tenderly given an ear to the proposal. Addison's Spectator.

6. To quit; to yield as due.

Give place, thou stranger, to a honoured man. Eccles.

7. To confer; to impart.

I will bless her, and give thee a son also of her. Gen. xxvi.

Nothing can give that to another which it hath not itself. Brach. against Hobbes.

What beauties I lose in some places, I gain to others which had them not originally. Dryden.

8. To expose; to yield without retention.

All clad in skins of beasts the javelin bear.

Give to the wanton winds their flowing hair. Dryden.
G L

9. To grant; to allow.
To give me once again to behold my friend.
Shakesp.

10. To yield; not to deny.
I gave his wise proposal way.
Shakesp.
Not urg’d him to go on the shallow fraud
Will ruin him.
Trente’s Ambitious Stranger.

11. To afford; to supply.
This opinion abt. the fear of death in them who have resolved, and gave them courage to all adventures.
Hooker.

12. To empower; to commission.
Prepare
The due libation and the solemn prayer;
Then give thy friend to shed the sacred wine.
Pope.

13. To enable.
God himself requireth the lifting up of pure hands in prayers; and hath given the world to understand, that the wicked, although they cry, shall not be heard.
Hooker.

What this fool hath begun, who set it on.
Shakesp.

So some weak shoot, which else would poorly rise,
Joye’s tree adopts, and lifts into the skies;
Though youth it now thrust forth the gems, and give the blow’s to Ticket.

14. To pay.
The applause and approbation I give to both your speeches.
Shakesp., Trollos and Cesurdia.

15. To utter; to vent; to pronounce.
So you must be the first that gives this sentence.
And I
Shakesp., Measure for Mass.

The Rhodians seeing their enemies turn their backs,gave a great shout in derision of them.
Kneller.
Let the first honest discover give the word about what the Woodman in your service have been offered, and caution the poor people not to receive them.
Swift.

16. To exhibit; to shew.
This instance gives the impossibility of an eternal existence in any thing essentially alterable or corruptible.
Helo.

17. To exhibit as the product of a calculation.
The number of men being divided by the number of ships, gives four hundred and twenty-four men a-piece.
Arbuthnot.

18. To do any act of which the consequence reaches others.
As we do not give to offence ourselves, so neither shall we give any at the difference of judgment in others.
Burnet.

19. To exhibit; to send forth as odours from any body.
In oranges the rippling of the wind gives out their smell more.
Bacon.

20. To addict; to apply.
The Halots, of the other side, shutting their gates, give themselves to bary their dead, to eure their wounds, and rest their wearied bodies.
Sideny.
After man began to grow to number, the first thing we read they gave themselves into, was the tilling of the earth and the feeding of cattle.
Hooker.

21. To resign; to yield up.
Finding ourselves in the midst of the greatest wilderness of waters, without virtual, we gave our selves for lost men, and prepared for death.
Bacon.

Who say, I care not, those I give for lost;
And to instruct them will not quit the cost.
Herbert.

22. To give over.
To addict; to attach to.
Selden, governed and direct me; for I am wholly given over unto thee.
Sideny.

When the Babylonians had given themselves over to all manner of vice, it was time for the Lord, who had set up that empire, to pull it down.
Great.

I used one thing ill, or gave myself so much over to neglect what I owed either to God or the world.
Temple.

23. To give over.
To make over to one another; to transfer.
The more he got, the more he showed that he gave away to his new mistress, when he betrayed his promises to the former.
Burnet.

If you give away this hand, and that is mine;
You give away heav’n’s vows, and those are mine;
You give away myself, which is known mine.
Shaks.

Honesty I have taken away.
I thank you all,
That have helped me give away myself
To this most patient, sweet, and virtuous wife.
Shaks.

I know not, they sold them themselves; but thou,
Like a kind fellow, gainst thyself away gratis,
And I thank thee for.
Shakesp., Henry IV.

Love gives away all things, that so he may adv.

24. To give back.
To return; to restore.
Their vices perhaps give back all those advantages which they procured.
Atterbury.

25. To give forth.
To publish; to tell;
Soon after it was given forth, and believed by many, that the king was dead.
Hayward.

26. To give the hand.
To yield pre-eminence, as being subordinate or inferior.

Lesions being free from some inconveniences, whereunto sermon, they may in this respect no less take than in others they must give the hand, which betokeneth pre-eminence.
Hooker.

27. To give over.
To leave; to quit; to cease.

Let nature therefore in this give over endless contradictions, and let ancient customs prevail.

It may be done rather than that be given over.
Hooker.

Never give her over.
For scorn at first makes her love the mo.
Shakesp.

If Desdemona will return me my jewels, I will give over my suit, and repent many foolish solicitations.
Shakesp., Othello.

All the soldiers, from the highest to the lowest, had sworn to defend the city, and not to give it over unto the last man.
Knolle’s History.

Those troops which were levied, have given over the prosecution of the war.
Clarendon.

But worst of all to give her over,
’Till she’s as desperate to recover.
Hudibras.

A woman had a bat that laid every day an egg she fancied; and that from her own hand was they might lay twice a day: but the beam grew fast, and gave quite over laying.
L’Ent USAGE.

Many have given over their pursuits after fame, either from the disappointment they have met, or from the experience of the little pleasure which attends it.
Addison’s Spectator.

28. To give over.
To addict; to attach to.
Zelma, governed and direct me; for I am wholly given over unto thee.
Sideny.

When the Babylonians had given themselves over to all manner of vice, it was time for the Lord, who had set up that empire, to pull it down.
Great.

I used one thing ill, or gave myself so much over to neglect what I owed either to God or the world.
Temple.

29. To give over.
To conclude last.
Since it is lawful to practise upon them that forsake and give up, I will adventure to prescribe to you.
Suckling.

’Tis not amiss, ere ye’r give in, to Try one deep rate more: and more
And where your ease can be no worse,
The despotism is the worst course.
Hudibras.

The abyss, finding that the physicians had gave her over, told her, that Alexander was just gone before her, and bad sent her his benediction.
Addison.

Her condition was now quite desperate, all reg. ular physicians, and her nearest relations, having given her over.
Arbuthnot.

Yet this false comfort never gives him over;
—That, whilst he weeps, his wiser thoughts can soar.
Pope.

Not one foretells I shall recover;
But all agree to give me over.
Swift.

30. To give over.
To abandon.
The duty of uniformity throughout all churches, in all manner of indifferent ceremonies, will be very hard, and therefore best to give it over.
Hooker.

Abmemelah, as one weary of the world, gave over all, and betook himself to a solitary life, and became a monk.
Kieris.

Sleep hath forsook, and given mee over.
To death’s benumbing opium, as my only cure.
Millon.

The cause for which we fought and swore.
So holdly, shall we now give it over?
Hudibras.

31. To give out.
To proclaim; to publish; to utter.
The fathers gave it out for a rule, that whatsoever Christ is said in Scripture to have received, the same we ought to apply only to the manhood of Christ.
Hooker.

It was given out, that, sleeping in my orchard,
A serpent stung me. So the whole ear of Denmark is, by a forged process of my death,
Ricardus abused.
Shakesp., Hamlet.

One that gives out himself prince Florizel.
Son of Polixenes, with her princess.

Shaks.
GIV

32. To give out. To show in false appearance.
His givings were of an infinite distance.
From his true meant design. Shakesp. She that, so young, could give out such a seeming, to seal her father’s eyes up close ascab. Shakesp.

33. To give up. To resign; to quit; to yield.
The people, weary of the miseries of war, would give him up, if they saw him shrink. Sidney. He has betray’d your business, and given up. For certain drops of salt, your city Rome.

Shakesp. The sun, breaking out with his cheerful beams, revived many, before ready to give up the ghost for cold, and gave comfort to them all.

34. To give up. To abandon.
To any be given up to believe eyes, some must be first given up to tell them. Stillingfleet.

Our minds naturally give themselves up to every diversion which they are much accustomed to; and we are very likely, when walked with assiduity, engine the whole race.

Addison.

A good poet no sooner communicates his works, but it is imagined he is a vain young creature given up to the ambition of fame.

Pope. I am obliged at this time to give up my whole application to Homer.

Pope. Persons, who, through misfortunes, chose not to dress, should not, however, give up nextness. Clariosa.

35. To give up. To deliver.
And Joab gave up the sum of the number of the people to the king.
His accounts were confused, and he could not then give them up. Swift.

36. To give way. To yield; not to resist; to make room for.
Private respects, with him, gave way to the common good.

Cerv. Perpetual pushing and assurance put a difficulty out of countenance, and make a seeming imposibility give way.

Collier. Searce had he spoken when the cloud gave way; the mists flew upwards, and dissolved in the air.

Swift. His golden helm gave way with Stony blowes, Battard’s flat, and beaten to his brows. Dryd.

37. The word give is used with great laxity, the general idea is that of transmitting from one to another.

To give. n. v.
1. To crush; to fall on; to give the assail.
A phrase merely French, and not worthy of adoption.

Your orders come too late, the fight’s begun; the enemy given on with fury led. Dryd. Hannibal gave upon the Romans. Hook.

2. To relent; to grow moist; to melt or soften; to have some things are harder when they come from the fire, and afterwards given again, and grow soft; as the crust of bread; tak’d in Menden.

Bacon’s Natural History.

Only a sweet and virtuous soul, like reason’d timber never gives; that thought what whole world turn to cool. Herbert.

Then chily lives. Mortimer. Unless it is kept in a hot house, it will so given again, that it will be little better than raw malt.

Before you carry your large cocks in, open them, and spread them; hay is apt to give in the cock. Mortimer.

3. To move. A French phrase, up and down he traverses his ground, then nimly shifts a thrust, then lends a wound; now back be given, then rushes on again. Daniel’s Civil War.

4. To give in. To go back; to give away.
This change was given with so well governed fury, that the left corner of the Scots battalion was enforced to give in. Haywood.

5. To give into. [A French phrase.] To adopt; to embrace.
This is a geography particular to the medallists; the poets, however, have sometimes given in to it, and furnish us with very good lights for the explication of it.

This consideration may induce a translator to give in to those general phrases, which have attained a veneration in our language from being used in the Old Testament.

Pope. The whole body of the people are either stupidly negligent, or else giving in with all their hearts in very practices that are working their destruction. Swift.

6. To give off. To cease; to forbear.
The punishment would be kept from being too much, if we gave off as soon as we perceived that we were well fed. Hook.

7. To give over. To cease; to act no more.
If they will speak to the purpose, they must give over, and stand upon such particulars only as they can shew we have either added or abrogated, otherwise than we ought, in the manner of church polity.

Hooker.

Neither hath Christ, third union of both natures, incurred the damage of either, lest, by being born a man, we should think he hath given over to be God, or that because he continued God, therefore he cannot be man also.

Hooker. Give not over so; to him again; intreat him. Kneel down before him, hang upon his gown, You are too cold. Shakesp. Measure for Measure.

The state of human actions is so variable, that to try things off, and never to give over, doth wonders. Bacon’s Natural History.

Powers, of the garments, king of Macedon, had a petition offered him divers times by an old woman, and still answered he had no leisure; whereupon the woman said aloud, Why then give over to be king. Bacon.

So Satan, whom repulse upon repulse Met ever, and to shameful silence brought Yet give not over, though desperate of success. Milton.

Shall we kindle all this flame Out to put it out again? And must we now give over, And only end where we began? In vain this mischief we have done, If we can do no more. Dryd.

It would be well for all authors, if they knew when to give over, and to desist from any further paraphrase of her fate. Addison.

He coughed again, and was forced to give over for the same reason. Swift 3.

8. To give out. To publish; to proclaim.
Simon bewitch’d the people of Sannais, giving out that himself was some great one. Acts, viii. 9. Julius Caesar hir’d aseep Pompey’s preparations, by a fame that he cunningly gave out how Caesar’s own soldiers lov’d him not. Bacon. His! ill-wishers will give you out you are now going to quit your school. Swift.

9. To give to. To cease; to yield.
We are the earth; and they, the clouds; who, as it were, give out great heat, and cool. And ‘till they foot and clutch their prey; They never cool, much less give out. Herbert.

But what, if at last I know the way: To cool down, and give them out again? Marston. That for twenty denials you would not give out. Swift.

Giver. n. s. [from give]. One that gives; donor; bestower; distributor; granter.

We well may afford Our givers own gifts. Milton’s Par. Lost. By thee how fairly is the giver now Repaid? But gratitude in thee is lost Long since. Milton’s Paradise Regained.

I have not liv’d since first I heard the news: The gift the guilty giver doth accuse. Dryd.

Both gifts destructive is to the giver’s胀: Alike both lovers fall by those they love. Pope.

Gives. n. s. Lettres or shackles for the Gizzard. n. s. [gizzler. Fr. griGeris Lat.] It is sometimes called gizzern.

1. The strong muscular stomach of a fowl.
Fowls have two ventricles, and pick up stones to convey them into their second ventricle, the gizzard.

More.

Birds in this there is no mastication in the mouth; but in such as are not carnivorous, it is immediately swallowed into the crop, by some kind of antiseptic juice from the glandules distilling in there, and

811
tence transferred into the gizzard, or muscular stomach.

By their high corps and corny gizzard known.

2. It is proverbially used for apprehension or conception of mind; as, he frets his gizzard, he harrasses his imagination.

But that which does them greatest harm, Their spiritual gizzard are to warm; Which put the overripe sorts in fvers still.

Satisfaction and restitutio se could only hard upon the gizzard of our publicans, that their blood is not half so dear to them as the transaction in their coffers.

gladium, v. [from gladar.] [gladius, Lat.] Sword; a prizfighter.

To GLAD. v. a. [from the adjective.] To make glad; to cheer; to exhilarate.

He saw rich nectar-thaws release the vigour Of thy icy North; from frost-bound Atlas hands His arm, where the fetter falls; green vigne Gladdening the Scythian rocks, and Lybian sands.

It glads me To see so many virtues thus united, To restore justice and dethrone oppression. Otway. Each drinks the juice that glads the heart of man.

If justice Phillips’ costive head Some frigid rhymes discharge, They shall like Persian tales be read, And glad both barnes and nurses read. Swift.

To GLADDEN. v. a. [from glad.] To cheer; to delight; to make glad; to exhilarate.

Oh, he was all made up of love and charms! Delight of every age appears, A secret pleasure gladness’; all that saw him.

A kind of vital heat in the soul cheers and gladness gives her, when she does not attend to it. Addison’s Spectator.

GLadder. n. s. [from glad.] One that makes glad; one that gladness; one that exhilarates.

Then gladness is the mount of Cytheron, Have pity, goddess. Dryden.

GLADE. n. s. [from glapan to be hot, or to shine; whence the Danish glad, and the obsolete English gleed a red hot coal.] A lawn or opening in a wood. Lucan. It is taken for an avenue through a wood, whether open or shaded, and has therefore epithets of opposite meaning.

So firm’d his even with rage and rancorous ire; But far within, as in a hollow glade, Those glaring lamps were set, that made a dreadful shade. Spenser.

Lo where they sped, how in a gloomy glade The lion sleeping, lay in secret shade. Hubberd, O might I hear.

In solitude live large, in some glade Obscur’d, where highest woods, impenetrate To star or sun-light, spread their unbrambage, And brown as evening. Milton’s Paradise Lost.

When any, favour’d of high Jove, Chances to pass through this adventurous glade, Swift as a spark of a glancing star I shoot from heaven to give him save convey. Milton.

For noord’ry heat are closer abors made, And for fresh ev’ning air the open glade. Dryden.

There interspers’d in lawns and opening glades; Thin trees arise that shun each other’s shades. Pope.

By the heroes armed shades Glittering through the gloomy glades; By the youths that dy’d for love, Wading in the myrtle grove, Restore, restore Exeter! life! Oh! take the husband or restore the wife! Pope.

She smil’d, array’d

With all the glories of the air, shine, stream, and glade, New drest and blooming as a bridal maid. Harte.

GLADEN. n. s. [from gladius, Lat. a. GLADER. sword.] Word-sword: a general name of plants that rise with a broad blade like sedge. Junius.

GLADNESS. n. s. [glad and fullness.] Joy; gladness. Obsolete.

And there him rests in riotous susience Of his gladness, and kindly joyance. Spenser. GLADATOR. n. s. [Lat. gladiator, Fr.] A swordplayer; a prizfighter.

Then whilst his foe each gladiator falls, The athletes, looking on, enjoys the spoils.

Besides, in gratitude for such high matters, Know I have vow’d two hundred gladatours.

GLADLY, adv. [from glad.] Joyfully; with gayety; with merriment; with exultation.

For his particular, I’ll receive him gladly; But not one follower.

Shakespeare, King Lear. You are going to set us right; and ‘tis an advantage every body will gladly see you engross the glory of.

Bend to Pope. Bount to Pope. GLADSOM. adj. [from glad.] Cheerfulness; joy; exultation.

By such degrees the spreading gladness grew In every heart, which fear had froze before:

The standing streets with so much joy they view, That with less grief the parish’d they deplore. Dryden.

GLADSOME. adj. [from glad.] With gayety and delight.

The highest angels to and fro descend, From highest heaven in gladness companies.

The gladsome ghost in circling troops attend, And with unwearied eyes behold their friend.

Dryden.

2. Causing joy; having an appearance of gayety.

Each morn they wak’d me with a sprightly lay; Of opening heaven they sung and gladness day.

Prior.

GLADSOMELY, adv. [from glad some.] With gayety and delight.

Of highest heavens to and fro descend, From highest heaven in gladness companies.

The gladness ghost in circling troops attend, And with unwearied eyes behold their friend.

Dryden.

2. A kind of halfbet.

Dict. To Glaire, v. a. [glaire, Fr. from the noun.] To smear with the white of an egg. This word is still used by the bookbinders.

GLANCE. n. s. [glanz, Germ. glitter.] 1. A sudden shot of light or splendour.

His off ring soon prescrip’tion fire from heav’n Consum’d with nimble glaze, and grateful team. The other’s not; for his was sheeere. Milton

2. A sketch or dart of the beam of sight.

The aspects which procure love are not gazings, but sudden glances and dartings of the eye. Bacon.

Therose of thoses sort of bearties which last but for a moment; some particularity of a violent passion, some graceful action, a smile, a glance of an eye, a disdainful look, and a look of gravity. Dryden.

Boldly she look’d, like one of high degree; Yet never seem’d to cast a glance on me; At which I only joy’d, for truth to say, I felt an unknown awe, and some dismay. Harte.

3. A snatch of sight; a quick view.

The ample mind takes a survey of several objects with a glance. Hatta in the Mind.

To GLANCE, p. u. [from the noun.]

1. To shoot a sudden ray of splendour.

He double blows about him fiercely laid, That glancing fire out of the iron play’d, As sparkles from the anvil use, When heavy, hammers on the wedge are sway’d.

Spenser.

When through the gloom the glancing lightnings fly, Heavy the rattling thunders roll on high. Rowe.
2. To fly off in an oblique direction. He has a little girdle of me, I confess; But as the jest did glance away from me, Tis ten to one it maintaine you two outright. Shak.

3. To strive in an oblique direction. Through Paris's shield the forcible weapon went, His corset pierces, and his garment rends, And glaring downwards near his flank descends. Pope.

1. To view with a quick cast of the eye; to play the eye. O 'th sudden up they rise and dance, Then sit again, and look on pine and cress, And dance another kiss. Suckling.

5. To censure by oblique hints. How can't thou thus, for shame, Titania, Glance at my credit with Hippolita, Knowing I know thy love to Theseus? Shakesp.

To 株ance, r. a. To move nimly; to shot obliquely. Glancing an eye of pity on his losses, Enough to bring a sheath-catcher down. Shakesp.

To GLANCE, GLANCINGLY. d. [from glance.] In an oblique broken manner; transiently, Sir Richard Hawkins hath done something in this kind, but brokilly and glancingly, intending chiefly a discovery on his voyage. Hakewel.

GLAND, n. s. [glans, Lat. gland, Fr.] All the glands of a human body are reduced to two sorts, viz. _conglutate and conglomerate_. A conglomerate gland is a little smooth body, wrapped up in a fine skin, by which it is separated from all the other parts, only admitting an artery and nerve to pass in, and giving way to a vein and excretory canal to come out of; this sort are the glands in the brain, the labial glands, and testes. A conglutate gland is composed of many little conglomerate glands, all tied together, and wrapped up in the common tunicle or membrane. Quincy.

The abscess begin deep in the body of the gland. The glands, which o'er the body spread, Fine complicated dusks of nervious thread, Involved, and t'aiy, together agree. The rapid motion of the blood obstruct. Blackmore.

GLANDE'FEROUS. adj. [glans and fero, Lat.] Bearing mast; bearing acorns, or fruit like acorns.

Glean'derous. adj. [glareous, Fr. gl大型, Lat. from glare.] Consisting of viscous transparent matter, like the white of an egg.

GLARING. adj. Applied to any thing notorious: as, a glaring crime.

GLASS, n. s. [glasey, Sax. glas, Dut. as Pezon imagines from glās, British, green, In Erse it is called kliun, and this primarily signifies clear or clean, being so denominated from its transparency.

1. An artificial substance made by fusing fixed salts and flint or sand together, with a vehement fire. The word glass cometh from the Belgic and High Dutch glas, from the Latin gla, which signifies among them to shine; or perhaps from glacies in the Latin, which is ice, whose colour it resembles. Pochean on Drawing. Glass is thought so compact, and firm a body, that it is indestructible by art or nature, and is also of close a texture that the subtilest chemical spirits cannot penetrate. Boyle.

2. A glass vessel of any kind. I'll see no more: And yet the eighth appears, who bears a glass Which shews me many more. Shakesp. Macb.

3. A looking-glass; a mirror. He was the mark and glass, copy and book, That serve'd and taught me. Shak. Henry IV.

8. A cup of glass used to drink in. To this last costly treatry, That draw'st so much treasure, and like a glass Did break i' the rising. Shakesp. Henry VIII.

7. The quantity of wine usually contained in a glass; a draught. When then the man drinks one glass more will not make him drunk, that one glass hath disabled him from well discerning his present condition. Taylor's Rule of Living Holy.

GLASS, adj. Vitreous; made of glass.

Get thee glass eyes; And, like a scarry politician, To see the things thou dost not. Shak. King Lear.

Glass bottles are more fit for this second fining than those of wood. Mortimer's Husband.

To GLASS, r. a. To see as in a glass; to represent as in a glass or mirror. Not in use. Menthink I am partaker of thy passion, And in thy case do glass mine own delicacy. Sidney.

2. To case in glass. I methought all his senses were lockt in his eye, As jewels in crystal for some prince to buy; Who tending their own worth, from whence they were glassedDid point out to buy them along as you pass. Shak.

3. To cover with a glass; to glaze. I have observed little grains of silver to lie hid in the small cavities, perhaps glassed over by a vitrifying heat, in crucibles wherein silver has been long kept in fusion. Boyle.

GLASS-FURNACE, n. s. [glass and furnace.] A furnace in which glass is made by liquefaction.

If our dreamer please to try whether the glowing heat of a glass-furnace be barely a wandering imagination in a dreamer's man's fancy, by putting his hand into it, he may perhaps be awakened into a certainty that it is something more than have imagination. Locke.

GLASSGAGZING. adj. [glass and gazing.] Finical; often contemplating himself in a mirror.
GLASS

GLASSGRINDER. n. s. [glass and grinder.] One whose trade is to polish and grind glass.

GLASSHOUSE. n. s. [glass and house.] A house where glass is manufactured.

I remember to have met with an old Roman Morisco, who said little pieces of clay half vitrified, and prepared at the glasshouses. Addison.

GLASSMAN. n. s. [glass and man.] One who sells glass.

The profit of glasses consists only in a small present made to the glass makers.

GLASSMETAL. n. s. [glass and metal.] Glass in fusion.

Let proof be made of the incorporating of copper or brass with glassmetal. Bacon's Phys. Rem.

GLASSWORK. n. s. [glass and work.] Manufacture of glass.

The crystalline Venice glass is a mixture in equal portions, of stones brought from Pavia, and the ashes of a wood called kali, gathered in a desert between Alexandria and Rosetta; but the Egyptians used first for fuel, and then they crush the ashes into lumps like a stone, and so sell them to the Venetians for their glassworks. Bacon's Nat. History.

GLASSWORT. n. s. [salicornia, or saltwort.]

It hath an apetuous flower, wanting the emblems; for the stamens, or chives, and the embryos grow on the extreme part of the leaves; these embryos aftereward become pods or bladders, which, for the most part, contain one seed. They make the sea-coast cut the plants up to the latter end of Summer; and, having dried them in the sun, they burn them for their ashes, which are used in making of glass and soap. These herbs are by the country people called kelp. From the ashes of these plants is extracted the salt called salit, or alkali, by the chemists.

For the fine glass we use the purest of the finest sand, and the ashes of chalk or glazier; and for the coarser or green sort the ashes of brine or other plants. Brown's Twel. Errors.

GLASSY adj. [from glass.]

1. Made of glass; vitreous.
2. Shining, glittering, as in smoothness or lustre, or brittleness.

Man! proud man!

Drest in a little brief authority,
Most ignorant of what he most assur'd
His graceousness, like an angry ape,
Plays such fantastick tricks before high heav'n,
As makes the angels weep. Shak. Mess. for Mess. 2.

There is a willow grows aslant a brook,
That shows his hoary leaves in the glassy stream. Shak. 3.

The magnet attracteth the shining or glassy powder brought from the Indies, usually employed in writing-dust. Brown.

What would produc'd the glassy sheen? Who hid
Those hoary frosts that fall on winter's head? Sancho.

The glassy deep. Dryden's An.

GLASTONBURY THORN. n. s. A species of Medlar.

This species of thorn produces some branches of flowers in Winter, and flowers again in the Spring. Miller.

GLAUCOMA. n. s. [goyacam; glaucia; fr. A fault in the eye, which changes the crystalline humour into a greyish colour, without detriment of sight, and therein differs from what is commonly understood by suffusion. Quinny.

GLEANING. n. s. [from glean.] The act of gathering, or thing gleaned.

There shall be as the shaking of an olive-tree, and as the gleaning of grapes when the vintage is done. Bibl. 6.

The orphan and widow are members of the same common family, and have a right to be supported out of the incomes of it, as the poor Jews had to gather the gleanings of the rich man's harvest. Atterbury.

GLEANER. n. s. [from glean.] 1. One who gathers after the reapers. 2. One who gathers any thing slowly and laboriously.

An ordinary coffee-house gleaner of the city is an armament. Leche.

GLEANER. n. s. [from glean.] 1. Turf; soil; ground.

This, like the moory plots, delights in sedgy bowers; the grassy groves loves, and oft attend with flowers. 2. A fertile corn; a rich, of oil and wine; a fruitful harvest; a most fruitful time. 3. A fruitful harvest; a rich harvest; a fruitful field. 4. A fertile harvest; a rich harvest.

GLEAN. v. a. [from the noun.] 1. To shine with sudden coruscation. 2. To shine. 3. Togleam. a. [from glean.] Flushing; darting sudden coruscations of light. 4. To glean, as a gleaner. 5. To glean, as a gleaner. 6. To glean, as a gleaner.
G L E
Sleeping vegetables lie,
Till the glad sun's rays of a genial ray
Unhould the glebe, and call them out to day, Garth.
2. The land possessed as a part of the revenue of an ecclesiastical benefice.
The ordinary living or revenue of a parsonage is of this sort: in this land, commonly called the glebe; another in tythe, which is a set part of our goods rendered to God; the third, in other offerings bestowed upon God and his church by the people.
Spelman.
A trespass done on a parson's glebe land, which is a freehold, cannot be tried in a spiritual court. Agilp's Parergon.
Many parishes have not an inch of glebe. Swift.
G L E B O U S. adj. [from glebe.] Turly.
Diet.
G L E B Y. adj. [from glebe.] Turly; perhaps in the following passage fat or fruitful, if it has in any meaning.
Pernicious that thy malignant seeds,
In an ill hour, and by a fatal hand
Sadlly diffus'd o'er virtuous gleby land,
With reeking slides amidst the corn appears,
And stop the hopes and harvest of the year. Prior.
G L E D E. n.s. [from glede, Saxon.] A kind of hawk.
Ye shall not eat the glede, the kite, and the vulture.
Deuteronomy.
G L E E. n.s. [xi]gele, Saxon.] Joy; merriment; gayety. It anciently signified musick played at feasts. It is not now used, except in ludicrous writing, or with some mixture of irony and contempt.
She marcheth home, and by her takes the night,
Whom all the people follow with great glee. Fairy Queen.
Many wayfarers make themselves glee by vexing the inhabitants, who again follow not to beguile them with perfumes. Carew.
Is Blowzelinga dead? Farewell my glee?
No happiness is now reserved for me. Gay.
The poor man then was rich, and rich'd with gle.
Each barley-head antaxt, and day-light free. Harte.
G L E E D. n.s. [from gleopan, Saxon, to glow.] A hot glowing coal. A provincial and obsolete word.
G L E F U L. adj. [glee and full.] Gay; merry; cheerful; not used.
My lovely Aaron, wherefore look'st thou sad,
When every thing doth make a gleeful boast? Shakespeare.
G L E E K. n.s. [glik, Saxon.] Musick; or musician.
What will you give us?—No money, but the gleek: I will give you the ministrel. Shakep.
To G L E E K. v.a. [gleekman, in Saxon, is a mimick or a droll.]
1. To sneer; to glee; to drone upon.
I can gleak upon thy song. Shakespeare.
I have seen you gleeking or gallling at this gentheman twice or thrice. Shakespeare.
2. In Scotland it is still retained, and signifies to fool or spend time idly, with something of mimickry or drollery.
To G L E E N. v.a. To shine with heat or polish.
I know not the original notion of this word: it may be of the same race with glose or with gleam. I have not remarked it in any other place.
The sweaty froward, who edge the crooked scythe,
Fend stubborn steel, and harden gleaming arroun.
Acknowledge Vulcan's aid. Swift.
G L E E T. n.s. [It is written by Skinner glette, and derived from gleban, Saxon, to run softly.] A sinuous oze; a thin ichor running from a sore.
To G L E E T. v.a. [from the noun.]
1. To drip or ooze with a thin sinuous liquor.
His thumb being inflamed and swollen, I made an artificial poultice of the bone: this not only bled, but gleeted a few drops. Wmsmen.
2. To run slowly.
Vapours raised by the sun make clouds, which are carried up and down the atmosphere,
'till they hit against the mountainous places of the globe, and by this concussion are condensed, and so gleet the caverns of these mountains, whose inner parts, being burnt, yield the basan.
Chuene's Phil. Princ.}
G L E E T Y. adj. [from gleet.] Ichorous; thinly sinuous.
If the flesh lose its ruggedness, and the matter change to be thin and gleet, you may suspect it corrupting. Wmsmen.
G L E N. n.s. [glean, Erse.] A valley; a dale; a depression between two hills.
The sun in his madness is still
And wows the widow's daughter of the glean. Spenc.
G L E W. n.s. [gelen, Latin.] A viscous cement made by dissolving the skins of animals in boiling water, and drying the gelly. See Gclidean.
G L I B. n.s. [from glibe.] Skinner.
1. Smooth; slippery; so formed as to be easily moved.
Liquid bodies have nothing to sustain their parts, nor any thing to cement them; the parts being glib and continually in motion, fall off from one another, which way sooner gravity inclines the parts.
Habakkuk brought him a smooth strong rope compactly twisted together, with a noose that slipt as glib as a bird's catcher's gin. Arbuthnot.
2. Smooth; volatile.
I want that glib and oily art
To speak and purpose not, since what I well intend,
I'll do't before I speak. Shakesp. King Lear.
There was never so much glib nonsense put together in well sounding English, Locke.
Now Curd his shop from rubbish drains;
Three genuine tomes of Swift's remains:
And then, to make them pass the glibber,
Bewild my curiosity. Swift.
Be sure he a fine spoken man;
Do but hear on the clergy how glib his tongue ran.
Swift.
G L I B R. n.s.
The Irish have from the Scythians mantles and long glibis; which is a thick curled bush of hair hanging down over their eyes, and monstrosly disguising them. Spenser on Ireland.
To G L I B E. v.a. [from the adjective.] To castrate.
I'll gild them all: fourteen shall not see,
To bring false generations; they are collective,
And I had rather glib myself, than they Should not produce fair issue. Shakespeare.
G L I B L Y. adv. [from glib] Smoothly; volubly.
Many who would startle at an oath, whose stomachs as well as consciences recoil at an obscenity, do yet glide glibly into a detraction.
Government of the Tongue. Prior.
G L I B R I N S. n.s. [from glib] Smoothness; slipperiness.
A polvid's ice-like glibness doth enfold
The rock. Chapman's Odyssey.
The tongue is the most ready for motion of any member, needs not so much as the flexure of a joint, and by access of humours acquires a glibness too, the more to facilitate its moving.
Government of the Tongue.
To G L I D E. v.a. [gliban, Saxon; gliidien, Dutch.]
1. To flow gently and silently.
By east, among the dusty valleys glide
The silver streams of Jordan's crystal flood. Fair."
1. A weak faint light.

Such vast room in nature, Only to shine, yet scarce to contribute. Each orb a glimmer, and from this to that, down to this habitable, which returns light back to them. Thousands of things, which now either wholly escape our apprehensions, or which our short-sighted reason having got some faint glimpse of, we, in the dark, grope after. — Locke.

GLOM. s. [glimmer, Dutt. to glow.]

1. To shine; to exhibit lustre; to gleam. Steel globes are more resplendent than the like plates of brass, and so is the glinting of a blade. — Bacon's Phys. Rem.

2. To be splendid. — Dryden.

GLOMISTRY. s. [from globe.] Sphericity; sphericalness.

The lesser masses that are lodged in sappy and stony bodies, disjunctly, from their shining and glimmering, are an indwelling to the writers of fossils, to give those bodies the name of mica and glimmer. — Woodward on Fossils.

GLOMULAE. n. [globus, L.] Spheric; round.

Regions, to which All thy dominion, Adam, is no more Than what this garden is to all the earth, And all the sea, from hence to the entire globe. — Milton.

GLOBOSE adj. [globus, L.] Spheric; round.

GLOSOUS, GLOSOUS. adj. [globus, L.]. When the accent is intended to be on the last syllable, the word should be written globosus, when on the first globus: I have transferred either a passage of Milton, in which this rule has been neglected. — Dutt.

GLOTER. n. [glo'ter, Ger.] To shine; to sparkle with light.

Gloater, to glister, to gleam, to glint.

GLOB. n. [globe, Fr., it. globo, L. sol, sphaera.]

1. A sphere; a ball; a round body: a body of which every part of the surface is at the same distance from the centre.

2. The aeriform ball.
The youth, whose fortune the vast globe obey'd, Finding his royal enemy betray'd, Went at his foot. — Steevens.

Where God declares his intention to give dominion, he meant that he would make a species of creatures that should have dominion over the other species of this terrestrial globe. — Locke.

A sphere in which the various regions of the earth are geographically depicted, or in which the constellations are laid down according to their places in the sky.

GLOTR. n. [glo'ter, Ger. glutern, Dut.] To shine; to be bright.

The wars fame most in Summer, and the helmets glister brighten in the fairest sunshine. — Spenser.

'Tis better to be lowly born, And range with humble livings in content, Than to be cheek'd up in a glistering grief, And wear a golden sorrow. — Shakespeare.

The golden sun Glares on the zodiac in his glistering couch. — Shakespeare.

All that glister is not gold. — Ben Jonson.

Of the court to-day, than all Else that glister'd in Whitehall. — Ben Jonson.

When the sun shine upon the shields of brass, and brass, the mountains glistered therewith, and shined like lamps of fire. — Mac. vi. 32.

The astrologer who spells the stars, Mistakes his globe, and in her brighter eye Interprets heaven's physiognomy. — Cireillow.

But raise thy thought from sense, nor think to find Such figures as are in globes design'd. — Creech.

4. A body of persons drawn into a circle. — Irons.

A globe of fiery seraphim inclos'd, With bright imblazoning, and horrent arms. — Milton.

GLOBE AMARANTH, or everlasting flower. n. s. [arum arum.] A flower. — Miller.

GLOBE DAISY. n. s. A kind of flower. — Miller.

GLOBE FISH. n. s. A kind of orbicular fish. — Miller.

GLOBE RANUNCULUS. n. s. [hallcior-rancunculi.] A plant. — Miller.

GLOBE THISTLE. n. s. [carduus orbicularis.] A plant. — Miller.

GLOBOSITY. n. s. [from globe.] Sphericity; sphericalness.

GLOBULARIA. n. s. [Lat. globulare, Fr.] A fleshy flower. — Miller.

GLOBULE. n. s. [globulus, Fr. globulus, Lat.] Such a small particle of matter as is of a globular or spherical figure; as the red particles of the blood, which swim in a transparent serum, and are easily discovered by the microscope. These will attract another when they come within a due distance, and unite like the spheres of quicksilver. — Quincy.

The halions have opaque globules of snow in their centre, to intercept the light within the halo. — Newton's Opticks.

Blood consists of red globules, swimming in a thin liquid called serum: the red globules are elastic, and will break: the vessels which admit the smaller globule, cannot admit the greater without a disease. — Ardenius on Alimens.
GLO'BUS. adj. [from globule.] In form of a small sphere; round.

The whiteness of such globulous particles proceeds from the air included in the thorn. Boyle.

To GLOMERATE. v. a. [glomera, Lat.] To gather into a ball or sphere. A filamentous substance gathered into a ball is said to be glomerated, but discontinuous particles are conglomerated.

GLOMERATION. n. s. [glomeratio, Lat.]
1. The act of forming into a ball or sphere.
2. A body formed into a ball.
The rainbow consists of a glomeration of small drops, which cannot fall but from the air that is very hot.

GLOMERUS. adj. [glomerous, Lat.]
Gathered into a ball or sphere, as a ball of thistledown.

GLOOM. n. a. [glooming, Sax. twilight.]
1. Imperfect darkness; dimness; obscurity; defect of light.
Glowing embers through the room, Teach light to counterfeit a gloom. Milton. Par. Lost.

This the seat, That we must change for heav'n? This monstrous gloom, For that celestial light? Milton's Par. Lost. The night is now, as one man fell, Wholesome, and cool, and mild; but with black air Accompany'd; with damps, and dreadful gloom. Milton. Now warm in love, now burning in thy bloom. Lost in a convent's solitary gloom.

2. Cloudiness of aspect; heaviness of mind; sullenness.

To GLOOM. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To shine obscurely; as the twilight. This sense is not now in use.

His glittering armour made A little glooming light much like a shade. Spencer. Scarcely had Phoebus in the glooming East Yet harnessed his fiery-footed team. Spencer.

2. To be cloudy; to be dark.

3. To be melancholy; to be gloomy.

GLOOMILY. adv. [from gloomy.]
1. Obscurely; dimly; without perfect light; dimly.

2. Sullenly; without cloudy aspect; with dark intentions; not cheerfully.

Sec. he comes: now gloomily he looks! Dryd. Gloomy retir'd the spider lives. Thomson.

GLOOMINESS. n. s. [from gloomy.]
1. Want of light; obscurity; imperfect light; dimness.
2. Want of cheerfulness; cloudiness of look; heaviness of mind; melancholy.

Neglect spreads gloominess upon their homour, and makes them grow sullen and inconversable. Collier of the Spire.
The gloominess in which sometimes the minds of the best men are involved, very often stands in need of such little incitements to mirth and laughter as are apt to dispel melancholy. Addison.

GLOOMY. adj. [from gloom.]
1. Obscure; imperfect illuminated; almost dark; dismal for want of light.

These were from without.
The growing miseries, which Adam saw Already in parts, and thought hid in gloimned shade, To sorrow abandon'd. Milton's Par. Lost.

Deep in a cavern dwells the drowsy god, Whose gloomy mansion nor the rising sun, Nor setting visits, nor the lightsome noon. Dryden's Fables.

The surface of the earth is clearer or gloimmer, just as the sun is bright or more overcast. Pope.

2. Dark of complexion.

That fair field
Of Erin, where Proserpine gathering flowers, Herself a fairest flow'r, by gloomy Isis
Was led. Milton's Par. Lost.

3. Sullen; melancholy; cloudy of look; heavy of heart.

GLO'RIOUS. adj. [from glory.] Illustrious; honourable; decorated with glory; dignified with honours. Not in use.

Old respect,
As I suppose, toward your once glory'd friend,
Till now, now since your passage direct,
Your younger foot, while mine cast back with age
Came lagging after. Milton's Aganippe.

Glorification. n. s. [glorification, Fr. from glorify.] The act of giving glory.

At opening your eyes, enter upon the day with thanksgiving for the preservation of you the last night, with the glorification of God for the works of the creation. Taylor.

To GLO'RY. v. a. [glorifier, Fr. glorifier, Lat.]
1. To procure honour or praise to one.
Two such silver currents, when they join, Do glorify the banks that bound them. Shaksp. Justice is virtue: that alone Makes them all sure, and glorifies the throne. Dryden. This form and manner of glorifying God was not at that time first begun; but received long before them and anlemo'd at that time as an ornament for the truth. Hooker.

Good fellow, tell us here the circumstance, That for these hands, glorify the Lord. Shaksp. All nations shall glorify thy name, Ps. lxvi. 9. Our bodies with which the apostle commands us to glorify God, as well as with our souls. Dutys of Man.

This is the perfection of every thing, to attain its true and proper end; and the end of all these gifts and endowments, which God hath given us, is to glorify the giver. Tillotson.

3. To praise; to honour; to extol.

Whosoever they find to be most licentious of life, desperate in all parts of dissipation and reprobation, him they set up and glorify. Spencer.

No chymist yet the elixir got, But glorifies his pregnant pot, If by the way he beheld Some odiferous thing, or med'cinal. Donne.

4. To exalt to glory in heaven; to raise to celestial beatitudes.

If, as God be glorified in him, God shall also glorify him in himself, and shall straitly glorify him. John, iii. 32. Whom he justified, them he also glorified. Rom. viii. 30.

The members of the church remaining, being perfectly sanctified, shall be eternally glorified, shall the whole church be truly and perfectly holy. Pearson.

The soul, being immortal, will, at some time or other, resume its body once again in a glorified manner. Aristotle's Parergon.

GLO'RI'OUS. adj. [glorious, Lat. glorious, Fr.]
1. Boastful; proud; haughty; ostentatious.

Glorious followers, who make themselves as transacts of the recommendation of these they follow, taint business for want of sincerity. Bacon.

They that are glorious must needs be factious; for all are their own. Bacon.

2. Noble; illustrious; excellent. It is frequently used by theological writers, to express the brightness of triumphant sanctity rewarded in heaven.

GLORY. n. s. [glorie, Fr. gloria, Lat. Among the old poets it was used sometimes as one syllable, glor.]
1. Praise paid in adoration.

2. The felicity of heaven prepared for those that please God.
... all the most precious of them, and let them be sent to each other. Let God take them to heaven. Shakesp. Hen. VI.

3. Honour; praise; fame; renown; celebrity.

Think it no glory to swell in tyranny. Sidney. Glory is like a circle in the water, Which never ceaseth to enlarge itself, Till by broad spreading it doth to nought. Shaksp. Hen. VI.

And with that word and warning soon was sight.
Each J<?ld longing for near coming glory.

Israel's bright sceptre far less glory brings, There have been fewer friends on earth than kings.

Can we imagine that neither the ambition of princes, or interest, or gain in private persons, or curiosity and the desire of knowledge, or the glory of discovering, could ever move them in that coldness of mind to try their fortunes upon the sea? Drynet.

Your sex's glory tis to shine unknown,
Of all applause, be fondest of your own. Young.

4. Splendour; magnificence.

Sodom, in all his glory, was not arrayed like one of these. Matt. xix. 24.

Treat so ill, cha'd from thy throne, Returning, you adorn the town;
And with a brave revenge do show They are worth and can compare.

Aristotle says, that should a man under ground converse with works of art, and be afterwards brought up in the open day, and see the several glories of the heaven and earth, he would pronounce them the works of God. Addison's Spect.

5. Lustre; brightness.

Of all applause, be fondest of your own. Young.
Now sleeping flecks on their soft cheeks lie;
The moon, serene in glory, mounts the sky.

Pope.

From evening skies may streaming glory shine,
And saints embrace thee with a love like mine.

Pope.

6. A circle of rays which surrounds the heads of saints in picture.
It looks like a surrounding crown;
such an one as irradiates, and puts a circle of glory about the head of him upon whom it descends.

South.

A smile plays with a surprising agreeableness in the eye, breaks out with the brightest distinction, and sits like a glory upon the countenance.

Collect of the Aspect.

7. Pride; boastfulness; arrogance.
By the vain glory of men they entered into the world, and therefore shall they come shortly to an end.

Wis'd. xiv. 14.

On death-bed come in conscious glory lie.
Since of the doctor in the mode they die.
Young.

8. Generous pride.
The success of those wars was too notable to be unknown to your ears, to which all worthy fame hath glory to come unto.

Sidney.

To GLORY.
[glo-ri'or, Lat.] To boast in; to be proud of.

With like judgment glorifying when he had happened to do a thing well, as when he had performed some notable mischief.

Sidney.

But look with open mind their own pride and their conceits, to glory, that whereas Luther did but blow away the roof, and Zuinglius batter but the walls of popish superstition, the last and hardest work of all remained, which was to raise up the very ground and foundation of popery.

Hooker.

Let them think they glory not in mischief,
Nor build their evils on the graves of great men;
For then my guiltless blood must cry against them.

Hooker.

The title of Frensham is what I most glory in, and what most effectually calls to my mind the happiness of that government under which I live.

Addison's Cato.

If others may glory in their birth, why may not we, whose parents were called by God to attend on the ministry.

Addison.

No one is out of the reach of misfortune; no one therefore should glory in his prosperity.

Clarina.

To GLOSE.
.v. a. To flatten; to collocate.
Hammer.  See To Glose.

GLOSS, n. s. [glosa; glose, Fr.]

1. A scholium; a comment.
They never hear sentence, which mentioned the word or scripture, but forthwith with their glosses upon it the word preached, the scripture explained, or delivered unto us in sermons.
Hooker.
If then all souls, both good and bad, do teach,
With general voice, that souls can never die;
'Tis not man's flatting gloss, but nature's speech,
Which, like God's oracles, can never lie.
Dryden.
Some matter at certain passages therein,
By putting ill glosses upon the text, and taking with the left hand what I offer with the right.
Howell.
All this, without a gloss or comment.
He could unridle in a moment.
Hudibras.
In many places he has perverted my meaning by his glosses, and interpreted my words into blasphemy and bawdry, of which they were not guilty.

Dryden's Fables, Preface.

They give the scandal, and the wise discern;
That they are taught an age too apt to learn.
Dryden.

Exaining the text in short glosses, was Accursius's method.

Indentures, covants, articles they draw,
Large in quantity, and more and more
Than civil codes with all their glosses are.
Pope.

2. Superficial lustre.
In this sense it seems to have another derivation; it has perhaps some affinity to glow.

H. His iron coat all over-grown with rust,
Was ornamented with plates of gold,
Whose glistening gloss darkned with filthy dust.
Spenser.

You are a sectary,
That's the plain truth: your painted gloss discovers.
To meet that understand you, words and weakness.
Shakespeare.

Golden opinions from all sorts of people,
Which were born now in their newest glosses.

Shakespeare.

The doubt will he whether it will polish so well?
For steel gloses are more repleant with that store of brass.
Bacon.

Weeds that the wind did toss
The virgins wore: the youths, woven coats,
That cast a faint dim gloss,
Like that of oil.
Chapman's Hamlet.

It was the colour of devotion, giving a lustre to reverence, and a gloss to humility.
South.

Groves, fields, and meadows, are at any season pleasant to look upon: but never so much as in the opening of the Spring, when they are all new and fresh, with their first gloses upon them.

Addison's Spectator.

3. An interpretation artifical specious; a specious representation.
This sense seems to partake of both the former.

Poor painters oft with silly poets join,
To fill the world with strange but vain conceit;
One brings the stuff, the other stamps the coin,
Which breeds nought else but gloses of deceit.
South.

It is no part of my secret meaning to draw you hereby into hatred, or to set upon the face of this cause any farther gloss than the naked truth doth afford.

Hooker, Preface.

He seems with forged quaint conceit
To set a gloss upon his bad intent.
South.

The common glose
Of theologians.

Milton.

To GLOSS.
.v. n. [glosser, Fr. from the noun.]

1. To comment.
Thou dost not bring the then in thy hands,
By priestly glossing on the god's command.
Dryden.

2. To make sly remarks.
Her equals first observ'd her growing zeal,
And laughing gloss'd, that Abra serv'd so well.
Prior.

To GLOSS, v. a.

1. To explain by comment.
In parchem then, large as the fields, he draws Assurances, big as gloss civil laws.
Donne.

2. To palliate by specious exposition or representation.
This is the paradise, in description whereof so much glossing and deceiving eloquence hath been spent.
Hooker's Sermons.

Do I not reason wholly on your conduct?
You have the art to gloss the foulest cause.
Philip.

3. To embellish with superficial lustre.
Be thou, who lately of the common strain
Wert one of us, if still thou dost retain
The same ill habits, the same follies too,
Gloss'd over only with a saintlike hood,
Then I resume the freedom which I gave,
Still thou art bound to vice, and still a slave.

Dryden's Pers.

GLOS'SARY.
.n. s. [glosarium, Lat. glossa, Fr.]
A dictionary of obscure or antiquated words.

According to Varro, when delubrum was applied to a place, it signified one, in quo delubratur dedicatum est; and aliter in loco glasorialium.
Stilligheast.

I could add another word to the glossary.
Baker.

Glos'sER.
.n. s. [glosa'ter, Fr. from gloss.]
A writer of glosses; a commentator.

The reason why the assertion of a single judge does not prove the existence of judicial acts, is because his office is to pronounce judgment, and not to become an evidence; but why not the same be said of two judges?  Therefore, in this respect, the glossator's opinion must be false.

Ashly.

GLO'SSER, n. s. [glosarius, Lat.]
1. A scholast; a commentator.

2. A polisher.

GLOS'SINENESS, n. s. [from glossy.]
Smooth polish; superficial lustre.

Their surfaces had a smoothness and glossiness so much surpassing whatever I had observed in marble or common salt.

Boyle.

GLOS'SOGRAPHER.
.n. s. [glosa'tus and -graph.]
A scholast; a commentator.

GLOS'SOGRAPHY.
.n. s. [glosa'tus and -graphy.]
The writing of commentaries.

GLO'SSY.  adj. [from gloss.]
Shining; smoothly polished.

There came towards us a person of the place; he had on him a gown with wide sleeves, of a kind of water-camlet, of an excellent azure colour, far more glossy than the sapphire.

Bacon.

The rest entice
Shone with a glossy scar.

Milton.

His hair hung long behind, and glossy raven black.

Dryden.

Myself will search our planted ground at home,
For downy peaches and the glossy plum.

Dryden.

GLO'VE, n. s. [glope, Sax. from klawfe. Dan. to divide.]
Cover of the hands.

They flew about like chaff in the wind;
For hate some left their marks beheld,
Some could not stay their glosses to find.

Dryden.

White gloves were on his hands, and on his head
A wreath of laurel.

Dryden.

To GLO'VE, v. a. [from the noun.]
To cover as with a glove.

My limbs,
Weaken'd with grief, being now enwrapped with grief.

Are three themselves; hence therefore, thou nice crotch.
A scaly gauntlet now, with joints of steel,
Must glose this hand.

Shakespeare. Hen. IV.

The next he preys on is her palm,
That almon'er of transpiring balm;
So soft, its air but once removed;
Tender as were the summer.
Clevedon.

GLO'VIER, n. s. [from glose.]
One whose trade is to make or sell glosses.

Does he not wear a great round beard like a glosser's paring knife?

Shakespeare.

To GLOUT.
.v. n. [A low word of which I find no etymology.]
To pout; to look sullen.
It is still used in Scotland.

She larks in midst of all her den, and stalks For haste some left their marks beheld,
Some could not stay their glosses to find.

Chapman.

Gloating with sullen sprite, the fury shook
Her clotted locks, and blushed with each look.

Gorth.

To GLOW.
.v. n. [glojan, Sax. glücken, Dut.]
1. To be heated so as to shine without flame.

But silence silence!
Lesseneth not my fire.
But told it dauntless, and hidden it does glow,
I will reveal what ye so much desire.

Spenser.

His goodly eyes,
That o'er the files and musters of the war
His glose'd like priz'd Mars, now bend, now turn.

Their office upon a twain front.

Shakespeare.

818
GLO

The pale complexion of true love,
And the red glow of scarlet and proud disdain.

Shakespeare

A waving glow his bloomy beds display,
Blushing from delight diversifieds of day.

Pope

Such as suppose that the great stile might happily be blended with the ornamental, that the simple, gross, and the dignity of Raffaelle could unite with the glow and lustre of a Polid, or Tintoret, totally mistaken.

Reynolds

GLOW'WORM. n. s. [glow and worm.]
A small creeping grub with a luminous tail.
The honey bees steal from the humble bees,
And for night-tapers crop their waxes thirn.

Shakespeare

The glow worm shows the matin to be near,
And gives to pale his intellectual fire.

Shakespeare

A great light drolleneth a smaller that it cannot be seen; as the sun that of a glow worm.

Benjamin

The man, who first upon the ground
A glow worm spy'd, supposed he had found
A moving diamond, a breathing stone;
For life it had, and like those jewels shone:
He held it dear, till by the springing day
Inform'd, he threw the worthless worm away.

Waller

To GLOZE. v. n. [gleran, Sax.]
1. To flatter; to wheedle; to insinuate; to fawn.

Dryden

There never was a heart so tender
As joined the glow of his gles in love.

Dryden

2. To comment. This should be gloss.

Shakespeare

Such subtle weard he found the French unjustly glue.

Shakespeare

To be the realm of France.

GLOSE. n. s. [from the verb.]
1. Flattery; insinuation.

Now to plain dealing; lay these glasses by.

Shakespeare

2. Specious gloss: gloss not used.

Precious conches full oft are shaked with a fever;
If then a body evil in a bodily glass be not hidden,
Small shal they quark jews be an ease to the heart
An lover's fire.

Sidney

GLOZEN. n. s. [from gloss.]
A flatterer.

GLUE. n. s. [glu, Fr. gliten, Lat. glud Welsh.]
A viscous body commonly made by boiling the skins of animals to a jelly;
yet any viscous or tenacious matter by which bodies are held one to another; a cement.

Queen

Water, and all liquors, do hastily receive dry and more terrestial bodies proportionable; and dry bodies, on the other side, drink to waters and liquors: so that, as it was well said by one of the ancestors of earthy and watry substances, one is able to another.

Baron's Nat. Hist.

The driest and most transparent glue is the best,

Nolm.

To build the earth did chance materials close,
And through the parts cementing glue diffuse.

Blackmore

The flowers of grains, mixed with water, will make a sort of glu.

Arbuthnot

To GLUE. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To join with a viscous cement.

I fear thy overthrow
More than my body's parting with my soul.

Shakespeare

My love and fear glu'd many friends to thee.

Eccles. xxii. 7.

The custom of crowning the Holy Virgin is so much in vogue among the Italians, that one often

Glues in their churches a little tinsel crown, or a circle of stars, glued to the canvas over the head of the figure.

Addison on Ital.

But crowds, if kept clean, and from the air,
the flesh will glue together with its own natural bals.

Derham

2. To hold together.

The parts of all homogenel hard bodies, which fully touch one another, stick together very strongly; and for explaining how this may be, some have invented hooked atoms, which is begging the question; and others tell us their bodies are glued to-together by rest, that is, by an occult quality, or rather by nothing.

Newton's Opticks

3. To join; to unite; to invigorate.

These words in a honey pot are sensual men plunged in their lusts and pleasures; and when they are once glued to them, 'tis a very hard matter to work themselves out of.

Talilston

Shake

Her lips, and, raising it, her speech return'd Dryd.

I hear thee, view thee, gaze o'er all thy charms,
And round thy phantom glue my clasping palm.

Pope

GLUE'BOILER. n. s. [glue and boil.]
One whose trade is to make glue.

GLUE'R. n. s. [from glue.]
One who cements with glue.

GLUM. adj. [A low cant word formed by constricting gloom.]
Sullen; stubbornly grave.

Some, when they hear a story, look gloom, and shrink from the tale.

Guardian

To GLUT. v. a. [englutin, Fr. glutton.
Lat. to swallow; glos Carey.

1. To swallow; to devour.

'Till cram'd and gorge'd, nigh burst
With such and glue'd oil.

Milton

2. To cloy: to fill beyond sufficiency; to sate; to disgust.

The ambassador, making his oration, did so magify the king and queen, as was enough to glut the hearers.

Bacon

Love breaks friendship, whose delights
Feed, but not glut our appetites.

Descham

What way remove
His settled hate, and reconcile his love,
That he may look partizans on our tutors,
And hungry graves no more be glutted with our spoil?

Dryden

No more, my friend!
Here let our glutted execution of.
Dryden's En.
I found
The fickle car soon glutted with the sound,
Condemn'd eternal changes to pursue,
Till'd with the last, and eager of the new.

Prieur

3. To feast or delight even to satiety.

With deaths corrosive glut the grave.

Milton

His faithful heart, a bloody sacrifice,
Torn from his breast, to glut the tyrant's eye.

Dryden

A sylvan scene, which, rising by degrees,
Leads up the eye below, nor gluts the sight
With one full prospect: but invites by many,
To view at first the air.

Dryden

4. To overfill; to load.

He attributes the ill success of either party to their glutting the market, and retailing too much of a bad commodity at once.

Arbuthnot

5. To satiate.

The menstrum, being already glutted, could not act powerfully enough to dissolve it.

Boile

GLUT. n. s. [from the verb.]
1. That which is gorged or swallowed.

Disgorged food

Their devils play, chais'd thunderbolts and hail
Of iron globes.

Milton's Par. Lost.

819
2. Plenty even to loathing and satiety.
   So death
   Shall he deceived his glut; and with us two
   But glut and set this ravious maw. Milton.
   Let him but see the one in balance against the other, and he shall find himself miserable, even in the very glut of his delights.
   L'Estrange.
   It was a state of retirement in the last act of my life, cast me into this; and this will throw me again into study and retirement. Pope to Swift.

3. More than enough; overmuch.
   If you pour a glut of water upon a bottle, it receives little of it. Ben Jonson's Discoveries.

4. Any thing that fills up a passage.
   The water some suppose to pass from the bottom of the purest fresh springs, through subterranean conduits or channels, until they are,
   by some glut, stopped, or, by other means, arrested in their passage. Woodward.

GLUTTONOUS. adj. [gluttonen, Fr. from glutten, Lat.] Gluy; viscous; tenacious.
   The cause of all vivification is a gentle and proportionable heat, working upon a glutinous and glutinizing substance for the heat does bring forth spirit in that substance, and the substance being glutinous, produces two effects; the one, that the spirit is detained, and cannot break forth; the other that the matter, being gentle and yielding, is driven forwards by the motion of the spirit, after some swelling, into shape and members. Bacon.

   Smeared with gums of glutinous heat. Milton.
   Nourishment too viscous and glutinous to be subdued for food, by Arbutus on Aliments.

GLUTTONOUSNESS. n. s. [from gluttenous].
   Viscosity; tenacity.
   There is a resistance in fluids, which may arise from their elasticity, glutinousness, and the friction of their parts. Cheever.

GLUTTON. n. s. [glutton, Fr. from glutten,
   Lat. to swallow.]
   1. One who indulges himself too much in eating.

   The Chinese eat horse-hflesh at this day, and some glutten have used to have catsflesh baked. Bacon.
   Through Micer's gallop she runs down,
   Whilst the vile glutten dines alone.
   And, void of modesty and thought,
   She follows Bibbe's endless draught. Prior.
   It's glutten was to play, in excuse of his glutten, that he only eats such things as it is lawful to eat, he would make as good an excuse for himself as the,
   glutinous and glutinous tradesman, that should say,
   he only deals in lawful business. Law.

2. One eager of any thing to excess.
   The rest bring home in state the happy pair
   To drink, and leave them there; All those free joys instantly to prove.
   With which rich beauty feast the glutten love.
   Cowley.
   Gluttons in murder, wanton to destroy.
   Their fatal hearts so impudently employ. Grawisall.

To GLUTTONISE. v. n. [from glutten.]
   To play the glutten; to be luxurious.

GLUTTONOUS. adj. [from glutten.]
   Given to excessive feeding; delighted overmuch with food.

   When they would smile and fawn upon his debts,
   And take down th' interest in their glutinous maws. Shakespear.
   The exceeding luxurious of this glutinous age, wherein we press nature with overweighing burdens, and finding her strength defective, we take the work out of her hands, and commit it to the artificial help of strong waters. Raleigh.
   Well observe.

   Due nourishment, no glutinous delight. Milton.

GLUTTONOUSLY. a. de. [from gluttenous.]
   With the voracity of a glutten.

GLUTTONY. n. s. [gluttonie, Fr. from glutten.]
   Excess of eating; luxury of the table.

   Gluttony, a vice in a great fortune, a curse in a small. English, glutteny and gorgeous feast.
   On citron tables or Atlantick stone. Milton.
   Well may they fear some miserable end.
   With glut, and want forsworn, Richard, Dryden.
   The inhabitants of cold moist countries are generally more fat than those of warm and dry; but the most common cause is too great a quantity of food, and too small a quantity of motion; in plain English, glutteny and laziness. Arbuthnot.

GLY. n. s. [from glue.]
   Viscous; tenacious; glutinous.

   It is called balmsick mixture, because it is a glut scumuous. Hume on Cona.
   With gley wax some new foundations lay
   Of virgins combs. Dryden's Bran. Minor.
   Whatever is the composition of the vapour, it has but one quality of being very gley or viscous, and it will mechanically solve all the pheno-menons of the grotto. Addition.

GLYN. n. s. [Irish; gleann, glyn, plur.
   Erse; glenn, Scott.]
   A hollow between two mountains.

   Though he could not beat out the Irish, yet he did shut them up within those narrow corners and gley under the mountain's feet. Spenser.
   To GNAR. v. n. [gnyan, Sax. knoar.
   To GNARL. v. n. [gnyan, Sax. knoar.
   To GNARL. v. n. [gnyan, Sax. knoar.
   To GNARL. v. n. [gnyan, Sax. knoar.

   Gnarled. adj. [guar, nar, or n ung in Staffordshire a hard knot of wood which boys drive with sticks.] Knotty.
   Merciful heaven!
   Thou rather with thy sharp and sulphur bound
   Splitst the unweeded and gnarled oak,
   Then the soft myrtle, Shakespear. Mos. for. Meas.

To GNARSH. v. a. [knaachen, Dut.]
   To strike together; to clash.
   The seas, who could not yet this wrath assuage,
   Rowl'd his green eyes, that spark'd with his rages, and gnash'd his teeth, Dryden's Verg.

To GNASH. v. n.
   1. To gnrd or collide the teeth.
   He shall gnash with his teeth, and melt away.
   Ps. xxx. 10.
   There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.
   Matt. viii.
   2. To rage even to collision of the teeth;
   to fume; to growl.
   His great iron teeth he still did grind,
   And grantly gnash, threatening revenge in vain,
   Spencer.
   They gnash'd upon me with their teeth.
   Ps. xxxv. 16.
   They him laid
   Gnashing for anguish, and despite and shame,
   To find it is not matchless. Milton.
   With boiling rage Atrides burn'd,
   And foam betwixt his gnashing grinders churn'd,
   Dryden.

GNAT. n. s. [gnat, Sax.]
   1. A small winged stinging insect.
   A whip of cricket's bone, the lash of film.
   Her waggoner, a small grey-coated gnat. Shakespear.

   2. Any thing proverbially small.
   Ye blind guides, which strain at a gnat and swallow a camel. Mat. xxi. 24.

GNAFLOWER. n. s. [gnat and flower.]

A flower, otherwise called the bee-flower.

GNA 'SNAPER. n. s. [gnat and snap.]
   A bird so called, because he lives by catching gnats.
   They deny that any bird is to be eaten whole,
   but only the gna 'snaper. Hakewill on Providence.

To GNAW. v. a. [gynan, Sax. knauch, Dut.
   To gnaw by degrees; to devour by slow corrosion.
   A knowing fellow, that would gnaw a man with to a vertre, with his hellish urine, and many an honest soul, even quick had slain.
   Chapman.

   To you such scab'd harvest fruit is gyn, as raw
   Young soldiers at their exercising gna sh. Dryg. Juv.
   To bite in agony or rage.

   Ah, why gnaw you so your nether lip?
   Some bloody passion shakes your very frame.
   Dryg. Abel. Their gnaw'd their tongues for pain, L. xvi. 10.
   He comely fell, and dying gna sh'd the ground.
   Dryg.

3. To wear away by biting.
   Gna whir with my teeth my bonds nander,
   I gain'd my freedom. Shakes. Comedy of Errors.
   Like rotten fruit I fall, worn like a cloth.
   Gna sh'd against me by the devouring moth. Son. 6.
   A lion, hampersoned in a net, called to a mouse to help him out of the snare: the mouse gna sh'd the threads to pieces, and set the lion at liberty.
   L'Estrange.

4. To fret; to waste; to corrode.

5. To pick with the teeth.
   His bones clean pick'd; his very bones they gna sh'd.

To GNAW. v. n. To exercise the teeth.
   It is now used actively.

   I might well, like the spaniel, gnaw upon the chain that ties me; but I should sooner mar my teeth than procure liberty.
   See the hell of having a false woman: my bed shall be abused, my coffer ransacked, my reputation gna sh'd. Shakespear.
   I thought I saw a thousand fearful wrecks,
   A thousand men that gna sh'd upon.
   Shakespear. R. Ill.

GNAWER. n. s. [from gnaw.]
   One that gna sh'd.

GNOMON. n. s. [gno'mon.] The hand or Bin of a dial.

   The gnomon of every dial is supposed to represent the axis of the world, and therefore the two ends or extremities thereof must directly answer to the North and South pole.
   There were from great antiquity sun-dials, by the shadow of a style or gnomon, denoting the hour.

GNO'MONICKS. n. s. [gno'moniks.] A science which makes part of the mathematicks:
   it teaches to find a just proportion of shadows for the construction of all kinds of sun and moon dials, and for knowing what o'clock it is by means thereof;
   as also of a gnomon or stile, that throws off the shadow for this purpose. Trevoux.

To Go. v. n. pref. I went; I have gone.
   [gyn, Sax. This was probably changed to gone, or gang, then contracted to go.
   Went is the preritine of the old word went.]
2. To move; not stand still. Rise, let us be going. Matt. xxvi. 46.

3. To walk solemnly; not run. If there be cause for the church to go forth in solemn procession, his whole family have such business come upon them that no one can be spared. Hooker.

4. To walk leisurely; not run. And must I go to him? — Thou must run to him; for thou last staid so long, that going will scarce serve the turn. Shak.

5. To march or walk a-foot. I will only go through on my feet. Num. xx. 19.

6. To travel; to journey. From them I go, This unceasing errand sole. Milton.

7. To proceed; to make a progress. Thus other we with damnation wound, While they steal us; and so the jest goes round. Dryden.

8. To remove from place to place. I am in blood Stept in so far, that, should I wade no more, Returning were as tedious as go on. Shak.

9. To depart from a place; to remove from a place; the opposite of to come. I hope then to be able to tell my lord That I kiss aught but him. Shak. At once, good-night: Stand not upon the order of your going, But go at once. Shak., Macbeth. And when she had so said she went her way. John, iii. 28.

10. To move or pass in any manner, or to any end. Though the vicar be bad, or the parson be evil, Go not for thy thyself to the devil. Tennyson. She may go to bed when she list; all as she will. Shak.

12. To proceed in any course of life good or bad. And the Levites that are gone away from me, when Israel sent away, which sent away from me after their idols, they shall even bear their iniquity. Ezek. xlv. 10.

13. To proceed in mental operations. If I had formerly too far engaged myself for the present publishing it, truly I should have kept it by me till I had once again gone over it. Digby on the Soul, Dedication.

14. To take any road. I will go along by the highway: I will neither turn to the right hand, nor to the left. Deut. ii. 27. Who shall bemoan thee? Or who shall go aside to ask how thou dost? Jer. xv. 5.

15. To march in a hostile or warlike manner. You were advis'd his flesh was capable Of wounds and scars, and that his forward spirit Would lift where most trade of danger rul'd; Yet did you say go forth. Shak., Hen. IV.

16. To march to the seas. We can proceed against the pirates, those are stronger than we. Num. xiii. 31. Let us go down after the Philistines by night, and spoil them until the morning light. 1 Sa. xiv. 30. Thou art not able to go against this Philistine to fight with. 1 Sa. xvii. 53.

17. To pass; to be received. Because a fellow of my acquaintance set forth, her praises in verse, I will only repeat them, and spare my own tongue, since she goes for a woman. Sidnay.

18. To pass; to be received. And the man went among men for an old man in the days of Saul. 1 Sa. xii. 22. At a kind imagination makes a bold man have vigour and enterprise in his air and motion; it stamps value upon his face, and tells the people he is up to so much. Fuller.

19. To be in motion from whatever cause. The wayward sisters, hand in hand, Posters of the sea, and land, To do what about, about. Shak., Macbeth.

20. To go; to proceed. Clip and washed money goes about, when the entire and weighty lies boarded up. Fuller.

21. To flow; to pass; to have a course.
45. To have influence; to be of weight; to be of value.
I had another reason to decline it, that ever uses to go far with me upon all new inventions or experiments, and to the best trial of them by time, and observing whether they live or no.

46. To be rated one with another; to be considered with regard to greater or less worth.
I think, as the world goes, he was a good sort of man enough.

47. To contribute; to conduce; to concour; to be an ingredient.
The medicines which go to the ointments are so strong, that, if they were used inwardly, they would prove nothing.

48. To fall out, or terminate; to succeed.
Your strong possession much more than your right, or else it must go wrong with you and me. Shak.

49. To be in any state. This sense is impersonal.
It shall go ill with him that is left in his tabernacle.

50. To proceed in train or consequence.
How goes the night, boy?

4. To have any tendency. Atheists, know Against right reason all your counsels go, Tho' now they profit not, that Nor other question proper for debate, Dryden.

33. To be in a state of compact or partnership.
As a lion was beseaching an ox that he had newly plucked down, a robber passing by cried out to him, half shares; you should go your snip, says the lion, if you were not so forward to be your own executioner.

34. To be regulated by any method; to proceed upon principles.
Where the multitude headed way, laws that shall tend to the preservation of that state must make common smaller offices to go by lot, for fear of strife and division. Hookes.

35. To be pregnant. Great beldamed women, That look not half a week to go.
Shakep. Hen. VIII.

36. To pass; not to remain.
She began to affect him, and his strength went from her.

38. To be expeditious. Scholars are close and frugal of their words, and not willing to let any go for ornament, if they will not serve for use.

40. To reach or he extended to any degree.
Can another man perceive that I am conscious of any thing, when I perceive it not myself? No man's knowledge here can go beyond his experience.

43. To extend to consequences. It is not one master that either directs or takes notice of these: it goes a great way barely to pervert them.

42. To reach by effects. Considering the cheapness, so much money might go farther than a sum ten times greater could do now.

44. To spread; to be dispersed; to reach. Whose flesh, torn off by limbs, the ravens for.

45. To have influence; to be of weight; to be of value.
I had another reason to decline it, that ever uses to go far with me upon all new inventions or experiments, and to the best trial of them by time, and observing whether they live or no.

Tis a rule that goes a great way in the govern- ment of a sober man's life, not to put any thing to hazard that may be secur'd by industry, consideration, or circuit of action.

Whatever appears against their prevailing vice goes for nothing, being either not applied, or pass- ing for libel and slander.

46. To be rated one with another; to be considered with regard to greater or less worth.
I think, as the world goes, he was a good sort of man enough.

47. To contribute; to conduce; to concour; to be an ingredient.
The medicines which go to the ointments are so strong, that, if they were used inwardly, they would prove nothing.

48. To fall out, or terminate; to succeed.
Your strong possession much more than your right, or else it must go wrong with you and me. Shak.

49. To be in any state. This sense is impersonal.
It shall go ill with him that is left in his tabernacle.

50. To proceed in train or consequence.
How goes the night, boy?

51. To go about. To attempt; to endavour; to set one's self to any business.
O dear father, It is thy business that I go about. Shak.

52. To go aside. To err; to deviate from the right.
If any man's wife go aside, and commit a trespass against him. Numb. v. 12.

53. To go between. To interpose; to mod- erate between two.
I did go between them, as I said; but more than that, he loved her; for, indeed, he was used for her.

54. To go by. To pass away unnoticed.
Do not you come to my tardiness to chide, That laps'd in time and passion, lets go by Th'important acting of your deed command? Shak. Hamlet.

55. To go by. To find or get in the conclusion.
In argument with men a woman ever Groves by the worse, whatever is her cause, Milton.
He's sure to go by the worst that contends with an adversary that's too mighty for him. L'Estrange.

56. To go by. To observe as a rule.
It is not to be supposed, that by searching one can positively judge of the size and form of a stone; and indeed the frequency of the fits, and violence of the symptoms, are a better rule to go by.

57. To go down. To be swallowed; to be received; not rejected.
Nothing so ridiculous, nothing so impossible, but it goes down whole with him for truth and earnest.
Folly will not easily go down in its own natural form with discerning judges. Dryden.

58. To go in and out. To do the business of life.
The Lord shall preserve thy going out and thy coming in.

59. To go in and out. To be at liberty.
He shall go in and out, and find pasture. John.

60. To go off. To die; to go out of life; to decease.
I would the friends we were safe arrived! Some must go off, and yet, by these I see Secret a day as this is aptly bought. Shak.

61. To go off. To depart from a post.
The leaders having charge from you to stand, Will not go off until they hear you speak.

62. To go on. To make attack.
Bold Cathegus, Whose valor I have turn'd into his poison, And prais'd so to daring, as he would Go upon the Go. Ben Jonson.

63. To go on. To proceed.
He found it a great war to keep that peace, but was fain to go on in his story.

822
50. The senses of this word are very indistinct: its general notion is motion or progression. It commonly expresses passage from a place, in opposition to come.
This is often observable even in figurative expressions. We say, the words that go before and that come after: to day goes away and to-morrow comes.

51. To inter, to come, come, take the right course. A scornful exhortation.
Go to then, O thou far renowned son
Of great Apollo; shew thy famous might in medicine.
Spenser.

Go to, go to, thou art a foolish fello;
Let me be clear of thee. Shakesp. Twelfth Night.
My favour is not bought with words like these
Go to; you'll teach your another tongue talk. Howre.

Go-by, n.s. Delusion; artifice; circum-vention; over-reach.

Except an apprentice is instructed how to adult and vanish, and give you the go by upon occasion, his master may be charged with neglect.
Collier on Pride.

Go-cart. n.s. [go and cart.] A machine in which children are inclosed to teach them to walk, and which they push forward without danger of falling.

Go-corn, to keep their steps from sliding,
When members knit, and legs grow stronger.
Make use of such machines no longer.
Prior.

Gold. n.s. [gab, Sax.] A pointed instrument with which oxen are driven forward.

Oft in his harder hand a goad he bears, Pope.

To Goad. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To prick or drive with the Goad.
2. To incite; to stimulate; to instigate; to drive forward.

Most dangerous is that temptation, that doth good us on.
Goaded with most sharp occasions,
Which lay nice manners by, you put to you the use of your own virtues. Shakesp.

Of all that breeces the various progeny,
Stung with delight, is goaded on by thee. Dryden.

Goal. n.s. [goul, Fr. a long pole, set up to mark the bounds of the race.]

1. The land mark set up to bound a race; the point marked out to which racers run.
As at the Olympic games, or Pythian fields,
Part curb their fiery steeds, or shoo the goal
With rapid wheels.
Milton's Par. Lost.

And the slope sun his upward beam
Shoots against the dusky pole,
Facing toward the other goal.

2. The starting point.
Hast thou beheld, when from the goad they start,
The youthful charioteers with heaving heart
Rush to the race?
Dryden's Virgil.

3. The final purpose; the end to which a design tends.
Our poet has always the goad in his eye, which directs him in his race: some beautiful design, which he first establishes, and then contrives the means,
which will naturally conduct him to his end.
Dryden.

Each individual seeks a several goal;
But heau'm's great view is one, and that the whole.
Pope.

So man, who here seems principal alone,
Perhaps acts second to some sphere unknown.
Together, so fair agent, so good,
Tis but a part we see, and not a whole.
Pope.

4. It is sometimes improperly written for goa, or jail.

Addison.
To GOBET. v. a. [from noun.] To swallow at a mouthful. A low word. Down comes a kite powdering upon them, and goes to the mouth; with their teeth. Du. Extrange.

To GOBBLE. v. a. [gobber to swallow, old Fr.] To swallow hastily with tumult and noise. The sheep were so keen upon the acorns, that they gobbled up now and then a piece of the coat along with the acorns. Du. Last year's corn in barn great store; Fat turkeys gobbling at the door. Prior.

God between. u. s. [go and between.] One that transacts business by running between two parties. Commonly in an ill sense. Even as you came in to me, her assistant, or go-between, parted from me: I say I shall be with her between ten and eleven. Shaksp.

Gobelin. n. s. [Fr. gobeline, which Spenser has once retained; written in three syllables. This word some derive from the Gibilities, a faction in Italy; so that else and gobelin is Guelph and Ghibelline, because the children of either party were carried by their nurses with the name of the other; but it appears that else is Welsh, and much older than those faction.] Eliiff. Ushen are phantoms of the night, and the Germans likewise have long had spirits among them named Gobolds, from which gobeline might be derived.

1. An evil spirit; a walking spirit; a frightful phantom. Angels and ministers of grace defend us! Be thou a spirit of health, or gobelin damn'd. Bring forth those lies from heart's, or blast from hell. Shakep.

2. A fairy; an elf. His son was Effield, who overcame The wicked gobelines in bloody field; But quest renowned Effield, Who of all crystal did ANTINAE build. Spencer.

3. A god; a godless. Go, charge my goblets that they grind their joints With dry convulsions; shorten up their bowl, With ever c rampan. Shakep. Temple.

4. Mean time the village rooses up the fire, While well attested, and as well believed, Heaven them goes the gobelin story round. Thomson.

GOD. n. s. [god, Sax. which likewise signifies good.] The same word passes in both senses with only accidental variations through all the Teutonic dialects.

GODLY. adj. [from god.] Without sense of duty to God; atheistical; wicked; irrereligious; impious.

Of these two sorts of men, both godless, the one be utterly without all knowledge of God, and the other studies how to persuade themselves that there is no such thing to be known. Hooker.

GODLESS. adj. [from god.] Rebellious. For faults not his, for guilt and crimes.

Of godless men, and of rebellious times, hand his unregard, and his studies. Their best Camillus, into banishment. Dryden.

GODLIKE. adj. [god and like.] Divine; resembling a divinity; supremely excellent.

Adam his illustrious guest besought, And thus the godlike angel answer'd mild. Milton.

Musing and much revolving in his breast, How best the mighty work he might begin. O Savioor! to mankind, and which way Publish his godlike office now mature. Milton.

That prince shall be wise and godlike, as, by established laws of liberty, to secure protection and encouragement to the honest industry of mankind. Locke.

GOLDING. n. s. [from godly.] A little divinity; a diminutive god.

They puny godheads, who in robe and race, Whose humble statues are content with brass. Dryden.

GOLDINESS. n. s. [from godly.] 1. Piety to God.

2. General observation of all the duties prescribed by religion.

GODLIKE. adj. [from god.] Fiosus towards God.

Grant that we may hereafter live a godly, righteous, and sober life. Common Prayer.

2. Good; righteous; religious. Help, Lord, for the godly man ceaseth, for the faithful fail among the children of men. Ps. xii. 1. The same church is really holy in this world, in relation to all particular duties contained in it, by a real infused sanctity. Pearson.

GOODLY. adj. Fiously; righteously. By analogy it should be godfully, but the repetition of the syllable is too harsh.

The apostle St. Paul teacheth, that every one that will live godly in Christ Jesus must suffer persecution. Hooker.

GOODHEAD. n. s. [from godly.] Goodness; righteousness. An old word. For this, and many more such outrage, I crave your godhead to assuage.

The rancorous vigour of his might. Spencer.

GOODMOTHER. n. s. [god and mother.] A woman who has undertaken sponsorship in baptism. A term of spiritual relation.

GOODSHIP. n. s. [from god.] The rank or character of a god; deity; divinity.

Discussing largely on this theme, of their hills and dales their godships came. Prior.

GOODSON. n. s. [god and son.] One for whom one has been sponsor at the font. What, did my father's godsem seek your life? He whom my father named? your Edgar? shall.
most fixed of all bodies, not to be injured either by air or fire, and seeming incorruptible. It is soluable by means of sea-salt; but is injured by no other salt. Gold is frequently found native, and very rarely in a state of ore. Pure gold is so fixed, that Boerhaave informs us of an ounce of it set in the eye of a glass furnace for two months, without losing a single grain. Hill on Fossils. Gold hath these natures: greatness of weight, closeness of parts, fixation, lustre or softness; softness of it, its immunity from rust, and the colour or tincture of yellow. Bacon on Nat. Hist. Gold is drawn by electricity, like the touch. To try if thou be current gold indeed. Shakspe. We readily say this is gold, and that a silver goblet, only by the different figures and colours represented to the eye by the peacock. Locke. The gold-fraught vessel which had tempests beat, he sees now vainly make to his retreat. Dryden.

2. Money. For, for the gold of France did not seduce, although I did admit as a motive The sooner to effect what I intended. Shakspe. Then thou hast resented me. Give me thy gold, if thou hast any gold; For I have bought it with an hundred blows. Shak.

3. It is used for any thing pleasing or valuable. So among the ancients χρυσός; and among the modern more nuce quos cursum in asta. Horace. The king's a bawcock, and the heart of gold. A lad of life, an imp of fame. Shakspe. Hen. V.

Gold of Pleasure. n.s. [myagarum.] A plant.

Goldbeater. n.s. [gold and beat.] One whose occupation is to beat or foliate gold to gold other matter. Our goldbeaters, though, for their own profit sake, they are wont to use the finest gold they can get, yet they scrape not to employ coined gold; and that the mint-masters are wont to alloy with copper or silver, to make the coin more still, and less subject to be wasted by attrition. Boyle.

Goldbeater's Skin. n.s. The intestinum rectum of an ox, which goldbeaters lay between the leaves of their metal while they beat it, whereby the membrane is reduced thin, and made fit to apply to cuts or small fresh wounds, as is now the common practice. Quincy. When your gold or flowers blow, if they break the pod, open it with a penknife at each division, as low as the flower has burst it, and hide it about with a narrow slip of goldbeater's skin, which moisten with your tongue, and it will stick together. Mortimer.

Goldbound. adj. [gold and bound.] Encompassed with gold. Thy skin, Thou other goldbound is like the first. Shak.

Golden. adj. [from gold.] 1. Made of gold; consisting of gold. O would to God that the inclusive verge Of golden metal, that must round my brow, Were red hot steel, that I might pass through it, and of any other Dutch word, which is goldea, and signifies in Latin valere, in English to be of price or value; hence cometh their ordinary word gelt, for money. Peacham on Drawing.

1. Gold is the heaviest, the most dense, the most simple, the most ductile, and VOL. I.
and not Frov.
Mr.
Pri.

18. Honourable. They cast to get themselves a name, Regardless whether good or evil fame. Milton. Silence, the knave's erute, the whore's good name, The only honour of the wishing dame. Pope.

19. Cheerful; gay. Joined with any words expressing temper of mind. They may be of good comfort, and ever go cheerfully about their own affairs. 2 Macc. xi. 55. Quietness improves into cheerfulness, enough to make us just so good humoured as to wish that world well. Pope.

20. Considerable; not small though not very great. A good while ago God made choice that the Gentiles by my mouth should bear the word. Acts xv. 7.

The plant having a great stalk and top, doth present the most lovely way about, by drawing the juice of the earth from it. Bacon. Myrtle and pomegranate, if they be planted though a good space one from the other, will meet.

The king had provided a good fleet, and a body of three thousand foot to be embarked. Clarendon. Proc. xxiv. 15. He may suppose a great many degrees of littleness and lightness in these earthly particles, so as many of them might float in the air a good while, like exhibitions, before they fell down. Burnet.

They held a good share of civil and military employments during the whole time of the usurpation.

21. Elegant; decent; delicate; with breeding. If the critic has published nothing but rules and observations in criticism, I then consider whether there be a propriety and elegance in his thoughts and words, and the candour and simplicity in his remarks, wit and good-breeding in his railing.

Addison. Good-breeding. Mankind have been forced to invent a kind of artificial humanity, which is what we express by the word good-breeding. Addison.等到

22. Real; serious; not feigned. Love not in good earnest, nor any farther in spirit neither, than with safety of a pure blush thou mayst in honour come off again. Shakespere.

23. Rich; of credit; able to fulfill engagements. Antonius is a good man: my meaning, in saying that he is a good man, is to have you understand me that he is sufficient. Shakespere. What reward Awaits the good, the rest what punishment. Milton.

G O O

As for all other good women that love to do but little work, how happens it that they lose themselves in the sunshine, that they have been but a while in Ireland can well witness.

G O O

Works may have more wit than does them good,
As bodies perish through excess of blood.

G O O

But if he employ'd
Those excellent gifts of fortune and of nature
To the good, not ruin to the state. Ben Jonson.

2. Prosperity; advancement.

3. Earnest; not jest.

The good woman never died after this. 'till she came to die for good and all.

4. Moral qualities, such as are desirable,
Wisdom, truth, piety; the contrary to wickedness.

5. Good placed after had, with, seems a substantive; but the expression is, I think, vicious; and good is rather an adjective elliptically used, or it may be considered adverbial. See Good, adv.

The pilot must intend some part before he steer his course, or he had as good leave his vessel to the direction of the winds, and the government of the waves.

Good, adv.

1. Well; not ill; not amiss.

2. As good. No worse.

Was I to have never parted from thy side,
As good have grown there still a lifeless th, Ailt.

Says the cackow to the hawk. Had you not as good have been eating worms now as pizcios?

Good, now, interjection. Well! right! It is sometimes used ironically.

Good-conditioned, adj. Without ill qualities or symptoms. Used both of things and persons, but not elegantly.

Good surgeon dilates an abscess of any kind by injections, when the pus is good-conditioned. Sharp.

Good-now, interjection.

1. In good time; a la bonne heure. A gentle exclamation of intreaty. It is now a low word.

2. A soft exclamation of wonder.

Goodness, how your devotions jump with mine!

Goodness. n. s. [from goodly] Beauty; grace; elegance.

She sung this song with a voice no less beautiful than her goodliness was full of harmony to his eyes.

Sidney.

The stateless houses, the goodness of trees, which beheld them, delighted the eye. Harker.

Goodly, adj. [from good].

1. Beautiful; graceful; fine; splendid.

Now little in use.
A prince of a goodly aspect, and the more goodly by a grave majesty, wherefore his mind did deck his outward graces. Sidney.

A goodly city is this Autumn. Shakesp. Coriol. i. 2.

Which should express her goodliest; you have seen Sunshine and rain at once. Her smiles and tears. Spenser. P. P. 5. 88.

Here from gracious England have I offer Of goodly thousands, Shakesp. Macbeth.

There was not among the children of Israel a goodly person then. 1 Sam. ix. 2.

Begetter of the things they were; of stature more: And all their forsa, much goodlier then before. Chapman.

He had not made them any recompense for their goodly houses and olive gardens, destroyed in the former wars. Knolles.

The goodliest man of men since horn His sons, the fairest of her daughters Eue. Milton.

Of the fourth Edward was his noble song; Fierce, goodly, valiant, beautiful, and young. Waller.

Not long since walking in the field, My nurse and I, we there beheld A goodly fruit, which, tempting me, I would have pluck'd. Waller.

How full of ornament is all I view In all its parts! and seems as beautiful as new: Of which the want of some goodly stock O power divine! Of thee I am, and what I am is thine! Dryden.

His eldest born, a goodly youth to view, Encompassed with a circle of twelve and outward there; Fair, tall, his limbs with due proportion join'd; But of a heavy, dull, degenerate mind. Dryden.

2. Bulky; swelling; affectely turrid, Round as a globe, and liquid'd every think. Goody and great he sails behind his link. Dryden.

3. Happy; desirable; gay. England was a peaceable kingdom, and but little subject to the mild and goodly government of the Confessor. Spencer.

We have many goodly days to see. Shakesp.

GOODLY. adv. Excellently. Obsolete. There Alma, like a virgin quire most bright, Doth flourish in all beauty excellent And to her guests doth bounteous banquet delight, Attended goodly well for health and for delight. Goodlyhood.

Grace; goodness. Obsolete. But more thy goodlyhood forgive it me, To meet which of the gods I shall them name. Goodman.

GOODMAN. n.s. [from good and man].

1. A slight appellation of civility; generally ironical.

GOODNESS. n.s. [from good]. Desirable qualities either moral or physical; kindness; favour. If for any thing he loved greatness it was beacause therein he might exercise his goodnesse. Shaks.

There is in all things an appetite or desire, wherefore, in the judgment of the world which they may be; all which perfectiones are contained under the general name of goodness. Hooker.

Is poison to thy stomach. —Yes, that goodness Of all the land's wealth into one, Into your own heart, cardinal, by extortion: The goodness of your intercepted packets You writ to the pope against the king; your goodnesse. Since you provoke me, shall be most notorious. Shakep.
G O R

1. To fill up to the throat; to glut; to satiate.

Being with his presence glutted, gorg'd, and full.

Shakep.

He then makes his generation moses,

To gorse his appetite. Shakep. King Lear.

Gorse with my blood thy barbarous appetite.

Addn.

I desire that they will not gorse the lion either with nonsense or obscenity.

Addn.

Nor would his slaughter'd army now have him

On Africk's sands, disput'd with their wounds, to gorse the wolves and vultures of Numidias. Addn.

The giants, Lay stretched at length, and snoring in his den. Addn.

2. To swallow: as, the fish has gorged the hook.

GORGED. adj. [from gorse.] Having a gorge or throat.

Look up a height, the shill gorg'd o'er so for Cane with a paley tumbling on his gorg.

Shakep.

Splendidly; magnificently; finely.

The duke, one solemn day, gorgeously clad in a suit all over spread with diamonds, lost one of them of good value. Wotton.

GORGEOUSNESS, n.s. [from gorse.]

Splendor; magnificence; show.

GORGED. n.s. [from gorse.]

The piece of armour that defends the throat.

He with a paley tumbling on his gorg.

Shakep.

See how his gorget peeps above his gown.

To tell the people in what danger he was. B. Jonn.

About his neck a threefold gorged,

As rough as trebled leather target. Hudibras.

GORGON, n.s. [γόργων.] A monster with snaky hairs, of which the sight turned the beholders to stone; any thing ugly or horrid.

Gorgon and hydras, and chymens dire. Milt.

Why didst thou not enquire man for man,

And try the virtue of that gorgon face

To start me and terrify. Dryden.

GORMAND. n.s. [gourmand, Fr.] A greedy eater; a ravenous luxurious feeder.

To GORMANDIZE. n.s. [from gourmand.]

To eat greedily; to feed ravenously.

GORMANDIZER. n.s. [from the verb.]

A voracious eater.

GOS. n.s. [gory, Sax.] Fuzz; a thick prickly shrub that bears yellow flowers in Winter.

GORY. adj. [from gory.]

1. Covered with congealed blood.

When two boars with rankling malice met,

Their gory sides the fresh wounds fiercely fret.

Shakep. Macbeth.

Why do'st thou shake thy gory locks at me?

Thou canst not say I did it. Shakep. Macbeth.

2. Bloody; murtherous; fatal. Not in use.

GOS.

The obligation of our blood forbids

A gory emulation 'twixt us twain; Shakep.

GOSHAWK. n.s. A gormous goose, and lapac a hawk.] A hawk of a large kind.

Such dread his awful visage on them cast;

So seem poor doves at goshaek s sight aghast. Fairf.

GOSLING. n.s. [from goose.]

1. A young goose; a goose not yet full grown.

Why do you go nodding and wagging so like a fool, as if you were hiploot? says the goose to her gosling. L' Estrange.

Nature with instructed even a brood of goslings to stick together, while the kite is hoovering over their heads.

Swift.

2. A kathin on nut-trees and pines.

GOSPEL. n.s. [gōpeel; or God's or good tidings; savior; seteth, steal, snatch, happy tidings, Erse.]

Thus may the gospel to the rising sun

Be spread, and flourish where it first began. W'sl.

All the decrees wherein Scripture treateth are coordinate to the gospel as the gospel offers him, as Lord and Saviour; the former, as well as the latter, being the condition of scripture-election, and the rejecting them thus, the condition of the scripture-reprobation. Humm.

How is a good Christian animated and cheered by a steadfast belief of the promises of the gospel? Beale.

2. Divinity; theology.

To GOSPEL. n.s. [from the noun.]

To fill with sentiments of religion.

This word in Shakspere, in whom alone I have found it, is used, though so venereal in itself, with some degree of irony; I suppose from the gospellers, who had long been held in contempt.

Are you so gospell'd

To pray for this good man, and for his issue.

Whose heavy haid hadn bow'd you to the grave? Shakep.

GOSPELLER. n.s. [from gospell.]

A name of the followers of Wickliffe, who first attempted a reformation from popery, given them by the Popists in reproach, from the pronouncing to follow and preach only the gospel.

These gospellers have had their golden days,

Have trodden down our holy Roman faith. Rowe.

GOSSAMER. n.s. [gossippum, low Lat.]

The down of plants; the long white cobwebs which fly in the air in calm sunny weather, especially about the time of Autumn.

A lover may besride the gossamer,

That idles in the wanton Summer air,

And yet not fall, so light is vanity. Shakep.

Four nimble knots the horses wore,

The filmy gossamer now fitts no more,

Nor baleys back on the short sunny shore. Dry.

GOSSIP. n.s. [from gob, and joy, relation, affinity, Sax.]

1. One who answers for the child in baptising.

Go to a gosip's feast and gaudle with me,

After so long grief such maturity. Shakep.

At the christening of George duke of Clarence, who was born the 16th of Decem. in Dublin, he made both the earl of Kiludder and the earl of Ormond his gosips. Davies on Ireland.

2. A tippings companion.

And sometimes Jork in a gospip's bowl,

In very likeness of a roasted turk,

And when she drinks against her lips I bob. Shaks.
GOVERNMENT. n. s. [government, Fr.]

1. Form of a community with respect to the disposition of the supreme authority. There seem to be but two general kinds of government in the world: the one exercised according to the arbitrary commands and will of some single person; and the other according to certain orders or laws introduced by agreement or custom, and not to be changed without the consent of many.

2. An established state of legal authority. They shall found their government and their great senate structure through the twelve tribes, to rule by laws ordained.

3. Pilot; regulator; manager. Behold all the ships, though they be so great, and are driven of fierce winds, yet they are turned about with a very small helm, while the governor steareth.

GOVERNOR. n. s. [gouverneur, Fr.]

1. One who has the supreme direction. It must be confessed, that of Christ, working as a creator and a governor over all things, are pariahs.

2. One who is invested with supreme authority in a state. For the kingdom is the Lord's, and he is the governor among the nations.

3. One who rules any place with delegated and temporary authority. To you, lord governor, remains the censure of this hellish villain.

4. A tutor; one who has care of a young man. To Eltan will I, where the young king is, being ordained his special governor; and for his safety there I'll best advise.

5. Pilot; regulator; manager. Behold all the ships, though they be so great, and are driven of fierce winds, yet they are turned about with a very small helm, while the governor steareth.
GRA

The stony from their hearts, and made new flesh
Regenerate grace grow
Milton

Within the church, in the publick profession and external communion thereof, are contained persons who have been saved, and together with them others void of all saving grace, and hereafter to be damned.
Pope

How Van wals grace who once wanted wit.
Pope

4. Pardon; mercy.
His hand a while, and to their choice gave space
Which they would prove, his valour or his grace.
Wallace

Bow and see for grace
Milton

With suppliant knee.

5. Favour conferred.
I should therefore esteem it great favour and grace.

Would you be so kind as to go in my place.
Prior

6. Privilege.
But to return and view the cheerful skies.
To few great Jupiter, apart this grace.
Dryden

7. A goddess, by the heathens supposed to bestow beauty.
This forefront, where your verse has said.
The loves delighted, and the grace play'd.
Prior

8. Behaviour, considered as decent or unbecoming.
The same words in Philothea's mouth, as from one woman to another, so as there were no other body by, might have had a better grace, and perhaps have found a gentler reception.
Swift

Have I reason or good grace in what I do? Temp. 3.

9. Adventitious or artificial beauty; pleasing appearance.
One like only, with a stonier grace.
Presume to claim the oak's and ceder's place.

And, looking round him with a monarch's care,
Spread his exalted thoughts in air.
Harte

Her purple habit is strong with such a grace.
On her smooth shoulders, and suits her face.
Dryden's En. 4.

To write and speak correctly gives a grace, and gains a favorable attention to what one has to say.
Locke

11. Embellishment; recommendation; beauty.
Where justice grows, there grows the greater grace.
The which doth quench the brand of hellish smart.
Spenser

Set all things in their own peculiar place,
And know that order is the greatest grace.
Dryden

The ladies for the sake of little space,
A short liv'd good, and an uncertain grace.
Dryden

I pass their form and every charming grace.
Dryden

13. Ornament; flower; highest perfection.
By their hands this grace of kings must die,
If hell and treason hold their promises.
Shakesp.

14. Single or particular virtue.
The kings-earning graces.
As justice, warfare, bravery, steadiness,
Devotion, patience, courage, fortitude,
We have no reliam of them.
Shakesp. Macbeth

The graces of his religion, prepare for the most useful discharge of every relation of life.
Rog.

15. Virtual physical.
O, mickle is the powerful grace that lies
In plants, herbs, stones, and their true qualities.
Shakesp.

16. The title of a duke or archbishop; formerly of the king, meaning the same as your goodness, or your clemency.
Here come I from our princely general
To know your griefs; to tell you from his grace.
That he will give you audience.
Shaks. Henry IV.

High mighty kind, you gentle reader, and those Vour nobles here present, may be pleased to know your lady.
Bacon's Henry VII.

Concerning the usual proceeding of your grace, and of the court, with divers things which are over, thrown in opposition, like as justice, and similar to what is said above.
Swift.

Then cheerful healths, your mistress shall have place;
And what's more rare, a poet shall say grace.

GRACE-CUP. n. s. [grace and cup.] The cup or health drank after grace.
The grace-cup serv'd, the cloth away,
Jesmob the tide to show his play.
Prior

To GRACE. v. a. [from the n.]

1. To adorn; to dignify; to embellish; to recommend; to decorate.
These they study, this they practise, this they grace with a wanton superiority of wit.
Hooker

I do not think a bravet gentleman,
More daring, or more bold is now alive,
To grace this latter age with noble deeds.
Shakesp.

Little of this great world can I speak,
And therefore little shall I grace my cause,
In speaking for myself.
Shakesp. Othello.

This is due from the judge to the advocate,
Some recommendation and grace, where causes are well handled.
Bacon.

Rich crowns are on their royal stately place;
With saphires, diamonds, and with rubies grace.
Dryden.

By both his parents of decent divinity,
Great Jove and Phoebus grace'd his nobler line:
Prior

Though triumphs were to generals only due,
Crowns were reserv'd to grace the soldiers too.
Prior

2. To dignify or raise by an act of favour.
He write;

How happily he lives, how well belov'd,
And daily grace by the emperor.
Shakesp.

He might at his pleasure grace or disgrace whom he would in court.
KnolUs.

All honours of the sword and glove,
Grace with an end, and ruin with a frown.
Dryden.

3. To fav'our.
When the guests withdrew,
Their courteous host saluting all the crew,
Regardless pass'd their o'er, not grace'd with kind ac'due.
Dryden.

GRACED. adj. [from grace.]

What saw this gentleman, one of the prosterest and best grace men that ever I saw, of being a middle age and a mean stature.
Swift.

2. Virtuous; regular; charitable. Not in use.

Epicures and lust
Make it more like a tavern or a brothel,
Than a grace'd palace.
Shakesp. King Lear.

GRACEFUL adj. [from grace.] Beautiful with dignity.

Admir'd this troop, and like the leading god,
Honour in the rest in arms the graceful Turms, Roder.

Masters his pen, victorious was his grace;
Bold in the lists, and graceful in the dance.
Swift.

Yet graceful ease, and sweetness void of pride,
Might hide her faults, if belles had faults to hide.
Prior.

831
GRACEFUL, adj. [from grace.] Elegantly; with pleasing dignity.

GRACIOUSLY, adv. [from gracious.]

GRACIOUSNESS. n.s. [from gracious.]

Elegance of manner; dignity with beauty.

GRACELESS. adj. [from grace.] Void of grace; wicked; hopelessly corrupted.

GRACIOUSLY, adv. [from gracious.]

GRACIOUSNESS. n.s. [from gracious.]

1. Kind; with kind condescension.

2. In a pleasing manner.

GRADATION. n.s. [gradation, Fr. gradus, Lat.]

1. Regular progress from one degree to another.

2. Regular advance step by step.

3. Order; sequence; series.

GRADUALLY. adv. [from gradual.]

1. By degrees; in regular progression.

2. Slowly.

3. Regular progression.

GRADUALITY. n.s. [from gradual.]

Regular progression; advancement by step; from one stage to another.

GRADUATION. n.s. [gradation, Fr. from gradus, Lat.]

1. Regular progression by succession of degrees.

2. Improvement; exaltation of qualities.

3. The act of conferring academical degrees.

GRAFF. n.s. [graffr, Fr.] A small branch inserted into the stock of another tree, and nourished by its sap, but bearing its own fruit; a young cyan.

GRAFT. n.s. [graft, Fr.] A small branch inserted into the stock of another tree, and nourished by its sap, but bearing its own fruit; a young cyan.
To GRAFF. | a. [graff', Fr.]
1. To insert a cyron or branch of one tree into the stock of another.
2. To propagate by insertion or inoculation.
3. To insert into a place or body to which it did not originally belong.
4. To impregnate with an adulterating brand.

We've some old crab-trees here at home, that will not be grafted to your relish. Shakesp. Coriolanus.

The more I see the proper property of plants. Shakesp. Post. Mercur. 1. 1.

To graff, r. n. To practise insinuation.

In March is good grafting the skillful do know,
So long as the wind in the East do not blow:
From moon being changed, 'till just be the prime
For grafting and cropping is very good time.
Tutur.
To have fruit in greater plenty the way is to graft,
Not only upon young stocks, but upon divers boughs of an old tree; for they will bear great numbers of fruit; whereas if you graft but upon one stock, the tree can bear but few. Bacon.

Graffer, n.s. [from graft or graff.] Who propagates fruit by grafting.

I am informed, by the trials of the most skilful grafters of these parts, that a man shall seldom fail of having cherries borne by his graft last year, which he saw on a branch of a wild cherry.

Graff, n.s. [from grèle, Fr.] Small particles of any kind.

Hereof this gentle knight unwitting was, And, lying down upon the sandy grall, Drank of a crystal glass. Spec.

GRAIN. n.s. [graine, Fr. gramin., Lat. granum, It. grani.] All the following significations.

1. A single seed of corn.
   Look into the seeds of time,
   And say which grain will grow, and which will not. Shakesp.
   His reason are as to grains of wheat laid in two bushels of chalk. Shakesp. Merch. of Venice.
   Let them pronounce the steep Ipurian death, Vagabond exile, flying, pent to linger; But with a grain a day, I would not buy Their mercy at the price of one fair word. Shakesp.
   Many of the ears, being six inches long, had sixty grains in them, and none less than forty. Nor. Merc.

2. Corn.
   As it eels, the seedman
   Upon the slime and oze scatters his grain,
   And shortly comes to harvest. Shakesp.
   Pale no longer swelled the tree grain
   Nor Phœbus fed his ex on the plain. Dryden.
   'Tis a rich soil, I grant you; but often covered with weeds by that way. Collet on Fama.

3. The seed of any fruit.

4. Any minute particle; any single body.

VOL. I.

GRAIN

I have on thousand many grains
That issue out of such a dust.
Shakesp.

By intelligence
And proofs as clear as suns in July, when
You see each grain of grain. Shakesp. Hen. VIII.

5. The smallest weight, of which in physick twenty make a scruple, and in Troy weight twenty-four make a penny weight; a grain so named because it is supposed of equal weight with a grain of corn.

6. Grain of almonance. Something ingulged or remitted; something above or under the exact weight.

We, who are very hot, must be seen with grains of almonance, cannot be too mild, moderate, and forgiving. Add.

7. Grain of almonance. Something ingulged or remitted; something above or under the exact weight.

I should best satisfy the property of grains of almonance to the sacred science of theology. Watts on the Mind.

8. The direction of the fibres of wood, or other fibrous matter.

Bows, by the confusion of meeting sap, infect the sound pine, and divert his grain forward and erant from his course of growth. Shakesp.

9. The body of the wood as modified by the fibres.

The bee, the swimming alder, and the plane, Inhabit those places and laden with a softer grain. Dryden.

10. The body considered with respect to the form or direction of the constituent particles.

The toot of a sea-boat, in the midst of the solider parts, contains a cured grain not to be found in the lute.

Stone of a constitution so compact, and a grain so fine, that they bear a fine polish. Harwood.

11. Died or stained substance.

How the red rose flush up in her cheeks,
And the pure snow with worldly vermil stain,
Like crimson dy'd in grain. Spec.

Over his field arm'd
A military vest of purple flow'r,
Livelier than Meridian, or the grain
Of Sarra, worn by kings and heroes old. Milton.

Come, passive man, devoted pure and true.
All in a robe of darkest grain,
Flowing with majestick train. Milton.

The third, his feet
Shadow'd from other feet with falcon'd wing,
Sky-tint'd grain! Milton's Par. Lost.

12. Temper; disposition; inclination; humour from the direction of fibres.

Your minds, precipitated with what
You rather learn than what you should do,
Made you against the grain to voice him consol'd. Shakesp.

Quoth Hudibras, it is in vain,
I see, to argue 'gainst the grain.

Quoth Hudibras. Old clerks, weary'd out with fruitless care,
Dismiss their hopes of eating, and despair;

GRAIN

Though much against the grain, forc'd to retire,
He gives you sugar, and provides a fire. Dryden.

13. The heart; the bottom.

The one being tractable and mild, the other stiff and impatient of a superior, they lived but consulting with each other, as brothers glued together, but not united in grain. Hayward.

14. The form of the surface with regard to roughness and smoothness.

The smaller the particles of cutting substance, the smaller will be the scratches by which they continually fret and wear away the glass until it be polished; but be they never so small, they can wear away the glass in another way by grinding and scratching it, and breaking the peculiarities; and therefore polish it no otherwise than by breaking its roughness to a very fine grain, so that the scratches and frettings of the surface become too small to be visible. Neat. Opt.

GRAINED. adj. [from grain.] Rough; made less smooth.

Though now the grain'd face of mine be hid
In sap consuming Winter's dizzled snow,
Yet hath my night of life some memory. Shakesp.

GRAINS. n.s. [without a singular.] The husks of malt exhausted in brewing.

Husk, draft, to drink and swill. Ben Jonson.

GRAINY. adj. [from grain.]

1. Full of corn.

2. Full of grains or kernels.

GRAMÆRY. interj. [contracted from grant me mercy.] An obsolete expression of surprise.

Says, sir, what? but mote I weet
What strange adventure do ye now pursue? Spec.

GRAMÆNOUS. adj. [graminicus, Lat.] Grassy. Gramineous plants are such as have a long leaf without a footstalk.

GRAMINIVOROUS. adj. [gramen and voro, Lat.] Grass-eating; living upon grass.

The ancients were versed chiefly in the dissection of brutes, among which the graminores is the kind of deer and chevrotains. Sharp's gem.

GRAMMAR. n.s. [grammairae, Fr. grammatica, Lat. grammatica.]

1. The science of speaking correctly; the art which teaches the relations of words to each other.

To be accurate in the grammar and idioms of the tongue, and then a politician to make all their graces serve his elocution. Felt.

We make a countryman dumb, whom we will not allow to speak but by the rules of grammar.

Dyerden & Dufresney.

2. Propriety or justness of speech; speech according to grammar.

Appropriate and signifying figures, is the sharpest satire that ever was made on woman; for the adjectives are neuter, and animal must be understood to make them grammary.

Locke.

3. The book that treats of the various relations of words to one another.

Graffiti School, n.s. A school in which the learned languages are grammatically taught.

Thou hast most traitorously corrupted the youth of the realm in erecting a grammar school. Locke.

The ordinary way of learning Latin in a grammar school I cannot encourage.

15. Grot. 853
GRAMMIAN. n.s. [grammaticien. Fr. from grammar.] One who teaches grammar; a philologer.
Many disputes the ambiguous nature of letters hath arisen among the grammarians.
They who have called ihm the torture of grammarians, might also have called him the plague of translators. Dryden.
GRAMMATICALLY. adj. [grammatical, Fr. grammaticus, Lat.] 1. Belonging to grammar.
The beauty of virtue still being set before their eyes, and that taught them with far more diligent care than grammatical rules. Bacon.
I shall take the number of consonants, not from the grammatical alphabets of any language, but from the diversity of sounds framed by single articulations with applause. Holder.
2. Taught by grammar.
They seldom know more than the grammatical construction, unless born with a poetical genius. Dryden's Defoe's GRAMMATICALLY. adv. [from grammatical.] According to the rules or science of grammar.
When a sentence is distinguished into the nouns, the verbs, pronouns, adverbs, and other particles of speech, which compose it, then it is said to be analysed grammatically. Watts.
As grammar teach us to speak properly, so it is the duty of rhetoric to instruct us how to do it elegantly, by adding beauty to that language that was before naked and grammatically true. Baker.
GRAMMATICASTER. n.s. [Lat.] A mean verbal pedant; a low grammarian.
I have not vexed language with the doubts, the remarks, and eternal trillings of the French grammaticasters. Rumer.
GRAMPLE. n.s. A crab-fish. Ainsw.
GRAMPUS. n.s. A large fish of the cetaceous kind.
GRANARY. n.s. [granarium, Lat.] A storehouse for threshed corn.
Aits, by their labour and industry, converse that corn will keep dry as in their nests as in our granaries. Addison.
And be the exhausted granary of a world. Thomson's Spring.
GRANATE. n.s. [from gram, Lat.] A kind of marl or so called, because it is marked with small variegations like grains. Otherwise Granite.
GRAND. adj. [grand, Fr. grandis, Lat.] 1. Great; illustrious; high in power or dignity.
God hath planted, that is, made to grow the trees of life and knowledge, plants only proper and becoming the paradise and garden of grand a Lord. Reddit's History.
2. Great; splendid; magnificent.
A voice has flown To re-enfame a grand design. Young.
3. Principal; chief.
What cause Mov'd our grand parents in that happy state, Fav'rd of heav'n so highly, to fall off With their posterity. Milton.
4. Eminent; superior; very frequently in an ill sense.
Our grand sue, Satan. Milton.
So clomb this first grand thief into God's fold. Milton.
5. Noble; sublime; lofty; conceived or expressed with great dignity.
6. It is used to signify ascension or descent of consanguinity.
GRANDAM. n.s. [grand and dam or dame.]
1. Grandmother; my father's or mother's mother.
I meeting him, will tell him that my lady Was fairer than his grandam, and as chase. As may be in the world, Dryden.
We have our forefathers and great grandam all before us as they were in Chaucer's days. Dryden.
They give heart belief this angel face: Too well thou shew'st thy pedigree from stone: Thy grandam's was the first by Pyrrha thrown.
Dryden.
2. An old withered woman.
The women Cry'd, one and all, the suppliant should have right, And to the grandam he adjurg'd the knight. Dryden.
GRANDCHILD. n.s. [grand and child.] The son or daughter of my son or daughter; one in the second degree of descent.
Augustus Caesar, out of indignation against his daughter and Agrippa his grandchild, would say that they were not his seed, but imposthomous broken from him. Bacon.
These hymns may work on future wrists, and so May great grandchildren of thy pazes grow.
He hoped his majesty did believe that he would never make the least scruple to obey the grandchild of King Edward. Chersones.
Fair daughter, and son and grandchild both. Ben Johnson.
He is speaking, with his gods and reliques thrown. And tawdr's the shore his little grandchild led. Desban.
GRANDDAUGHTER. n.s. [grand and daughter.] The daughter of a son or daughter.
GRANDDAD. n.s. [grand, Fr. grandis, Lat.] A man of great rank, power, or dignity.
They had some sharper and some milder differences, which might easily happen in such an interview of grandees, both venemous on the parts which they avoided. Wetten.
When a prince or grandee manifests a liking to such a thing, men generally set about to make themselves considerable for such things. South.
Some parts of the Spanish monarchy are rather for ornament than strength: they furnish out vice-regalds for the grandees, and posts of honour for the noble families. Addison.
GRANDEITY. n.s. [from grandeur, Lat.] Great age; length of life. Dict.
GRANDEVOS. adj. [grandevos, Lat.] Long lived; of great age. Dict.
GRANDEUR. n.s. [Fr.] 1. State; splendour of appearance; magnificence.
As a magistrate or great officer, he locks himself from all approaches by the multiplied formalities of attendance, by the distance of ceremony and grandeur. South.
2. Elevation of sentiment, language or men.
GRANDFATHER. n.s. [grand and father.] The father of my father or mother; the next above my father or mother in the scale of ascent.
One was saying that his great grandfather and great-grandfather, and father, died at sea; said another that heard him, an I were as you, I would never come at sea. Why, saith he, where do you your great grandfathers and grand-father, and father die? He answered, where but in their beds? He answered, are I were as you, I would never come at bed. Bosc.
Our grandchildren will see a few rags hung up in Westminster-hall, which cost an hundred millions, whereof they are paying the arrears, and boast that their grandfathers were rich and great. Swift.
GRANDFICK. adj. [grandis and facie, Lat.] Making great. Dict.
GRANDIOUS. adj. [grando, Lat.] Full of hail; consisting of hail. Dict.
GRANDITY. n.s. [from grandis, Lat.] Greatness; grandeur; magnificence. An old word.
Our poets excel in grandity and gravity, smoothness and property, in quickness and briefness. Camden.
GRANDMOTHER. n.s. [grand and mother.] The father's or mother's mother.
Thy grandmather Lois, and thy mother Eunice, 2 Tim. 1, 5.
GRANDSIRE. n.s. [grand and sire.] 1. Grandfather.
Think'st thou, that I will leave my, kingly throne, Wherein my grand sire and my father sat? Shakespe.
Thy grand sire, and his brother, to whom fame Gave, from two conquer'd parts o' th' world, their name. Desban.
The wreaths, his grand sire knew to reap. By active toil and military sweat, Prior.
2. Any ancestor; poetically.
Why should a man whose blood is warm within, Sit like his grand sire cut in alabaster? Shak.
Above the portal, car'd in cedar wood, Plac'd in their ranks, their godlike grandfathers stood. Dryden.
So nimicking ancient wits at best. As apes our grandfives in their duellist great Pope.
GRANDSON. n.s. [grand and son.] The son of a son or daughter.
A long time Iago and wealthy store, Give much to you, and to his grandsons more. Dryden.
Grandfathers in private families are not much observed to have great influence on their grandsons, and, I believe, have they much less among princes. Swift.
GRANGE. n.s. [grange, Fr.] A farm; generally a farm with a house at a distance from neighbours.
One, when he had got the inheritance of an unlucky old grange, would needs sell it; and, to draw buyers, proclaimed the virtues of it: nothing ever thrived on it, saith he; the trees were all blasted, the swine dead of the measles, the cattle of the murrain, and the sheep of the rot; nothing was ever reared there, not a duckling nor a goose. Ben Jonson.
At the moated grange resides this deceased Na- riana. Shakespe.
The loose unletter'd hinds,
When for their teen'ing flocks and granges fall
In wanton dance they graze; the bounteous Pan,
Milton.
If the church was of their own foundation, they might cluse, the incumbent being once dead, whether they would put any other theretho; unless, perhaps, the said church had people belonging to it; for then they must still maintain a curate; and of this sort were their granges and priories. Ayliffe.
GRANTE. n.s. [grante, Fr. from gronom, Lat. because consisting as it were of grains, or small distinct particles.] A stone composed of separate and very large concretions, rudely compacted together; of great hardness, giving fire with steel; not fermenting with acids, and imperfectly calcinable in a great fire. The hard white granite with black spots, commonly called mortar-stone, forms a very firm, and though it rule, yet beautifully varnished mass. It is found in immense strata in Ireland, but not used there. In Cornwall it is found in prodigious masses, and brought to Lon- don, for the steps of public buildings. Hard red granite, variegated with black and white, now called oriental granite, is valuable for its extreme hardness and beauty, and capable of a most elegant polish.

Hill on Fossils.

Abalster, marble of divers colours, both simple and mixed, the opalites, porphyry, and the granite.

There are still great pillars of granite, and other fragments of this ancient temple. Addison on Italy.

Granivorous. adj. [granum and voro, Lat.] Eating grain; living upon grain.

Granum birds, as a crane, upon the first peck of their bills, can distinguish the qualities of hard bodies, which the sense of men discerns not without mastication. Pacius.

Paul suggests a soft demulent nourishment both for granivorous birds and mankind. Arbuth.

Granam. n. s. [from granam] Grandmother. Only used in burlesque works.

Oh my kind granam told me, Tim, take some Granam.

To GRANT. v. a. [from garantir, Fr. Junius and Skinner; perhaps, as Minskev thinks, from gratuito, or rather from gratia or gratificor.]

1. To admit that which is not yet proved; to allow; to yield; to concede.

2. To bestow something which cannot be claimed of right.

3. In law. A gift in writing of such a thing as cannot aptly be passed or conveyed by word only; as rent, reversions, services, advowsons in gross, common in gross, tithes, &c. made by such persons as cannot give but by deed, as the king, and all bodies politic; which differences be often in speech neglected, and then is taken generally for every gift whatsoever, made of any thing by any person; and he that granteth it is named the grantor, and he to whom it is made the grantee. A thing is said to be in grant which cannot be assigned without deed.

Courtesies justle for a grant.

And when they break their friendship plead their want.

To GRAP. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. The act of granting or bestowing.

2. The thing granted; a gift; a boon.

3. In law. A gift in writing of such a thing as cannot aptly be passed or conveyed by word only; as rent, reversions, services, advowsons in gross, common in gross, tithes, &c. made by such persons as cannot give but by deed, as the king, and all bodies politic; which differences be often in speech neglected, and then is taken generally for every gift whatsoever, made of any thing by any person; and he that granteth it is named the grantor, and he to whom it is made the grantee. A thing is said to be in grant which cannot be assigned without deed.

(Hill on Fossils.)

Not only the laws of this kingdom, but of other places, and the Roman laws, provide that the prince should not be deceived in his grants.

4. Concession; admission of something in dispute.

But of this so great a grant, we content not to take advantage.

Hooker.

This grant destroys all you have urg'd before.

Grap. n. s. A flower.

Grapenstone. n. s. [grape and stone.]

The stone or seed contained in the grape.

When obedient nature knows his will, A fly, a grapestone, or a hair can kill. Prior.

Graphically. adj. [from graphical.]

In a picturesque manner; with good description or delineation.

The almoner odorata, or cil-cat, is delivered and graphically described by Castellius. Browne.

Grapnel. n. s. [grapin, Fr.]

1. A small anchor belonging to a little vessel.

2. A grappling iron with which in fight one ship fastens on another.

To GRAPPLE. v. n. [grappelen, Dut. krappele, Germ.]

1. To contend by seizing each other, as wrestlers.

They must be also practised in all the locks and grappling of wrestling, as need may often be in fight to tugg, or grasp, and to close. Milton.

Living virtue, all achievements past,

Meets every, still to grapple with at last. Walter.

Does he think that he can grapple with divine vengeance, and endure the everlasting burnings?

South.

Anteous here and stern Alcides stride,

And both the grappling statues seem to live. Addison.

2. To contest in close fight.

Till in my standard bear the arms of York.

To grapple with the horse of Lancaster. Shaksp.

Sometimes, from fighting squadrons of each fleet,

Two grapple. *Eneas on the ocean meet.

And English fires with Belgian flames contend. Dryden.

To GRAPPEL. v. a.

1. To fasten; to fix; to join indissolubly.

Now obsolete.

Grapple your minds to storge of the navy.

*And leave your England as dead midnight still.

That business

Grapples yee to the heart and love of us. Shak.

2. To seize; to lay fast hold of.

For Hippogries, vessels for the transporting of horse, we are indebted to the Salaminians; for grappling hooks to Anacharis. Halgyn.

Grapple. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. Contest land to hand, in which the combatants seize each other; the wrestler's hold.

As when earth's son, Anteus strove

With Jove's Alcides, and, off fall'd, still rose

Fresh from his fall, and fiercely grappled joint.

Throttled at length in Jove's arm, expost, and fell.

Or did his genius

Know mine the stronger demon, fear'd the grapple, and, in making room, found this weak of fate,

To skulk behind my sword. Dryden's Don Sebastian.

2. Close fight.

In the close fight I boarded them; on the instant they gave clear of our ship, so I alwaye became their prisoner.

Shaksp. Hamlet.

3. Iron instrument by which one ship fastens on another.

But Cymon soon his crooked grappling cast;

Which with tenacious hold his foes embrac'd. *Dr.

Grapplement. n. s. [from grapple.]

Close fight; hostility embrace. Not in use.
GRASS

They catching hold of him, as down he leant,
Their blade and sword was thus exempted from its grasp.

GRASHP. n. s. [grass and hop] A small insect that hops in the summer. The cicada of the Latins is often by the poets translated grasshopper, but improperly.

Her wagon spoke made of long spinners legs, the covey of the wings of grasshoppers.

Grasshoppers cut the grain of the whole country.

Bacon.

There silver lakes with verdant shadow crown'd,

Disperse a grateful chilliness all around;

The grasshopper avoids th' unattired air.

Not in a midst of summer ventures there. Addison.

The women were of such an enormous stature, that we appear as grasshoppers before them.

A'spec. of Addison's Spect

GRASIER. See Grazier.

To GRASP. v. a. [graspare, Isl.]

1. To hold in the hand; to gopee.

To be a friend, that thought I could grasp water, and bind the wind.

Sidney.

2. To seize; to catch at.

This grasping of the militiam into the known hands, was desired the summer before. Clarendon.

For what are men who grasp at praise sublime,

But bubbles on the rapid stream of time? Young.

To GRASP. v. n.

1. To catch; to endeavour to seize; to try at.

So endles and exorbitant are the desires of men, that they will grasp at all, and can form no scheme of perfect happiness with less.

Clarendon.

2. To struggle; to strive; to grapple. Not now in use.

See, his face is black, and full of blood;

His hands abroad display'd, as one that grasps

And tagg'd for life. Shak. Henry VI.

3. To gopee; to encroach.

Like a miser 'midst his store,

Who grasps and grasps 'till he can hold no more.

Dryden.

GRASP. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. The gopee or seizure of the hand.

Nor wanted in his grasp.

What seem'd both spear and shield.

Milton.

This hand and sword hath been acquainted well;

It would have come before into my grasp.

To kill the ravisher.

Dryden's Don Sebastian.

The left arm is a little defaced, though one may see it held something in its grasp formerly. Addison.

2. Possession; hold.

I would not be the villain that thou think'st

For the whole space that's in the tyrant's grasp,

To shew good and evil. Shak... Macbeth.

3. The power of seizing.

Within the direful grasp

Of savage hunger, or of savage heat.

Milton.

They looked upon it as their own, and had it even within their grasp. Clarendon.

Grasped. n. s. [from grasp.] One that grasps, seizes, or catches at.

GRASS. n. s. [gray, Sax.] The common herbage of the field on which cattle feed; an herb with long narrow leaves.

Ye are grown fat as the heifer at grass, and the tied gred and low.

Jer. 1. 12.

The beef being young, and only grass fed, was thin, light, and moist, and not of a substance to endure the salt.

Tenderly

You'll be no more your former you;
Tended handed touch a nettle,
And sets it for to point points,
Grazs it like a man of mettle,
And so it silk remains.
So it stings for you presentures,
Treat them gently they rebel,
But be rough as nutmeg-graters,
And the rogue obey you well.
A. Hill.

The act of pleasing.

They are incapable of any design above the present gratification of their palates.

To gratulate. v. a. [gratificari, Lat.]

1. To indulge; to grant by compliance.
You steer between the country and the court,
Not gratify which ever the great desire,
Nor grasing give what publick needs require.
Dryden.

To delight; to please; to humour; to sooth.
But pride stood ready to prevent the blow;
For whom should I gratify a foe? Dryden's Fable.

The capriciousness that he cast are ty'd;
The playful citizens in tumultuous tide
Chains melt, with the gleam of his pride. Prior.

A bald apple is honest, and must be gratified with sauces rather than food.

Turner.

At once express their scent and taste,
While frequent cups prolong the rich repast. Pope.

A thousand little impertinences are very gratifying to curiosity, though not improving to the understandings. Addison.

To requite with a recompense; as, I'll gratify you for this trouble.

Gratifying, adv. [from gratify.] Harshly; offensively.

Gratitius, adv. [Lat.] For nothing; without a recompense.
The people cry you mock them; and, of late,
When corn was given them, you repined it. Shaks.
They sold themselves, but thou, like a kind fellow,
Gave'st thysel'f away gratis, and I thank thee for their. Shaks.

The taking of use, though he judged lawful, yet never approved by practice, but lent still gratis to friends at Tuscany and Rome. Dryden.

Kindred are no welcome clients, where relation gives them a title to have advice gratis. L'Estrange.

I would consent to take my degree at Ursell or Leyden, though offered it gratis by those universities. Arnaet.

Gratitude, n. s. [gratitude, low Lat.]

1. Duty to benefactors.

That our renowned Rome, whose gratitude
Tow'd her desiring children is eurroll'd,
Should now eat up her own! Shaks.

Suspicious thoughts his pensive mind employ.
A sudden gratitude, and clouded joy. Harte.

2. Desire to return benefits.

The debt immense of endless gratitude. Milton.
Gratitude is nothing but a virtue, disposing the mind to an inward sense and an outward acknowledgment of a benefit received, together with a readiness to return the same, or the like. South's Sermon.

Gratuitous, adj. [gratuitus, Lat.
gratuit, Fr.]

1. Voluntary; granted without claim or merit.

We mistake the gratuitous blessings of heaven for the fruits of our industry. L'Estrange.

2. Asserted without proof.

The second motive they had to introduce this gratuitous declination of atoms, the same poet gives us.

Gratuitously, adv. [from gratuitous.]

1. Without claim or merit.

2. Without proof.

GRA.

I would know whence came this obliquity of direction, which they gratuitous stuck to matter;
this is to ascribe will and choice to these particles.
Cheape's Phil. Prius.

Gratuitous, n. s. [gratuitus, Gr. to grant without claim or acknowledgment; a free gift.

They might have pretended to comply with Ulysses, and dismissed him with a small gratuity.

Cheape's Phil. Prius.

King Charles.

This sum of duty let two words contain;
Gladly they grant in thy heart remain,
Be humble and be just. Prior.

To carve or form.

What profieth the gratuity image, that the maker thereof hath not given it?

Ith, ii. 16.

To copy paintings upon wood or metal,
In order to be impressed on paper.

The gravers can and ought to imitate the bodies of the colours by the degrees of the lights and shadows; if impossible they can represent to what they grave, after the works of the schools, without imitating in some sort the colours of the originals.

Drudens Defens.

2. From gratuity.] To entomb. Not in use.

There is more good;
Do you damn others, and let this damn you.
As pitchy graces you as a child to Timon.

5. To clean, tuck, and seeth a ship.

To gratue, v. n. To write or delineate on hard substances.

Thou shalt make a plate of pure gold, and grue upon it.

Ex. xiv. 36.

Grave, adj. [grave, Fr. gravis, Lat.]

1. Solemn; serious; sober; not gay; not light or trifling.

To thine more mature,
A glass that featur'd them; and to the grave,
A child that guided dotards.
Shaks. Cymb.

We should be the more desirous of your good advice, which still hath been both grave
And prosperous, in this day's council. Shaks.

That grave awesomeness, as in your best breed of mastiffs, or elegance and prettiness, as in your lesser dogs, are modes of beauty. More against Ath.

Even the grave and solemn words the philosophers distinguished by their several sorts of gravity. Dryden.

Youth on silent wings is flown;
Grave years come rolling on.
Prior.

To laugh, were want of goodness and of grace; and to be grave exceeds all power of face. Pope.

Folly-painting humour, grave himself,
Calls Fellow forth.
Thomson.

They have as much prejudice to pretend to, and as much necessity to aspire after, the highest accomplishments of a Christian and solid virtue, as the greatest and wisest among Christian philosophers.

Law.

2. Of weight; not futile; credible. Little used.

The Roman state was of all others the most celebrated for their virtue, as the graven of their own writers, and of strangers, do bear them witnesses.

Carew's Comelis.

3. Not showy; not tawdry: as, a grave suit of cloths.

4. Not sharp of sound; not acute.

Accent, in the Greek names and usages, seems to have regarded the tone of the voice; the acute accent raising the voice, in some syllables, to a higher, i.e. more acute pitch or tone, and the grave depressing it lower, and both having some emphasis, i.e. more rigorous pronunciation. Holder.

Gravel, n. s. [graver, Fr. gravir, Dutt. graver, Arm. rch.]

1. Hard sand; sand consisting of very small pebble-stones.

Gravel consists of all the usual sizes and colours, of the several sorts of pebbles; sometimes with a few pyrites, and other mineral bodies, confusedly intermixed, and common sand. Wood's
GRAVITY

His armour, all girt, was so well handled, that it shewed like a glittering sand and gravel, inter-ceded with silver rivers. Sidney.

Proofs as clear as founds in July, when
We sat in shade, gravel and grass. Shaksp.

Providence permitted not the earth to spend itself in base gravel and pebbles, instead of quarried stones of more...

Mere.

So deep, and yet so clear, we might behold
the gravel bottom, and that bottom gold. Dryd.

Thick gravel gardens at Kensington was at first nothing but a gravel pit. Swete.

Gravel walks are best for fruit trees. Mortimer.

2. [Gravelle, Fr.] Sandy matter concreted in the kidneys.

If the stone is brittle it will often crumble, and pass the urinary position; if the stone is too big to pass, the best method is to come to a suit of a composition or truce with it. Arbuthnot.

To GRAVEL. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To pave or cover with gravel.

Moss growth upon gravel, especially such as lie cold, and upon the North, as in divers terrasses; and again, if they be much trodden, or if they were at the first gravelled.

2. To stick in the sand

William the Conquer, when he invaded this island, chased at his arrival to be gravelled; and other of his feet stuck so fast in the sand, that he could not to the ground.

3. To puzzle; to stop; to put to a stand;
to embarrass.

I would kiss before I spoke.

—Nay, you are better speak first, and when you were gravel'd for lack of matter you might take occasion to kiss. Shaksp.

What work do our imaginations make with time and immensity? How are we gravel by their cutting dilemmas? Glasneive's Sep.

Mat. who was here a little gravel'd.

To lay his nose, and would have cavill'd. Prior.

4. [in horsemanship.] To hurt the foot with gravel confined under the shoe.

GRAVELY. adj. [from gravel.] Wanting a tomb; unburied.

My brave Egyptians all,

By the discarding of this pelleted storm,

GRAVELLY. adj. [gravulceus, Fr. from gravel.] Full of gravel; abounding with gravel; consisting of gravel.

There are some natural spring waters that will infligate wood; so that you shall see one foot of wood, where the water shall run continually; in the water shall run where the water shall run.

If you live in a consumptive air, make choice of the more open, high, dry, and gravelly part of it.

Horace on Consolations.

GRAVELY. adv. [from gravel.]

1. Solemnly; seriously; soberly; without lightness or mirth.

Then stand'st
Gravelly in doubt when to hold them wise. Milton.

A girl long to tell her confidant that she hopes to marry a little time, and asks her very gravelly what she would have her do to. Spectator.

Wisdom's above suspicion wiles;
The queen of learning gently smiles.

Soft; a formal story was very gravelly carried to his excellency, by some zealous members. Swift.

It's not enough the blockhead scarce can read;
But must be wisely look, and gravelly plead Young.

2. Without gaudiness or show.

GRAVENESS. n. s. [from gravel.] Seriousness; solemnity and sobriety of beha-

2. Without gaudiness or show.
GRA

Have I in conquest stretch't mine arm so far,
To be afraid to tell greathears the truth? Shak.

GRAYLING. n. s. [thymallus]. The um-ber, a fish.

The grayling lives in such rivers as the trout does, and is usually taken with the same baits and after the same manner; he is of a fine shape, his flesh white, and his teeth. Those little oases that he has, as he hath. Shakespeare.

Leaving in the fields his grazing cows,
He sought himself some hospitable house Dryden.

The more ignoble through
Attend their stately steps, and slowly graze along.
Dryden.

To supply grass.

Physicians advise their patients to remove into airs which are slim, champagnes, but grazing, and not overgrown with hisbs. Bacon.

The sewers must be kept so as the water may not stay too long in the Spring; for then they ground essentials to the water, whereby it will never graze to purpose that year. Bacon.

A third sort of grazing ground is that near the sea, which is commonly very rich land. Montaigne.

To move on clearing.

As every state lay next to the other that was oppressed, so the fire perpetually graz'd. Bacon.

[From raser, Fr.] To touch lightly.

Mark then a bounding valour in our English, That being dead, like to the bully grazing. Homer.

Breaks out into a second course of mischief, Killing in relapse of mortality. Shak. Henry V.

To graze. v. a.

1. To tend grazing; to set cattle to feed on grass.

Jacob greed'd his uncle Laban's sheep. Shakespeare.
O happy man, saith he, that, lo! I see Grazing his cattle in those pleasant fields, If he but know his good! Daniel's Civil War.

2. To feed upon.

I was at first as other beasts, that graze
The trodden herds, of abject thoughts and low.
Their steeds around,
Free from their harness, graze the flow'ry ground, Dryden.

Some graze their land 'till Christmas, and some longer.
This Neptune gave him, when he gave to keep
His scaly flocks that graze the watry deep, Dryden.
The lambs with wolves shall graze the verdant mead. Pope.

3. To supply with grass.

He hath a horse and barn in repair, and a field or two to graze his cows, with a garden and orchard. Swift.

GRAZER. n. s. [from graze.] One that grazes or feeds on grass.

His flock daily crops
Their verdant dinner from the mossy turf
Sufficient: after them the cackling goose.
Close grazer, finds wherewith to ease her want.

Philip.

GRAZER. n. s. [from graze.] One who feeds cattle.

All grazers prefer their cattle from meager pastures to better hills.

Peaceful gentle, which filleth the husbandman's barn, the grazer's folds, and the tradesman's shop.

His confusion increased when he found the alderman's father to be a grazer. Spectator.

Of agriculture, the devastation made in the country, by encroasing grazers, and the great yearly importation of corn from England, are lamentable instances under what discouragement it lies. Sug't.

GRE

Many have broke their backs with laying hands on them.
For this great journey. Shak. Henry VIII.

What is low raise and support,
That to the height of this building I may assert eternal Providence.
And vindicate the ways of God to men. Milton.

In a great charge of this be tried. Dryden.
He seem'd, as he'd it in cogitation deep.
By experience of this great event,
In arms not war.
After silence then,
And summons read, the great consobred. Milton.
And though this be a great truth, if it be indispensably considered, yet it is a great paradox to men of corrupt minds and vicious practices.
Tilottam.

Chief; principal.
Hear the king's pleasure, cardinal, who commands you
To render up the great seal presently. Shak. H. VIII.

Venerable; admirable; awful.
Thou first art won God's greatest and thickest will, Interpreter, through highest heaven's to bring. Milton.

Wonderful; marvelous.
Great things, and full of wonder. Milton.

Of high rank; of large power.
Such men as he be never at heart's ease,
Whilst they beheld a godther that themselves. Shak.
Worthless by being good,
Far more than great or high. Milton.

Of all the great, how few
Are just to heaven, and to their promise true! Pope.
Mighty minds, with the throne her seat,
And none could be unhappy but the great. Rowe.

Despite the force of state,
The sober fowls of the wise and great.
Pope.
The marble tombes that rise on high,
Whose dead in vaulted arches lie; Milton.
These, all the poor remains of state,
And these, the truest, most illustrious. Pope.

10. General; extensive in consequence or influence.
Profligate humour softning all her globe,
Fermented the great mother to conceive. Milton.

11. Illustrious; eminent; noble; excellent.
O Lord, thou art great, and thy name is great in might. Jer. x. 6.
The great Creator thus reply'd. Milton.
The great Sun return'd
Victorious with his saints.
Milton.
Thy angel, thy desire that knows to tend
The works of God, whereby to glorify
The great work-master, tends to no excess; Milton.

Great. Are thy works, Jehovah, infinite!
Thy pow'r! what thought can measure thee, or Relate thee! greater now in thy return,
Than from the giant angels: that day
Thy thunders magnified, but to create
Is greater than created to destroy. Milton.
The great luminary.
Alas the vulgar constellations thick,
That from this lordly eye keep distance due,
Dispenses light from far. Milton.
Here Cesar gra'd with both Minervas sheen,
Cesar, the world's great master, and his own. Pope.

Great in his triumphs, in retirement great. Pope.

Such Dido was; with such becoming state.
Amidst the crowd, she walks sternly great. Dry.

13. Magnanimous; generous; high-minded.
In every thing was goodly and stately; yet so,
That it might seem great mindedness was but the ancient bearer to the humbleness. Sidney.

14. Opulent; sumptuous; magnificent.
Not Babylon,
Nor great Alcino, such magnificence
Equal'd in all their glories. Milton.

889
He disdained not to appear at great tables and feasts, entertaining them. \textit{Afternoons.}

15. Intellectually great; sublime.

This new created world, how good, how fair, Answering his great idea. \textit{Milton.}

16. Swelling; proud.

And to their brave defence. \textit{Addison.}

GREATNESS. n. s. \textit{[from great].}

1. Largeness of quantity or number.

2. Comparative quantity.

We can have no positive idea of any space or duration, which is not made up of and commensurate to repeated numbers of feet or yards, or days or years, and whereby we judge of the greatness or sense of these kinds of quantities. \textit{Locke.}

Their merit according to the greatness it has, or is acknowledged to have, cause pain equal to that greatness, as all pains desire equal to itself; because the absence of good is not always a pain, as the presence of pain is. \textit{Locke.}

3. High degree of any quality.

Zeal, in duties, should be proportioned to the greatness of the reward, and the certainty. \textit{Rogers.}

4. High place; dignity; power; influence; empire.

The most servile flattery is lodged most easily in the grossest capacity; for their ordinary counsel draws with a yielding to greatness; and then have they not wit to discern the right degrees of duty. \textit{Sidney.}

Farewell, a long farewell to all my greatness. \textit{Shakespeare.}

As will to greatness dedicate themselves. \textit{Shakespeare.}

I beg your greatness not to give the law in other men's bosoms, but beaten, to withdraw. \textit{Dryden.}

Approaching greatness met him with her charms Of power and future state; He shook her from his arms. \textit{Dryden.}

Themistocles led the Athenians to their greatness at sea, which he thought to be the true and constant interest of that commonwealth. \textit{Swift.}

5. Swelling pride; affected state.

My lord, I know, that it is not of pride or greatness that he cometh not aboard your ships. \textit{Bacon.}

6. Merit; magnanimity; nobleness of mind.

Greatness with Timon dwells in such a draught, As brings all Bribnging before your throne. \textit{Pope.}

GREAVE. n. s. \textit{[greaf, Sax.] A grove.}

Spencer.

Yet when there hap a honey-fall, We'll lick it up, and make a show. And tell the bees that theiris gell To that upon the greaves. \textit{M. Drayton.}

GREAVES. n. s. \textit{[from greaves, Fr.] Armour for the legs; a sort of boots. It wants the singular number.}

He had groves of brass upon his legs. I Sa. xvi. A shield made for him, and a helm, fair greaves, and cuisses such As may renown thy workmanship, and honour him as much. \textit{Chapman's Hexam.}

GREBISM. n. s. \textit{[grebismus, Lat.] An idiom of the Greek language.}

GREE. n. s. \textit{[гр, Fr. probably from gr. γραφ.] Good will; favour; good graces. And falling her before on lowly knee, To her maker of her service. Which she accepts with thanks and goodly grees.}

Spenser.

GREEK. n. s. \textit{[corrupted from degrees.]}

It is written likewise grece or grice. A flight of steps. Obscure.

GREEDILY. adv. \textit{[from greedy.]}

Eagerly; ravenously; voraciously; with keen appetite or desire.

Greedyly she engag'd without restraint. \textit{Milton.}

He swallow'd it as greedily. \textit{Denham.}

As parched earth drinks rain.

Denham.

Dryness, and herbs of poisons scatious. Wild hunger seeks to fill our breaths. We greedily devour our certain death. \textit{Dryden.}

GREEDINESS. n. s. \textit{[from greedy.]}

Ravenousness; voracity; hunger; eagerness of appetite or desire.

Fox in stealth, wolf in greediness. \textit{Shak.}

'Tis true of all the thiefs of affection are they gone, and there they intend to sup. \textit{Shakesp.}

If thou wert the wolf, thy greediness would affright them. \textit{Shak.}

I with the same greediness did seek.

As water when I thirst, to swallow Greek. \textit{Denk.}

Greedily; adv. \textit{[grebibly, Sax. greedily, Dan. greilig, Dut.]}

1. Ravenous; voracious; hungry.

As a lion that is greedy of his prey. \textit{Ps. vi. 12.}

2. Be not unstable in any dainty thing, nor too greedy upon meats. \textit{Ex. xxxvii. vq.}

3. Make the greedy ravens to be like Eliak's crows, and bring him food. \textit{King Charles.}

2. Eager; vehemently desirous. It is now commonly taken in an ill sense.

Greedy to know, as is the mind of man, Their cause of death, swift to the fire she ran. \textit{Fairfax.}

The ways of every one that is greedy of gain. \textit{Ps.}

3. Stern look'd the fand, as a frants of his will. Not half suffix'd, and greedy yet to kill. \textit{Dryden.}

While the rapeer fills his greedy hands, And binds the golden sheaves in brittle bands. \textit{Dryden.}

GREEN. adj. \textit{[grena, Germ. gruen, Dut.]}

1. Having a colour formed commonly by compounding blue and yellow; of the colour of the leaves of trees or herbs. The green colour is said to be most favourable to the sight.

The general colour of plants is green, which is a colour that no flower is of; there is a greenish pharamon, but it is pale and scarce a green. \textit{Bacon.}

Greens for ever green. \textit{Pope.}

2. Pale; sickly: from whence we call the maid's disease the green sickness, or chlorosis. Like it is Sappho's γρατίαν νιώσεως. \textit{Was the hope drunk.}

Wherein you drest yourself? Hath it slept since? And wakes it now to see green and pale. At what it did so freely? \textit{Shak.}

There's never any of these damsel horns come to any proof: they fall into a kind of male green sickness. \textit{Shak. Henry IV.}

Till the green sickness and love's force betray'd To death's remorseless arms th' unhappy maid. \textit{Garth.}

3. Flourishing; fresh; undecayed: from trees in Spring.

If I have any where said a green old age, I have Virgil's authority; \textit{Sei erud a dio viridisci secuctus.}

Dryden.

4. New; fresh: as, a green wound.

The door is open, sit, there lies your way You may be jogging while your boots are green. \textit{Shakep.}

Greens are green.

And all thy friends, which thou most make thy friends, Have but their stings and teeth newly taken out.

Shakep.

In a vault.

Where bloody Tybalt, yet green in earth, Is furiously requiting his unnatural wound. \textit{Shak. Romeo and Juliet.}

A man that studieth revenge keeps his own wounds green, which otherwise would heal and do well. \textit{Bacon's Essays.}
5. Not dry.

If a spark of error have thus far prevailed in any where the wood is green, and fattest oil from any inclination unto furious attempts; must not the peril thereof be greater in men, whose minds are of themselves as dry wood, apt for beforehand unto turmoils? — Hooker, Deduction.

Being an olive tree which late he fell on; and being green, must be made light as a candle. — Chapman.

Of fragility the cause is an impotency to be extended, and therefore stone is more fragill than metal, and so dry wood is more fragill than green. — Dryden.

If you but consider a piece of green wood burning in a chimney, you will readily discern, in the disband ed parts of it, the four elements. — Boyle.

The green do often heat the rife, and the rife, so heated, give fire to the green. — Mortimer's Hub.

6. Not rocked; half raw.

Under this head we may rank those words which signify different ideas, by a sort of an uncontrived far-fetched analogy, or distant resemblance; which fancy has introduced between one thing and another; as when we say the meat is green, when it is half toasted. — Watts's Logic.

7. Unripe; immature; young; because fruits are green while they are ripe.

My sald days,
When I was green in judgment, cold in blood! — Shaksp'e.

O charming youth, in the first op'ning page
So many graces in so green an age. — Dryden.

You'll find a difference between the promise of his greener days,
And these he masters now. — Shaksp'e, Henry V.

If you would fat green, glut them up when they are about a month old. — Mortimer's Hub.

Stubble green at Michamis are seen
Upon the spit, next May produces green. — King's.

GREEN. n.s.

1. The green colour; green colour of different shades.

That, quaint in green, she shall be lose e'er bird. — Shaksp'e.

And with your presence cheer'd, they cease to walk.
And walks wear greener green at your return. — Dryden.

Cinnabar, illuminated by this beam, appears of the same red colour as by daylight; and if at the lens you intercept the green making and blue making rays, its redness will become more full and lively. — Newton's Opt.

Let us but consider the two colours of yellow and blue: if they are mingled together in any considerable proportion, they make a green. — Wattis's Legick.

2. A grassy plain.

For this down-trodden equity, we tread
In warlike march these greens before your town. — Shaksp'e.

O'er the smooth enamell'd green,
Where no print of step hath been,
Follow me as I sing. — Milton.

The young Emilia, fairer to be seen
Than the fair lily on the flow'ry green. — Dryden.

3. Leaves; branches; wreaths.

With greens and flowers recruit their empty
And seek fresh forage to sustain their lives. — Dryden.

Ev'ry bower with cheerful green is crown'd; — Dryden.

The fragrant green I seek, my brows to bind. — Dryden.

To GREEN. r. a. [from the n. u.] To make green. — A low word.

GREEN'd all the year; and fruits and blossoms
In social sweetness on the self-same bough. — Thom.

VOL. I.
GRIEVE, n. s. [from greeve.] Salutation at meeting, or compliments at a distance.

GRIEVE. n. s. [from greeve.] See GREECE, or GREEZE, or GRIEZE; from degrees. A flight of steps; a step.

GRENADE. n. s. [from pomum granatum, Lat.] A little hollow globe or ball of iron, or other metal, about two inches and a half in diameter, which, being filled with fine powder, is set on fire by means of a small fuse fixed to the touch-hole as soon as it is kindled, the case flies into many shatters, much to the damage of all that stand near.

GRENADIER. n. s. [grenadier, Fr. from grenade.] A tall footsoldier, of whom there is one company in every regiment: such men being employed to throw grenades.

GRENADE. n. s. A kind of fossil body. A sort of tin ore, with its great, that is, a congeries of crystals, or sparks of spar, of the bigness of a chestnut and of a brown shining colour immersed therein.

GREW. n. s. The pretence of grow. The pleasing task he falls not to renew; so hee too soft or evry thing too grew.

GREG. adj. [grie, Fr. More properly written grecly.] See GRAY.

GREG. adj. This ancient ruffian, sir, whose life I spair'd at suit of his grey beard.

GRENADIER. A tall fleet dog that chances in sight. First may a trusty greyhound transform himself into a tyger. Sir Sidney, So, on the Downs we see, near Witton fair, A lastned hare from greyhound go.Sidney. The impatient greyhound, slip out of sight, But I' the cheek to catch the foremost hare.

GREECE. n. s. A little pig. Gouldman.

GREEZE. n. s. A step or greeze. No, not a greeze; This a step or love. Shakes, Twelfth Night. To Gride. n. m. [gridare, Ital.] To cut; to make way by cutting. A word elegant, but not in use. His poignant spear he thrust with puissant sway, That through his thigh the mortal steel did glide. Spenser.

GRIDELIN. adj. A colour mixed of white and red.

GRI

The innocent prey in haste he does forsake, Which quits from death, yet quakes in every limb, With change of fear to see the lion look so grim.

Spenser.

Gri'mness. n.s. [from grimm.] Horror; frightfulness of visage.

To Grin. v. n. [gymn, Sax, grinen, grinun, Dut. undoubtably the same origin with To grin, as we now say to grin the teeth, grinner, Fr.]

1. To set the teeth together and withdraw the lips either in anger or in mirth.

Death, death! oh, amiable, lovely death! Come grin on me, and I will think that sin't.

What valour were it, in war with grim, for one to trust him? and between the teeth, When he might spur him with his foot away.

It was no unpleasant thought to me to see the various methods with which they have attacked me; some with piteous moans and outcries, others grinning, and only sheathing their teeth. Still he is a lion's hide he wears; about his shoulders hangs the shaggy skin; the teeth and gaping jaws severely grim.

Dryden.

But grin'd their teeth, and cast a helpless view.

Menace, fancy, gave an ill-tim'd birth To grinning laughter, and to frantick mirth. Prier.

Foods grin on foods, and Stealthlike support, Without one sigh, the pleasures of a court. Young.

2. To fix the teeth in a grin.

Oh, I like not such grinning honour as Sir Walter hath: give me life, which if I can save, so if not, honour comes unfound for, and here's an end.

Shak., Henry IV.

GRIM'ACE. n.s. [Fr. from grimp.]

1. A distortion of the countenance from habit, affection, or insolence.

He had no sport to shew his pikes, Against this stranger's politicks,

With small remarks of leering faces, And amotions of grimaces!

Hudibras.

The favourable opinion and good word of men comes oftentimes at a very easy rate; and by a few demure looks and affected whisms, set off with some odd devotion postures and grimaces, such other legerities of dissembling, cunning men will do wonders.

South's Sermons.

The buffalo aye, with grimaces and gambols, carried it from the whole field./L'Estrange.

The French nation is addicted to grimace,

Spectator.

2. Air of affectation.

Vice in a vicar, to avoid grimace.

Grisalm. n.s. [gris, Fr. grey, and mal'kin, or little Moll.] Grey little woman; the name of an old cat.

Grimal'dia, to domestick versin sworn

An ever-present, ever-watching eye

Lies nightly brooding o'er a chinkey gap,

Pretending her fell claws, to toothless mice.

Sure rule.

Grimes. n.s. [from grimp.]

Dirt deeply insinuated; sullyng blackness not easily cleansed.

Swart, like my shoe, but her face nothing so clean kept, for why? She sweats: a man may go over shoes in the game of it.

Shak.

Colow is the word by which they denote black grime of burnt coal or wood. Woodward on Faust.

To Grime. v. a. [from the noun.]

to dirt; to leth the density.

My face I'll grime with.

Blanket my lins, cliff all my hair in knots. Shak.

Grimly. adv. [from fith.]

1. Horribly; hideously; terribly.

We've landed in till time: the skies look grimly, And the sun and the present blessings.

Shak.

So Pluto, seiz'd d'Proserpine, convey'd To hell's tremendous gloom th' affrighted maid; There greets some snare, pleas'd with the beauteous grace,

Nor envy'd Dione her sunshine and his skyes. Addis.

2. Sourly; sullenly.

The anger Say they know not; they cannot tell; look grimly, And dare not speak their knowledge.

Shak.

GRIND.

A shivering or horror in the body, and set the teeth on edge.

Bacon's Nat. Hist.

That the stomach in animals grindest, a sign which it receives from the digestion of animals, which have swallowed metals, which have been found polished on the side next the aliment.

Addison.

4. To harrows; to oppress.

Some merchants and tradesmen, under colour of furnishing the colony with necessaries, may grind them so as shall have been kept, in poverty.

Bacon's Advice to Tillers.

Another way the Spaniards have taken to grind the Neapolitans, and yet to take off the exorbitant

Addition.

5. In the following lines, I know not whether it be not corruptly used for grinding, cutting.

Not knowing 'twas my labour, I complair Of sudden sheets, as and of grinding pains.

My throes come thicker, and my cries increas'd.

Dryden.

To Grind. v. n.

1. To perform the act of grinding; to move a mill.

Fen'der'd they send thee Into the common prision, there to grind

Among the slaves and asszes.

Milan's Agamem.

2. To be moved as in the act of grinding.

Th' adumbr'd shumus star'd on

And smoky foams wor't hy grindings.

Dryd.

GRINDER. n.s. [from grimp.]

1. One that grinds; one that works in a mill.

2. The instrument of grinding.

His heart a solid rock, to fear unknown,

And harder than the gringer's another stone.

Sandy's Noct.

Th' linds to exercise the pointed steel

On the hard rock, and give a wealy form To the expected grinder.

Philip.

3. [Gum-b'zayr.] The back teeth; the double teeth.

The teeth are in men of three kinds: sharp as the foretooth; broad, as the back-teeth, which we call the molar-teeth, or grinders; and pointed teeth or canine, which are between both.

Bacon.

He the raging lions confounds,

The roaring lion with his jawful wounds

Batters their temples, their grinders breaks; so they With the old hunters stare for want of prey.

Sand.

The jaw-teeth or grinders, in Latin molaris, are made flat and broad, m-t, and withal somewhat uneven and rugged, that, by their knobs and little cavities, they may the better retain, grind, and commix the aliments.

Nature is at a great deal of labour to transmute vegetables into animal substances; therefore herbating animals, which do not ruminate, have no grinders.

Arch.

4. The teeth, in irony or contempt.

One, who at the sight of supper, open'd wide His jaws before, and whett'd grinders try'd. Dryd.

Both he brought;

He mouth'd them, and bestow'd his grinders caught.

Dryd.

GRINDSTONE. n.s. [from grimp. and grindstone.] Stone on which edged instruments are sharpened.

The stone which on edged instruments are sharpened.

The stone which on edged instruments are sharpened.

Such a light and metal'd dance

Saw you never yet in France;

And by the leaden, for the money,

That turn'd round like grindstones.

Benjamin.

Literature is the grindstone to sharpen the coulers, and to whet their natural faculties. Hammond.

Smith that made so many brighten them, yet some file them; but grind them on a grindstone till bright.

Strom.

GRINNER. n.s. [from grimp.]

He that grins.

Note: The frightful'd grinner

Addison's Spectator.

Be the winter.
GRI

GRIPE. n. s. A small ditch. Ainsworth.

To GRIPE, v. a. [grape, Goth. gýpan, Sax. gýpen, Dut. grijpen, Scott.] 1. To hold with the fingers closed; to grasp; to press with the fingers. He that speaks does grieve the heart of women, with which the word makes fearful action. With wrink'd brow. Shakespeare, King John.

2. To hold hard. He seize'd the shining bough with gripping hold, And rending, crush'd the lying golden bud.

3. [Gripper, Fr.] To catch eagerly; to seize. You took occasion to be quickly woor'd, To gripe the gen'ral way into your hands. Shakespeare.

4. To close; to clench. Unwieldy I'll thry unfurling master, The more thou ticklest, grieves his hand the faster. Pope.

To pitch; to press; to squeeze.

A wonderous way it for this lady wroght, From lion's claws to pluck the gripping 'prey. Spencer. And first the dance came rushing thro' the land And next the famish'd hounds that sought their food, And gripe her flanks, and oft essay'd their jaws in blood. Dryden's Fables.

5. To give in the bowels.

Thus full of counsel to the den she went, Gripped all the way, and longing for a vent. Dryden.

To GRIPE. v. n.

1. To feel the colick, to have the belly-ach.

Many people would, with reason, prefer the griping of an hungry belly to those dishes which are a feast to others, answered the bulk, figure, texture, and motion of its parts, has a power to produce the sensations of sickness, and sometimes of acute pains or gripings in us. Locke.

2. To pinch; to catch at money blindly. It is mean revenue, by being scattered, in the worst of times growing upon him, when others that had great ones, by griping, made them less, and grew stark beggars. Field.

GRIPE. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. Grasp; seize, the hand or law.

Therefore still on high He ever did hold his crime, smiting through with greedy grip to do him hurt. Dryden. They put a barrier scroop in my gripe. They'll be wormed, and without an unkind hand. Shakespeare.

Should I Slaver with lips, as common as the stairs That mount the Capitol; join grips with hands Made hard with fruitless labour and toil. Shakespeare.

He gave me his hand, And, with a fickle grip, says, dear, my lord, Command my service. Shakespeare, Henry V.

I fell; and with my weight the helm constrain'd

Was drawn along, which yet my grip retain'd. Dryden, En.

2. Squeeze; pressure.

Fidd with this thought, at once he strain'd the breeze. 'Tis true, the harden'd breast resist the gripe, And the cold lips return a kiss unripe. Dryden.

3. Oppression; crushing power.

I take my cane, Out of the gripes of cruel men, and give it To a most noblc judge, the king my master. Shak.

4. Affliction; pinching distress.

Heart-struck with chilings grip of sorrow stood, That all his senses bound! Milton's Par. Lost. Can'st thou hear cold hunger? Can'st thou hear The tender offices of love, the limbs, Endure the bitter gripes of smarting poverty? Ous.

5. [In the plural.] Belly-ach; colick.

In the jaundice the choleric is wanting; and the icteric drugs have a great soundness and gripes, with the pain. Figgis.

GRIPER. n. s. [from grip.] Oppressor; usurer; extortioner.

Others pretend zeal, and yet are professed usurers, grippers, monsters of men, and hairpits. Barthes.

GRIPLY, adv. [from griping.]

With griping of the gristy, and grasping.

Clyster he last the medicine stop in the guts, and work gripingly. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

GRIPE. n. s. A greedy snatcher; a griping mis'er.

GRI'NAMBER. n. s. Used by Milton for ambergis.

Bits of chase, or bowl of game, In pasty built, or from the spit, or built, Gripper staid. Milton's Par. Reg.

GRISE. n. s. [See Greece as it should be written.] A stop, or scale of steps.

Let me speak as herself; and lay a sentence, Which, as a step or stage, may help these lovers Into your favour. Shakespeare, Othello.

GRI'SKIN. n. s. [Grisin.] Roast meat, Irish.

The vertebrae of a hog broiled.

GRI'SLY. adj. [gripia, Sax.] Dreadful; terrible; hideous; frightful; terrible.

His grin locks, and unhook, Disordered hung all his shoulders round. Spens. Where I was wont to see the honey bee, The grisy tost where there might be. Spens. My grisy countenance made others fly; None durst come near, for fear of sudden death. Shakespeare.

Back step'd those two fair angels, half amaz'd So sudden to behold the grisy king; Yet thus, morn'd with fear, accord him soon. Milton.

For that damn'd magician, let him be girt With all the grisi legions that troop Under the wing of his sorcery.

The beantuous form of fight

Is chang'd, and war appears a grisly sight. Dryden.

In vision thou shalt see his grisly face, The king of terrors raging in thy race Dryden, Inno. That the grisly spectre spoke again. Dryden.

Close by each other laid, they press'd the ground Their matty lousious pier'd with many a gristy wound. Dryden.

So rushes on his foe the grisly bear. Addison.

GRIST. n. s. [from grit.]

1. Corn to be ground.

Get grit to the mill to have plenty in store, Last miller lack water. Tusser's Husbandry.

A mighty trade this fusty miller drove; Much grit to his lot did fall, And all the corn ye said at scholar's hall. Miller of Tremp.

2. Supply; provision.

Matter, as wise logicians say, Cannot without a form subsist; And form, say I, as well as they, Must fall, if matter be no guin. Swift.

3. Grist to Mill, is profit; guin.

The computation of degrees, in all matrimonial causes, is wont to be made according to the rules of that law and the guin to the mill. Addison.

GRI'ZTLE. n. s. [gryzule, Sax.] A carilage; a part of the body next in hardness to a bone.

No living creatures, that have shells very hard, as oysters, crabs, lobsters, and especially the totoxous, have bones within them, but only little grittles. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

Lest the asperity or hardiness of carillages should hurt the other, because it brings grits to the mill.

GRIZZLE. n. s. [gryzule, Sax.] A carilage; a part of the body next in hardness to a bone.

No living creatures, that have shells very hard, as oysters, crabs, lobsters, and especially the totoxous, have bones within them, but only little grittles. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

GRISTLY. adj. [from gritle.] Cartilaginous; made of gritle.

At last they spit out pieces of their lungs; it may be small grittly bits, that are eaten off from the lungs by the wind. Mar. Dryden.

She bind the back-bone of several vertebræ, as being more fit to bend, more tough, and less in danger of breaking, than if they were all one long bone without these grittly junctures. More.

Fins are made of grittely spokys, or rays connect by membranes; so that they may be converted into stellate pieces.

They have a fudder and stronger note than other birds of the same beigness, which have only a gritty windpipe.

Each pipe distinguish'd by its grittily sings, To cherish life aerial pasture brings. Blackmore.

GRI'T. n. s. [gryte, gret, Sax.]

1. The coarse part of meal.

2. Oats husked, or coarsely ground.

Silex bone, cracking a little betwixt the teeth, yet without the least particle of grit, feels as smooth as soap. Grew.

The sturdy-page tree here Will rise luxuriant, and with toughest root.

Pierce the obstructing grit and resistive marble. Phil.

4. Grits are fossils found in minute masses, forming together a kind of powder; the several particles of which are of no certain shape, but seem the ruddy broken fragments of larger masses; not to be dissolved or disintegrated by water, but retaining their figure, and not cohearing into a mass. One sort is a fine, dull looking, grey grit, which, if wetted with salt water, into mortar or paste, dries almost immediately, and coalesces into a hard stony mass, such as is not easily afterwards disintegrated by water. This is the pulvis petelorum of the ancients, mixed among their cements used in buildings sunk into the sea; and in France and Italy an ingredient in their harder plasteres, under the name of pozzolane. It is common on the sides of hills in Italy. Hill on Fossils.

GRITTINESS. n. s. [from gritty.] Sandiness; the quality of abounding in grit.

In fuller's-earth he could find no sand by the microscope, nor any grittiness. Mortimer's Hist.

GRITY. adj. [from grit.] Full of hard particles or consisting of grit.

I could not discern the unevenness of the surface of the powder, nor the little shadows let fall from the gritty particles thereof. Newton.

GRIZZLED. adj. [more properly grizled.] See GRIZED.

The Burgundy, which is a grizled or pale red, of all others, is surest to ripen in our climate. Tem.

GRIZZLE. n. s. [from grit; gri; griselle, Fr.] A mixture of white and black; gray.

It seems the dissembling cab! what wilt thou be, When time hath sow'd a grizle on thy face? Shak.

GRIZZLED. adj. [from grizzle.] Interpersed with gray.

To the boy Casar, send this grizled head. Shak. His head was gray.

—I was as I se have it in my life. Shak. Hamlet.
Grocer's n. [gros, gran, Fr. grosgrain, Latin, grossus, large, Lat.] A grocer. Stuff woven with large wool and a rough pile. (A device to dried.)

GROAN, n. [granan, Sax, greun, Du.] To breathe with a hoarse noise, as in pain or anger.

GROANFUL adj. [groun and full.] Sad; agonizing. Not used.

GROAN. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. Breath expired with noise and difficulty, from pain, faintness, or weariness.

2. Any hoarse dead sound.

3. A proverbial name for a small sum.

4. A piece valued at four-pence.

5. A channel or hollow cut with a tool.

6. To cut hollow.

GROUNDER. n.s. [gros, gran, Fr. groser, Latin, grossus, large, Lat.] A grocer; a man who buys and sells tea, sugar, and provisions for houses. (A term of abuse.)

GROCERY. n.s. [from grocer.] Grocers' ware, such as tea, sugar, raisins, spices, and wines and beverages received by grocers.

Grog. n.s. (From grog.) A liquor made from rum and water or spirits.

GROPE. n.s. (From grope.) One that searches in the dark.

Gross. adj. [from grope.] Two. A thick; bulky. The crows and crows, that wing the midway GROPE. n.s. (From grope.) To search by feeling in the dark; to feel without being able to see.

GROPE. n.s. (From grope.) To search by feeling in the dark; to feel without being able to see.
And in clear stream and solemn vision,
Tell her of things that no gross eye can bear. Milton.
Some men give more light and knowledge by the bare stating of the question with peripety and justness, yet do without the help of others in gross con- fusion for whole hours together. Watts.
7. Coarse; rough; opposite to delicate.
Fine and delicate sculptures are held with numbers, and gross with distance. Watson's Arch.
8. Thick; fat; bulky.
His stature was of just height and all proportional dimensions, avoiding the extremes of greatness and meagerness. Felt.
GROSS. n. s. [from the adjective.]
1. The main body; the main force.
The Belgians hopt, that with disorder'd haste,
The deep-cut keels upon the sands might run ;
which more than likelihood to us was so unlucky:' for there were no one of them but their numerous gross might charge one by one.
Drieden.
Several contrivances of occupation, that, in a battle,
you should discharge upon the gross of the enemy, without levelling your piece at any particular person. Addison's Freethinker.
The gross of the people can have no other prospects in changes and revolutions than of public-blessings. Addison.
2. The bulk; the whole not divided into several parts.
Certain general inducements are made to make saleable your cause in gross. Hooker.
There was an opinion in gross, that the soul was in the body. Helyc.
There is a confused, that is, the acknowledging our sins to God; and this may be either general or particular: The general is, when we only confer in gross that we are sinful; the particular, when we mention the several sorts and acts of our sins.
Remember son,
You are a general: other wars require you;
For see the Stuarts gross begins to move. Drieden.
All the old and new trades and manufactures, yet, in the gross, we ship off now one third more of the manufactures, as also load and lin, than we did sixty years past. Child on Trade.
3. Not individual; but a body together.
He hath ribbons of all the colours i' th' rainbow;
they come to him by the gross. Shakes.
I cannot instantly raise up the gross
Of full three thousand ducats. Shakes.
You see the united design of many persons to make a wealthy after, where they have separated themselves in many petty divisions, they rejoin one by one in a gross. Drieden.
4. To charge at the main mass.
Comets, out of question, have likewise power and effect over the gross and mass of things, Bacon.
The articulate sounds are more confus'd, than they are in the gross. Barnet's Nat. Hist.
5. The number of twelve dozen. [Grosse, French.]
It is made up only of that simple idea of an unit repeated; and repetitions of this kind, joined together, make those distinct simple modes of dozens, a gross, and a million. Locke.
GROSSLY. adv. [from gross.]
1. Bulkily; in bulky parts; coarsely; as, this matter is grossly pulverized.
2. Without subtlety; without art; without delicacy; without refinement; coarsely;
palpably.
Such kind of ceremonies as have been so grossly done, and shockingly abused in the church of Rome, where they remain, are scandalous. Hooker.
Treason and murder ever kept together,
As two yok'd to every purpose other.
Working so grossly in a natural cause,
That admission did not whoop at them. Shakes.
And thine eyes
See it so grossly shown in thy behalve,
That in their kind they speak it. Shakes.
What are we cuckolds ere we have deserv'd it.
—Speak not so grossly. Shak. Merh. of Venet.
Groove. n. s. [from graver.] A walk covered by trees meeting above.
I took 'd toward Birnane, and anon methought
The wood began to move:
Within this three mile you may see it going;
I, say, a moving grove.
Shak. Macbeth.
Of fruitful fields, and groves, and flow'ry sales;
Thrice happy isles!
Milton.
She left the flow'ry field, and waving grove.
Blackmore.
Bann'd from courts and love,
Abandon'd truth seeks shelter in the grove.
Grandeau.
Can fierce passions vex his breast,
While every gale is peace, and every grove -
Is melody?
Thomson's Sprung.
To Grovel v. n. [grufide, Islandick, flat on the face. — may perhaps come by general corruption from ground fell.]
1. To lie prone; to creep low on the ground.
The steel-head passage wrought,
And through his shoulder pierc'd; wherewith to grovel.
He groveling fell, all gored in his gushing wound.
Spenser.
What see'st thou there? king Henry's daid Clem,
Inch'd with all the honours of the world!
If so, gase on, and grovel on thy face,
Until thy head be circled with the same. Shak.
Boils and hag; and cornell fruit they eate,
Groveling like swine on earth, in fowlest sort.
Chapman.
Now they lie
Groveling and prostrate on yon lake of fire.
Mil.
Upon thy belly groveling thou shalt go. Milton.
Let us then conclude that all painters ought to require this part of excellence: not to do it, is to want courage, and not dare to shew themselves
'tis to creep and grovel on the ground. Drieden.
2. To be mean; to be without dignity or elevation.
I do most disclaim whatsoever he can express;
His groveling sense will shew my passion less. Dry.
Several thoughts may be natural which are low and groveling. Addison's Spectator.
GROUND. n. s. [ground, Sax. ground, Dan.]
1. The earth considered as superficially extended, and therefore related to tillage, travel, habitation, or almost any activity. The minimum mass of terrane matter is never called the ground.
We never distinguish the terraqueous globe into ground and water, but into earth, or land, and water; again, we never say under ground, but under ground.
Israel shall go on dry ground through the sea.
Ex. xiv. 16.
Man to till the ground
None was, and from the earth a dewy mist
Went up, and water'd all the ground. Milton.
From the other hill
To their fix'd station, all in bright array,
The cherubin descended, on the ground
Gloiling meteorous.
A black, bitter-beggar
Boils up from under ground. Milton.
And ye so unkindly he would bound,
As he scorn'd to touch the ground. Hudibras.
2. The earth as distinguished from air and water.
I have made man and beast upon the ground.
Jeremiah.
There was a dew upon all the ground. Jude vi. 40.
They sman'd their wings, and soaring th' air
sulmine,
With clang despised the ground. Milton.
Too late young Turns the delusion found.
Far on the sea, still making from the ground.
Dry.
3. Land; country.
The water breaks its bounds,
And overflows the level grounds. Hudibras.
4. Region; territory.
He desired the steward to tell him particularly the ground and every instance of this accident. Sidney.

Making happiness the ground of his unhappiness and good news the argument of his sorrow. Sidney.

The use and benefit of good laws all that live under them maintain both life and comfort, albeit the grounds and first original causes from whence they have sprung be unknown. Hooker.

In the solution of the Sabbathet's objection, my method shall be concise, in the first place, the main grounds and principles upon which he buildeth. White.

Thou couldst not have discovered found in his being as he spake, No ground of enmity been as known. Milton.

Nor did either of them ever think fit to make any particular relation of the grounds of their proceedings, or the causes of their misadventures. Chaucer.

Sound judgment is the ground of writing well. Love once given from her, and placed in you, Would leave no ground I ever would be true. Dryden.

It is not easy to imagine how any such tradition could arise so early, and spread so universally, if there were not a real ground for it. Wallis.

Whilom, when these seas were green, There is some ground and reason for these fears, and that nature hath not planted them in us to no purpose. Tennyson.

Thus it appears, that suits at law are not sinful in themselves, but may lawfully be used, if there is no unlawfulness in the ground and way of management. Dryden.

Upon that prince's death, although the grounds of our quarrel with France had received no manner of addition, yet this lord thought fit to alter his sentiments. Swift.

The miraculous increase of the professors of Christianity was without any visible grounds and cause, and contrary to all human probability and appearance. Atterbury.

15. The field or place of action. There was the end decreed, when these men rose; And ev'n with theirs this act thy death did bring. Or hasten'd at the least upon this ground. Dante.

16. The space occupied by any army as they fight, advance, or retire. At length the left wing of the Aeolians began to lose ground. Sidney.

Heartless they fought, and quitted soon their ground. While our's with easy victory were crown'd. Dryden.

He has lost ground at the latter end of the day, by pursuing his point with force, like a despairing sinner, at the battle of Seneca. Dryden. Fables, Preface.

17. The intervening space between the flyer and pursuer. Ev'n mist, Rises from a river, over the marsh glides, And gathers ground fast at the labourer's heels, Homeward returning. Milton's Par. Lost.

Superior think it a detraction from their merit to see another get ground upon them, and overtake them in the pursuits of glory. Addison's Spectator.

Even whilst we speak our conqueror comes on, And gathers ground upon us every moment. Addison.

18. The state in which one is with respect to opponents or competitors. Had'st thou sward'd as kings should do, Giving no ground into the house of York. They never then knew how to dispute. Shak. Hen. VI.

If they yet ground and 'venture of the king, Then join you with them as a link of steel, To make them stronger. Shak. Henry IV.

He will stand his ground against all the attacks that can be made upon his probity. Atterbury.

Whatever ground we may have gotten upon our enemies we have gotten none upon our vices, the worst enemies of a man but those whom we subdue and led captive by the one, while we triumph so gloriously over the others. Atterbury.

19. State of progress or recession.

I have known so many great examples of this kind, and heard of its being so familiar in Austria, that I wonder it has gained no more ground in other places.

The squadron is perpetually the wheel in her cage: she runs space, and wearsies herself with her continual motion, and gets no ground. Dryd.

20. The full to set a thing off. Light bright metal on a sulken ground. My reformation glittering o'er my fault, Shall shew more goodly, and attract more eyes, Than that which hath no foil to set it off. Swift.

To Ground. n. u. [from the noun.]

1. To fix on the ground.
2. To found, as upon cause, reason, or principle.

Wisdorn groundeth her laws upon an infallible rule of comparison. Hooker.

The church of England, walking in the good and old way of the orthodox primitive fathers, groundeth the religious observation of the Lord's day, and of other Christian holidays, upon the natural equity, and not upon the letter of the fourth commandment. White.

It may serve us to ground conjectures more appertaining to the truth than we have hitherto met with. Pope.

If your own actions on your will you ground, Milton shall hereby know no other bound. Dryd.

Some eminent spirit having signalized his valour, becomes to have influence on the people, to grow their leader in warlike exploits; and this is grounded upon the principles of nature and common reason, which, where prudence and courage are required, rather invite us to fly to a single person than a multitude. Swift.

3. To settle in first principles or rudiments of knowledge.

Being rooted and grounded in those knowledge. Being rooted and grounded in love. Eph. iii. 17.

GROUND. The prettier and part, pass. of ground. He's full and rugged ere 'ts ground.

And polished, looks a diamond. Hudibras.

Ground is much used in composition for that which is next the ground, or near the ground.

GROUND-ASH. n. s. A saplin of ash taken from the ground; not a branch cut from a tree.

A lance of tough ground-ash the Trojan threw, Rough in the rind, and knotted as it grew. Dryd. Agam.

Some cut the young ashes off about an inch above the ground, which causes them to make very large straight shoots, which they call ground-ash. Mortimer's Husk.

GROUND-BAIT. n. t. [from ground and bait.] A bait made of barley or malt boiled; which, being thrown into the place where you design to angle, sinks to the bottom, and draws the fish to it.

Take the depth of the place where you mean after to cast your ground-bait, and to fish. Walton's Angler.

GROUND-FLOOR. n. s. [ground and floor.] The lower story of a house.

GROUND-IVY. n. s. [hedera terrestris, Lat.] Alehoof, or tunhoof.

Alehoof or ground-ivy is, in my opinion, of the most excellent use and virtue of any plants annual. Tropisc.

GROUND-OAK. n. s. [ground and oak.] If the planting of oaks were more in use for underwoods, it would spoil the cooper's trade for the making of hoops, either of basalt or ash; because one hoop made of the young shoots of a ground-oak, would outlast six of the best ash. Mortimer.

GROUND-PINE. n. s. [chamaepitys, Lat.] A plant.
The whole plant has a very singular smell, resembling that of resin; whence its name ground-page. It grows on dry and barren hills, and in some places on the ditch banks by road sides. The outermost pieces of timber lying on or near the ground, and framed into one another with mortises and tenons. In this way also their mortises made to receive the tenons of the joists, the summer and girders; and sometimes the trimmers for the stair-case and chimney-way, and the binding joint. Harris.

In the orthogonal schemes there should be a true duplication, if it be a timber building, of the several sizes of the ground plates, beam sum- and beams. Mortimer.

1. The ground on which any building is placed. Wretched Gyneca, where canst thou find any small ground-plot for hope to dwell upon? Sidney.

2. The inclosure of a building. Rent paid for the privilege of building on another's ground. A foot in front, and thirty-three five-sevenths deep, would bring in a ground-rent of five pounds. Arbucott on Coins.

3. Upon firm principles. He had given the first hint of speaking ground-edly, and to the purpose, upon this subject. Glane.

5. Without reason; without cause; without just reason. Have they not produced the like by spirit of vitriol, or juice of lemons; but have groundlessly ascribed the effect to some particular quality of the liquor. Freethinker.

6. Want of just reason. You must not cite the words either of my book or sermons, lest the reader should have discovered the notorious falsehood and groundlessness of your calumny. Tillotson.

7. A fish which keeps at the bottom of the water: hence one of the low vulgar. Hammer.

8. That purges off. Sweet honey some condense, some purge the grave. The honey falls apart, the liquid nectar shott. Dryden.

GRO

GROWER. n.s. [from grow.] An increaser.

It will grow to a great bigness, being the quickest grower of any kind of chin

Grovener. n. [from grow.]...

To Growl. v. n. [groden, Flem.]...

1. To snafe or murmur like an angry cur.
2. To murmur; to grumble.

To Grub. n. s. [from grubbing, or mining.]

1. A small worm that eats holes in bodies.

The Grose is a desert between a grub and a butterfly, and yet your butterfly was a grub.

To Grub. v. n. [graban, preter. grób to dig, Gothic.] To dig up; to destroy by digging; to root out of the ground; to eradicate by throwing up out of the soil.

A foolish相邻 caused all the bushes and hedges about his vineyard to be grubbed up. L’Enrage.

From whence the surly ploughman grubs the wood.

The grubbing up of woods and trees may be very needful, upon the account of their unprofitableness.

Minister.

As for the thick woods, which not only Virgil but Homer mentions, they are most of them grubbed up, since the promontory has been cultivated and inhabited.

Addison on Italy.

To Grub. v. n. [graban, preter. grób to dig, Gothic.] To dig up; to destroy

by digging; to root out of the ground; to eradicate by throwing up out of the soil.

A foolish相邻 caused all the bushes and hedges about his vineyard to be grubbed up. L’Enrage.

From whence the surly ploughman grubs the wood.

The grubbing up of woods and trees may be very needful, upon the account of their unprofitableness.

Minister.

As for the thick woods, which not only Virgil but Homer mentions, they are most of them grubbed up, since the promontory has been cultivated and inhabited.

Addison on Italy.

1. A small worm that eats holes in bodies.

The difference between a grub and a butterfly, and yet your butterfly was a grub.

New creatures rise,

A moving mass at first, and short of limbs;

’Till shooting out with legs, and imp’d with wings,

The grub proceeds to bees with pointed stings.

Shakespeare.

1. A short thick man; a dwarf.

In contempt.

John Romane, a short clownish grub, would bear the whole carcase of an ox, yet never tugged with him.

Coren.

To Grumble. v. n. [grubelen, Germ. from grub.] To feel in the dark.

Thou hast a Laboratories.

Now let me row a grub and grumble thee:

Blind men say white feels smooth, and black feels rough:

Thou hast an rugged skin; I do not like thee.

To Grubstreet. n. s. Originally the name of a street, near Moorfields in London, much inhabited by writers of small histories, dictionaries, and temporary poems; whence any mean production is called grubstreet.

Xal: ñagw µi žada, µi žagwa nga Astarasia ti wóo iñiñoma.

The first part, though calculated only for the meridian of grubstreet, was yet taken notice of by the better sort, forest land. Awhath.

I’d songs ballads write, and grubstreet lays.

Guy.

To Grudge. v. a. [from gruper, according to Skinner, which in French is to grind or eat. In this sense we say of one who resents any thing secretly he cuts it. Grungeacht, in Welsh, is to murmur; to grumble. Grunitgh, in Scotland, denotes a grumbling morose countenance.]

1. To envy; to see any advantage of another with discontent.

What means this unhappiness from your counsels? Do you love your sorrow so well, as to grudge me part of it? Sidney.

’Tis not in thee

To grudge my pleasures, to cut off my train. Shak.

He struggles into birth, and cries for aid; then helpless in his mother’s lap is laid:

He creeps, he walks; and, issuing into man, Grudges his life from whence his own began.

Drodo.

These clamours with disdain he heard, Much grudg’d the praise, but more the rob’d reward.

Do not as some men, run upon the till, and taste of the sediments of a grudging uncommunicative disposition.

Spectator.

5 Q 849
Let us consider the inexhausted treasures of the oceans; and though some have grudged the great share that it takes of the earth, yet we shall propose this too, as a conspicuous mark and character of the wisdom of God.

Bentley.

2. To give or take unwillingly.

Let us at least a funeral marriage crave.

Dryden.

They have grudged those contributions, which have set our country at the head of all the governments of Europe.

Addison.

1. To murmur; to repine.

They knew the force of that dreadful curse,

When unto idolatry makketh subject; nor is there cause why the guilty sustaining the same should grudge or complain of injustice.

Hooker.

We do not grudge or repine at our portion, but are contented with those circumstances which the providence of God hath made to be our lot.

Nelson.

2. To be unwilling; to be reluctant.

Many times they go with as great grudging to serve in his Majesty's ships, as if they were to be slaves in the galleys.

Raleigh.

You steer betwixt the country and the court,

Not to gratify either the great desire, or the ancient grudge.

Dryden's Fables.

3. To be envious.

Grudge not one against another, brethren, lest ye be condemned.

James, v. 9.

4. To wish in secret. A low word.

Even in the most sincere advice he gave,

He had a grudging still to be a knave.

Dryden.

5. To give or have any uneasy remains.

I know not whether the word in this sense be not rather gruegeons, or remains; gruegeons being the part of corn that remains after the fine meal has passed the sieve.

My Delabella,

Hast thou not still some grudgings of thy fever?

Dryden.

GRUDGE. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. Old quarrel; invertebrate malevolence; sullen malice.

Many countries about her were full of wars, which, for old grudges to Corinthus, were thought still to concern him there.

Selden.

Two households, both alike in dignity,

From ancient grudge break to new mutiny,

Wherein the blood of each nourisheth the other.

Shakespeare.

Let me go in to see the generals;

There is some grudge between 'em; 'tis not meet they be alone.

Shakespeare, Julius Caesar.

Deep-fester'd hate!

A grudge in both, time out of mind, begun,

And mutinously bequeath'd from sire to son.

Tate.

2. Anger; ill-will.

The god of evil, to show his grudge,

Clapt ass's ears upon the judge.

Swift.

3. Unwillingness to benefit.

To those whom you have with grudgepr'd me.

Ben Jonson.

4. Envy; odium; invidious censure.

The grudge of those without.

Ainsworth.

5. Remorse of conscience.

Ainsworth.

6. Some little commotion, or orerunner of a disease.

Ainsworth.

GRUDGINGLY. adv. [from grudge.] Unwillingly; malignantly; reluctantly.

Like harpies they could scent a plentiful board;

Then to be sure they never fail'd their lord:

The rest was form, and bare attendance paid;

Then drank eat, and grudgingly obey'd.

Dryden.

GRUEL. n.s. [grana, gruelle, Fr.] Food made by boiling oatmeal in water; any kind of mixture made by boiling ingredients in water.

Finger of birth-strangl'd babe,

Ditch-deliver'd by a fish;

Make the gruel thick and slab.

Shakesp. Macbeth.

Was ever fair grace cruel.

The gruel of a surly fellow, or the gruel of a surly fellow.

Dryden.

Upon the strength of water gruel?

Prior.

Gruel made of grain, broth, malt drink not much hopped, posset-drinks, and in general what ever relatax.

Arbuthnot.

GRUFF. adj. [gruff, Dut.] Sour of aspect; harsh of manners.

Around the fend, in hideous order, sat

Foul bawling and bold dispute,

Gruff disdained, through ignorance misled.

Garr.

The appellation of honour was such an one the gruff, and one of the stocky.

Addison.

GRUFFLY. adv. [from gruff.] Harshly; roughly.

The form of Mars high on a chariot stood,

All shodden in arms, and gruffly look'd the god.

Dryden.

GRUFFNESS. n.s. [from gruff.] Ruggedness of men; harshness of look or voice.

Sour; surly; severe. A low word.

Nic looked sour and grum, and would not open his mouth.

Arbuthnot.

To GRUMBLE. v. n. [grummen, grumen, Dut.]

1. To murmur with discontent.

A bridge-groom,

An grumling,

And that the girl shall find.

Shakesp.

Thou grumblest and railest every hour on Achilles,

And thou art as full of envy at his greatness

As Cerberus is at Proserpina's beauty.

Shakesp.

Th' accurst Philistian stands on'th other side,

Grumbling aloud, and smiles 'twixt rage and pride.

Dryden.

Suitors, all but one, will depart grumbling,

Because they miss of what they think their due.

South.

Providence has allotted a man a competency; all beyond it is superfluous; and there will be grumbling without end, if we reckon that we want this, because we have it not.

L'Avarre, not using half his store,

Still grumbles that he has no more.

Prior.

3. To make a hoarse rattle.

Thou grumbling thunder join thy voice.

Maturin.

That gashes black upon the frowning sky,

And grumblings in the wind.

Cowley's Poems.

Dashes foul

Vapours foul

Dashes foul

Dashes foul.

Dryden.

The grumblings wave below.

Thomson's Winter.

GRUMBLER. n.s. [from grumble.] One that grumbles; a murmurer; a discontented man.

The half-pence are good half-pence, and I will stand by it; if I made them of silver, it would be the same thing to the grumbler.

Swift.

GRUMBING. n.s. [from grumble.] A murmuring through discontent; a grudge.

I have sord.

Without or grudge or grumblings.

Shakesp.

GRUME. n.s. [grumeau, Fr. grumus, Lat.] A thick viscous consistency of a fluid; as the white of an egg, or grated like cold blood.

Quincy.

GRUMLY. adv. [from grume.] Sullenly; morosely.

GRUMOUS. adj. [from grume.] Thick; cotted.
A prince distinguished by being a patron of Protestants, and guarantee of the Westminster treaty. Addison on the War. At each a promise made to God, and God is our superior, superior to kings. And he is also the guarantee and averger of all breaches of faith and justices. Lesley.

To GUARANTY. v. a. [garantir, Fr.] To undertake to secure the performance of any articles.

To GUARD. v. a. [garder, Fr. from our word ward, the w being changed by the French into g; as Gallies for Wales.] 1. To watch by way of defense and security. 2. To protect; to defend. Naked the graves guarded you from all dangers abroad, and now your thunder shall train. Your pow' you never use, but for defence. To guard your own or others innocence. Dryden. They're on defence, the Trojans are not slow. To guard their shore from an expected foe. Dryden. The port of Genoa is very ill guarded against the storms. Addison on Italy.

3. To preserve by caution. One would take care to guard one's self against this particular imperfection, because it is that which our nature very strongly inclines us to. Addison.

4. To provide against objections. Homer has guarded every circumstance with as much caution as if he had been made aware of the objection. Dryden. He shuns the suspicion of the unjust, and would not give himself the mortification of a check by the sophistical objections. Dryden. He guards against such mistakes, it is necessary to acquaint ourselves with a little Arabic. Collier.

GUARD. n. s. [garde, Fr. ward, Teuton.] 1. A man, or body of men, whose business is to watch by way of defense or protection. The guard bare them, and brought them into the guard chamber. 1 kings, iv. 33. Up into heav'n, from parapet, in haste. Th' angleick guards ascended, mute, and sad. For man. Milton's Paradise Lost. They miss'd courts, guards, a guard and minorous. Our judges like our laws were rude and plain. Cowley.

With lifted hands, and gazig eyes. His guards behold him soaring through the skies. Dryden.

He must be trusted to his own conduct, since there cannot always be a guard upon him, except what you put into his own mind by good principles. They, ascribing arbitrary power, had their guards and spies, after the practice of tyrants. Swift.

2. A state of caution; a state of vigilance. The great alteration which he made in the state ecclesiastical, caused him to stand upon his guard at home. Davies. Tenuity puts a man off his guard. L' Estrange. It is wisdom to keep ourselves upon our guard. L'Estrange.

Now he stood collected and prepar'd for action and revenge had put him on his guard. Dryden.

Others are coopered in close by the strict guards of whose interest it is to keep them ignorant. Locke.

Men are always upon their guard against an appearance of danger. Smollett.

3. Limitation; anticipation of objection; caution of expression. They have expressed themselves with as few guards and restrictions as 1. Atterbury.

4. A defensive arm, lance, or border. Obsolete.

5. Part of the hilt of a sword. GUARDAGE. n. s. [from guard.] State of wardship. Obsolete. A maid so tender, fair and happy, Run from her guardeage to the sweetest bosom. Smollett. Of such a thing as that, Othello.

GUARDER. n. s. One who guards. Ainsworth.

GUARDIAN. n. s. [gardien, Fr. from guard.] 1. One that has the care of an orphan; one who is to supply the want of parents. I am sorry for her, as I have just cause, being her uncle and her guardian. Shakspe. Much ado. When perij'guardians, proud with impious gains, Choose up the streets, too narrow for their trains! Shakspe. Hoces, with two other of the guardians, thought it their duty to take care of the interest of the three girls. Arbuthnot.

2. One to whom the care and preservation of any thing is committed. I gave you all, Made you my guardians, my depositaries; But kept a reservation to be follow'd With such a number. Shakspe. King Lear. It then becomes the common concern of all that have truth at heart, and more especially of those who are the appointed guardians of the Christian faith, to be upon the watch against seducers. Water. Arbuthnot.

GUARDIAN of the Spiritualities. He to whom the spiritual jurisdiction of any diocese is committed, during the vacancy of the see. He may be either guardian in law, or juris magnificatricis, as the archbishop is of any diocese within his province; or guardian by delegation, as he whom the archbishop or vicar-general doth for the time depute. Cowel.

GUARDIAN. adj. Performing the office of a kind protector or supervisor. My charming patroness imprints me unseen, Like my guardian angel; and shews my gratitude like a fairy, who is wont to steal, and encroaches the giver when she bestows the gift. Dryden. You shall mark how this garden care engage, The promis'd father of the future age. Pope.

Mean while Minerva, in her guardian care, Shoots from the starry raults through fields of air. Pope.

GUARDIANSHIP. n. s. [from guardian.] The office of a guardian. The cerae stretched his patron for the cure of souls, to a kind of tutelary guardianship over goods and chattels. L'Estrange. This holds true, not only in losses and indignities offered to ourselves, but also in the case of trust, when they are offered to others who are committed to our care and guardianship. Keatewell.

Theseus is the first who established the popular state in Athens, assigning to himself the guardianship of the laws, and chief commands in war. Swift.

GUARDLESS. adj. [from guard.] Without defence.
To GUERGUELE, r. n. [gorgoliare, Ital.] To sound as water running with intermissions out of a strainer'd vessel.

GUIDAGE, n. s. [from guide.] The reward given to a guide. Ainsworth.

GUIDANCE, n. s. [from guide.] Direction; government.

They charge me with neglecting the guidance of his own. Decker.

As to those who live under the guidance of reason alone, without the assistance of supernatural light, it is highly probable that miracles, or a message from the dead, would persuade them. Athrb.

Particular application must be left to Christian prudence, under the guidance of God's holy spirit, who knows our necessity before we ask, and our ignorance in asking. Locke.

This to the young—bat thy experience and knowledge. Wints. To the guidance of a former sage. Sestell. A prince ought not to be under the guidance or influence of either faction, because he declines from his office of presiding over the whole to be the head of a party. Swift.

To GUIDE, v. a. [from fr.]

1. To direct in a way.

When the spirit of truth is come, he will guide you into all truth. Luke, xx. 17.

The new laws were to guide them to their neighbours cotiers. Decay of Piety.

Wonzoever with a faithful guide to guide him in the dark passages of life, may carry his eyes in another man's head, and yet are never the worse. South.

2. To influence.

Upon these, though so secular maxims, when nothing but the interest of this world guides men, they many times conclude that the slightest wrongs are not to be put up.

To govern by counsel; to instruct.

For thy name's sake lead me and guide me. Ps. xxxii. 3.

3. To regulate; to superintend.

Women neglect that which St. Paul assigns them as their proper business, the guidance of the house. Decay of Piety.

GUIDE, n. s. [guile, Fr. the verb.]

1. One who directs another in his way.

Then gavest thou a burning pillar of fire to be a guide of the wandering journey. Exod. vii. 3.

Can knowledge have no bound, but must ad.

Can so far to make us wish for ignorance? [Vance.

And rather in the dark to go right, than, led by a false guide, err by day? Desham.

2. One who directs another in his conduct.

While yet but young, his father dy'd;

And left him to an happy guide. Waller.

They have all the same pastoral guide and apponted, authorised, sanctioned, and set apart by the appointment of God by the direction of the spirit, to direct and lead the people of God in the same way of eternal salvation. Pearson.

3. Director; regulator.

Who guide the nature of men, but the God of nature? In him we live and move, and are. Those things which nature is said to do, are by divine art performed, using nature as an instrument, not in the least any such knowledge divined in nature herself working, but in the guide of nature's work. Hooker.

Says ethics are not by reason to be tried, But we have sure experience for our guide. Dryden.

GUIDELESS. adj. [from guide.] Having no guide; wanting a governor or superintendant.

Th' ambitious Swede, like restless billows toss, Though in his life he blood and ruin breath'd, To his now guideless kingdom peace beqagh'd. Dryden.

There fierce winds do bear dust clouds, Which guideless in those dark dominions stray. Dryden.

GUIDELESSLY. adv. [from guideless.] In a state of guideless; without a guide.

GUIDELESSNESS. n. s. [from guideless.] Secret treachery; trickery cunning.

GUIDELESSLY, adj. [from guideless.] Free from deceit; void of mischievousness: simply honest.

GUIN, n. s. [from guide.] Director; regulator; guide. obsolete. Our guide come! to the Roman camp conduct us. Shaksp.

This person, being provoked by excessive pain, thrusts his dagger into his body, and thereby, instead of reaching its vital, opened an imposthume, the unknown cause of all his pain, and so stung him into partial paralyse, rese, surely had good reason to acknowledge choice for his chirurgeon, and Providence for the guide of his life. South.

GUDTON, n. s. [Fr.] A standard-bearer; a standard. Obsolete.

GUIDL, n. s. [gild, Sax. a fellowship, a corporation.] A society; a corporation; a fraternity or company, combined together by orders and laws made among themselves by their prince's licence. Hence the common word gild or guildhall proceeds, being a fraternity or commonalty of men gathered into one combination, supporting their common charge by mutual contribution. Cowel.

Towards three or four o'clock.

Look for the news that the guild hall affairs. Shaksp R. III.

In woolen cloth it appears, by those ancient guilds that were settled in England for the manufact, that this kingdom greatly flourished in that art. Hale's Origin of Mankind.

As when the long-ear'd milky cows wait At some sick milk'er's three-bolted gate, For their defrauded absent females they make A moo so loud, that all the guild awake. Pope.

GUIGLE, n. s. [gylde, old Fr. the same with wilde.] Deceitful cunning; insidious artifice; mischievous subtlety. With fawning words he courted her awhile, And looking lovely, and oft sighing sore, Her constant heart did court with divers guile; But words and looks, and sighs she did abhor. Spenser.

When I have most need to employ a friend, Deep, hollow, treacherous, and full of guile.

Be he to me! This do I beg of heaven, When I am cold in zeal to you or yours. Shaksp.

We may, with more successful hope, resolve To wage by force or guile eternal war. Milton.

But nor his malice and false guile contemn: Subtle he needs must be who could seduce Angels. Milton's Paradise Lost.

GUIGLEFULLY, adj. [guigle and full.] Wily; insidious; mischievously artful.

The way not to be inveigled by them that are so guileful through skill, is thoroughly to be instructed in that which maketh skillful against guide. Hooker.

Without expense at all.

By guileful fair words, peace may be obtained. Shaksp. Henry VI.

He saw his guileful act

By Eve, those: unawake, unawakened

Upon her husband. Milton's Paradise Lost.

The guileful phantom now forsook the shroud,

And flew sublime, and vanished dad away.

Dryden's En.

2. Treacherous; secretly mischievous.

I train'd thy brethren to that guileful hide,

Where the dead corps of Basillius lay. Shaksp.

GUIGLEFULLY, adv. [from guiglefull.] Insidiously; treacherously.

To whom the temper guilefully privily reply'd. Milt.

GUIGLEFULNESS. n. s. [from guileful.] Secret treachery; trickery cunning.

GUIGLELESSLY, adj. [from guile.] Free from deceit; void of mischievousness: simply honest.
GUILTY

Guilt. n. s. [from guile. See BEGUILE.] One that betrays into danger by insidious practices. But he was wise in all his ways, and well perceived his deceitful sleight; he suffered less his safety to betray; so goodly did beguile the guller of the prey. Spenser.

GUILT. n. s. [χαίρε, Sax. originally signified the fine or malut paid for an offence, and afterward the offence itself.]

1. The state of a man justly charged with a crime; the contrary to innocence.

It was neither guilt of crime, nor reason of state, that could quench the envy that was upon the king for this execution. Bacon's Henry VII. When these two are taken away, the possibility of guilt, and the possibility of innocence, what restraint can the belief of the creed lay upon any man? Hammond on Fundamentals.

2. A crime; an offence.

Close pent up guilt in your confining cell, and ask these dreadful sinners grace. Shakesp.

GUILTYLY. adv. [from guilty.] Without innocence; without clearance of conscience.

Bloodly and guilty; guilty awake, And in a baby's day; Think on lord Hastings, and despair, and die. Shakesp. Richard III.

GUILTLESS. adj. [from guilt.] Innocent; free from crime.

I am in this commanded to deliver The noble duke of Clarence to your hands: I will not reason what is meaneth hereby, Because I will be guiltless of the meaning. Shakesp.

Many worthy and chaste dances thus, All guiltless, meet protraction. Shakesp. Othello.

Then shall the man be guiltless from iniquity, and every woman shall bear her iniquity. Num. vi. 51.

Thou, who dost all thou wishest at thy will, and never wiltiest but what is right, Preserve this guiltless blood they seek to spil; Thine be my kingdom. Fairly.

Guiltless of greatness, thus he always pray'd, Nor knew nor wish'd he that those eyes he

On his own head should be at last repaid. Dryd. The teeming earth yet guiltless of the plough, And unprofessed'd fruitful stores allow. Dryd. Thou know'st how guiltless first I met thy flame, When love approach'd me under friendship's name. Pope.

GUILTLESSLY. adv. [from guiltless.] Without guilt; innocently.

GUILTLESSNESS. n. s. [from guiltless.] Innocence; freedom from crime. A good number of skill to their number more than to their valour, and valuing money higher than equity, felt that guiltlessness is not always with equal virtue. Sidney. I would not have had any hand in his death, or whose guiltlessness I was better assured than any man living could be. King Charles.

GUILTY. adj. [δίχαι, Sax. one condemned to pay a fine for an offence.]

1. Justly chargeable with a crime; not innocent.

Is there not a ballad of the king and the beggar? The world was guilty of such a ballad some three ages since. Shakesp. Love's Labour Lost.

Mark you how that the guilty kindred of the queen Look'd pale, when they did hear of Clarence. Shaksp.

We are very guilty concerning our brother, in that we saw the anguish of his soul when he beheld us, and we would not hear. Gen. xlii. 21.

With mortal hatred I pursued his life. Nor be, nor you, were guilty of the strife; Nor I, but as I lov'd do yet all combin'd, Your beauty and my iniquity of mind. Dryd.

Farewell the stones, and thresholds, guilty of my midnight moans. Dryd.

There no man that knoweth w NBC grieved, but is guiltless to himself; and there is no man, that carries guilt about him, but he receives a sting into his soul. Tilton.

Wicked; corrupt.

All the tumult of a guilty world, Tost by ungenious passion, sinks away. Thomson.

GUNEA. n. s. [from Guinea, a country in Africa, abounding with gold.] A gold coin valued at one and twenty shillings.

By the word gold I must be understood to design a particular piece of matter; that is, the last guinea that was coined. Locke.

Ladies, whose souls are constant in the wind, Cis, who prefer a guinea to mankind. Young.

GUNNADEPDRAPER. n. s. [guinea and drop.] One who cheats by dropping guineas.

Who now the guinea drap'er's bad regard, Trick'd by the sharper's dice, or juggler's cards. Gay.

GUNNEHNN. n. s. A fowl, supposed to be of Guinea.

GUNNEPEPER. n. s. [capiscum, Lat.] A plant.

GUNNEPI. n. s. A small animal with a pig's snout, brought, I believe, from Africa.

GUSE. n. s. [The same with wise, guise, Fr. prire, Sax. the p. or w. being changed, as is common, into g.]

1. Manner; men; habit; cast of behaviour.

His own sire, and master of his guise, Did often tremble at his lord's view. Spenser.

Thou dost so love thy guise, and thus use the guise, T' enchant the valiant and beguile the wise. Fairly.

Lo! you here she comes: this is her very guise; and, upon my life, fast asleep: observe her, stand close. Shakesp. Macbeth.

They stand a horrid front Of dreadful length, and dazzling arms, in guise of warriors old, with order'd spear and shield, Awaiting what command their mighty chief Had to impose. Milton's Paradise Lost.

By their guise Just men they seem, and all their study bent To worship God a-right. Milton's Paradise Lost.

Black, sheep-herders, lock; Here be without duck or nod, Other trappings to be told, Of lighter toes and such court guise. At Mercury did first devise. Milton.

Their external shapes are wonderfully accommodated to that law or guise of life that nature has designed. More.

2. Practice; custom; property.

I have drunk wine past my usual guise; Strong wine commands the fiddle, and moves the wire. Chapman.

This would not be slept; Old guise must be kept. Ben Jonson.

The swain reply'd, it never was your guise; To slight the poor, or aught humane descive. Pope.

Gulf. n. s. [from голо, Ital.] A little gullet. Skin.

Gules. adj. [perhaps from guile the throat.] Red; a barbarous term of heraldry. Follow thy dream.

With man's blood's cup to the ground: guile, guiles; Religious canons, civil laws are cruel; Then what should war be? Shakesp. Timon.

He whose safe arms, Black as his purpose, did the knight resemble, When he laid couched in the omnious horse, Fathoms his dread and darkened head. Shaksp. With heraldry more dismal, head to foot, Now he is total gules. Shakesp.

GULF. n. s. [golfo, Ital.]

1. A bay; an opening into land. The Venetian admiral withdrew himself farther off from the island Corfu, into the gulf of the Adriatic.

2. An abyss; an unmeasurable depth. Thee turning back, in silence soft they stole, And brought the heavy corse with easy pace To yawning gulf of deep Avernus' side. Spens.

Then thought 'd rather follow thine enemy in a fiery gulf, Than flatter bin in a bow'er. Shakesp.

This is the gulf through which Virgil's Aeneid shoots herself into hell: the fall of waters, the woods that encompass it, are all in the description. Addison.

The sea could not be much narrower than it is, without a great loss to the world; and must we now have an ocean of mere flats and shallows, to the utter ruin of navigation, for fear our ships should run giddy as the navigation of gaping abysses and unpassable guls? Bentley.

3. A whirlpool; a sucking eddy. England his approaches makes as fierce As water to the sucking of a gulf, Shaksp.

4. Any thing insatiable, as the mouth or stomach.

Soul of dragon, tooth of wolf, Witches mummy; man and gulf (If the ravens' salt sea chalk; Root of hemlock, dlig'd i' th' dark. Shakesp.

GULFY. adj. [from gulf.] Full of gulls or whirlpools; voracious.

Rivers arise: whether thou be the son Of utmost Tweed, or Ouse, or gulfie Dun. Milton. At their native realms the Greeks arriv'd, All who the war of ten long years survive'd, And escap'd the perils of the gulf and main. Pope. High'er or a gulfie sea's purs'd the Phrenic like. Fronts the deep roar of disemboing Nile. Pope.

To GULF. v. a. [guller to cheat, old Fr.] To trick; to cheat; to defraud; to deceive.

If I do not gull him into a try word, and make him a common recreation, or think I have it wise enough to lie straight in my bed, Shakesp.

Yet love these sort lies did remove, and move Thee to gull thin other master for my love. Donne.

He would have gull'd him with a trick, But fort was too too politic. Utriusq. They are not to be gull'd twice with the same trick. L'Enrave.
GUI

The Roman people were greatly galled twice or thrice over, and as often enslaved in one century, and under the same pretence of reformation. Dryden.

By their disloyal leaders taught,
The vulgar, gull'd into rebellion, ar'd. Dryden.

For this advantage age from youth has won, As a bear holds a monkey, though out-done; By fortune he was now to Venus tri'd, and with stern Mars in Capricorn was join'd: Of him disguising in his own abode, he sooth'd the goddess, while he gull'd the god.

GULL. n.s. [from the verb.] 1. [Mergus.] A sea-bird.
2. [Goolie.] A thief; a fraud; a trick.

I shall think this a gull, but that the white-bearded fellow speaks it. Shaksp. Much Ado.

Either they have these excellencies they are prais'd for, or they have not; if they have not, tis an apparent cheat and gulf. Govern. Of the Tong.

3. A stupid animal; one easily cheated.

Beciding by us you us'd us so, As that ungentle gull, the cockbird, used the lapron. Shaksp. Henry IV.

Why have you suffered me to be imprison'd, kept in a dark house, visited by the priest, and by the most notorious gull, and such; that e'er invention plead on. Shaksp. Twelfth N. That polite story is untrue.

GULL-CATCHER. n.s. [gull and catch.] A cheat; a man of trick; one who catches silly people. Here comes my noble gullatcher. Shaksp.

GULLER. n.s. [from gull.] A cheat; an impostor.

GULLERY. n.s. [from gull.] Cheat; imposture.

Gullet. n.s. [goulet, Fr. gula, Lat.] 1. The throat; the passage through which the food passes; the meat-pipe; the oesophagus.

It might be his doom.

One day to sing
With gullet in string.
With such a gullet or feeding channel which have no lungs or windpipes; as fishes which have gills, whereby the heart is refrigerated; for such there's as have lungs and respiration are not without wizzon, as whales and cætacous animals. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

2. A small stream or lake. Not in use.

Nature has various tender muscles placed, by which the artful gullet is embraced. Blackmore.

The liquid in the stomach is a compound of that which is separated from its inward coat, the spirit which is swallowed, and the liquor which distils from the gullet. Arbuthnot.

The Euxine sea and the Mediterranean, small gullets, if compared with the ocean. Brayton.

To Gully. v. n. [corrupted from gargle.]
To run with noise.

GUULLYHOLE. n.s. [from gully and hole.]
The hole where the gutters empty themselves in the subterraneous sewer.

GUULLYHOLES. n.s. [gulus, Lat.] Greediness; glutony; voracity.

They are very temperate, seldom feeding in ebriety, nor erring in gluttony, or superfluity of meat. Dryden.

To Gulp. v. a. [golpen, Dut.] To swallow eagerly; to sink down without intermission.

He looses the fish, guls'it down, and so soon as ever the morsel was gone washes his mouth. L'Estr.

I see the double fangs charge their hand; See them puff off the froth, and gulf aain; While with dry tongue I lick my lips in vain. Gay.

Gulp. n.s. [from the verb.] As much as can be swallowed at once.

In deep suspirations we take more large gulps of air to cool our heart, overcharged with love and sorrow. More.

As oft as he can catch a gull of air, and peep above the seas, he names the fair. Dryden.

GUM. n.s. [gummi, Lat.]
1. A vegetable substance differing from a resin, in being more viscid and less friable, and generally dissolving in aqueous menstruums; whereas resins, being more sulphurous, require a spirituous dissolvent. Quincy.

One whose eyes, albeit unused to the melting mood, drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees their medicinal gum. Shaksp. Othello.

He ripens spices, fruit, and precious gums, which from remotest regions hither come. Waller.

Who bore the vessels that holy rites require, Incense, and od'rous gums, and cover'd fire. Dryden.

To GUM. v. a. [from the noun.] To cover with gum; to smear with gum.

The eyelids are apt to be gummed together with a vicious humour. Wiuen's Surgery.

Gumminess. n.s. [from gummy.] The state of being gummy; the accumulation of gum.

The teardrops are involved with great gumminess and collection of matter. Wiuen's Surgery.

Gummous. adj. [from gum.] Of the nature of gum; gumminess.

Sugar and honey make windy liquor, and the elastic fermenting particles are detained by their innate gumminess. Hogger.

Gummed. adj. [from gum.] The nature of gum.

Observations concerning English amber, and relations about the amber of Russia, prove that amber is not a gummous or resinous substance drawn out of trees by the sun's heat, but a natural fossil. Woodward.

Gummy. adj. [from gum.]
1. Consisting of gum; of the nature of gum.

From the utmost end of the head branches there issue out a gummy juice, which hangeth downward like a cord. Raleigh.

Nor all the gummy stores Arabia yields. Dryden.

How each striking alder now appears, and o'er the Po distils her gummy tears. Dryden.

2. Productive of gum.

The cloud the lightnings; whose thwart flame driv'n down, Kinds the gummy bark of fir and pine. Milton.

To Gummulate. v. a. [from gummy and late Latin.]

The yawning youth, scarce half awake, essays his lazy limbs and dozy head to raise; There his gummy eyes, and scrubs his pate. Dryden.

GUN. n.s. [Of this word there is no satisfactory etymology. Mr. Lyce observes that gun in Iceland signifies battle: but when guns came into use we had no commerce with Iceland. May gun not come by gradual corruption from caune, ganne, guene? Caune is the original of cannon. The general name for fire-arms; the instrument from which shot is discharged by fire.

These dread curses, like the sun 'gainst glass, Or like an overcharged gun, recoil And run upon thy heart, O tyrant! Shaksp. Henry VI.

The emperor, smiling, said that never emperor was yet slain with a gun. Knott's History.

The bullet flying, makes the gun recoil. Ciceron.

In vain the dart or glittering sword we shin, Condemn'd to perish by the slaying ring gun. Gran.

Gunnell. n.s. [corrupted from gunwale.]
See Gunwale.

Gunner. n.s. [from gun.] Cannonier; he whose employment is to manage the artillery in a ship.
The nimble gunner
With lynxstow now the devilish cannon touches, And down goes all before him. Shaksp. Henry V.

They slew the principal gunners, and carried away their artillery. Hayward.

Gunnerly. n.s. [from gunner.] The science of artillery; the art of managing cannon.

Gunpowder. n.s. [gun and powder.]
The powder put into guns to be fired. It consists of about fifteen parts of nitre, three parts of sulphur, and two of charcoal. The proportions are not exactly known.

Gunpowder consists of three ingredients, salpetre, small coal, and brimstone. Brown's Full. Er.

By burning gunpowder frequently happens as sea. Wiuen.

Gunshot. n.s. [gun and shot.]
The reach or range of a gun; the space to which a shot can be thrown.

Those who are come to the royal party are supposed to be out of gunshot. Dryden.

Gunshot. adj. Made by the shot of a gun.
The symptoms I have translated to gunshot wounds.

Gunsmith. n.s. [gun and smith.]
A man whose trade is to make guns. It is of particular esteem with the gunsmiths for stocks.

Gunstock. n.s. [gun and stock.]
The wood to which the barrel of the gun is fixed.

The timber is used for bows, pulleys, screws, nails, and gunstocks. Mortimer's Husbandry.

Gunstone. n.s. [gun and stone.]
The shot of cannon. They used formerly to shoot stones from artillery.

Tell the pleasant prince, this mock of his Hath turn'd his ball to gunstone, and his soul Shall stand ares chamber for the wasteful vengeance That shall fly with them. Shaksp. Henry V.

Gunwale, or Gunnel of a Ship. n.s.
The piece of timber which reaches on either side of the ship from the half deck to the fore-castle, being the uppermost bend which finishteth the upper works of the hull in that part, and wherein they put the stanchions which support the waste tree; and this is called the gunwale, whether there be guns in the ship or no; and the lower part of any port, where any ordnance is, are termed the gunwale. Harris.

Gur. n.s. [gurges, Lat.] Whirlpool; gulf.
GUS

Marching from Eden he shall find
The plain, wherein a black bituminous gargoyle, Bails out under ground. Milton's, Paradise Lost.

GURGION. n. s. The conser of the part, the meal, sifted from the bran.

To GURGLE, v. n. [gorgolare, Ita.] To fall or gush with noise, as water from a bottle.

Then when a fountain's gurgling waters play,
They run on the land, and end in the clefts of the earth.
Pipe gurgling rills the long desire distant,
And waste their music on the savage race. Young.

GURNARD. n. s. [gournaal, Fr.] A kind

To GURNEY, v. n. [gostelen, Dut.] To flow or rush out with violence; not to spring in a small stream, but in a larger body.

A sea of blood gush'd from the gaping wound,
That her gay garments stain'd with filthy gore.

The covering of this abyss was broken asunder,
And the water gushed out that made the deluge.

Gurnet. A kind of sea-fish.

If he be not a soldier, I am a sowe'd gurnet; I have misuse'd the king's press damnable.
Shaksp. Henry IV.

2. To emit in a copious effluxion.
The gaping wound gush'd out a crimson flood.

Line after line my gushing eyes o'erflow,
Led through a sad variety of woe. Pope.

GUSH. n. s. [from the verb.] An emission of liquor in a large quantity at once; the liquor so emitted.

If a long vein be bursted, generally at the first cough a great gush of blood is cough'd out. Harvey.

GUSET. n. s. [gouset, Fr.] Any thing sewed on to cloth in order to strengthen it.

GUST. n. s. [goust, Fr. gustus, Lat.]

1. Sense of tasting.

Destroy all creatures for thy sport or gus,
Yet cry, if God's unjust, if thy god be gus,
Pope.

2. Height of perception; height of sensual enjoyment.

They fondly thinking to alay
Their appetite with gus, instead of fruit
Chew'd bitter ashes, which the opposed taste
With spattering noise rejected. Milton.

Where love is duty on the female side,
On theirs never sensual gus,
And sought with surly pride
Their sight, and smell, and hearing were employ'd,
And all three senses in full gus enjoy'd. Dryden.

GUST, n. s. [gustus, Lat.]

1. The relish of any thing; the power by which any thing excites sensations in the palate.

Pleasant gus't gratify the appetite of the luxurist. Denham.

2. Intellectual taste; liking.

In reading what I have written, let them bring no particular gust along with them. Dryden.

GUSTY. adj. [from gus't.] Stormy; tempestuous.

Once upon a raw and gus'ty day,
The troubled Tyber chafing with his shores.
Shaksp. Julius Caesar.
Or whirld'ntempestuous by the gusty wind. Thomas.

GUT. n. s. [kutteln, Germ.]

1. The long pipe reaching with many convolutions from the stomach to the vent.

This lord wears his wig in his belly, and his gut in his head. Shaksp. Troilus and Cressida.

A visor should have a lay of wire-stings below, close to the belly, and then the strings of gus mounted upon a bridge, that by this means the upper strings stricken should make the lower sound. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

The intestines or guts may be inflamed by any acrid or poisonous substance taken inwardly. Astobkat on Diet.

2. The stomach; the receptacle of food; provably.

And cram'd them 'till their guts did ache.
With candle, custard, and plum-cake. Hudibras.

With false tears their servants guts they cheat, And pinch their own to cover the deceit. Dryden.

3. Gluttony; love of gormandising.

Apicius, thou didst on thy guts bestow
Full ninety millions, yet, when they came,
Ten millions still remained to thee; which thou,
Fearing to suffer thirst and famishment,
In poison'd potion drankst. Holin. on Prvdol. To GUT, v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To eviscerate; to draw; to exenterate.

The fishermen save the most part of their fish: some are gutted, split, powdered, and dried. Carew's Cornwall.

2. To plunder of contents.

In Nero's arbitrary time,
When virtue was a guilt, and wealth a crime,
A crowd of cut-throat guards were sent to seiz
The rich men's goods, and gut their palaces. Dryd.

Tom Brown of facetious memory, having gutted a proper name of its vowels, used it as far as he pleased.
Addison.

GUTTED. adj. [from gutta, Lat. a drop.] Besprinkled with drops; be-dropped.

Diet. GUTTER. n. s. [from gutter a throat, Lat.]

1. A passage for water; a passage made by a gutter.

These gutter tiles are in length ten inches and a half.

Moren.

Rocks the one above another, and have deep gutters worn in the sides of them by torrents of rain.
Addison on Italy.

2. A small longitudinal hollow.

To GUTTER, v. a. [from the noun.] To cut in small hollows.

Tempests themselves, high seas, and howling winds,
The gutter'd rocks, and congregated sands,
That the tenderest keel, as having sense of beauty, shun;
And the divine Desdemona,
Shaksp. Othello.

My checks are gutter'd with my fretting tears.
Sandys.

First in a place, by nature close, they build
A narrow flooring, gutter'd, wall'd, and roof'd.
Dyld.

To GUTTLE, v. a. [from gut.] To feed luxuriously; to gormandise.

A low word.

His jolly brother, opposite to sense,
Laughs at his thrift; and, lavish of experience,
Quaffs, crams, and guttles in his own defence.
Dyld.

To GUTTLE, n. a. [from gut] To swallow.

A low word.
The foul spilt in his porridge, to try if they'd hit; they did not, and so he gutted them up, and scalced his chops.
L'Erstatg.

GUTTLER. n. s. [from gutter.] A greedy eater.

GUTTULOUS. adj. [from guttula, Lat.]

In the form of a small drop.

Ice is plain upon the surface of the water, but round in bulk, which is also a glaciation, and figured in its guttulous descent from the air.
Brown's Vulg. Err.

GUTTURAL. adj. [gutturialis, Lat.] Pronounced with the throat; belonging to the throat.

The Hebrews have assigned which letters are labial, which dental, and which gutturals, Bacon.

In attempting to pronounce the nasals, and some of the vowels spiritedly, the throat is brought to labour, and makes that which we call a guttural pronunciation.
Hiller.

GUTTURALNESS. n. s. [from guttural.]

The quality of being guttural.
Diet.

GUTWORT. n. s. [gut and wort.] An herb.

GUY. n. s. [from guide.] A rope used to lift any thing into the ship.
Skinner.

To GZZLELE. v. n. [from gut or gus, to gussle or gussle.] To gormandise; to feed immediately; to swallow any liquor greedily.

Well season'd bowel the gospell's spirits raise,
Who while she gusses casts the doctor's praise.
Rooke.

They fell to lapping and gussling, till they burst themselves.
L'Erstang.
GYM

No more her care shall fill the hollow tray,
To fat the grazing hogs with floods of whey. Gay.
To GYZZLE, v. a. To swallow with immoderate gust.
The Fyian king
Was longest lift of any two-leg'd thing, Still gzazzling must of wine. Dreden.
GUZZLER, n. s. [from gzazzle.] A gom-mander; an immoderate eater or drinker.
GYDE, n. s. [See Gibe.] A sneer; a taunt; a sarcasm.
Ready in gydes, quick answer'd, saucy, and as quarrelions as the weazed. Shaksp. Cymbeline.
To GYBE, v. n. To sneer; to taunt.
The vulgar yield an open ear, And common courtiers love to gyde and fece. Spen.
Gymnastically, adv. [from gymnastic.
] Athletically; tidy for strong exercise.
Such as with agility and vigour are not gymnastically composed, nor actively use those parts. Brown.
GYMNASTICALLY, adj. [from gymnastic.
] Pertaining to athletick exercise; consisting of leaping, wrestling, running, throwing the dart, or quoit.
The Cretans wisely forbid their servants gymnastics as well as arms; and yet your modern footmen exercise themselves daily, whilst their own served lords are solely lolling in their chariots.

GYMNICK, adj. [from gymnica; gymnique, Fr.] Such as practise the athletick or gymnastic exercises.

GYMNOPHONIOUS, adj. [gymnovus and ormiras.] Having the seeded nails.
GYNECECRACY, n. s. [gynnekecratia; ginneecrate, Fr.] Petticoat government; female power.

GYRATION, n. s. [gyro, Lat.] The act of turning any thing about.
This elliptive attentath and impelleth the neighbour air, which, returning home, in a gyration earlieth with it the obvious bodies into the chimney. Brown.
If a burning coal be quietly moved round in a circle with gymnions, continually repeated, the whole circle will appear like fire; the reason of which is, that the sensation of the coal in the several places of that circle remains impressed on the sensorium, until the coal return again to the same place. Neim.

Ahab's ear, who was the oracle of the coffeehouse, declared his opinion.

Gyre, n. s. [gyrus, Lat.] A circle described by any thing moving in an orbit,
Ne thenceforth his approved skill to ward, Or strike, or hurled round in warlike gyre.
Remember'd he; no 'card for his safe guard, But rudly rag'd.

GYV

Does the wild haggard tow'r to the sky,
And to the South by thy diminution fly?
Or eagle in her gyret the elonds embrace? Sandys.
He fashioned those harmonious orbs, that roll
In realms of love, and):|ed the Artick pole. Sandys.
Quick and more quick he spins in giddy gyret.
Then falls, and in much fume his soul expires.

Gyered, adj. Falling in rings.
Hamlet, with his doublet all unbracht,
No hat upon his head, his stockings loose.
Ungarter'd, and down gyred to his ankle. Shaksp.
GYVES, n. s. [gryvyn, Welsh.] Fetters; chains for the legs.
The villains march wide betwixt the legs, as if they had gyves on.

And knowing this, should I yet stay,
Like such as blow away their lives,
And never will redeem a day,
Emas'nd of their golden gyret? Ben Jonson.
The poor prisoners, boldly starting up, break off their chains and gyves. Knolles.
Gyres and the mill fad'nt thee. Milton.
But Temon rash'd in, and hap'y'd to meet
A rising root, that held his fastest feet:
So down he fell, whom spawning on the ground,
His brother from the wooden gyres unbound. Dryd.

To GYVE, v. a. [from the root, gyve.] To fetter; to shackle; to enchain; to ensnare.
With as little a web as this, will I ensnare as great a fly as Cassio. Ay, smile upon her, do. I will gyve thee in thine own courtship. Shaksp.

H.

HAB

H is in English, as in other languages,
A note of aspiration, sounding only
By a strong emission of the breath, without any conformation of the organs of speech, and is therefore by many gram-narians accounted no letter. The h in English is scarcely ever mute at the beginning of a word, or where it immediately precedes a vowel; as house, behaviour: where it is followed by a consonant it has no sound, according to the present pronunciation; but anciently, as now in Scotland, it made the syllable guttural; as right, bought.
Ha. interject. [ha, Lat.]
1. An expression of wonder, surprise, sudden question, or sudden exertion.
You shall look faireer ere I give or hazard,
What says the golden chest? ha! let me see. Shak.
Ha! what art thou! thou horrid headless trunk;
It is my Hastings! Rowe's Jane Shore.

2. An expression of laughter. Used with repetition.
He saith among the trumpets ha, ha, and be smeloth the battle air off. Job, xxxix. 55.
Ha, ha, 'tis what so long I wish'd and vow'd;
Our plots and delusions.
Have wrought such confusions,
That the monarch's a slave to the crown. Dryd.
HAAK, n. s. A fish. Ainsworth.
HAARBACUS, n. s. [haarbacus, Fr. halbergion, low Lat.] Armour to cover the neck and breast; breast-plate; neckpiece; gorget.
And haibert some, and some a haibergion;
So every one in arms was quiedy light. Fairf.
The shot let fly, and grasing
Upon his shoulder, in the passing,
Lod'd in Magniassus's bracc haibergion. Hadibras.
HABILIMENT, n. s. [habiliment, Fr.]
Dress; clothes; garment.
He the fairest Ura found,
Strange lady, in so strange habiliment,
Teaching the slyer, the fairy queen. Fairf.
My riches are these poor habiliments,
Of which if you should disfurnish me,
You take the sum and substance that I have. Shak.
The clergy should content themselves with wearing gowns and other habiliments of Irish orders. Swift.

To HABILITATE, v. n. [habilitare, L.]
To qualify; to entitle. Not in use.
Divers persons in the house of commons were attainted, and thereby not legal, nor habilite to serve in parliament, being disabled in the highest degree. Bacon.

HABILITATION, n. s. [from habilitate.
Qualification.
The things are but habilitations towards arms; and what is habilitation, without intention and act? Bacon.

H.

HABITABILITY, n. s. [habilité, Fr.] Faculty;
power: now ability.
HABIT, n. s. [habitus, Lat.]
2. Dress; accoutrement; garment.
I shifted
Into a madman's rags, I assume a semblance
The very dog a tind'rador; and in this habit
Met I my father. Shaksp.
If you have any justice, any pity,
I will be any thing but a good habit. Shaksp.
Both the poets being dressed in the same Enlish habit, story compared with story, judgment may be made betwixt them. Dryd.

The scene are old, the habits are the same.
We wore last year. Dryd.
Changes there are in weis of wit, like those of habit, or other modes. Temple.
There are among the statues several of Venus, in different habits. Addison on Italy.
The clergy are the only set of men who wear a distinct habit from others. Swift.

3. Habit is a power or ability in man of doing any thing, when it has been acquired by frequent doing the same thing.
Locke.
He hath a better bad habit of frowning than the count Pulante. Shaksp.

4. Custom; inveterate use.
The last fatal step is, by frequent repetition of the sinful act, to continue and persist in it, till at length old habits and cases into a habit of sin; which being that which the apostle calls the finishing of sin, ends certainly in death; death not only as to merit, but also as to actual infiunction. Scot.
Nor civil broils have since that death arise,
But faction now by habit doth obey;
And wars have that respect for his repose,
As winds for heloyces when they breed at sea.

Dryd.
H A B I T U A T I O N.

n. s. [Lat.] Dweller; one that lives in any place; inhabitant.

Not to earth are those bright luminaries
Officious; but to the earth's inhabitant
Milton.

For want of habitation, repair,
Dissolve to heaps of rains.
Denham.

HABITATION.

n. s. [habitation, Fr. habitations, Lat.] Dwelling; a place of a state receiving dwellers.

Amplitude almost immense, with stars
Numerous, and here and there a world of destitute habitation.
Milton.

Act of inhabiting; state of dwelling.

Palaces.
For want of habitation, and repair,
Denham.

HABITABILITATIO.

n. s. [Lat.] Dweller; inhabitant.

inhabit.

inhabit. 3. Place of abode; dwelling.

Wisdom, to the end she might save many, built her house of that nature which is common unto all; she made not this or that man her habitation, but dwelt in none.
Hooker.

God oft descends to visit men.
Unseen, and through their habitations walks.
Milton.

To mark their doings.
Milton.

H A C

Habitually, adj. [habitual from habit, Fr.] Customary; accustomed; inveterate; established by frequent repetition. It is used for both good and ill.

HABITUAL.

adj. [habitual from habit, Fr.]

Habitual.

Habitually, adv. [from habitual] Customarily; by habit.

Habitual.

Art is properly an habitual knowledge of certain rules and maxims.
South.

By length of time.

The fear is that of a highly comitted crime.
No spec is left of their habitual states; but the pure ether of the soul remains.
Dryden.

Life is habitable by an artist, without making your art habitual to you.
Dryden.

HABITUALLY.

adj. [habitual from habit, Fr.]

Habitual.

Habitually, adv. [from habitual] Customarily; by habit.

Habitual.

Internal graces and qualities of mind sanctify our natures, and render as habitual holy.
Atter.

Talbot.

Such as live in a rarer air are habituated to the exercise of a greater muscular strength.
Arbuthnot.

HABITAT.

n. s. [habitat, Lat. habitations, Fr.]

1. Relation; respect; state with regard to something else.

We cannot conclude this composition of nations from the vicinity or habitations they hold to the sun.
Brown.

The will of God is like a strait unalterable rule; and the various comportments of the creatures, either thwarting this rule, or holding conformity to it, occasions several habitations of this rule unto it.
South.

It results from the very nature of things, as they stand in such a certain habitations, or relation to one another.
South.

As by the objective part of perfect happiness we understand that which is best and last, and to which all other things are to be referred; so by the formal part we understand the best and last habitations of man toward that object.
Rolle.

In all the habitations of life,
The friends, the mistress, and the wife,
You still pursue.
Sope.

2. Familiarity; converse; frequent intercourse.

His knowledge in the noblest useful arts,
Was such dead authors could not give;
But habitations with those who live.
Dryden.

To write well, one must have frequent habitations with the best company.
Dryden.

3. Long custom; habit; inveterate use.

This is more properly habit.
Mankiad is willing to continue in a pleasing endeavor, strengthened by a long habitations.
Dryden.

Thy ear, inward to charitable sounds,
And pitying love, must feel the heartfelt wounds
Of jest obscene, and vulgar ribaldry,
The ill-bred question, and the fond reply,
Brought by long habitations from bad to worse.
Must hear the frequent oath, the direful curse.
Prior.

4. The power of doing any thing acquired by frequent repetition.

It is impossible to gain an exact habitations, without an infinite number of acts and perpetual practices.
Dryden.

H A B A D.

n. s. [habitation, Fr.]

habitation.

HAD.

The preterite and part. pass. of hare.
I had better, you had better, &c., means the same as, it would be better for me or you; or, it would be more eligible; it is always decisive and not indicatively; nor have ever used to that import.
We say likewise, it had been better or worse.
I had rather be a country servant mad, Than a great queen with this epithet.
Shak.

Had we not better leave this Ulicum?
To turn Nunudia in our cause?
Addison's Cato.

H A C K E N E Y.

n. s. [hackney, Welsh; hackeney, Teutonick; haquenée, Fr.]

1. A pacing horse.

A hired horse; hired horses being usually taught to pace, or recommended as good pacers.

Light and lewd persons were as easily subdued to make an afflatus for money, as post-horses and hackneys are taken to hire.
Bacon.

Who, mounted on a broom, the nag
And hackney of a lapland ling
To quest of you came hither post.
Huideria.

3. An hirerling; a prostitute.

With his accumulative and hackney tongue.
Rosc.

That is no more than every lover
Does for his hackney lady suffer.
Huideria.

Shall each spargula'd hackney of the day,
Or each new pinn'sc'd cyphon, pretend
To break your windows.
Bacon.

4. Any thing let out for hire.

A wit can study in the streets;
Not quite so well, however, as one ought;
A hackney coach may chance to spell a thought.
Rosc.

5. Much used; common.

These notions young students in physic derive Hawc.

To HACKNEY. v. a. [from the noun.] To practise in one thing; to accustom, as to the road.

He is long hackney'd in the ways of men.
Skill.

H a c q u e n t o. n. s. [hayquet, old Fr. a little horse.] Some piece of armour.

You may see the very fashion of the Irish horseman in his long horse, riding slices of costly cord-wain, his hackquent, and his haberczon.
Spencer.

HAD.

The preterite and pass. part. of hare.
I had better, you had better, &c., means the same as, it would be better for me or you; or, it would be more eligible; it is always decisive and not indicatively; nor have ever used to that import.
We say likewise, it had been better or worse.
I had rather be a country servant mad, Than a great queen with this epithet.
Shak.

Had we not better leave this Ulicum?
To turn Nunudia in our cause?
Addison's Cato.
HAL

HA'IRINESS. n. [from hairy.] The state of being covered with hair, or abounding with hair.

HAIRY. adj. [from hair.]
1. Overgrown with hair; covered with hair.
   Shakesp.
   Swift.

2. Consisting of hair.
   Bacon.

HA-KOT. n. s. [from hake.] A kind of fish.
   Carew.

HAL. in local names, is derived like al from the Sax. pealle, i.e. a hall, a palace.
   Gothick alh signifies a temple, or any other famous building.
   Grimm.

HALBERD. n. s. [halberde, Fr. halberd, Dut. from a hanke, and hale a court, halberds being the common weapons of courtiers.] A battle-axe fixed to a long pole.
   Adv. the halberd higher than my breast.
   Shak.
   Our halberds did shut up his passage.
   Shak.
   Their scales, and halberds covered with their poisonous ordnance.
   Dryden.

HALC'LYON. n. s. [halcyon, Lat.] A bird, of which it is said that she breeds in the sea, and that there is always a calm during her incubation.
   Such smiling roguery, as these, south every passion,
   Bring oil to fire, snow to their colder cords; and Renice, affirm, and turn their halcyon break.
   With every gale and vary of their masters.
   Shak.
   Amidst our arms as quiet you shall be,
   As halcyons brooding on a Winter sea.
   Dryden.

HALC'LYON. adj. [from the noun.] Placid; quiet; still; peaceful.
   When great Augustus made war’s tempest cease,
   His halcyon days brought forth the arts of peace.
   Dryden.

HALLE. Adj. [This should rather be written hail, from hail health.] Healthy; sound; hearty; well complexioned.
   My sleek sheep like well below,
   For they been haze enough I trow,
   And like their abode.
   Spenser.
   Some of these wise partizans concluded the government a good, and three or three hundred hail men, to be pillaged, if not executed, as the pretended captives.
   Addison.

HALLE. n. s. [hale, Dut. haler, Fr. To drag by force; to pull violently and rudely.
   Fly to your house;
   The plebeian have got your fellow tribune,
   And hate him up and down.
   Shakesp.

HALLE. n. s. [hale, Fr.]
1. A temple, Locke.
   Shakesp.
   Their temple-house of the gods.
   Spenser.

HALLE. n. s. [from hair, the hairy temples then had rounded With coroet of flowers.
   Shakesp.
   Children are not hairy, for that their skins are more perceptible.
   Bacon.

HALF. n. s. plural halves. [sealp, Sax. and all the Teutonick dialects. The t is often not sounded.]
1. A moiety; one part of two; an equal part.
   An half acre of land.
   So much as to give half of the property and how much half of the affections and half of the grandeur of a marriage.
   Shak.
   Many might be disposed to divide.
   Milton.
   The halfe of the wine, by which the题目 was expressed.
   Dryden.

HALF-BLOODED. adj. [half and blood.] Mean; degenerate.
   The let alone lies not in your good will.
   —No in thine, lord.
   Shakesp.

HALF-CAP. n. s. Can imperfectly put off, or faintly moved.
   With certain half caps and cold moving rods,
   They froze me into silence.
   Shakesp.

HALF-DEAL. n. s. [half and deal, Sax.] Part.
   Spenser.

HALF-FACED. adj. [half and faced.] Showing only part of the face; small faced; in contempt.
   Proud incroaching tyranny
   Burns with revenging fire, whose hopeful colours
   Advance a half-faced sun striving to shine.
   Shakesp.
   This same half-faced fellow, Shadow, give me
   Shakesp.

HALF-HATCHED. adj. [half and hatch.] Imperfectly hatched.
   Here, thick as hailstones pour,
   Turnips, and half-hatched eggs, a mingled show.
   Dryden.

HALF-HEARD. adj. [not heard to an end.]
   Not added years on my task could close;
   Back to thy native islands mightst thou sail,
   And leave half-heard the melancholy tale.
   Pope.

HALF-MOON. n. s.
1. The moon in its appearance when at half increase or decrease.
2. Any thing in the figure of a half moon.
   See how in warlike muster they appear,
   In thongs and wedges, and half-moons and wings.
   Milton.

HALF-PENY. n. s. plural half-pence. [half and peny.]
1. A copper coin, of which two make a halfpenny.
   Bardolph stole a late-case, bore it twelve leagues, and sold it for three halfpence.
   Shakesp.
   I thank you, and sure, dear friend, my thanks
   Are too dear of a half-penny.
   Shakesp.
   He cheats for half-penny, and he doth his coat
   To save a farthing in a farthing.
   Dryden.
   Never admit this pernicious coin, no, not so much as one single half-penny.
   Swift.

2. It has the force of an adjective conjointed with any thing of which it denotes the price.
   There shall be in England seven half-penny leaves sold for a penny.
   Shakesp.
   You will wonder how Wood could get his majesty’s broad seal for so great a sum of bad money, and that the nobility here could not obtain the same favour, and make our own half-pence as we used to do.
   Swift.

HALF-PIKE. n. s. [half and pike.]
The small pike carried by officers.
   The various ways of paying the salute with the half-pike.
   Teller.

HALF-PINT. n. s. [half and pint.] The fourth part of a quart.
   Our half-pint bottle serves them both to dine;
   And is at once their vinegar and wine.
   Pope.

HALF-SCHOLAR. n. s. One imperfectly learned.
   We have many half-scholars now-a-days, and there is much confusion in the notions and opinions of some persons.
   Watts.

HALF-SEAS OVER. A proverbial expression for any one far advanced. It is commonly used of one half drunk.
   I am half-seas over to death;
   And since I must die once, I would be both
   To make a double work of what’s halffinish’d.
   Dryden.
HALF-SIGHTED. adj. [half and sight.]
Seeing imperfectly; having weak discernment.

HALF-SHARE. n.s. [half and share.]
Hemisphere.
Let night grow blacker with thy toys; and day,
At shewing but thy head forth, start away.
From this half-share.
Ben Jonson.

HALF-FITTED. adj. [half and strain.]
Half-bred; imperfect.
I find I'm but a half-strain'd villain yet,
But mumgril-mischievous; for my blood ha'd
To view this brutal act.
Dryden.

HALF-SWORD. n.s. Close fight; within half the length of a sword.
I am rogue, if I were not at half-sword with a dozen of them two hours together.
Shakespeare.

HALF-WAY. adv. [half and way.]
In the middle.

HALF-WIT. n.s. [half and wit.]
A blockhead, fool, simple fellow.
Half-wits are Bees, so little and so light,
We scarce could know they live, but that they bite.
Dryden.

HALFWITTED. adj. [from half-wit.] Imperfectly furnished with understanding.
When half is added to any word noting personal qualities, it commonly notes contempt.
I would rather have trusted the refinement of our language, as to sound, to the judgment of the women than of half-wit poetry.

HALIBUT. n.s. A sort of fish, Ainsworth.

HALILIM. n.s. [jaliq and mass.] The feast of All-souls.
She came adorned bither like sweet May:
Sot' like halilim, or shortest day. Shakespeare.

HALITOUS. adj. [halitus, Lat.] Vaporous; famous.
We speak of the atmosphere as of a peculiar thin and halituous liquor, much lighter than spirit of wine.

HALL. n.s. [jail, Sax. halle, Dut.]
1. A court of justice; as Westminster Hall.
O lost too soon in yonder house or hall. Pope.
2. A manour-house so called, because in it were held courts for the tenants.
Captain Sentry, my master's nephew, has taken possession of the hall house, and the whole estate.

HALLELUJAH. n.s. [הַלְּעָלְיוֹן] Praise ye the Lord. A song of thanksgiving.

HALF.
Then shall thy saints
Unfain'd hal-le-luj'ah to Thee sing.
Milton.

Hymns of high praise.

HALLO. v.n. [halter, Fr.]
1. To cry as after the dogs.
A cry more tauntable
Was never hall-on'd to, nor cheer'd with horn.
Shakespeare.
2. To treat as in contempt.
Country folks halloed and boated after me, as the armyward coward that ever show'd his shoulders to his enemy.
Sidney.

To HALLO. v.n. a.
1. To encourage with shouts.
If, whilst a boy, Jack ran from school,
Fond of his handsome milk-white pole,
Hallo casts to his, or rather his own soul.
Shakespeare.
2. To chase with shouts.
If I fly, Marcus
Halloo me like a hare.
Shakespeare.
3. To call or shout to.
When we have found the king, he first lights on him,
Halloo the other.
Shakespeare.

To HALLON. v.n. a. [jalgan, jalg, Sax. holy.]
1. To consecrate; to make holy.
When we sanctify or hallow churches, it is only to testify that we make them places of public resort; that we invest God himself with them, and that we sever them from common uses.
Hooker.
It cannot be endured to hear a man profess that he putteth fire to his neighbour's house, but yet so hallows it with the same word, that he saith it shall not burn.
Hooker.
Is't Cade that I'll shin': that monstrous traitor?
'Lord, I will hallow thee for this thou deceasest,
And from thee o'er my tomb, when I am dead,
Shakespeare.

My prayers
Are not words duly hallowed, nor my wishes;
More worth than vanities: yet prey'ss and wishes
Are all I can return.
Shakespeare.

God from work
Now resting, bless'd and hallowed the seventh day,
As resting on that day from all his works,
But in silence holy kept.
Milton.
Then hallow'd faith shall once again return,
And vestal fires in hallowed temples burn.
Dryden.
No satyrs lurk within hallowed ground;
But nymphs and heroes, kings and gods abound.
Granville.

2. To reverence as holy; hallowed be thy name.

HALLUCINATION. n.s. [hallucinatio, Lat.] Error; blunder; mistake; folly.
A wasting of the brain, this sort of cause, is frequently termed a bewitched disease; but questionless a more halucination of the vulgar.
Harvey.
This must have been the hallucination of the transcriber, who probably mistook the dash of the
for a T.
Addison.

HALM. n.s. [jalm, Sax.] Straw: pronounced halm: which see.

HALO. n.s. A red circle round the sun or moon.

HAL.
HAM

Wilt thou still being hammering treachery.
To humble down thy husband and thyself? Shaks.
He was nobody that could not hammer out his same heart into a piece of tar, and picture it accordingly.
Candea.
Some spirits, by whom they were stirred and guided in the name of the people, hammered up
Ham.

To HAMMER. n. n.
1. To work; to be busy: in contempt.
Nor need'st thou much importune me to that,
Whereon this month I have been hammering. Shaks. I have been taking too much in hand.
This prison where I live into the world;
And, for the world is populous, and here is no room for myself,
I cannot do it; yet I'll hammer on. Shakep.
2. To be in agitation.
Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand;
Blood and revenge are hammering in my head.
Shakep.

HAMMERER. n. s. [from hammer.] He who works with a hammer.

HAMMERHAND. n. s. [hammer and hard.] Hammerhard is when you harden iron or steel with much hammering on it.
Candea.

HAMMOCK. n. s. [pamaka, Sax.] A swinging bed.

HAMMERED. adj. [hamatus, Lat.; Hooked; set with hooks.

To HAM'BLE. v. n. [from ham.] To cut the sinews of the thigh; to hamstring.

HAMLET. n. s. [pamaka, Sax.] The collar by which a horse draws in a waggon.

HAMLET. n. s. [pam, Sax. and let, the diminutive termination.] A small village.
Within the self-same lordship, parish, or hamlet, lands have divers degrees of value.
Bacon.
He pitch'd upon the plain
His mighty camp, and, when the day return'd,
The coast was wasted and the hamlets burn'd. Dryden.

HAMMER. n. s. [pamej, Sax. hammer, Dan.]
1. The instrument consisting of a long handle and heavy head, with which any thing is forged or driven.
The armours,
With busy hammers cloven rivets up,
Give dreadful note of preparation. Shakep.
The stuff will not work well with a hammer.
Bacon.

It is broken not without many warning, and will break the best anvils and hammers of iron. Brown.
Every morning he rises fresh to his hammer and his anvil.
South.
The smith prepares his hammer for the stroke.
Dryden's Juv.

2. Any thing destructive.
That renowned pillar of truth and hammer of heresies, St. Augustine.
Hackett on Providence.

To HAMMER, v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To beat with a hammer.
His bones the hammer's steel in strength surpass.
Samuel.

2. To forge or form with a hammer.
Some hammer helmets for the fighting field. Dryden.
Drov'd like a smith, and on the anvil beat,
'Till he had hammer'd out a vast estate. Dryden.
I must pay with hammers money instead of milled.
Drov'd.

3. To work in the mind; to contrive by intellectual labour; used commonly in contempt.

HAM.

On the hinder side it is guarded with the two
Ham.

Hamstring. v. a. preter, and part. pass.hamstrung. [from the noun.] To lame by cutting the tendon of the ham.
Hamstring'd behind, unhappy Gyges did'st
Then Phœbus is added to his side.
Drov'd.

Ham. for have, in the plural. Obsolete.

Spen.

HAN.

[In architecture.] The ends of elliptical arches; and these are the arches of smaller circles than the scheme, or middle part of the arch.
Harris.
The sweep of the arch will not contain above fourteen inches, and perhaps you must cement pieces to many of the courses in the hance, to make them long enough to contain fourteen inches.
Moxon.

HAND. n. s. [hand, Jonb, Sax. and in all the Teutonick dialects.]
1. The palm with the fingers; the member with which we hold or use any instrument.

To hand upon, and bound him, hand and foot.
Knolles's Hist. of the Turks.
They hang'd, in hand, with wandering steps and slow.

Though Eden took their solitary way.
Milton.
That wonderful instrument the hand, was it made to be idle?
Berkeley.

2. Measure of four inches; a measure used in the matches of horses; a palm.

3. Side, right or left.
For the other side of the court-gate on this hand, and that hand, were hangings of fifteen cubits.
Exod. xxxviii. 15.

4. Part; quarter; side.
It is allowed on all hands, that the people of England are more corrupt in their morals than any other nation this day under the sun.
Swift.

5. Ready payment with respect to the receiver.
Of which offer the bassa accepted, receiv'd in hand one year's tribute.
Knolles's History.
These two must make our duty very easy; a considerable reward in hand, and the assurance of a far greater recompence hereafter.
Tillotson.

6. Ready payment with regard to the prayer.
Let not the wages of any man tarry with thee, but give it him out of hand.
Tob. iv. 14.

7. Rate; price.
Time is the measure of business; money of wares: business is bought at a dear hand, where there is small dispatch.
Bacon.

8. Terms; conditions; rate.
With simplicity and without the mystery; but at no hand by pride, ignorance, Interest, or vanity, wrist it to ignoble soules. Taylor's Worthy Com.
It is either an ill sign or an ill effect, and therefore you should consult with humility. Taylor.

9. Act; deed; external action.
Thou sawest the contradiction between my heart and hand.
King Charles.

10. Labour act of the hand.
Almahar was a very idle fellow, that never would set his hand to any business during his father's life.
Addison.

Where are these porters, these hucksters? Y' have made a fine hand! fellows.
There's a trim rabble let in.

He had a great mind to try his hand at a Spectacle; would fain have one of his writings in my works.
A friend of mine has a very fine hand on the violin.

13. Attempt; undertaking.

Out of them you dare take in hand to lay open the original of such a nation.

14. Manner of gathering or taking.

As her majesty has received great profit, so may she, by a moderate hand, from time to time reap the like.

15. Workmanship; power or act of manufacturing or making.

An intelligent being, coming out of the hands of infinite power with an overplus or even indifferency to be reunited with Its Author, the source of its utmost felicity, is such a shock and deformity in the beautiful analogy of things, as is not considered in rising to these high posts.

16. Manner of acting or performing.

The master saw the madness rise; his glowing cares, his ardent eyes; and he beheav'd and set forth.

17. Agency; part in action.

God must have set a more than ordinary esteem upon that which David was not thought fit to be hand in hand.

18. The act of giving or presenting.

Let Tamor dress the jest in my sight, that I may eat at her hand.

19. Act of receiving any thing ready to one's hand, when it only waits to be taken.

His power reaches no farther than to compound and divide the materials that are made to his hand; but can do nothing towards the making or destroying one atom of what is already in action.

Many, whose greatness and fortune were not made to their hands, had sufficient qualifications and opportunities of doing high things.

20. Care; necessity of managing.

Jupiter had a farm a long time upon his hands, for want of a tenant to come up to his price.

Or envy holds a whole world's war with sense, or simple pride for fatten'd makes demands.

Let it therefore be required, on both parts, at the hands of the clergy, to be in meanness of estate like the apostles; at the hands of the haughty, to be as they who lived under the apostles.

22. Reach; nearness; as, at hand, within reach, near, approaching.

Your husband is at hand, I hear his trumpet.

Nur swords at hand, nor hissing darts afar.
Are doom'd to vex the tedious bloody war.

Where is our usual manager of mirth? What rascal is in hand? Is there no play to ease the anguish of a torturing hour? Shakespere.

25. State of being in present agitation.

I look'd upon her with a soldier's eye; That I'd, but had a rougher task in hand.

26. Cards held at a game.

There was a game of cards, that did double the rest of the habitable world, before this. Bacon.

27. That which is used in opposition to another.

He would dispute.

28. Scheme of action.

Consult of your own ways, and think which hand is best to take.

29. Advantage; gain; superiority.

The French King, finding to make his hand by those rude ravages in England, broke off his treaty of peace, and proclaimed hostility.

30. Competition; contest.

She in beauty, education, blood, holds hand with any princess in the world.

31. Transmission; conveyance; agency of conveyance.

The salutation by the hand of me Paul.

32. Possession; power.

Sacraments serve as the moral instruments of God to that purpose; the use whereof is in our hands, the effect in his.

33. Pressure of the bridle.

Hollow men, like horses, hot at hand,
Make gallant show and promise of their mettle.

34. Method of government; discipline; restraint.

Menaces have an heavy hand over the citizens, having a malicious mind against his countrymen.

35. Influence; management.

Flattery, the dandous nurse of vice,
Get hand upon his youth, to pleasures bent.

36. That which performs the office of a hand in pointing.

The body, as it moves, yet not changing perceivable distance with other bodies, as fast as the ideas of our own minds do naturally follow one another, and things to stand still; as it is evident in the hands of clocks and shadows of sundials.

37. Agent; person employed; a manager.
48. To be hand and glove. To be intimate and familiar; to suit one another.

To Hand. v. a. [from the n.]

1. To give or transmit with the hand.

Tudor was not far off, not only because he dipped in the same bath, but because he was so near on which our Saviour could hand the sop unto him. Brown. I have been shown a written prophecy that is handed among them with great secrecy. Addition.

2. To guide or lead by the hand.

Angels did lead her up, who now God dwell.

Donne.

By safe and insensible degrees he will pass from a boy to a man, which is the most hazardous part in life: this therefore should be carefully watched, and a young man with great diligence handed over to it.

Locke.

3. To seize; to lay hands on.

Let him, that makes but trifles of his eyes,

First hand me; on mine own accord, I'll off. Shak.

4. To manage; to move with the hand.

I see then that with delight I love,

Upon the handless depth of love:

I bless my chains, I hand my ear,

Nor think on all I left on shore. Prior.

5. To transmit in succession, with down; to deliver from one to another.

They had not only a tradition of it in general, but even a special one, in that remarkable instance of accidents in theLike, which they handed down to the succeeding ages. Woodward.

I know no other way of securing these monuments, and making them permanent enough to be handed down to future ages. Addition.

Arts and sciences consist of scattered theorems and practices, which are handed about amongst the masters, and only reserved to the fillius artis, till some great genius appears, who collects these disjointed propositions, and reduces them into a regular system. Prior.

One would think a story so fit for age to talk of, and infant to hear, were incapable of being handed down to us.

Pepys.

Hand is much used in composition for that which is manageable by the hand, as a hand saw; or borne in the hand, as a handbarrow.

Handbarrow. n. s. A frame on which any thing is carried by the hands of two men, without wheeling on the ground. A handbarrow, wheelbarrow, shovell, and spade. Tisser.

Set the board whereon the hive standeth on the handbarrow, and carry them to the place you intend. Mortimer.

Hand-basket. n. s. A portable basket. You must have wooden yarn to tie grafts with, and a small hand basket to carry them in. Mortimer.

Hand-bell. n. s. A bell rung by the hand.

The strength of the percussion is the principal cause of the loudness or softness of sounds; as in ringing of a hand bell barier or softer. Bacon.

Hand-breath. n. s. A space equal to the breadth of the hand; a palm. A border of an handbreadth round about. Eras. The eastern people determined their handbreadth by the breadth of barley-corns, six making a digit and twenty-four a hand-breath. Arithmb.

Handed. adj. [from hand.] 1. Having the use of the hand left or right.

Many are right handed, whose livers are weakly constituted; and many use the left, in whom that part is strongest. Brown.

2. With hands joined.

Into their utmost bow's

Handed they went. Milton.

Hander. n. s. [from hand.] Transmitter; conveyer in succession.

They would assume, with wondrous art,

Themselves to be the whole who are but part,

Of that vast frame which yet grant they were

The handers down, can they from thence infer

Right t'interprete? Or would they alone?

Who brought the present, claim it for their own?

Handfast. n. s. [hand and fast.] Hold; custody, Obstacle.

If that shepherf be not in handfast, let him fly.

Shak.

Handful. n. s. [hand and full.] 1. As much as the hand can gripe or contain.

I saw a country gentleman at the side of Rassomond's pond, pulling a handful of oats out of his pocket, and gathering the stubs about him.

Addison.

2. A palm; a hand's breadth; four inches.

Take one vessel of silver and another of wood, each full of water, and keep the tongs together about an handful from the bottom, and the sound will be more resonating from the vessel of silver than that of wood.

Bacon.

The peaceful scabbard where it dwelt,

The rancour of its edge had felt,

For of the lower end two handful

It had devour'd, it was so manful. Hudibras.

3. A small number or quantity.

He could not, with such a handful of men, and without cannon, propose reasonably to fight a battle. Clarendon.

4. As much as can be done.

Being in possession of the town, they had their handful to defend themselves from firing. Raleigh.

Hand-gallop. n. s. A slow and easy gallop, in which the hand presseth the bridle to hinder increase of speed.

Ovid, with all his sweetness, has as little variety of numbers and sounds as he: he is always upon a hand-gallop, and his verse runs upon carpe troodon.

Hand-gun. n. s. A gun wielded by the hand.

Guns have names given them, some from serpents or ravenous birds, as carverines or colubrines; others in other respects, as cannons, detincannon, hand-guns, and muskets. Camden.

Handicraft. n. s. [hand and craft.] 1. Manual occupation; work performed by the hand.

Particular members of convents have excellent mechanical genius, and divert themselves with painting, sculpture, architecture, gardening, and several kinds of handicrafts.

Addison.

The cor'nants thou shalt teach by candle-light, When putting smida, and ev'ry painful trade.

Of handicrafts, in peaceful beds are laid. Dryden.

The nurseries for children of ordinary gentlemen and handicrafts are managed after the same manner. Gulliver's Travels.

Handicraftsman. n. s. [handicraft and man.] A manufacturer; one employed in manual occupation.

O minerable age! virtue is not regarded in handicraftsmen.

He has simply the best wit of any handicraftsman in Athens. Shak.

The principal bulk of the vulgar masses are tillers of the ground, free servants, and handicraftsmen; as smiths, masons, and carpenters. Bacon.

The profusion and ignorance of handicraftsmen, small traders, servants, and the like, are to a degree very hard to be imagined. Swift.

It is the landed man that maintains the merchant and shopkeeper, and handicraftsman. Swift.

Handily. adv. [from handly.] With skill; with dexterity.

Handiness. n. s. [from handy.] Readiness; dexterity.
There is nothing but hath a double handle, at least we have two hands to apprehend it. Tennyson. A carpenter, that had got the iron work of an axe, begged only so much wood as would make a handle as large as a woman's. L'Estrange. Of none the handles of my knives are made, yet no ill taste from them affects the blade, or what I carve; nor is there ever left any agreeable lustre from the haft. Dryden. A beam there was, on which a beechen pail hung by the handle on a driven nail, Dryden.

2. That of which use is made. They overturned him in all his interests by the sheer force of his own good nature. South.

_HANDLESS._ adj. [hand and less.] Without a hand.

_HANDMAID._ n. A maid that waits at hand.

Brave Bargundy, unboastful hope of France! Stay, let thy handmaid handmaid speak to thee. Shakespeare. She gave the knight great thanks in little speeche. And said she would his handmaid poor remain. Fairfax.

I will never set politics against ethics, especially for that true ethics are but and as a handmaid to divinity and religion. Bacon.

Her's is a stenn'd star, Hath fix'd her polish'd car, Her sleeping Lord with handmaid lamb attending. Milton.

Love them on; and faith, who knew them best
Thy handmaid clad, clad them o'er with purple beams And azure wings, that up they flew so drest, And speak of the truth of on glorious times Before the judge. Milton.

Those of my family their master slight, Grown despicable in my handmaid's right. Sandys.

By viewing nature, nature's handmaid, Art, Makes mighty things from small beginnings great; Thus fishes first, shipping did impart, There still the rudder, and their head the prow. Dryden.

Since he had placed his heart upon wisdom, health, wealth, victory and honour should always wait on her as her handmaids. Addison.

To dress her charms and make her more belov'd,
Pope.

_HANDMILL._ n. [hand and mill.] A mill moved by the hand.

One of the seats is driven with toil; Returning late, and laden home with gain Of barley'd pitch, and handmills for the grain. Dryden.

_HANDS._ n. A vulgar phrase for keep off; forbear.

They cut a stag into parts; but as they were entering upon the dividend, hands off, says the lion. L'Estrange.

_HANDSAILS._ n. Sails managed by the hand.

Which the seac men will neither stand to their handsails, nor suffer the pilot to steer. Temple.

_HANDSAW._ n. Saw manageable by the hand.

My becket cut through and through, and my sword-hack'd like a hand axe. Shakespeare. To perform this work, it is necessary to be provided with a strong knife and a small handsaw. Mortimer.

_HANDEL._ n. [hansel a first gift, Dut.] The first act of using any thing; the first act of sale. It is now not used, except in the dialect of trade. The apostles term it the pledge of our inheritance, and the handel or earnest of that which is to come. Hooker.

There art joy's handel; heav'n lies flat in thee, Subject to every vintner's bendest knee. Herbert. To HANDSEAL. v. a. 1. To use or do any thing the first time. In temerous deere he handels his young paws, And leaves the rugged bear for firmer claws. Cowley.

I'd show you How easy 'tis to die, by my example, And handel fate before you. Dryden.

_HANDSOME._ adj. [handsome, Dut. read. dexterous, dexterously.]

1. Ready; gainly; convenient. For a lea it is so handsome, as it may seem it was first invented for him. Spenser.

2. Beautiful with dignity; graceful. A man great entered by force into a peasant house, and, finding his wife very handsome, turn'd the good man out of his dwelling. Addison.

3. Elegant; graceful. That caeseness and handsome address in writing is hardest to be attained by persons bred in a meaner way. Petronius.

5. Generous; noble, as, a handsome action. To HANDSEAL. v. a. [from the adj.]

To render elegant or neat.

Him all repute For his device in handsoming a suit; To judge of lace he hath the best conceit. Donne.

_HANDSOMELY._ adv. [from handsome.]

1. Conveniently; dexterously. Under it he may cloath any fit pilage that cometh handsomely in his way. Spenser.

When the kind nymph, changing her faultless shape, Comes unhandles, handsomely to scape, Walker.

2. Beautifully; gracefully.

3. Elegantly; neatly.

A carpenter, after he hath sawn down a tree, hath wrought it handsomely, and made a vessel thereof. Wisdom.

4. Liberally; generously.

I am finding out a convenient place for an alms-house, which I intend to endow very handsomely for a dozen superannuated husbandmen. Addison.

_HANDSOMENESS._ n. [from handsome.]

Beauty; grace; elegance.

Accompanying her mourning garments with a doleful appearance, yet neither forgetting handsomeness in her mourning garments, nor sweetness in her doleful countenance. Sidney.

Sir, the lament I have heard of him was very good, if ever the upper glass upon a nail. Bacon.

In cloaths, cheap handsomeness doth bear the bell. Persons of the fairer sex like that handsomeness for which they find themselves to be the most lion. Boyle.

_HANDVICE._ n. [hand and rice.] A vice to hold small work in.

_HANDWRITING._ n. [hand and writing.] A cast or form of writing peculiar to each hand.

That you beat me at the mare, I have your hand to show; If the skin were parchement, and the blows you gave me, your own handwriting would tell you what I think. Shock. Ulipig.

To no other cause than the wise providence of God can be referred the diversity of handwriting. Cockburn.

_HANDY._ adj. [from hand.]

1. Executed or performed by the hand.

They were but few, yet they would easily overtop the great numbers of them, if ever they came to handly blows. Knolles.

Handsome, Gentleman, With three and forty weapon in his hand. Dryden.

Both parties now were drawne so close, Almost to come to handy blows. Hudibras.

2. Ready; dexterous; skilful. She stript the stalks of all their leaves; the best She call'd, and then with handy care she drest, Dryden.

The sergents wash the platter, scour the plate; And each is handy in his way. Dryden.

3. Convenient; ready to the hand.

The strike-block is a plane shorter than the jointer, and is more handy than the long jointer. Mason.

_HANDYDANDY._ n. A play in which children change hands and places. See how yond justice rails upon yond simple thief! Hark! in thine ear: change places; and, handydandy, which is the justice, which is the thief? Shakespeare.

Neither cross and pile, nor ducks and drakes, are quite so ancient as handydandy. Arbuthnot and Pope.

To HAND._ v. a. preter. and part. pass. hanged or hung, anciently hung. [Jangas, Sax.]

1. To suspend; to fasten in such a manner as to be sustained, not below, but above. Strongly placed on a level; or, hung.

Hanging a golden stamp about their necks: Put on with holy prayers. Shakespeare. His great away is utterly raked, he himself steals in it, and his hands and right hand cut off, and hang up before Jerusalem. South.

2. To place without any solid support. Thos all things hast of nothing made, That hang't the solid earth in fleeting air, Vein'd with clear springs, which abound seas repair. Sandys.

3. To chock and kill by suspending by the neck, so that the ligature intercepts the breath and circulation.

He hath commussion from his wife and me To hang Cordelia in the prison. Shakespeare. Hanging supposes human soul and reason: This animal's below committing treason; Shall he hang'd, who never could rebel? That's a preferment for Aciophilus. Dryden.

4. To display; to show aloft.

This unlickly mole missed several coxcombics; and like the handmaid handsomely castling, made some of them converse with Rosalinda in what they thought the spirit of her party. Addison.

5. To let fall below the proper situation; to decline.

There was a wicked man that hang'd out his head sadly; but inwardly he was full of deceit. Ecclesiastes xxvi. 31.

The beauties of this place should mourn: 'Tis mortal fruits and flowers at my return Should hang'd their which'd head; for sure my breast Is now more pious. Dryden.

The rose is fragrant, but it fades in time; The violet sweet, but quickly past the prime; White lilies hang their heads, and soon decay; And whiter snow in minutes melts away. Dryden.

The cheerful birds no longer sing; Each drops his head, and hangs his wing. Prior.

6. To fix in such a manner as in some directions to be moveable.

The gates and the chambers they renewed, and hanged doors upon them. 1 Mac. iv. 57.

7. To cover or charge by any thing suspended.

Hanging the head with black, yield day to Shakespear.

The pavement ever full with human gore; Heads and their mangled members hang the door. Dryden.

8. To furnish with ornaments or draperies fastened to the wall.

Musick is better in chambers wainscotted than hanged. Bacon.
To hang, a. n.
1. To be suspended; to be supported above, not below.
2. To depend; to fall loosely on the lower part: to dangle.
3. To bend forward.
4. To float; to play.
5. To be supported by something raised above the ground.
6. To rest upon by embracing.
7. To hover; to impend.
8. To be loosely joined.
9. To see your wife: is she at home?
10. To be compact or united: with together.
11. To adhere, unwieldily or incommodiously.
12. To rest; to reside.

Hangman, n. s. [hangman, in Welsh, is mistor- fortune.]
1. Chance; fortune.
2. That which happens by chance or fortune.

Hangman's absolution, n. [Hangman's absolution, Prior.]
1. Foreboding death by the halter.
2. Requiring to be punished by the halter; a hanging matter.
HAP
walk as men do in the dark by hap-hazard, thus trains so long and intricate moves for knowledge sake.
We live at hap-hazard, and without any insight into the workings of nature.
We take our principles at hap-hazard upon trust, and then believe a whole system, upon a supposition that they are true.
Th. Oxon. i. 236.
From the noun.
1. To happen; to have the casual consequence.
It will be too late to gather ships or soldiers, which may need to be presently employed, and who are ready may hap to hazard a kingdom.
Spenser.
2. To come by chance; to fall casually.
Run you to the citadel,
And tell my lord and lady what hath hap'd.
Shak.
In destruction by deluge, the remnant which hap to be reserved are ignominious people.
Bacon.
HAPILY. adv. [from hap.]
1. Perhaps; peradventure; it may be.
This love of theirs himself have often seen,
Happily when they have judged me fast asleep.
Shak.
Us, happily too secure of our discharge
From calamity, because of death released
Some days.
Milton.
Then haply your breast remains untouched'd,
Though that seems strange.
Race.
In certain cases what conclusions may be found for instruction of any other state, that may haply labour under the like circumstances.
Swift.
2. By chance: by accident.
Leviathan, which God of all his works
Created biggest, that swim the ocean stream,
Him haply slumbering on the Norway foam,
The pilot of some small sight-finder'd ship
Deeming some brande to be, as seemen tell,
Who fixed anchor in his sealy rind,
Moors by his side.
Milton.
HAPLESS. adj. [from hap.]
Unhappy; unfortunate; unlucky.
Hapless Ajax, whom the fates have mark'd
To bear th'extreme of dire misch'p.
Shak.
Here hapless Lears had found his part,
Hap not the father's grief restrain'd his art.
Dryden.
Did his hapless passion equal mine,
I would refuse the bliss.
Smith.
To Happen. v. n. [from hap.]
1. To fall out; to chance; to come to pass.
Bring to your strong reasons, and show what shall happen.
Juist.
Say not I have sinned, and what harm hap, had happen to me.
Moore.
If it so fall out that thou art miserable for ever, thou hast no reason to be surprized, as if some unexpected thing had happen'd to thee.
Tiblton.
2. By chance.
I have happened on some other accounts relating to mortalities.
Graunt.
HAPPILY. adv. [from hap.]
1. Fortunately; luckily; successfully.
I come to weet what wealth in Padua:
If wealthily, then happily to Padua.
Shak.
Prefer'd by conquest, happily o'ershone.
Falling they rise to be with us made one.
Haller.
Neither is it at all trivial to make a tragedy end happily; for 'tis more difficult to save than kill.
Dryden.
2. Addressfully; gracefully; without labours.
Form'd by thy converse, happily to steer.
From grave to gay, from lively to severe.
Pope.
3. In a state of felicity; as, he lives happily.
1. By chance; peradventure. In this sense happily is written erroneously for haply.
One thing more I shall wish you to desire of them, who haply may pursue these two treatises.
HAPPINESS. n. s. [from hap.]
1. Felicity: state in which the desires are satisfied.
Happiness is that estate whereby we attain,
as far as possible, a plenitude of all that which simple for itself is to be desired, and contentment in it after an eminently the contentation of our desires, the highest degree of perfect happiness.
Hooker.
Oh! happiness of sweet tert'nd content!
To be once secure and innocent.
Denn. Philosopher's differs about the chief good or hap-iness of man.
Temple.
The various and contrary choices that men make to the world, wherein the same thing is not yet to every man alike: this variety of pursuits shews, that every one do not place his happiness in the same.
Lecky.
2. Good luck; good fortune.
3. Fortuitous elegance; unstudied grace.
Certain graces and happiness, peculiar to each language, give life and energy to the words.
Defoe.
Some beauties yet no precepts can declare:
For there's a happiness as well as care.
Pope.
Form'd by some rules yet do not constrain,
And finish'd more through happiness than pain.
Pope.
HAPPY. adj. [from hap; as lucky for lucky]
1. In a state of felicity; in a state where the desire is satisfied.
At other end Uran did Stephon lend
Her happiness to him who would it gain.
Sidney
Am I happy in thy news?
If to have done the thing you gave in charge
Be hapiness your, be happy then;
For it is done.
Shak.
Truth and peace, and love, shall ever shine
About the supreme throne.
Swift.
Of little, 'tis whose happy making sight alone,
Our heartily guided soul shall climb.
Milton.
Though the presence of imaginary good cannot make us happy, the absence of it may make us miserable.
Addison.
2. Lucky; successful; fortunate.
Chymists have been more happy in finding experiments than the causes of them.
Swift.
Yet in this agey his fancy wrought,
And fear supply'd him with this happy thought.
Dryden.
3. Addressfully: ready.
One gentleman is happy at a reply, and another exceeds in a rejoinder.
Swift.
HA'QUETON, n. s. A coat of mail.
Spens.
HARANGUE, n. s. [harangue. Fr.]
The original of the French word is much questioned: Menage thinks it is a corruption of hearing, English; Junius imagines it to be discours au raug, to a circle, which the Italian erring seems to favour.
If perhaps it may be from orar, or ominaire, orator, orator, aranguer, harangue.
A speech; a popular oration.
Gray-headed men, and armed with warriors' dress.
Assemble, and harangues are heard, but soon,
In factions opposition.
Milton.
Nothing can better improve political schools than the art of making plausible or implausi-bale harangues, against the very opinion for which they return may be sustained.
Dryden.
Many preachers neglect method in their harangues.
Watts.
To HA'RA'NGUE. v. n. [haranguer, Fr.]
To make a speech; to pronounce an oration.
To HA'RA'NGUE, r. a. To address by an oration; as, he harangued the troops.
HARANGUER, n. s. [from harangue.]
An orator; a public speaker: generally with some mixture of contempt.
To HA'RASS, r. a. [harasser, Fr. harasse a heavy buckler, according to Du Cange.]
To weary; to fatigue; to tire with labour and uneasiness.
A little lowly hermitage it was,
Down in a dale hard by a forest's side,
Far from resort of people that did pass
In travel to and fro.
Some had he said, when hard at hand they saw
That quicksand sigh, with water covered.

When these maraud the way, hard at hand
Comes the master and main exercise.
Shakespe
Aberleuch went hard unto the door of the tower,
To burn it with fire.

The Philistines followed hard upon Saul.

Civil; and, as hard by good, he took himself to a stall for sanctuary. L'Estrange

Fast; nimbly; vehemently.

The wolves scampred away as hard as they could drive.

With difficulty; in a manner requiring labour.

Solid bodies foresee rain, as boxes and pegs of wood when they draw and wind hard. Bacon Tempestuously; boisterously.

When the North wind blow hard, and it rains sadly, none but fools sit down in it and cry; wise people defend themselves against it. Tayler

HARBOUR. n. s. [herbage, Fr. from harbour. Shelter; entertainment.
Let us, your kind, whose labour's spirits,
Forewearyed in this action of swift speed,
Crawe harbourage within your city walls. Shakep.

Harbourage. n. s. [from harbour.] One that entertains another.

Harbourless. adj. [from harbour.] Wanting harbour; being without lodging; without shelter.

HARD. adj. [hard, Sax. hard, Dut.] 1. Firm; resisting penetration or separation; not soft; not easy to be pierced or broken.

You are there, while I to the hard house,
More hard than is the stone whereof 'tis radd'd; Which effect ravish'd, demanding after you,
Denied me to come in. Shakep.

2. Difficult; not easy to the intellect.

Some diseases, when they are easy to be cured, are hard to the understanding.
The hard causes they brought unto Moses; but very small matter they judged themselves.

When hard words, jealousies, and fears,
Set folks together by the ears. Hudibras.

'Tis hard to say if Clymena were mov'd
More by her pray'r, whom she so dearly lov'd,
Or more with fury fir'd. Dryden.

As for the hard words, which I was obliged to use, they are either terms of art, or such as I substituted in place of others that were too low. Arbuthnot.

3. Difficult of accomplishment; full of difficulties.

Is anything too hard for the Lord? Genesis.
Possess as lords a spacious world, 'tis our native heaven.
Little inferior, by my adventure hard
With peril great achieve'd. Milton.

Long is the way, and hard, that out of hell leads up to light
Our prison strang in. Milton.

He now discern'd I was wholly to be on the defensive, and that it was like to be a very hard Part to win.

Nervous and tendinous parts have worse symptoms, and are harder of cure, than fleshly ones. Wigan.

The love and pious duty which you pay
Have pass'd the peril of so hard a way. Dryden.

4. Pained; distressful; laborious action or suffering.

Rachal travailed, and she had hard labour.

Worcester's horse came but to-day;
And now their pride and mettle is asleep,
Their courage with hard labour tamed and dull,
That not a horse is half of himself. Shakep.

Continual hard duty, with little fighting, lessen'd and diminished his array.
When Sebas'tian and his tears Clarendon.

Come harder than his blood. Dryden.

A man obliged to hard labour is not reduced to the necessity of having twice as much victuals as one under no necessity to work. Cheyne.

5. Cruel; oppressive; rigorous: as, a hard heart.

The bargain of Julius III. may be accounted a very hard one.
Brown's Tube. Err.

When some. Plough. Sower. Who search my sheep, and scare my painfult plough,
The needless aids of human life allow;
So wretched is thy son, so hard a mother's lion. Dryden.

If you thought that hard upon you, we would not refuse you half your time. Dryden.

A loss of the third of their estates will be a very hard case upon a great number of people. Locke.

No people live with more ease and prosperity than the subjects of little commonwealths; as, on the contrary, there are none who suffer more under the grievances of a hard government than the subjects of little principalities. Addison.

To find a hill that may bring punishment upon the innocent, will appear very hard. Swift.

6. Sour; rough; severe.

What have you given him any hard words of late?
Shakep.

Rough ungenovable passions hurry me on to say or do very hard or offensive things. Atterbury.

7. Unfavourable; unkind.

As thou hast, do him that not wrong,
To bear a hard opinion of his truth. Shakep.
Abdallam and Abdi Subul he thinks is a little hard on his facetious patrons. Dryden.

Some hard rumours have been transmitted from Frobisher's side, and rumours of the severest kind. Swift.

8. Insensible; inflexible.

If by chance succeed
In what I write, and that's a chance indeed,
Know I am not to expect much praise,
Nor to feel praise, or fame's deserter's reward. Dryden.

9. Unhappy; vexatious.

It is a very hard case upon our soil or climate, that so excellent a fruit, which prospers among all our neighbours, will not grow here. Temple.

10. Vehement; keen; severe; as, a hard Winter; hard weather.

11. Unreasonable; unjust.

It is a little hard, that in an affair of the last consequence to the very being of the clergy, this whole reverend body should be made the sole persons not consulted.
It is the hardest case in the world, that Steele should take up the reports of his faction, and put them off as all additional fears. Swift.

12. Forced; not easily granted.

If we allow the first couple, at the end of one hundred years, to have left ten pair of breeders, which is no hard supposition; there would arise from these, in fifteen hundred years, a greater number than the earth was capable of. Burnet.

13. Powerful; forcible.

The stag was too hard for the horse, and the horse flies for succour to the man that's too hard for him, and rides the one to death, and outright kills the other. L'Estrange.
Let them consider the vexation they are surging up for themselves, by struggling with a power which will be always too hard for them. Addison.

A disputant, when he finds that his adversary is too hard for him, with slyness turns the discourse. Hars.

14. Austerel; rough; as liquids.

In making of vinegar, set vessels of wine over against the noon sun, which calotheth the more oily spirits, and leaveth the spirit more sour and hard. Bacon.

15. Harsh; stiff; constrained.

Others, scrupulously tied to the practice of the ancients, make their figures harder than even the marble itself.
Dryden.
His direction is hard, his figures too bold, and his tropes, particularly his metaphors, insufferably strained. Dryden.

16. Not plentiful; not prosperous.

There are benefices decreed; and, if the times had not been hard, my billet should have burst. Dryden.

17. Avaricious; faultily varying.

HARD. adv. [harde, very old Germ.]

1. Close; near; often with by.

Hard by was a house of pleasure, built for a Summer retiring place. Sarton.

They doubted a while what it should be, 'till it was cast up even hard before them; at which time they fully saw it was a man. Sarton.
Years have not yet hardened me, and I have an addition of weight on my spirits since we lost him.

5. To make firm; to endure with constancy.

Then should I have comfort? yea, I would harden myself in sorrow.

Our raise the soul, and harden it to virtue, the softer softens it again, and unbinds it to vice.

HARDENED. n. s. [from harden.] One that makes any thing hard.

HARDFACED. adj. [hard and face.]

Cruelty; courage; bravery.

If we, with three such powers left at home, cannot defend our own doors from the dog, Let us be worried; and our nation lose the name of hardy policy.

Perkin had gathered together a power of all nations, neither in number, nor in the hardships and courage of their persons contemptible.

He has the courage of a rational creature, and such an hardness we should endeavour by custom and use to bring children to.

Criminal as you are, you aver your self-pragmatist, the hardbriers of one that should tell you of it.

3. Effrontery; confidence.

HARDBALED. adj. [hard and labour.]

Elaborate; studied; diligently wrought.

How cheerfully the hawkers cry A satire, and the genius buy

While my hardbale to sum pines, Unsold upon the printer's lines.

Swift.

HARDLY. adv. [from hard.]

1. With difficulty; not easily.

Touching things which generally are received, although in themselves they be most certain, yet, because it press them granted of all, we are hardly able to bring such proof of their certainty as may satisfy gainers, when suddenly and besides expectation they require the same at our hands.

There are but a few, and they endued with great ripeness of wit and judgment, free from all such affections as might trouble their meditations, instructed in the sharpest and subtlest points of learning; who have, and that very hardly, been able to find out and only the immortality of the soul. Locke.

God hath delivered a law as sharp as the two-edged sword, piercing the very closest and most unsearchable corners of the heart, which the law of nature can hardly, human laws by no means, possibly reach unto.

These are in living creatures that have not nourished repair and hardly laid down.

Bacon.

The banks of those trees are more close and soft than those of cops and ashes, wherein the moss can the harder issue out.

Bacon.

The father, mother, daughter they invite; the hardy do to this repast. Dryd.

Recover hardly what he lose before.

His right endures it much, his purchase more.

Dryd.

False evidence is easily taken up, and hardly laid down.

South.

2. Scarcely; scant; not lightly; with no likelihood.

The fish that once was caught, new bait will hardly bite.

Fairy Queen.

They are worn, lord counsel, so

That we shall hardly in our ages see

Their banners wave again.

Their lights will heaven.

Shakep.

Hardly shall you find any one so bold, but he desires the credit of being thought good.

South.

3. Almost not; hardly.

The hardy gentleman in the nation who hath not a near alliance with some of that body.

Swift.

There is hardly a gentleman in the nation who hath not a near alliance with some of that body.

Dryd.

4. Grudgingly; as an injury.

If I thwart a design, or hinder a thing that is hardily borne

By any in this presence, I desire

To reconcile me.

Shakep.

5. Severely; unfairly.

If there be some reasons inducing you to think hardy of our laws, are those reasons demonstrative, are they necessary, or mere possibilities only?

Hawk.

6. Rigorously; oppressively.

Many men believed that he was hardily dealt with.

Clarendon.
HAR

They are ripe for peace, to enjoy what we have conquered for them; and so are we, to recover the effects of their hardships upon us. Swift.

2. Inconvenience; fatigue. They were exposed to hardship and penury. Sprague. You could not undergo the toils of war, nor bear the hardships that your leaders bore. Add. In journeys or at home, in war or peace, by hardships many, many falls by easy. Prior.

HARDWARE. n.s. [hard and ware.] Manufactures of metal.

HARDWAREMAN. n.s. [hardware and man.] A maker or seller of metallic manufactures.

One William Wood, an hardwareman, obtaining by fraud a patent in England to coin copper to pass in Ireland. Swift.

HARDY. adj. [hardy. Fr.]
1. Bold; brave; stout; daring; resolute.
Try the imagination of some in cock-fights, to make one cock more hardy, and the other more cowardly. Bacon.

2. Strong; hard; firm.
Is a man confident of his present strength? An unworthy base may shake in pieces his hardy fabric. South.

3. Confident; impudent; viciously stubborn.
HARE and HARE, differing in pronunciation only, signify both an army and a lord. So Harold is a general of an army; Hareman a chief man in the army; Herwin a victorious army; which are much like Stratocles, Polemarchus, and Hegesistratus among the Greeks, Gibson's Cam. HARE. n.s. [papa, sax, hare, ere.]

1. A small quadruped, with long ears and short tail, that moves by leaps, remarkable for timidity, vigilance, and secundity; the common game of hunters. Dismay'd not this Our captain of Hare and Barbour?—As sparrows, eagles; or the hare, the lion. Shak. We view in the open clamps a brace of swift greyhounds coursing a good stout and well-breathed hare. Your dressings must be with hare's fur. Wiman. Poor is the triumph of the timid hare. Thamus.

2. A constellation.
The hare appears, who active rays supply A nimble force, and hardly wings denen. Creech. To hare. v. n. [harrer, Fr.] To fright; to hurry with terror.

To hare and rate them, is not to teach but vex them. Locke.

HAREBELL. n.s. [hare and bell.] A blue flower campanifolium.

Thou shalt not lack The flow'r's like thy face, pale primrose; nor The azur'd harebell, like thy veins. Shak. Lyric.

HAREBRAINED. adj. [from hare the verb and brain.] Volatile; unsettled; wild; fluttering; hurried.
That harebrained wild fellow begins to play the fool, when others are weary of it. Bacon.

HAREFOOT. n.s. [hare and foot.]
1. A bird.
Ainsworth.

2. An herb.
Ainsworth.

HARELIP. n.s. A fissure in the upper lip with want of substance, a natural defect. The blots of nature's hand Shall not in their issue stand; Never mole, harelip, nor tear, Shall upon their children be. Shak. The third stitch is performed with pins and needles, as in harelips. Winman.

HARE-RESEARCH. n.s. [bipurrence, Lat.] A plant.

Har. HARRIER. n.s. [from hare.] A dog for hunting hare.

To HARE. n.s. [Contracted from hareen.] To listen.

The king.

To me inverteate, harls my brother's suit. Shak. Pricking up his ears, to hare. If he could hear too in the dark. Hudibras.

HARKE. interj. [It is originally the imperative of the verb hark.] List! hear! listen! What harmony is this? My good friends, hark! Shak. The butcher saw him upon the gallop with a piece of flesh, and called out, Hark ye, friend, you may make the best of your purchase. L'Esteange.

Hark! how loudly the woods invite you forth! Thomson.

HAR. n.s.
1. The filaments of flax.
2. Any filamentous substance.
The general sort are wicker hives, made of privet, willow, or hare, daubed with cow-dung. Mortimer.

HARLEQUIN. n.s. [This name has been given by Francis of France to a burly buffoon in masque of his enemy Charles de quint. Menage derives it more probably from a famous comedian that frequented Mr. Harley's house, whom his friends called Harlequin, little Harley, Trav.] A buffoon who plays tricks to divert the populace; a jack-pudding; a zani.

The joy of a king for a victory must not be like that of a harlequin upon a letter from his mistress. Dryden.

The man in a grave tragedian known, Though his best part long since was done, Still on the stage he sits, and Limited in his death. He who play'd the harlequin, After the jest still leads the scene, Warring to entertain. Prior.

HARLOT. n.s. [harlodes, Welsh, a girl. Others for horelet a little whore. Others from the name of the mother of William the Conqueror. Harlot is used in Chaucer for a low male drudge.] A whore; a strumpet.

Away, my disposition, and possess me with Some harlot's spirit. Shak. They help thee by such aids as gree and harlot. Ben Jonson.

The barbers harlots crowd the public place; Go, foals, and purchase an uncloy embrace. Dryden.

HARLOTRY. n.s. [from harlot.] 1. The trade of a harlot; fornication.
Nor shall, From Rome's tribunal, thy harangues prevail; Gainst harlotry, in their art abated. Dryden.

2. A name of contempt for a woman.
A peevish self-will'd harlotry. That no persuasion can do good upon. Shak.

HARM. n.s. [papa, Sax.]
1. Injury; crime; wickedness.
2. Mischief; hurt.

We, ignorant of ourselves, Beg often our own harms, which the wise Powers Deny us for our good. Shak.

How are we happy still in fear of harm? But harm precedes not sin.

They should be suffered to write on: it would keep them out of harm's way, and prevent them from evil counsels. Swift.

To HARM. v. a. To hurt; to injure.
What sense had I of a sto'n hours of lost? I saw not, thought it not, it harm'd not me. Shak. Passion never could grow.

To harm another, or impeach your rest. Waler. After their young are hatched, they brood them under their wings, lest the cold, and sometimes the heat, should harm them. Ray.

HARMFUL adj. [harm and full.] Hurtful; mischievous; noxious; injurious; detrimental.

His dearly loved spouse His spear of heben-wood behind him bare. Greyo., thistle in the fire, Had riven my breast with pike-head square, Spencer.

Let no man fear that harmful creature less, because he sees the apostle safe from that poison. Halli.

The earth brought forth fruit and food for man, without any mixture of harmful quality. Raleigh.

For flax and oats will burn the tender field, And sleepy puppies harmful harvest yield. Dryden.

HARMFULLY, adv. [harmful and full.] Hurtfully; noxiously; detrimentally.
A scholar is better occupied in playing or sleeping, than spending his time not only vainly, but uselessly in such kind of exercise. Shak.

HARMLESSNESS. n.s. [from harmful.] Hurtfulness; mischievousness; noxiousness.

HARMLESS. adj. [from harm.] 1. Innocent; innocuous; not hurtful.
Touching ceremonies harmless in themselves, and hurtful only in respect of number, was it to augur the fortune of those that were taken away?—Hooker.

She, like harmless lightning, throws her head On him, her brothers, me, her master; hitting Each object with a joy. Shak.

2. Unhurt; undamaged.
The shipwright will be careful to gain by his labour, or at least to save himself harmless, and therefore work his suit slightly, according to a slight price. Raleigh.

HARMLESSLY, adv. [from harmless.] Innocently; without hurt; without crime.
He spent that day free from worldly trouble, harmlessly, and in a recreation that became a churchman. Walton.

But let the walls which stand infracted, but fall harmlessly into wood or feathers. Decay of Piety.

HARMLESSNESS. n.s. [from harmless.] Innocence; freedom from tendency to injury or hurt.
When, through tasteless dull humility, In doth-hank'd men some harmlessness we see, 'Tis his phlegon that's virtuous and the show. Donne.

Compare the harmfulness, the credulity, the tenderest, the modesty, and that dullness of wickedness in virtuous counsels, which is in youth untainted, with the mischievousness, the drossy, the craft, the impudence, the filthiness, and the confirmed obduracy in an aged long-practised sinner. South.

HARMONICAL. adj. [agreeable; harmonious.]

HARMONIC. f. nique, Fr.]
1. Relating to music; susceptible of musical proportion to each other.
After every three whole notes, nature requires, for all harmonical use, one half note to be introduced. Bacon.

2. Concordant; musical; proportioned to each other: less properly.
Harmonical sounds, and discordant sounds, are both pleasant and disagreeable; but blackness and darkness are, indeed, but privates. Bacon.

So swells each wind-pipe; ass intones to ass, Harmonick twang of keil'ret, born, and brass, Pope.
HARMONIC. adj. [harmonic, Fr. from harmony.]
1. Adapted to each other; having the parts proportioned to each other; symmetrical.
2. Of the wide-extended sky, and all the harmonious worlds on high, and Virgil's sacred work shall dye. - Conolly.
3. God has made the intelligent world harmonious and beautiful without us; but it will never come into our heads all at once; we must bring it home piece-meal. - Locke.

HARMONIOUSLY, adv. [from harmonious.]
1. With just adaptation and proportion of parts to each other.
2. Musically; with concord of sounds.
3. The harmony of things, as well as that of sounds, from discord springs.

HARMONIously. n. s. [from harmony.]
1. The just adaptation of one part to another.
2. Just proportion of sound; musical concord.

HARMONY. n. s. [aqua; harmony, Fr.]
1. The harmony of one soul, to behold in wedded pair! More grateful than harmonious sounds to the ear. - Milton.
2. Harmony is a compound idea, made up of different sounds. - Watts.
3. Consonant; correspondent sentiment.

HARNESS. n. s. [harneis, Fr. supposed from irn or heron, Runick; hien, Welsh and Erse, iron.]
1. Armour or defensive furniture of war. Sometimes anticipated.
2. Great men should drink with harness on their throats. - Shaks.
3. The traces of draught horses, particularly of carriages of pleasure or state; of other carriages we say greer. - Dryden.

Harping. n. s. [from harpe, Lat.] A bearded dart with a line fastened to the handle, with which whales are struck and caught.

Harponeur. n. s. [harponeur, Fr. from harpeon.] He that throws the harpoon in whale fishing.

Harpsichord. n. s. A musical instrument, string with wires, and played by striking keys.

Harpy. n. s. [harpya, Lat. harpie, harpye, Fr.]
1. The harpies were a kind of birds which had the faces of women, and foul long claws, very ravenous, which, when the table was furnished for Phineus, came flying in, and devouring or carrying away the greater part of the victuals, did so defile the rest that they could not be endured.

Harquebus. n. s. [See ARQUEBUSE.]
A handgun.

Harquebusier. n. s. [from harquebus.] One armed with a harquebus.

Harridan. n. s. [corrupted from harriselle a worn-out worthless horse.] A decayed strumpet.

Harrow. n. s. [charrors, Ger. harrede, Fr. harrarde.] A frame of timbers crossing each other, and set with teeth, drawn over sowed ground to break the clods, and throw the earth over the seed.

To HARR. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To cover with earth by the harrow.
2. To break with the harrow.
3. To tear up; to rip up.

Harrow. Iron. n. s. [from harpeo, Lat.] A bearded dart with a line fastened to the handle, with which whales are struck and caught.

The boat which on the first assault did go, Struck with a harping iron the younger foe; Who, when he felt his side so rudely gored, Loud as the sea thatHouse'd him he roar'd. - Waller.

Harponeur. n. s. [harponeur, Fr. from harpeon.] He that throws the harpoon in whale fishing.

Harpoon. n. s. [harponeur, Fr.] A harping iron.
5. To invade; to harass with incursions.

6. To disturb; to put into commotion. [This should rather be written harry, harter, Fr.]

Most like: it harrows me with fear and wonder.

A. Spenser.

To Harry, v. a. [harter, Fr.]

1. To tease; to harrow; to ruffle. Thou must not take my former sharpness ill.

Shakep.

2. In Scotland it signifies to rob, plunder, or oppress; as, one harried a nest; that is, he took the young away; as also, he harried me out of house and home; that is, he robbed me of my goods, and turned me out of doors. See To Harrow.

HARSH. adj. [hereisich, Germ. Skinner.]

1. Audaciously; roughly sour.

Our nature here is not unlike our wine;
Some sorts, when old, continue brisk and fine;
So age's gravity, though it seem severe,
But nothing harsh of bitter ought it appear.
Dech.

Sweet, bitter, sour, harsh and salt, are all the epithets we have to denominate that numberless variety of relishes, that in Locke.

The same defect of heat which gives a fierceness to our nature, may contribute to that roughness of our tongue, and make some analogy to the harsh fruit of colder countries. Swift.

2. Rough to the ear.

A name unmeaning to Volscian ears,
And harsh in sound to thine.

Age might, what nature never gives the young,
Have taught the smoothness of thy native tongue;
But satire needs not that, and wit will shine
Through the harsh cadence of a rugged line.

The unnatural concomitants made their spelling tedious, and their pronunciation harsh.

Hast

Harsh, harshness. n. [from harsh.]

1. Sourish; austere taste.

Take an apple and roll it on a table hard;
The rolling doth sow and sweeten the fruit, which is nothing but the smooth distribution of the spirits into the parts; for the unequal distribution of the spirits maketh the harshness.

Boam.

2. Roughness to the ear.

Neither can the natural harshness of the French, or the perpetual ill accent, be ever refined into perfect harmony like the Italian.

Shakep.

Cannot admire the height of Milton's invention, and the strength of his expressions, without degrading his antiquated words, and the perplexity of their sound.

Dryden.

'Tis not enough no harshness gives offence; The sound must seem an echo to the sense. Pope.

3. Ruggedness to the touch.

Harshness and ruggedness of bodies is unpleasant to the touch.

Boam.

Crabbedness; moroseness; peevishness.

Thy tender liefed nature shall not give Thine ear to harshness; her eyes are finer, but thine
Do comfort and not burn.

Dryden.

HART. n. [hoger, Sax.] A he-deer; the male of the roe.

That just in heart a hart, and my desires, like fell and cruel hounds, E'er since pursue me.

Shakep.

And fearful harts do wander every where Amidst the dogs.

May's Virgil.

Hartshorn. n. s.

Hartshorn is a drug that comes into use many ways, and under many forms. What is used here are the whole horns of the common male deer, which fall off every year. This species is the fallow deer; but some tell us, that the medicinal hartshorn should be of the true hart or stag. The salt of hartshorn is a great sudorific, and the spirit has all the virtues of volatile alkalies; it is used to people out of faintings by its pungency, holding it under the nose, and pouring down some drops of it in water.

Rannose concretions of the volatile salts are observable upon the glass of the receiver, whilst the spirits of riper and hartshorn are drawn. Words.

Hartshorn. n. s. An herb. Aisworth.

Hart-Royal. n. s. A plant. A species of buckthorn plantain.

Hart-tongue. n. s. [lingua cervina, Lat.] A plant.

It commonly grows out from the joints of old walls and buildings, where they are moist and shady. There are very few of them in Europe. Miller.

Hart-tongue is propagated by parting the roots, and also by seed.

Mortimer.

Hartwood. n. s. [ordylium, Lat.] An unembellish plant.

Harrow. n. s. [parpera, Sax.]

1. The season of reaping and gathering the corn.

As it eaths, the seedsmen
Upon the slime and ooze he keeps his grain,
And shortly comes to harvest.

Shakep.

With harvest work he is worse than in Spring.

L'Escur.

2. The corn ripened, gathered and inned.

From Ireland came I with my strength,
And reap the harvest which that scadal sow'd. Shak.

Come, my boys, come,
And surely root out harvest-home.

Dryden.

3. The product of labour.

Let us the harvest of our labour eat;
'Tis labour makes the consort diet sweet.

Dryden.

Harrow-Home. n. s.

1. The song which the reapers sing at the feast made for having inned the harvest.

Your hay is now mow'd, and your corn is reap'd;
Your barns will be full, and your hovels heaped;
Come, my sons, come;
And surely root out harvest-home.

Dryden.

2. The time of gathering harvest.

At harvest-home, and on the shaving.
Where he should think to Pan and Pales pay.

Dryden.

The opportunity of gathering treasure.

His wife I will use as the key of the cuckold rogue's covert; and here's my harvest-home.

Shakep, Merry Wives of Windsor.

Harvest-Lord. n. s. The head reaper at the harvest.

Grant harvest-lord more by a penury or two,
To call on his fellows the better to do.

Tuns.

Harvest-Lester. n. s. [from harvest.] One who works at the harvest.

A labourer in harvest.

Like to a harvest-man that's task'd to mow
Or all, or lose his hire.

Ishakep.

To Has, v. n. [hacher, Fr.] To mince; to chop into small pieces and mingle.

Lest he rain'd his arm
Above his head, and rain'd a storm
Of blows so terrible and thick,
As he meant to hash her quick.

Hudibras.

What have they to complain of but too great variety, though some of the dishes be not served in the exact order, and politeness; but hash'd and served as soon as sweated.

Gibbs.

Hask. n. s.

This seems to signify a case or habituation made of rushes or flags.

Obsoleto.

Phinous, weary of his yearly task,
Established hath his Reels in lowly lay,
And taken up his arms in fishes hase.

Spencer.

Hasel, n. s. [hasla, Islandick, a bundle; hasterel, hastevel, hastewier, Fr.] The heart, liver, and lights of a hog, with the windpipe, and part of the throat to it.

Hasp. n. s. [harp, Sax. whence in some provinces it is yet called harpe.] A clasp folded over a staple, and fastened on with a pattelock.

Hasten doors to open and shut at pleasure with haps to them.

Mortimer.

To Hasp, v. n. [from the noun.] To shut with a haps.

Hassock, n. s. [haseck, Germ. Skinner.

1. A thick mat on which men kneel at church.

He found his pastors there very irregular; and in order to make them kneel, and join in the responses, he gave every one of them a hassock and common prayer-book.

Addison.
In Shakesp. hachel, The is v. his Passionately to hache, who, iheir open-vehemence. From Shaketp. Disclosure lui __. To To but s. n Earlj'' Dut.] private, Psalms. would Inahurry; [34x228]Ha'stily. 1 To 1. For fastest Cinna, his speed. And each and half of them, when they rise, their numbers, and his gravity, I have as for imitated as the poverty of our language, and the hastiness of my performance, would allow. Dryden.

There is most just cause to fear, lest our hastiness to obtain such things of so perilous consequence should cause posterity to feel those evils. Hooker.

4. Angry testiness; passionless vehemence. HASTINGS. n. s. [hasty.] Peas that come early.

The large white and green hastings are not to be found together; for they are cut late. Nortiere.

HASTY. adj. [hastif, Fr. from haste; hastig, Dut.]

1. Quick; speedy. Is this the counsel that we two have hadd, The sisters vows, the hours that we have spent, When we did shed the hasty footed time. For parting us!

2. Passionate; vehement. He that is slow to wrath is of great understanding; but he is of hasty of spirit exalted. Proverbs.

3. Rash; precipitate. Seest thou a man that is hasty in his words? There is more hope of a fool than of him. Proverbs. Be not rash with thy mouth, and let not thine heart be hasty to utter any thing before God. Eccles. v. 2.

4. Early ripe. Beauty shall be a fading flower, and as the hasty fruit before the Summer. Isaiah.

HASTY-PUDDING. n. s. A pudding made of milk and flour, boiled quick together; as also of oatmeal and water boiled together. Sure hasty-pudding is thy chiefest dish With bullock's liver, or some stinking fish. Dryden.

HAT. n. s. [pax, Sax. hatt, Germ.] A cover for the head.

She's as big as he is, and there's her than hat, and her millier too. Shakespeare. Out of mere ambition you have made Your holy hat to stamp on the king's chin. Shakespeare.

Her hat was like a helmet, or Spanish morion. Bacon.

Hermes o'er his head in air appe'd, And with soft words his drooping spirits cheerd; His hat adorn'd with wings disclos'd the god, And in his hand he bore the sleep-compelling-rod. Dryden.

HAT-BAND. n. s. [hat and band.] A string tied round the hat.

They had hats of blue velvet, with fine piles of divers colours, set round like handkerchs. Bacon. As charming to the noble gladiator! see His coat and hatband shew his quality. Dryden.

HATCASE. n. s. [hat and case.] A slight box for a hat.

I might mention a hatcase, which I would not exchange for all the beavers in Great Britain. Addition.

To HATCH. v. a. [hecken, Germ. as Skinner thinks, from heggen, eggen, egg, eggs, Sax.] 1. To produce young from eggs by the warmth of incubation.

He kindly spreads his spacious wing, And hatches the young for Spring, Dryden. The tepid caves, and pens and shores, Their brood as numerous hatch from th' eggs, that Bristling with kindly rapture, forth disclos'd Their callah young. Milton

2. To quicken the egg by incubation.

When they have hatched such number of eggs as they can conveniently cover and hatch, they give over, and begin to sit. Others hatch their eggs, and tend the bird, till it is able to shield itself. Addition.

3. To produce by precedent action.

Which thing they very well knew, and I doubt not will easily confess, who live both to their great told, and grief, where the blasphemies of Arians are renewed by them; who, to hatch their heresy, have chosen those churches as fittest nests where Athanasius's creed is not heard. Hooker.

4. To form by meditation; to contrive. He was a man harmless and faithful, and one who never hatched any hopes prejudicial to the king, but always intended his safety and honour. Hayward.

5. [From hatcher to cut.] To shade by lines in drawing or graving. Who first shall cut through others arms, his blood appealing fresh, Shall win this sword, silver’d and hatchet. Chapman. Such as Agamemnon and the hand of Greece Should hold up high in brass! and an everlasting Again as venerable Nestor, hatch’d in silver, Should with a bower of air, strong as the axe-tree On which we ride, front all the Grecian ears To his experienced tongue. Shakespeare.

Those tender hairs, and those hatching strokes of the pen, which make a kind of minced meat in painting, are never able to deceive the sight. Dryden.

To HATCH. v. n. 1. To be in a state of growing quick. He observed circumanstseus in eggs, whilst they were hatching, which varied. Boile.

2. To be in a state of advance towards effect.

HATCH. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. A brood excluded from the egg.

2. The act of exclusion from the egg.

3. Disclosure; discovery.

Something is in beant, O' er which his melancholy sits on brood: And, I do doubt, the hatch and the disclose, will some change. Shakespeare. Hamlet.

4. [Here, Sax. hecke, Dut. holt.] A half door; a door with opening over it; perhaps from hacher to cut, as a hatch is part of a door cut in two.

Something about, a little from the right, In at the window, else o'er the hatch. Shakespeare.

5. [In the plural.] The doors or openings by which they descend from one deck or floor of a ship to another.

To the king's ship, livab1e as thou art, There shall thou find the mariners asleep Under the hatchets. Shakespeare. Tempest. There she's; her spathe. The mariners all under hatchets stow'd. Shakespeare. So seas, impell'd by winds with added pow'r, Assault the stern, and over the hatchets tow'r. Dryden. A ship was fasten'd to the shore; The plank was ready laid for safe ascent, For shelter there the trembling shadow bent, And skip'd and skul'd, and under hatchets went. Dryden.

6. To be under hatches. To be in a state of ignominy, poverty, or depression.

He assumes as how this fatherhood continued its course, till the captivity in Egypt, and then the poor fatherhood was under hatches. Locke.

Hatch. Floodgates. Ainsworth.

To HATCHEL. v. a. [hachelen, Germ.] To bent flax so as to separate the fibrous from the brittle part.

To hatchel, or hatchel, mentioned by Kircher in his description of China, put into water, moulders like clay, and is a fibrous small exsudation, like hairs growing upon the stones; and for the hatcheling, spinning, and weaving it, he refers to his manuab artificem. Woodward.

HATCHEL. r. n. [from the verb; hatchel, Germ.] The instrument with which flax in beaten.

HATCHELLER. n. s. [from hatchel.] A stronger flax.

HATCHET. s. [hache, hachet, Fr. acia, Lat.] A small axe.

The hatchet is to the irregularities of stuff. Mason.

His harmful hatchet he lent in his hand, And to the field he speedeth. Spranger.
HAT

Ye shall have a hempen candle then, and the help of a hatchet. Shaksp. Henry VI.

Nails, hammers, hatchets sharp, and hatters strong.

Tyrheus, the foster-father of the heart,

Then clenched a hatchet in his fiery fist. Dryden.

Our countryman persuaded him with a curious hatchet, and asking him whether it had a good edge, tried it upon the donor. Addison.

HATCHET-FACE, n.s. A ugly face; such, I suppose, as might be hewn out of a block by a hatchet.

An ape of his own dear image will embrue:
An ugly beau adores a hatchet face. Dryden.

HATCHMENT. n.s. Corrupted from achievement. See Achievement. Armorial escutcheon placed over a door at a funeral.

His means of death, his obscure funeral,

No trophye, sword, nor hatchet o'er his bones,

No noble rites nor formal ostentation,

Cry to be heard. Shaksp.

HATCHWAY, n.s. [hatches and ways; hatchways.

The way over or through the hatchets.

To HATE, v. a. [Latin, Saxon.] To detest; to abhor; to abominate; to regard with the passion contrary to love.

You are, I think, ass'd I love not you.

—Your majesty hath no just cause to hate me.

Do all men the thing they do not love?

Hate any man the thing he would not kill?

Every one's own is not a hat at first.

Those old inhabitants of thy high land hast hatet for doing most odious works. Wicl. xii. 4.

But whatsoever our jarring fortunes prove,

Though your hate, methekins we two may love.

Dryden.

HATE, n.s. [ace, Saxon.] Malignity; detestation; the contrary to love.

Speak then to me, who neither beg nor fear

Your favourite nor your enemy.

Yourself indeed, if aught that I have spoke

Shake up to Mezentius, and five hundred more.

Dryden.

Nausicaa teaches, that the afflicted are not always the objects of divine hate.

Brome's Notes on the Odyssey.

HATEFUL, adj. [hate and fall].

1. That which causes abhorrence; odious;

abominable, detestable.

My name's Macbeth.—The devil himself could not pronounce a title

More hateful to mine ear. Shaksp.

There were no more hateful to God and man than ingratitude.

Peacham.

What owe I to his commands

Who hates and hath hit not me down.

To sit in hateful office here confin'd,

Inhabitant of heav'n, and heav'nly born? Milton.

I bear the tread

Of hateful steps; I must be viewless now.

But Umbrial, hateful gnome! forbears not so;

He breaks the plaid wherein the sorrow lies.

Pope.

2. That which feels abhorrence; abhorrent; detesting; malignant; malevolent.

Pallas, compell'd

No more to try the fortune of the field;

And, worse than death, to view with hateful eyes

His rival's conquest. Dryden.

HATEFULLY, adv. [from hateful].

1. Odiously; abominably.

2. Malignantly; maliciously.

All their hearts stood hateful! appalled

Long since. Chapman.

They shall deal with thee hateful! they slay away all thy labour, and leave thee naked and bare.

Exod. xxvii. 99.

HATEFULNESS, n.s. [from hateful]. Odiousness.

HATER, n.s. [from hate.] One that hates; an abhorrer; a detester.

VOL. I.
HAU

The gods have placed labour before virtue. Addis.

This observation we have made on man. Addis. Evil spirits have contracted in the holy habit of lust and malignity, malice, and revenge. Addis. Their tormentors have already taken root in them. Addis.

That excellent author has shown how every particular custom and habit of virtue will, in its own nature, produce the heaven, or state of happiness, in him who shall hereafter practise it. Addison.

20. Have at, or with, is an expression denoting resolution to make some attempt. They seem to be imperative expressions; have this at you; let this reach you; or take this; have with you; take this with you; but this will not explain have at it, or have at him, which must be considered as more elliptical; as, we will have a trial at it, or at him.

He that will coper with me for a thousand marks, let him lend me the money, and love him. Shak.

I can bear my part; 'tis my occupation: have at it with all my might; having a full measure of it. Shak.

I never was out at a mad frolick, though this is the maddest I ever undertook: have with you lady mine; I take this at your word. Dryden.

HAVEN. n.s. [hovre, s. Dut., havre, Fr.]

1. A port; a harbour; a station for ships. Love was threatened and promised to him, and his cousin, as both the tempest and haven of their best years. Sidney.

Order for sea is given: They have put forth the haven. Shak.

After an hour's and a half sailing, we entered into a good port, being the port of a fair city. Bacon. The queen beheld, as soon as day appear'd, The navy under sail, the haven clear'd. Denham.

We may fish here, for the haven clear'd. Dryden.

Love, favordly once with that sweet gale, Doubles his haste, and fills his sail till be arrive, where she must prove The haven, or the rock of love. Waller.

2. A shelter; an asylum. All places, that the eye of heaven visits, Are to a wise man ports and happy haven. Shak.

HAVENER, n.s. [from haven.] An overseer of a port. These ears and dukes appointed their special officers, as receiver, havener, and customs. Carew.

HAVES, n.s. (from have.) Possessor; holder. Valour is the chiefest virtue, and Most dignifies the have. Shak.

HAVEN is a common word in the northern countries for oats; as, have bread for oat bread; perhaps properly aven, from arena, Lat.

When you would amaze, take a blue stone, such as they make have or oat cakes upon, and lay it upon the cross bars of iron. Peacham.

HAUGHT. adj. [haut, Fr.]

1. Haughty; insolent; proud; contemptuous; and hastily, hastily. Obsolete.

The proud insinuating queen, With Clifford and the haught Northumberland, Have wrought the easy melting king, like wax. Shak.

No lord of thine, thou haught insulting man; Nor any man's lord. Shak.

2. Proud; highly magnanimous. In corpse, haughty. Desir'd of foreigner known to be, And far abroad for strange adventures sought. Spenser.

IIAUGHTLY. adj. [From haughty.]

Proudly; arrogantly; contemptuously.

Her haughtily form too haughtily she prized; His person hatred, and his gifts despis'd. Dryden.

HAUGHTINESS. n.s. [From haughty.]

Pride; arrogance; the quality of being haughty.

By the head we make known our supplications, our threnodies, our meekness, our haughtiness, our love, and our hatred. Dryden.

HAUGHTY. adj. [hauteine, Fr.]

1. Proud; lofty; insolent; arrogant; contemptuous.

His wife being a woman of a haughty and imperious nature, and of a wit superior to his, quickly resented the disrespect she received from him. Clarendon.

I shall sing of battles, blood and rage, And haughty souls, that madly with mortal hate, In fighting fields pursu'd and found their fate. Dryden.

2. Proudly great. Our vanquish'd wits that pleasing force obey; Her goodness takes our liberty away; And haughty Britain yields to arbitrary sway. Prior.

3. Bold; adventurous; of high hazard.

Ob sole. Who now shall give me words and sound Equal to such a storm? Who shall lead me with, with which from ground My lowly vessel may aloft rise? Fairy Queen.

HAVING. n.s. [from have.]

1. Possession; estate; fortune.

My having is not much; I'll make division of my present with you. Shak.

2. The act or state of possessing.

Of the one side was alleged the having a picture, which the other wanted; of the other side, the first striking the shield. More.

Onus: For the fashion of these times, Where none will sweat but for promotion; And having that, do chock their service up. Shak.

3. Behaviour; regularity. This is still retained in the Scottish dialect. It may possibly be the meaning here. The gentleman is of no having: he kept company with the wild prince and Poles: he is of too high a region: he knows too much. Shak.

HAUPTER. n.s. [from hauft.] Conduct; manners; not used. Their ill haufter gare men mislays. Both of their doctors were very heauft. Spenser.

To HAU. n.s. [huler, Fr. to draw.]

To pull; to draw; to drag by violence. A word which, applied to things, implies violence; and to persons, awkwardness or rudeness. This word is liberally exemplified in hate; etymology is regarded in hail, and pronunciation in hault.

Thy Dol. and Helen of thy noble thoughts, Is in brave durance and contours prison. Shak.

Hault'd thither by mechanic dirty hands. Shak.

The youth with songs and rimes, Some dance, some hault the rope. Denham.

Some wheel theirenterprize, And fasten to the horses feet; the rest With cables hault along th' unwieldy beast. Dryd.

In his grandeur he nativity chuses to hault up others after him whose accomplishments most resemble his own. Swift.

Thither they bent, and hault'd their ships abroad. The crooked keel divides the yellow sand. Pope.

Romp-loving miss Is hault'd about in galantry robust, Thomson.

Haut. n.s. [From the verb.]

1. Place in which one is frequently found. We set toils, nets, gins, snares and traps, for beasts and birds in their own havens and walks. L'Estrange.

To me pertains not, she replies, To know or care where Cupid flies; For that his haunts be as many as the skies, Where he would dwell, or whither stray. Prior.

A scene where, if a god should cast his sight, A god might gaze and wonder with delight! So this dangerous torment of a heav'n; he stay'd, and Enter'd, and all the blissful haunts survey'd. Pope.

2. Habit of being in a certain place.

The haunt you have got about the courts will one day or another bring your family to beggary. Arbuthnot.

HAUPTER. n.s. [from hauft.] Frequent; one that is often found in any place.

The ancient Greeks were an ingenious people, of whom the vulgar sort, as such were haunters of theatres, took delight in the concerts of Aristophanes. Wotton on Education.

874
HAVOC. n. s. [havog, Welsh, devastation.] Waste; wide and general devastation; merciless destruction.

HAVOCK. interj. [from the noun.] A word of encouragement to slaughter.

Why should these loyal fronts amass thugs? Cry havock! kings! Shakes.

HAW. n. s. [pax, Sax.]

1. The berry and seed of the hawthorn. The seed of the bramble with kernel and haw. Turner.

Hawk. n. s. [hæbeg, Welsh; jàpoc, Sax. acipenser, Lat.]

1. A bird of prey, used much ancienly in sport to catch other birds. Do'st thou love hawking? Thou hast hawks will soar Above the morning lark. Shakes. It can be no more disgrace to a great lord to draw a fair picture, than to cut his hawk's meat. Peacham.

2. [Hoch, Welsh.] An effort to force phlegm up the throat. To HAWK. v. n. [from hawk.]

HAZE. We have hearts of dugs, and of hawks and hawks laid up points.

to the tern'd hawk cock in the mead. Milton.

To bring them for food sweet bouquets and flowres cut. And all the Whitsun birds are richly deck'd. Made.

Some turners termed long and slender springs of ivory, as small as an yale stalk. Dryden.

By some hawk cock, or some shady thorn, Wilt hawks' heads last seven song words. Dryden.

The best manner for meadow is the bottom of hay mows and hay stacks. Mortimer.

Hay and oats, in the management of a farm will make ale. Swift.

To dance the hay. To dance in a ring: probably from dancing round a hawk cock.

To play on the toeber to the worthies, And let them dance the hay. Shakes.

This noted think on the hearth they see, When fires well rich consumed be, There dancing hays by two and three, Jus. Just as your face casts them. Dryden.

The gum and glist'ning, which with And they'd doth, in each part Hangs down, Looks just as if that day Shall there had crav'd the hay. Sackling.

HAZARD. n. s. [hazard, Fr. aazar, Span. hazki, Runick, danger.] One employed in drying grass for hay.

As to the return of his health and vigor, were you here, you might emulate of his haukmakers. Pope to Swift.

Where the mind does not perceive connection, there men's opinions are not the product of judgment, but the effects of chance and hazard, of a mind floating at all adventures, without choice and without direction. Locke.

DANGER. n. s. [danger, hazard, Fr. aazar, Span. hazki, Runick, danger.] One employed in drying grass for hay.

To HAZARD. v. a. [hazarder, Fr.] To expose to chance; to put into danger.

They might, by persisting in the extremity of that opinion, hazard greatly their own estates, and so weaken that part which their places now give. Hob.

It was not in his power to adventure up his own fortune, or hearing a publick charge to hazard himself against a man of private condition. House.

By dealing indifferently to any, you may hazard your own share. Sherlock.

To HAZARD. v. n. [from hazard.]

1. To try the chance. I pray you tarry; pause a day or two. Before you hazard; for in choosing wrong, I lose your company. Shakes.
2. To adventure: to run the danger. She from her fellow-peoples would go. Rather than hazard to have you her foe. Waller.

HAZARDOUS, adj. [from hazard.] Venturous: liable to chance. An hazardous determination it is, unto fluctuating and indifferent effects, to affix a positive type or period. Brown.

HAZARDER, n. s. [from hazard.] He who hazards.

HAZARDRY, n. s. [from hazard.] Temerity; precipitation; rash adventurousness. Obsolete. Haztry.

HAZARDOUS, adj. [hazardous, Fr. from hazard.] Dangerous; exposed to chance. Grant that our hazardous attempt prove vain. We feel the worst, sordu from greater pain. Dryden.

HAZARDOUSLY, adv. [from hazardous.] With danger or chance.

HAZE, n. s. [The etymology unknown.] Fog; mist.

To HAZE, v. To be foggy or misty.

To HAZE, v. a. To fright one. AIuvw.

HAZEL, [pupil, Sax. corylus, Lat.] Nut tree.

The nuts grow in clusters, and are closely joined together at the bottom, each being covered with an outward brack or cap, which opens at the top, and when the fruit is ripe it falls out. The species are hazelnut, cobnut, and filbert. The red and white filberts are mostly esteemed for their fruit. Miller. Hazels, which, in hackney twigs, is straight and slender; and as brown in hue. As hazel nuts, and sweeter than the kernels. Shak. Her chalice is an empty hazel nut. Shak. Why sit we not beneath the grateful shade. Which hazels, intermix'd with elms, have made! Spenser.

There are some from the size of a hazel nut to that of a man's fist. Woodword.

HAZEL, adj. [from the noun.] Light brown; of the colour of hazel. Haze was the day's first soil, that has a good depth of light hazel mould. Mortimer.

HAZELLY. adj. Of the colour of hazel; a light brown.

Uplands consist either of sand, gravel, chalk, rock or stone, hazel loam, clay, or brown loam. Mortimer.

HAZY. adj. [from haze.] Dark; foggy; misty.

Our clearest day here is misty and hazy; we see not far, and what we do see is in a misty light. Burnet's Theory.

Oft engender'd by the hazy North. Myrads on myrads, insect armies walk. Thomson.

He, pronoun. gen. him; plur. they, gen. them. [by, Dut. je, Sax. It seems to have borrowed the plural from Sip, plural, Spar, dative biforn.]

1. The man that was named before. All the conspirators, save only he, Did that they did in envy of great Caesar. Shak. If much you note him, You shall offend him, and increase his passion; Feed and regard him not. Shak. I am weary of this moon; would he would change. Shak. Adam spoke; So cheer'd he his fair spouse, and she was cheer'd.

When Adam wak'd, he on his side Leaning half rais'd hang over her. Thus sitting, hanging head along they past'd On to their blissful bow's. Milton.

Extol Him first, him last, him midst. Milton.

2. The man; the person. It sometimes stands without reference to any foregoing word. He is never poor. That little hath, but he that much desires. Daniel.

3. Man or male being. Such was his station, but Mantua's law Is death to any he that utters them. Shak. I stand to answer thee, or any he the proudest of dry sort. Troil and his race the sculptor shall employ, And he the god who built the walls of Troy. Dryd.

4. Male: as, a he bear, a he goat. It is used where the male and female have not different denominations. The he's in birds have the fullest feathers. Ben.

In the two last senses he is rather a noun than pronoun.

HEAD. n. s. [Peacob, peard, Sax. haofd, Dut. hered, old English, whence by contraction, head.]

1. The part of the animal that contains the brain or the organ of sensation and seat of thought. Vex him boiling verren, and head purging dull. Spen. Over head up-ras Incomparable height of loveliest shade. Milton. The dewy jewels of meadows will trace. For cowans and chaplets to adorn thy head. Dryd. I could still have offers, that some, who held him, heads higher, would be glad to accept. Swift.

2. Person as exposed to any danger or penalty. What he gets more of than sharp words, let it lie on my head. Shak. Who of all ages succeed, but feeling The evil on him brought by me, will cure My head I'll fear our ancestor impure. Milton.

3. Head and ears. The whole person.

In juggling rhymes well forlorn and strong, He fights in check'd o'er head and ears in song. Granville.

4. Denomination of any animals.

When James one of the marquis of Carpo to furnish thirty thousand head of swine, he could not spare them; but thirty thousand lawyers he had at his service. The tax upon pasturage was raised according to a certain rate per head upon cattle. Arbuthnot.

5. Chief; principal person; one to whom the rest are subordinate; leader; commander.

For their commons, there is little danger from them, except it be where they have great and potent heads. Bacon. Your head I him appoint; And by myself have sworn, to him shall All knees in heaven, and shall confess him lord. Milton.

The heads of the chief sects of philosophy, as Thales, Anaxagoras, and Pythagoras, did consent to this tradition. Tilton.

6. Place of honour; the first place. Authority among all the justices had taken their places upon the Bench, they made room for the old knight at the head of them. Addison.

7. Place of command. An arm of four score thousand troops, with the duke of Marlborough at the head of them, could do nothing. Addison on the War.

8. Countenance; presence.

Richard not far from hence shall bid his head. Shak. Richard II. With Cain go wander through the shade of night, and never shew thy head by day. Shak. Ere to-morrow shall shew his head. Dryd.

9. Understanding; faculties of the mind; commonly in a ludicrous sense.

The wenches laid their heads together. L'Estrange. A fox and a goat went down to drink; the goat fell hunting which way to get back;
HEA

21. Dress of the head.
   Ladies think they gain a point when they have taught their girls to buy them a made head or a fine petticoat.
   Swift.

22. Principal topick of discourse.
   These heads are of a mixed order, and we propose only such as belong to the natural world.
   Burnet's Theory.
   'Tis our great interest, and duty, to satisfy ourselves of this head, upon which our whole conduct depends. Atterbury.

   It is the glory of God to give; his very nature delighteth in it. It's his mercies in the course, through which they would pass, may be dried up,
   but at the head they never fail. Hooker.
   The current by Oribia is but a small stream, rising between it and the Red sea, whose head from Gaza is little more than twenty English miles. Raleigh's History.
   Some did the song, and some the choir maintain,
   Beneath a laurel shade, where mighty Po
   Mounts up to woods above, and hides his head
   Dryden.

24. Crisis; pitch.
   The indisposition which has long hung upon me, is at last grown to such a head, that it must quickly make a change, or it will be too late. Addison.
   Power; influence; force; strength; dominion.
   Within her breast though calm, her breast though pure.
   Motherly care he has got head, and said
   Some troubled thoughts. Milton
   Po

   People under command chuse to consult, and after to march in order; and rebels, contrariwise, run upon an head together in confusion. Bacon.
   Amighty and a fearful head they are,
   As ever offered foul play in a state. Shaksp.
   Far is the marches here we heard you were,
   Making another head to fight again. Shaksp.
   Let all this wicked crew gather
   Their forces to one head. Jen Jonson

27. Power; armed force.
   My lord, my lord, the French have gather'd head.
   When Tarquin made a head for Rome, he sought
   Beyond the mark of others. Shakespeare.

28. Liberty in running a horse.
   He gave his horse head.
   And bounding forward struck his agile heels
   Against the painting sides of his poor jade
   Up to the ravish'd head. Shaksp.

29. Licence; freedom from restraint; a metaphor from horsemanship.
   God will not admit of the passionate man's apology, that he has so long given his unruly passions the head, that he cannot now govern nor control them. South.

30. It is very improperly applied to roots.
   Now turneys hide their swelling heads below,
   And how the closing culkets upwards grow.
   Gay.

31. Head and shoulders. By force; violently.
   People that hit upon a thought that tickles them, will be doing it in by head and shoulder overs and over, in several companies.
   They bring in every figure of speech, head and shoulders by main force, in spite of nature, and their subject. L'Estrange.
   They made their escape to Winchester, the head quarter of the Scarens.
   To head. n. a. [from the noun.]
   1. To head; to influence; to direct; to govern.
   Abas, who seem'd our friend, is either fled,
   Or, what we fear, our enemies does head. Dryden.

HEADLAND. n. s. [head and land.]

1. Promontory; cape.
   An heroic play ought to be an imitation of an heroic poem, and consequently love and valour ought to be the subject of it. Both these Sir William Davenant began in shadow; but it was so as discoverers draw their maps with headlands and promontories.

2. Ground under hedges.
   Never down with the grasp upon headlands about,
   That greweth in shadow so rank and so stout.
   Tusser.

HEADLESS. adj. [from head.]
   1. Without an head; beheaded.
   His shining helmet he 'gan soon unlace,
   And left his headless body bleeding at the place.
   Shakespeare.

   2. Without a chief.
   They rested not until they had made the empire stand headless about seventeen years. Raleigh.

   3. Obstinate; inconsiderate; ignorant; wanting intellects; perhaps for headless
   Him may I more justly blame and condemn, either of wildless headiness in judging, or of headless hardness in condemning. Dryden.

HEADLONG. adj.
   Steep down with furious.

   1. Rashly; thoughtless.

   3. Sudden; precipitate.
   It suddenly fell from an excess of favour, which many examples having taught them, never stop't its course, 'till it came to a headlong overthrow. Sib.

HEADMOUTH-SHOT. n. s. [head, mould, and shot.]
   This is when the sutures of the skull, generally the coronal, ride; that is, have their edges shot over one another; which is frequent in infants, and occasions convulsions and deaths. Quincy.

HEADPIECE. n. s. [head and piece.]
1. Armour for the head; helmet; morion.

2. Understanding; force of mind.

3. Of headpiece extraordinary, lower messes

4. HEAD. adj. [from head.]

5. Headstrong. adj. [head and strong.] Unrestrained; violent; ungovernable; resolve to run his own way; as a horse whose head cannot be held in.

6. Headstone. n. s. [head and stone.] The first or capital stone.

7. Headworkman. n. s. [head work and man.] The foreman, or chief servant over the rest.

8. Heady. adj. [from head.]

9. Headly. adj. [from head.]

10. Welfare of mind; purity; goodness; principle of salvation. There is no health in us. Common Prayer. The best preservative to keep the mind in health, is the faithful beginning of a friend. Bacon.

11. Salvation spiritual and temporal.

13. Healthful.

14. Healthful. adj. [health and full.]

15. Free from sickness.

16. Wholesome.

17. Healthfulness. n. s. [from healthful.]

18. State of being well.

19. Wholesomeness; salubrious qualities.

20. Heathen.

22. Heathless. adj. [from heath.] The state of health.

23. Weak; sickly; inflam.

24. Not conducive to health.

25. Healthy.

27. Enjoying health; free from sickness; hue; sound.

28. Healthful. adj. [health.] Whole; salutary. Not used. Shall I not then be stiled in the vault, To whose foul mouth no healthsome air breastes in, And there be strange'd ere my Romeo comes? Sh.
H E A

land, hath preserved an infant commonwealth, of a sickly constitution, though so many dangers, as a much more healthy one could never have struggled against, without those advantages. Saff.
Air and exercise contribute to make the animal healthy.
Arbuthn.

1. Conductive to health; wholesome.

2. Gardening or husbandry, and working in wood, art, and healthy recreations for a man of study and business.

HEAM. n. s. In beasts the same as the after-birth in women.

HEAP. n. s. [peep, Sax. heap, Dut. and Scottish.]

1. Many single things thrown together;
a pile; an accumulation.

The way to lay the city flat,
And bury all which yet distinctly stands.
Shakesp.

2. A crowd; a throng; a rabble.

A cruel tyrant, heap'd of vassals and slaves,
No freemen, no inheritance, no stip or ancient families.

Bacon.

3. Cluster; number driven together.

An universal cry resounds along;
The sailors run in heaps, a helpless crowd.
Ddry.

To HEAP. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To throw on heaps; to pile; to throw together.

Heap on wood, kill the fire.
Ech. xix. 10.

2. To accumulate; to lay up.

Though the wicked heap up silver as the dust,
And rain it as the clay; but the just shall it put on, and the innocent shall divide the silver.
Job, xxvii. 16.

How great the credit was, wherein that oracle was preserved, may be gathered from the vast riches which were there heaped up from the offerings of all the Grecian nations.

Temple.

They who will make profession of painting, must heap up treasures out of their reading, and there will find many wonderful means of raising themselves above others.

Dryden.

3. To add to something else.

For the late dignities heep'd up to them,
We rest your remits.
Shakesp.

HEAPER. n. s. [from heap.]

One that makes piles or heaps.

HEAPY. adj. [from heap.]
Lying in heaps.

Where a dim gleam the pale anthorn throws
O'er the mid pavement, heapy rubbish grows.
Gay.

Scarc.e his head
Rain'd o'er the heapy wreck, the branching elk
Lien slumbering aften in the white abyss.
Thoms.

To HEAR. v. n. [hearn, Sax. hoeren.

Dut.]

1. To enjoy the sense by which sounds are distinguished.

Sound is nothing but a certain modulation of the external air, which being gathered by the external car, beats, as is supposed, upon the membrana tymanum, which moves the four little bones in the tymanum; in like manner as it is beat by the external air, these little bones move the internal air which is in the tympanum and vestibulum; which internal air makes an impression upon the auditory nerve in the labyrinth and cochlea, according as it is moved by the little bones in the tympanum; so that, according to the various reflections of these internal air, the internal air makes various impressions upon the auditory nerve, the immediate organ of hearing; and these different impressions give different sounds. Quincy.

The object of hearing is sound, whose variety is so great, that it brings in admirable store of inlucence.

Holder.
HE A

2. It is supposed in popular language to be the sent sometimes of courage, sometimes of affection, sometimes of honesty, or banenity.

He that provokes and courages so passed over all that the mother took such prized grief at it, that she heart brake with it, and she died, Sidny. Thou wouldst not leave thee dearest heart blood there, rather than made that savage duke thine heir, and disinterested thine only son. Shakesp. Snakes in my heart and blood warm'd, that sting my heart.

Our battle is more full of names than yours, our men more perfect in the use of arms, our armour all so strong, the cause of the best; then reason wills our hearts should be as good. Shakesp. I thank you for your zealous, master Shallow.—Master Page, much good do your good heart. Shakesp. Shakesp. But since the brain doth lodge the power of sense, how makes it in the heart those passions spring? The mutual love, the kind intelligence. "Twixt heart and brain, this sympathy doth bring!"—Dewey. We set all our hearts at rest, since whatever comes from above is for the best. L'Estrange. This is the case which is guided by a good light in the head, and which consists of good and innocent affections in the heart. Sprat. The heart corroding grief and years. To the gay court a rural shed prefers. Pope. 3. The chief part; the vital part; the vigorous or efficacious part. Barley being steeped in water, and turned upon a dry floor, will sprout half an inch, if it be let alone, much more, until the heart be out. Bacon.

4. The inner part of any thing. Some Englishmen did with great danger pass by water into the heart of the country. Abbot. The king's fingers are employed in angry disorders more near the heart of the kingdom. Hayward. Generally the inside or heart of trees is harder than the outward parts. Here in the heart of all the town I stay, and timely succour where it wants convoy. Shakesp. If the foundation he bad, provide good ples made of heart of oak, such as would reach ground. Shakesp.

5. Person; character. Used with respect to courage or kindness. The king's a bawcock, and a heart of gold, a lad of life, an imp of fame. Shakesp. Hey, my heart; cheerly, my heart. Shakesp. What says my heart of elder? He is here dead! Shakesp.

6. Courage; spirit. If it please you to make his fortune known, I will after take heart again to go on with his falsehood. There did other like unhappy accidents happen out of England, which gave heart and good opportunity to them to regain their old possessions. Spenser. Wide was the would; a large hokewarm food, red as rose, these shivered grievous. That when the pain dead, and the blood streaming, he gave great heart and hope of victory. Fairy Queen. Ever, recov'ring heart, rep'red. Having left that city well provided, and in good heart, his majesty removed with his little army to Bevil, and there remained. Finding that it did them no hurt, they took heart upon't, went up to't, and viewed it. L'Estrange. The expelled nation take heart, and when this fly from one country invade another. Temple.

7. Seat of love. Ah! what avail's it me the flocks to keep, who lost my heart while I preserv'd my sheep? Pope. 8. A great inspiration. Joaol perceived that the king's heart was towards Absalom.
HEART-DEAR. adj. Sincerely beloved.

He was by Jove depraved
Of his own heart-string, and heart-string of an eagle rived.
Spenser.

Heart-string. n. s. [string and heart.]
The tendons or nerves supposed to brace and sustain the heart.

Heart-stick. adj. [Saxon.]
1. Driven to the heart; fixated for ever in the mind.
Who is with him?
—None but the fool who labours to outstrip
His heart-stick's injuries.
—Granville.
2. Shocked with fear or dismay.

Vol. I.

HEART-SICK. adj.
1. Pained in mind.
If we be heart-sick or afflicted with an uncertain soul, then we are true desirers of relief and mercy.
Taylor.

2. Mortally ill; hurt in the heart.
Good Romeon, hide thyself.
—Not so; unless the breach of heart-sick grieves,
Mist like a mist from me the search of eyes.
Shak.

Heart-sick. n. s. [heart and heart.]

The tendons or nerves supposed to brace and sustain the heart.

He was by Jove deprived
Of his own heart-string, and heart-string of an eagle rived.
Spenser.

How, out of tune on the strings?
—Not so; yet so false, that he gives my very heart-string.
Shak.

That grieves my heart-strings: what should discontent him?
Exeunt he thinks I live too long. Danham.
If thou thinkest thou shalt perish, I cannot blame thee to be said 'till thy heart-strings crack.
Taylor.

There's the fatal wound
That tears my heart-strings, and he shall be found,
My arm's shall slay his heart-string with this spear.
—Granville.

Heart-stick. adj.

1. Driven to the heart; fixated for ever in the mind.
Who is with him?

—None but the fool who labours to outstrip
His heart-stick's injuries.
—Shak.

Heart-stuck. adj.

—Sincerely; freedom from hypocrisy.

This entertainment may a free face put on: derive a liberty from heartiness, and well become the
Shak.

2. Vigour; eagerness.

The anger of an enemy represents our faults, and admonishes us of our duty, with more heartiness than the uselessness of a friend's.

Heartless. adj. [from heart.]

Without courage; spiritless.
I poyed oft to chase the trembling pricket,
Or hunt the heartless hare till she was tame.
Shak.

Then hopeless, heartless 'gan the cunning thief,
Persuading us, to still all further strife.
Fairly &

What art thou drawn among these heartless kind?

Turn thee, Benavvy; look upon thy death.
Shak.

Thousands besides stood mute and heartless there,

Men valiant all; nor was I'ud to fear.
Cowley.

The peasants were accustomed to payments, and grew heartless as they grew poor.

Temple.

Heartless they fought, and quitted soon their course,

While our's with easy victory were crowned.
Dry.

Heartlessly. adv. [from heartless.]

Without courage; faintly; timidly.

Heartlessness. n. s. [from heartless.]

Want of courage or spirit; dejection of mind.

Heart. adj. [from heart.]

1. Sincere; undisssembled; warm; zealous.

They did not bring that hearty inclination to peace, which they hoped thy would have done.
Chancellor.

But the kind hosts their entertainment grace
With hearty welcome and an open face;

In all they did, you might discern ease
A willing mind, and a desire to please.
Dry.

Every man may pretend to some employment,
Provided he be loud and frequent in declaring himself hearty for the government.
Syst.

2. In full health.

3. Vigorous; strong.

Whose laughs are hearty, though his jests are coarse,

And loves you best of all things but his horse.
Pope.

4. Strong; hard; durable.

Oak, and the like true hearty timber, being strong in all points, may be better trusted in reason Transverse works.

Watson.

Hearty-Hale. adj. [heart and hale.]
Good for the heart.

Vei-lowing vernal, and head-purging dill,
Sound savoury, and basil heartly hale.
—Spenser.

Heat. n. s. [heat, hear, Sax. héc, Dan.]

1. The sensation caused by the approach or touch of fire.

Heat is a very brisk agitation of the sensible parts of the object, which produces in us that sense, from whence we denominate the object hot; so what in our sensation is heat, in the object is nothing but motion.
Locke.

The word heat is used to signify the sensation we have when we are near the fire, as well as the cause of that sensation, which is in the fire itself; and therefore we conclude, that there is a sort of heat in the fire resembling our own sensation, whereas in the fire there is nothing but little particles of matter, of such particular shapes as are fitted to impress such motions on our flesh as excite the sense of heat.

2. The cause of the sensation of burning.

The sword which is made fiery does not only cut by reason of the sharpness which simply it hath, but also burns by means of that heat which it hath from fire.
—Hoearo.

3. Hot weather.

After they came down into the valley, and found the intolerable heat there; and knew no means of lighter apparel, they were forced to go naked.
—Bacon.
To HEAT. v. n. [from the noun.]

1. To make hot; to endue with the power of burning.
2. To cause to ferment.
3. To make the constitution feverish.
4. To warm with vehemence of passion or desire.

To HEAT. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To agitate the blood and spirits with action.
2. A shrub of low stature: the leaves are small, and abibe green all the year.
3. A place overgrown with heath.
4. The 2. n. [heath and pond.] A bird.
5. Heath. n. [heath.] An iron made hot, and put into a box-iron, to smooth and plain linen.
Lift the Pope. With celestial tendance.

Milton.

Temple.

Grievously Raised

The heavens! All I hear after often hearing; the heavens! All I hear after often hearing.

Drieden.

Or heavenward. [heaven and peap.]

Sax. Towards heaven.

I prostrate lay.

By various doubts impell'd, or to obey.

Heav'nward erect, determin's, thus I spoke. Prior.

HEAVY. adj. [heavy.

1. With great ponderousness.

2. Gravely; affectively.

3. With an air of dejection.

- With your grace so heavily to-day?
- O, I have past a miserable night.

HEAVINESS. n. s. [from heavy.

1. Ponderousness; the quality of being heavy; weight.

2. Subject to dejection, the heaviness of several bodies, or the proportion that is required between weight and the power which may move it.

3. Defection of mind; depression of spirit.

We are, at the hearing of some, more inclined to sorrow and heaviness; or some more mollified and softened the mind.

- Against all these are men ever merry. But heaviness forever the good event. Shaksp.

4. In a fit of the spleen. When the spleen is sick.

5. Heaviness in the heart of man maketh it stout; but a good word maketh it glad. Prov. xi. 15.

6. Ye greatly rejoice; though now for a season ye are in heaviness, through manifold temptations. 1 Pet. i. 6.

Inaptitude to motion or thought; sluggishness; torpidness; dulness of spirit; languishness; languor.

Our strength is all gone into heaviness. Shaksp.

What mean this heaviness that hangs upon me? This lassitude that creeps through all my senses? Addison.

He would not violate that sweet recess,
And found beside a welcome heaviness. Dryden.

A sensation of througness, oppression, heaviness, and名单, is a sign of a too plentiful mead. Arbuthnot.

Oppression; crush; affliction: as, the heaviness of taxes.

5. Deepness or richness of soil.

As Alexandria exported many commodities, so it received some, which, by reason of the fatness and heaviness of the ground, Egypt did not produce; such as metals, wood, and pitch. Arbuthnot.

HEAVY. adj. [heavy.

1. Weighty; ponderous; tending strongly to the centre; contrary to light.

Menaced us, tells us, that a little child, with an engine of an hundred double pulleys, might move this earth, though it were much heavier than it.

Wilton.

2. Sorrowful; dejected; depressed.

Let me not be light.

For a light wife doth make a heavy husband. Shaksp.

3. Grievous; oppressive; affective.

Menac'd by an heavy load over the citizens, having a malicious mind.

2 Mar. v. 23.

Let not your ears despise my tongue for ever.

Shaksp.

When shall they join with the heavier sound That ever yet they heard? Shaksp. Moret.

If the cause be not good, the king himself hath a heavy reckoning to make. Shaksp. Henry v.

Fry. The good man, and for his sake Whose heavy load bath bow'd him to the grave, And begg'd you for ever. Shaksp.

Clifford, at the lever, Tells with a sneer the heavy fry.

Swift.

4. Wanting alacrity; wanting briskness of appearance.

My heavy eyes, you say, confess
A heart to love and grief inclin'd. Prior.

5. Wanting spirit or rapidity of sentiment; unmanned.

A work was to be done, a heavy writer to be engaged, and accordingly many thousands of copies were bespoke. Swift.

6. Wanting activity; indolent; lazy.

Fair, tall, his limbs with due proportion join'd; But of a heavy, dull, degenerate mind. Dryd.

7. Drowsy; dull; torpid.

Peter and they that were with him heavy with sleep. Luke.

8. Slow; sluggish.

But let thy spiders that suck up thy venom.

And heavy gaited tods lie in their way. Shaksp.

9. Stupid; foolish.

This heavy headed revel, East and West Make us traduc'd, and tax'd of other nations. Shaksp.

I would not be accounted so base minded, or heavy headed, that I will confess that any thing is for value, power, or fortune better than myself. Knolle.

10. Burdensome; troublesome; tedious.

I put into thy hands what has been the diversion of some of my idle and heavy hours. Locke.

If such a one, your time will not lie heavy on your hands for want of some trifling amusement. Swift.

11. Loaded; incumbered; bURTHENED.

Hearing that there were forces coming against him, and that he wished that they should find him heavy and laden with booty, he returned up to Scotland.

Queen's Henry vii.
HEC

12. Not easily digested; not light to the stomach.

13. Rich in soil; fertile, as heavy lands.

14. Deep; cumbersome, as heavy roads.

HEC, n.s. [Hebdomas, Lat.] A week; a space of seven days.

HEBDOMAD. n.s. [Hebdomas, Lat.] A week.

HEBDOMADARY. adj. [from hebdomad.] Weekly; consisting of seven days.

HEBDOMADAL. adj. [from hebdomada.] Hebdomadal.

HEBDOMADARIES. n.s. mas, Lat.] Weekly.

HED. n.s. [Hecatombe, Brown.] A sacrifice of an hundred cattle.

HEDIC. n.s. [Hedictic, Fr. from Hedict.] Habitual; constitutional.

This word is joined only to that kind of fever which is slow and continual, and ending in a continuous state of the hair and sweat, generally those of the skin; whereby so much runs off as leaves not resistance enough in the contractile vessels to keep the sensible ducts dilated, so that they vibrate, often, agitate the fluids the more, and keep them thin and hot. Quincey.

A febric fever hath got hold
Of the whole substance, not to be control’d. Donne.

HEC

2. Troubled with a morbid heat.

Like the hectic in my blood he rages,
And thou must cure me. Shaksp. Hamlet.

HÉCTOR. n.s. [from the name of Hector, the great Homeric warior.] A bully; a blustering, turbulent, pernicious, noisy fellow.

Those usurping hectors, who pretend to honour without religion, think the charge of a lye a blot not to be washed out but by blood. South.

We'll take our cooling cup of nectar, And drink to this celestial hector. Prior.

To HÉCTOR. v. a. [from the noun.] To threaten; to treat with insolent authoritative terms.

They reckon they must part with honour together with their opinion, if they suffer themselves to be hector’d out of it. Garrick. of the Tongue.

The weak low spirit Fortune makes her slave;
But she’s a drudge, when hector’d by the brave.

An honest man, when he came home at night,
Found another fellow domineering in his family,
hectoring his servants, and calling for supper.

He's a hector, a huel; the abused,
And all the different species of the angry should be cured. Spectator.

Don Carlos made his chief director,
That she might advise hector. Swift.

HÉDÉRACÈOUS. adj. [Hederaeus, Lat.] Producing ivy.

HÉDÉRACÈUS. n.s. [Hederaeux, Sax.] A fence made round grounds with prickly bushes, or woven twigs.

It is a good wood for fire, if kept dry; and is very useful for stakes in hedges. Mortimer.

The gardens unfold variety of colours to the eye, every morning, and the hedges breath is beyond all perfume. Pope.

Through the verdant maze
Of sweet-briar hedges I pursue my walk. Thomson.

HEDGE, prefixed to any word, notes something mean, vile of the lowest class; perhaps from a hedge, or hedge born man, a man without any known place of birth.

There are five in the first show: the pedant, the braggar, the hedges-priest, the fool, and the hoy. Dryden.

The clergy do much better than a little hedges, contemplative, illiterate, can be presumed to do. Pope.

A person, who, by his style and literature, seems to have been the corector of a hedges-press in Little Britain, proceeded generally to an author. Swift.

To HEDGE. v. a. [from the noun.] To inclose with a hedge, or fence of wood or dry growing.

Hedge thy possession about with thorns. Eccles.

Those alleys must be hedges at both ends, to keep out the wind. Bacon.

To obstruct, I will hedge up thy way with thorns. Hym. ii. 6.

To incircle for defence.

England, hedges in with the main,
That waster may not lay. Any and secure
And confident from foreign purposes. Shaksp.

There’s such dignity doth hedges a king,
That treason can be brought to what it would. Shak.

To shut up within an inclosure.

It must not be paid and exported in ready money; so says our law; but that is a law to hedge in the cuckoo, and serves for no purpose: for it we export not goods, for which our merchants have license, how can it be paid by bills of exchange?

HED

5. To force into a place already full. This seems to be mistaken for edge. To edge in, is to put in by the way that requires least room; but hedge may signify to thrust in with difficulty, as into a hedge.

To hedge me in. Shaksp. Julius Cæsar.

When I was hasty, thou delay’dst me longer;
I pr’ythee, let me hedge one moment more. Dryden.

When you are sent on an errand, be sure to hedge in some business of your own. Swift.

To HEDGE. v. n. To shift; to hide the head.

I myself sometimes, hiding mine honour in my necessity, am fain to shuffle, to hedge, and to lurk. Shaksp.

HEDGE-BORN. adj. [hedge and born.] Of no known birth; cleanly born.

He then, that is not found in this sort,
Both dut and usurp the sacred name of knight,
And should, if I were worthy to be judge,
By gentile degraded, like a hedge-born lowain, That doth presume to boast of gentle blood. Shak.

HEDGE-CREEPER. n.s. [hedge and creep.] One that skulks under hedges for bad purposes.

HEDGE-FUMIGATORY. n.s. A plant; fumaria scapium. Ainsworth.

HEDGE-HOG. n.s. [hedge and hog; crinaceae.]

1. An animal with prickles, like thorns in an hedge.

Like hedge-hogs, which lie tumbling in my bare-foot way, and mount their prick at my foot-fall. Shaksp. Tempest.

Few have belief to swallow, or hope enough to experience, the collyrium of Ambrose; that is to make one see in the dark: yet thus much according to his receipt, will the right eye of an hedge-hog, boiled in oil, and preserved in a brown vessel, effect.

The hedge-hog hath his backside and thanks thick set with strong and sharp prickles, besides, by the help of a muscle, can contract himself into a globular figure, and so withdraw his whole under-part, head, belly, and legs, within his thicket of prickles.

2. A term of reproach.

Didst thou not kill this king? Nay, grant me, says he.

Do’st grant me, hedge-hog? Shaksp.

3. A plant; trefoil; medica echinata. Ains.

4. The globe-fish; orbis echinatus. Ains.

HEDGE-HYSSOP. n.s. [hedge and hy-sop.] A species of willowwort; gratiola. Hegsyssop is a purging medicine, and a very rough one: externally it is said to be a vulnerary. Hill’s Mat. Medic.

HEDGE-MUSTARD. n.s. A plant.

HEDGE-Nettle. n.s. A plant; galeop-sis. Ainsworth.

HEDGE-Note. n.s. [hedge and note.] A word of contempt for low writing.

When they began to be somewhat better bred, they left these hedge-warder and another sort of poem, which was also full of pleasant racy. Dryden.

HEDGE-PIG. n.s. [hedge and pig.] A young hedge-hog.

Thrice the brinded cat hath mew’d.
Thrice and once the hedge-pig whin’d. Shaksp.

HEDGE-ROW. n.s. [from hedge and row.] The sires of trees or bushes planted for inclosures.

Sometimes walking not unseen
By hedge-row elms, on hillocks green. Milton.
A good man's fortune may grow out at heels. Skep.

To HEEL. v. n. [from the noun.]
1. To dance.
   I cannot sing.
   Nor heel the high lyvoll, nor sweeten talk. Skep.
2. To lean on one side: as, the ship heels.
   To Heel. v. a. To arm a cock.
   Heeler. n. [from heel.] A cock that strikes well with his heels.

Heel-piece. n. [heel and piece.] A piece fixed on the hinder part of the shoe, to supply what is worn away.

To heel-piece. v. a. [heel and piece.]
To put a piece of leather on a shoe heel.
Some blamed Mrs. Bull for new heel-piecing her shoes.

Heft. n. s. [from heave.]
1. Heaving. [fort.]
   May be in the cup.
A spider steep'd, and one may drink; depart,
And yet partake no venom; for his knowledge
Is not infected; but if one present
Th' abhorrent ingredient to his eye, make known
How he hath drunk, he cracks his gorge, his sides

2. [For heft.] Handle.
His city-side devours both blade and heft. Weller.

He'gira n. s. [Arabick.] A term in chronology, signifying the epocha, or account of time, used by the Arabians and Turks, who begin their computation from the day that Mahomet was forced to make his escape from the city of Mecca, which happened on Friday, July 16, A.D. 622, under the reign of the emperor Heraclius.
Harris.

Hefer. n. s. [peafore, Sax.] A young cow.
Who finds the heifer dead and bleeding fresh,
And sees fast by a butcher with an axe,
But will suspect 'twas he that made the slaughter?
Shakep.
Heifer will put up her nose, and start in the air against the rain.
For her the flocks refuse the verdant food,
Nor thirsty heifer seek the gliding food. Pope.

Hei. v. a. [Hei.]
1. An expression of slight languor and uneasiness.
   Hei! ho! be not too sure by the day, I'll be hang'd.
   Shakep.
2. It is used by Dryden, contrarily to custom, as a voice of exultation.
We'll toss off our ale 'till we can stand,
And heigh ho for the honour of Old England. Dry.

Height. n. s. [from high.]
1. Elevation above the ground: indefinite.
   Into what pit thou seest.
From what height fall'st.
An amphitheatere's amazing height.
Here fills the eye with terror and delight. Addis.

2. Altitude: definite space measured upwards.
Abroad I'll study thee.
As he removes far off, that great heights takes.

3. Degree of latitude. Latitudes are higher as they approach the pole.
Guinea lieth to the North sea, in the same height as Peru to the South.
Abbott.
He. 1. The hea to titles and large estates have a weakness in their eyes, and a tenderness in their constitution. Swift.

2. One newly inheriting an estate.

The young extravagant heir got a new steward, and was resolved to look into his estate. Swift.

To Heir. v. a. [from the noun.] To inherit.

His son in blooming youth was snatch'd by fate, one only daughter heir'd the royal state. Dryden.

Heirress. n.s. [from Heir.] An inheri-trix; a woman that inherits.

An heirress she, while yet alive:
All that was her's he did give. Weller.

There, though he married the heirs of the crown, yet married no title to it during the life of his father-in-law. Dryden.

Heirless. adj. [from Heir.] Without an heir; one wanting to inherit after him.

The wrong I did myself, which so much, That heirless it hath made my kingdom. Shakespeare.

Heirship. n.s. [from Heir.] The state, character, or privileges of an heir.

A layman appoints an heir or an executor in his will, but, in general, a lawyer in the case of an heiress, after the death of his heirships. Ayliffe's Par. Law.

Heirloom. n.s. [heir and ζέλωνa goods. Sax.]

Any furniture or movable decree to descend by inheritance, and therefore inseparable from the freehold. Adams.

Archibald's sceptre was of wood, Transmitted to the heir's line; Jenkins.

Thence through a long descent of kings
Came an heirloom, as Homer sings. Swift.

Held. The pret, and part, pass, of hold.

A rich man beginning to fall is held up of friends. Eccles.

If Minerva had not appeared and held his hand, he had executed his design. Pope.

Heli'acal. adj. [helique, Fr. from 5α.]

Emerging from the lustre of the sun, or falling into it. Had they ascribed the heat of the season to this star, they would not have computed from its héliacal ascent. Brown.

Heli'cally. adv. [from héliac.]

From the rising of this star, not cosmically, that is, with the sun, but helicaly, that is, its elevation from the point of the sun, the ancients computed their calendrical days. Brown.

He is tempestuous in the Summer, when he rises helically; and rainy in the Winter, when he rises actually. Pope.

Helical. adv. [helice, Fr. from 5α.]

Spiral; with many circumvolutions. The screw is a kind of wedge multiplied or continued by a helical revolution about a cylinder, receiving its motion not from any stroke, but from a vesica at one end of it. Wilkins.

Helio'Id Parabola, in mathematicks, or the parabolic spiral, is a curve which arises from the supposition of the axis of the common Apollonian parabola being bent round into the periphery of a circle, and is a line then passing through the extremities of the ordinates, which do now converge towards the centre of the said Harris. Proc. R. Soc.

Heliocentri'ck. adj. [heliocentrique, Fr. 5ας- and σύρμα.]

The heliocentric view of a planet is said to be such as it would appear to us from the sun, if our eye were fixed in its centre. Harris.

Heli'oscope. n.s. [helioscope, Fr. 5ας- and εϊδος.]

A sort of telescope fitted so as to look upon the body of the sun, without offence to the eyes. Harris.

Heliotrope. n.s. [5ας- and τρόπιον; heliotrope, Fr. heliotropium, Lat.] A plant that turns towards the sun; but more particularly, the turnsole, or sunflower.

'Tis an observation of Batters, that they are like the heliotropium; they open only towards the sun, but shut and contract themselves at night, and in cloudy weathers. Government of the Tongue.

Heli'spherical. adj. [helic and sphere,] The heliocentric line is the rhombic line in navigation, and is so called because on the globe it winds round the pole spirally, and still comes nearer and nearer to it, but cannot terminate in it. Harris.

Hel'ix, n.s. [helix, Fr. hālix.] Part of a spiral line; a circumference. Find the true inclination of the screw, together with the quantity of water which every helix does contain. Wilkins.

Helli'x, n.s. [ helmet, Sax.]

1. The place of the devil and wicked souls.

For it is a knell That summons thee to heaven, or to hell. Shakespeare.

If a man were a porter of hell gates, he should have old turning the key. Shakespeare. Macbeth.

Let not this simile
That riches grow in hell; that soil may best Deserve the precious bane. Milton.

Hell's black tyrant tempted to behold
The glorious light he forged of old. Cowley.

2. The place of separate souls, whether good or bad.

I will go down to my son mourning to hell, Gen. He descended into hell. Apostol's Cred. Ps. xviii. 4.

3. Temporal death.

The point of hell came about, the shrouds of death overtook me. Ps. xxxv. 1.

4. The place at a running play to which those who are caught are carried.

Then couples three by strict allotment there; They of both ends the middle two do fly. To the two that in mid-place, hell called were, Must strive with waking foot and watching eye, To catch of them, and them to hell to bear, That they, as well as they, hell may supply.Samuel Johnson.

5. The place into which the tyávor throws his shreds.

This trusty squire, he had as well As the bold Trojan knight seen hell; Not with a counterfeited pass Of golden boughs, their trucking face. Hudibras.

In Covent Garden did a taylor dwell, Who might deserve a place in his own hell. Addison, King's Crockery.

6. The infernal powers.

Much danger first, much tool did he sustain, While Saul and hell estric his strong fate in vain. Cowley.

7. It is used in composition by the old writers more than by the modern.

The sea, with such a storm as his bare head In hell-black night endur'd, 'twould have bold'd up, And quench'd the stilled fires. Shak. King Lear.

Hell-bred. adj. [hell and breed.] Produced in hell.

Heat cannot think what courage and what civic,
With foul embitter'd smoke and burning fire, The hell-bred beast threw forth into the skies. Shak. King Lear.

Heli-broth. n.s. [hell and broth.] A composition boiled up for infernal purposes.

Adler's fork, and blind worm's sting,
Lizard's leg, and owl's wing;
For a charm of powerful trouble,
Like a hell-broth boil and bubble. Shak. Macbeth.
HELD

HELD-Doomed. adj. [hell and doom.] Consigned to hell.

And reck onst thou thyself with spirits of heav'n,
Hell-damn'd and breathless' defiance here and soon,
When I reign'd king? Milton.

HELD-Governed. adj. Directed by hell.

Earth gap open wide and eat him quick
As thou dost swallow up this good King's blood,
Which his hell-govern'd arm hath butcher'd. Shak.

HELD-Hated. adj. Abhorred like hell.

Back do I toss these treasons to thy head,
With the hell-hated lie on every thy breath. Shak.

HELD-Haunted. adj. [hell and haunt.] Haunted by the devil.

Fierce Osmond clo'd me in the bleeding bark,
And bid me stand exposed to the bleak winds,
Bounl to the face of this hell- haunted guest. Dryd.

1. Dog of hell.

From forth the kennel of thy womb hath crept
A hell-hound that doth hunt us all to death. Shak.
Now the hell-hounds with superior speed
Had reach'd the dame, and, fast'ning on her side,
The ground with issuing streams of purple dy'd. Dryd.

2. Agent of hell.

I call'd
My hell-hounds to lick up the drab, and fill,
Which man's polluting sin with taint had stain'd
On what was pure. Dryd.

Hell-kite. n. s. [hell and kite.] Kite of infernal breed. The term hell prefixed to any word notes detestation.

Did you say all? What all? oh, hell-kite! all?
What, all my pretty chickens, and their dam,
At one fell swoop? Shak.

HELLEBORE. n. s. [helleborus, Lat.] Christmas flower.

HELLBORE White. n. s. [veratum, Lat.] A plant.

There are great doubts whether any of its species be the true hellebores of the ancients. Miller.

HELLFESM. n. s. [Iaß2a2p2e2.] A Greek idiom.

Aion,euvne.

HELLISH. adj. [from hell.]

1. Sent from hell; belonging to hell.

O thou celestial or infernal spirit of love, or what other heavenly or hellish title thou list to have, for effects of both I find in myself, but have compassion of me. Sidney.

Victory and triumph to the Son of God,
Now entering his great duel, not of arms.
But to vanquish by wisdom hellish wiles Milton.

2. Having the qualities of hell; infernal; wicked; detestable.

No benefits shall ever aye any that diabolical ranee that ferments in some hellish breasts, but that it will foam out at its foul mouth in slander. Smith.

HELLISHLY. adv. [from hellish.] Infernally; wickedly; detestably.

HELLISHNESS. n. s. [from hellish.] Wickedness; abhorred qualities.

HELLWARD. adv. [from hell.] Toward hell.

Be next thy care the산he sheeps to please
Full over the pit and hellward turn their face. Pope.

HELM, denotes defence: as, Aedhhelm happy defence; Sigehelm victorious defence; Berthelm eminent defence; like Anytias and Bocticus among the Greeks. Gibson's Cædman.

HELM. n. s. [helm, Sax. from helan to cover, to protect.]

1. A covering for the head in war; a helmet; a morion; an headpiece.

France spreads his banners in our noiseless land
With plumed helm the slayer begins his threats. Shak.

Meneusus lays hard load upon his helm. Dryd.

2. The part of a coat of arms that bears the crest.

More might be added of helms, crests, mantles, and such; but Shakesp.

3. The upper part of the rector.

The vulgar chemists themselves pretend to be able, by repeated concomitances, and other fit operations, to make the distilled parts of a coccus bring its own caput mortuum over the helm. Boyle.

4. [pelma, Sax.] The stearinge; the rudder.

They did not leave the helm in storms;
And such they are made happy. Camden's Iteranns. Ben Jonson.

More in prosperity is reason too.
Than ships in storms, their helms and anchors lost. Dryd.

5. The station of government.

I may be wrong in the means; but that is no objection against the design; let those at the helm contrive it better. Swift.

6. In the following line it is difficult to determine whether sternman or defender is intended: I think latterman.

You shall endure
The helms o' th' state, who care for you like fathers,
When they causeth them as enemies. Shak.

To HELM, n. a. [from the noun.] To guide; to conduct. Haman.
The very stream of his life, and his business he hath helmed, must give him a better proclamation. Shak.

HELMED. adj. [from helm.] Furnished with a head-piece.

The helmed cherubim
Are seen in glowing ranks with wings display'd. Milton.

HELMET. n. s. [Probably a diminutive of helm.] A helm; a head-piece; armour for the head.

I saw him down; truse up again, and fighting;
From helm to the spur all bleeding o'er. Shak.

Sev'n darts are thrown at once, and some re-bound
From his bright shield, some on his helmet sound. Dryd.

HELM'NTHICK. adj. [from helmet.] Relating to worms.

Diect.

Help, r. a. preter, helped; helping; part, helped; or holpen. [hilphon, Goth. helpan, Sax.]

1. To assist; to support; to aid.

Let us work as valiant men behoves
For boldest hearts good fortune helpeth out. Fairf.

O Lord, make haste to help me. Psalms.

God helped him against the Philistines; Chron.
They helped them in all things with silver and gold. 1 Esdr.

A man reads his prayers out of a book, as a means to help his understanding and direct his expresssions. Stillingfleet.

2. It has, in familiar language, the particle out, which seems to have meant, originally, out of a difficulty.

This he conceives not hard to bring about,
If all of you should join to help him out. Dryd.

What I offer is so far from doing any kindness to the cause these gentlemen are engaged in, that it does them a real service, and helps them enter into the main thing whereby they stand. Wotton.

Of God of learning and of light,
Would want a god to help him out. Swift.

3. To raise by help: with up.

Woe to him that is alone when he falleth; for he hath not another to help him up. Eccl. iv. 10.

4. To enable to surmount: with over.

Wherever they are a stand, a help them presently over the difficulty without any rebuke. Locke.
2. That which gives help.

Though these contrivances increase the power, yet they proportionably contract the time; that which by such helps one man may do in a hundred days, may be done by the immediate might of a hundred men in one day.

Virtue is a friend, and an help to nature; but it is wise and luxury that destroys it, and the diseases of intemperance are the natural product of the sins of intemperance.

Another help. St. Paul himself affords us this instance of the strong meaning contained in his epistles.

Locke.

5. That which forwards or promotes.

Coral is in use as an help to the teeth of children.

4. Remedy.

There is no help for it, but he must be taught accordingly to comply with the faulty way of writing.

Heldor on Speech.

HELP. n.s. [from helpe.]

1. An assistant; an auxiliary; an aider; one that helps or assists.

There was not any left, nor any helper for Israel.

We ought to receive such, that we might be fellow helpers to the truth.

3. John, viii.

It is impossible for that man to despair who remembers that his help is of God.

Taylor's Rule of Living Holy.

2. One that administers remedy.

Compassion, the mother of tears, is not always a mere idle spectator, but an aider oftenest of evils.

More.

3. One that supplies with anything wanted; with fo.

Heaven

Hath brought me up to your daughter's dower,

As it hath hated her to be my motive,

And helper to a husband.

Shakespeare.

4. A supernumerary servant.

Give to the master of a vast unfurnished house: my family consists of a steward, a groom, a helper in the stable, a footman, and an old maid.

Swift.

HELPFUL. adj. [helpful and full.]

1. Useful; that which gives assistance.

Let's fight with gentle words.

One dire shot

Till time lend friends, and friends their helpful swords.

Shakespeare.

He orders all the succours which they bring; The squalls by and the good about him run;

And form an army.

Dryden.

2. Wholesome; salutary.

A skilful chemist can as well, by separation of visible elements, draw helpful medicines out of poison, as poison out of the most healthful herbs.

Raleigh.

HELPLESS. adj. [from help.]

1. Wanting power to succour one's self.

Close by the board the prince's main-mast bore

All three now helpless by each other side.

Dryden.

Let our enemies rage and persecute the poor and the helpless; but let it be our glory to be pure and peaceable.

Roger.

2. Wanting support or assistance.

How shall I then your helpless fame defend?

I'll then be innocent to secur your friend.

Pop.

3. Irremediable; admitting no help.

Such helpless harms it's better hidden keep,

Then rip up grief, where it may not appear.

Spenser.

4. Unassisted; void; with of.

This is unusual, perhaps improper.

Naked he lies, and ready to expire, Helpless of all that human wants require.

Dryden.

HELPLESSLY. adv. [from helpless.]

Without ability; without succour.

HELPLESSNESS. n.s. [from helpless.]

Want of ability; want of succour.

HELTER-SKITTER. adv. [As Skinner-fancies, from pell-pell: recea the darkness of hell; hell, says he, being a place of confusion.]

In a hurry; without order; tumultuously.

Sir John, I am thy friend, and thy friend;

And helter-skelter have I rode to England,

And tides do I bring.

Shakespeare.

He had no time to come back but they were as helter-skelter, throwing books at another's heads.

L'Estrange.

HELVE. n.s. [helpe, Sax.] The handle of an axe.

The slipping of an axe from the helve, whereby another is slain, was the work of God himself.

Raleigh's History.

To HELVE. v. a. [from the noun.]

To fit with a helve or handle.

HEM. n.s. [hem, Sax.]

1. The edge of a garment doubled and sewed to keep the threads from spreading.

Rowers must be made of even cloth, white and gentle, without hem, seam, or thread hanging by.

Dryden.

2. [Hommen, Dut.] The noise uttered by a sudden and violent expiration of the breath.

I would try if I could cry hem, and have him.

Shakespeare.

He loves to clear his pipes in good air and is not a little pleased with any one who takes notice of the strength which he still exerts in his morning haze.

Addison.

3. Interj. Hem! [Lat.]

To HEM. v. a.

1. To close the edge of cloth by a hem or double border sewed together.

2. To border; to edge.

All the skirt about

Was hem'd with golden fringe.

Fairy Q.

3. To enclose; to environ; to confine; to shut: perhaps always with a particle: as, in, about, round.

Along the shore of silver streaming Thames,

Whose thirsty bank, the which his river hens Speen.

So of either side, stretching itself in a narrow length, was it hemmed in by woody bills, as if indeed nature had meant therein to make places for beholders.

Sidney.

What lets us then the great Jerusalem.

With valiant shouts about to hem? Fairest,

Why, Nephtus, hast thou made us stand alone,

Divided from the world for this, say they.

Hem'sd'd to be a spile to tyrany.

Leaving affliction hence no way to fly?

Daniel.

I bury me in haste away,

And find his honour in a pound,

Hem'sd'd by a triple circle round,

Chequer'd with ribbons, blue and green

Pope.

To HEM. v. n. [hommen, Dut.]

To utter a noise by violent expulsion of the breath.

HEMICRANPY. n.s. [hemicrare half, and kranos the skull or head.] A pain that affects only one part of the head at a time.

Quin.

HEMICYCLE. n.s. [hemi-cylindris.] A half round.

HEMINA. n.s. An ancient measure: now used in medicine to signify about ten ounces in measure.

Quincy.

HEMIPLEGY. n.s. [hemiplega half, and plaeo to strike or seize.] A palsy, or any nerve affection relating thereunto, that seizes one side at a time; some partial disorder of the nervous system.

HEMISPHERE. n.s. [hemi-sfere, hemisphere, Fr.] The half of a globe when it is supposed to be cut through its centre in the plane of one of its greatest circles.

HEM.

That place is earth, the seat of man; that light His day, which else, as th'o' other hemisphere,

Night would invade.

A Treatise of Paradise, the highest from whose top The hemisphere of earth, in fairest ken Stretched out to th' uppermost prospect of lay.

Rutland.

The sun is more powerful in the northern hemisphere, and in the equator, and for therein his motion is slower.

Dryden.

In open prospect nothing bounds our eye,

Until the earth seems join'd out to the sky;

So in this hemisphere our utmost view

Is only bounded by our king and you.

Dryden.

HEMISPHERICAL. adj. [from hemi-spere.] Half round; containing half a globe.

The thin film of water swells above the surface of the water it swims on, and commonly constitutes hemispherical bodies with it.

Boyle.

A pyrites, placed in the cavity of another of a hemispheric figure, in much the same manner as an arcus in a cup.

Woodward.

HEMISTICK. n.s. [hemistike, hemistiche, Fr.] Half a verse.

He broke off in the hemistiche, or midst of the verse; but seized, as it were, with a divine fury, he made up the latter part of the hemistiche.

Dryden.

HEMLOCK. n.s. [Halunc, Sax.] An herb.

The leaves are cut into many minute segments; the petals of the flower are bithi, heart-shaped, and unequal; the flower is succeeded by two short channelled seeds. One sort is sometimes used in medicine; though it is noxious; but the hemlock of the ancients, which was such deadly poison, is generally supposed different.

Miller.

He was met even now,

Crown'd with rank hemlock and havoc-weeds,

With hardocks, hemlock.

Shakespeare, K. Lear.

We cannot with certainty affirm, that no man can be contaminated by wood or stones, or that all men are not poisoned by hemlock.

Locke.

HEMORRHAGE. n.s. [hemorragia; heemorrhage, S.] A violent flux of blood.

Great hemorrhagce succeeds the separation of rays.

Twenty days fasting will not diminish its quantity so much as one dram.

Arbuthnot.

HEMORRHOIDAL. adj. [hemorrhoidal, Fr. from hemorrhoids.] Belonging to the veins in the fundament.

Besides there are hemorrhages from the nose and hemorrhoidal veins, and fluxes of rheum, Hay, of leeches, spouting hemorrhoidal blood.

Garr.

HEMP. n.s. [hemp, Sax. hempe, Dut. cannabis.] A fibrous plant of which coarse linen and ropes are made.

It hath digitated leaves opposite to one another; the flowers have no visible petals; it is made and female in different plants. Its bark is useful for rags and cloths.

Let cattle go for dog; let man go free,

And let not hemp his windpipe suffocate.

Shakespeare.

Hemp and flax are commodities that deserves encouragement, both for their usefulness and profit.

Martenier.

Hemp Agrimony. n.s. A plant.

The common hemp agrimony is found wild by ditches and side of rivers.

Miller.

HEMPEN. adv. [from hemp.] Made of hemp.

In foul reproach of knighthood's fair decree,

A scut his neck a hempen rope he wears.

Fairy Q.
HEN

Ye shall have a hempe caudle then, and the help of a hatchett.
Shakesp.
I wish'd his dangling garter from his knee; He wist not when the hempen string I drew. Gay.
HEN. n. s. [hemp, Sax. and Dut. han, Germ. a cock.] 1. The female of a house-cock. 2. The female of any land fowl.

The peacock, pheasant, and goldenfich cockes have glorious colours; the hens have not. Bacon.

To show how this bird is covering her eggs, the male generally takes his stand upon a neighbouring bush within her hearing, and by that means diverts her with his songs during the whole time of her sitting. Addison.

O'er the trackless waste The heath hen flutters.
Thomson.

HEN-DRIVER. n. s. [hen and driver.] A kind of hawk.
The hen-driver I forbear to name. Walton.

HEN-HARM. n. s. A kind of kite.
HEN-HARRIER. Ainsworth. So called probably from destroying chickens.
Pygargus.

HEN-HEARTED. adj. [hen and heart.] Dastardly; cowardly; like a hen. A low word.

HEN-PECKED. adj. [hen and pecked.] Governed by the wife.

A stepdaunce too I have, a cursed shee, Who rules my hen-pecked sire, and orders me.
Dryden.

The neighbours reported that he was hen-pecked, which was impossible, by such a mild-spirited woman as his wife. Arberath.

HEN-ROOST. n. s. [hen and roost.] The place where the poultry rest.

Many a poor devil stands to a whipping post for the pilfering of a silver spoon, or the robbing of a hen-roost. L'Esprance.
Her house is frequented by a company of rogues, whom she encourages to rob her hen-roost. Swift.
If a man procutes gypies with severity, his hen-roost is sure to pay for it. Addison.
They oft have sally'd out to pillage.
The hen-roosts of some peaceful village. Tickell.

HENBANE. n. s. [hyscyonius, Lat.] A plant.
It is very often found growing upon the sides of banks and about ditches. This is a poisonous plant.
That to which old Socrates was cur'd.
Or henbane juice, to swell 'em till they burst.
Dryden.

HENBIT. n. s. [Alise folis heracleitis.] A plant.
In a seacity in Silesia a rumour was spread of its raining milletseed; but it was found to be only the seeds of the ivy-leaved speedwell, or small henbit.
Derham's Phys. Theology.
HENCE. adv. or interj. [peonan, Sax. hennes, old English.] 1. From this place to another.
HENCH. 2. Away; to a distance. A word of command.
Be not found here; hence with your little ones. Milton.
Hence with denial vain, and cloy excuse. Milton.
3. At a distance; in other places. Not in use.
Why should I then be false, since it is true
That I must die here, and live hence by truth. Shaks.
All members of our cause, both here and hence, That are intrusted to this action. Shaks.

HEN-NECK. n. s. [tonica, and toxima.] A figure of eleven sides or angles.

HEN-S-FT. n. s. [juniaria sepium.] Hedge fumitory.
HEPATICAL. adj. [hepaticus, Lat. hepatica.] Pati fr. from sepia.

Belonging to the liver.
If the evacuated blood be fluid, it is stomach blood; if it red and copious, it is hepatic. Harvey.
The cystick gall is thin, and excessively bitter; the hepatica gall is more fluid, and not so bitter. Arberath in Aliments.

HEP. s. n. Hawthorn berries: commonly written hips.
Ainsworth.
In Westmorland there is observed great plenty of hips and haws, which preserve the small birds from starving. Bacon.

HEPTACAPLUS. adj. [seven and cupula.] Having seven cavities or cells.

HEPTAGON. n. s. [heptagonum, fr. sepa, and capula.] A figure with seven sides or angles.

HEPTAGONAL. adj. [from heptagon.] Having seven angles or sides.

HEPARCHY. n. s. heparchae, Fr. sepa, and gyn. A sevenfold government.
In the Saxon heparchy I find but little notice of arms, although the Germans, of whom they descended, used shields.
Cunnen.
England began not to be a people, when Alfred reduced it into a monarchy; for the materials thereof were extinct before, namely, under the heptarchy.
Hale's Origin of Mankind.
The next returning planetary hour Of Mars, who sh'd the heparchy of pow'r,
His steps bold Arcite to the temple bent. Dryden.

HER. pron. [shep, in Sax. stood for their, or of them, which at length became the female possessive.] 1. Belonging to a female; of a sex; of a woman.
About his neck
A green and gilded snake had wreathe'd itself, Who with her head, nimble in threats, approach'd The opening of his mouth. Shaks. As you like it.
Still new favourites she chose, Till up in arms my passion rose, And cast away her yoke. Cowley.
One month, three days, and half an hour, Judith held the sovreign pow'r; A woman's beautifull heart, Cowley.
But so weak and small her wit, That she to govern were unfit, And so Saxanna took her place. Cowley.

2. The oblique case of she.
England is so side kindred, Her sceptre so fantastically borne, That fears attend her not. Shaks. Henry She cannot seem defend'd to men, And I would have her seem to others so. Cowley.
The moon arose clad o'er in light, With thousand stars attending on her train; With her they rise, with her they set again.
Cowley.
Should I be left, and thou be lost, the sea, That has in her love, could hurl me, Dryden.

HERS. pronoun. This is used when it refers to a substantive going before; as, such are her charms, such charms as hers.
This pride of hers.
Upon advice, bath drawn my love from her. Shaks.
Shaks.

Will still that thou art mine not hers confess. Cow.

Some secret charm did all her acts attend,
And what his fortune wanted, hers could supply.
Dryden.
I bred you up to arms, rais'd you to power, Indeed to save a crown, not hers but your own. Dryden.

HERALD. n. s. [heurault, Fr. herald, Germ.]
HER

1. An officer whose business it is to register genealogies, adjust ensigns armorial, regulate funerals, and annually to carry messages between princes, and proclaim war and peace.

May woe, whose scatter’d names honour my book.

For strict degrees of rank or title look;
’Tis against the manners of an epicam
And in poetic here, no herald am. Ben Jonson. When time shall serve let but the herald cry,
And I’ll appear again. Shaksp. King Lear. Shakesp. peace, if peace you choose;
Or herald of a war, if you refuse. Dryden. Please thy prince, and strike the herald’s roll.
While there shall find thy famous pedigre. Dryden.

2. A precursor; a forerunner; a harbinger.

It is the part of men to fear and tremble,
When the most mighty gods, by tokens, send
Such dreadful heralds to astonish us. Shakesp.

It was the lark, the herald of the morn. Shak.

3. A proclaimer; a publisher.

After my death I wish no other herald,
Not to break my living actions, but such an honest chronicler as Griffith. Shak.

To herald the v. a. [from the noun.] To introduce or as by an herald. A word not used.

We are sent from our royal master,
O the herald thy to him thy sight,
Not pay thee. Shaksp.

HERALDRY. n. s. [heraldrie, Fr. from herald.]

1. The art or office of a herald.

I am writing of heraldry. Peacham.

Grant her, besides, of noble blood that runs
In ancient veins, ere heraldry began. Dryden.

2. Registry of genealogies.

Was no false heraldry when madness drest
Her pedigree from those to whom too much owed. Denham.

BLAZONRY.

Metals may blazon common beauties; she
May grant her, besides, of noble blood that runs.

HERB. n. s. [herbe, Fr. herba, Lat.]

1. Herbs are those plants whose stalks are stalks,
And have nothing woody in them; as grass and hemlock.

2. In such a night Medea gather’d the enchant’d herds
That did renew old Ascan. Shaksp.

3. With sweet smelling herbs
Espoused Eve deck’d her first impal’d bed. Milton.

4. Unhappy, from whom still conceals do lie
Of her, and put the harmless luxury. Dryden.

5. If the leaves are of chief use to us, then we call them herbs; as sage and mint. Watt’s Logick.

6. Herb-eating animals, which don’t ruminate,
Have strong grinders, and chew much. Arbuthnot on Aliments.

HERR Christopher, or Bareberries. n. s.

A plant.

HERBACEOUS. adj. [from herba, Lat.]

1. Belonging to herbs.

2. Ginger is the root of either tree or trunk;
But an herbaceous plant, resembling the water flower-de-luce. Brown.

3. Feeding on vegetables: perhaps not purely.

4. Their teeth are fitted to their food; the rapacious to catching, holding, and tearing their prey;
The herbaceous to gathering and comination of vegetables. Derham.

5. HERBAGE. n. s. [herbage, Fr.]

1. Herbs collectively; grass; pasture.

2. Rocks lie cover’d with eternal snow;
Thick herbage in the plains, and fruitful fields. Dryden.

3. At the time the deluge came, the earth was loaded with herbage, and thronged with animals. Wodehouse.

4. The tythe and the right of pasture. Ain.

HERBAL. n. s. [from herb.] A book containing the names and description of plants.

We leave the description of plants to herbals and other like books of natural history. Bacon.

Such a plant will not be found in the herbal of nature. Brown.

As for the medicinal uses of plants, the large herbals are ample testimonies thereof. More. Out herbals are sufficiently stored with plants.

HERBARIST. n. s. [from herbal.]

A man skilled in herbs.

Herbalists have distinguished them, naming that the male whose leaves are lighter, and fruit rounder. Ben Jonson.

HERBAR. n. s. [A word, I believe, only to be found in Spenser.] Herb; plant.

The roof hereof was arch’d over head,
And deck’d with flowers and herbs distinctly. Fairy Queen.

HERBARIANUS, n. s. [herbarius, from herba, herb., Lat.] One skilled in herbs.

Herbarists have exercised a commendable curiosity in subdividing plants of the same denomination. Bothe.

He was too much swayed by the opinions then current amongst herbalists, that different colours, or multiple quantities of leaves in the flower, were sufficient to constitute a specific difference. Ray.

As to the fuci, their seed hath been discovered and shewn to be of indiscriminate herbarianus. Ben Jonson.

HERBEBET, n. s. [Diminutive of herb, or of herbula, Lat.] A small herb.

These herbettes, which we upon you say, Shakesp.

HERBESENT. adj. [herbescent, Lat.] Growing into herbs.

HERBID. adj. [herbidis, Lat.] Covered with herbs.

HERBORIST, n. s. [herbidus, Lat.] One curious in herbs. He seems to have a mistaken for herbarkist. Herbarists have a plant, whose flower perishes in about an hour. Bay.

HERBECROIB. n. s. [herbegg, Germ.] Place of temporary residence. Now written harbour.

The German lord, when he went out of Newgate into another world, took order to have his house set up in his last herbecroib. Ben Jonson.

HERBOUS. adj. [herbosus, Lat.] Abounding with herbs.

HERBULENT. adj. [from herbula.] Containing herbs.

HERBWOMAN, n. s. [herb and woman.] A woman that sells herbs.

I was like to be pulled to pieces by brewer, butcher, and baker; even my herbwoman dunned me as I went along. Arbuthnot.

HERBY. adj. [from herb.] Having the nature of herbs.

No substance but the earth, and the procedures of earth, as tile and stone, yieldeth any moss or herbly substance. Bacon.

HERD. n. s. [peop, Sax.]

1. A number of beast together. This is peculiarly applied to black cattle. Flocks and herds are sheep and oxen or kin.

2. Note a wild and wanton herd.

3. Of race of youthful and unhandled cattle.

5. There found a herd of heifers, wand’ring o’er.
The neighbouring hill, and drive them to the shore. Addison.

6. A company of men, in contempt or detestation.

7. Survey the world, and where one Cato shines, Count a degenerate herd of Catilines. Dryden.

I do not remember where ever God delivered his owen by the multitude, or nature truth by the herd. Locke.

8. It anciently signified a keeper of cattle, and in Scotland it is still used. [jynb, Sax.] A sense still retained in composition; as, goatherd.

HERD. v. n. [from the noun.]

1. To run in herds or companies.

2. Weak women should, in danger, herd like deer. Dryden.

It is the nature of indigence, like common danger, to endeavor men to another, and make them fellow, like bees, to save the colony. Norris.

2. To associate; to become one of any number or party.

Thy herd among his friends, and seem Addison’s Cato.

Run to towns, to herd with knives and foils.

And undistinguish’d pass among the crowd, Wallis.

THIS v. a. To throw or put into an herd.

The rest.

However great we must be, and valiant,
Are herd’d with the vulgar, by Jonson’s Cathline.

HERDGROOM. n. s. [herd and groom.] A keeper of herds. Not in use.

But who shall judge the wager won or lost?
That shall herd herdsman and not other. Span.

HERDMAN. n. s. [herd and man.]

HERDSMEN. § One employed in tending herds: formerly, an owner of herds.

A herdman rich, of much account was he,
In whom no evil did reign, or good appear. Sidney.

And ye herd, or serve your sun, sir.
Worthy enough a herdman, if e’er thou’s
Such rural latches to his entrance open,
And will devise a cruel death for thee. Shaksp.

Scarcely themselves know how to hold
A sheep-hook, or have learn’d ought else the least
That to the faithful herdman’s art belongs. Milton.

There of the Indian herdsmen, shamming heat,
Shelters in cool and tends his pasturing herds.
At loop-holes cut through thickset shade. Milton.

So stands a函数 herdman with his spear
Fall in the gap, and hopes the hunted beast. Dryden.

The herdman, canto.

The cheerfull fay, procure his health in goeblets crown’d.
When their herdmen could not agree, they parted by consent. Locke.

HERE. adv. [ unexpected, Hur. Dut.]

1. In this place.

Before they here approach, Old Sward, with ten thousand warlike men,
All ready at a point, came surging forth. Shaksp.

I, upon my frontier here,
Keep residence.

Her farthest verge. Milton.

How wretched does Prometheus’ state appear.
While he bis second misery suffers here! Cowley.

Today is ours, we have it here. Cowley.

2. In the present state.

Thus shall you be happy here, and more happy hereafter. Bacon.

3. It is used in making an offer or attempt.

Then here’s for earnest
’Tis finish’d.

4. In drinking a health.

Here’s to thee, Dick. Cowley.

However, friend here’s to the king, one cries;
To him who was the king, the friend replies. Prior.

5. It is often opposed to there; in one place, distinguished from another.

Good-night; mine eyes do itch;
Dost that before weeping;
—’Tis neither here nor there. Shaksp. Othello.

We are come to see thee fight, to see thee go,
To see thee thrive, to see thee here, to see thee there. Shaksp.

Then this, then that man’s aid, they crave, implores.
Post here for help, seek here their followers. Ton.

I would have in the heath some thickettes made
HER

Only of sweet-briar and honey-suckle, and some wild vines among the ground with violet's; for these are sweet, and prosper in the shade; and these be in the heath here and there, not in order.

The devil might perhaps, by wondrous suggestions, have drawn in here and there a single prose-stye. Government of Tongue.

Your city, after the dreadful fire, was rebuilt, not presently, by raising continued streets; but at first here a house, and there a house, to which others by degrees were joined. Spirit's Sermon.

He that rides post through a country may be able to give some loose description of here a mountain, and there a plain, here a house and there a river; woodland in one part, and savannah in another.

6. Here seems, in the following passage, to mean this place.

Bid them farewell, Cordelia, though unkind;
Though here, a better where to find, Shaksp.

Hereabout. adv. [here and about.]

About this place.

I saw hereabouts nothing remarkable, except Augustus's bridge near Olevano.

Hereafter. adv. [here and after.]

1. In time to come; in futurity.

How worthy he is, I will leave to appear hereafter, rather than story him in his own bearing, Shaksp.

The grand-child, with twelve soon increas'd, departs From Camana, to a land hereafter call'd Egypt.

Hereafter be from war shall come, Milton.

And bring his Trojans peace, Dryden.

2. In a future state.

You shall be happy here, and more happy hereafter.

Hereafter. n. s. A future state.

This is a figurative noun, not to be used but in poetry.

'Tis the divinity that stirs within us; 'Tis Heaven itself that points out an hereafter, and intimates eternity to man. Addison's Cato.

I still shall wait. Some new hereafter, and a future state. Prior.

Hereat. adv. [here and at.]

At this.

One man coming to the tribune, to receive his donative, with a garland in his hand, the tribune offered him, demurred, what this singularity could mean? Hooker.

Hereby. adv. [here and by.]

By this.

In what estate the fathers rested, which were dead before, it is not hereby either one or other determined. Hooker.

Hereby the Moors are not excluded by beauty, there being in this description no consideration of colours. Brown.

The acquisition of truth is of infinite concernment: hereby we become acquainted with the nature of things. Hats.

Hereitable. adj. [heredit. Lat.] Whatever may be occupied as inheritance.

Adam being neither a monarch, nor his imaginative monarch hereditabile, the power which is now in the world is not that which was Adam's. Locke.

Hereidament. n. s. [hereditian, Lat.] A law term denoting inheritance, or hereditary estate.

Hereditary. adj. [hereditarie, Fr. hereditarius, Lat.] Possessed or claimed by right of inheritance; descends by inheritance.

To thee and thine, hereditary ever.

Remain this ample third of our fair kindom. Shak.

Hereditaries, adv. Have their ingratiaute in them hereditarily. Shaksp.

He shall ascend

The throne hereditary, and bound his reign With earth's wide bounds, his glory with the heavens. Milton.

Thus while the mate creation downward bend Their sight, and to their earthly mother tend, Man looks aloft; and with erect ed eyes Beholds his own hereditary skies. Dryden's Ode.

When heredite was his youth shall raise, And form it to hereditary praise. Dryden's Virgil.

Hereedarily. adv. [from hereditary.]

By inheritance.

Here is another, who thinks one of the greatest glories of his father was to have distinguished and loved you, and who loves you hereditarily. Pope.

Herein. adv. [here and in.]

In this.

How highly soever it may please them with words of truth to extol salviement, they shall not herein offend us. Hooker.

My best endeavours shall be done herein. Shak.

Since truths, absolutely necessary to salvation, are so clearly revealed that we cannot err in them, unless we be notoriously wanting to ourselves, herein the fault of the judgment is resolved into a precedent default in the will. South.

Hereinto. adv. [here and into.]

Into this.

Because the point about which we strive is the quality of our laws, our first entrance hereditarily cannot but be more than with consideration, of the nature of law in general. Hooker.

Hereo'. adv. [here and on.]

Upon this.

If we should strictly insist herein, the possibility might fall into question. Brown's Vulg. Err.

Hereout. adv. [here and out.]

1. Out of this place.

A bird all white, well feather'd on each wing, Hereout up to the throne of God did fly. Spenser.

2. All the words compounded of here and a preposition, except hereafter, are obsoleet, or obsolete; never used in poetry, and seldom in prose, by elegant writers, though perhaps not unworthy to be retained.

Herearchical. adj. [It should be written eremitical, from eremite, of ερεμός a desert; hermitice, Fr. Solitary; suitable to a hermit.

You describe so well your hierarchical state of life, that none of the ancient anchorites could go beyond you for a cave in a rock. Pope.

Heress. n. s. [herectis, Fr. heretis, Lat. heretici.] An opinion of private men different from that of the catholic and orthodox church.

Heresy prevails only by a counterfeit shew of reason, whereby notwithstanding it becometh invincible, unless it be convicted of fraud by manifest remiss traverse clearly true, and unable to be withstood.

As for speculative heresies, they work mightily upon men's wills: yet do not produce great alterations in life. Bacon.

Let the truth of that religion I profess be represented to her judgment, not in the odious disguise of fanaticism, subterfuges, mockery, novelty, cruelty, and disloyalty. King Charles.

Herariach. n. s. [heresiarque, Fr. hereticque, Lat. hereticus.] A leader in heresy; the head of a herd of heretics.

The pope declared him not only an heretic, but an heretick, Stillingfleet.

Heretic. n. s. [heretique, Fr. herétique.]

1. One who propagates his private opinions in opposition to the catholic church.

These things would be prevented, if no known

Hereick or schismatick be suffered to go into those countries. Bacon.

No hereties desire to spread Their soul'd opinions like these Epicureans. Daries. Bellarmine owns, that he has quoted a heretick instead of a father. Baker on Learning.

When a Papist uses the word heretics, he generally means protestants; when a Protestant uses the word, he means any persons wilfully and contentiously obstinate in fundamental errors. Watts.

2. It is or has been used luridly for any whose opinion is erroneous.

I rather will suspect the sun with cold Than thee with wantonness; thy honour stands, In him that at love an heretic, Shaksp.

Heretical. adj. [from heretic.] Containing heresies.

How exclude us from being any part of the church of Christ under the colour of heresies, when they cannot but grant it possible for him to be, as touching his own personal persuasion; heretical, who, in their opinion, not only is of the church, but with the chiefest place of authority over the same? Hooker.

Constantinople was in an uproar, upon an ignorant jealousy that those words had a heretical meaning. Decay of Party.

Heretically. adv. [from heretical.]

With heresies.

Hereto. adv. [here and to.]

To this; add to this.

Heretofore. adv. [hereto and fore.]

Formerly; anciently.

I have long desired to know you heretofore, with the regard of your virtue, though I love not your person. Sidney.

So near is the connexion between the civil state and religious, that heretofore you authority over the same.

South.

We now can form no more.

Long schemes of life, as heretofore, Swift.

Hereunto. adv. [here and unto.]

To this.

They which rightly consider after what sort the heart of man heretickly is framed, must of necessity acknowledge, that whoso assemblith to the words of eternal life, doth it in regard of his authority whose words they are.

A great heretick might not be amiss to make children often to tell a story of any thing they know. Locke.

Herewith. adv. [here and with.]

With this.

You, fair sir, be not herethick dismayd, But constant keep the way in which ye stand. Spenn. Hereith the castle of Hame was suddenly surprise by the Scots. Haupard.

Herr. n. s. [herrzib, Sax.] A fine paid to the lord at the death of a landholder, commonly the best thing in the landholder's possession.

This he datam from the ivy; for he should be the true possessory lord thereof, but the olive dispenseth with his consent to pass it over with a stubble in and an heretick every year. Bacon.

Though thou consume but to renew,

Yet love, as lord, doth claim a heretick due. Cicer.

It took him up, as your heretick with intention to have made the best of him, and then have brought the whole produce of him in a purse to your father. Dryden.

Heritable. adj. [heres, Lat.] A person that may inherit, whatever may be inherited.

By the common law this son shall be legitimate and heretickable, according to the laws of England. Hale.

Heritage. n. s. [heritage, Fr.]

1. Inheritance; estate devolved by succession; estate in general.

Let us our father's heritage divide. Huberd.
HER

He considers that his proper home and heritage is in another world, and therefore regards the events of this with the indifference of a guest that tarries but a day.

2. [In divinity.] "The People of God."

O! how save thy people, and bless thine heritage.

COMMON PRAYER.

HERMAPHRODITE. n. s. [hermaphro-dite, Fr. from etherlands and hérô.] An animal uniting two sexes.

Man and wife make but one right

Consider it hermaphroditism.

Cleveland.

Monstrosity could not incapacitate from marriage, witness hermaphroditics. Arbutnought and Pope.

HERMAPHRODITICAL. adj. [from hermaphro-dite.] Pertaking of both sexes.

There may be seeds and hermaphroditical principles, that contain the radicality of different forms.

Brown.

HERMETICAL. adj. [from Hermes.]

HERMETIC. n. or Mercury, the imagined inventor of chemistry; her-metical, Fr.] Chemical.

An hermetic seal to seal any thing hermetically, is to heat the neck of a glass till it is just ready to melt, and then with a pair of hot pincers to clasp it together, and let it cool.

The tube was closed at one end with diaphy, instead of an herm. seal. Bourde.

HERMETICALLY. adv. [from hermetic.

According to the hermetic or chemick art.

He suffered those things to perspy in hermetic.

ally scaled glasses, and vessels close covered with paper, and not only so, but in vessels covered with fine lawns, so as to admit the air, and keep out the insects; no living thing was ever produced there.

Bentley.

HERMIT. n. s. [hermit, Fr. contracted from creniz, érigit.] 1. A solitary; an anchorite; one who retires from society to contemplation and devotion.

A witty'd hermit, fivecores winters worn,

Might shake off fifty looking in her eye. Shake.

You lay this command upon me, to give you my good advice in a eminent place.

I humbly return you mine opinion, such as an hermit rather than a counsellor can render. Bacon.

He was of d'Avosy, and, after a very glorious reign, took on him the habit of a hermit, and retired into this solitary spot. Addison on Italy.

2. A beadsman; one bound to pray for another, Improper.

For those of old,

And the last that signs head up to them,

We rest your hermit. Shaksper.

HERMITAGE. n. s. [hermitage, Fr.] The cell or habitation of a hermit.

By that painful way they pass

Forth to an hill, that was both steep and high;

On top whereof a sacred chapel was,

And eke a little hermitage thereby. Fairy Queen.

Gethsemanit.

To some forlorn and naked hermitage,

Remote from all the pleasures of the world, Shaksper.

And in all her.

Find out the peaceful hermitage.

The hairy gown and mossy cell,

Well I may sit and rightly spell

Of ev'ry star that heaven doth shew,

And ev'ry herb that sips the dew. Milton.

About two leagues from Fribourg we went to see a hermit's cell that lies in the prettiest solitude imagina-tible, among woods and rocks. Addison on Italy.

HERMITESS. n. s. [from hermit.] A woman retired to devotion.

HERMICAL. adj. [from hermit.] Suitable to a hermit.

HERMOCATY. n. s. [igmac and déx to do.

Hermocatia is a root of a determinate and regular figure and represents the common figure of a heart cut in two, from half an inch to an inch in length. This drug was first brought into medicinal use by the Arabians, and comes from Egypt and Syria, where the people use them, which fresh, as a vomit or purge; and have a way of roasting them for food which they eat in order to make them- selves fat. The dried roots are a gentle purge, now little used.

HERN. n. s. [Contracted from HERON; for which see;]

Birds that are most easy to be drawn are the mallard, swan, henn, and bittern. Peacham.

HERNILL. n. s. [heron and hill.] An herb. Ainsworth.

HERNIA. n. s. [Lat.] Any kind of rupture, diversified by the name of the part affected.

A hernia would certainly succeed.

Wiceman.

HERO. n. s. [heros, Lat. ige.] 1. A man eminent for bravery.

I sing of heroes and of kings,

In mighty numbers mighty things. Cowley.

Heroes in animated marblerown.

In this view he ceases to be an hero, and his return is no longer a virtue.

Pope's Odyssey.

These say that here thy bust

Is mix'd with heroes, or with kings thy dust. Pope.

2. A man of the highest class in any respect; as, a hero in learning.

HEROESS. n. s. [from hero; herois, Lat.]

A heroine; a female hero. Not in use.

In which were held, by sad disease,

Heroes and heroines Chapman.

HEROICAL. adj. [from hero.] Besetting an hero; noble; illustrious; heroick.

Medusorus was famous over all Asia for his heroical enterprises.

Sidney.

That you to courage in an heroic degree.

I ascribe it to you as your second attribute. Dryden.

HEROICALLY. adv. [from heroical.]

After the way of a hero; suitably to an hero.

Not heroically in killing his tyrannical cousin.

Sidney.

Free from all meaning, whether good or bad; And, in one word, heroically used. Dryden.

HEROICK. adj. [from hero; heroique, Fr.] 1. Productive of heroes.

Boulgbrook.

From John of Gaunt doth bring his pedigree,

Beating but the fourth of that heroic line. Shaksper.

2. Noble; suitable to an hero; brave; maginamnous; intrepid; enterprising; illustrious.

Not that which justly gives heroick name

To person, or to poem.

Verce makes heroick virtue live, and you can life to verses give.

Waller.

3. Reciting the acts of heroes. Used of poetry.

Methinks heroick poetry, 'tis now,

Like some fantastic fair hand did show. Cowley.

And such a heroick subject which and a poet could desire: I have taken upon me to describe the motives, the beginning, progress and successes of a most just and necessary war. Dryden.

An heroic poem is the greatest work which the soul of man is capable to perform; the design of it is to form the mind to heroick virtue by example. Dryden.

HEROICKLY. adv. [from heroick.] Suitably to an hero. Heroically is more frequent, and more analagical.

Samson hath quite himself

Like Samson and heroically hath finish'd

A life heroick.

Milton.

HEROINE. n. s. [from hero; heroine, Fr.] A female hero. Anciently, according to English analogy, heroess.

HERON. n. s. [heron, Fr.] 1. A bird that feeds upon fish.

So lords, with sport of stag and heron fall,

Sometimes we see small birds from nests do pull.

Bacon.

The heron, when she soareth high, seeth waders.

2. It is now commonly pronounced heron.

The tow'ring hawk let future poets sing,

While to the bearers of his soaring wing;

And lofty numbers paint their airy fry. Gay.

HERONY.

HERONSHAW.

HERONY.

HERONSHAW. n. s. [from heron, common.

HERONY. mony pronounced herony.] A place where herons breed.

They carry their load to a large herony above the house of the Physic-Theologus.

HERES. n. s. [heres.] A cutaneous inflammation of two kinds: miliaris, or postuleris, which is like millet-seed upon the skin; and excedes, which is more corrosive and penetrating, so as to form little ulcers.

Quincy.

A farther progress towards acrimony maketh a heresy and, if the access of acrimony be very great, it maketh an heres excess. Wiceman's Surgery.

HERING. n. s. [hering, Fr. jaunp, Sax.] A small sea fish.

The coast is plentifully stored with round fish, pilchard, herring, mackerel, and cod. Core.

Buy my herring fresh.

HERS. pron. The female possessive used when it refers to a substantive going before; as, this is her house, this house is hers. See her.

How came her eyes so bright not with salt tears;

If any eyes are of all eyes, hers. Shaksper.

Whom ill fate would ruin, it prefers;

For all the miserable are made hers. Waler.

I look'd on her well, and was never surprised:

And panting, loft the god, the god she cries;

With words not hers, and more than human sound,

She makes it obelisk ghosts sleep trembling through the ground. Roscommon.

HERSE. n. s. [hersia, low Lat. supposed to come from hepan to praise.] This is likewise written harse; see hearse.

1. A temporary monument raised over a grave.

2. The carriage in which corpses are drawn to the grave.

When mourning nymphs attend their Daphnis,

Who does not weep that reads the moving verse?

On all the line a sudden vengeance waits.

And frequent herses shall besige your gates. Poe.

To HERSE. vr. a. [from the noun.] To put into a herse.

I would my daughter were dead at my foot, and the jewels in her car, she would she were her's at my foot, and the diamonds in her coffin. Shaksper.

The Grecians spiritedly drew from the darts courting her, and her'd it, bearing to flate.

Chapman.

The house is her's about with a black wood,

Which nods with many a heavy-headed tree. Chapman.

HERSELF. pron.
1. A female individual, as distinguished from others.

2. Being in her own power; mistress of her own thoughts.

3. The oblique case of the reciprocal pronoun; as, she hurt herself.

4. To form or shape with an axe; cut out.

5. To form laboriously; with great difficulty.

6. To Hew. v. a. [hep, Sax. to praise, to celebrate.] To hallow; to regard as holy. Now no longer in use.

7. To Hew. v. a. [hesite, Lat. hesitare, fr. hesita.] To be doubtful; to delay; to pause; to make difficulty.

8. To Hew. v. a. [heew, heewed, heewan, Dut.] 1. To cut by blows with an edged instrument; to hack.

9. To Hew. v. a. [heew, heewed, heewan, Dut.] 1. To cut by blows with an edged instrument; to hack.

10. To Hew. v. a. [heew, heewed, heewan, Dut.] 1. To cut by blows with an edged instrument; to hack.

11. To Hew. v. a. [heew, heewed, heewan, Dut.] 1. To cut by blows with an edged instrument; to hack.

12. To Hew. v. a. [heew, heewed, heewan, Dut.] 1. To cut by blows with an edged instrument; to hack.

13. To Hew. v. a. [heew, heewed, heewan, Dut.] 1. To cut by blows with an edged instrument; to hack.

14. To Hew. v. a. [heew, heewed, heewan, Dut.] 1. To cut by blows with an edged instrument; to hack.

15. To Hew. v. a. [heew, heewed, heewan, Dut.] 1. To cut by blows with an edged instrument; to hack.

16. To Hew. v. a. [heew, heewed, heewan, Dut.] 1. To cut by blows with an edged instrument; to hack.

17. To Hew. v. a. [heew, heewed, heewan, Dut.] 1. To cut by blows with an edged instrument; to hack.

18. To Hew. v. a. [heew, heewed, heewan, Dut.] 1. To cut by blows with an edged instrument; to hack.

19. To Hew. v. a. [heew, heewed, heewan, Dut.] 1. To cut by blows with an edged instrument; to hack.

20. To Hew. v. a. [heew, heewed, heewan, Dut.] 1. To cut by blows with an edged instrument; to hack.
HID

Hiat. n.s. [from hio, Lat.] The act of gaping.

Men observing the continual hiat, or holding open the canals of the mouth, conceive the inconvenience thereby to the health of the body, and this is probably not without reason; but this is also occasioned by the greatness of the lungs. Brown.

Hiasus. n.s. [hiasus, Lat.]

1. An aperture; a gaping breach.

Those hias's at the bottom of the sea, whereby they always open and close, may be said to vary with the hias itself. Dryden.

2. The opening of the mouth by the suction of an initial to a final vowel.

The hiasus should be avoided with more care in poetry and oratory; and I would try to prevent it, whenever the cutting it off is more prejudicial to the sound than the hiasus itself. Pope.

Hibernal adj. [hibernal, Lat.] Belonging to the Winter.

This star should rather manifest its warming power in the winter, when it remains conjoined with the sun in its hibernable conversion. Brown.

Hiccus doctius. n.s. [Corrupted, I think, from nostril, this, or here, is the learned man. Used by jugglers of themselves. A cant word for a juggler; one that plays fast and loose.

An old dull sot, who told the clock For many years at Bridgewater dock, At Westminster and Hick's hall, And hicus doctor play'd in all Where, in all governments and times, He had been both friend and foe to crimes. Hudib.

Hicough. n.s. [hicken, Dan.] A convulsion of the stomach producing sobbing.

So by an ahbe's skeleton of late
I heard an echoc supercure
Through imperfectness, and the voice restore,
As if she had the hiccough over and over. Clear.

Success cureth the hiccough, and is profitable unto man in hard labour. Brown's Vulg. Err.

If the stomach be hurt, singultus or hiccough follows. Willman.

To Hicough. v.n. [from the noun.]

To sob with convulsion of the stomach.

Hiccup. v.n. [corrupted from hicough.]

To sob with a convulsed stomach.

Quoth he, to bid me not to love, Is to bid me not to move. My heard to grow, my ears to pick up, Or, when I'm in a fit, to hiccup. Hudibras.

Hickwallow. n.s. A bird. Ainsw.

Hid. § pass. of hide.

Thus fam'd shall be aslant's den, renown on earth; And what most merits fame, in silence hid, Milton. Other hidden cause Left them superior. Milton.

Nature and nature's laws lay hid in night; God said, Let Newton be, and all was light.

To Hide. v.n. preter. hid; part. pass. hid or hidden, [hiden, Sax.] To conceal; to withhold or withdraw from sight or knowledge.

Avant, and quit my sight; let the earth hide thee! His repositional are as two grains of wheat hid in two baskets of chair. Shaksp. Merchant of Venice.

Nile hears him knock at his sev'ral gate, Gates, and says his hidden spring, and fears his nephews fate. Dryden.

Thus the sire of gods and men below: What I have hidden, hope not thou to know. Dry.

The sev'ral parts lay hidden in the piece. Shaksp.

'The occasion but exci'ted that, er this. Dryden.

Then for my corps a hollow grave provide, Which love and me from public scorn may hide. Dryden.

Hiddeous. adj. [hideous, Fr.]

1. Horrid; dreadful; shocking. If he could have turned himself to as many forms as Hiddeous, every form should have been hideous. Sidney.

Hell trembled at the hideous name, and sigh'd From all her caves, and back resounding death. Milton.

Her eyes grew stiff'd, and with sulphur burn'd; Her hideous looks and hellish form return; Her curving snakes with hissing fill the place, And open all the furies of her face. Dryden.

2. It is commonly used of risible objects: the following use is less authorised. To force the hideous at the bottom of the sea with such vehemence, that it puts the sea water in such a disorder, making it rage and roar with the most hideous and amazing noise. Woodward of Nat. Hist.

Hie. v.n. [from hideous.] Horribly; dreadfully; in a manner that shocks. I arm myself To welcome the confusion of the time; Which cannot look more hideously on me, Than I have drawn it in my fantasy. Shaksp.

This, in the present application, is hideously profane; but the sense is intelligible. Collier's Defence.

Hieability adj. [from hideous.] Horribleness; dreadfulness; terrou.

Hider. n.s. [from the verb.] He that hides.

To Hie. v.n. [peian, Sax.]

1. To hasten; to go in haste. When they had mark'd the changed skies, They wish their lour was spent; then each to rest him hie. Fairy Quean.

My will is even this,
That presently you hie you home to bed. Shaksp.

Well, I will hie. And so bestowe these papers as you bade me. Shakes.

Some to the shores do fly, Some to the woods, and hear adv'rsad; But running from, all to destruction hie. Daniel.

The snake no soomer hie,
But true heard him, and away he hie'd. Cranaw.

Thither, full fraught with mischievous revenge. Accurs'd, and in a cursed hour, he hies. Milton.

Thus as hied from his aged tree Hang up thy hute, and hie thee to the sea. Wailler.

The youth, returning to his mistress, hies, Dryd.

2. It was also anciently used with or without the reciprocal pronoun. It now is almost obsolete in all its uses.

Auster spy'd him; Caelu Auster thither thy'd him. Cranaw.

Hierarch. n.s. [hierarch, Gr. hierarkhe, Fr.] The chief of a sacred order. Angels, by imperial summons cal'd, Porthov'd from all the parts of the earth. Under their hierarches in orders bright. Milton.

Hierarchical adj. [hierarchique, Fr.] Belonging to sacred or ecclesiastical government.

Hierarchy. n.s. [hierarchie, Fr.]

1. A sacred government; rank or subordination of holy beings. Out of the hierarchies of angels sheen, The gentle Gabriel call'd from the rest. Fairf. He rouls the air, and breaks the hymnaly notes In birds, hear'st chanteries, organick throat. Which, if they did not sing, might seem to be A tenth rank in the heavenly hierarchy. Dona.

Thee, Jehovah, from the summit of the sky, Envirow'd with his angelic hierarchy, The world survey'd. Sandys.

These the supreme king
Exalted to such pow'r, and gave to rule, Each in his hierarchy, the orders bright. Milton.

The blessedness of mortal wights, now questionless the highest sail in the celestial hierarchy, begin to so importune, that a great part of the divine liturgy was addressed solely to her. Howel.

2. Ecclesiastical establishment.

The presbytery had more sympathy with the discipline of Scotland than the hierarchy of England. Bacon.

While the old Levitical hierarchy continued, it was part of the ministerial office to say the sacrifices. South.

Consider what I have written, from regard for the church established under the hierarchy of bishops. Swift.
HIEROGLYPH. n. s. [hieroglyph, Fr.
HIEROGLYPHIC. g. glyph, Gr.
HIEROGLYPHICAL. adj. [hierogly-
HIEROGLYPHIC. g. phike, Fr. from
HIEROGLYPHICALLY. adv. [from hiero-HIEROGLYPHY. n. s. [hie and
HIEROGRAPHER. n. s. [hiegraphe
ITO HIGGLE. r. n. [of uncertain ety-HIGGLEDY-PIGGLEDY. adv. A can-
HIGGLER. n. s. [from higgle]
HIGH. adj. [pea, Sax. hoogh, Dut.]

1. Long upwards; rising above from the surface, or from the centre; opposed to dep, or long downward.

2. Elevated in place; raised aloft; oppposed to low.

3. Exalted in nature.

4. Elevated in rank or condition; as high priest.

5. Difficult; abstruse.

6. Violent; tempestuous; loud. Applied to the wind.

7. Boastful; ostentatious.

8. Severe; oppressive.

9. Violent; tempestuous; loud. Applied
to the wind.

10. Noble; illustrious.

11. Violent; tempestuous; loud. Applied
to the wind.

12. Tumultuous; turbulent; unaccountable.

14. Raised to any great degree; as, a high pleasure; high luxury; a high performance; a high colour.

15. Advancing in latitude from the line.

16. At the most perfect period; in the maidan: as, by the sun it is high noon:
whence probably the foregoing expression, high time.

18. Dear; exorbitant in price.

19. Capital; great; opposed to little; as, high treason, in opposition to petty.

20. High. n. s. High place; elevation; superior regions; only used with from and on.

21. High. adj. Swelled much with wind; much inflamed.

22. Covered with lofty buildings.

23. High-coloured. Having a deep or glares of colour.

24. High. adj. Having great schemes.

26. High-flaming. Throwing the flame to a great height.
High-flying. Extravagant in claims or opinions.

The word "high-flying" is often used to describe someone who is extravagant in their claims or opinions. It suggests a tendency to overstate or exaggerate, often to the point of deception.

High-flying can also refer to the act of flying at a high altitude. In the context of aviation, "high-flying" might refer to pilots or aircraft that fly at high altitudes for various purposes, such as exploration, meteorology, or military operations.

High-flying is also associated with the concept of soaring or rising above oneself or one's surroundings. This usage can be metaphorical, describing someone who has achieved great success or prominence.

In literature, "high-flying" can be used to describe characters or events that are grandiose or overblown. It can also refer to descriptions that are grandiloquent or overly dramatic.

Overall, the term "high-flying" carries a sense of excess or extravagance, whether in terms of claims, altitude, or dramatic expression.
HINT n.s. [from the verb.]

1. Faint notice given to the mind; remote allusion; distant insinuation. Let him strictly observe the first hints and intimations, the first hints and whisper of good and evil, that pass in his heart. South.

2. Suggestion; intimation. On this hint I spoke, she felt true to the danger I had past. Shaw.

Actions are so full of circumstances, that every one observes some parts more than others, they take different hints, and put different inferences in them.
HIS

2. Censure; expression of contempt used in the theatre.

He heard
On all sides from innumerable tongues,
A dismal universal his the sound
Of publick sway.

Milton.

Fierce champion fortitude, that knows no fears
Of hises, blows, or want, or loss of ears.

Pope.

HIST. interj. [Of this word I know not the original: some thought it a corruption of hush it, hush; but I have heard that it is an Irish verb commanding silence: An exclamation commanding silence.

Mute silence hush along!

Less Philomel will deign a song.

In her distressed plight,

Smoothing the ragged brow of night.

Milton.

Hit, hush, says another that stood by, away,

doctor; for here's a whole pack of diesmings coming.

Swift.

HISTORIAN. n. s. [historious, Lat. historien, Fr.] A writer of facts and events; a writer of history.

What thanks sufficient, or what recconence
Equal, have I to render thee, divine

In the manner of this.

Milton.

Our country which has produced writers of the first figure in every other kind of work, has been every barrens in historian which our Addison.

Not added years or years my task could close.

The long historian of country's ways.

Pope.

HISTORICAL. adj. [historique, Fr.

HISTORY. n. s. [historius, Lat. historian, Fr.] A historian, a writer of history.

In the manner of this; by way of narration.

The gospel, which are weekly read, do all historically, as if it were written by God himself, which is, I believe, here he makest of us, and sufferd in his own person.

Hoder.

When that which the word of God doth,

Deliver historically, we construe as it were legally meant, and so urge it further than we can prove it was intended, do we not add to the laws of God?

Hoder.

After his life has been rather invented than written, I shall consider him historically as an author, with regard to those works he left behind him.

Pope's Essay on Homer.

To HISTORIFY. v. a. [from history.] To relate; to record in history.

Her praise, whose power to learn thy skill hath framed me.

Sidney.

The third age they term historian; that is,

such wherein matters have been more truly historified, and therefore may be believed.

Brown's Tulip. Err.

Historiographer. n. s. [historie, &c.; historiographie, Fr.] An historian; a writer of history.

The method of a poet historical is not such as of an historiographer.

Spenser.

What poor ideas must strangers conceive of persons famous among us, should they form their notions of them from the writings of those their historiographers.

Addison.
HOA

Look now for no enchanting voice, no fear
The bale of hoar'd words; a rough tongue
Draws hitherto.

HIVE. n. s. [hype, Sax.]
1. The habitation or artificial receptacle of bees. So bees with smoke, and doves with noisome stench.

   Are from their hives and houses driv'n away. Shak.
   So wand're ring bees would perish in the air,
   Did not a sound, a whisper'd word, to their ears
   Apprear their rage, invite them to the hive.

   Bees have each of them a hole in their hives;
   Their honey is their own, and every bee minds its own concerns.

   As in hives; to receive, as to an habitation.

   Ambitious to make a better bee.

   More than the hard and drones hire not with me,
   Therefore I part with him.

   In summer we wander in a paradisical scene,
   Among groves and gardens; but at this season
   We get into warmer houses, and hive together in cities,
HOB

HOARSELY. adv. [from hoarse.] With a rough harsh voice.
The hounds at nearer distance hoarsely had'd;
The hunter soon purs'd the visionary maid.

Drieden.

HOARSENESS. n.s. [from hoarse.]

Roughness of voice.
The voice is sometimes interlaced by an hoarseness, or viscous phlegm.

Holker.

I had a voice in heav'n, ere sulphurous storms
Had charm'd it to transfiguration. Dryd. King Arthur.
The want of it in the wind-pipe occasions hoarseness in the gullet, and difficulty of swallowing,

Arthburn on Aliments.

HOARY. adj. [hap, hyoyme, Sax. See Hoar.]

1. White; whitish.

Thus she rested on her arm reclin'd,
The heary willows waving with the wind. Addi.

2. White or grey with age.

A comedy palmer, clad in black attire,
Of ripest years, and hairs all heary grey.
Spenser.

Solyman, marvelling at the courage and majesty of the heary old prince in his so great extremety,
Dismissed him, and sent him again into the city.

Knotts's History.

Then the white head never deserv'd no better Rule.

3. In full age and heary holiness.

Retire, great preachers, to thy promised bliss. Pri.

4. Muddy; mossy; rusty.

There was brought out of the city into the camp very coarse, heary, muddily attorney.

Knotts's History.

To HOBBLE. p.n. [to hop, to hopple, to hobble.]

1. To walk lamely or awkwardly upon one leg more than the other; to hitch; to walk with unequal and uncentered steps.

The friar was hobbling the same way too. Dryd.
Some person continued a kind of hobbling march on the broken arches, but fell through.

Addi.

2. To move roughly or unevenly.

Feet being ascrib'd to verses, whatever is done with feet is likewise ascribed to them.

Those ancient Romans had a sort of extempore poetry, or unteatable hobbling verse. Dryd.

While you Pindarick truths rehearse,
She hobbles in alternate verse.

Prior.

HOBBLE. n.s. [from the verb.] Uneven awkward gait.

One of his heels is higher than the other, which

HOBBLER. n.s. [from hobby.]

For twenty hobblers armed, Irishmen so called,
Because they served on hobblers, he paid six-piece a-piece per diem. Davier.

HOBBLINGLY. adv. [from hobble.] Clumsily; awkwardly; with a halting gate.

HOBY- n.s. [hoberou, Fr.]

1. A species of hawk.

They have such a hovering possession of the Valentine, as an hobby hath over a lark. Barcan.
The people go after them like trots at an artificial fly, and dare like larks under the awe of a painted hawk. L'Estrange.

Larks lie dar'd to shun the hobby's flight. Dryd.

2. [Hoppe, Gothick, a horse; habbin, Fl., a pacing horse.]; An Irish or Scottish horse; a pacing horse; a garran. See Hobbler.

3. A stick on which boys get astride and ride.

HOC

Those grave contemplers of philosophical trifles look like aged Socrates upon his holy hobby horse.

Glanville.

As young children, who are try'd in
Go-carts, to keep their steps from sliding.
When members kilt, and legs grow stronger,
Make use of such machine no longer;
But leap on horse-bits, if.

On horse call'd hobby, or without.

No hobby horse, with gorgeous top,
Could with this Rod of Sod compare.

Swift.

4. A stupid fellow.

I have studied eight or nine wise words to speak to you, which these hobby horses must not hear.

Shakespeare.

HOGBOBLIN. n.s. [according to Shkel-ner, for roggboblim from Robin Good-Fellow, Hob being the nickname of Robin:] but more probably, according to Wallis and Junior, hoggboblim emuspanse, because they do not move their feet:
whence, says Wallis, came the boys play of fox in the hole, the fox always hopping on one leg.] A frightful fairy.

Fairies, black, grey, green and white,

Attend your office and spell.

Crier hobgoblin, make the fairy a revery.

Shakespeare.

HOB. n.s. A small mortar to shoot little bombs.

HOBNAIL. n.s. [from hobby and nail.]

A nail used in shoeing a hobby or little horse;
a nail with a thick strong head.

Steel, if thou turn thou edge, I beseech Jove on my knees thou may'st be turn'd into hobnails.

Shakespeare.

We shall buy mules in they buy hobnails, by the hundred.

HOBNAILLED. adj. [from hobnail.]

Set with hobnails.

Would'st then, friend, who last two legs alone,
Would'st thou, to run the gait, these expose
To a whole company of hobnail'd shoes? Drydinal.

HOBNAR. This is probably corrupted from hab nab by a coarse pronunciation.

See HAB NAB.

His incensement at this moment is so impeciable, that satisfaction can be none, but pleas of speech and sequelae; hobnab is his word; give't, or take't.

Shakespeare.

HOCK. n.s. [The same with hough;

poh, Sax.]; The joint between the knee and the fetlock.

To Hock. v.a. [from the noun.]; To disable in the hock.

HOCKER. n.s. [from Hockheim

HÖCKMARE. on the Main.]. Old strong Rhemish.

Rest'd the fauntling high and mighty,
With brandy, wine, and aqua vitae;

And made'em stoutly overcome
With hockeralch, hocknirwore and mum.
Hodhbrus.

Wine becomes sharp, as hock, like vitriolick addity.

Fig.

It under-royal should become unpleasant as unit to bottle as old hockemare, mix one hogs head of that and one of tart new eyer together.

Mort.

HÖCKERR. n.s. [hough and herb.]; A plant; the same with mallow.

Ainsw.

To HÖCKLE. v.a. [from hock.]; To hamstring; to cut the sinews about the ham or hough.

Hammer.

HOCUS POCUS. [The original of this word is referred by Tillotson to a form of the Roman church. Juniur derivs it from hocceid, Welsh, a cheat, and poke and pocus a bag, jugglers using a bag for conveyance. It is corrupted from some words that had once a meaning, and which perhaps cannot be discovered.] A juggle; a cheat.

This gift of hocus pocus and of disguising masers is surprising.

L'Estrange.

HOD. n.s. [corrupted perhaps in contempt from hood, a hood being carried on the head.]; A kind of trunche in which a labourer carries mortar to the masons. A fork and a hook to be tampering in clay.

A lahet, hammer, trowel, a hod or a tray.

Tunst.

HODMAN. n.s. [hod and man.]; A labourer that carries mortar.

HODMANK'D. n.s. A fish.

These that cast their shell are the lobster,
the crab, the crawfish, and the hodmank'd or dodman.

Tunst.

HODGEPIDGE. n.s. [hoge pocke, hoekepot quasi hachis en pot, Fr.]; A medley of ingredients boiled together.

They have made our English tongue a gallimancy, or hodge-podge of all other speeches. Spenn.

It produces excelsior com, whereas the Turks make their trachamin and hounbou, a certain hodgepodge of sundry ingredients. Sandys's Travels.

HODGIN. n.s. adj. [hodirnous, Lat.]

Of to-day.

HOD. n.s. [hov, Fr. hoover, Dut.]; An instrument to cut up the earth, of which the blade is at right angles with the handle.

They should be thinned with a hoe.

Mortimer.

To HOE. v.a. [hov, Fr. hooven, Dut.]

To cut or dig with a hoe.

They must be continually kept with weeding and hoesing.

Mortimer.

HOG. n.s. [hoch, Welsh.]

1. The general name of swine.

This will raise the price of hogs, if we grow all to be pork-eaters.

Shakespeare.

The hog, that blows not, nor obeys thy call.
Lives on the labours of this Lord of all.

Pope.

2. A castrated boar.

3. To bring hogs to a fair market. To fail of one's design.

You have brought your hogs to a fine market.

Spectator.

4. Hog is used in Lincolnshire for a sheep of a certain age, I think of two years.

Skinner.

HOGCOTE. n.s. [hog and cot.]; A house for hogs; a hogssty.

Out of a small hogcote sixty or eighty load of dung hath been raised.

Mortimer.

HÖGGEREL. n.s. A two year old cow.

Ainsworth.

HÖGH. n.s. [otherwise written ho, hora, or hough, horn, hough, Dut.]; A hill;

rising ground; a cliff; Obsolete.

That well can witness yet unto this day.
The western hough, bespik'ld with the Gone of mighty Gnoeman.

Fairy Queen.

HÖGGERED. n.s. [hög, and pyg a keeper.]; A keeper of hogs.

The terms högger and cow-keeper are not to be used in our poetry; but there are no finer words in the Greek.

Browne.

HÖGGISH. adj. [from hog.]; Having the qualities of an hog; brutish; greedy;

selfish.

Suspicion Miso had, for the hoggish shrewdness of his brain, and Mopsa, for a very unlike core.

Sidney.

HÖGGISHLY. adv. [from hoggish.]; Greedily; selfishly.

301
HOL

HOGISHNESS. n. s. [from hoggish.] Brutality; greediness; selfishness.

HOGGISHNESS. n. s. Plants. Ainsworth.

HOGS. n. s. [From hog and fennel.] A plant. Ainsworth.

HOGSFENNEL. n. s. A plant; a hogweed.

1. A measure of liquids containing sixty-three gallons.

Varro tells, that every jugerum of vines yielded six hundred ears of wine; according to this proportion, a acre should yield fifty-five hogheads, and a little more.

2. Any large barrel.

Blow strongly with a pair of bellows into a hogskull, putting it into before that which you would have preserved; and in the instant that you withdraw the bellows, stop the hole. Below.

They shung up one of their largest hogheads: I drank it off, for it did not hold half a pint. Gulliver's Travels.

HOGSTY. n. s. [hog and sty.] The place in which swine are shut to be fed.

There are swine farmers: live in tents and nastiness, without a shoe or stockling to their feet, or a house so convenient an English hogsty. Swift.

HOGWASH. n. s. [hog and wash.] The draft which is given to swine.

Your butcher gathers the liquor, and the brewer sells your hogwash. Arbuthnot's Hist. of John Bull.

HOIDEN. n. s. [hoeden; Welsh; femina levis or fama, Lat.] An ill-taught awkward country girl.

To HOIDEN. v. n. [from the noun.] To romp indecently.

Some of them get a scratch; but we always discovered, upon examining, that they had been hooliding with the young apprentices. Swift.

To HOISE. v. a. [hauzer; Fr.] To hoist.

To HOIST. v. n. To raise up on high.

To the sport to have the engineer hoist up with his own power.

Joyn with me: We'll quickly hoist Duke Humphrey from his seat.

Shakespeare.

Hoist sail, and fly.

And in thy flight alound on Cratus cry. Chapman.

They hoist up the main upon a sail, and was on his wayward the bar of Nauktoats. Knolles's History.

They loused the rudder-bars, and hoisted up the mainsail to the wind, and made towards to shore. Acta. xlix.

That man which prizeth virtue for itself, and cannot endure to hoist and strike his sails, as the divers natures of calm and storms require, must cut his sails of mean length and breadth, and content himself with a slow and sure navigation.

Haldigh.

What made Absalou kick at all the kindnesses of his father, but because his ambition would needs be fingering the sceptre, and hoisting him into his father's throne?

South.

We thought for Greece

The sword were scathed, and our fears release. Dryd.

They hoist on the bier, and deal the dose, and there's an end. Dryden's Pers.

What haste she made to hoist her purple sails! And to appear magnificent in flight, Drew half our strength away. Dryd. All for Love.

Their navy swarms upon the coast: they cry to hoist their anchors, but the gods doth, Dryden.

Seize him, take, hoist up, break off his hold, and toss him headlong from the temple's wall.

It was an island where they found the shells, they straightways concluded that the whole island lay originally at the bottom of the sea, and that it was hoisted up by some vapour from beneath. Woodward's Natural History.

HOLD. in the old glossaries, is mentioned in the same sense with hold; i.e., a governor or chief officer; but in some other places for love, as holde have.

Gibson's Cambden.

To HOLD. v. a. preter. held; part. pass. held or helden. [haldan, Gothick; balan, Sax. hunden, Dut.]

1. To grasp in the hand; to gape; to clutch.

Lift up the hat, hold him in thy hand. Genesis.

France, thou mayst hold a serpent by the tongue. A fasting tyer is safer by a hold.

Then keep in peace that hand which thou dost hold. Shakspeare.

2. To connect; to keep from separation.

The loons held one casket to another. Ends. xxxvi. 12.

3. To keep; to retain; to gape fast; not to let go.

Too late it was for satyr to be told,

Or ever hope recover her again: In vain he seeks, that having cannot hold. F. Queen. Prove all things: hold fast that is good. 2 Thea. v.

4. To maintain as an opinion.

Thou hast there them that hold the doctrine of Balaam. Rev.

5. To consider; to regard.

He as strange a spirit to my heart and me

Hold thee from this for ever. Shakspeare.

6. To think of: to judge with regard to praise or blame.

I hold him but a fool, that will endanger his body for his name. Shakspeare.

One amongst the fairest of Greece,

That holds his honour higher than his ease. Shakspeare.

This makes the blessed Peaceful so light to hold. Like Summer's lies that fear not Winter's cold. Fairfay, Phillip.

Hold such in reputation. Fairfay, Phillip.

He would make us amends, and spend some time with us, if we held his company and conference agreeable. Bacon.

A Chamber is the father of English poetry, so I hold him in the same degree of estimation as the Grecians held Homer, or the Romans Virgil. Dryd.

7. To receive, and keep in a vessel.

She temper'd ducet creams, nor these to hold.

Wants her heart to hold. Milton.

8. To contain; to receive into its capacity; as, a hoghead holds sixty-three gallons; the sack is too little to hold the grain.

9. To keep; not to spill.

Broken cisterns that can hold no water. Jerem.

10. To keep; to hinder from escape.

For this infernal pit shall never hold.

Cæstial spirits in bondage. Milton.

11. To keep from spoil; to defend.

With what arms we mean to hold what ancienly we claim. Of empir.

12. To keep from loss.

Man should better hold his place by wisdom. Milton.

13. To have any station.

The stars are the shepherd fold; now the top of heaven doth hold. Milton.

And now the strand, and now the plain they hold; their ancient eyes with bloody streaks were fill'd. Dryden.

Observe the youth who first appears in sight, and holds his fit very prime, to us, to love that which he holdseth, than to fail in getting that which he never had. Hayward.

14. To possess; to have.

Holding Corinid in the name of Rome,

Even like a flaming greyhound in the leash,

To let him whate'er he likes. Shakspeare.

The castle, holden by a garrison of Germans, he commanded to be besieged. Knolles's History.

Assuredly it was more shame for a man to lose that which he holdeth, than to fail in getting that which he never had. Hayward.

15. To possess in subordination.
My account is so far from interfering with Moses, that it holds forth a natural interpretation of his sense.

To hold forth. To pretend; to put forward to view. How joyful and pleasant a thing it is to have a light held up from heaven to direct our steps! Cheyne.

33. To hold in. To restrain; to govern by the bridle. I have lately sold my rag, and honestly told him his greatest fault, which is, that he became such a lover of liberty, and I could scarce hold him in. Swift.

34. To hold in. To restrain in general. These men's hastiness the warmer sort of you doth not commend; ye wish they had held themselves longer in, and not so dangerously blown abroad. Hooker.

35. To hold off. To keep at a distance, although 'tis fit that Cassio has his place; yet, if you please to hold him off a while, you shall by that perceive him. Shakes. Othello. He is subject to sight doth strike upon the pupil of the eye directly, without any interception; whereas the case of the car doth hold the sound a little from the eye. Shakes. I am the better acquainted with you forbearance, as men are with themselves for affliction: absence does but hold off a friend, to make one more true. Pope to Swift.

36. To hold on. To continue; to protract; to push forward. They took Barbarossa, holding on his course to Africa, who brought great fruit upon the country. Knolles's History. If the obedience challenged were indeed due, then did our brethren both begin the quarrel and hold it on. Sanderson.

37. To hold out. To extend; to stretch forth. The king held out to Esther the golden sceptre that was in his hand. Zech. 3.

38. To hold out. To offer; to propose. Fortune holds out these to you, as rewards. Ben Jonson.

39. To hold out. To continue to do or suffer. He cannot long hold out these pangs, that incessant care and labour of his mind. Shakes. Othello.

40. To hold up. To raise aloft. I should remember him: doest he not hold up his head, as it were, and strait in his gait? Shakes. The band of his visor visibly held up and prepared to take vengeance. Looke.

41. To hold up. To sustain; to support by influence or contrivance. There is no man at once either excellently good or extremely evil, but grows either as he holds himself up in virtue, or les himself to vice and viciousness. Sidney. It followeth, that all which do in this sort proceedeth originally from some such agent as knoweth, approveth, holdeth up, and actually frameth the same. Hooker.

The time disorder'd doth in common sense and fact, thrust us to this monstrous form. To hold out safety up. Hooker.

42. To keep from falling; materially. We have often made one considerably thick piece of marble take and hold up another, having purposely caused their flat surfaces to be carefully ground and polished. Boyle.

To HOLD. s. n.

1. To stand; to be right; to be without exception.

To say that simply an argument, taken from man's authority, doth hold no way, neither affirming nor negating anything. Hooker.

This hok'deth is an old sea-coast. Bacon. The lasting of plants is lost in those that are largest of body; as oak, elm, and chestnut, and this heldeth in trees; but in herbs it is often contrary. Bacon.

When the religion formerly received is rent by disputes, and when the business of the professors of religion is decayed, and full of scandal, and within the times be stupid, ignorant, and barbarous, you may doubt the springing up of a new sect; if then also there should arise any extravagant and strange spirit, to make himself author thereof; all which paintings be held in. Mallock published his law. Beow. Nothing can be of greater use and defence to the mind than the discovering of the colours of good and evil, shewing in what cases they hold, and what they deceive. Bacon.

Where outward force constrains, the sentence holds; but who constrains me? Milton.

None of his solutions will hold by mere mechanics. More.

This unseen agitation of the minute parts will hold in light and spirituous liquors. Boyle.

The drift of this figure holds good in all the parts of the situation. L'Estrange.

The reasons given by them against the worship of images, will equally hold against the worship of imaginary Christians. Stillingfleet.

It holds in all operations, both by the letter and sense, but especially in such relation to mortality; in which not to proceed, is certainly to go backward. South.

The proverb holds, that to wise and love, is hardly granted to the gods above. Dryden. Fables.

As if the experiment were made only for base production, and reject the gold. Dryden.

This remark, I must acknowledge, is not so proper for the colouring as the design, but it will hold. Dryden.

Our author offers no reason; and when any body does, we shall see whether it will hold or no. Locke.

The word holds in hand as well as all other commodities. Locke.

This seems to hold in most cases. Addison.

The analogy holds good, and precisely keeps to the same properties in the planets and comets. Cheyne.

Sanctorius's experiment of perspiration, being to the other secretions as five to three, does not hold in this country, except in the hottest time of Summer. Arithnot on Aliments. In words, as fashions, the same rule will hold: Alike fantastic, if too new or old. Pope.

2. To continue unbroken or unsubdued. Our force by land hath nobly held. Shakes.

3. To last; to endure. We see, by the peeling of onions, what a holding substance the skin is. Bacon.

Never any man was yet so old, but hop'd his life one Winter more might hold. Denham.

4. To continue without variation. We our state hold, as you yours, while our obedience holds. Milton.

He did not hold in this mind long. L'Estrange.

5. To refrain. His dauntless heart would fain have held from weeping, but his eyes rebeld. Dryden.

6. To stand up for; to adhere. Through envy of the devil came death into the world, and they that do hold up his side of his skin do find it. Wicl. ii. 24.

They must, if they hold to their principles, agree that things have their production always as now they have. When Grands for your uncle hold, you were by us restored, and he expelle'd. Dryden.

Numbers hold.

With the fair freighted king and beard of gold: So vigorous are his eyes, such rays they cast, So prominent his eagle's beck is plac'd. Dryden.

7. To be dependent on.

The other two were great princes, though holding of him; men both of giant-like huneness and force. Sidney.

To derive right. Tis true, from force the noblest title springs; I therefore hold from that which first made kings. Dryden.

9. To maintain an opinion. Men hold and profess without ever having examined. Locke.

10. To hold forth. To hang out; to speak in public; to set forth publicly. A petty conjurer, telling fortunes, held forth in the market-place. L'Estrange.

11. To hold in. To restrain one's self. I am full of the fury of the Lord: I am weary with holding in. Jer. vi. 11.

12. To hold in. To continue in luck. A duxe, playing at hazard, held in a great many hands together. Swift.

13. To hold off. To keep at a distance without closing with offers. These two important enough, and yet we must be wood to consider them; nay, that doth not prevail neither, but with a perseverance ofness we hold off. Decay of Pety.

14. To hold on. To continue; not to be interrupted. The trade hold on for many years after the bishops became Protestants; and some of their names are still remembered with infamy, on account of enling their families by such sacrilegious alienations. Swift.

15. To hold on. To proceed. He held on, however, 'till he was upon the very point of breaking. L'Estrange.

16. To hold out. To last; to endure. Before those dew's that form manna come upon trees in the valley, they dissipate, and cannot hold out. Bacon.

As there are mountebanks for the natural body, so are there mountebanks for the politic body: men that perhaps have been lucky in two or three experiments, but who want the grounds of science, and therefore can hold out nothing. Truth, falsity, and justice, are a sure way of thriving, and will hold out, when all fraudulent arts and devices fail. Tillinghast.

But an extremely exact regimen a consumptive person may hold out for years, if the symptoms are not violent. Arithnot.

17. To hold out. Not to yield; not to be subdued. The great master went with his company to a place where the Spaniards, sore charged by Achilles, had much ado to hold out. Knolles's History. You think it strange a person, obsequious to those he loves, should hold out so long against importance. Boyle.

Nor could the hardest iron be hold out by his blow. Hodierna. I would cry now, my eyes grow wanished; But yet my heart holds out. Dryden. Spanish Fugue. The citadel of Wilan has held out twenty years after the conquest of the rest of the duchy. Addison. Pronounce your thoughts: are they still fast To hold it out, and fight it to the last? Or your hearts subside at length, and wrouth, By time and ill success, to a submission? Addison. As to the holding out against so many alterations of state, it sometimes proceeds from principles. Collier on Pride.

18. To hold together. To be joined. Those old Gothic castles made at several times, hold together only, as it were, by rags and patches, Dryden.

19. To hold together. To remain in union.
Even outlawed robbers, who break with all the laws that are, must keep faith amongst themselves, or else they cannot hold together. Locke.

20. To hold up. To support himself.

All the wise sayings which philosophers must utter, have helped only to support some few stout and obstinate minds, which, without the assistance of philosophy, could have held up pretty well themselves. Tilottan.

21. To hold up. Not to be foul weather.

Though nice and dark the point appear, Qoeth Ralphy, it may hold up and clear. Hudibras.

22. To hold up. To continue the same speed.

When two stars into the world together, the success of the first seems to press upon the reputation of the latter; for why could not he hold up? Collier.

23. To hold with. To adhere to; to cooperate with.

There is none that holdeth with me in these things but Michael. Daniel.

Hold has the appearance of an interjection; but is the imperative mood. Forbear; stop; be still. Hold, lo! Lieutenant—Sir—Montagne! Gentleman.

Have you forgot all sense of place and duty? The general speaks to you—hold, hold, for shame! Shakes.

Hold, hold! are all thy empty wishes such! A good old woman would have said as much. Dry.

HOLD. n. s. [from the verb.

1. The act of seizing; gripe; grasp; seizure. It is used with great frequency, both literally and figuratively, both for manual and intellectual agency. The verbs with which it is oftentimes united, are take, lay, and hare.

Three hands delivered no certain truth of any thing; neither is there any certain hold to be taken of any antiquity which is received by tradition. Spencer.

The wins of the multitude are such, that many things they cannot lay hold on at once. Hooker.

Uziah put forth his hand to the ark of God, and took hold of it, but he couldn't shake it. 2 Sam. vi. 6.

This is to give him liberty and power: Rather thou shouldst lay hold upon him, send him to be hoarded up, and a just punishment. Ben/jen.

Let but them find coarse to lay hold on this occasion. Milton.

The ability, when set on foot, if you could not transport that patient good man beyond his temper, or make him quit his hold L'Esplan. He set'd the sliding bow with gripping hold, And rest away with ease the ling'ring gold. Dryd.

The hand is divided into four fingers bending forwards, and one opposite to them bending backwards, and of greater strength than any of them singly, which we call the thumb, to join with them severally or united, whereby it is fitted to lay hold of objects of any size or quantity. Ray on the Create.

Yet then, from all my grief, O Lord, Thy mercy set me free, Which is the bond of peace, of pray'. My soul took hold on. Addison.

We are strangely backward to lay hold of this safe, this only method of cure. Atterbury.

He kept his hold, Nor lost till beauty was decay'd and old, And love was by possession pale and drown. Gray.

2. Something to be held; support.

It is a high place, without rails or good hold, he is ready to fall. Bacon.

On your vigour now, My hold of your kingdom all depends. Milton.

4. Catch; power of seizing.

The law hath yet another hold on you. Shakes.

5. Prison; place of custody.

They lay him in hold, because it was not declared what was to be done with him. Hooker.

Dr. They lay hands on them, and put them in hold, unto the next day. Acts.

6. Custody.

King Richard, he is in the mighty hold of Shakespeare.

7. Power; influence operating on the mind.

Rural recreations abroad, and books at home, are the innocent pleasures of a man who is early wise, and give fortune no more hold of him than of necessity he must. Dryd.

Fear is that passion which hath the greatest power over us, and by which God and his laws take the safest hold. Tilottan.

Let us consider an unbeliever's interest and safety to wrong you, and then it will be impossible for you to hold him upon you, because there is nothing left to give him a check, or to put in the balance against his profit. Swift.

8. Hold of a ship. All that part which lies between the keelson and the lower deck.

Now a sea into the hold was got,

Wave upon wave another sea had wrought Dryd.

9. A lucky place: as the hold of a wild beast or deer.

It was his policy to leave no hold behind him, but make all plain and waste. Spr.

These separated themselves unto David, into the hold to the wilderness, men of might. Chron. Je.

He shall destroy the strong hold. Jeremiah.

HOLDER. n. s. [from hold.]

1. One that holds or gripes any thing in his hand.

The makers and holders of plows are wedded to their own particular way. Mont.

A tenant; one that holds land under another.

In times past holdings were so plentiful, and holders so scarce, as well the handler, who could not get one to be his tenant. Care.

HOLDERFAST. n. s. [hold and fast.]

An arranger; one who speaks in publick.

Whence some tube holde'rfast have made

In pow'ring tins the richest trade. Hudibras.

He is confirmed in this opinion upon seeing the holderfast. Addison.

HOLDERFAST. n. s. [hold and fast.] Any thing which takes hold; a catch; a hook, The several teeth are furnished with holderfastes sufficient to keep those stones that they lay. Ray.

HOLDING. n. s. [from hold.]

1. Tenure; farm.

Holdings were so plentiful, and holders so scarce as well was the landlord who could not get a tenant. Care.

2. It sometimes signifies the burthen or chorus of a song.

Hammer.

The holding every man shall heat as loud

As his strong sides can volley. Shakes.

HOLE. n. s. [hol, Dut., hole, Sax.]

1. A cavity narrow and long, either perpendicular or horizontal.

The earth had not a hole to hide this deed. Shaks. A loadstone is so disposed, that it shall draw into it, in a inclined plane, a bullet of steel, which, if it ascends near to the loadstone, may fall down through some hole, and so return to the place whence it began to move. Whiston's Debatable. There are the tops of the mountains, and under their roots in holes and caverns the air is often tainted. Barret.

2. A perforation; a small interstitial vacuity.

Look at the stone; when there are small holes in it: those holes appear black, men are often deceived in taking holes for spots of ink; and painters, to represent holes make use of black. Boyle.

3. A cave; a hollow place.

Upon his bloody finger he doth wear A precious ring, that lightens all the hole: Shaks.

4. A cell of an animal.

A tortoise spends all his days in a hole, with a house upon his head. L'Espr.

5. A receptacle for the hold. The hole is generally used, unless in speaking of manual works, with some degree of aliquot.

When Alexander first beheld the face Of the great cynic, thus he did lament: How much more happy thou, that art content To live withing this little hole, than Who after empire, that vain quarry, by Dryd.

HOLDIAN. n. s. [holy dame.] Blessed lady. Ham.

By my holdian, here comes Catharine. Shakes.

HOLILY. adj. [from hold.]

1. Piously; with sanctity.

HOLILY. adj. [from hold.]

2. Holildally.

Shaks

friendship, a rare thing in princes, more rare between princes, that so holyly was observed to the last of those two excellent men. Sidney.

HOLINESS. n. s. [from holy.]

1. Sanctity; piety; religious goodness.

It doth beseech your holiness To separate the husband and the wife. Shaks.

Religion is rent by discord, and the holiness of the professors is decayed, and full of scandal. Buc.

Then in full age, and holy holiness. Buc.

Retire, great teacher, to thy promised bliss. Prior.

We see piety and holiness ridiculed as morose singularities. Rogers.

2. The state of being hallowed; dedication to religion.

3. The title of the pope.

Here appear unto the pope, To bring my whole cause 'fore his holiness. Shaks.

His holiness has told some English gentlemen, that those of our nation should have the privileges. Addison.

HOLIQUES. n. s. [from holyl.]

2. Some for the pride of Turkish courts design'd. For folded turban's finest holland bear. Dryd.

HOLLAS. n. s. [from hale.]

1. Excavated; having a void space within; not solid.

It is fortune's use To let the wretched man outhe his wealth, Which with hollas is writ and written in error An age of poverty. Shaks. Merchant of Venice.

Some search for hollas trees, and fell the woods. Dryd.
HOLPEN. The old preterite and participial passive of help.

His great love, sharp as his spur, hath helped To's home before us.

Shak.

HOLPE. The old participial passive of help.

In a long trunk the sound is holpen, though both the mouth and ear be a handful from the trunk:
and somewhat more holpen when the heavier than when the speaker.

Bacon.

HOLSTER. n. s. [poet=sep, Sax. a hiding-place.] A case for a horseman's pistol.

It's rusty holsters put what meat
Into his hose he cou'd not get.

Butler.

HOLY, whether at the beginning or ending of the name of any place, signifies that it is or hath been holy, from the Saxon hol: a wood; or sometimes possibly from the Saxon hol: a wood, in the place.

Gibbon.

HOLY. adj. [holy, Sax. heyligh, But. from pal healthy, or in state of salvation.]

1. Good; pious; religious.

See where his grace stands 'tween two clamengramwes.
And see a book of prayer in his hand!
True orators to know a holy man.

Shak.

With joy he will embrace you; for he is honourable.

And nothing that, most holy. Shaks. Cymbeline.

2. Hallowed; consecrated to divine use.

State, holy or unhallowed, of what that.

Shak. Bare was his hoary head; one holy land Held forth his laurel crown, and one his sceptre.

Dryden.

3. Pure; immaculate.

Common sense could tell them that the good
God could not be pleased with any thing cruel;
nor most holy God with any thing filthy and unclean.

South.

4. Sacred.

An evil soul producing holy witness,
Is like a villain with a smiling cheek.

Shake. He has deservd it, were it uncumbered
Like holy Phoebus' ear. Shaks. Ant. and Cleop.

HOLY-THURSDAY. n. s. The day on which the ascension of our Saviour is commemorated, ten days before Whitsunday.

HOLY-WEEK. n. s. The week before Easter, in which the passion of our Re-deeemer is commemorated.

HOLYDAY. n. s. [holy and day.]

1. The day of our ecclesiastical festival.

2. Anniversary feast.

This victory was so welcome unto the Persians, that in memorial thereof they kept that day as one of their solemn holy-days for many years after.

Waller.

3. A day of gaiety and joy.

What, have I 'scaw'd love-letters in the holiday time of your beauty, and am I now a subject for the uses of the lauds?

Shak.

4. A time that comes seldom.

Courage is but a holyday kind of virtue, to be seldom exercised.

HOMAGE. n. s. [hommage, Fr. homagium, low Lat.]

1. Service paid and fealty professed to a sovereign or superior lord.

5 Z
H O M E

Call my sovereign yours, And do him homage as obedient subjects. Shakep.
The chiefs, in a solemn manner, did their homages, and made their oaths of fidelity to the earl of marachs.

2. Obedience: respect paid by external action.
The gods great mother, when her heart's desire To do homage to her. Dryden.

To Homage. v. a. [from the noun.] To reverence by external action; to pay homage to; to profess fealty.

HOMAGE. n. s. [hommage, Fr. from hommage.] One who holds by homage of some superior lord.

Something like home that is not home to be desired; it is found in the house of a friend. Temple.

Home is the sacred refuge of our life, Secured from all approaches but a wife. Dryden.

He, when Hector went to see His virtuous wife, the fair Andromache, He found her home; for she was gone. Dryden.

Those who have homes, when they home they do repair.

To a last lodging call their warding rings. Dryden.

2. His own country.

How can tyrants safely govern home.

Unaided, unless they purchase great alliance? Shak.

Their determination is to return to their homes, and to trouble you no more. Dryden.

With honour to his home let Thesus ride. Priam.

3. Close to one's own breast or affairs.

He that encourages treason lays the foundation of a doctrine, that will come home to himself.

This is a consideration that comes home to our interest. Addison.

These considerations, proposed in general terms, you will find, particularly application, bring home to your own concern. White.

4. To the point designed; to the utmost; closely; fully.

Crafty enough either to hide his faults, or never to show them, but such they might not pay home.

With his prepared word he charges home.

My unprovided body. Shaks. King Lear.

A loyal aid To him then follow'd: I will pay thy graces.

Home both in word and deed. Shaks. Tempest.

H O M E-

Accuse him home and home. Shak.

Men of age object too much, adventurers of little, and seldom drive business home to the full period; but content themselves with a mediocrity of success. Johnson.

That come up home to the business, and taketh off the objection clearly. Sanderson.

Break through the thick array of life's thorns that begins, and charge home upon him. Addison.

He makes choice of some piece of novelty; and, in order to press this home, he makes less use of reformatting. Browne.

I can only refer the reader to the authors themselves, who speak very home to the point. Atterbury.

6. United to a substantive, it implies force and efficacy.

Observe may prove false.
The home thrust of a friendly sword is sure. Dryden.

I am sorry to give him such a home thrust; for he lays himself so open, and uses so little art to avoid them, that I must either do nothing, or expose my weakness. Stillingfleet.

HOMERO'N. adj. [home and born.]

1. Native; natural.

Though to be thus elemented, are These creatures from homeborn instinct harm. Donne.

2. Domestick; not foreign.

Nunmnes bands
With homebred lyres, or tales from foreign lands.

HOMERED. adj. [home and bred.]

1. Native; natural.

God hath taken care to anticipate every man, to draw him early into his church, before other professions, homebred boys, or vicious customs of the world, should be able to pretend to him. Hammond.

2. Not polished by travel; plain; rude; artless; uncultivated.

Only to me two homebred youths belong. Donne.

3. Domestick; not foreign.

But if of danger, which hereby doth dwell And homered evil, ye desire to learn. I can you tellings dull. Fairy Queen.

This once happy hand, By homebred fury rent, long groaned. Phillips.

HOMERFELT. adj. [home and felt.]

Inward, private.

Yet they in pleasing solemn loll'd the sense, And in sweet madness robb'd it of itself; But such a sacred and homered delight, Soothing certain of waking bliss, I never heard before. Milton.

Happy next him who to these shades retires, Whom nature charms, and whom the muse inspires, Whom humbler joys of homered quiet please, Successive study, exercise, and ease. Pope.

HOMELILY. adj. [from homely.]

Rudely; ineluctably.

HOMELINESS. n. s. [from homely.]

Plainness; rudeness; coarseness.

Homer has opened a great field of raillery to men of more delicacy than greatness of genius, by the homeliness of some of his sentiments. Addison.

HOMELY. adj. [from home.]

Plain; homespun; not elegant; not beautiful; not fine; coarse; rude. It is used both of persons and things.

Each place handsome without curiosity, and homely without lownessomeness. Sidney.

Within this wood, out of a rock did rise A spring of water, mildly tumbling down Where it approached not in any wise The homely shepherd, nor the ruder clown. Speare.

Like rich hangings in an homely house, So was his will in his old feeble body. Shaks.

Be plain, good son, and homely in thy drift; Riddling confession finds but riddling shrift. Shaks.

Home-keeping youth have ever homely wits. Shak.

Our stomachs which make what's homely savoury. Shak.

It is for homely features to keep home; They had their name thence. Milton.

It is observed by some, that there is none so homely but loves a looking-glass. South.

Their homely fare dispatched, the hungry hand Invade their trenchers next. Dryden.

Now Strophon daily entertains His Chloë in the homely strains. Swift.

Homespun, the more they endeavour to adorn themselves, the more they expose the defect they want to hide. Clarendon.

HOMELY. adj. Plainly; coarsely; rudely.

Thus did the god his father, homely and rude, He strides into the hall a horrid guest. Dryden.

HOMELYN. n. s. A kind of fish.

Ainsworth.

HOMEDAE. adj. [home and made.]

Made at home; not manufactured in foreign parts.

A tax laid on your native produce, and home-made commodities, makes them yield less to the first seller. Locke.

HOMER. n. s. A Hebrew measure of about three pints.

An homer of barley seed shall be valued at fifty shillings sterling. Locke.

HOMESPUN. adj. [home and spun.]

1. Spun or wrought at home; not made by regular manufacturers.

Instead of homespun cloths were seen Good pinners, edg'd with cobletten. Swift.

2. Not made in foreign countries.

He appeared in a suit of English broad-cloth, very plain, but rich: every thing he wore was substantial, honest, homespun ware. Addison.

3. Plain; coarse; rude; homely; ineluctable.

They sometimes put on what, when they go a-shore, long since leaved homespun cotton of houseman. Sandy's Tr.

We say, in our homespun English proverb, He killed two birds with one stone. Dryden.

Our homespun authors must forsake the field, And Shakespeare to the soft Scarlett yield. Addis.

HOMESPUN. n. s. A coarse, ineluctable, rude, untaught, rustick man. Not in use.

What hempen homespun have we swaggering here, So near the candle of the fairy queen? Shak.

HOMESTAY. n. s. [hom and rebe.]

HOMESTEAD. s. Sax. The place of the house.

Both home and homestead into seas are borne, And rocks are from their own foundations torn. Dryden.

HOMEMADE. adj. [home and made.]

Towards home; towards the native place; towards the place of residence.

Then Urania homestead did arise, Leaving in path, their well-fed hungry eyes. Sidneys.

My affairs
Do even drag me homeward. Shak.

Since such a love's natural station, is may still My love descend, and journey down the hill, Not panting after growing beauties; so I Shall eke out with them who homeward go, Donne. Look homeward, angel now, and melt with ruth; And, ye dolphins, waft the hapless youth! Milk. Like a long team of snowy swans on high, Which clap their wings, and cleave the liquid sky, Which homeward from their native houses bore, They sing, and Asia's lakes their notes return. Dryden.

What now remains,
But that once more we tempt the warly plains,
By the driving back of the principal spirits, which conserve the consistence of the body, the government is dissolved, and every part returns to its nature or homogeneity. Bacon.

HOMOLOGOUS. adj. [homologue, Fr. homologue.] Having the same manner or proportions.

HOMONYMOUS. adj. [homonyme, Fr. homonyme.] Denoting one and the same thing; equivocal; ambiguous.

As words signify the same thing the are called synonymous, so equivocal words, or those which signify several things, are called homonymous, or ambiguous; and when persons use such ambiguous words, with a design to deceive, is called equivoquation. Watts.

HOMONYMY. n. s. [homonymie, Fr. homonymie.] Equivocation; ambiguity.

HOMOtonous. adj. [homotone, Fr. homotone.] Equable; said of such distempers as keep a constant tenour of rise, state, and declension.

Hone. n. s. [This word M. Casaubon de derives from *axon; Junius from hogs Lane, Welsh; Skinner, who is always rational, from pen, Sax. a stone; heman to stone.] A whetstone for a razor.

A hone and a parer to part away grass. Tusser.

To Hone. v. n. [pongan, Sax.] To pine; to long for any thing.

Honest. adj. [honeste, Fr. honestus, Lat.]

1. Upright; true; sincere.

—What art thou?
—A honest hearted fellow, and as poor as the king.

An honest physician leaves his patient, when he can contribute no further to his health. Temple.

The way to relieve ourselves from those Sophisms is, an honest and diligent enquiry into the real nature and causes of things. Watts.

2. Chaste.

Wives may be merry, and yet honest too. Shak.

3. Just; righteous; giving to every man his due.

Tate will subscribe, but fix no certain day. Tate.

He's honest, and as wit comes in, will pay. Tate.

Honesty. n. s. [honestete, Fr. honestetis, Lat.] Justice; truth; virtue; purity.

Thou shalt not have thy husband's lands.

—Why, then mine honesty shall be my debtor. Shak.

Homo-ness. As that which makes men prefer their duty and their promise before their passions or their interest, and is properly the object of trust, in our language goes rather by the name of honesty, though what we call an honest man, the Romans called a good man; and honesty, in their language, as well as in French, rather signifies a composition of those qualities which generally acquire honour and esteem. Temple.

Honeied. adj. from honey.

1. Covered with honey.

The bee with honesied thigh, That at her flow'ry work doth sing. Milton.

2. Sweet; luscious.

When she speaks, The air, a charter'd liberty, is still; Milton.

And the mate wonder larketh in men's ears, To steal his sweet and honeied sentences. Shak.

Look now for no enchanting voice, nor fear The balm of honey'd words; a rougher tongue. Drayton.

Honey. n. s. [puru, Sax. honey, Dut. hooce, honig, Germ.]

1. A thick, viscous, fluid substance, of a whitish or yellowish colour, sweet to the taste, and a source of healthful affluence; but being very vinosous on fermentation, inflammable, liable to be quenched by a gentle heat, and of a fragrant smell. Of honey, the first and finest kind is virgin honey, not very firm and of a fragrant smell: it is the first produce of the swarms, obtained by draining the combs without pressing. The second is often almost solid, procured by pressure; and the worst is the common yellow honey, extracted by heating the combs, and then pressing them. In the flowers of plants, by certain glands near the basis in the petals, is secreted a sweet juice, which the bee, by means of its proboscis or trunk, sucks up, and discharges again from the stomach through the mouth into the comb. The honey deposited in the comb is destined for the young offspring: but in hard seasons the bees are reduced to the necessity of feeding on it themselves.

Hill.

So work the honey bees, Creatures that by a ruling nature teach The art of order to a peopled kingdom. Shak.

Touching his education and first fostering, some affirm, that he was fed by honey bees. Religious Hist.

In ancient time there was a kind of honey, which, either of its own nature, or by art, would grow as hard as sugar, and was not so luxurious or dear. Shak.

When the patient is rich, there's no fear of physicians about him, as thick as wasps to a honey pot. Urb. Tom.

Honey is the most elaborate production of the vegetable kind, being a most exquisite vegetable sop, science of the hive, and art: nature honey contains an inflammable spirit, before it has felt the force of fermentation; for by distillation it affords nothing that will burn in the fire. Arbuth.

New wine, with honey temp'ring milk we bring; Then living waters from the crystal spring. Pope.

2. Sweetness; lusciousness.

The king hath found Matter against him, that for ever mars The honey of his language. Shak.

A honey tongue, a heart of gold, Is fancy's spring, but sorrow's fall. Shak.

You shall be well desir'd in Cyprus; I've found great love amongst them. Oh, my sweet! I prattle out of fashion, and I dote. Shak.

Why, my bird, I bought him on purpose for thee. Drayton.

To Honey. v. n. [from the noun.] To talk fondly.

Nay, but to live In the rack sweet of an incestuous bed.

Now'd in corruption, honeying and making love Over the many sly, Shak.

Hone-bag. n. s. [honey and bag.]

The honey-bag is the stomach, which bees always fill to satisfy, and to spare, vomiting up the greater part of the honey to be kept against winter. Grew.

Hone-comb. n. s. [honey and comb.]

The cells of wax in which the bees store their honey.
HONK-combed. adj. [honeycomb and. Spoken of a piece of decamnes flawed with little cavities by being cast in. A mariner having discharged his gun, which was honey-combed, and loading it suddenly again, the powder took fire. Watson.

Honey-combed. adj. [honey and comb. Spoken of a piece of decamnes flawed with little cavities by being cast in. A mariner having discharged his gun, which was honey-combed, and loading it suddenly again, the powder took fire. Watson.

Honey-dew. n. s. [honey and dew.] Sweet dew. There is a honey-dew which hangs upon their leaves, and breeds insects. Minstrel. How honey-dew embalm the fragrant morn, And the fair air with luxuriant sweets adorn Earth.

Honey-flower. n. s. [melanthus, Lat.] A plant. It hath a perennial root, and the appearance of a shrub. This plant produces large spikes of chocolate-coloured flowers in May, in each of which is contained a large quantity of black sweet liquor, from whence it is supposed to derive its name. Miltoti.

Honey-gnat. n. s. [Aeolus, Lat. honey and gnat.] An insect. Aphis.

Honey-moon. n. s. [honey and moon.] The first month after marriage when there is nothing but tenderness and pleasure. A man should keep his frenzy for the latter season of marriage, and not begin to dress till the honour be his over.

Honey-suckle. n. s. [caprifolium, Lat.] Woodbine. It hath a climbing stalk, which twists itself about whatsoever tree stands near it: the flowers are tubulous and oblong, consisting of one leaf, which opens towards the top, and is divided into two lips; the uppermost of which is subdivided into two, and the lowermost is cut into many segments: the tube of the flowers is bent, somewhat resembling a huntsman’s horn. They are produced in clusters, and are very sweet. Miller enumerates ten species, of which three grow wild in our hedges.

Honeystoneless. adj. [from honey.] Being without honey. But for your words, they rob the Hybla bees, and leave them honeyless. Shakesp.

Honey-wort. n. s. [cerinthe, Lat.] A plant.

Honorary. adj. [honorary, Lat.] 1. Done in honour; made in honour.

There was probably some distinction made among the Romans between such honours arches erected to emperors, and those that were raised to the account of a victory, which are properly triumphal arches. Addison on Italy. This monument is only honorary, for the ashes of their emperor lie elsewhere. Addison on Italy.

2. Confering honour without gain. The Romans abounded with little honorary rewards, that, without conferring wealth and riches, gave only praise and distinction to the person who received them. Addison.

Honour. n. s. [honor, Fr. honor, Lat.] 1. Dignity; high rank. 2. Reputation; fame. A man is an ill husband of his honour, that entereth into any action, the failing wherein may disgrace him more than the carrying of it through can honour him.

3. The title of a man of rank. Not now used. Return unto thy lord, Bid him not separate the councils: His honour and myself are at the war. And at the other is my good Catesby. Shak.

4. Subject of praise. Thou happy father, Think that the clearest gods, who make them, honour of man’s impossibilities, have preserve’d thee. Shak.

5. Nobleness of mind; scorn of meanness; magnanimity. Now shall I see thy love; what motive may Be stronger dish than that which is than the name of man? —That which upholdeth him, that hee upholdeth, His honour. Oh, thine honour, Lewis, thine honour, scotchman! If by honour is meant any thing distinctive from conscience, there is no more than a regard to the reverence and esteem of the world. Rogers.

6. Reverence; due veneration. To do honour is to treat with reverence. They take thee for their mother, And every day do honour to thy grave. Shakesp.

7. Chastity. Be she honour流程d, I have three daughters, the eldest is eleven; If this prove true, they’ll pay for it. Shakesp.

8. Dignity of men. Two of far nobler shape, erect and tall, Godlike erect, with an honour clack, In naked majesty, seem’d lords of all. Milton.

9. Glory; boast. A late eminent person, the honour of his profession for integrity and learning. Burton’s History.

10. Publish mark of respect. He saw his friends, who when’d beneath the waves, Their fan’d honours claim’d, and ask’d their quiet graves. Shakesp.

11. Privileges of rank or birth. Henry the seventh, truly pitying My father’s loss, like a most royal prince, Restor’d to the dignity of his birth, from ruins, Made my name once more noble. Shakesp.

12. Civilities paid. Then here a slave, or if you will a lord, To do the honours, and to give the word. Pope.

13. Ornament; decoration. The fire then shook the honours of his head, And from his brows damps of oblivion shed. Dryden.

14. Honour, or my honour, is a form of protestation used by the lords in judicial decisions. My hand to thee, my honour on my promise. Shakesp.

To Honour. v. a. [honorer, Fr. honorer, Lat.] 1. To reverence; to regard with veneration. He was called our father, and was continually honoured of all men, as the next person unto the king. Ezech. xxi. 11. The poor man is honoured for his skill, and the rich man is honoured for his riches. Ezech. xx. 30. He that is honoured in poverty, how much more in riches? Ezech. x. 31.

2. To dignify; to raise to greatness.

We nourish ‘gustid our senate The cockle of rebellion, insolence, sedition, Which we ourselves have plow’d for, sow’d and reaped. By mulling with them us, the honour’d number.

3. To glorify. I will hinder Pharaoh’s heart, that he shall follow after them, and I will be honoured upon Pharaoh, and upon all his host, that the Egyptians may know that I am the Lord. Exo. xivi.

Honourable. adj. [honorable, Fr.] 1. Illustrious; noble. Who hath taken this counsel against Tyre, the crowing city, whose merchants are princes, whose traffickers are the honourable of the earth? Isa. xxiii. 8.

2. Great; magnificent; generous. Sir, I’ll tell you, Since I am clad in honour, and by him That I think honourable. Shakesp.

They warlike kings, who for their country fought, And honourable wounds from battle brought. Dryden. Many of those persons, who put this honourable task on me, were more able to perform it themselves. Dryden.

4. Accompanied with tokens of honour. Sith this wretched woman overcome, Of anguish, rather than of crime hath been, Preserve her cause to her eternal doom; And in the mean, vouchsafe her honourable tomb. Spenser.

5. Not to be disgraced. Here’s a Bohemian Tartar tarrying the coming down of thy fat woman,—let her descend, my chambers are honourable. Shakesp.

6. Free from taint; free from reproach. As he was honourable in all his acts, so in this that he took Joppa for an haven. 1 Mac. xiv. 5.

Methinks I could not die anywhere so contented as in the king’s company, his cause being just and his quarre honourable. Shakesp.

7. Honest; without intention of deceit. The earl sent again to know if they would entertain their pardon, in case he should come in person, and assure it; they answered, they did conceive to have been so honourable, that from himself they would most thankfully embrace it. Heyward.

If that thy best of love be honourable, Thy purpose marriage, send me word to morrow. Shakesp.

8. Equitable, Honourably. n. s. [from honourable.] Eminence; magnificence; generosity.

Honourably. adv. [from honourable.] 1. With tokens of honour. 908
The rev'rend abbott,
With all his convent, honourably receiv'd him.
Shakep.

2. Magnanimously; generously.
After some six weeks, which the king did honourably interpose, to give space to his brother's intercession, he was arraigned of high treason, and all his family condemned.
Shakep.

3. Reputably; with exemption from reproach.
'Tis just, ye gods! and what I well deserve!
Why did you make me so more honourably starve! Dryden.

Honourer. N. s. [from honour].
One that honours; one that regards with veneration.
I must not omit Mr. Gay, whose zeal in your concern is worthy a friend and honourer. Pope.

Hood, in composition, is derived from the Sax. āb, in Germ. heit, in Dut. herd.
It denotes quality; character; condition; as, knighthood; childhood; fatherhood. Sometimes it is written after the Dutch, as, maaidoekhand. Sometimes it is taken collectively: as, brotherhood, a confraternity: sisterhood, a company of sisters.

Hood. N. s. [p. Sax. probably from heaped head.]
1. The upper covering of a woman's head.
In velvet, white as snow, the troop was gown'd; Their hoods and sleeves the same. Dryden.

2. Any thing drawn upon the head, and wrapping round it.
He undertook so to muffle up himself in his hood, that none should discern him. Watton.
The lacerma came, from being a military latic, to be a common dress; it had a hood, which could be separated from and joined to it. Arbuthnot.

3. A covering put over the hawk's eyes, when he is not to fly.

4. An ornamental fold that hangs down the back of a graduate, to mark his degree.
To Hood. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To dress in a hood.
The cahier apro'd, and the parson gown'd, The friar hooded, and the monarch crown'd. Pope.

2. To blind, as with a hood.
While grace is saying, I'll hood mine eyes There with my hat, and sigh, and say, Aien. Shak.

3. To cover.
An hollow crystal pyramid he takes, In fimbriant waters dippt above; Of it a broad; scatterer he makes, And hoods the flames that to their quarry strive. Dryden.

Hoodman Blind. N. s.
A play in which the person hooded is to catch another, and tell the name; blindman's buff.
That what devil wasn't that hooz'd you at hoodman blind? Shaksp.

To Hood-wink. v. a. [hood and wink.]
1. To blind with something bound over the eyes.
They willingly hoodwinked themselves from seeing his faults, he often abused the virtue of courage to defend his soul vice of injustice. Sidney.
We will blind and hood wink him, so that he shall suppose he is carried into the leaguer of the adversaries. Shaksp.

Then she who had been hood wink'd from her birth, Deth first herself within death's mirrour see. Davies.
So have I seen, at Christmas sports, one lost, And, hood-wink'd for, a man embrac'd by Ben Jonson.

Satàn is fast to hood-wink those that start.
Decay of Picty.

Prejudice so dexterously hood winks men's minds as to keep them in the dark, with a belief that they are more in the light. Locke.

Must I wed Rosaline?
Fantastick cruelty of hood wink'd chance! Ren. On high, where to no waste winds or clouds resort, The hood wink'd goddess keeps her partial court. Guth.

2. To cover; to hide.
Be patient; for the prize, I'll bring thee to. Shaks.

3. To deceive; to impose upon.
She delighted in infancy, which often she used to her husband's shame, filling all men's ears, but not with reproach; while he, hood wink'd with kindness, least of all men knew who struck him. Sidney.

HOOF. n. s. [poet. Sax. hoof, Dut.]
The hard horny substance on the feet of graminivorous animals. With the hoofs or his horses shall he tread down all th'as. Eekh. xxvi. 11.
The bull and ram know the use of their horns as well as the horse of his hoofs. More.

Hoofed adj. [from hoof.]
Furnished with hoofs.
Among quadrupeds, the roe-deer is the swiftest; of all the hoofs, the horse is the most beautiful; es all the claws are the longest. Hoof-bound adj. [hoof and bound.]
A horse is said to be hoof-bound when he has a pain in the fore-feet, occasioned by the dryness and contraction or narrowness of the horn of the quarters, which straitens the quarters of the heels, and oftentimes makes the horse lame. A hoof-bound horse has a narrow heel, the sides of which come too near one another, in such a manner, as the flesh is kept too tight, and has not its natural extent.

HOOK. n. s. [hoce, Sax. hoock, Dut.]
1. Any thing bent so as to catch hold: as, a shepherd's hook and pot hooks.
This falling not, for that they had not far enough underrated it, they assayed with great hooks and strong ropes to pull it down. Knolles.

2. The curved wire on which the bait is hung for fishes, and with which the fish is pierced.
Like unto golden hooks, That from the foolish fish they do take骗子. My bent hook shall pierce Their slimy jaws. Shaksp.

3. A snare; a trap.
A shop of all the qualities that man Loves woman for, besides that hook of wiving, Fairness, which striketh the eye. Shaksp.

4. An iron to sew the thread in the caldron.
About the caldron many cooks accord'd, With hooks and ladles, as need did require; The while the viands in the vessel boil'd. F. Queen.

5. A sickle to reap corn.
Peace are commonly reaped with a hook at the end of a long stick. Mortimer.

6. Any instrument to cut or lop with.
Not that I'd lop the beauties from his hook, My dear Desire King's great hook. Pope.

7. The part of the hinge fixed to the post: whence the proverb, off the hooks, for in disorder.
Like him that wears it, quite o'er the hooks. Clevel. She was horribly bold, meddling and expensive, easily put off the hooks, and monstrous hard to be pleased again. D'Érange.

While Sheridan is off the hooks, And friend Delany at his books. Swift.

8. Hook. [In husbandry.] A field sown two years running. Ainsworth.

9. Hook or crook. One way or other; by any expedient: by any means direct or oblique. Ludicrous.

Which he by hook or crook had gather'd, And for his own inventions father'd. Hudibras.
He would bring him by hook or crook into his company. Dryden.

To Hook. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To catch with a hook.
The huge jack he caught was served up for the first dish: upon our sitting down to it, he gave us a large account how he had hooked it, played with it, foiled it, and at length drew it out upon the bank.

2. To intrap; to insnare.

3. To draw with a hook.
But she can hook to me. Shaksp. Winter's Tale.

4. To fasten as with an hook.

5. To draw by force or artifice.

There are many branches of the natural way no reducible to the two tables, unless hooked in by tedious consequences. Norris.

Hook'd. adj. [from hook.]
Bent; curvated.
Crooks signifies eagle or vulture; from whence the epithet gruyers, for an hooked or aquiline nose. Brown.

Now thou threaten'st, with unjust decree,
To seize the prize which I so dearly bought:
To steep it in a furnace to thine; By this my turn. Th' hooked rabious hands usurp the best. Dryden.

Catechillians have claws and feet; the claws are hooked, to take the better hold in climbing from twig to twig, and hanging on the backsides of leaves. Greco.

Hook'dedness. N. s. [from hooked.]
State of being bent like a hook.

Hook'ded adj. [hook and nose.]
Having the aquiline nose rise in the middle. Thou mayst say with the Philosopher, Rome there, Caesar, I came, saw, and overcame. Shaks. Hen. IV.

HOOP. n. s. [hoop, Dut.]
1. Any thing circular by which something else is bound, particularly casks or barrels.
Thou shalt prove a shelter to thy friends, A hoop of gold to bind thy brother in, That the united vessel of their blood Shall never leak. Shaks. Hen. IV.

If I knew What hoop would hold us staunch, from edge to edge O' th' world, I would pursue it. Shaks.

A quarrel, ho, already! what is the matter?—About a hoop of gold, a palty ring. Shaks.

To view so low a tow'r to keep one from the fall. What hoop of iron could my spleen contain? Dryd. And learned Athens to our art must stoop. Cokes. He who is above them must be above the hoop. Pope.

The whalebone with which women extend their petticoats: a farthingale. At coming in you saw her stoop: The entry brush'd against her hoop. Swift.

All that hoops are good for is to clean dirty shoes, and to keep fellows at a distance. Clarissa.

Any thing circular.

I have seen at Rome an antique statue of Time, with wheels or hoop of the great hoop. Addi.

To Hoop. r. a. [from the noun.]
1. To bind or enclose with hoops.
The three hoop'd pot shall have ten hoops, and I will make it sterling to drink small beer. Shaks.

The hoop for his majesty's shipping were hopp'd as wine-cask, or hooped with iron. Raleigh.

2. To encircle; to clasp; to surround.
If ever henceforth thou Shalt hoop his branches more with thy embrances, I will devise a death. Shaks. Winter's Tale.

I keep the firmament, and make This my embrace the zodiac. Clevel.

Paraly, who single guard, which hoops in the eye, and hides the greater part of it, might occasion his mistake. Greco.

To Hoop. n. [from wopgan or wopyan, Goth. or hoopfer, Fr. derived from HOP

Gothick. This word is generally written ehoop, which is more proper if we deduce it from the Gothick; and hop if we derive it from the French. To shout; to make an outcry by way of call or pursuit.

To Hoop. v. a.

1. To drive with a shout.
   [Dastard nobles
Suffer'd me, the voice of slaves, to be Hoop'd out of Rome.
   Shaksp. Coriolanus.
2. To call by a shout.
   Hooper. n. s. [from hoop to inclose with hoops.]
   A cooper; one that hoops tubs.
   Hooping-cough. n. s. [or whooping-cough, from hoop to shout.]
   A convulsive cough, so called from its noise; the chincough.

To Hoop. v. n. [hurt, Welsh; huur, Fr.]

1. To shout in contempt.
   A number of country folk happened to pass there, who hollowed and hooted after me as I was the arrantest coward.
   Sibbald.
   Matrons and girls shall howl at thee no more.

2. To cry as an owl.
   Some keep back
   The clamorous owl, that nightly hoots, and wanders about the tombs.
   Spenser.
   To hoop. v. a.
   To drive with noise and shouts.

We lov'd him; but, like beasts,
   Our coward nobles gave way to your clusters,
   Who did howl him out o' th' city.
   Shaksp.
   The howl of Rome, whom howls and girls will howl!
   What was I set up for that woody god?
   That keeps our gardens, could not fright the crows.
   Or the owlet perching on my head.
   J. L. Jones.
   Pardigle and his clan may hoote for me and witness, if I fall in any particular of moment.
   Swift.

Hoop. n. s. [hooo, Fr. from the verb.]
   Clamour; shout; noise.
   Its assertion would be entertained with the howl of the rabble.
   Gannett's Scepsis.

To Hoop. v. n. [Joppan, Sax. hoopen, Dut.]

1. To jump; to skip lightly.
   I would have thee gone,
   And yet too Hon; and than a wanton's bird,
   That sets it hop a little from her hand,
   And with a silk thread plucks it back again.
   Shak.
   Go, hop me over every kennel
   For you shall hop without my custom, sir.
   Shaksp.
   Be kind and courteous to this gentleman,
   Hop in his walks, and gambol in his eyes.
   Shaksp.
   The painted birds, companions of the Spring.
   Hopping from spray to spray were heard.
   Dryden.
   Your Ben and Fletcher, in their first young flight.
   Did no Volpone, nor no Arbaces write;
   But hop'd about, and short excursions made
   From bough to bough, as if they were afraid.
   Dryden.
   Why don't we vindicate ourselves by trial or deal, and hop over heated ploughshares blindfold?
   Collier.
   I am highly delighted to see the joy or the thrust hopping about my walks.
   Spectator.

2. To leap on one leg.
   Men with heads like dogs, and others with one hinge foot above, whereupon they did hop from place to place.

3. To walk lamely, or with one leg less nimble or strong than the other; to limp; to halt.
   The limping south observ'd the sudden fast,
   And hopping here and there, himself a jest.
   Put in his word.
   Dryden's Hamer.

4. To move; to play.

HOPE

Softly feel
Her fever pulse, to prove if any drop
Of living blood yet in her veins did hop. E. Queen.

HOPE. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. A jump; a light leap.
2. A jump on one leg.
   When my way with home, I can go above a hundred yards at a hop, step, and jump.
   Addison.
3. A place where manner people dance.
   Ainsworth.

HOPE. n. s. [Hop, Dut. Iupulus, Lat.]
   A plant.
   It hath a creeping root; the leaves are rough, angular, and conjetuated; the stalks clasp and turn about whatever is near them; the flowers are male and female on different plants: the male flower consists of a calyx divided into five parts, which surrounds the stamens, but has no petals to the flower: the female plants have their flowers collected into stout florets, which grow in bunches; from each leafy scale is produced an horned ovary, which becomes a single roundish seed.
   Miller.
   If hop yard or orchard ye mind for to have,
   For hop poles and crotches in hopping to be tee. Tae.
   The planting of hop yards is profitable for the planters, and consequently for the kingdom, Bacon.
   Beer hath first must induced in the hop, and is afterwards boiled with the hop.
   Bacon.
   Next to thistles are hop strings, cut after the flowers are gathered.
   Have the poles without forks, otherwise it will be troublesome to part the hop vines and the poles.
   Mortimer.
   When you water hops, on the top of every hill out dissolved dung, which will enrich your hop hills.
   Mortimer.
   In Kent they plant their hop gardens with willow trees and cherry-trees between.
   Mortimer.
   The price of hocking of hop ground is forty shillings an acre.
   Mortimer.
   Hop poles, the largest sort, should be about twenty foot long, and about nine inches in compass.
   Mortimer.

To HOPE. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To impregmate with hops.
   Brew in October, and hop it for long keeping.
   Mortimer.
   To increase the mild, diminished by flesh meat,
   Take malt-drink not much hoppe drink.

HOPE. n. s. [Josep, Sax. hope, Dut.]

1. Expectation of some good; an expectation indugled with pleasure.
   Hope is that pleasure in the mind which every one finds in himself, upon the thought of a profitable future enjoyment of a thing, which is apt to delight him.
   Job xiv. 7.
   When in heav'n she shall the same essence see,
   This is her sovereignty good, and perfect bliss;
   Her longing, wishes, hopes, all finish'd be;
   Her joys are full, when she is met in this.
   Dryden.
   Sweet hope! kind cheat! fair fallacy! by thee
   We are not where or what we be;
   But what and where we were by, then was that anchor
   Absent presence, and our future now's.
   Faith is opposed to infidelity, and hope to despair.
   Taylor.
   He sought them both, but wish'd his hop might find
   Eve separate: he wish'd, but not with hope
   Of what may be, or chance his wish when to his wish Beyond his hope, Eve separate he spire.
   Milton.
   The Trojan dames
   To Palus' face in long procession go
   In hope to reconcile their heavily fee.
   Dryden.
   Why not comfort myself with the hope of what
   May be, as torment myself with the fear out?
   Le Grangé.
   To encourage our hopes, it gives us the highest assurance of most happy happiness, in case of obedience.
   Dryden.
   The deceased really lived like one that had his hope in another life; a life which he hath now entered upon, having exchanged hope for sight, desire for enjoyment.
   Atterbury.
   Young men look rather to the past age than the present, and therefore the future may have some hopes of them.
   Swift.

2. Confidence in a future event, or in the future conduct of any person.
   It is good, being put to death by men, to look for hope from God, to be raised up agin by him.
   2 Mac. viii. 14.

3. That which gives hope; that on which the hopes are fixed, as an agent by which something desired may be effected.
   I might see from far some forty trumcheeneers draw to her succour, which were the hope of the Strand, where she was quarter'd. Shak. Hen. VIII.

4. The object of hope.
   Hope is more than a mother's pain,
   And yet brought forth less than a mother's hope;
   To wit, an indigested deform'd shap.
   Shaksp.
   She was his care, his hope, and his delight.
   Most in his thought; and ever in his sight.
   Dryden.

HOPE. n. s. Any sloping plain between the ridges of mountains.

To HOPE. v. n. [from the noun.]

1. To live in expectation of some good.
   Hope for good success, according to the efficacy of the causes and the instrument; and let the handmaid bank for a good harvest.
   Taylor.
   My muse, by storms long tost,
   Is thrown upon thy hospitable coast;
   And finds more success now than she hop'd for thy happiness.
   Dryden.
   Who knows what adverse fortune may befal!
   Arm well your mind, hope little, and fear all.
   Dryden.

2. To place confidence in another thing.
   He shall strengthen your heart, ye that hope in the Lord.
   Psalms xxxi. 24.

To HOPE. v. a. To expect with desire.

The sun shines hot; and if we use delay,
   Cold-hitting Winter mars our hop'd for hay.
   Shaksp.

HOPEFULL. adj. [hope and full.]

1. Full of qualities which produce hope; promising; likely to obtain success; likely to come to maturity; likely to gratify desire, or answer expectation.
   He will advance thee
   I know his noble nature, not to let
   Thy hopeful service perish.
   Shaksp.
   You serve a great and gracious master, and there is a most hopeful young prince whom you must not desert.
   Bacon.
   What to the old can greater pleasure be,
   Than hopeful and ingenious youth to see?
   Deshoull.
   They take up a book in their declining years, and grow very hopeful scholars by that time they are threescore.
   Addison.

2. Full of hope; full of expectation of success. This sense is now almost confined to Scotland, though it is analogical, and found in Scotch writers.
   Men of their own natural inclination hopeful and strongly concrete, whatsoever they took in hand.

   I was hopeful the success of your first attempts would encourage you to make trial also of more nice and difficult experiments.
   Boyle.

   My mother was of masses, and honest hearts,
   Beresow'd of parents in his infant years,
   Still must the wrong'd Telemanus sustain,
   If hopeful of your aid, he hopes in vain.
   Pope.

HOPEFULLY. adv. [from hopeful.]

1. In such manner as to raise hope; in a promising way.
   He left all his female kindred either matched with peers of the realm actually, or hopefully with earls' sons and heirs.

2. In such manner as to raise hope; in a promising way.
   He left all his female kindred either matched with peers of the realm actually, or hopefully with earls' sons and heirs.

910
HOR

They were ready to renew the war, and to prosecute it hopefully, to the reduction or suppression of the influence of the Greeks.

Glenting.

HOPEFULNESS. n.s. [from hopeful.] Promise of good; likelihood to succeed.

Set down beforehand certain signatures of hopefulness, or characters, whereby it may be desired what the child will prove in probability.

Hopeless. adj. [from hope.]

1. Without hope; without pleasing expectation; despairing.

Are they indifferent, being used as signs of immoderate and hopeless lamentation for the dead?

Hope for the hopeful.

Alas! I am a woman, friendless, hopeless! Shak.

He takes with greedy hope to find his wish, and best advantage, as usual; Hopeless to circumvent us join'd, where each To other speedy aid might lend at need. Milton.

The fall is not a change of our state, and hopeless to prevail by open force, Seek's high advantage. Dryden's State of Innocence.

Hopeless without means, and confounded to lie in durance, doom'd a lingering death to die. Dryden.

2. Giving no hope; promising nothing pleasing.

The hopeless word of never to return, Breathe I against thee upon pain of life. Shak.

The hor. n.s. [from hope.]

One that has pleasing expectations.

I except all hopes, who turn the scale, because the strong expectation of a good certain salary will outweigh the loss by bad rents. Swift.

Hopingly. adj. [from hoping.] With hope; with expectation of good.

One sign of despair is the peremptory contempt of the condition which is the ground of hope; the going on not only in terrours and amazement of conscience, but also bodily, hopelessly, and confoundedly in wilful habits of sin. Hammond.

Hoppe. n.s. [from hop.] He who hops or jumps on one leg. Ainsworth.

Hoppers. n.s. [commonly called Scotch hoppers.] A kind of play in which the actors hop on one leg.

Hoper. n.s. [so called because it is always hopping, or in agitation. It is called in French, for the same reason, tremie or tremen.]

1. The box or open frame of wood into which the corn is put to be ground.

The salt of the lake Asphalites shooteth into perfect cubes. Sometimes they are pyramidal and plain, like the hopper of a mill. Grew.

Griminivorous birds have the mechanism of a mill; their maw is a magnum, which holds and softens the grain, letting it drop by degrees into the stomatch. Arbuthnot on Aliments.

Just at the hopper where it stands.

In my whole life I never saw grind stone, And mark the clack how justly it will sound. Betterton.

HOR. adj. [from horo, Lat.] Relating to the hour.

However red't and plain, The watch would still a watch remain; But if the hour orbit ceases, The whole stars still, or breaks to pieces. Prior.

HORARY. adj. [horaire, Fr. horarius, Lat.]

1. Relating to an hour.

I'll draw a figure that shall tell you What you perhaps forgot bettie you,

By way of horary inspection, Which account some our worst erection. Hudson.

In his Irish question, as what hour of the night to set a fox-trap, he has discussed, under the character of Reynard, the manner of surprising all such animal. Tatler.

2. Continuing for an hour.

When, from a basket of Summer-fruits, God by Amos foretold the destruction of his people, thereby was declared the prolixity of their devotion, and that their tranquility was of no longer duration than those horn or soon deceiving fruits Summer. Dryd. Poeg. Err.

HORNY. n.s. A clan; a migratory crew of people. It is applied only to the Tartars.

Of lost mankind, in polish'd slavery sunk, Drove martial horde on horde with dreadful sweep, And vanquish'd the world another form. Thomson.

The line that terminates the view. The horizon is distinguished into sensible and real: the sensible horizon is the circular line which limits the view; the real is that which would bound it, if it could take it in the hemisphere. It is falsely pronounced by Shakespeare horizon.

When the morning sun shall raise his car Above the borders of the dim, We'll forward towards Warwick and his mates. Shak.

She began to cast with herself from what coast this blazing star should first appear, and at what time it must be upon the horizon of Ireland. Bacon.

In his East the glorious lamp was seen, Regent of day; and all the horizon round Invested with bright rays. Milton.

The morning lark, the messenger of day, Salutes to her song the morning gray; And soon the sun arose with beams so bright, That all the horizon laugh'd to see the joyous sight. Dryden.

When the sea is worked up in a tempest, so that the horizon on every side is nothing but foaming billows and floating mountains, it is impossible to describe the agreeable horror that rises from such a prospect. Addison.

HORizontAL. adj. [horizontal, Fr. from horizon.]

1. Near the horizon.

As when the sun, new risen, Looks through the horizontal misty air, Shorn of his beams by the veil of the moon, In dim eclipse, disastrous twilight sheds On half the heavens. Milton

2. Parallel to the horizon; on a level.

An eddy cleft, and golden figures placed horizontal about it, was brought out of Egypt by Augustus. Brown.

The problem is reduced to this: What perpendicular height is necessary to place several ranges of rollers in a plane inclined to a horizontal line in a given angle. D'Aubuisson, on China.

HORizontally. adv. [from horizontal.]

In a direction parallel to the horizon.

As it will not sink into the bottom, so will it neither float above, like lighter bodies; but, being near in weight, lie superficially, or almost horizontal, till it come to the bottom. Brown.

The ambient ether is too liquid and empty to impel them horizontally with certainty. Bentley.

HORN. n.s. [horna, Goth. hopm, Sax. horn, Dut.]

1. The hard bodies which grow on the heads of some graminivorous quadrupeds, and serve them for weapons.

No beast that hath horns hath upper teeth. Bacon.

Zetus rises through the ground.

Bending the bull's tough neck with pain, That tosses back his horns. Addison.

All that process is no more surprising than the eruption of horns in some brutes, or of teeth and beard in men at certain periods of age. Bentley.

2. An instrument of wind-musick made of horn.

The squire 'gan neighbour to approach, And wind his horn under the castle-wall, That with the note it shou'd as it would fall. Fair Queen.

There's most come from my master, with his horn full of good news. Shak.

The goddess to her crooked horned Adds all her breath: the rocks and woods around, And mountains tremble at th' infernal sound. Dryden.

Fair Ascanius, and his youthful train, With horns and bounds a hunting match ordained. Dryden.

3. The extremity of the waining or waning moon, as mentioned by poets.

She bless'd the bed, such fruitfulness convey'd, That her horns might soon unlock her; And was instruct'd either horn. To crown their bliss, a lovely boy was horn. Dryd.

The moon Wears a wan circle round her blunted horns. Tho'mas.

4. The feelers of a snail. Whence the proverb, To pull in the horns, to repress one's ardour.

Lore's feeling is more soft and sensible, Than are the tender horns of cuckoo snails. Shak.

Hearing of our Marcus's banishment, Thrust forth his horns again into the world, Which were insuch'd when Marcus stood for Rome, And durst not once peep out. Shak.

5. A drinking cup made of horn.

If I have horn to make one mad, Let the prov'g with me, I'll be horn mad. Shak.

Merchants, vent'ring through the main, Sue to their rocks, and learn to begin. Hoo'ton.

7. Horn mad. Perhaps mad as a cuckold.

I am glad he went not in himself: if he had, he would have been horn mad. Shak.

Horn-beak. n.s. A kind of fish.

Hornfish.]

Ainsworth.

Hornbeam. n.s. [horn and beam, Dut. for tree, from the hardness of the timber.] It hath leaves like the elm or beech tree. Addison.

The timber is very tough and inflexible, and of excellent uses. Miller.

No thing has been considered of this kind out of the ordinary road of the hornbook and primer. Locke.

To master John the English maid A hornbook gives of gingerbread; And that the child may learn the better, As he can name, he eats the letter. Prior.

Horned. adj. [from horn.] Furnished with horns.

At when two rams, strid'd with ambition proud, Fight for the rule of the rich fleeced buck. Their horned fronts so fierce on either side. Do meet, that, with the terror of the shock, Astonish'd both stand senseless as a block. F. Queen.

Neither all the horned lost resorts, To graze the raker mead. Dryden.

Thou king of horned floods, whose plentiful urn Sows the fruitness to the fruitful corn. Dryden.

Hornet. n.s. [jynette, Sax. from its horns.] A very large strong stinging fly, which makes its nest in hollow trees. Silence, in times of sur'rifting, is the best. This dangerous to disturb a hornet's nest. Dryden.

911
Hor are all kinds of horned animal.

Horncorn. n. s. [horned corn.] A country dance, danced commonly to a horn.

Hornpipe. n. s. [horn and pipe.] A country dance, danced commonly to a horn.

Hornist. adj. from horn.] 1. Made of horn. 2. Resembling horn.

Horography. n. s. [horographie, Fr. &c.] An account of the hours.

Horology. n. s. [horologium, Lat.] Any instrument that tells the time: as a clock; an hour-glass.

Horoscopes. n. s. [horoscope, French. &c.] The configuration of the planets at the hour of birth.

Hornet. The case of the bees.

Horse. n. s. [horse, Lat. &c.] A horse is a four-footed mammal of the family Equidae, belonging to the order Perissodactyla.

Horseflesh. n. s. [horse-flesh.] The flesh of a horse.

Horseman. n. s. [horseman.] A person who rides a horse.

Horsepower. n. s. [horse-power.] A unit of power equal to 550 foot-pounds per second.

Horsewhip. n. s. [horse-whip.] A long, flexible stick used for whipping horses.

Horrific. adj. [horrible, Fr. horrible, Lat.] Dreadful; hideous; terrible; shocking.

Horrifies. n. s. from horrible.] Dreadfulness; hideousness; terrible; fearfulness.

Horridly. adv. from horrible.] 1. Dreadfully; hideously. 2. To a dreadful degree.

Horridness. n. s. from horrible.] Dreadfulness; hideousness; terribleness; fearfulness.

Horridly. adj. from horrible.] Dreadful; hideous. What hideous noise was that? Horridly. Milton.

2. Shocking; offensive; unpleasing: in women's cast. Already your tears are scarce, Already the horrid things they say. Pope.

3. Rough; rugged. Horrid with firm, and intricate with thorn, Few paths of human feet or tracks of beasts were worn. Dryden.

Horridness. n. s. from horrible.] Hideousness; enormity. A bloody designer suborns his instrument to take away such a man's life, and the confessor presents the horridness of the fact, and brings him to repentance. Hammond.

Horribilis. adj. [horribilis, Lat.] Caus- ing horrid. His jaws horribilis, ar'd with three-fold fets. Here dwells the dieful shriek, Tho'mas. Sounding dreadfully. Diet. Horrour. n. s. [horror, Lat. horror, Fr.] 1. Terrou mixed with detestation; a passion compounded of fear and hate, both strong.

Horror. n. s. [horror, Lat. &c.] 1. Over them sat horror, with grim hue, Did always so, with his iron wings; And after him owls and night raven flew, The hateful messengers of heavy things. Fairy Q. Doubtless all souls have a surviving thought, Therefore of death we think with quiet mind; But if we think of being turn'd to nothing, A trembling horror doth our thoughts enkindle. Davies. Me danny horror child'd.

Horror. n. s. [horror, Lat. &c.] 1. Dreadful thoughts. I have sought full with horror; Direness, familiar to my slumberous thoughts, Cannot once start me. Shakesp. Macbeth.

2. Dreadful thoughts. They tell us of the boundless ocean, with few islands, and a bottomless渊 of darkness, where are the dead, and the earth is a prison, and the inhabitants a race of demons. Quincy.
HOR

great captain, Who's this? Who answered, It is
St. Elmo, who never appears but after the storm.

2. To carry one on the back.
3. To ride any thing.

Stalls, bulk, windows
Are smother'd, leads are fill'd, and ridges hang'd.
With various gait's, all of industry,
In earnestness to see him.

4. To cover a mare.
If you let him out to horse more mares than your own, you are in for a pickpocket, vulgarly

HORSEBACK, n. s. [horse and back.]
Riding posture; the state of being on a horse.

I've seen the French,
And they call our horseback. Shakesp.
I saw them salute on horseback,
Beheld them when they lighted. Shakesp.
Alexander fought but one remarkable battle wherein there were any elephants, and that was with Porus, king of India; in which notwithstanding he was on horseback.

When manœuvred Monor, that two-handed sword,
Astride on horseback hunts the Tuscan hoar.

If your ramble was on horseback, I am glad of it, on account of your health. Swift to Gay.

HORSEBEAN, n. s. [horse and bean.]
A small bean usually given to horses.

Only the small horsebean is propagated by the

HORSEBLOCK, n. s. [horse and block.]
A block on which they climb to a horse.

HORSEBOAT, n. s. [horse and boat.]
A boat used in ferrying horses.

HORSEBOY, n. s. [horse and boy.]
A boy employed in dressing horses; a stable-boy.

Some horseboys, being awake, discovered them by the fire, and the knight's Letter.

HORSEBREAKER, n. s. [horse and break.]
One whose employment is to tame horses to the saddle.

Under Sagittaries are born chariot-racers, horse-breakers, and tasters of wild beasts. Creoch.

HORSECHESTNUT, n. s. [horse and chestnut. Esculus.]
A tree.

It has digitated or fingered leaves; the flowers, which consist of five leaves, are of an anomalous figure, opening with two lips; there are male and female upon the same spike; the female flowers are succeeded by nuts, which grow in green prickly hawks. Their whole year's shoot is commonly performed in three weeks time, after which it does not more than increase in bulk, and become more firm; and all the latter part of the Summer is occupied in forming and strengthening the buds for the next year's shoots.

The horsechestnut grows into a goodly standard.

HORSECOURSER, n. s. [horse and course.]
Junius derives it from horse and case, an old Scotch word, which signifies to change; and it should therefore, he thinks, be writ horsecorser. The word now used in Scotland is horsecouver, to denote a jockey, seller, or rather changer of horses. It may well be derived from course, as he that sells horses may be supposed to course or exercise them.

1. One that runs horses, or keeps horses for the race.

2. A dealer in horses.

A servant to a horsecorser was thrown off his

HORSECRAB, n. s. A kind of fish.

HORSECRAB. n. s. [horse and crab.]

Ainsworth.

HORSECUCCUMBER. n. s. [horse and cucumber.]
A plant.

The horsecucumber is the large green, cucumber, and the best for the table, green out of the garden.

HORSEDUNG. n. s. [horse and dung.]
The excrements of horses.

Put it into an ox's horn, and, covered close, let it be in hot horse dunging. Peacorn on Drachm.

HORSEMART, n. s. A large bee.

HORSEMATCH. n. s. A bird.

HORSEMEAT. n. s. [horse and meat.]

Prover.

Though green peas and beans be eaten sooner, yet the dried ones that are used for horsemeat are ripe last.

HORSEMINT. n. s. A large coarsen mint.

HORSEMOUSE. n. s. A large muscle.

The great horsemouse, with the fine shell, that breedeth in ponds, do not only gape and shut as the oysters do, but remove from one place to another. Bogan.

HORSEPLAY. n. s. [horse and play.]

Coarse, rough, rugged play.

He is too much given to horseplay in his raillery, and comes to battle like a dictator from the plough.

Brogan.

HORSEPOND. n. s. [horse and pond.]
A pond for horses.

HORSEX. n. s. [horse and race.]
A match of horses in running.

In horsesexes men are curious that there be not the least weight upon the one horse more than upon the other. Bogan.

Trajan, in the fifth year of his tribunateship, terminated the people with a horsesex. Additum.

HORSEXADISH, n. s. [horse and acidish.]
A root acidic and biting: a species of scurrygrass.

Horsexadish is increased by sprouts spreading from the old roots left in the ground, that are cut and broken off.

Stoanichs are the cressy acids, as horsexadish and scurry-grass, infused in wine.

Finger on the Hum.

HORSHOE, n. s. [horse and shoe.]

1. A plate of iron nailed to the feet of horses.

I was thrown into the Thames, and could glowing hot in that surge, like a horseshoe. Shakesp.

2. An herb.

HORSTEALER, n. s. [horse and steal.]
A thief who takes away horses.

He is not a pickpocket, nor horsestealer; but for his vanity in love. I do think him as conscious a covered goblet, or a worm-eaten nut.

Morer.

HORSETAIL, n. s. A plant.

HORSETONGUE, n. s. An herb.

HORSEWAY, n. s. [horse and way.]
A broad way by which horses may travel.

Know'st thou the way to Dover?
Both side and gate, horseway and footpath.
Shakesp. King Lear.

HORTATION, n. s. [hortatio, Lat.]
The act of exhorting; a horatary precept; advice or encouragement to something.

HORATORY, n. s. [from hortor, Lat.]
A precept by which one incites or animates.

General's commonly in their hortation put men in mind of their wives and children.

Hortatory, adj. [from hortor, Lat.]
Encouraging; animating; advising to anything;
used of precepts, not of persons; a horatary speech;
not a hortatory speaker.

HORTICULTURE, n. s [hortus and cultura, Lat.]
The art of cultivating gardens.

Hortulan, adj. [hortulanus, Lat.]
Belonging to a garden.

6 A
HOSPITAL. n. s. [hospitalis, Lat.] The practice of entertaining strangers.

Hospitality, n. s. [hospitalitās, Fr.] The practice of entertaining strangers.

Hospitality. n. s. [hospitality, Fr.] The practice of entertaining strangers.

HOSPITAL. n. s. [hospitalitās, Fr.] The practice of entertaining strangers.

HOSPITABLE. adj. [hospitalitēs, Lat.] Giving entertainment to strangers; kind to strangers.

HOSPITALITY. n. s. [hospitality, Fr.] The practice of entertaining strangers.

HOSPITAL. n. s. [hospital, Fr. hospitālis, Lat.] 1. A place built for the reception of the sick, or support of the poor. Those who were so careful to bestow them in a college when they were young, would be so good as to provide for them in some hospital when they are old. Phil. I am about to build an hospital, which I will endow handsomely for twelve old bas-bihmen. Addison.

2. A place for shelter or entertainment. Obsolete.

One residing in an hospital in order to receive the poor or stranger. Used perhaps peculiarly of the knights of Malta.

The first they reckon such as were granted to the hospitalers in titulam beneficium. Augis's Parcer.

To HOSPITABLE, n. s. [hospital, Lat.] To reside under the roof of another.

That she always, among an empty shell, and this hospitasonic with the living animal in the same shell.

Greul's Muscat.

HOSPITAL, n. s. [hostel, Fr. hospes, hospitālis, Lat.] 1. One who gives entertainment to another.

Homer never entertained either guests or hosts with long speeches, till the mouth of hunger be stuffed with food, according to the advice of Ps.-Shelley.

On your good host. Shel. King Lear.

2. The landlord of an inn.

Time's fine, fashionable host.

That slightly shakes his parting host by the hand; but with the arms out-stretched, as he would fly, Grasps in the corner. Shel. Troilus and Cressida.

3. From the French. An army; numbers assembled for war.

Let every soldier know him down a bow.

And heart before him; thereby shall we shadow

Then through the fiery pillar, out the cloud,

God looking forth, will trouble all his host.

And charge your chariots wheels.

After that, and become armed with spear and shield,

An host so great as cover'd all the field. Dryden.

4. Any great number.

Give to a gracious message

A host of tongues, but let till tidings tell

Themselves, when they be felt. Shel.

[Hostis, Lat. hoste, Fr.] The sacrifice of the mass in the Roman church; the consecrated waf'r.

To Host, n. s. [from the noun.]

1. To take up entertainment; to live, as at an inn.

Go, burn it to the centurion, where we host.

And stay there, Demetrius, till I come to thee. Shak.

2. To encounter in battle.

Strange to us it seem'd

At first, that angel show'd with angel war,

And in fierce hostilities meet.

Milton.

New authors of dissension spring from him,

Two branches, that in hostilities contended.

Phil.

3. To review a body of men; to muster.

Obsolelce.

Lords have had the leading of their own followers to the general hostiness. Spencer on Ireland.

HOSPITAL. n. s. [hostel, Fr. hospitālis, Lat.] One given in pledge for security of performance of conditions.

Your hostages I have, so have you mine;

And we shall talk before we fight.

Shak.

And if he stand on hostage for his safety,

Did him demand what pledge will please him best.

Shak.

He that hath wife and children, hath given hostages to fortune; for they are impatient to great enterprises, either of virtue or mischief. Dryden.

Those who marry give hostages to the publick, that they will not attempt the ruin or disturb the peace of it. Dryden.

[Hostes, n. s. [hostes, Fr. hoste, from host.] 1. A female host; a woman that gives entertainment.

Fair and noble hostes,

We are your guest to-night. Shak. Macbeth.

HOT. adj. [par, Sax. lat, Scott.] 1. Having the power to excite the sense of heat; contrary to cold; fiery.

What is thy name?—Thou'lt be afraid to hear it.

Shy, though the name call at thy self a better name than any is in hell. Shak. Macbeth.

The great breezes which the motion of the air in great circles, such as are under the girdle of the world, produce, do refrigerate; and therefore, in those parts, moon is nothing so hot as about nine in the forenoon. Bacon.

Hot and cold were in one body fast;

And soft with hard, and light with heavy mixt. Dryden.

Black substances do soonest of all others become hot in the sun's light, and burn; which effect may proceed partly from the multitude of refraction in a little narrow, partly from the concomitant motion of so very small corpuscles. Newton.

2. Lustful; lewd.

What hatter hours,

Unregard'd in vulgar favor, you have

Lavishly pick'd out. Shak.

Now the hot blooded gods assist me! remember,

Jove thus want a victor, and raise a champion.

Shak.

3. Violent; furious; dangerous.

That of Carthagena, where the Spaniards had warning of our coming, was one of the hottest services, and most dangerous assaults that hath been known. Shak.

He resolved to storm; but his soldiers declined that hot service, and fled it with artillery. Clarendon.

But the court the courtiers found, and what we found

'Th' assault so hot, as if 'twere only then. Denham.

914
Heat; uas., £/. It is certain that we are slow,
As the lord Perce is on fire to go. Shakes.
Nature told hot and not as cold displays,
But with cold prudence age doth compose.

5. Eager; keen in desire.
It is no wonder that men, either perplexed in the necessary affairs of life, or habit in the pursuit of pleasures, should not seriously examine their actions.
Loch.
She has, methinks, a jointure,
Which makes him have so hot a mind t' her. Hudibr.

6. It is applied likewise to the desire, or sense raising the desire, or action excited; as, a hot pursuit.
Now, not, nor check of convenience will we hear,
When in hot scent of gain and full career. Dryden.

Piquant; acid: as, hot as mustard.

Hotbed. n.s. A bed of earth made hot by the fermentation of dung.
The hot we call a hotbed is this: there was taken horse-dung, and by this was made a bank half a foot high, and supported round about with planks, and upon the top was cast sifted earth two fingers deep.
Preserve the hotbed as much as possible from rain. Jeth.

Hotbrained. adj. [hot and brain.] Violent; vehement; furious. Cercbrous.
Your scheme is not my father's youth, Or needlessly bankrupt. Dryden's Spanish Play.

Hotcockles. n.s. [hauts coquilots, Fr.]
A play in which one covers his eyes, and gnoises who strikes him.
The chymist is certainly not our hotcockles; for that was by pinching, not by striking. Arbuthnot and Pope.
As at hotcockles once I laid me down,
And felt the weighty hand of many a clown,
Buson gave a gentle tap, and I
Quick rose, and read soft mistaken in beryl. Gay.

Hotheaded. adj. [hot and head.] Vehement; violent; passionate.
One would not make the same person zealous for a standing army and publick liberty; nor a hotheaded, crack-brained coxcomb for a member of a community. Arbuthnot.

Hot-house. n.s. [hot and house.]
1. A bag mice; a place to sweat and cup in.
Now she professes a hot-house, which is a very ill house too. Shakes. Measure for Measure.
2. A thrushel.
Where lately harbour'd many a famous whore,
A purging bill, now fa'nd upon the door,
Tells you it is a hot-house; so it may,
And will be a whoreson: th' ant is symyonyma. Ben Jonson.

Hotly. adv. [from hot.]
1. With heat; not coldly.
2. Violently; vehemently.
The wing was but a wing, and so hotly pursued, that he was driven to make a course of despair. Sidney. I do contest
As lustily and as boldly with the love,
As ever in all my life I did contend against thy will. Shakes. Coriolanus.
The enemy, now at hand, can hotly to skirmish in three places with the Christians.

This he hotly received, and hotly agreed, I doubt whether he be not a man mistaken.

3. Lustfully.
Varied birds, that hotly bill and breed,
And drink, and drink, I believe on salt they feed. Dry.

Hotmouthed. adj. [hot and mouth.]
Headstrong: ungovernable.
Hear my people's faith,
That hotmouth'd boast that bears against the curb,
Thou to be looked for. Dryden's Spanish Play.

Hotness. n.s. [from hot.]
Heat; violence; fury.

Hotchpot. n.s. [haché en poche.]
Hotchpotch. fr. or haché en pot.
As Canuden has it, as being hallowed up in a pot; yet the former corruption is now generally used. A mingled hash; a mixture; a confused mass.

Hotchpotation. n.s. [from hotchpotch.]
1. A man violent, passionate, precipitate, and heady.
My nephew's tempers may be well forgot;
It hath the excess of youth and heat of blood.

Hotchpurred. adj. [from hotchpotted.]
Vehement; rash; heady;
To draw Mars like a young Hippolytus, with an effeminate countenance, or Venus like that hotchpurred Harpocrates in Virgil, this procurnenon from a senseless judgment. Peacham.

Hove. The preterite of have.
Hovell. n.s. [Dinitative of pope house, Sax.]
1. A shed open on the sides, and covered over.
So likewise a hovel will serve for a room;
To stack on the peak, when harvest shall come.
Twixt.
If you make a hovel, thatched, over some quantity of ground, plank the ground over, and it will breed salt petre.
Baron.
Your hay it is more'd, your corn it is trod'd
Your barns will be full, and your hovell heng'd. Dryden.

Hovell, part, pass. [from heart.] Raised; swelling; tympanized.
Tom Piper hath hovell and bulled up cheeks;
If cheese be so hovell, make close to seek cresses. Twixt.
To Hovell. v.n. [from the noun.] To shelter in an hovel.
And was't thou faint, poor father,
To her I thel with swift and receipts forsworn.
In short and musty straw; shaks. King Lear.

Hoven. part. pass. [from heart.] Raised; swelling; tympanized.

To Hovell. v.n. [from the noun.] To hang over, Welsh.
1. To hang in the air over head, without flying off one way or other. Some fiery devil hoven in the sky,
And puts down mischief. Shakes. King John.
Ah, my poor heart! alas, my poor heart!
If you get your soul's soul in the air,
And be not hid in a deep grave, end.
Hove above the tides of love,
And hear your mother's lamentation. Shaks. R. III.
A hovelling must come swimming or his sight,
And seal'd his eyes in everlasting night. Dryden.

Hound.
Great flocks of birds are houeing about the bridge, and settling upon it.

Tall as the earth, parallel and falls and files.
The captive breaks her promis'd in-making walls;
Hovers a while upon the sad remains,
Wipes now the pillow, or velveteen, contains,
And silence with liberty unyielding.

Huese. fr. or haché en pot, fr. Hotchpotted.
Hovers that catch the hare.

Improved to regulate her nature.

Some less relin't, beneath the moon's pale light,
Hovers that catch the hare.

To stand in suspense or expectation.
The landlord will no longer consent with him;
For that be daily, aftercage and alteration,
And hovers in expectation of the chase.

To wander about one place.
We are so far from the end of so great an army, hovers over the borders of our country.

The truth and certainty is seen, and the mind falls possessing itself of it; in the other, it only hovers about it. Lecky.

Hough. n.s. [poys, Sax.]
1. The lower part of the thigh.
Blood shall be from the sword unto the belly, and dung of men;
came the houghs. 1. Sam. xiii. 36.

2. [Hauce, Fr.] An add; an hoe. See Hoe.

Did they really believe that man, by hoes and yokes, could eat a god out of a tree? Shaks.

To Hough. v.n. [from the noun.]
1. To hovers; to dislay; to cutting the sinews of the ham.
Thus shalt hove their horses. Job. ii. 6.

2. To cut up with an hough or hoe.
3. To hawk. This orthography is uncommon. See To Hawk.

Neither could we hough or spit from us; much less could we sucur or cough. Cree.

Houlet, n.s. The vulgar name for an owl.
The Scots and northern counties still retain it.

Holtt. n.s. [polt, Sax.]
A small wood.
Obsole.
Or as the wind, in hawks and shady graves,
A murmure makes among the boughs and leaves. Farf.
How many hours bring about the day.
How many days will finish up the year.
How many years a mortal may live.

2. A particular time.

A vacillation almost stops my breath,
That sander's friends greet in the hour of death.

Shakespeare.

When we can intreat an hour to serve,
We'll spend it in some words upon that business,
If we could grant the time by his Shakespeare, Shakspeare.
The conscious watch must all his arts reveal,
From the first moment of his vital breath,
To his last hour of unremitting death. Dryden's En.

3. The time as marked by the clock.

The hour runs through the roughest day.
Shak.
Our neighbour let her floor to a gentled man,
Who daily doth set it still.
They are as loud any hour of the morning,
As our own countrymen at midnight.
Addison.

Hourglass. n.s. [hour and glass.]

1. A glass filled with sand, which, running through a narrow hole, marks the time.
Next morning, known to be a morning better by the hourglass than the day's clearness. Sidny.
In sickness, the time will seem longer without a clock, than with it; for the mind doth value every moment.
Shake not his hourglass, when his hasty sand is ebbing to last.

2. Space of time. A manner of speaking rather affected than elegant.
We, within the hourglass of two months, have won one town, and overthrown great forces in the field. Bacon.

Hourly. adj. [from hour.]
Happening or done every hour; frequent; often repeated.
Alcyone.
Computes how many nights he had been gone,
Considered the whole room with hourly view.
Numbers her age, and wishes for a new. Dryden.
We must live in hourly expectation of having those troops recalled, which now they leave with us.
Swift.

Hourly. adv. [from hour.]
Every hour; frequently.
She deserves a lord,
That twenty such rude hys might tend upon,
And hourly call her mistress. Shakspe.

Our estate may not endure
Hazard so near us, as doth hourly grow.
Out of his lancets. Shakesp. Hamlet.

They with ceaseless care
Surround me, as thou saw'st; hourly conceiv'd,
And hourly born, with sorrow infinite
To me! Milton's Paradise Lost.

Great was their strife, which hourly was renew'd;
To put our wealth, in hopes of what his rival view'd. Dryad.

Hourplate. n.s. [hour and plate.]
The dial; the plate on which the hours pointed by the hand of a clock are inscribed.

If eyes could not view the hand, and the characters of the hourplate, and thereby at a distance see what clock it was, then their owner could not be much benefited by that acuteness. Locke.

House. n.s. [pav, Sax. huys, Dut. huse, Scott.]

1. A place wherein a man lives; a place of human abode.
Sparsors must not build in his house eaves. Shak.

You are built to live in, not to look on; therefore let us be preferred before uniformity, except where both may be had.
Bacon.

In a house the doors 2e movable, and the rooms square; yet the house is neither moveable nor square.
Watts.

2. Any place of abode.
The best is a smoke, the doves with luscum stench.
Are from their hives and houses driven away. Shak.

3. Place in which religious or studious persons live in common; monastery; college.
Theologous arrived at a religious house in the city, where now Constantin resided. Addison.

4. The manner of living; the table.
He kept a miserable house, but the blame was laid wholly upon another. Swift.

5. Station of a planet in the heavens, astrologically considered.
Pure spiritual substances we cannot converse with, therefore have need of means of communication, which will make to be the celestial houses, as it were, the planets, as the habitations of intellectual substances that animate them.

6. Family ancestors; descendants, and kindred race.
The red rose and the white are on his face,
The fatal colours of our residing houses. Shakesp.

An ignomious ruin and free pardon
Are of two houses; lawful mercy sure
Is nothing kin to foul redemption.
Shake.
By delaying his last hour, upon your grace's accession to the pomposities of your house, I may seem to have made a forfeiture.
Dryden.

A poet is not born in every race;
Two of a house, and one of every race.
One to perform, another to record. Dryden's Fab.

7. A body of the parliament; the lords or commons collectively considered.
Nor were the crimes objected against him so clear, as to render any satisfaction to the major part of both houses, especially that of the lords. King Charles.

To House. p. n. [from the noun.]

1. To harbour; to admit to residence.
Paladins have been to him to house all the Holits-Sid.

2. To shelter; to keep under a roof.
As we have not country plants to save them, we may house our own to forward them. Bacon.

Housekeeper. n.s. [house and break.]

1. Family living together.
All householders and sharpers have thief written in their foreheads. L' Estrang.

2. To have an astronomical station in the heavens.
In fear of this, observe the starry signs.
Where Saturn houses, and where Hercules joins Dry.

3. In the manner of an adjective, to signify domestick; belonging to the family.
Cornelius called two of his household servants.

For nothing koreller can be found.
In woman, than to study household stuff.
And good works in their husband's behalf.

Housekeeper. n.s. [house and keep.]

1. Householder; master of a family.

To be said an honest man and a good housekeeper,
And also as white and a good scholar. Shakspe.

If I may credit housekeepers and substantial tradesmen, all sorts of provisions and commodities are rising exceedingly.

2. One who lives in plenty; one that exercises hospitality.
The people are apter to applaud housekeepers than housewifes.

What are you doing there? Shakspe, Coriolanus.
4. A woman servant that has care of a family, and superintends the other maid servants.

Merry folks, who want by chance
A pair together, a country dance.
Call the old housekeeper, and get her,
To fill a place for want of better.
Swift.

Distinguish the housekeeper, the hunter. Shakes.

HOUSEKEEPING. adj. [house and keep].

Domestic; useful to a family.

His house for pleasant prospect, large scope, and other housekeeping commodities, challenges the present time.
Cerv.

HOUSEKEEPING. n.s. [house and keep].

1. Distinct house or family.

I hear your grace hath sworn out housekeeping, Shakes.

His table was one of the last that gave us an example of the old housekeeping of an English nobleman: an abundance rejoiced, which showed the profusion of hospitality.
Prior.

HOUSE. n.s. [hurl, Sax. from huscel, Goth. a sacrifice, or hostia, dimin hostiota, Lat.] The holy eucharist.

To HOUSE. v. a. [from the noun].

To give or receive the eucharist. Both the noun and verb are obsolete.

HOUSEKEEP. n.s. [house and keep].

A plant.

Miller.

The cereals supply their quantity of crude acid spirits; as juices at apples, grapes, the sorrels, and houseke.
Finger.

HOUSELESS. adj. [from house].

Wanting abode; wanting habitation.

This hungry, houseless, suffering, dying creature fed many thousands with five loaves and two fishes. Wrat.

HOUSEMAID. n.s. [house and maid].

A maid employed to keep the house clean.

The housemaid may put out the candle against the looking-glass. Swift.

HOUSEWORN. n.s. [house and room].

A place in a house.

Houseworn, that costs nothing, he bestows.

Yet still we scrumble on, though still we lose. Dryd.

Housesnail. n.s. A kind of snail.

HOUSEWARMING. n.s. [house and warm].

A feast of merry making upon going into a new house.

HOUSEWIFE. n.s. [house and wife].

This is now frequently written housewife, or husby.

1. The mistress of a family.

You will think it unfit for a good housewife to stir in or to herself about her housewifery.

Spencer on Ireland.

I have room enough, but the kind and hearty housewife is dead. Pope to Swift.

2. A female economist.

Fitting is a mantle for a bad man, and surely for a bad housewife it is no less convenient; for some of them, that be wandering women, it is half a wardrobe.

Spencer on Ireland.

Let us sit and mock the good housewife, Fortune, from her wheel, that her gifts may henceforth be disposed equally.
Shak.

Shew the degree,

He a good husband, a good housewife she. Dryd.

Early housewives leave the bed,

When living embers on the hearth are spread.

Dryd.

The fairest among the daughters of Britain shew themselves good stateswomen as well as good housewives.

Addison.

3. One skilled in female business.

He was bred up under the tuition of a tender mother, till she made him as good an housewife as herself; he could preserve apricocks, and make jellies.
Addison.

HOUSEWIFERY. adj. [from housewife].

Skilled in the acts becoming a housewife.

HOUSEWIFELY. adv. [from housewife].

With the economy of a careful woman.

HOUSEWIFERY. n.s. [from housewife].

1. Domestic or female business; management becoming the mistress of a family.

You will think it unfit for a good housewife to stir in or to herself about her housewifery.

Spencer on Ireland.

He ordains a lady for his praise,

Generally peaceable; fair and young, and skilled in housewifery.

Chapman's Hills.

Little butter was exported abroad, and that discredited by the housewifery of the Irish in making it up.
Temple.

2. Female economy.

Learn good works for necessary uses; for St. Paul expresses the obligation of Christian women to good housewifery, and charitable provisions for their family and neighbourhood.
Taylor.

HOUSING. n.s. [from house].

1. Quantity of inhabited building.

London is supplied with people to increase its inhabitants, according to the increase of housing.
Grant.

2. [From house, houses, or house, Fr.]

Cloth originally used to keep off dirt, now added to saddles as ornamental.

HOUSING. adj. [from house].

Provided for entertainment at first entrance into a house; housewarming.

His own two hands, for such a turn most fit,

The housewife did kindle and provide. Fairy Q.

HOUSE. n.s. [from house, houses, or house, Fr.]

Covering of cloth originally used to keep off dirt, now added to saddles as ornamental signs.

Dryden, I do not remember in any other place.

Six homes' hides with thongs together fast,

And where unworn ended, the corded vest,

Spread on his back, the house and trappings of a beast.
Dryd.

HOW. adv. [pu, Sax. ho, Dut.]

1. To what degree.

How long wilt thou refuse to humble thyself before me?

Exod.

How much better is it to get wisdom than gold?

Ps.

And how oft cometh destruction upon them?

Pr.

How oft is the candle of the wicked put out?

Ps.

O how love I thy law, it is my meditation.

Ps.

How many children's plights and mother's cries!

Ps.

How many women widows left when he was to sad disgrace!

Daniel's Civil War.

Consider how many differing substances it may be made of, without the fire.
Dryd.

2. In what manner.

Mark'd you not,

How that the guilty kindred of the queen

Look'd pale, when they herd her of Clairet death.

Shak.

Prosecute the means of thy deliverance

By ransom, or how else.

Milton's Agamemnon.

We examine the why and the how of the law.
L'Espl.

This much in our power how to live, but not at all when how to die.
L'Espl.

It is pleasant to see how the small territories of this little republick are cultivated to the best advantage.
Addison on Italy.

3. For what reason; from what cause.

How now, my love? Why is thy cheek so pale?

Shak.

How canst thou hasten to quit so quickly? Gen. xxvii.

Men would have the colours of birds feathers, if they could tell how; or they would have gay clothes. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

5. In what state.

For how shall I go up to my father? Gen. xiv. 19.

We have no force, and whatever we have been?

How with what regard shall I return? Exod.

6. It is used in a sense marking proportion or correspondence.

Behold, he put no trust in his servants, how much less in them that dwell in houses of clay, whose foundation is in the dust? Jer. iv. 19.

A great division fell among the nobility, so much the more dangerous by how much the spirits were more active and high.
Horne.

By how much they would diminish the present extent of the sea, so much they would impair the fertility, and mountains rivers of the earth.
Bentley.

It is much used in exclamation.

How are the mighty fallen!

Sera.

How doth the city sit solitary as a widow? Lam.

8. In an affirmative sense, not easily explained; that so it is; that.

Thick clouds put their in some hope of land, knowing how that part of the South-sea was utter unknown, and might have islands or continents.
Bacon.

There is a knowledge which God hath always revealed unto them in the works of nature: this they honour and esteem highly as profound wisdom, househ this wisdom saveth them not.
Horer.

There was no army transported out of England, howbeit the English colonies in Ireland did win ground upon the Irish.
Davie.

HOW'DYE. [Contracted from how do ye.]

In what state is your health? A message of civility.

I now write no letters but of plain business, or plain how'dye's, to those I am forced to correspond with.
Pep.

HOWEVER. adv. [how and ever].

1. In whatsoever manner; in whatsoever degree.

This ring he holds

In most rich choice; yet in his idle fire,

To buy his will, it would not seem too dear.

Homer reported it.

To trace the ways of highest agents, demes' however wise. Mitton.

2. At all events; happen what will; at least.

Our chief end is to be freed from all, if it may be, however from the greatest evils; and to enjoy, if it may be, all good, however the chiefest. Titus.

3. Nevertheless; notwithstanding; yet.

In your excuse your love does little way.

You might hence have or have had a fairer way. Dryd.

Its views are bounded on all sides by several ranges of mountains, which are however at so great a distance, that it have a wonderful variety of beautiful prospects. Addison on Italy.

I do not build my reasoning wholly on the case of persecution; however I do not exclude it. Aret.
H O Y

new turn their thoughts to examine how those diseases in a state are bred, that hasten its end, which would, however, be a very useful enquiry. Snuff.

4. To some of these meanings this word may be commonly reduced, but its power is sometimes almost evanescent.

To Howl, v. n. [hughe, Dut. adulo, Lat.]

1. To cry as a wolf or dog.

2. To utter in distress.

Therefore will I howl, and cry out for all Moscb, Jer. xixii.

The dammed use that word in hell, Howlings atted at it. Shakesp. Roméo and Juliete.

The cat's own name is fear. F. fo. B. R. D. Melch.

I have seen, in the wilder seas, what that howl'd out in the desert air, Where hearing should not catch them, Shakesp. Macbeth.

3. To speak with a belladone cry or tone.

Peare, monster, peace! Go tell thy horned tale To savages, and howl it out in deserts! Phillips.

4. It is used pelluciously of many noises loud and horrid.

Howl, n. s. [from the verb.]

1. The cry of a wolf or dog.

Murder.

Alarmed by his sentinels the wolf,
Whose howl's his watch. Shakesp. Macbeth.

And these the like rumours are no more than the like howled of the devil.

2. The cry of a man in being in honour.

She raves, she runs with a distracted pace,
And fills with horrid howls the public place. Dryden.

Howsoe'er, a. [horr. and sover.]

1. In what manner sooner. See However.

Fellow, who, after Moses, was one of the most ancient, howseower he had been since corrupted, deth in the substance of all ages. Raleigh's Historie.

2. Although.

The man doth fear God, howseover it seems not in him. Shakesp.

To Hox. v. a. [from dog, Sax.] To howl; to harn-string.

Thou art a coward,
Which hows honest howsister behind,

From course required. Shakesp Winter's Tale.

Ledrumm, perceiving the old soldiers' meaning, alighted, and with his sword howed his horse, saying aloud, This day, valiant soldiers, shall you have me both your general and fellow soldier, fighting on foot as one of yourselves. Kydold.

Hoy, n. s. [hoo, old Fr.] A large boat sometimes with one deck.

He sent to Germany, strange aim to rear:
From whence eftsoon arrived here three hows
Of Saxons, whom he for his safety employ'd.

To define a barge and hoy, which are between a boat and a ship, is hard. Watta's Logick.

H'ubbarb, n. s. [I know not the etymology, unless it be from up, up, or hubbob.] A tumult; a riot.

People pursued the business with all contempt of the government; and in the hubbob of the first day there appeared neither of reclusion or contention, but the actors were really of the dogs of the people. Clarend.

An universal hubbob wild. Of stunning sounds, and voices all confus'd, Born through the hollow dark, assaults his ear With loudest voices, Milton's Paradise Lost.

Why wolves raise a hubbob at last.

And hounds howl when she strikes in water. Hudibras.

Huckaback, n. s. A kind of linen on which the figures are raised.

Huckabacked, adj. [locket, Germ. a bunch, and buck.] Crook'd in the shoulders.

Huckabones, n. s. [from hucken, Dut., to sit down.] The hibbone.

Huckster, n. s. [huck, Germ. a Hucksterer.] pedlar; huckster a she- pedlar.

1. One who sells goods by retail, or in small quantities; a pedlar.

There cannot be a more ignominy trade than the being hucksters to such vile merchanstes.

God deliver the world from such guises, or rather such hucksters of souls, the very shame of religion.

Should thy shoe weigh down, down as thou fall.

And overturn the saddling huckster's stall. The saddling huckster shall not over thee mean.

But peace expect for nuts and pears of thine own.

There should be a confederacy of all servants, to drive those China hucksters from the doors. Swift.

Those hucksters or money-gobblers will be found necessary, if this brass-money is made current. Swift.

2. A trickish mean fellow.

Now the apace made his huckster man. Hud. Tale.

To Huckster. v. n. [from the noun.]

To deal in petty bargains.

They must pay a shifting, for changing their piece into silver, to some huckstering fellow who follows that trade. Swift.

To Huddle, v. a. [probably from howled.]

1. To dress up close so as not to be discovered; to mobble.

2. To put on carelessly in a hurry.

At twelve sornehow to bed for fear. Their clothes were huddled on by two. Prior.

Now in haste they huddle on Their boots, their shoes, and get them gone. Swift.

3. To cover up in haste.

4. To perform in a hurry.

I have given much application to this poem, this is not a play huddled up in haste. Dryden.

When the labord husband in his house restrain,
Let him forecast his work with timely care.

Which else is huddled when the skies are fair. Dryden.

5. To throw together in confusion.

Our adversary, huddling together suppositions together, and that in doubtful and general terms, makes a medley and confusion. Leake.

To Huddle. v. n. To come in a crowd or mob.

Glance an eye of pity on his losses,
That have of fate so huddled on his back,

Be thou answered after his blut and huddling manner. Bacon.

Thyrisus, whose artful strains have oft delay'd
The huddling brook to break his mad veins.

They're eyes are more imperfect than others; for they will run against things, and, huddling for wards, fall from high places. Brown's Vulg. Err. Hulder. v. n. [from the verb.] Crowd; tumult; confusion; with obscuricy.

That the Aristotelian virtue is huddled by words and terms insign significant, has been the censure of the wisest. Glavestein.

Your carrying business in a huddle, has forced our rulers to new models. Hudibras.

Nature dotes nothing in a huddle. L'Estrange.

The underscoring sells nothing distinctly in things remote, and in a huddle. Locke.

Several lively answers were made to this question, which entertained us till half-time, and filled my mind with a huddle of ideas.

Addison.

Hue, n. s. [Dupe, Sax.]

1. Colour; die.

For never in that land
Face of fair lady she before did view.
Or that breed (yon's) look her east in deadly hue. Staples.

To add another hue unto the rainbow,
Is wasteful and ridiculous, Hens. King John.

Flow's of all hue, and without them the rose. Milton.

To whom the angel, with a smile that glow'd - Ceticl rosy red, love's proper hue, Answer'd, Milton's Paradise Lost.

Tis much of the canon hue, to change the die with this. Dryden.

2. [Hue, Fr.] A clamour; a legal pursuit; an alarm given to the country. It is commonly joined with cry.

Hue and cry, villain, go! Assist me, knight, I am undone: fly, run, hue and cry! villano, I am undone. Shakesp.

I immediately comes a hue and cry after a gang of thieves, that hast taken a purse upon the road. Dryden.

If you should hiss, he swears he'll hiss as high; And, like a curfet, join the hue and cry. Addison.

The hue and cry went after Jack, to apprehend him dead or alive, wherever he could be found. Arbuthnot's John Bull.

Huer, n. s. [Huer, Fr. to cry.] One whose business is to call out to others.

They lie howling upon the coast, and are disti- romet by a balke or huer, who standeth on the clif-side, and from thence discerneth the course of the pilchard. Courte's Survey.

Huff, n. s. [from howe, or hovern, swelled] he is huffed up by distempers. So in some provinces we say the broad huff's up, when it is dignified, huff'd, or fer- mented; and, therefore, may be ferment.

To be in a huff is then to be in a ferment, as we now speak.

1. Swell or sudden anger or arrogance.

Quoth Talpho, honour's but a word
To swear by, only in a lord;
In other it is but a huff,
To vapour with instead of proof. Hudibras.

His frowns kept multitudes in awe,
Before the bluster of whose huff.
All his, as in a storm, flew off. Hudibras.

We have the apprehensions of a change to keep a check upon us in the very huff of our greatness. L'Enrag'e.

A Spaniard was wonderfully upon the huff about his extraction.

No man goes about to ensure or embroil another in a passion, to lay trains, and give secret blows in a present. H. South.

2. A wretch swelled with a false opinion of his own value.

As for you, colonel huff-captain, we shall try before a civil magistrate who's the greater plotter. Dryden.

Lewd shallow-brained huffs make Athenian contempt of religion the sole badge and character of wit. South.

To Huff, v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To swell; to puff.
HUG

In many wild birds the diaphragm may easily be huffed up with air, and blown in the windpipe. This gives them great power over the song. Great care must be taken in feeding these birds to prevent this. The huffed sound is produced by the vibrations of the diaphragm and the voice box. The voice box is located on the upper part of the larynx and is responsible for the production of sound. Hugging, or the act of holding someone tightly, is a common way to express love or affection. Hugging is a way to comfort or console someone. In some cultures, hugging is a way to express gratitude or appreciation. Hugging is a simple yet powerful way to connect with others.

HULL

hull n. [hull, Goth. to cover.]
1. The hulk or integument of any thing; the outer covering: as, the hulk of a nut covers the shell. [Hull, Scott.]

2. The body of a ship; the hulk. Hull and hulk are now confounded; but hulk originally signified not only the body or hulk, but a whole ship of burden, heavy and bulky. Deep in their hulls our deadly bullets light, And through the yielding planks a passage find. So many arts hath the Divine Wisdom put together, only for the hulk and tackle of a thinking verse. [Hull, Scott.]

hulk r. [from the noun.] To float; to drive to and fro upon the water without out sails or rudder. They saw a sight full of pitious strangeness, a ship, or rather the carcasse of a ship, of rather some few hours of the carcass, hulking there, just broken, part burned, and part drowned. Shall we hoist sail, sir? here lies your way. —No good swabber, I am to hull here for a little longer. [Hull, Scott.]

he looked, and saw the ark hulk on the broad:

People walking down upon the shore, saw some what come hulking toward them. [Hull, Scott.]

HULLER n. s. [from hull.] A blusterer; a bully. Not here I hazarded my art To be expos'd I' th' end to suffer, By such a bragging huffler, Hudibras. HUFFISH adj. [from huff.] Arrogant; insolent; hectoring. HUFFISHLY adv. [from huff.] With arrogant petulance; with bullying bluster. HUFFINESS n. s. Petulance; arrogance; noisy bluster.

To HUG r. a. [begun, Sax. to hedge, to inclose.

1. To press close in an embrace. He bewept my fortune, and hugg'd me in his arms. Shak. They would not do no to hugg the creature that had given him so admirable a sensation! L'Estrange. Ev'n in that urn their brother they confess, And hugging in their arms, and to their bosom press. Dryden. King Xerxes was enamour'd upon an oak, which he would hug and kiss. Harrington on Consumption.

2. To touch with tenderness. 1. Under fair pretence of friendly ends, And well-plac'd words of gloriousoity, Bask'd with reasons not unpersuasive, Win me into the easy-hearted man, And hugging him into smiles. Milton. We hug deformities, if they bear our names. Gower.

Admire yourself, and, without rival, hug your darling book. Recol. It is a great pleasure to me to see them close together, and to hug the trouble of their. South. Mark with what joy he hags the dear discovery. Rowe.

3. To hold fast. Age makes our most fondly hug and retain the good things of life when we have the least prospect of enjoying them. Alterbury.

4. To grip in wrestling. HUG R. S. [from the noun.]

2. A particular gripe in wrestling, elided a Cornish hug. HUGUE adj. [hooge, high, Dut.]

1. Vast; immense. Let the estate of the people of God, when they were in the house of bondage, and their manner of serving God in a strange land, be compared with that which Canaan and Jerusalem did afford; and who seeth not what huge difference there was between them? [Hoofer.]

This space of earth is so huge, as that it equalled in greatness not only Asia, Europe, and Africa, but America. [Abbe.]

Part, huge of hulk! Wallowing unwieldy, enormous in their gait, Temper'd the ocean; there the giant Hugest of living creatures, in the deep stretch'd like a promontory, sleeps or swims. And seems a moving land. Milton.

3. Great even to deformity or terrible. The patch is kind enough, but a huge feeder. Shak. Through forests huge, and long unravell'd forests, With degradation known he wanders waste. Tho've.

HUGELY adv. [from huge.] 1. Immensely; enormously. Who cries out on pride, That can therein tax any private party? Doth it not also rend the sea? Shak.

2. Very; greatly; much. I saw hagghly bent to believe, that whenever you concern yourselves in our affairs, it is for our good. Swift.

HUGENESS n. s. [from huge.]

1. Enormous bulk; greatness. 2. Utmost extent of. My mistress exceeds in goodness the hugeness of your unworthy thinking. Shak.

HUGERMUGGER n. s. [corrupted perhaps from huger mucker, or hug in the dark. Morerick in Danish is darkness, whence our murky. It is written by Sir Thomas Moore hoker moker. Hoker, in Chaucer, is peevish, crossgrained, of which moker may only be a ludicrous reduplication. Hooke is likewise in German a corner, and moky is in English dark. I know not how to determine.] Secrecy; bye-place.

Now hold in huggermugger in their hand, And all the rest is of their small and stand. Hubb. Tale. But if I can but find them out. Where e'er'th in huggermugger lurk, I'll make them more by their handly work. Hudibras. There's a distinction between what's done open and bare-faced, and a thing that's done in huggermugger, under a seal of secrecy and concealment. [L'Estrange.]

HUGY adj. [See HUGUE.] Vast; great; huge. Not in use.

This huge rock one finger's force apparently will move. Crown's Survey of Cornwall.

HUME n. S. [hooge, Fr.] A clock. As we were thus in conference, there came one that seemed to be a messenger, in a rich huke. Bowick's New Atlantis.

HUM n. S. [huikle, D.; Jule, Sax.]

1. The body of a ship. There's a whole merchant's ventur in Bourdeau stuff in him: you have not seen a hulk better stuffed in the hold. Shak. The custom of giving the colour of the sea to the hull, sails, and mariners of their fly-boats, to keep them from being discovered, came from the Venetians. [Adcock.]

They Argo's hulk will tax, And scrape her pitchy sides for wax. Swift. Steed's sluggish on. Thomson.

2. Any thing bulky and unwieldy. This sense is still retained in Scotland; as, a hulk is a fellow. And Harry Monmouth's brawn, the hulk Sir John. Is prisoner to your will. [To HULK r. a.]

To HULK r. a. To exenterate: as, to hulk a hare. Ainsworth.

To HUM r. a. [helm elan, Dut.]

1. To make the noise of bees. The humming of bees is an unequal buzzing. Bac. An airy nation flew, Thick as the buzzing bees that hunt the goldenbush In Summer's heat. Dryden. So weary bees in little cells repose; But if eight-roaders lift the well-stor'd hive. An humming through their waxen city grows. Dryden.

2. To make an inarticulate and buzzing sound. I think he'll hear me: yet to bite his lip, And hum at his Comusis, much unhearts me. Shak. Upon my honour, Sir, I heard a humming, And that a strange one too, which did awake me. Shak. The cloudy messenger turns me his back, and hums; as who should say, You'll rue. Shak. To pause in speaking, and supply the interval with an audible emission of breath. Having pump'd up all his wit, And known'd upon it, thus he writ. Hudibras. I still acquiesce, And never hum'd and haw'd addition, Nor snuffed reason, Hudibras. The man by humming and having a good while; but in the end, he gave up himself to the physicians. [L'Estrange.]

4. To make a dull heavy noise. The musical accents of the Indians, to us, are but intermittent humings; as are ours to their otherwise tuned organs. Glassie. Still humming on, their drowsy course they keep, And hulk'd so long, lies stopo, we alas dashkep. Pope.

5. To sing low. Pop.

6. To applaud. Approval was commonly expressed in public assemblies by a hum, about a century ago. HUM N. S. [from the verb.]

1. The noise of bees or insects. To black Ileen's summons The shrill-born beetle, with his drowsy hum, Hath rung night's yawning bell. Shak. Merib. 190
H U M
Not undelightful is the careless hum
To him who muses through the woods at noon.
Thomson.

2. A low confused noise, as of bustling crowds at a distance.
Henry. A low sound, like that of falling leaves.
Mitton.

3. Hume: the various sounds heard at a distance.
Thomson.

4. Any low dull noise.
Spenser.

5. In HUMDRUM it seems used for hum.
Thomson.

6. An expression of applause.
Thomson.

HUM. interj. A sound implying doubt and deliberation. Let not your ears despise the heaviest sound That ever yet they heard.
Shakspeare.

HUMAN. adj. [humanus, Lat.; humane, Fr.]
1. Having the qualities of a man.
Thomson. It will never be known whether he be a gentleman born, but whether he be a human creature.

2. Belonging to man.
Cowley. The king is but a man as I am: the violet smells to him as doth to me; all his senses have but human conditions.
Shakespear.

HUMANE. adj. [ humane, Fr.] Kind; civil; benevolent; good-natured.
Love of others, if it be not spent upon a few, does generally spread itself towards many; and maketh men become humane and charitable.
Baron.

HUMBLER. n. s. [from human and bird.] The humming bird.
Thomson. All ages have conceived the wren the least of birds, yet our own plantations have shown one far less; that is, the humming bird, not much exceeding a beetle.

HUMBLE. adj. [humble, Fr. humilis, Lat.]
1. Not proud; modest; not arrogant.
Thomson. As humble as the best gentleman.

2. Low; not high; not great.
Shakspeare. Th' example of the heavy bulk, Th' unseemly toad, Cowley, mark.

HUMBLING. n. s. [from humanize] To humiliate, to humble.
Thomson. Him, for he humbled himself equal to the earth.

HUMILY. adv. [from humanize] Kindly; with good-nature.
Thomson. If they would yield us the superfluity, while it was wholesome, we might guess they relieved us humanely.

HUMBLER. n. s. [from humanize, Fr.] A philologer; a grammarian; a term used in the schools of Scotland.

HUMANITY. n. s. [humanità, Fr. humanitates, Lat.]
1. The nature of man.
Thomson. Look to thyself: reach not beyond humanity.

2. Human kind; the collective body of mankind.
Shakspeare. A rarer spirit never did steer humanity. The middle of humanity thou never knewest, but the extremity of both ends. Henry. To esteem the human virtue and uncorrupt, there has been used the highest caution humanity could entreat.

3. Benevolence; tenderness.
Thomson. All men ought to have a just regard to what are the common offices of humanity and friendship in divers.
HUMBLY. adj. [from humble.] 1. Without pride; with humility; modestly; with tenuous modesty. Scepter. 2. To send their smiles before them to Achilles. Come humbly as you'd to creep to high alters. Dryden.

HUMBLE. adj. [from hum, drone, or humming drone.] Dull; dromion; stupid.

HUMID. adj. [from humid, from humidus, Lat.] Watery; moist; watery.

HUMIDITY. n. s. [humiditatis, Lat.] That quality which we call moisture, or the power of wetting other bodies. It differs very much from fluidity, depending altogether on the quantity of the water present, of any liquor to the parts or surfaces of such particular bodies as it is capable of adhering to. Thus quicksilver is not a very liquid, in respect to our hands or clothes.

HUMUPL. n. s. [humility, Fr. from humilis, Lat.] That quality which we call moisture, or the power of wetting other bodies. It differs very much from fluidity, depending altogether on the quantity of the water present, of any liquor to the parts or surfaces of such particular bodies as it is capable of adhering to. Thus quicksilver is not a very liquid, in respect to our hands or clothes.

HUMOUR. n. s. [from hum, for humor.] That which hums; an ascendant. Ainsworth.

HUMOURS. n. s. [from humorous.] Proceeding from the humours.

HUMORIST. n. s. [from humoristico, ital. humoristique, Fr.]

1. One who conducts himself by his own fancy; one who gratifies his own humour.

The notion of the humorist is one that is greatly pleased, or greatly displeased, with little things; his actions seldom directed by the reason and nature of things.

HUMORIST keeps to himself much more than he wants, and gives his superfluities to the chase of heaven.

2. One who has odd conceits.

The wit sinks imperceptibly into an humorist. Swift.

3. One who has violent and peculiar passions.

It is by wise and timely inquisition the peccant humour and humourists must be discovered and purged, or cut off; murder in such a case is a true cruelty.

BARON DE TILLERS.

HUMOROUS. adj. [from humor] 1. Full of grotesque or odd images.

Of some of the commentators tell us that Marty was a very cunning bowyer who had lost his case; other, that this passage alludes to the story of the sire Mursay, who contended with Apollo, which I think it is, but perhaps it is not.

Addison.

2. Capricious; irregular; without any rule but the present whim.

I am known to be a humorous person; said to be something imperfect, in favouring the first; of the second; and of the third.

Shakespeare. Corelliano.

Thou fortune's champion, that dost never fight right when her humorous ladyship is in motion.

Shakespeare. King John.

He's humorous as Winter, and as sudden.

A saucy colt in the spring of day, H. IV.

O, you awake them; cause awaie.

Times be short, are made for play.

The humorous noon too will not stay.

What doth make you thus delay.

Ben Johnson.

Vast is his courage, boundless in his mind.

Rough as a storm, and humorous as the wind.

Thee that woos, calls, you are only a dream.

Thee that fool's, and says not what.

Thou dost say, of what thou knowest not what.

Prior.

HUMOROUSLY. adv. [from humorous.] 1. Merrily; joosely.

A cabinet of medals Juvenal calls very humorously, concutus argenteus in tabula frontis sacri

Adams.

It has been humorously said, that some have fish’d, the very jakes for papers left there by man of wit.

Swift.

2. Capriciously; whimsically.

We resolve by halves, and unadvisedly; we resolve rashly, wildly, or humorously, upon reasons that will hold.

Colman.

HUMOURSNESS. n. s. [from humorous.] 1. Fickleness; capricious levity.

2. Jocularity; oddness of conceit.

HUMORSOME. adv. [from humouring.]

1. Peevish; petulant.

2. Odd; humorous. In this sense it is less used.

As science cannot be much improved by masquerades, where the wit of both sexes is taken up in continuing singular and humor-some disguises.

Swift.
HUMOUR. n.s. [humour, fr. humor, Lat.] 1. Moisture.

The aqueous humour of the eye will not freeze, which is very admirable, seeing it hath the perspicuity and fidelity of common water.

Ray on the Creation.

2. The different kind of moisture in man's body, reckoned by the old physician to be phlegm, blood, choler, and melancholy, which, as they predominated, were supposed to determine the temper of mind.

Bibiliti.

I lovd Sidney. The Desire that liiicli.

Deut. Hayward.

Pained unless A disease; Drijden.

Fielding.

[Junjeji, With a room that is richly adorned, and hung round with a great variety of pictures, strikes the eye at once. Watts.

Addison.

HUNGER. n.s. [hunger, Sax. hungar, Dut.]

1. Desire of food; the pain felt from fasting.

An uneasy sensation at the stomach for food, when the stomach is empty, and the fibres in their natural condition, they draw up as close as to rub against each other, so as to keep that sensation; but when they are distended with food, it is again removed; unless when a person fasteth so long as to want of spirits, the fibres, to have those fibres grow too fluid to corrigate, and then we say a person has fasted away his stomach. Quinio.

Then shall serve time enemies in hunger and in thirst.

[Stust. xvii. 45.

D. and E. the subacid part of the animal spirits, being cast off by the lower parts upon the coats of the stomach, yieldeth the fibres, and thereby produces the sense we call hunger.

Grew.

Something vicious, fat and oily, remaining in the stomach, destroys the sensation of hunger.

Arbuthnot or Aliments.

2. Any violent desire.

The innumerable fancies we expect, do naturally suggest the necessity of preparing our appetites and urgencies for them, without which heaven can be no heaven to us. Decoy of Piety.

For hunger of my gold I dye.

Dryden.

To HUNGER. v. n. [from the noun.]

1. To feel the pain of hunger.

My more having, would be as a space.

To make me hunger more. Shak. Marcbeth.

Widely they gaze, and to the eye they roar,

As if they hunger'd for the food they bosc. Cowley.

2. To desire with great eagerness; to long.

Dost thou so hunger for my empty chair.

That thou wilt needs invent lies with thyHonors, Before the hour be ripe? O, foolish youth.

Thou seekst the greatness that will overwhelm thee.

I content me,

And from the sting of famine fear no harm.

You mind that, fed with better thoughts that feed

Me hang ring more to do my Father's will. Witt.

HUNGERBIT. [adj. fr. hunger and petit, Gri.]

Pained or weakened with hunger.

His strength shall be hungerbiten. Job, xviii. 12.

Shak.

Bred up in poverty straits at home;

Lost in a desert here, and hungerbit. Milton.

HUNGERLY. [adj. fr. hunger.] Hungry; in want of nourishment.

His heard

Grew thin and hungerly, and seem'd to ask

His boys as he walked; quaffed water.

Shak.

HUNGERLY. adv. With keen appetite.

You have sav'd my hungering, and I feed

Most hungerly on your sight. Shak.
To will Shak. to Pope. to for Shak. make U L’Estninge. 2. 1. Hu’ngry. Hu’ngred. 30 gravel. and fend dings. hungry tattums, an ferring. Want and attach, fed before her name. Dray. Hu’ngred. adj. [from hunger.] Pinched by want of food. O’hours do in a small degree nourish, and we see men an hungered love to smell hot bread. Bacon. HUNGRILY. adv. [from hungy.] With keen appetite. Thus much to the kind rude gods we owe, Who pity’d suffering mortals long ago; When on harsh scorces hungerly they fed, And gave ‘im pleasant bater, better bread. Dray. HUNGRY, adj. [from hunger.] 1. Feeling pain from want of food. The face of this man the hungines caubialls Would not have touch’d, would not have stain’d with blood. Shak. By eating before he was hungry, and drinking before he was dry, he was sure never to eat or drink much at a time. Temple. Th’at that thus may say that a man is always hungry, but that he does not always feel it; whereas hunger consists in that very sensation. Locke. 2. Not fat; not fruitful; not prolific; more disposed to draw from other substances then to impart to them. Cassius has a lean and hungry look. Shakes. The more fat water will bear soap bert; for the hungy washes not the sordid nature. Burton. In rashy grounds springs are found at the first and second spurt, and sometimes lower in a hangry gravel. Moore. To the great day of retribution our Saviour ourres us, for reaping the fruits that we here sow in the most hungry and harren soil. Smalridge’s Serm. HUNKS. n. [Junxer sordid, Islandick.] A covetous sordid wretch; a mis’rer, a curmudgeon. The old hunk was well served, to be trickt out of a whole hog for the securing of his puddings. Shakes. She has a husband, a jealous, covetous, old hunk. Drayden. Iros has given all the intimations of being a close hunk, worth loving, says Allston. Add. To HUNT, r. a. [Bunzan, Sax. from hunt a dog.] 1. To chase wild animals. The man that once did sell the lion’s skin, While the beast liv’d, was kill’d in hunting him. Shakes. Will thou hunt the prey for the lion, or fill the appetite of the young lions? Job, xxxvii. 39. We should all do every criminal out of the hand, and hunt him down, however forsworn and over-grown; and, on the contrary, shelter and defend. Addison. 2. To pursue; to follow close. Evil shall hunt the violent man to overthrow him. Psalm, cxlv. The heart strikes five hundred sorts of pulses in an hour, and is hunted unto such continual palpitations, through anxiety, that fain would it break. Harvey on Consumptions. 3. To search for. Not certainly affirming any thing, but by confessing of times and monuments, I do hunt out a probability. Spen. 1. who have given themselves up to a party, and only hunt for what may favour and support the tenets of it. Locke. 2. To direct or manage hunts in the chase. He hunts a pack of dogs better than any, and is famous for finding hares. Addison. To HUNT, p. u. 1. To follow the chase. When he returns from hunting, I will not speak with him. Shakes. King Lear. Esan went to the field to hunt for venison. Gen. xxix. 5. 2. A chase. The hunt is up, the morn is bright and gray; the fields are fragrant, and the woods are green. Shakes. 3. Pursuit. I’ve heard myself proclaim’d; And by the happy hollow of a tree, Escap’d the hunt. Shakes. King Lear. HUNTER. n. s. [from hunt.] 1. One who chases animals for pastime or food. If those English lords had been good hunters, and reduced the mountains, bogs, and woods within the limits of forest, charities, and parks, the forest law would have driven them into the plains. Addison. 2. A chase. The hunt is up, the morn is bright and gray; the fields are fragrant, and the woods are green. Shakes. 3. Pursuit. I’ve heard myself proclaim’d; And by the happy hollow of a tree, Escap’d the hunt. Shakes. King Lear. HUNTINGHORN. n.s. [from hunting and horn] A bugle; a horn used to cheer the hounds. Whilst a boy, Jack ran from school, Fond of his huntinghorn and pole. Prin. HUNTRESS. n. s. [from hunter.] A woman that follows the chase. And then, this third crown’d with light of sight, With thy chaste eye, from thy pale sphere above, Thy huntress’ name, that my full life doth sway. Shakes. Shall I call Antiquity fr. the old schools of Greece, To tolerise the sn-orm of chaste! Hence the huntress Diancher drowb low, Fair silver-shifted queen, for ever chase. Milton. Let old Arcadia boast her ample plain, Her immortal hunters, and her virgin train; Not envy Whistle. Pope. Homer represents Diana with her quiver at her shoulder; but at the same time he describes her as an huntress. Brome. HUNTSMAN. n. s. [hunt and man.] 1. One who delights in the chase. Like as a huntsman, after weary chase, Seeks the tame escape from him away, Sits down to rest him. Addison. Such pame, whilst yet the world was new. Such a man, in the midst of our free race, Or dogs, care such a master shoes? Wilt. 2. The servant whose office it is to manage the chase. Apply this moral rather to the huntsmen, that managed the chase, than to the Lord of L’Estrange. HUNTSMANSHIP. n. s. [from huntsman.] The qualifications of a hunter. At court your followers every day Give the art of thinning, huntsmanship, or play. Pome. HURDLE. n. s. [jyrbel, Sax.] 1. A texture of sticks woven together; a crate. The sled, the tumbril, hurdles and the flail. These all must be prepar’d. Dryden’s Georg. 2. Grate on which criminals were dragged to execution. They may your fine joints gain’s Tuesday next, Or I will drive thee on a hurdle tilter. Shakes. The blacksmith was hanged, drawn, and quartered at Tyburn; taking pleasure upon the hurdle, to think that he should be famous in after-times. Bacon. HURDS. n. s. The refuse of hemp or flax. Ainsworth. To HURL. r. a. [from hurlot to throw down, Islandick; or, according to Skinner, from whirl.] 1. To throw with violence; to drive impetuously. If he’s have any grievous plagues in store, Or let them keep it: Gilt thy sons be ripe. And then hurl down their indignation On thee! That holds vengeance in his hand. Skak. To hurl upon their heads that breaks his law. Skak. With my nills digg’d stones out of the ground. To hurl at the beholders of my shame. Shak. If the thirst of him that hates, or hurl at I’m by laying of wait. Numb, xxx, 20. They use both the right hand and the left in hurling stones. Chur. 11. 2. Hurling and wit, As madmen stones. Ben Jonson. His darling sons, Har’d heading to partake with us, shall curse Their frail original and faded bliss. Milton. She strikes the late; but if it sound, Threatens to hurl it on the ground. Waller. Corrupted light of knowledge hurl’d Sin, death, and ignorance o’er all the world. Daven. Young Phœnix, From East to North irregularly hurl’d, First set himself on fire, and then the world. Dryd. Compare him is so far to drive the Grecian train, And hurl them headlong to the feet and main, Pope. 2. To utter with vehemence. [Hurler, Fr. to make an howling or hideous noise.] This sense is not in use. The glad merchant that does view His ship far come from watry wilderness, He hur’s out vows. Spen. Highly they rage against the highest, Hurling defiance towards the vaults of heaven. Mins. 3. To play at a kind of game. Hurling takes its denomination from throwing of the stone, and is twof of two sorts; one to country: for hurling to goals there are fifteen or thirty players, more or less, chosen out on each side, a strip thousand yard long and nine yards in, ranks, one against another; out of these ranks they match themselves by pairs, one entering another, and so pass away; every of which couple are to watch one another during this play. Carest.

HURL. n.s. [from the verb] Tumult; riot; commotion.
He in the same hurt murdering such as he thought would withstand his desire, was chosen king. - Knolles

HURLER. n.s. [from hurl.] One that plays at hurling.
The hurler hurt a man to man, and not two set upon one man at once. Carest.'s Surv. of Carest.

HURLWIND. n.s. [hurl and wind.] A whirlwind; a violent gust. A word not in use.

Like scatter'd down by howling Eurus blown,
By rapid hurled from his mansion thrown.
-Sandys

HURLY n.s. [from the Fr. hurdy] Tumult.

HURLYBURLY. [hurbrach, inconsiderately.] Tumult; commotion; bustle.
Winds take the ruffian hills by the roots,
That with the furious death itself awakes. Shakesp.

Poor discontent,
Which gape and rub the elbow at the news
Of hurlyburly innovation.

Shakesp. Mortlake.

I see this hurly all on foot. Shakesp.

All places were filled with tumult and hurlbury,
Every man measured the danger by his own fear.
Such a pitiful cry was in every place,
And in cities presently to be besieged. Knolles.

HURRICANE. n.s. [hurican, Span. out ragen, Fr.] A violent storm, such as is often experienced in the western hemisphere.

Blow winds, and crack your cheeks!
You engineers, and hurricane, spout! Shakesp.

A storm or hurricane, though but the force of air, makes a strange havoc where it comes. Barret.

A poet who had a great genius for tragedy, made every man and woman too in his playstark raging mad: all was tempestuous and bustling; heaven and earth were coming together at every word; a mere hurricane from the beginning to the end. Dryden.

The ministers of state, who gave us law,
In corners with selected friends withdraw;
There in deaf murrmurs, solemnly are wise,
Whipping like winds, are hurricane and sigh.

Saw, where our wide Numidian wastas extend,
Sudden th' impetuous hurricanes descend,
Wheel through the air, in circling eddies play.
Fear up the sands, and sweep whole plains away.
-Addison.

HURRIER. n.s. [from hurry.] One that hurries; a disturber.

To HURRY. v.n. [hurry] to plunder.
Sax. hurrs was likewise a word used by the old Germans in urging their horses to speed; but seems the imperative of the verb.] To hasten; to put into precipitation or confusion; to drive confusely.

Your nobles will not hear you; but are gone
To offer service to your enemy;
And your accumulation hurries up and down
The noose, number of your doubtful friends. Shak.

For whom all this haste
Of midnight march, and hurry'd meeting here?
Verse: Impetuous: but hurries him on to satisfy it. South

That hurry'd o'er
Such swarms of English to the neighboring shore.
Dryden

A man has no time to subdue his passions, establish his soul in virtue, and come up to the perfection of his nature, before he is hurried off the stage. Addison.

HURRY, n.s. [from the verb.] Tumult; precipitation; commotion.
Among all the horrible hurries in England, Ireland was then alone quiet. Shakesp.

It might have pleased him in the present heat and hurry of his rage; but must have displeased him infinitely in the sedate reflection. South.

After the violence of the hurry and commotion was over, the water came to a state somewhat more calm. Walton.

Amidst a tumult in the soul, it diminishes the mind, and puts into a violent hurry of thought.
-Addison.

A long train of coaches and six ran through the heart, one after another, in a very great hurry.
-Addison.

I do not include the life of those who are in a perpetual hurry of affairs, but of those who are not always engaged.

The pavement was filled with trampling feet,
And the mixt hurry barracides the street.
-Guy's Tricia.

HURST. n.s. [hurste, Sax.] A grove or thicket of trees.

To HURST. v.n. preter. I hurt; past. pass. I have hurt. [hurst wound, Sax. hurster to strike, Fr.

1. To mischief; to harm.
He that overcomes shall not be hurt of the second coming. Revelations.

Virgins may be assailed, but never hurst:
Surpriz'd by unroof, nor yet enthrall'd. Milton.
The Adams of the sea is so called, because it is a loving and innocent fish, that hurts nothing that has life.

2. To wound; to pain by some bodily harm.
My heart is turn'd to stone: I strike it, and it hurts my hand.
-Shak. Othello.

It beeds contempt For hurrying men, or presume to pry,
When the hurt lion grows within his den. Dryden.

3. To damage; to impair.
See thou not the oil and wine. Revelations.

HURT. n.s. [from the verb.

1. Hurry; mischief.
The hurt thereof is greater than the good.
Spens:

There is a man to my hurt.
Grissel.
I found it stand there uncorrected, as if there had been no hurt done.
-Baker on Learning.

3. Wound or bruise.
Where is he wounded?
-There will be large electritaries to shew the people: he received seven harts th' body.
-Shakesp. Corinnaus.

Carter adventur'd bravely, and received two great harts in his body.

The pain by coldness and hurt, hunger, thirst, and cold, all men feel. In arms and science 'tis the same,
Our rival's harts create our famine.
-Prison.

3. Injury; wrong.
Why should damage grow to the hurt of the king?
-Evac.

HURTER. n.s. [from hurt.] One that does harm.

HURTFUL. adj. [hurt and full.] Mischievous; pernicious.

Secret neglect of our duty is but only our own hurt, one man's contempt of the common prayer of the church of God may be most hurtful unto many.
-Hoger.

HURTFULLY. adv. [from hurtful.] Mischievously; perniciously.

HURTFULNESS. n.s. [from hurtful] Mischievousness; perniciousness.

To HURTLE. v.n. [hurtur, Fr. atrarte, Ital.] To crush; to skimish; to run against any thing; to jostle; to meet in shock and encounter.

The noise of battle hurttled in the air.
Shakesp.

Made him give battle to the lioness,
Who quickly fell before him in which hurttling,
-From infamous slander I awak'd.
-Shakesp. As you like it.

To HURTLE. v.a. To move with violence or impetuosity. This is probably the original of hurt.

Obsolete.

Hurtful, harmful, innocuous; doing no harm.

Unto her home she oft would go,
Where hold and hurtless many a play she tries,
Her parents liking such a do: so
For simple goodness shined in his eyes.
Shakesp.

She joy'd to make proof of her courage.
On gentle dame, so hurtless and so true.
-Fairy Q.

Shatter's ev'ry gasp he takes.
And vain efforts and hurtles blows he makes.
-Dryden's Alexid.

2. Receiving no hurt.
HURTLESSLY. adv. [from hurtless.] Without harm.

Your neighbours have found you so hurtless strong, that they thought it better to rest in your friendship than make new trial of your enmity.
Shakesp.

HURTLESSNESS. n.s. [from hurtless.

Freedom from any pernicious quality.

HUSBAND. n.s. [husband master, Dan. from house and boud, Runic, a master.

1. The correlative to wife; a man married to a woman.
Thy husband is thy lord, thy life, thy keeper,
Thy head, thy sovereign. Shak. Tam. of the Shrew.

If your husband is in his old lunes,
Again: he takes on yonder with my husband,
And so rils against all married mankind.
-Heb.

This careful husband had been long away,
When his chaste wife and little children mourn.
-Dryden.

The contract and ceremony of marriage is the occasion of the demnuation of relation of husband.
-Locke.

2. The male of animals.
Eve thought a snowy ram than shaft behold,
Prefer him not in haste, for husband to thy fold.
-Dryden.

3. An economist; a man that knows and practises the methods of triguality and profit. Its signification is always modified by some epithet implying bad or good.

Edward I. showed himself a right good husband; owner of a lordship till husbanded. Duns. on Isl.
I was considering the shortness of life, and what ill husbands we are to tender a fortune.
-Teller.

4. A tiler of the ground; a farmer.

Husband's work is laborious and hard. Hub. Tale.

I heard a great husband say, that it was a common error to think that chalk helpeth fruitful grounds.
-Bacon.

924
HUSBAND. r. a. [from the noun.]
1. To supply with an husband.
   Think you I am no stronger than my sex,
   To have my father and my husband? Shak.,
   The ring was ever her's, you shall as easily
   Prove that I husbands her bed in Horestone,
   Where yet she never was, Shak.,
   I in my right,
   By my investiture, I contrives the best.
   That were the last, if he should husband you.
   Shakespeare.

2. To manage with frugality.
   It will be pastime passing excellent,
   If you, more ground with modesty,
   The French, wisely husbanding the possession of a victory, kept themselves within their trenched places.
   Balzac. Henri. VII.
   If you be master-gunner, spend not all
   That thou canst speak at once; but husband it,
   And give it out by degrees.

3. To till; to cultivate the ground with proper management.
   A farmer cannot husband his ground, if he sits at a great rent.
   Bacon.

HUSBANDLESS, adj. [from husband.]
Without an husband.
A widow husbandless, an object to fears;
A woman, naturally born to fears.
Shakespeare.

HUSBANDLY. adj. [from husband.] Frugal; thrifty.
Bare plots full of galls, if ye plow overhast;
And compass it then, is a husbandly part.
Tusser.

HUSBANDMAN. n. s. [husband and man.]
One that works in tillage.
This Dary serves you for good uses; he is your serving-man, and your husbandman.
Shakespeare.
The mule being more swift in his labour than the ox (and ground was allowed to the male by the husbandman).
Brooke.

HUSBANDRY. n. s. [from husband.] 1. Tillage; manner of cultivating land.
He began with a wild method to run over all the art, especially employing his tongue about well dawning of a field. Sedley.
Ask'd if in husbandry he ought did know,
To plough, to plant, to reap, to sow. Sir Robert Tate.
Husbandry supplyeth all things necessary for food.
Spenser.

Peace hath from France too long been clash'd;
And all her husbandry doth lie upon heaps,
Corrupting in its own fertility. Shakespeare. Hen. V.

Her plentiful womb
Expresseth its full milk and husbandry. Shakespeare.
The seeds of virtue may, by the husbandry of Christian counsel, produce better fruit than the strength of self-nature.
Raleigh.
Husbandry the Spanish watering in the valleys of Mexico, could not make our wheat bear seed.
Raleigh.

A family governed with order will fall naturally into the several trades of husbandry, tillage, and pastureage.

Let any one consider the difference between an acre of land sown with wheat, and an acre of the same land lying without any husbandry upon it, and he will find that the improvements of labour makes the value.
Leake.

2. Thrift; frugality; parsimony.
There's husbandry in heaven;
The candles are all out. Shaksper.
You have already proved several millions to the publick, and that what we ask is too incomprehensible to break into any rules of the strictest good husbandry.
Swift.

3 Care of domestick affairs.
Lorenzo, I commit into your hands
The husbandry and manage of my house. Shak.
HYD

You keep a parcel of roaring bullies about me.

You are not called by name; you are called by number.

M. de la Hire.

They are not called by name; they are called by number.

M. de la Hire.

To receive an allocution.

He was addressed in the court by several thousands of weavers and clothing.

Addison.

HYACINTH. n. s. [ἐχύσις; hyacynth, Fr. hyacinthus, Lat.]

1. A flower.

It hath a hollow root; the leaves are long and narrow; the stalk is upright and raised, and the flowers growing on the upper part in a spike; the flowers consist of each one leaf, are tubular, and cut into six divisions at the brim, which are reflexed; the ovary becomes a roundish fruit with three angles, which is divided into three cells, which supply seeds.

Millen.

The silken fleece impertur'd for the loan.

Rival'd the hyacinth in vernal bloom. Pope's Ode.

2. The hyacinth is the same with the lapis lycnarius of the ancients. It is a less showy gem than any of the other gems. It is seldom smaller than a seed of hemp, or larger than a nutmeg. It is found of various degrees of deepness and palest, but its colour is always a deadish red, with a considerable admixture of yellow; its most usual is that mixed red and yellow, which we know by the name of flame-colour. Hill on Sens.

HYACINTHINE adj. [ἐχύσινος; made of hyacinths; resembling hyacinths.

HYADES, n. s. [εχύας; Made a watery constellations.

HYAIDS. n. s. [εχυαίδες; stellation.

Then sailor, quarter'd heav'n, and found a name.

For every fix'd and every wand'er'ng star.

The pleiades, lyra, Dracena's Georgia.

HYALINE adj. [εχύαλος; Glassy; crystalline made glass; resembling glass.

From heavy-nate not far, founded in view.

On the clear hyaline, the glassy sea.

Milton.

HYPERIDOUS adj. [εχυρίδος; fr. hybrida. Lat.]

Beggotten between animals of different species.

Why such different species should not only mingle together and beget a new animal, but yet that is done, is not now a matter.

Quintus.

HYDATIDES n. s. [from ἡδάτης; Little transparent bladders of water in any part; most common in the vegetable person, from a disease of the bursa of the lymphoid.

Quintus.

The water is contained in little bladders, adhering to the liver and peritonem, known by the name of hydatides.

Hydra n. s. [from ἦδρα; A monster with many heads slain by Hercules; whence any multiplicity of evils is termed a hydra.

New rebells raise their Hydra heads, and the false North displays them by many her serpent wings. Milts.

More formidable hydra stands within.

Who seizes with iron teeth severely grin.

Dyre.

Dyre.

The hydra of the many-head'd hissing crew. Dryd.

HYDROGOGES n. s. [ἐχυρίδος and ἠδατης; hydrogenes, Fr.] Such medicines as occasion the discharge of watery humour, which is generally the case of the stronger catharticks, because they shake most forcibly the bowels and their appendages.

Quintus.

HYDRAULICAL adj. [from hydro, water.

HYDRAULICK. n. Relating to the conveyance of water through pipes.

Among the engines in which the air is useful, pumps may be accounted, and other hydraulic engines.

Derham.

We have employed a virtuous to make an hydrastick engine, in which a chemical liquid, resembles blood, is driven through elastic channels.

Arabnath and Pope.

HYDRAULICKS n. s. [ἐχυρίδος and ἠδατης; a pipe. The science of convey water through pipes or conduits.

HYDROCEL. n. s. [ἐχύρδος; hydrocele, Fr.] A watery rupture.

HYDROCEPHALUS n. s. [ἐχυρίδος and ἠδατης; A dropsy in the head.

A hydrasalaphus, or dropsy of the head, is only incurable when the serum is extravasated into the ventricles of the brain.

Arabnath on Dict.

HYDROGRAPHER n. s. [ἐχυρίδος and γραφεῖν; hydrographer, Fr.] One who draws maps of the sea.

It may be drawn from the writings of our hydrographer. Boyle.

HYDROGRAPHY n. s. [ἐχυρίδος and γραφεῖν; hydrographie, Fr.] Description of the watery part of the terraqueous globe.

HYDROMANCY n. s. [ἐχυρίδος and μαντεία; hydromancy, Fr.] Prediction by water.

Divination was invented by the Persians; there are four kinds of divination; hydromancy, pyromancy, aeromancy, and geomancy.

Aristotle.

HYDROMEL n. s. [ἐχυρίδος and μελίς; hydromel, Fr.] Honey and water.

Hydromel is a drink prepared of honey, being one of the most pleasant and universal drinks the northern part of Europe affords, as well as one of the most ancient.

Martineau.

In fever the aliments prescribed by the Persians were water and a syrup of barley: hydromel, that is, honey and water, there was no tendency to an ochrism.

Arabnath.

HYDROMETER n. s. [ἐχυρίδος and μέτρον; An instrument to measure the extent or profundity of water.

HYDROMETRY n. s. [ἐχυρίδος and μέτρον; The act of measuring the extent of water.

HYDROPHOBIA n. s. [ἐχυρίδος and ποικίλης; hydropathic, Fr.] Drear of water.

Among those diseases which prevail in the body, the hydropathy, or dread of water, is the most remarkable.

Quintus.

HYDROPECK n. s. [ἐχυρίδος; Hydropick.

Parting over water.

HYM n. s. A species of dog; unless it is by mistake for Lym.

Arvanit, you cur.

Mastiff, greyhound, mongrel grin.

Bull-dog, brace or lyms; Or bull-dog-like, or true syph.

Tom will make him weep and wail.

Shakespeare.

HYMEN n. s. [εχύμη; The god of marriage.

HYMENAL n. s. [εχύμης; A marriage.

HYMENEAN n. s. [ρυθμμ]; ringsong.

And heavily choirs in the same song sung. Milton.

For her she was so as to the bridal ring.

For her white virgin hymeneal singer. Pope.

HYMN. n. s. [εχύμη; Pertainning to marriage.

HYMNIS n. s. [εχυμίνη; ringsong.

The authors and poets aren't the mortal voice.

A signal of her hymeneal choice. Pope's Ode,
HYMN. n. s. [hymne, Fr. hymne.] An encomiastic song, or song of adoration to some superior being.

As I lean in the praise of my own name,
So now in honour of thy mother dear,
An honourable hymn I should frame. Spencer.

Our souls must have a touch of heavenly change;
Our bridal flow'rs in love to备案. Shak.

When steel grows
Soft as a parallel's sole, let hymn be maded
An overture for the war. Shakesp. Coriolanus.

The e is a hymn song: but the subject of it is always the praises of Adam, and Noah and Abraham, concluding ever with a thanksgiving for e the nativity of our Saviour. Bacon.

Fare you well, sweet shades,
Where angels first should practise hymns, and string their tuneful harps, when they to Heaven would ascend. Dryden.

To HYMN, n. a. [hymn.] To praise in song: to worship with hymns.
Whose business were to serve the Lord
High up in heav'n, with songs to hymn his throne. Swift.

To HYMN, n. r. To sing songs of adoration.
Their touch'd their golden harps, and hymning Eain'd
God and his works. Milton.

He had not left alive this patient saint,
This anvil of affronts, but sent him hence,
To hold a peaceful branch of palm above,
And hymn the God of all Love. Dryden.

Hymn or HYMN. adj. [hymn-] Relating to hymns.

He rocks the air, and breaks the hymnick notes
In birds, their carollers, orichristic throats;
Which, if they did not die, might seem to be
A tenth rank in the heavenly hierarchy. Donne.

To HYP., r. a. [barbarously contracted from hypochondriack.] To make melancholy; to dispirit.

I have been the last degree hypp'd since I saw you. Spectator.

Fürriage. n. s. [fýrýrjg. a.] A figure by which words change their cases with each other.

Hyper. n. s. [A word barbarously cur- HYP. n. s. [hymne, Fr. hymne.] An encomiastic song, or song of adoration to some superior being.

As I lean in the praise of my own name,
So now in honour of thy mother dear,
An honourable hymn I should frame. Spencer.

Our souls must have a touch of heavenly change;
Our bridal flow'rs in love to备案. Shak.

When steel grows
Soft as a parallel's sole, let hymn be maded
An overture for the war. Shakesp. Coriolanus.

The e is a hymn song: but the subject of it is always the praises of Adam, and Noah and Abraham, concluding ever with a thanksgiving for e the nativity of our Saviour. Bacon.

Fare you well, sweet shades,
Where angels first should practise hymns, and string their tuneful harps, when they to Heaven would ascend. Dryden.

To HYMN, n. a. [hymn.] To praise in song: to worship with hymns.
Whose business were to serve the Lord
High up in heav'n, with songs to hymn his throne. Swift.

To HYMN, n. r. To sing songs of adoration.
Their touch'd their golden harps, and hymning Eain'd
God and his works. Milton.

He had not left alive this patient saint,
This anvil of affronts, but sent him hence,
To hold a peaceful branch of palm above,
And hymn the God of all Love. Dryden.

Hymn or HYMN. adj. [hymn-] Relating to hymns.

He rocks the air, and breaks the hymnick notes
In birds, their carollers, orichristic throats;
Which, if they did not die, might seem to be
A tenth rank in the heavenly hierarchy. Donne.

To HYP., r. a. [barbarously contracted from hypochondriack.] To make melancholy; to dispirit.

I have been the last degree hypp'd since I saw you. Spectator.

Fürriage. n. s. [fýrýrjg. a.] A figure by which words change their cases with each other.

Hyper. n. s. [A word barbarously cur- HYP. n. s. [hymne, Fr. hymne.] An encomiastic song, or song of adoration to some superior being.

As I lean in the praise of my own name,
So now in honour of thy mother dear,
An honourable hymn I should frame. Spencer.

Our souls must have a touch of heavenly change;
Our bridal flow'rs in love to备案. Shak.

When steel grows
Soft as a parallel's sole, let hymn be maded
An overture for the war. Shakesp. Coriolanus.

The e is a hymn song: but the subject of it is always the praises of Adam, and Noah and Abraham, concluding ever with a thanksgiving for e the nativity of our Saviour. Bacon.

Fare you well, sweet shades,
Where angels first should practise hymns, and string their tuneful harps, when they to Heaven would ascend. Dryden.

To HYMN, n. a. [hymn.] To praise in song: to worship with hymns.
Whose business were to serve the Lord
High up in heav'n, with songs to hymn his throne. Swift.

To HYMN, n. r. To sing songs of adoration.
Their touch'd their golden harps, and hymning Eain'd
God and his works. Milton.

He had not left alive this patient saint,
This anvil of affronts, but sent him hence,
To hold a peaceful branch of palm above,
And hymn the God of all Love. Dryden.

Hymn or HYMN. adj. [hymn-] Relating to hymns.

He rocks the air, and breaks the hymnick notes
In birds, their carollers, orichristic throats;
Which, if they did not die, might seem to be
A tenth rank in the heavenly hierarchy. Donne.

To HYP., r. a. [barbarously contracted from hypochondriack.] To make melancholy; to dispirit.

I have been the last degree hypp'd since I saw you. Spectator.

Fürriage. n. s. [fýrýrjg. a.] A figure by which words change their cases with each other.

Hyper. n. s. [A word barbarously cur-
HYP

HYPOGASTRIAC. adj. [hypogastric, Fr. éto and γαστής.] Seated in the lower part of the belly.

The swelling we supposed to rise from an effusion of serum through all the hypogastric arteries.

Vartman.

HYPOGASTRUM. n. s. [éto and γαστής.] A name which the ancient authors gave to all the parts of a building that were under ground, as cellars and vaults. Harris.

HYPOSTASIS. n. s. [hypostasis, Fr. époque.] A distinct or definite system of ideas. Probably.

The system of Locke is the most perfect, and the system of Bolingbroke, the most perfect. J. S. Mill.

HYPOSTATIC. adj. [hypostatic, Fr. from hypostasis.] Constitutive; constituent as distinct ingredients.

Let us consider the nature of these two systems, and see what is the difference between them.

1. Distinct substance.
2. Personality. A term used in the doctrine of the Holy Trinity. The essence of our Lord Jesus Christ, referring to the several hypostases in the one eternal, indivisible, divine nature, and the eternity of the soul's generation, and its co-eternity and consubstantiality with the Father, are assertions equivalent to those comprised in the ancient Greek phrase.

Hammond.

HYPOSTOTICAL. adj. [hypostotique, Fr. from hypostasis.]

1. Constitutive; constituent as distinct ingredients.
2. Personal; distinctly personal.

HYPOTHENUSE. n. s. [hypotenuse, Fr. éto et vertex.] The line that subtends the right angle of a right-angled triangle; the subtense.

The square of the hypotenuse in a right-angled triangle is equal to the squares of the two other sides.

Locke.

HYPOTHESIS. n. s. [hypothesis, Fr. hyposè.] A supposition; a system formed upon some principle not proved.

The mind casts and turns itself repeatedly from one thing to another, till it has all the ends of long and various hypothesis together; sees how one part coheres with another, and so cleans off all the apparent contradictions that seemed to lie cross, and make the whole unintelligible.

South.

HYPOTHESEIALLY. adj. [hypothesique, Fr. from hypothesis.]

Including a supposition; conditional.

Conditional to hypothesis prepositions are those whose parts are united by the conditional particle if; as, if the sun be fixed, the earth must move.

Watts.

HYPOTHESEIALLY. adv. [from hypothetical.]

Upon supposition; conditionally.

HYS

The only part liable to imputation is calling her a goddes; yet this is proposed with modesty and humility. Brome.

HYST.

Are all from the Saxon hyst, hurst. Gibson.

HYSTERS. n. s. [hystopy, hyppopy, Lat.]

A verticillate plant.

It hath been a great dispute, whether the hypsy commonly known is the same which is mentioned in Scripture. Miller.

The hypsy of Solomon cannot be well conceived to be our common hypsy; for that is not the least of vegetables observed to grow upon walls; but rather some kind of capillaries, which only grow upon walls and stone places. Broun.

HYSTERIC. f. [hysterique, Fr. from hypostasis.]

1. Troubled with fits; disordered in the regions of the womb.

In hysterics women the rarity of symptoms doth strike an astonishment into spectators Harris.

Many hysterical women are sensible of wind passing from the womb. Fower on the Hysteria.

2. Proceeding from disorders in the womb.

Parent of vapours, and of female wit, who cares for hysterical or poetic fit. Pope.

This terrible scene made too violent an impression upon a woman in her condition, and threw her into a strong hysterick fit. Addison and Pope.

HYSTERICKS. n. s. [hysterics.] Fits of women, supposed to proceed from disorders in the womb.

JAB

JABBERER n. s. [from jabber.] One who talks inarticulately or unintelligibly.

One of the Habbawoob and les Gueux. Hudibras.

JACENT. adj. [jacens, Lat.] Lying at length.

So laid, they are more apt in swaying down to piece than in the jacent posture. Wallis Arch.

JACINTH. n. s. [for hyacinth, Jerusalem for Hirschmang.] For Hirschman.

1. The name of a flower with hyacinth.
2. A gem of a deep reddish yellow approaching to a flame colour, or the deepest amber. Woodward.

JACK. n. s. [Probably by mistake from Jacques, which in French is Jacques.]

1. The diminutive of John. Used as a general term of contempt for saucy or peltry fellows.

You will perceive that a Jack gardian cannot Oder me from my son Cordian. Shakesp.

I have in my mind a thousand raw tricks of these bragging jacks, which I will practice. Shal. Merb. of Hen.

Every Jack slave hath his belly full of fighting, and I must go up and down like a cock that nobody can match. Shakesp.

2. The name of instruments which supply the place of a boy, as an instrument to pull off boots.

Post-boys, who had frequently the common name of Jack given them, were kept to turn the spit, or to pull off their masters boots; but which
3. An engine which turns the spirit.

The excellence of a good jack are, that the jack frame be forged and filed square; that the wheels be perpendicular and strongly fixed on the squares of the spindle, so that the teeth be well cut, and with smooth edges; and that the teeth of the worm-wheel fall evenly into the groove of the worm.

The ordinary jacks, used for roasting meat, commonly consist but of three wheels. Wilikins.

A cookmaid, by the fall of a jack weight upon her head, was beaten down, S. M. S. Surgery.

Some strain in rhyme; the muses on their racks scream, like the windings of ten thousand jacks.

Pope.

4. A young pike.

No fish will thrive in a pond where reach or gudgeons are, except jacks. Mortimer's Husbandry.

5. [Jacque, Fr. ] A coat of mail.

The residue were on foot, well furnished with jack and skull, pik, dagger, bucklers made of board, and slicing swords, broad, thin, and of an excellent temper.

Haywood.

6. A cup of waxed leather.

Dead wine, that stinks of the borage, sup.

From a foul jack, or greyson ample cup. Driesen.

7. A small bowl thrown out for a mark to the bowlers.

'Tis as he should say, that a bow, equally poised, and thrown upon a plain bowling-green, will run necessarily in a direct motion; but if it be made with a bylass, that may define it a little from a straight line, it may acquire a liberty of will, and so run spontaneously to the jack. Bentley.

8. A part of the musical instrument called a virginal.

In a virginal, as soon as ever the jack falleth, and toucheth the string, the sound ceaseth. Bacon.

9. The male of animals.

A jack ass, for a stallion, was bought for three thousand two hundred and twenty-nine pounds, three shilling and four pence. Arbuthnot on Coins.

10. A support to saw wood on. Ainsworth.

11. The colour or ensign of a ship.

Ainsworth.

12. A cunning fellow who can turn to any thing, in the following phrase.

Jack of all trades, show and sound; an inverse hurse, an exchange under ground. Cleveland.

JACK Boots. n. s. [from jack a coat of mail.] Boots which serve as armour to the legs.

A man on horseback, in his breeches and jack boots, dressed up in a comrade and a night-raft. Spectator.

Jack by the head. n. s. Erysimum.

Jack by the head is an herb that grows wild under hedges, is eaten as other sallad's are, and much used in broth. Mortimer.

Jack Pudding. n. s. [jack and pudding.] A zani; a merry andrew.

Every jack pudding will be ridiculing palpable weakheads, which they ought to cover. L'Estrange.

A buffoon is called by every nation by the name of the dish they like best: in French, une potage, and in English jack pudding. Guardian.

Jack pudding, in his party-colour'd jacket, Tussles the glove, and jokes at ev'ry packet. Gay.

Jack with a Lantern. An ignis fatuus.

Jackal'ent. n. s. [Jack in Lent, a poor starved fellow.] A simple sheepefellow.

You little jackalent, have you been true to us? — Ay, till I'm sworn. Shakesp. Merry Wives of Windsor.

Jack'el. n. s. [chacal, Fr.] A small animal supposed to marry Thursday. Vol. I.
JAGG. n. s. [from the verb.] A protuberance or denticulation.
  The teeth of a horse is divided into so many jaggs or escallops, and curiously indented round the edges.
  Tyrt. Take off all the staring straws, twigs, and jags in the hive, and make them as smooth as possible.
  Mortimer's Husbandry.
JAGGY. adj. [from Jagg.] Uneven; denticulated.
  His tongue was so jagged and uneven that he could not be understood.
  His teeth stood jaggy in three dreadful rows. Addis.
  Amidst these angles, infinitely strain'd, They joyfully leave their jaggy vails behind. Thomas.
JAGGEDNESS. n. s. [from jagged.] The state of being denticulated; unevenness.
  First draw rudely your leaves, making them plain, before you give them their veins by jaggedness.
  Peacock on Drawing.
FAIL. n. s. [grol, Fr.] A gool; a prison; a place where criminals are confined. See GAIL. It is written either way; but commonly by latter writers jail.
  Away with the doubt, to the jail with him. Shak.
  A dependant upon him paid six thousand pounds ready money, which, poor man, he liked to repeat in a song. Clarendon.
  He sigh'd and turn'd his eyes, because he knew twas but a larger jail he had in view. Dryden.
  One jail did all their criminals restrain. Which now the walls of Rome can scarce contain. Dryden.
JAILBIRD. n. s. [jail and bivd.] One who has been in a jail.
JAILER. n. s. [from jail.] A gadger; the keeper of a prison.
  Seeking many means to speak with her, and ever kept from it, as well because she shunned it, seeing and disdaining his mind, as because of her jealous jailers. Sidney
  This is a jailer, to bring forth some monstrous malefactor. Shak.
  His pow'r to hollow caverns is confin'd.
  There let him reign, the jailer of the wind. Withrow.
  Commanding his breathing subjects call, And hearken hungrily in his empty hall. Dryden.
  Palsam, the prisoner knight, Reckless for woe, arose before the light, And, with his jailer's leaves, deign'd to thieve the air more westerly than the damp beneath. Dryden.
JAKES. n. s. [Of uncertain etymology.]
  A house of office.
  I will tread this inhabited vail into murder, and daub the walls of jake with him. Shak.
  Their sandil avoak rakes in excrements, and hires the very jakes. Dryden.
  Some have listed the very jakes for papers left there by men of wet. Swift.
JALAP. n. s. [jalap, Fr. jalapiun, low Lat.] Jalap is a firm and solid root, of a wrinkled surface, and generally cut into slices, hard to break: of a faint smell, and of an acrid and nauseous taste. It had its name jalapun, or jalapun, from Xalapa, a town in New Spain, in the vicinity of which it was discovered; though it is now principally brought from the Madeiras. It is an excellent purgative where serious humours are to be evacuated.
  Hill's Med. Mat.
JAM. n. s. [I know not whence derived.]
  A conserve of fruits boiled with sugar and water.
JAMB. n. s. [jambe, Fr. a leg.] Any supporter on either side, as the posts of a door.
  No fighter is to be laid within twelve inches of the backside of the chimneyc jamb. Mason.
JAMBICK. n. s. [iambique, Fr. iambicus, Lat.] Verses composed of iambick feet, or a short and long syllable alternately; used originally in satire, therefore taken for satire.
  In thy felonious heart though venom lies, It does but touch thy Irish pen, and dies: Thy gentle calls us not to purchase fame. In keen iambicks, but full anagram. Dryden.
  To Jangle. v. n. [jangler, Fr. Skinner.] To alternate; to quarrel; to bicker in words. Now a low word. Good wits will be jangling but, gentlest agree, This civil war of words was much better old.
  On Navarre and his badge them. Shak.
  So far am I glad it did so sort, And this their jangling I esteem a sport. Shak.
  There is no error which hath not some appearance of probability resembling truth, when who, men who study to be singular, find out, straining reason, they then publish to the world matter of contention and jangling. Raleigh.
  To Jangle. v. a. To make to sound untuneably.
  Now see that noble and that sovereign reason, Like sweet bells jangled out of tune and harde. Shak. Hamlet.
  Eve Gotike forms were known in Greece,
  And in our wick'd rhymes had jangled their fantastick chimes. Prior.
JANGLER. n. s. [from the verb.] A wrangling, chattering, noisy fellow.
  A jangling murmuring in a noisy court. As when a torrent rolls with rapid race, the flood, contained in a scanty space, roars horrible. Dryden's Aureid.
JAR. n. s. [from the verb.]
  1. A kind of rattling vibration of sound.
    In r, the tongue is held still at its whole length, by the force of the muscles; so as when the impulse of breath strikes upon the end of the tongue, where it finds passage, it shakes and agitates the whole tongue, whereby the sound is affected with a trembling.
    Holder's Elements of Speech.
  2. Clash of interests or opinions; discord; debate.
    He maketh war, he maketh peace again, And yet his peace is but continual jar:
    Noble men, they with the same subject are! Fairy Q.
    What's the matter, my brother, since we passed are Unto this point, we will appease our jar. Hubberd.
    Force would be right; or, rather, right and wrong, Between whose endless jar justice presides, Would lose their names, and so would justice too. Shak.
  3. A state in which a door or window unfastened may strike the post; half opened.
    The clattering with dissenters, and dodging about this or that ceremony, is but like opening a few wickets, and leaving them ajar, by which so many things may pass at the same time. Swift.
    About the upper part of the jar there appeared a good number of bubbles.
    Anglo.
    He need for cooling drink preparations.
    Of virgin honey in the jars. Dryden.
    Warriors welter on the ground.
    Whilst empty jars keeping sound. Carth.
JARDIES. n. s. [Fr.] Hard callous tumours in horses, a little below the bending of the hams on the outside. This distemper in time will make the horse halt, and grow so painful as to cause him to pine away, and become light-bellied. It is
I C I

What is the joy more precious than the bark,
Because his feathers are more beautiful? Shakspe.
I am highly delighted to see the joy of the thrush
Hopping about my walks. Pope.

J A Z E L. n. s. [precious stone of an azure or blue colour.] Dick.

I C E. n. s. [f. Sax. ege, Dut.]
1. Water or other liquor made solid by cold.
You are no sooner, no,
Than is the cold of fire upon the ice,
Or ballast in the sun. Shakspe. Coriolanus.

J A V E L. n. s. (probably ias or eyas hawk.) A young hawk. Ainse.

J A S P E R. n. s. [jaspe, Fr. iaspis, Lat.] A hard stone of a bright beautiful green colour, sometimes clouded with white, found in masses of various sizes and shapes. It is capable of a very elegant polish, and is found in many parts of the East Indies, and in Egypt, Africa, Tartary, and Asia Minor. The best Jasper is usually of a greenish hue, and spotted with red, yellow, and white. Woodward. The most valuable fillers about Rome are four columns of oriental Jasper in St. Paul's chapel, and one of transparent oriental Jasper in the Vatican library. Additions on Italy.

I A T R O E P T I C K. adj. [iatroepptic, Fr. iâtre and ââtre.] That which cures by appointing.

J A Y. n. s. [from the verb.] A wandering or dirty fellow. When as time, flying with wings swift, Expired the term that those two Javels Should tender up a reckoning of their travels. Hub. Sir Thomas More, preparing himself for execution, put on his best apparel, which the lieutenant compelled him to put off again, saying, That he who should have them was but a Javel. What, says Sir Thomas, shall I account him a Javel, who this day doth not receive a benefit from me? More.

J A V E L I N. n. s. [javeline, Fr.] A spear or half pike, which anciently was used either by foot or horse. It had an iron head pointed.

J A W. n. s. [from the verb.] The bone of the mouth in which the teeth are fixed.

JAY, n. s. [named from his cry, Skinner.] A bird; piaglanadavia. Two sharp winged sheen, Deck'd with div'ral plumes, like painted jays, Were fixed at his back, to cut his airy ways. Fair. We'll use this unharmful humility, this gross virtue; we'll teach him to know trifles from yoke. Shakspe.

J A U R G O N. n. s. [jargon, Fr. gericoage, Spanish.] Unintelligible talk; gibberish; gibberish.

J A U T I N I S. n. s. [from jauti, from gentileia, gentile.] A certain stiffness in my limbs entirely destroyed a Jautiness of the body, which I was once master of. Addison.

J A V E L I N. n. s. [javeline, Fr.] Its point is so indurated it cannot be stained with vinegar, nor will a toothpick stain it.

J A U N D I C E. n. s. [jaundice, jaunty yellow, Fr.] A distemper from obstructions of the glands of the liver, which prevents the gall being duly separated by them from the blood; and sometimes, in hard drinkers, they are so indurated as never after to be opened, and straiten the motion of the blood so much through that viscous, as to make it divert with a force great enough into the gastric arteries, which go off from the hepatic, to spread through them, and drain into the stomach; so that vomiting of blood, in this distemper, is a fatal symptom. Quin.

J A V A. n. s. [from Java, name of a large island of the East Indies. The name is mentioned in the Bible.] A kind of nuts. Watts.

J A W. n. s. [from the verb.] A ramble; flight; excursion; It is commonly used ludicrously, but solemnly by Milton.

J A V I N Y. n. s. [from javin, or jauity, corrupted from gentile, Fr. See Janny.] Airyness; flutter; gentle-ness.

JAY. n. s. [from the verb.] When the eagle, or JAY, is at the instigation of his mates, or when he does not mean to hoe, he is said to be a JAY, and is a term of reproach. This term is used of a person that is not disposed to work. Juvenal.

J A Y. n. s. [from the verb.] When the eagle, or JAY, is at the instigation of his mates, or when he does not mean to hoe, he is said to be a JAY, and is a term of reproach. This term is used of a person that is not disposed to work. Juvenal.
IDEAL. adj. [from ideal.] Intellectually; mentally.
A transmission is made materially from one part, and ideally from every one. Brown's V. Err.
IDENTICAL. adj. [identique, Fr.] The same; implying the same thing; consisting of the same idea.
The heart's "idéal" heard you know
The same numerically true.
Some being, though infinitely above our finite conceptions, must have had an identical, invincible continuance from all eternity, which being is no other than God. Butler's Sermons.

IDEALITY. n. s. [identi, Fr. idée, and ðwys.] The doctrine of picture or representation.

ICONOGRAPHY. n. s. [iconographie, Fr. idée, and ðwys.] A picture or representation.

ICONOCLAST. n. s. [Tithonus, Fr. ðwysto.] A breaker of images.

IDEOLOGY. n. s. [ideologie, Fr. idée, and ðwys.] The doctrine of picture or representation.

ICTERICAL. n. s. [icterique, Fr. ieterum, Lat.]
1. Afflicted with the jaundice.
2. Cold; free from passion.

IDEA. n. s. [idée, Fr. îdha.] Mental image.
Whatever the mind perceives in itself, or is the image of, or of the object, perception, thought, or understanding that I call a idea.

IDEALITY. n. s. [identi, Fr. idée, and ðwys.] Peculiar in constitution.

IDIOMATIC. adj. [from idioms] Peculiar in constitution.

IDIOM. n. s. [idiooeme, Fr. ido, and ðwys.] A mode of speaking peculiar to a language or dialect; the particular cast of a tongue; a phrase, phraseology.

IDIOPATHY. n. s. [idiopathie, Fr. idée, and ðwys.] A primary disease that neither depends on nor proceeds from another.

IDIOSYNCRASY. n. s. [idiocynes, Fr. idio, and ðwys.] A peculiar temper or disposition of body not common to another.

IDIOT. n. s. [idiote, Fr. idiot, Lat. idiotè.] A fool; a natural; a changeling: one without the powers of reason.

IDLÉ. adj. [îbel, Sax.]
1. Lazy; averse from labour.
2. Not engaged; trifling; trifling leisure.
3. Unactive; not employed.

IDLY. adv. [îbel, Sax.]
Of idle, full of sound and fury, Signifying nothing.
Shakep, Marthet.

IDEALISM. n. s. [idéisme, Fr. idée, and ðwys.] 1. Peculiarity of expression; mode of expression peculiar to a language.
Scholars sometimes in common speech, or writing, in their native language, give terminations and idiomatism suitable to their native language unto words newly invented.

IDEALITY. n. s. [idéaliti, Fr. idée, and ðwys.] The doctrine of picture or representation.

IDEA. n. s. [idée, Fr. îdha.] Mental image.
Whatever the mind perceives in itself, or is the image of, or of the object, perception, thought, or understanding that I call a idea.

IDEALITY. n. s. [identi, Fr. idée, and ðwys.] The doctrine of picture or representation.

IDEAL. adj. [from ideal.] Intellectually; mentally.
A transmission is made materially from one part, and ideally from every one. Brown's V. Err.
IDENTICAL. adj. [identique, Fr.] The same; implying the same thing; consisting of the same idea.
The heart's "idéal" heard you know
The same numerically true.
Some being, though infinitely above our finite conceptions, must have had an identical, invincible continuance from all eternity, which being is no other than God. Butler's Sermons.

IDEALITY. n. s. [identi, Fr. idée, and ðwys.] The doctrine of picture or representation.

ICONOGRAPHY. n. s. [iconographie, Fr. idée, and ðwys.] A picture or representation.

ICONOCLAST. n. s. [Tithonus, Fr. ðwysto.] A breaker of images.

IDEOLOGY. n. s. [ideologie, Fr. idée, and ðwys.] The doctrine of picture or representation.

ICTERICAL. n. s. [icterique, Fr. ieterum, Lat.]
1. Afflicted with the jaundice.
2. Cold; free from passion.

IDEA. n. s. [idée, Fr. îdha.] Mental image.
Whatever the mind perceives in itself, or is the image of, or of the object, perception, thought, or understanding that I call a idea.

IDEALITY. n. s. [identi, Fr. idée, and ðwys.] Peculiar in constitution.

IDIOMATIC. adj. [from idioms] Peculiar in constitution.

IDIOM. n. s. [idiooeme, Fr. ido, and ðwys.] A mode of speaking peculiar to a language or dialect; the particular cast of a tongue; a phrase, phraseology.

IDIOPATHY. n. s. [idiopathie, Fr. idée, and ðwys.] A primary disease that neither depends on nor proceeds from another.

IDIOSYNCRASY. n. s. [idiocynes, Fr. idio, and ðwys.] A peculiar temper or disposition of body not common to another.

IDIOT. n. s. [idiote, Fr. idiot, Lat. idiotè.] A fool; a natural; a changeling: one without the powers of reason.

IDLÉ. adj. [îbel, Sax.]
1. Lazy; averse from labour.
2. Not engaged; trifling; trifling leisure.
3. Unactive; not employed.

IDLY. adv. [îbel, Sax.]
Of idle, full of sound and fury, Signifying nothing.
Shakep, Marthet.

IDEALISM. n. s. [idéisme, Fr. idée, and ðwys.] 1. Peculiarity of expression; mode of expression peculiar to a language.
Scholars sometimes in common speech, or writing, in their native language, give terminations and idiomatism suitable to their native language unto words newly invented.

IDEALITY. n. s. [idéaliti, Fr. idée, and ðwys.] The doctrine of picture or representation.
I DO

Let this and other allegations, suitable unto it, cease to bark any longer idly against the truth, the course and passage whereof it is not in them to hinder.

I DOL. n.s. [idole, Fr. idole; idolatum, Lat.]

1. An image worshiped as God. They did sacrifice upon the idol altar, which was upon the altar of God. 1 Mac. i. 99. A saton from one faithful man to a spring, Him on this side Euphrates yet retiring, Bred up in idol worship. Milton's Paradise Lost. The apostle is tern again against the gnostics who joined in the idol feasts, and whom he therefore accuses of participating of the idol god. Attabury.

3. An image. Never did art so well with nature strive, Nor ever idol seen 'd so much alive; So like the man, so golden to the sight; So base within, so counterfeit and light. Dryden.

5. One loved or honoured to adoration. He's honour'd and lov'd by all.

The soldier's god, and people's idol. Denham's Sophy.

IDO'LATRY, n. a. [from idol.] To worship idols. Answered.

IDO'LATROUS, adj. [from idolatry.] Tending to idolatry; comprising idolatry, or the worship of false gods.

Neither may the pictures of our Saviour, the apostles, and martyrs of the church, be drawn to an idolatrous use, or be set up in churches to be worshipped. Peacham on Drawing.

IDO'LATROUSLY, adv. [from idolatrous.] In an idolatrous manner.

Not therefore whatsoever idolaters have either thought or done; but let whatsoever they have either thought or done idolatrously, be so farre abhorred. Hooker.

IDO'LATRY. n.s. [idolatric, Fr. idolatria, Lat.] The worship of images; the worship of any thing as God which is not God. Thou shalt he worship'd, kiss'd, lov'd, and ador'd; And, were there sense in his idolatry. My substance should be staint in thy stead. Shak. Idolatry is not only an accounting or worshipping that for which is not God, but it is also a worshiping of the true God in a way unsuitable to his nature; and particularly by the necation of images and corporal resemblances. Suth. The gods were venerated by many judgments or blessings, according as they promoted idolatry, or the worship of the true God. Addison's Spectator.

IDO'LIST. n.s. [from idol.] A worshipper of images. A poetical word.

JEA

I to God have brought
Dishonour, obloquy, and up'd the mouths
Of idolats and atheists.

Milton's Agonies.

To IDOLIZE, v.a. [from idol.] To love or reverence to adoration.

Those who are generous, humble, just, and wise, Who not their gold, nor themselves idolized.

Dryden.

Parties, with the greatest violation of Christian unity, denominate themselves, not from the grand author and finisher of our faith, but from the first broacher of their idolatrous opinions. Decay of Parties.

IDONEOUS, adj. [idoneus, Lat.] Fit; proper; convenient; adequate. You entangle, and so fix their salutary part, making them corne some idolatrous body. Bowd. An ecclesiastical benefice is sometimes void de jure & facto, and then it ought to be conferred on an idolatrous person. Agilp.
JEALOUSY. adj. [from jealous.] Suspicious; enviously; with suspicious fear, vigilance, or rivalry.

JEALOUSY. n.s. [from jealous.] The state of being jealous; rivalry; suspicion; suspicious vigilance.

Jealousy is a feeling of fear, as well as an expression of mistrust and suspicion.

JEALOUSIES. n.s. [from jealous.]

2. Suspicious fear.

E
e from but kind To One Bacon.

Hangry

from Prior.
Pope's Suspicions. See Hacon's Suspicions.

JENNET. n.s. [See Gennet.] A Spanish horse.

The Spanish king presents a jenette, to show his love.

Prior.

To JEOPARD. r.a. [See JEOPARDY.] To hazard; to put in danger. Obsolete.

He had been accused of Judaism, and did boldly jeopardise his body and life for the religion of the Jews.

2 Mac.

JEOPARDOUS. adj. [from jeopardy.] Hazardous; dangerous.

JEOPARDY. n.s. [This word is supposed to be derived from j' ai perdu, or je perdu. Skinner and Janius.] Hazard; danger; peril. A word not now in use.

And would ye not fear fellowship? Expect,

Myself caused thee to suffer; for myself,

And I am here; though I am not here, to keep your wavering company.

In this adventure's chanceful jeopardy. Hubbard.

Thy rage shall burn thee up, and thou shalt turn

To ashes ere thy blood shall quench that fire.

To look thyself, to art in jeopardy. Shakespeare.

We may impute to all excellencies in composition kind of poverty, or at least a casuality or jeopardy. Bacon.

To JEER. r.a. [See jeccon.] To strike with scoffs.

My children abroad are driven to disrepute, for fear of being jeered. Horace's Essay on Tears.

JEER. n.s. [from the verb.] Scoff; taunt; biting jest; flout; jibe; mock.

Midas, expos'd to all their jeers,

He that should say what it would be here,

She may be handsome, young, and rich;

But none will turn her for a witch.

Swift.

JEERER. n.s. [from jcer.] A scoffer; a scurril; a mocker.

JEERINGLY. adj. [from jering.] Scornfully; contemptuously; in mock; in scoff.

He jeeringly demanded, whether the sonorous rays were refractions: Derham.

JEGET. n.s. A kind of sausage.

Ainsworth.

JEJUNE. adj. [jejusus. Lat.]

1. Wanting; empty; vacant.

God is the only substance which hath nothing in it volatile, and yet melchett without much difficulty; the melting sheweth that it is not jejune, or scarce in spirit.

Bacon.

2. Hungry; not satisfied.

In gross and turbid streams there might be contained nutriment, and not in jejune or limpid water.

3. Dry; unadulterating; deficient in matter.

You may look upon an enquiry made up of mere narratives, as somewhat jejune. Bayle.

JEJUNENESS. n.s. [From jejune.]

1. Penury; poverty.

Causes of creation are, the even spreading both parts, and the jejuneness, or extreme commination of spirits.

Bacon.

2. Dryness; want of matter that can engage the attention.

JEKKED. adj. [See GELLY.] Glutinous; brought to a state of viscosity.

The jelly that slips

The jellied philtre of her lips.

Clarendon.

JELLY. n.s. [gelatinum, Lat.] See GELLY, which is the proper orthography.

3. Any thing brought to a state of glutinosity and viscosity.
J E W

1. Jet is a beautiful fossil, of a firm and even structure, and a smooth surface; found in masses, seldom of a great size, lodged in clay; of a fine deep black, having a grain resembling that of wood. It is confounded with coal. Coal, which has no grain, and is extremely hard; and the jet is but moderately so.

Hill.

Black,orsooth; coal-black, as jet. Shakesp. There is more difference between the flesh and bone, than between jet and ivory. Shakesp. The bottom clear.

Now laid with many a set.

Of seed pearl, erie she bath’d her there.

Was known as black as jet. Drayton.

One of us in glass is set.

One of us you’ll find in jet. Sorjfi.

Under flowing jet.

Th e neck slightly slanted. Thomson’s Summer.

2. [Jet, Fr.] A spout or shower of water.

Prodigious ’tis, that one attractive ray
Should this way bend, the next an adverse way?

For should thy unseen magnetick jets descend
All the same way, they could not gain their end.

Blackmore.

Thus the small jet, which hasty hands unlock,

Spruts in the gard’ner’s eyes who turns the cock.

Pope.

Whatever orchard unrobbed escapes,

Or pullet dare walk in their jet.

To Jet. e. n. [jetter, Fr.]

1. To shoot forward; to shoot out; to intrude; to jet out.

Think you not how dangerous

It is to jet upon a prince’s right? Shakesp.

2. To strut; to agitate the body by a proud gait.

Contemplation makes a rare turkey-cock of him; how he tetter’d and advanced pinches, Shakesp.

3. To jolt; to be shaken. [jetter, Fr.]

Upon the jettling of a back-yap coach she was thrown out of the hinder seat against a bar of iron in the forepart. Whimborne.

Jet’sam.

n. s. [jetter, Fr.] Goods or Jetson. other things which, having been cast over board in a storm, or after shipwreck, are thrown upon the shore, and belong to the lord admiralty. Bailey.

Jetty. adj. [from jet.]

1. Made of jet.

2. Black as jet.

The people about Capo Negro, Cehala, and Madagascar, are of a jet black. Brown’s Volc. Err. Her hair Adown her shoulders loosely lay displayed,

And in her jetty curls ten thousand Cupids play’d.

Prior.

Nigrina black, and Merdantane brown,

Vied for his love in jetty bow’rs below. Pope.

JEWEL. n. s. [joyeux, Fr. jucer et, Dut.]

1. Any ornament of great value, used commonly as such are adorned with precious stones.

Here wear this jewel! ‘tis my picture. Shakesp.

They found him dead, and cast into the streets. An empty casket, where the jewel, life,

By some damned hand was robb’d and ta’en away. Shakesp.

The pleasure of the religious man is an endurable pleasure, such an one as he carries about in his bosom, without alarming either the eye or envy of the world. If a man putting all his pleasures into this one, is like a server putting all his goods into one jewel. South.

2. A precious stone; a gem.

Jewels to taste, rich and precious stones, Stol’n by my daughter! Shakesp. Merck, of Venice.

Proft fame’s imperial seat

With jewels blaz’d, magnificently great. Pope.

3. A name of funniness; an appellation of tender regard.

Ted for ever to your sisters.

Ye jehut of our father, with what’d eyes Cordelia leaves you. Shakesp. King Lear.

JEWEL-HOUSE, or Office. n. s. The place where the regal ornaments are repository.

The king has made him master of the jewel-house.

Shakesp.

JEWELLER. n. s. [from jetel.]

One who trafficks in precious stones.

These grains were as light dice as if they had been made byicens.

Boyle.

The price of the market, to a jeweller in his trade is one thing; but the intrinseck value of a thing to a man of state, is another. Le Grangre.

I will turn jeweller: I shall then deal in diamonds, and all sorts of rich stones. Addison.

JEW’S-EARS, n. s. [from the resemblance of the human ear. Skinner]

A fungus, tough and thin; and naturally, while growing, of a rumppled figure, like a flat and variously colored cup; from an inch or two inches in length, and about two thirds of its length in breadth. Its sides in many places run into the hollow, so as to represent in it ridges like those of the human ear. It generally grows on the lower parts of the trunks of elder-trees decaying. The common people cure themselves of sore throats with a decoction of it in milk.

Hill’s Mat. Med.

An herb called jen’s ear grown upon the lower parts of elder, and sometimes ashes; in warm water, it swells, and opens externally. Bacon.

JEW’S-HARP. n. s. A kind of musical instrument held between the teeth, which gives a sound by the motion of a broad spring of iron, which, being struck by the hand, plays against the breath.

JEW’S-MALLOW, n. s. [corchorus, Lat.]

Ranwolff says it is sown in great plenty about Aleppa as a pot-herb, the Jews boiling the leaves of this plant to eat with their meat.

Miller.

JEW’S-STONE, n. s. The elevated spine, a large veined shaped sea-urchin, perforated by long lying in the earth. It is of a regular figure, oblong and rounded, swelling in the middle, and gradually tapering; about three quarters of an inch in length, and half an inch in diameter; ridged and furrowed alternately, in a longitudinal direction; and its colour is a pale dusky grey, with a faint cast of dusky reddishness. It is found in Syria. Hill’s Mat. Med.

If, conjunction. [Xep, Sax.]

1. Suppose it be so, or it were so, that.

Hypothetical particle.

Absolute approbation, without any caution.

Qualifications, is or is not. Hooker.

If that rebellion

Came like it in base and abject routs;

Say, if dam’d communion sopp’r’d

In his true, native, and most proper shape,

You, reverend father, and these noble lords,

Had not been there.

Shakesp. Henry IV.

If they have done this deed, my noble lord.

—If ’tis talk’d too much of; is his art a traitor.

Shakesp.

The strait of all things, because we can discern of all things, Malarchute makes a proof that they are present to our minds; and if they are present, the knowledge of them, but the presence of God, who contains them all. Locke.

This insufficiency upon supposition, amounts to this, that if a thing be true, it is impossible to be false.

IGN.

Tilottam.

All of them supposed the apostle to have allowed their own actions was to be good; if so there were no resurrection.

Atterbury.

Telephone, that oft hast heard my prayer.

And, if Oedipus deserve thy care, Pope’s Statius.

2. Whether or no.

Uncertain of by augury, or chance;

But by this easy rise they all advance. Dryden.

She doubts if two and two make four:

It can’t be; may be; and it must;

To which of these most Alma trust?

Dryad, further yet they make her go,

Is doubting if she doubts or no. Prior.

3. Allowing that; suppose it be granted that.

Such mechanical circumstances, if I may so call them, were not necessary to the experiments. Boyle.

IGNEOUS. adj. [ignous, Lat.] Fiery; containing fire; emitting fire; having the nature of fire.

That the fire burns by heat, leaves us still ignirant of the immediate way of ignis solutions.

Ganthelet Scipio’s.

IGNITENT. adj. [ignis, and potens, Lat.] Presiding over fire.

Vulcan is called the pow’r ignitent. Pope.

IGNIS FATUUS. n. s. [Lat.] Will with the wisp; Jack with the lantern.

Vapours arising from putrid waters are usually called ignis fatuus. Guizot’s Olympe.

To IGNITE. v. a. [from ignis fire, Lat.]

To kindle; to set on fire. A chemical term.

Take good firm chalk, ignite it is a crucible, and then powder it. Grecce’s Museum.

IGNITION. n. s. [ignition, Fr. from ignite.] The act of kindling, or of setting on fire.

The laboratory stirs the kindled nitre, that the ignition might be presently communicated. Boyle.

These black circular flakes we see on dishes, and other turned vessels of wood, are the effects of ignition, by the pressure of an edged stick upon the vessel turned nimbly in the lathe. Ray.

IGNITIBLE. adj. [from ignis.] Inflammable; capable of being set on fire. Not in use.

Such bodies only strike fire which have sulphur or ignitible parts. Brown’s Vulgar Errors.

IGNIVOMOUS. adj. [ignivomus, Lat.] Vomiting fire.

Vulcanos and ignivomious mountains are some of the extremest shocks of the globe. Derham.

IGNOBLE. adj. [ignoble, Fr. ignobili, Lat.]

1. Mean of birth; not noble; not of illustrious race.

As when in tumults rise’t ignoble crowd,

Mad are their mothers, and their tongues are rude. Dryden.

2. Worthless; not deserving honour. Used of things or persons.

The noble isle doth want her proper limbs;

Her royal stock graft with ignoble plants. Shakesp.

IGNORANT. adv. [from ignorant, Lat.] Ignorniously; meekly; dishonourably; reproachful;

disgracefully.

To these, that sober race of men, whose lives

Religious, titled them the sons of God.

Shall yield up all their virtues, all their fame

Ignobly! Milton’s Paradise Lost.

Heir, over-match’d in height; in heaps they lie;

There scatter’d o’er the fields ignobly figg’d. Dryden.

IGNOMINIOUS. adj. [ignominie, Fr. ignominieus, Lat.] Mean; shameful; reproachful; dishonourable. Used both of persons and things.

They with pale fear surpris’d,

Fled ignominious.

Milton.

195
JIG  n. s. [giga, Ital. geige, Teut. a fiddle.] A light careless dance, or tune.

In such business
Action is to the eye, as the eye of the ignorant
More learned than the ear.

Shakespeare, Coriolanus.

He that doth not know those things which are
Of use for one to know, is but an ignorant man, whatever he may know besides.

Richard II.

Fools grant what 'e'er ambition craves,
And some, when ignorant, are slaves.

Popinjay.

2. Unknown; undiscovered. This is merely poetical.

If you know aught, which does behove your knowledge.

Thereof to be informed, imprison not.

In ignorant concealment.

Shakespeare, Winter's Tale.

3. Without knowledge of some particular.

Let not judges be so ignorant of their own right, as to think there is not left to them, as a principal part of their office, a wise application of laws.

Bacon's Essays.

O visions ill foreseen! Better had I Lived ignorant of a fate! so kind borne
My part of evil only.

Milton's Paradise Lost.

4. Unacquainted with. In a good sense.

Ignorant of guilt, I fear not shame.

Dryden.

5. Ignorantly made or done. Unusual.

His shipping,
Poor ignorant bumpkins, on our terrible seas
Like egg-sHELLs mov'd.

Shakespeare.

IGNORANT. adj. [ignorant, Fr. ignorance, Lat.] Capable of pardon.

DICT.

JIG. m. n. [giga, Ital. geige, Teut. a fiddle.] A light careless dance, or tune.

When Cyrus had overcome the Lydians, that were a warlike nation, instead of their warlike musick, he appointed to them certain lascivious lyres and loose jigs by which he so mollified and abated their courage, that they forgot their former fierceness.

Spenser on Ireland

As fiddlers still
Though they be paid to be gone, yet needs will Thrust one more jig upon you.

Donne.

Ponderly shall know that you dare, in these jiggiven times, to countermarch a legitimate poem.

Ben Jonson.

All the swains that there abide,
With jigs and rural dance receive.

Milton.

The masques 'laid to their sees friends existing
Those elegant delights of jig and vauling.

Fenton.

They wrote for his friends in the country, that she should dance a jig next October in Westminster hall.

Arabian Nights.

Another Phæbus, thy own Phæbus regius.

Syms on my jig and dance.

Chaucer.

To Jig. v. n. [from the noun.] To dance carelessly; to dance, Expressed in contempt.

As for the jigging part and figures of dances, I count that little.

Lolle.

JIG-MAKER. m. n. [jig and make.] One who dances or plays merrily.

Your only jigger / what should a man do but play? / Shakespeare, Hamlet.

JIGGUMBOB. n. s. [a cant word.]
A trinket; a knack-knack; a slight contrivance in machinery.

He riled all his pokes and fobs
Of gnomickes, whims, and jiggumboes.

Hudibras.

JIG. n. s. [gill, Islandick, to intrap in an amorous manner.] Mr. Love. Perhaps from gig der; by contraction; or gillit, or gillot, the diminutive of gill, the ludicrous name of a woman.

'Tis also called jillett in Scotland.

1. A woman who gives her lover hopes, and deceives him.

Avoid both courts and camps,
Where dilatory Fortune plays the Jilt
With the brave, noble, honest, gallant man.

To throw herself away on fools.

Ottway's Orphan.

2. A name of contempt for a woman.

When love was all an easy monarch's care,
Jilt rol'd the state, and Assurance wavers wide.

Pope.

To JILT. v. a. [from the noun.] To trick
a man by flattering his love with hopes, and then leaving him for another.

Tell who loves who;
And who is jilted for his sake.

Dryden.

Tell a man, passionately in love, that he is jilted;
bring witnesses of the falsehood of his mistress, and three kind words of hers shall invalidate all their testimonies.

Locke.

To JILT. v. n. To play the jilt; to practise amorous deceits.

She might have learnt to cackel, jilt and sham,
Had Covent garden been at Surinam.

Congreve.

To JINGLE. v. n. [A word made from jingle, or copied from the sound intended to be expressed.] To clink; to sound with a kind of sharp rattle.

What should the wars do with these jingling fools?

Shakespeare.

With noises.

Of roaring, shrieking, howling, jingling chains,
We were awaked.

Shakespeare, Timpest.

The bells she jingled, and the whistle blew.

Pope. You 're with jingling words deceive the ear;
And yet, on humble subjects, great appear.

Smith.

What crowds of these, impossibly bold,
In sounds and jingling chains, and jingles old?

Pope.

JINGLE. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. Any clink, or sharp rattle.

2. It is used, I think, improperly, to express the correspondence of sound in the effects of rhyme.

Vulgar judges are nine parts in ten of all nations, who call conveys and jingler with.

Dryden.

3. Any thing sounding; a rattle; a bell.

If you plant where savages, are do not only enttain them with trifles and jingle, but use them justly.

Bacon's Essays.

ILE. n. s. [corrupted from aile, Fr.] A walk or alley in a church or public building. Properly aile.

Upward the columns shoot, the roofs ascend,
And arches widen, and long aisles extend.

Pope.

ILE. n. s. [side, Fr.] An ear of corn.

AISNEW.

ILE. n. s. [Lat.] An ilex.

An ilex, commonly called the twisting of the gats, is really either a circumvolution, or insertion of one part of the gut within the other.

Arabian Nights.

ILE. n. s. [Lat.]

The ilex, or great scarlet oak, thrives well in England, is a hardy sort of tree, and easily raised of acorns. The Spaniards have a sort they call cistle, the wood of which, when old, is finely cham-bled, as if it were bitterned.

Mortimer.

ILLIC. adj. [Italusc, Lat.] Relating to the lower bowels.

The bile passion is a kind of convulsion in the belly,

996

ILL. Iliac Passion. A kind of nervous cholic, whose seat is the ilium, whereby that gut is twisted, or one part enters the cavity of the part immediately below or above; whence it is also called the volvus, from voile to roll.

Those who die of the iliac passion have their bellies much swelled. Finger on the Humours. IIK. adj. [ealc, Sax.] The same. It is still retained in Scotland, and denotes each; as, ilk one of you, every one of you. It also signifies, the same; as, Macintosh of that ilk, denotes a gentleman whose surname and the title of his estate are the same; as, Macintosh of Macintosh.

Shepherds, should it not yeishd Your rounds fresh, to hear a doleful verse Of Rosalind, who knows not Rosalind, That Collins made: ilk can you rehearse. Spencer IIl. adj. [contrasted from Evil, and retaining all its senses.)

1. Bad in any respect; contrary to good, whether physical or moral; evil. See Evil.

There some ill planet retnis; I must be patient, 'till the Heavens look With an ardent and more favourable. Shakspe. Of his own body he was ill, and gave The clergy ill example. Shakspe. Hen. VIII. Neither is it fair only that makest an ill seat; but ill ways, ill markets, and ill neighbours. Bacon's Essays.

Some, of an ill and melancholy nature; incline the company to be sad and ill-disposed: others, of a jovial nature, dispose them to be merry. Bacon.

2. Sick; disordered; not in health. I know not that evil is ever used in this sense. You wish me health in very happy season: For I am on the sudden something ill. Shakspe. I have known two towns of the greatest consequence lost, by the governors falling ill in the time of the sieges. Temple.

II. n. s.

1. Wickedness; depravity; contrariety to holiness.

Ill to man's nature, as it stands perverted, had a natural motion strongest in continuance. Bacon. Young men to imitate all ills are prone; But are capable of all things noble. Dryden. For in their virtue is called the vice. Dryden. Strong virtue, like strong mixture, struggles still, Exerts itself, and then throws off the ill. Dryden.

2. Misfortune; misery.

Who can all sense of others ill escape. Is but a brute at best in human shape, Tate's Juv. Though plagues ill to ills and excess ad care, Yet never the nobler mind despair. Dryden. When pest by dangers, and beset with fues, The gods their timely succor interpose. And when our virtue sinks, are weakened with grief, By unforeseen expeditors bring relief. A. Philius.

II. adv.

1. Not well; not rightly in any respect.

Ill at ease, both she and all her train. The scorching sun had borne, and beating rain. Dryden.

2. Not easily; with pain; with difficulty.

Thou dost not The punishment all on thyself! alas! Bear thing own first; ill able to sustain His full weight, whose head yet feelst as yet least part. And my displeasure bearst at ill. Milton. Ill bears the sex a youthful lover's fate, When ill just approaching to the nuptial state. Dryden.

III. substantive or adverb; is used in composition to express any bad quality or condition, which may be easily understood by the following examples.

Ill. substantive.

I have an ill-doing soul. Methinks I see there is some black art below, As one dead in the bottom of a tomb. Shakspe. No look, no last stroke before he went! Ill in holding hour to slaughter sent. Dryden. En. I know The voice ill hol'd, and the solemn sound. Phillips. The wisset prince ears are well deceived, by the craft of ill designing men. Swift's Examiner. Your ill meaning politician's, Under pretence of friendly bridals and guests, Appointed to avail me thirty spites, Who threatening cruel death, constrain'd the bride. To wring from me and tell to them secret. Milt. A spy distinguished from his airy stand, To bride whose vigilance, Ægisins told A mighty sum of ill persuading soul. Pope.

Ill. adverb.

There sounded an ill according cry of the enmities, and a lamentable noise was carried abroad. Hist. xviii. 10.

My colleagues, Being so ill affected with the went, Will not be able to be there in person. Ben Jonson. The examples Of every minute's instance, present now, Have put us in these ill be worming arms. Shakspe. Lead back thy Saxons to their ancient Elbe; I would restore the fruitful Knees, the gift Of Vertiginn, or Hought's ill bought aid. Dryden. We simple toastakers take delight To see our women's teeth look white And ev'ry saucy ill bred fellow Sneers at a mouth profoundly yellow. Prior. The ungrateful treason of her ill chos'n husband overthrows her. Every, how does it look? How meagre and ill complexion'd? It precy upon itself, and exhausts the spirits. Cotier. There grows, In my ill compost'ed affection such A stenchless avarice, that, were it king, I should cut off the nobles for their lands. Shak. To what end this ill concerned hys, Palpable and gross? Dryden's Don Sebastian. Our generals at present are such as are likely to make be best use of their means, without throwing them away on any ill concerted projects. Addison on the War.

The second daughter was a peevish, forward, ill conditioned creature. Ardenne. No Persian arson hides his homely walls With auntic vestes, which, through their shary fold, Detray the match from its golden gold. Dryden. You shall not find me, daughter, After the slaughter of most step-mothers, Ill'ed unto you, Shakspe. Cymbeline. I see thy sister's tears, Thy father's anguish, and thy brother's death, In the pursuit of our ill fated loves. Addison. Others ill fated are condemned to toll Their tedious life. Prior. Plain and rough nature, left to itself, is much better than an artificial, ingratitude, and such studied ways of being ill fashioned, Locke. Much better, when I find virtue in a fair lodging, than when I am bound to seek it in an ill favoured creature, like a pearl in a dunghill. Sidney.

Near to an old ill favoured castle they meant to perform their unholy errand. Sidney. If a man had but an ill favoured nose, the deep thinkers would contrive to impute the cause to the prejudice of his vision. I was at her house the hour she appointed. —And you sped, sir? Very well, assuredly. Shakspe. They would not make bold, as every where they do, to destroy ill formed and mis-shap'd productions. Locke. The fabled dragon never guarded more The golden fleece, then he ill got store. Dryden. Juvenal.

III. adverb.

Bid him employ his care for these my friends, And make good use of his ill gotten power. By shewing men much better than himself. Addison. Cato. Ill govern'd passions in a prince's breasts, Hazad his private and the public rest. Walker. That knowledge of theirs is so superficial and ill informed, that they are disposed. Ill grounded passions quickly wear away; What's built upon esteem can ne'er decay. Lea. Of ill birth's sons and daughters born, First from the ancient world these giants were. Milton.

Nor has he erred above once by ill judged superior, or ill designed youth. Dryden. Did you never taste delicious drink out of an ill locked vessel? L'Esquive.

The match had been so ill made for Pleurites, that he all led life would have tumbled to destruction, had there not come fifty to his defence. Sidney.

These are the product Of those ill mated marriages thou saw'st, Where good with bad were match'd. Milton. The works are weak, the garrison thin, Depired with frequent overthrow. Dryden. Already wavered on their ill mann'd walls.

The eternal law of things must not be altered, to comply with his ill ordered choice. Locke. When you expose the scenes. Down the ill argum'd engines fail, Off by the wizards. Swift.

For Phoebus's il is my return; Better at home my ill paid pains to mourn, Than from an equal here sustain the public scorn. Dryden.

There motley images her fancy strike, Figures ill pair'd, and similes unlike. Pope. Spars has not to boast of such a woman, Nor Troy to thank her, for his ill plac'd love. Dryden. I shall direct you, a task for which I take myself not to be ill qualified, because I have bad opportunity to observe the faculties of women. Swift. Actions are pleasing or displeasing, either in themselves, or considered as a means to a greater and more considerable end: as eating of a measured dish, suited to a man's palate, may move the mind, by the delight itself that accompanies the eating, without reference to any other end; so that the consideration of the pleasure there is in health and strength may add a new gust, able to make us swallow an ill refus'd potion. Locke.

Blushes, ill restrain'd betray Her thoughts, intensive on the bridal day. Pope. Behold the fruit of ill rewarded pain. Dryden. The god inform'd This ill shaped body with a daring soul. Dryden. There was plenty enough, but the dishes were ill writen: while pyreants of sweetmeats for boys and women; but little of solid meat for men. Dryden.

It does not belong to the priest's office to impose this name in baptism: he may refuse to pronounce the same, if the parents give them bidding, filthy, or ill sounding names. Dryden. Ill spirited Wes'ter, did we not send grace, Pardon and terms of love to all of you. Shakspe. From too foolish heart, vain maid, remove. An useless sorrow, and an ill starr'd love. Prior. Ah, why th' ill suiting pastime must I try? To gloomy care my thoughts alone are free: Ill the gay sports with troubled heart's love. Pope's Odyssey.

Holding of ill tasted things in the mouth will make a small salivation. Grew. 6 D 2937
ILL

The maid, with downcast eyes, and mute with grief, for death, it cannot, and ill tum'd relief, stood airen to her suit. Dryden's Ode.

How should opinions, thus settled, be given up if the interest of o the other, or desire, as there never fails to be, where men find themselves ill treated. Locke.

The boldness and spirit which last get amongst their play-schools at school, bas ordinarily a mixture of rudeness and ill turned confidence; so that these misbehaving and disadvantageous ways of slifting shall be unlearned. Locke.

I. before words beginning with I, stands for in.

ILLCHRYMBL. adj. [illchrymobilis, Lat.] Incapable of weeping. Dict.

ILLPSE. n.s. [illpseus, Lat.]
1. Gradual emission or entrance of one thing into another.
As a piece of iron red hot, by reason of the illes of the fire into it, appears all over like fire; so the souls of the blessed, by the illes of the divine essence into them, shall be all over divine. Norris.

2. Sudden attack; casual coming.
Life is oft preserved By the bold swimmer in the swift illes Of accident incident. Thomson's Seasons.

To ILLQUATE. v. a. [ill quaço, Lat.]
To entangle; to entrap; to enwre:
I am ill-satisfied, but not truly captivated into your conclusion. More's Divine Dialogues.

ILLQUATION. n.s. [from illquate.] State of not being bogged.

I. the act of catching or ensnaring.
The word in Matthew doth not signify suspension, or pellucid illustation, but also attraction. Brown.

2. A snare; any thing to catch another; a snare.

ILLATION. n.s. [illatio, Lat.] Infrence; conclusion drawn from premises.
Herein seems to be a very erroneous illesation from the indulgence of God unto Cain, concluding an immunity unto himself. Brown. Iliation so orders the intermediate ideas as to discover what connection there is in each link of the chain, whereby the extremes are held together. Locke.

ILLATIVE. adj. [illisatus, Lat.] Relating to illusion or conclusion.
In common discourse or writing such casual particles as for, because, manifest the act of reasoning as well as the illative particles then and therefore. Watts.

ILLU'DABLE. adj. [illu'dabilis, Lat.] Unworthy of praise or commendation, Strength from truth divided, and from just Iliudable, ought merits but displeasure. Milton.

ILLU'DABLY. adv. [from illudable.]
Unworthily; without deserving praise.
It is natural for all people to form, not illudable, too favourable a judgment of their own country. Brown.

ILLGEN. adj. [in and legalis, Lat.] Contrary to law.
No patent can oblige the subject against law, unless an illegal patent passed in one kingdom can bind the subjects of another. Brown.

ILLGEN. adj. [from illgen.] Contrariety to law.
He wished them to consider what votes they had passed, of the ility of all those conmisions in the place of the gilosophers of all part proceedings by virtue of them. Clarendon.

ILLEGAL. adj. [in and legibilis, from lego, Lat.] What cannot be read.
ILL

It might be one of those illustrated beings who are at enmity with mankind, and do therefore take pleasure in killing them with groundless terrors.

Atterbury.

The fondly stitions of increase, Rich foreign mold on their illustrated land.

Indus.

ILLUSTRATEDLY, adv. [from illustrated.] In a peevish, froward manner.

ILLUSTRATEDNESS. n. s. [from illustrated.] Want of a kindly disposition.

ILLUSTRIOUSLY. adj. [in logical.] 1. Ignorant or negligent of the rules of reasoning.

Of one of the dissenters appeared to Dr. Sander- son so bold and illegal in the dispute, as forced him to say, he had never met with a man of more pertinacious confidence, and less abilities. Walton.

2. Contrary to the rules of reason.

Reason cannot dispute and make an inference so utterly illegal. Dei: uflilii. 2. To illustrate.

In a manner contrary to the laws of argument.

To ILLUDE. v. a. [illude, Lat.] To deceive; to mock; to impose on; to play upon; to torment by some contemptible artifice of mockery.

Sometimes astir, sometimes he strook him.

And false of his blow, illude him with such ballet.

Queen Fairy.

In vain we measure this amazing sphere.

While its circumference, seeming to be brought

Even in fancy'd space, illudes our vanquish'd thought.

Prior.

To ILLUSTRATE, v. a. [illumin, Fr.] 1. To enlighten; to illuminate.

When you same star, that's westward from the pole,

Had made his course, illuminate that part of heaven, Where now it burns.

Shaksp. Hamlet.

2. To brighten; to adorn.

The mountain's brow

Illum'd with fluid gold, his near approach.

Deokokes.

Thomson's Summer.

To ILLUSTRISE. v. a. [illumin, Fr.] 1. To enlighten; to supply with light.

To confound his book, on new

Millions of flaming swords, drawn from the thighs

Of mighty chieftains; the sudden blaze

For round the temple's height.

Milton.

What in use is dark,

Illumine! what is low, raise and support! Milton.

2. To decorate; to adorn.

To Cain, Virgil paid one honest line

Let my country's friends illumine mine. Pope.

To ILLUMINATE. v. a. [illumin, Fr. lumin, Lat.] 1. To enlighten; to supply with light.

Do thou vouchsafe, with thy love-kindling light,

T'illuminate my dim and dulled eye.

Spenser.

No painting can be seen in full perfection, but as all nature is illuminated by a single light. Walton.

He made the stars,

And set them in the firmament of heaven,

T'illuminate the earth and rule the night. Milton.

Reason our guide, what can she more reply

That the sun illuminates the sky?

That night that rises from his absent ray.

And his returning lustre kindles day? Prior.

2. To adorn with festal lamps or bonfires.

3. To enlighten intellectually with knowledge or grace.

Satan has no power to abuse the illuminated world with his impostures. Sandy's Travels.

When he illuminates the mind with supernatural light, he does not extinguish that which is natural. Locke.

ILLUSIVE. adj. [from illusion, Lat.] Deceiving; evading; deceiving.

The source of this illusion is to be found in the confusion, the substitution of a word for another, which is a feature of all languages, and which is used to obscure the truth or to make a false impression. Black.

To ILLUSION. n. s. [illusion, Lat. illusion, Fr.] Mockery; false show; counterfeit appearance; error.

That, distil'd by magic flames,

Shall raise such artificial sprites.

As, by the strength of their illusion,

Shall draw him on to his confusion. Shaksp.

There was not some in those days that would have persuaded him that all was but an illusion.

Bacon.

So oft they fell

Into the same illusion; not as man,

When they triumph'd, once laps'd. Milton.

An excuse for uncharitableness, drawn from pretended inability, is of all others the most general prevailing illusiveness.

Many are the illusions by which the enemy endeavors to cheat men into security, and defeat their salvation.

To dream once more I close my willing eyes;

Ye soft illusion, dear deceits, arise! Pope.

We must use some illusion to render a pastoral delightful; and this consists in exposing the best side only of a shepherd's life, and in concealing its miseries. Pope.

ILLUSORY, adj. [from in and illusion, Lat.] Deceiving; fraudulent.

Subility, in those who make profession to teach or defend truth, hath passed for a virtue; a virtue indeed, which, consisting for the most part in nothing but the illusory and illusionary obscurity or deceitful terms, is only fit to make men more addicted in their ignorance. Locke.

To ILLUSTRATE. v. n. [illustro, Lat. illustrer, Fr.] 1. To brighten with light.

To ILLUSTRATE, v. n. [illustrate, Lat. illustrer, Fr.] Matter to me of glory! when on their native

Illustrates, they see all regal pow'r.

Giv-in to me to quell their pride.

Milton. They enrolled their hero'd knights among Illustrating the noble list. Phillips.

3. To explain; to clear; to elucidate.

Authors take up popular conceits, and from tradition unjustifiable, or false, illustrate matters of undeniable truth.

To ILLUSTRATION. n. s. [illustration, Fr. from illustrate.] Explanation; elucidation; explication; it is seldom used in its original signification for material brightness.

Whoever looks about him will find many living illustration of this emblem.

Space and duration, being ideas that have something very abstruse and peculiar in their nature, the compelling them out of many nay perhaps be of use for their illustration. Locke.

ILLUSTRATE. adj. [from illustrate.] Having the quality of elucidating or clearing.

They play much upon the smile or illustrative argumentation, to induce their conmen to the people. Brown.

ILLUSTRATIVELY. adv. [from illustrate.] By way of explanation.

Things are many times delivered hieroglyphically, metaphorically, and not with reference to action. Brown.

ILLUSTRIOUS, adj. [illustris, Lat. illustre, Fr.] Illustrious; noble; eminent for excellence.

In other languages the most illustrious titles are derived from things sacred. South.

Of every nation, each illustrious name, Such toys as those have cheated into fancy. Dryd.

ILLUSTRIOUSLY, adv. [from illustrious.] Conspicuously; nobly; eminently.

He did not disdain to appear at festive entertainments, that he might more illustriously manifest his charity. Atterbury.

You carrying with you all the world can boast, To all the world illustriously are host. Pope.

ILLUSTRIOUSNESS. n. s. [from illustrious.] Eminence; nobility; grandeur.

I'm. Contracted from I'm.

I'm. is used commonly, in composition, for in before mute letters. What is in Latin, when it is not negative, is often enim in French; and our writers, as the Latin or French occurs to their minds, use enim or enim; formerly enim was more common, and now enim seems to prevail.

IMAGE. n. s. [image, Fr. imago, Lat.] 1. Any corporeal representation, generally used of statues; a statue; a picture.

What is this image and supercession? Matt. The one is too like an image, and says nothing; and the other like a lady's eldest son, evermore talking. Shaksp.

Thy brother I,

Even like a stony image, cold and numb. Shaksp.

The image of a deity may be a proper object for that which is but the image of a religion. South.
I M A

Still must be upbraided with your line;
But your late brother did not prize me less
Because I could not have images.
Dryden.

2. An idol; a false god.
Manasseh set the carved image in God's house.
Chron.

3. A copy; representation; likeness.
Long may'st thou live,
To bear his image and renew his glories! Shakep.
I have bequeathed a worthy husband's death,
And all by him imagined; but now two mirrors of his princely semblance
Are crack'd in pieces by insigilant death.
Shakep.

He made us to his image all agree
That image is the soul, and that must be,
Or not the maker's image, or be free.
Dryden.

4. Semblance; show; appearance.
Demy with me? They're sick, they're weary?

They have travel'd all night? Mere fetishes;
The image of revolt.
Shakep. King Lear.

This is the man should do the bloody deed.
The image of a wicked heinous fault
Lives in his eye.
Shakep. King John.
The face of things a frightful image bears,
And present death in various forms appears.
Dryden. En.

5. An idea; a representation of anything to the mind; a picture drawn in the fancy.
The image of the jest
I'll shew you here at large.
Shakep.

Outcast of moral race! can we conceive
Learning of so delightful, soft, or great? Prior.

When we speak of a figure of a thousand angles, we may have a clear idea of the number one thousand figures, of the image, or sensible idea, we cannot distinguish by fancy from the image of a figure that has nine hundred angles. Watta.

To I M A G E. v. a. [from the noun.] To copy by the fancy; to imagine.

How are inorganic substances to be imagined, which of such things wherein we can have no notion?

Image to thy mind
How our imaginations to the Stygian shades
Phillips.

His ear oft frighted with the image's voice
Of heaven, then into it thunder'd.
Prior.

Fate some future hour shall join,
In said similitude of griefs to mine,
Condemn'd whole in years to absence to deplore,
And he must beget no more. Pope.

I M A G E R Y. n. s. [from image.]

1. Sensible representations; pictures; statues.
Of marble stone was cut
An altar-car'd with cunning imagery.
Fairy Q.

Rich carvings, portraiture, and imagery;
Where 'er figure to the life express'd
The godhead's power.
Dryden. Knight's Tale.

Your gilt shall two large goblets be
Of silver, wrought with curious imagery.
And high embossed.
Dryden. Es.

2. Show; appearance.
These within the world fill the imaginative part with beauties and fantastic imagery.
Taylor.

What can thy imagery of sorrow mean?
Became from the world, and all its care,
Hast thou to grieve or joy, to hope or fear? Prior.

All the visionary beauties of the prospect, the pains and imagery that attached our senses, fade and disappear.
Rogers.

3. Forms of the fancy; false ideas; imaginative phantasms.
It might be a mere dream which he saw; the imagery of a melancholy fancy, such as musing and being affected.
Taylor.

4. Representations in writing; such descriptions as force the image of the thing described upon the mind.
I wish there may be in this poem any instance of good imagery.
Dryden.

I M A G I N A B L E. adj. [imaginable, Fr. from imagine.]
Possible to be conceived.

It is not imaginable that men will be brought to obey what they cannot comprehend.
Men, sunk into the greatest darkness imaginable, retain some sense and awe of a Deity.
Tillotson.

I M A G I N A T I V E. adj. [imaginative, Fr. from imagine.]
Imagining; forming ideas.

We will inquire what the line of imagination is, whether upon the body imaginative, or upon another body.
Bacon.

I M A G I N A T I O N. n. s. [from imagine.]

1. Fancy; the power of forming ideal pictures; the power of representing things absent to one's self, or others.

Imagination I understand to be the representation of an individual thought.
Imagination is of the most blessed kind, joined with belief of that which is to come; joined with memory of that which is past; and of things present, or as if they were present;
For I cannot imagine, that I can comprehend, and envanccs and endeavours were for their variety absolved.
Raleigh's History.

Why wilt thou add, to all the griefs I suffer
Imaginary lills and fanc'd tortures?
Addition.

2. Conception; image in the mind; idea.

Some men have all her imaginations;
Some have not but one;
Sometimes the active passion of love clears and clears her invention.
Sidney.

Princes have but their titles for their glories,
An outward honour for an inward toil;
And, for unfelt imaginations,
They often feel a world of restless cares. Shakep.

Better I was distrest,
So should my thoughts be sever'd from my griefs;
And woes, by wrong imaginations, lose
The knowledge of themselves.
Shakep.

His imaginations were often as just as they were bold and strong.
Dennis.

3. Cuntrivance; scheme.

They have seen their vengeance, and all their imaginations against me.
Luc. iii. 60.

4. An unsolid or fanciful opinion.

We are apt to think that space, in itself, is actually boundless; to which imagination, the idea of place, of itself, leads us.
Locke.

I M A G I N A T I V E. adj. [imaginatif, Fr. from imagine.]
Fancied; visionary; existing only in the imagination.

False s-eye's row's eye,
Which, for things true, weeps things imaginary.
Shakep.

Expectation whirs me round:
The imaginary relish is so sweet,
That it enchants my sense.
Shakep.

Fortune is nothing else but a power imaginary,
To which the sense is deign'd, and endeavors and endeavours were for their variety absolved.
Raleigh's History.

Why wilt thou add, to all the griefs I suffer
Imaginary lills and fanc'd tortures?
Addition.

I M A G I N A T I O N. n. s. [from imagine.]

1. Fancy; the power of forming ideal pictures; the power of representing things absent to one's self or others.

Imagination I understand to be the representation of an individual thought.
Imagination is of the most blessed kind, joined with belief of that which is to come; joined with memory of that which is past; and of things present, or as if they were present;
For I cannot imagine, that I can comprehend, and envanccs and endeavours were for their variety absolved.
Raleigh's History.

Why wilt thou add, to all the griefs I suffer
Imaginary lills and fanc'd tortures?
Addition.

2. Conception; image in the mind; idea.

Some men have all her imaginations;
Some have not but one;
Sometimes the active passion of love clears and clears her invention.
Sidney.

Princes have but their titles for their glories,
An outward honour for an inward toil;
And, for unfelt imaginations,
They often feel a world of restless cares. Shakep.

Better I was distrest,
So should my thoughts be sever'd from my griefs;
And woes, by wrong imaginations, lose
The knowledge of themselves.
Shakep.

His imaginations were often as just as they were bold and strong.
Dennis.

3. Cuntrivance; scheme.

They have seen their vengeance, and all their imaginations against me.
Luc. iii. 60.

4. An unsolid or fanciful opinion.

We are apt to think that space, in itself, is actually boundless; to which imagination, the idea of place, of itself, leads us.
Locke.

I M A G I N A T I V E. adj. [imaginatif, Fr. from imagine.]
Fancied; full of imagination.

Witches are imaginative, and believe things that they do not do.
Bacon.

Let us imagine ourselves the imaginative and fantastick part, because our fancy is usually pleased with the entertainment of shadows and ghosts.
Taylor's Rule of Living Holy.

To I M A G E. v. a. [imaginir, Fr. im-agine, Lat.]
IMBIBER. n. a. [from imbibere]. That which drinks or sucks.

Salt are strong imbibers of sulphuric steams.

IMBIBITION. n. s. [imbibition, Fr. from imbibere.] The act of sucking or drinking in.

Most powders grow more coherent by mixture of water than of oil; the reason is the concreteness of bodies which make a perfect imbibition.

Boone, Heat and cold have a virtual transition, without communication of substance, but in moisture nor, and to all imbibation there is a necessity.

Dryden, A drop of oil, let fall upon a sheet of white paper, that part of it, which, by the imbibition of the liquor, acquires a greater continuity and some transparency, will appear much darker than the rest; many of the incident beams of light being now transmitted, that otherwise would be reflected.

To IMBIBER. v. a. [from bitter.]
1. To make bitter.
2. To deprive of pleasure; to make unhappy.

Let them extinguish their passions which imbibing their lives, and deprive them of their share in the happiness of the community. Addison's Freethinker.

Is there anything that more imbibes the enjoyment of this life than shame? South.

3. To exasperate.

To IMBODDY. v. a. [from body.]
1. To condense to a body.

An opening cloud reveals an hour of indiff'ent form embodi'd, and army'd with roes of light.

Dryden, Though modesty in the most frigid cogitation be no trouble, still so pure, so spiritualized spirit, that neither is more imbibed than our imbedded souls can bear without lassitude.

Claudine's Sceptics.

2. To invest with matter; to make corporeal.

An opening cloud reveals an hour of indiff'ent form embodi'd, and army'd with roes of light.

Dryden's An.

3. To bring together into one mass or company; to incorporate.

I by yow am so imbodied yours, That she which marries must marry me. Shak.

Never since created man
Met such imbibed force, as 'mid with these,
Could merit more than that small infancy
War'd o'er by cares. Milton's Par. Lost. Under their head imbody'd all in one. Milton. Then Clavering, who led a nation's band Of troops imbibed, from the Sabine land.

4. To inclose. Improper.

In those strata we shall meet with the same metal or mineral imbedded in stone, or lodged in coal, that elsewhere we found in marble. Woodward.

To IMBODDY. v. n. To unite into one mass; to coalesce.

The soul grows cloyed by contagion, imbedded and imbutes; till she quite lose the divine property of her first being. Milton.

The idea of white snow which snow yielded yesterday, and another idea of white from another snow to day, put together in your mind, imbody and run into one.

To IMBOIL. v. n. [from boil.] To exsaturate; to effervesce; to move with violent agitation like hot liquor in a caldron. Not now in use.

With whose reproach and odious menace, The knight imbodying in his naughty heart, Fled all his fears, and gan so in embrace His grasping hold.

Fairy Queen. To IMBOLDEN. v. a. [from bold.] To raise confidence; to encourage.

This necessary he should die: Nothing imbody'd so much as mercy. Shak.

I think myself in better plight for a fender than you are, the which hath something imbodened me to this unseasoned intrusion.

Shak.
To imitate, v. a. [imitor, Lat. imitator, Fr.]
1. To copy; to endeavour to resemble.
   We imitate and practise to make swifter motions than any out of our muskets.
   Despise all pride, and imitate a god. Cowley.
   I would care some staleness of man,
   And imitate his language and his Mans. Than.

2. To counterfeit.
   This hand express’d a shining sword to wield,
   And that sustained an imitated shield. Dryden’s Ene.

3. To pursue the course of a composition, so as to use parallel images and examples.
   For shame! what, imitate an ode. Gay.

Imitation, n. s. [imitative, Lat. imitation.
1. The act of copying; attempt to resemble.
2. That which is offered as a copy.
   Since a true knowledge of nature gives us pleasure, a lively imitation of it, either in poetry or painting, must produce a much greater effect; for both these arts are not only true imitations of nature, but of the best nature.

   To use parallel images and examples.
   For shame! what, imitate an ode. Gay.

Imitative, adj. [imitator, Lat.
1. Inclined to copy; as, Man is an imitative being.

2. Aiming at resemblance; as, Painting is an imitative art.

3. Formed from some original.
   This temple, less in form, with equal grace,
   Was imitated of the first in Thrace. Dryden.

Imitator. n. s. [Lat. imitator, Fr.
One that copies another; one that endeavours to resemble another.
Imitators are but a servile kind of cattle, says the poet.

Immaculate, adj. [immaculatus, Lat., immaculæ, Fr.
1. Spotless; pure; undefiled.
   To keep this profound immaculate and blameless, was to teach the gospel of Christ.
   Hooker.
   His words are bonds, his oaths are oracles;
   His love sincere, his thoughts immaculate. Shakspe.
   The king, whom catholics count a saint-like and immaculate prince, was taken away in the flower of his age.
   Bacon.
   Were but my soul as pure
   From other guiles as guilt, ifearn’d not hold
   One more immaculate. Benjam’s Shipy.

2. Pure; immaculate.
   Thou clear, immaculate, and silver fountain,
   From whence this stream, through muddy passages,
   Hast had his current and defiled himself. Shakespeare.
   To Immaculare. v. a. [from immacule.
   To letter; to confine.

   Thou canst not touch the freedom of my mind
   With all thy charms, although this corporal mind
   Thus hast immacul’d. Milton.

Immane, adj. [immanus, Lat. Vast; prodigiously great.

Immanent, adj. [immanent, Fr. im and man, Lat.
Intrinsick; inherent; internal.
   Judging the infinite essence by our narrow selves,
   we ascribe inventions, volitions, and such immaterial actions,
   to that nature which hath nothing in common with us,
   Glanville.
   What he wills and intends once, he wills and intended from all eternity; it being grossly contrary to the very first motions we have of the infinite perceptions of the Divine Nature to suppose any new immaculate action of God, South.

Immanentist. adj. [in and manifest.
Not manifest; plain. Not in use.
A time not much unlike that which was before the first magnificence, Browne’s Taj. Err.

Immanity. n. s. [immanitas, Lat.] Bar.
   itvageness.
   It was both impious and unnatural
   That such immaturity and bloody strife
   Should reign among professors of one faith. Shak.

Immacrescent. adj. [in and manacco, Lat.] Unfading.

Immartial. adj. [in and martial.]
Not warlike.
   My pow’rs are unfruitful.
   Myself immanent. Chapman’s Odyssey.
   To Immakhir. v. a. [in and mask.] To cover; to disguise.
   I have cases of luckkern for the nonce, to im mas our noted outward garments. Shakspe. Henry IV.

Immaterial. adj. [immaterial, Fr. in and materia, Lat.
1. Incorporeal; distinct from matter; void of matter.
   Angels are spirits immaterial and intellectual,
   the glorious inhabitants of those sacred palaces where there is nothing but light and immortality;
   no shadow of matter for fear, discontentments, griefs, and uncomfortable passions to work upon,
   or any thing tranquillity and peace, even for ever and ever,
   so doth.

   As then the soul a substance hath alone,
   Besides the body, in which she is confined.
   So hath she not a body of her own,
   But is a spirit, and immaterial mind.
   Dryden.
   Those immaterial feelings, we expect,
   the necessity of preparing our appetites,
   without which heaven can be no heaven to us.

   No man that owns the existence of an infinite spirit can doubt the possibility of a finite spirit; that is, such a thing as is immaterial, and does not take part in the corruption.

2. Unimportant; without weight; impertinent; without relation.
   This sense has crept into the conversation and writings of barbarians;
   but ought to be utterly rejected.

Immateriality. n. s. [from immaterial.
   Incorpority; distinctness from body or matter.
   When we know cognition is the prime attribute of a spirit, we infer its immateriality, and thence its immortality.
   Watts.

   In a manner not depending upon matter.
   The visible species of things strike not our senses immaterially; but, streaming in corporeal rays do carry with them the qualities of the object from whence they flow, and the medium through which they pass.
   Brown’s Vulg. Err.

Immaterialized. adj. [from in and materia, Lat.] Distinct from matter; incorporeal.
   Though immaturity in the most fixed cognition be no trouble to immaterialized spirits, yet is it more than our embodied souls can bear without losteda.
   Glanville Seripa.

Immaterialness. n. s. [from immaterial.
   Distinctness from matter.

Immaterial. adj. [in and materia, Lat.
   Not consisting of matter; incorporeal; wanting body.
   It is a virtue which may be called incorporeal and immaterial, whereof there be in nature but few.

After a long enquiry of things immense in nature,
   I interpose some object which is immaterial, such as this of sounds. Bacon.

Immateriality. n. s. [immaterial, Lat.
1. Not ripe.
2. Not perfect; not arrived at fulness or completion.
   The land enterprise of Panama was an ill measured and immaturity counsel, grounded upon a false notion; the passage was no better fortified than Drake had left them.
   Bacon.
   This is your time for faction and debate,
   For party favour, and permitted hate;
   Let now your immaturity disseussed cease,
   Sit quiet.

   Hasty; early; come to pass before the natural time.
   We are pleased, and call not that death immu-ture, if a man lives till seventy.
   Taylor.

Immaterially. adv. [from immaturity.]
Too soon; too early; before ripeness or completion.

Immaterialeness. n. s. [from immateria.
1. Immateriality.
   Unripiness; incompleteness; a state of short completion.

   I might reasonably expect a pardon from the ingenious for faults committed in an immaturity of age and judgment.
   Glanville.

Immeasurably. adv. [from in and measure.
   Immense; not to be measured; indefinitely extensive.

   Churches reared up to an height immesurab, and adorned with far more beauty in their restoration than their founders before had given them.
   Hooker.

   From the shore
   They viewed the vast immesurableness, abys,
   Outstretched as a sea, dark, wasteful, wild.
   Milton.
   Immensurableness strength they might behold
   In use, of wisdom nothing more than mean.
   Milton.

   What a glorious show are those beings endowed with that can see such tremendous objects wandering through those immesurable depths of air!
   Addison’s Guardian.

   Nor friends are there, nor vessels to convey
   Nor need they to cut this immesurable way. Pope’s Odys.

Immeasurably. adv. [from immesur.
   Immense; beyond all measure.
   The Spaniards immesurably bewail their dead.

   There ye shall be fed, and fill’d,
   Immensurably; all shall be your prey. Milt.

Immechanical. adj. [in and mechanical.
   Not according to the laws of me-chanicks.
   We have nothing to do to show any thing that is immecanical, or not according to the established laws.
   Chene.

   Nothing will clear a head possessed with im-mechanical notions.
   Mead.

Immediacy. n. s. [from immediate.
   Personal greatness; power of acting without dependence.
   This is a harsh word, and sense peculiar, I believe, to Shakespeare.

   He fed our pow’rs,
   Bore the comission of my place and person,
   The which immediacy may well stand up,
   And call itself your brother. Shakespeare, King Lear.

Immediate. adj. [immediat. Fr in and mediab, Lat.

1. Being in such a state with respect to something else as that there is nothing between them; proximate; with nothing intervening.

Moses mentions the immediate causes of the deluge, the rain and the waters; and St. Peter mentions the more remote and fundamental causes, that constitution of the heavens.

2. Not acting by second causes.

It is much to be ascribed to the immediate will of God, who giveth and taketh away beauty at his pleasure.

3. Instant; present with regard to time.

Prior therefore should not have written more immediate.

mediate are my needs, and my relief
Must not be lost and turn'd to me in works.

But find supply immediate.

Shaksp. Timon.

Death denounc'd that day,

Which he presumes already vain, and void,

Because not yet inflicted, as lie fend'd.

By some immediate stroke.

Milton's Par. Lost.

But she, how'er of vict'ry sure,

Contents the wreath too long delay'd;

And arm'd with immediate pow'r,

Calls cruel silence to her aid.

Prior.

IMMEDIATELY. adv. [from immediate.]

1. Without the intervention of any other cause or event.

God's acceptance of it, either immediately by himself, or meditated by the hands of the bishop, is that which vests the whole property of a thing in God.

South.

2. Instantly; at the time present; without delay.

Her father had commanded her to slip Away with Speed and with him at Eaton
Immediately to marry.

Shaksp.

IMMEDIATENESS. n. s. [from immediate.]

1. Presence with regard to time.

2. Exemption from second or intervening causes.

IMMEDIATELY. adj. [immedicately, Lat.]

Not to be healed; incurable.

My griefs fever'd and dug deep.

Nor less than wounds immedicable,

Ramble and fester, and gangerous

To black and blue their complexion.

Milton's Agonistes.

IMMEMORABLE. adj. [immemorabilis, Lat.] Not worth remembering.

IMMEMORIAL. adj. [immemorial, Fr. in and memory, Lat.] Past time of memory; so ancient that the beginning cannot be traced.

All the laws of this kingdom have some memorials in writing, yet all have not their original in writing; for some obtained their force by immemorial usage or custom:

Hale.

By a long immemorial practice, and prescription, of an aged thorough-paced hypocrisia, they come to believe that for a reality, which, at first practice of it, they themselves know to be a cheat.

South.

IMMENSE. adj. [immense, Fr. immensus, Lat.] Unlimited; unbounded; infinite.

O goodness infinite! goodness immense!

That all this good evil shall produce!

Milton.

As infinite duration hath no relation unto motion and time, so infinite or immense essence hath no relation unto body; but is a thing distinct from all corporal magnitude, which we mean when we speak of immensity, and of God as of an immense being.

IMMENSELY. [from immense.] Infinitely; without measure.

We shall find that the void space of our system is immensely bigger than all its corporal mass.

IMMENSEITY. n. s. [immensit, Fr.] Unbounded greatness; infinity.

By the power we find in ourselves of repeating, as often as we can, this idea of space, we may find the idea of immensity.

Locke.

He that will consider the immensity of this fabric, and the great variety that is to be found in this inconsiderable part of it which he has to do with, may think that in other mansions of it there may be other and different intelligences.

Locke.

All these illustrious worlds,

And millions which the glass can neither descry,

Lost in the wilds of vast immensity,

Are suns, are centers.

Blackmore's Creation.

IMMENSURABLE. n. s. [from immensurable.] Impossibility to be measured.

IMMENSURABLE. adj. [in and immensurable, Lat.] Not to be measured.

To immerse. v. a. [immereg, Lat.]

To put under water.

IMMÆRIT. n. s. [immerito, Lat.] Want of worth; want of desert. This is a better word than demerit, which is now used in its stead.

When I received thy lines, and find there expressions of a passion, reason and my own immirite tell me it must not be for me.

Sucking.

To immerse. v. a. [immersus, Lat.]

1. To put under water.

To sink or cover deep.

He stood

More than a mile immered within the wood;

At once the wind was laid.

Dryden.

They observed that they were immersed in their rocks, quarries, and mines, in the same manner as they are at this day found in all known parts of the world.

Woodward.

3. To keep in a state of intellectual depression.

It is a melancholy reflection that our country, which, in times of joy, was called the nation of saints, should now have less appearance of religion, and less of other neighboring state or kingdom; whether they be so continue still immersed in the errors of the church of Rome, or such as are recovered out of those.

Adams's Freedom.

We are prone to engage ourselves with the business, the pleasures, and the amusements of this world: we get ourselves up too greedily to the pursuit, and immerse ourselves too deep in the enjoyments of them.

Atterbury.

It is impossible to have a lively hope in another life, and yet be deeply immersed in the enjoyments of this.

Atterbury.

IMMERSE. v. a. [immersus, Lat.] Buried; covered; sunk deep.

After long enquire of things immerse in matter,

I interpose some object which is immerse, or less mate; such as this of sounds, that the intellect may become not partial.

Bacon.

IMMERSION. n. s. [immersio, Lat. immersion, Fr.]

1. The act of putting any body into a fluid below the surface.

Achilles is told that he must have dipped him, when he was a child, in the river Styx, which made him invulnerable all over, excepting that part which mother held in her hand when this immersion.

Addison's Guardian.

2. The state of sinking below the surface of a fluid.

3. The state of being overwhelmed or lost in any respect.

Many persons, who, through the heat of their lusts and passions, through the contageous ill

IMMORALITY. n. s. [immoratilit, Fr. from immobilit, Lat.] Unmoveableness; want of motion; resistance to motion.

The course of fluids through the vascular solids must in time harden the braze, and abolish many of the canals; from whence dryness, weakness, immobility, and debility of the vital forces.

Deublouet on Elements. 943
IMMODERATE. adj. [immodéré, Fr. immorateur, Lat.] Excessive; exceeding the due mean.

Immoral, detrimental, having no good influence, tending to ruin the soul.

IMMODERATELY. adv. [from immoderate.] In an excessive degree.

Immoderately she weeps for Tybalt's death.

IMMORALITY. n. s. [immoral, Fr. from immoderate.] Want of moderation; excess.

IMMODEST. adj. [immodeste, Fr. in and modest.]

1. Wanting shame; wanting delicacy or chastity.

She railed at herself, that she should be so immodest to write one to one that knew how to write.

2. Unchaste; impure.

Immodest should you be to write.

But we prescribe the least immodest thought. Dryd.

3. Obscene.

It is a piece of immodesty.

To IMMOLATE. v. a. [immole, Lat. immoler, Fr.] To sacrifice; to kill in sacrifice.

1. To sacrifice; to kill in sacrifice.

These courtiers of applause were oftentimes reduced to live in want, these costly trusses evinceing their pride at all that they could spare, that they frequently required the services of those forced to imitate their own desires to their vanity.

2. To offer in sacrifice.

Now immodate the tongues, and mix the wine, Sacred to No. None, and the power's divine. Pope.

IMMOLATION. n. s. [immolation, Fr. from immolate.]

The act of sacrificing.

In the picture of the immolation of Isaac, or Abraham sacrificing his son, Isaac is described as a little boy. Brown.

2. A sacrifice offered.

We make more barbarous immolations than the most savage beholders. Decay of Piety.

IMMÔMENT. adj. [in and moment.] Trifling; of no importance or value. A barbarous word.

I some lads have reserves, Immoment says, things of such dignity As we great modern friends withal. Shake.

IMMORAL. adj. [in and moral.] Wanting regard to the laws of natural religion; as, a flatterer of vice is an immoral man.

Contrary to honesty; dishonest; as, desertion of a calamified friend is an immoral action.

IMMORALITY. n. s. [from immoral.] Dishonesty; want of virtue; contrariety to virtue.

Such men are put into the commission of the peace who encourage the grossest immoralities, to whom all the bands of the ward pay contribution.

IMMORTAL. adj. [immortalis, Lat.] 1. Exempt from death; being never to die.

To the kind eternal, immortal, invisible, the only true God, be glory for ever.

2. Never ending; perpetual.

Give me my shine, put on my crown; I have immortal longings in me. Shake.

IMMORTALITY. n. s. [immortalità, Fr. from immortal.] 1. Exemption from death; life never to end.

This corruptible shall put on incorruption, and this mortal, immortality. Corinth. Quaff immortality, and joy.

He th'immortal of souls proclaim'd,

His existence will of itself continue for ever, unless it be destroyed: which is impossible, from the immortality of God, and the nature of him himself. Davies.

2. To exempt from oblivion.

Drive them from Orleans, and be immortality. Shake.

To IMMORALIZE. v. n. To become immortal. This word is, I think, peculiar to Pope.

Fix the year before, When British hands began t'immortalize. Pope.

IMMORTALY. adv. [in and inerç.] 1. Not to be forced from its place.

We shall not question his removing the earth, when he needs an immovable base to place his engine upon. Brun.

2. Not liable to be carried away; real in law.

When an executor meddles with the immovable estate, before he has seized on them ovaale goods, it may be then appealed from the execution of sentence. Auliffe's Paternon.

3. Unshaken; unaffected.

How much happier is he, who, centring on himself, remains immovable, and smiles at the madness of the dance about him? Drayd.

IMMOVOBLE. adv. [from immovable.]

In a state not to be shaken. Immovably firm to their duty, when they could have no prospect of reward. Altebury.

IMMUNITY. n. s. [immunis, Fr. immunit, Lat.] 1. Discharge from any obligation.

Of things harmless whatsoever there is, which the whole church doth observe, to argue for any man's immunity from observing the same, it were a point of most insolent madness.

2. Privilege; exemption from onerous duties.

Granting great immunities to the commons, they prevented far as to cause Palladius to be proclaimed successor. Sir.

Simon sent to Demetrius, to the end he should give the land on immunities, because all that Tryphun did was to spoil.

The lady mildly aggravates the rights and immunities of the clergy. Sprit's Sermons.

3. Freedom.

Common apprehensions entertain the antidotal condition of Ireland, conceiving only in that land abundance from venereal creatures. Brown.

This annex'd condition of the crown, Immunity from errors, you discern. Dryd.

To IMMURE. v. a. [and murus, Lat. immer, old Fr. so that it might be written commeur.] To inclose within walls; to confine; to shut up; to imprison.

Put you among these, these tender livers, Whose envy hath immured and kept them within walls. Shake.

One of these three contains her heavy picture; And she shall think in silver she's immured. Shake.

At the last designe she was not immured with a wooden vessel, but he did confine the landing in his long-boat. Watte.

Lenten imagin's it with a wall. Sonety.

Though a foul foolish prison her immure

On earth, she, when escap'd, is wise and pure. Denham.

IMMURE. n. s. [from the verb.] A wall; an inclosure; as in Shakespeare, but perhaps no where else.

Their vow is nude. To ransack Troy; within whose strong immures The ravish'd Helen, Menenius' queen, With wanton Paris sleeps. Shake.

IMMUSICAL. adj. [in and musical] Inharmonious; wanting proportion of sound.

All sounds are either musical, which are ever equal, or immusical, which are ever unequal, as the voice in speaking, and whisperings. Bacon.

We consider the immusical note of all swans we ever heard, or heard of. Brown.

IMMUTABILITY. n. s. [immutabletas, Lat. immutabilit, Fr. from immutable.] Exemption from change; invariableness; unchangeableness.

The immutability of God they strive unto, by working after one and the same manner. Hocber.

His existence will of itself continue for ever, unless it be destroyed; which is impossible, from the immutability of God. Chryse.

IMMUTABLE. adj. [immunabilis, Lat.] Unchangeable; invariable; unalterable. By two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we have a strong consolation. Heb. vi.

Thy thronings, Lord, as thine, thou mayst not revoke; But if immutable and fix'd they stand, Continue still thyself to give the stroke, And let not foreign foes oppress thy land. Dryd.

IMMUTABLY. adv. [from immutable.] Unalterably; invariably; unchangeably.

His love is like his essence, immutably eternal. Dryd.
IMP

A lad of life, an imp of fame. Shaks. Hen. V.

2. A subaltern devil; a puny devil. In this sense 'tis still retained.

Such we deny not to be the imps and demons of Satan.

The serpent after long debate, irrelate
Of thoughts revolved, his final sentence chose,
First vessel, on which he impressed himself, to enter, and his dark suggestions little From shortest sight. Milton's Paraet. Lost.

As soon as you can hear, and shall do, this god on earth turns d — — in hell.

And, let his ministers of state,

To Imp. n. [impetuoso, Ital.] To put in a place or state resembling paradise in felicity. This impetuous neighbour hood made Zelme's soul cleave unto her, through the ivory case of her body, and the apparel which did overcloud it.

All my souls be Impert'ld in you, in whom alone

Impart. n. s. [impartas, impart., Lat.]

1. Inequality: disproportion.

Some bodies are hard, some soft: the harshness is caused chiefly by the jocurness of the spirits, and their impert'ng with the tangible parts. Bacon.

2. Oddness: indivisibility into equal parts.

What verity is there in that numeral coniict, in the lateral division of man, by even and odd; and so by parity or impert'v in letters in my names, to determine misfortunes on either side of their bodies?

Brown's Vulg. Err.

To Impark. r. a. [in and park.] To inclose with a park; to seve from a common.

To IMPART. r. a. [impetuzo, Lat.] To drive close or hard.

They are angular; but of what particular figure is not easy to determine, because of their being impert'ed so thick and confusedly together.

Woodward on Oeufes.

To Impaint. r. a. [in and paint.] To paint; to decorate with colours. Not in use.

Need did not necessitate want
Such water-colours to impart his cause. Shaks.

To IMPAIR. r. a. [emperior to make worse, Fr. Skinner.] To diminish; to injure; to make worse, to lessen in quantity, value, or excellence.

To change any such law, must needs, with the common sort, impart and weaken the force of those grounds whereby all laws are made effectual. Martinez.

Objects divine

Must needs impart, and weary human sense. Milt. That soul so refresh'd by water, and repaired by

What hunger, if hunger had impart'd

Or thirst. Milton's Paraet. Regain'd.

Nor was the work impart'd by stitious alone, but felt' th' approaches of too warm a sun. Pope.

In years he seem'd, but not imparted by years. Pope.

To IMPAIR. r. a. To be lessened or worn out.

Flesh may impart, quoth he, but reason can repair.

Fairy Queen.

IMPaise. n. s. [from the verb.] Diminution; decrease. Not used.

A level, keen in purpose, that is, not being, from the impert of, or with its pules inverted, receives in longer time impart in activity and exchange of faces, and is more powerfully preserved by the bones of the body. Brown.

Impairment. n. s. [from impair.] Diminution; injury.

His posterity, at this distance, and after so perpetual impart, cannot but condemn the poverty of Adam's conception, that thought to obscure himself from his Creator in the shade of the garden.

Brown's Vulg. Err.

IMP. IMPAIRABLE. adj. [impalpable, Fr. in and palpy.] Not to be perceived by touch.

If beaten into an impalpable powder, when poured out, it will conmlate a troop, by reason that the matter being the same, the parts do make the thing.

Boyle.

To IMPAIR'parise. r. a. [imparadisance, Ital.] To put in a place or state resembling paradise in felicity. This impalpable neighbour hood made Zelme's soul cleave unto her, through the ivory case of her body, and the apparel which did overcloud it.

All my souls be Impalp'ld in you, in whom alone

Impartial. n. s. [impartar, impart., Fr. from impartial.] Equitable; free from regard to party; indifferent; disinterested; equal in distribution of justice; just.

It is used as well of actions as persons: an impartial judge; an impartial sentence.

Success I hope, and fate I cannot fear: Alive or dead, I shall deserve a name; love is impartial, and to both the same. Dreden.

IMPARTIALITY. n. s. [impartaral, Is. from impartial.] Equitable; impartiality, Fr. from impartial.] Equitable; impartiality, Fr.

A plea and well disposed will gives not only diligence, but also impartiality to the understanding in its search into the truth, which is absolutely necessary to give success unto our inquiries into that truth; it being scarce possible for that man to hit the mark, whose eye is still glancing upon some thing beside it.

South.

IMPARTIALLY. adv. [from impartial.]

Equitably; with indifferent and unbiased judgment; without regard to party or interest; justly; honestly.

Since the Scripture promises eternal happiness and pardon of sin, upon the sole condition of faith and repentance; and without the condition of being made a public minister, that he may be able to claim a title to such a pardon, whose conscious-impert, calmly tells him that he has performed the required condition.

South.

IMPARTIBLE. adj. [impertible, Fr. from impartial.] Communicable; to be conferred or bestowed. This word is elegant, though used by few writers.

The same body may be conceived to be more or less impertible than it is active or heavy. Dryg.

IMPASSABLE. adj. [impassible.] Not to be passed; not admitting passage; impervious.

There are in America many high and impassable mountains, which are very rich. Batkigh.

IMPASSABLE. adj. [impassible.] Impervious; let us try.

To found a path from hell to that new world.

When Alexander would have passed the Ganges, he was told by the Indians that all beyond it was either impassable marshes, or sandy deserts. Temple.

IMPASSIBILITY. n. s. [impassibilitate, Fr. from impassible.] Exemption from suffering; insusceptibility of injury from external things.

Two divinities might have pleased their prae-impert, of impassibility, or at least not have been wounded by any mortal hand. Dreden's Eth. Dict.

IMPASSIBLE. adj. [impassible, Fr. in and passio, Lat.] Impassable of suffering; exempt from the agency of external causes; exempt from pain.

If the upper soul should be consumed by the will, in compliance with the flesh, and can then hope that, after a few years of weakness, that rebellious servant shall be eternally cast off, drop into a perpetual impassible nothing, take a long progress into a land where all things are forgotten, this would be some comfort. Hammond.

Secure of death, I should content my days,

Though naked, and impassible depart. Dreden.

IMPASSIBILITY. n. s. [from impert, impassible.] Impassibility; exemption from pain.

How shameless a partiality is it, thus to reserve all the sensibilities of this world, and yet cry out for the impassibility of the next! Deoy of Plut.

IMPASSIONED. adj. [in and passion.]

Disordered by passion.

So, standing, moving, or heighten up.

The temper, all impert, thus began. Milton.

IMPASSIVE. adj. [in and passive.] Exempt from the agency of external causes.

She told him what those empty phantoms were,

Forms without bodies, and impertensible air. Dryg. En.

Pale suns, unfit at distance, roll away; And the impertensible air, as the Pope.

IMPASTED. adj. [in and paste.] Concreted as into paste. This word is not in use.

Horribly trickt

With blood of fathers, mothers, daughters, sons,

Bak'd and impert, and with the pearing fires. Shaks.

Imperativeness. n. s. [impatience, Fr. inpatientia, Lat.]

1. Inability to suffer pain; rage under suffering.

The power of his wrists has given way to his impatience.

Shaks. King Lear.

The temperament I resolved on, was upon thought, and not rashness or impatience. Temple.

2. Vehemence of temper; and of passion.

G E. 945
1. Not able to endure; incapable to bear: with of.

Shakespeare.

2. Furious with pain; unable to bear pain.

Shakespeare.

3. Vehemently agitated by some painful passion; with at before the occasion; with of is referred more to the thing, with at to the person.

Taylor's Rule of Living Holy.

4. Hot; lusty.

The impatien man will not give himself time to be informed of the matter that lies before him.

5. Eager; ardently desirous; not able to endure delay; with for before the thing desired.

The mighty Caesar waits his vital hour, impatient for the world, and grasps his promis'd pow'r.

Duglass.

On the least prepare'd the vessel stands; Th' impatient mariner thy speed demands. Pope.

IMPATIENTLY, adv. [from impatient.]

1. With rage, under uneasiness.

2. Passionately; ardently.

He considered one thing; so impatiently, that he would not admit any thing else to be worth consideration.

Clarendon.

3. Eagerly; with great desire.

To IMPATRONIZE. r. a. [from patronize; Fr. in and patronize.] To gain to one's self the power of any seigniory. This word is not usual.

The ambition of the French king was to impatrontize himself of the duchy. Barbam's Ren. VII.

To IMPAWN. v. a. [in and pawn.] To impose; to pawn; to give as a pledge; to pledge.

Go to the king, and let there be impaw'd.

Some surety for a safe return again. Shak. H. IV.

Many now to health.

Shall draw their blood, in approbation

Of what your reverence shall invite us to;

Therefore take heed how you impawn our person, Place.

To IMPEACH. r. a. [impeach; Fr.

1. To hinder; to impede. This sense is little in use.

Each door he opened without any breach;

There was no bar to stop, nor for him to impasture himself.

His sons did impeach his journey to the Holy Land, and vexed him all the days of his life. Davies.

If they will impeach the purposes of an army, which they have no reason to think themselves able to resist, they put themselves out of all expectation of mercy.

Hayward.

A delusion on my throat impeached my attendance.

Howel.

2. To accuse by public authority.

They were both impeached by a house of commons.

Great dissensions were kindled between the nobles and commons on account of Cordusian, whom the latter had impeached.

Swift.

IMPEACHMENT. n. s. [from the verb.] Hindrance; let; impediment.

Why, what an intricate impeach is this!
It is the most impenetrable cur That ever kept with men. —Let him alone, I'll follow him no more with boatless prayers. Shake. Some will never believe a proposition in divinity, if any thing can be said against it, they will be cedulas in all affairs of life, but impenetrable by a sermon of the gospel. Taylor.

IMPENETRABLY. _adv. [from impenetrable.]_ With hardness to a degree incapable of impression. Hunt the sense, and fix it for a skull Of solid proof, impenetrably dull. Pope.

IMPELTENCE. _n.s. [impenitence, Fr. pondence.]_ Obduracy; want of remorse for crimes; final disregard of God's threatenings or mercy.

Where one man ever comes to repent, a thousand end their days in final impenitence. South. Before the revelation of the gospel the wickedness and impenitence of the heathens was a much more excusable thing, because they were in a great measure ignorant of the rewards of another life.

We will advance from one degree of wickedness and impenitence to another, till at last be becomes hardened without remorse. Rogers.

IMPEPTENT. _adj. [impenitent, Fr. in and penitence.]_ Final, negligent of the duty of repentance; obdurate.

Our Lord in anger hath granted some impenitent men's requests; as, on the other side, the apostle's suit he hath of favour and mercy not granted. Hooker.

They dy'd impenitent, and left a race behind Like to themselves. Milton.

When the reward of penitents, and punishment of impenitents, is once ascertained to be true, 'tis impossible but what the men should with the one, and have dislikes to the other. Hammond.

IMPEPTENITY. _adv. [from impenitent.]_ Obdurate; without repentance.

The condition required of us in a constellation of all the gospel graces, every one of them rooted in the heart, though mixed with much weakness and perhaps with many sins, so they be not wilfully, and impenitently lived and died in. Hammond.

What crowds of these, impenitently bold! In sounds and jangling syllables grown old, Still run on poets! Pope.

IMPERSONOUS. _[in and penit.] Lat._ Wanting wings. This word is convenient, but, I think, not used.

It is generally received an earthing hath no wings, and is reckoned amongst impersonous insects; but he that shall, with a needle, put aside the short and shadowy cases on their back, may draw forth two wings, larger than in many flies. Brown.

IMPERATE. _[imperatius, Lat._ Done with consciousness; done by direction of the mind.

The diverse internal acts of any habit may be quick and vigorous, when the external imperative acts of the same habit utterly cease. South.

Those natural and involuntary actions are not done by the energy of the soul and instrumentality of the spirit, as well as those imperative acts, wherein we see the exercise of the will, are the most efficacious. Locke.

IMPERATIVE. _[imperativ, Fr. imperative, Lat._ Commanding; expressive of command. The verb is formed in a different manner, to signify the intent of commanding, forbidding, allowing, disallowing, interesting; which likewise, from the principal use of it, is called the imperative mood. Churche's Latin Grammar.

IMPERATIVELY. _adv._ In a commanding style; authoritatively.

IMPERCEPTIBLE. _[imperceptible, Fr. in and perceptible._ Not to be discovered; not to be perceived; small; subtle; quick or slow, so as to elude observation.

Some things are in their nature imperceptible by our senses; ye, and the more refined parts of mate- rial existence, which, by reason of their subtlety, escape our perceptions. Boyle.

In the thundering of the subject with which most imperceptible connections, the Theban poet is his master. Dryden.

The parts must have their outlines in words, resembling flames, or the gleaming of a snake upon the ground they must be almost imperceptible to the touch, and even.

The operations in the globe are very slight, and almost imperceptible, and such as tend to the benefit of the earth. Boyle.

IMPERCEPTIBILITY. _n.s. [from imperceptible._ The quality of eluding observation.

Many excellent things there are in nature, which, by reason of their subtlety and imperceptibility to us, are not so much as within any of our faculties to perceive. Boyle.

IMPERCEPTIBLY. _adv. [from imperceptible._ In a manner not to be perceived.

Upon reading of a tale we are made to believe we advise ourselves: the moral insinuates itself imperceptibly, we are taught by surprise, and become more conscious and more aware. Addison.

IMPERFECT. _[imparfait, Fr. imperfectus, Lat._

1. Not complete; not absolutely finished. Defective. Used either of persons or things.

Something he left imperfect in the state, Which, since his coming forth, is thought of, Which brought the kingdom so much fear and danger, That his return was most required. Shakespeare.

Opinion is a light, vain, crude and imperfect thing, settled in the imagination; but never arriving at the understanding, there to obtain the tincture of reason. Ben Jonson.

The middle action, which produceth imperfect bodies, is fully called, by some of the ancients, incubation or inconcepcion, which is a kind of parturition. Bacon.

The parts were imperfect in the doctrine of the meteors, by their ignorance of gunpowder and fireworks. Brown.

Divers things we agree to be Knowledge, which yet are so uncertainly to be satisfactorily understood by our imperfect intellects, that let them be delivered in the clearest expressions, the notions themselves will yet appear obscure. Bacon.

A moro is either imperfect, tending to a greater withering, which is curable; or perfect, that is, an entire waking of the body, excluding all cure. Harvey on Consumptions.

The still-born sounds upon the palate burn, And die'd imperfect on the burning tongue. Dryd. As obscure and imperfect ideas often involve our reason, so do dubious words puzzle men. Locke.

2. Fail; not completely good; as, our best worship is imperfect.

IMPERFECTION. _n.s. [imperfection, Fr. from imperfect._ Defect; failure; fault, whether physical or moral; whether of persons or things.

Laws, as all other things human, are many times full of imperfection; and that which is supra- posed behooved unto men, proveth oftentimes most pernicious. Boyle.

The stake had taken to wife Anne Strangue woman for many imperfections intolerable; but for pride monstrous. Heywood.

Imperfectness would not be so much taken notice of, if vanity did not make proclamation of them. L'Estrange.

IMPETER. _[imperious, Fr. imperious, Lat._ Commanding; expressive of command.

The world is more apt to censure than appall, and himself full of imperfections than virtues. Addison's Spectator.

These are rather to be imputed to the simplicity of the age than to any imperfection in that divine nature.

IMPERFECTLY. _adv. [from imperfect._ Not completely; not fully; not without failure.

Should shinking nations summoned you away, Maria's love might justify your stay; Imperfectly, the many voys are made. Which for your safety to the gods were made; Spera, Those would hardly understand language for reason to any tolerable degree; but only a little imperfectly about things familiar. Locke.

IMPERFECTIVE. _[in and perfeo, Lat._ Not to be bored through.

IMPERFECTIVE. _[in and perfectus, Lat._ Not pierced through; without a hole.

Sometimes children are born imperfect; in which case a small puncture, dressed with a tinct, will effect the cure. Sharp.

IMPERIAL. _[imperial, Fr. imperialis, Lat._

1. Royal; possessing royalty.

Ain he took At a fair vestal, crowned in the West; But I might see you Cupid's fiery shaft In the chaste heavens of the wat'ry moon, And the imperial vot'sress pass'd on In maiden meditation, fancy free. Shakespeare.

2. Ekeckoning royalty; marking sovereignty.

My due from thee is this imperial crown, Which, as immediate from thy place and blood, Derives itself to me. Shakespeare. Henry IV.

3. Belonging to an emperor or monarch; royal, monarchical.

The main body of the marching foe Against thy imperial palace is design'd. Dryden.

You that are a sov'reign prince, alloy Imperial pow'r with your paternal sway. Dryden.

To tame the proud, the fatter'd slave to free, These are imperial arts, and worthy thee, Dryden.

IMPERIALIST. _n.s. [from imperial._

One that belongs to an emperor.

The imperialis impinged on a shame- ful a flight over the Venetians. Knolles's History.

IMPERIOUS, _[imperius, Fr. imperious, Lat._

1. Commanding; tyrannical; authoritative; haughty; arrogant; assuming command.

If it be your proud I will To show the power of your imperious eyes. Spenser.

This imperious man will work as all From princes into pages. Shakespeare. Henry VIII.

Not the imperious show Of the full fortun'd Caesar ever shall Be broach'd with me. Shakespeare. Ant. and Cleop.

He is an imperious dictator of the principles of service, and impatient of all contradiction. More.

How much I suffer'd, and how long I strove Against the assault of this imperious love! Dryden.

Recollect what disorder lusty or imperious words from parents or teachers have caused in his youth. Locke.

2. Powerful; ascendant; overbearing.

A man, by a vast and imperious mind, and a heart large as the main upon the sea shore, could command all the knowledge and art. Trollope.

IMPERSITYLY. _adv. [from imperious._ With arrogance of command; with insolence of authority.

Who's there, that knocketh so imperiously? Shak. Who can hide, that, against their own account, six whole books should, by their father's hands, be under a pain of a curse, imperiously ob- truded upon God and his church? Hall.
IMP

It is not to insult and domineer, to look disdainfully and revile impertinently, that procures an eseem from any one.

South.

The sage transported at the approaching hour,

Impertinently, and (in a moment) on the floor! Earth.

IMPETUOUSNESS. n. s. [from impetuous.]

1. Violent; forcible; fercce.

The virtue, like their Tiber's flood,

Raving its course, design'd their country's good;

But of the torrent's two impetuous prong.

Addison.

IMPETUOUSLY. adv. [from impetuous.]

1. Without reason to the present matter.

2. Troublesomely; officiously; intrusively.

I have had joy given me as preposterously, and as impertinently, as they give it to men who marry where they do not love. Snelling.

The blessedness of mortals, now the highest saint in the celestial hierarchy, began to be so impertusely impertinent, that great part of the liturgy was addressed solely to her. Hawe.

Why will any man be so impertinently officious as to tell me all this is only fancy? If it is a dream, let us continue it. Addition.

IMPETVOSIBILITY. n. s. [in and pertransio. Lat.] Impossibility to be passed through.

I willingly declined those many ingenious reasons given by others; as of the impertusibility of eternity, and impossibility therein to attain to the present limit of innumerable ages. Halse.

IMPETUOUSLY. adv. [from impetuous.]

1. Unpassable; impetribute.

Let the difficulty of passing back

Stay his return, perhaps, over this gulph

Impertious; let us try

To found a path from hell to that new world. Milton.

We may thence; the phrase of how chose a texture glass is, since so very thin a film proved so impetuous to the air, that it was forced to break the glass to itself. Boyle.

The cloud reflection is not the impetuousness of light on the solid or impetuous parts of bodies. Newton's Opticks.

A great many vessels are, in this state, impetuous by the fluids. Arbuthnot.

From the damp earth impertuous vapours rise,

Increase the darkness, and involve the skies. Pope.

2. Inaccessible. Perhaps improperly used.

A river's mouth impetuous to the wind,

And clear of rocks. Pope's Odyss.

IMPETUS. n. s. [from impetus, Lat.]

The state of not admitting any passage.

IMPETIGINOUS. adj. [from impetigo, Lat.] Scurfy; covered with small scabs.

IMPETRABLE. adj. [impertrabilis, from impetrato, Lat. impertrable, Fr.] Possible to be obtained.

Dict. To IMPETRATE. v. a. [impetr', impetrat, Lat.] To obtain by intreaty.

Dict. IMPETRATION. n. s. [impetrazione, Fr. impetration, from impetrato, Lat. The act of obtaining by prayer or intreaty. Not much used.

The blessed sacrament is the mystery of the death of Christ, and the application of his righteousness; and the great means of impetation, and the meritorious cause of it is the most solemn act of prayer, the most powerful liturgy, and means of impetation in this world.

IMPETUOSITY. n. s. [impetuosità, Fr. from impetus, Lat.] Violence; fury; vehemence of force.

I will upon Agamemnon a notable record of valor, and drive the gentleman into a most hideous opinion of his rage, skill, fury, and impetuousity. Shaks. Twelfth Night.

The whole intrigue was contrived by the duke, and so violently pursued by his spirit and impetuousity.

The mind gives not only licent, but incitation to the other passions to take their freest range, and to the utmost impetuousity. Dryden.

IMPETUOSITY, n. s. [impetuosità, Fr. from impetus, Lat.]

1. Violent; forcible; fercce.

The virtue, like their Tiber's flood,

Raving its course, design'd their country's good;

But of the torrent's two impetuous prong.

Addison.

IMPETUOUSLY. adv. [from impetuous.]

Violently; vehemently: both of men and things.

They view the windings of the hoary Nar;

Through rocks and woods impetuously he glides,

While frost and snow the fretting surface hide. Spenser.

IMPETUOUSNESS. n. s. [from impetuous.]

Violence; fury; vehemence of passion.

I wish all words of rage might vanish in that breath that utters them; that as they resemble the wind in fury and impetuousness, so they might resemble the wind in their tempers. Dryden.

IMPETUEOUSLY. adv. [from impetuous.]

Impetuous; not to be pierced.

Exceeding rage inundates the furious breast;

For never felt his impetuous breast

So would ruin force from hand of living wight. Spenser.
IMPIOUS, adj. [impious, Lat.] Irreligious; wicked; profane; without reverence of religion.

That Scripture standeth not the church of God in any stead to direct, but may be let pass as needless to be concerned with, we judge it profane, and impious, and ridiculous to think.

Dr. Johnson.

Cerate then this impious rage.

Milton.

Then level Aeneas he laid in dust,

Who stood his steed’s head with impious lust.

Dryden.

And impious nations fear’d eternal night. Dryden.

So long and respose is generally the portion of the impious and impious.

South.

When vice prevails, and impious men bear sway,

The stoutest bank may hazard, Addison.

Since after thee may rise an impious line.

Course manners of the human face divine:

Paint on, till fate dissolve thy mortal part.

And live and die the mastery of thy art, Tickell.

They, impious, dar’d to prey

On hearts devoted to the god of day. Pope.

Grand mistakes in religion proceed from taking literally what was meant figuratively, from which several impious absurdities followed, terminating in infidelity, Forster.

IMPIOUSLY, adv. [from impious.] Profanely; wickedly.

The Roman wit, who impiously divides His hero and his gods to different sides, I would adhere. Dryden.

Graveline.

IMPLACABILITY, n. s. [from implusive.] Inextorableness; irreconcilable enmity; unappeasable malice.

IMPLAECABLE, adj. [implacabilis, Lat. implacabilis, Fr.] Not to be pacified; inexorable; monstrous; constant in enmity.

His inconstancy is so implacable, that satisfaction can be made but by pangs of death. Shakespere.

Dorah bears a generous mind!

But to implacable revenge incline’d;

A boundless master, and a deadly foe. Dryden.

The French are the most implacable and the most dangerous enemies of the British nation. Addison.

IMPLICACALLY, adv. [from implacable.]

1. With malice not to be pacified; inextorable.

An order was made for disarming all the papists; upon which, though nothing was afterwards done, yet it kept up the apprehensions in the people of dangers, and dissatisfied them from the queen, whom they began every day more implacably to hate, and consequently to disoblige. Clarendon.

2. It is once used by Dryden in a kind of mixed sense of a tyrant’s love.

And this below my greatness to disown it; Love thee implacably, yet hate thee too. Dryden.

To IMPLANT, v. a. [in and planta, Lat.] To infrin; to insert; to place; to engrat; to settle; to set; to sow. The original meaning of putting a vegetable into the ground to grow is not often used.

How can you him unworthy then decree,

In whose chief part your works implanted be?

Sidney.

See, Father! what first-fruit on earth are spring,

From thy implanted grace in man! Milton.

No need of public sanctions to this kind.

Which Nature has implanted in the mind, Dryden.

There were not only the outward and natural, another cartilage, capable of motion by the help of some muscles that were implanted in it. Roy.

God having endowed man with faculties of knowing, was no more obliged to implant those innate notions in his mind, than that, having given him reason, hands, and materials, he should build him bridges.

Locke.

IMPLANTATION, n. s. [implantation, Gr. from implant. The act of setting or planting; the act of enfusing or setting.

IMPLAUSIBLE, adj. [in and plausible.] Not specious; not likely to seduce or persuade.

Nothing can better improve political schools than the art of making plausible or implausible arguments against criminal, yet the very opinion for which they resolve to determine. Swift.

IMPLEMENT, n. s. [implementum, from impliced, Lat.]

1. Something that fills up vacancy, or supplies wants. Unto many implements are necessary; more, if we seek such a life as hath in it joy, comfort, delight, and pleasure. Hooker.

2. Instrument of manufacture; tools of a trade; vessels of a kitchen.

Wood hath coined seventeen thousand pounds, and hath his tools and implements to coin six times as much. Swift.

It is the practice of the eastern regions for the artists in metals to carry about with them the whole implements of trade, to the house where they find employment. Brown.

The act of filling: the state of being full. Thophrastus conceived, upon a plentiful implantation, there may succeed a disruption of the matrix. Brown.

IMPLEXUS, adj. [implexus, Lat.] Intricate; entangled; complicated: opposed to simple.

Every poem is either simple or implexus: it is called simple when there is no change of fortune in it; implexus when the fortune of the chief actor changes from bad to good, or from good to bad. Spectator.

To IMPlicate, v. a. [impliquer, Fr. implico, Lat.] To entangle; to embarrass; to involve; to infold.

The ingredients of saltpetre do mutually implicate and hinder one another, that the concrete acts but very languidly. Boyle.

IMPLICATION, n. s. [implicatio, Lat. implication, Fr. from implicare.]

1. Involution; entanglement.

Three principal causes of firmness are the grossness, the quiet contact, and the implication. Boyle.

2. Inference not expressed, but tacitly implicated.

Though civil causes, among so many, of less moment than criminal, yet the doctors are, by implication of a different opinion. Aylliffe’s Parergon.

IMPLICIT, adj. [implicit, Fr. implicite, Lat.]

1. Entangled; infolded; complicated. This sense is rare.

In his woaily fleece

I cling feeble.

Pope.

The humble shrub,

And bush with friz’d hair implicit. Thomson.

2. Inferred; tacitly comprised; not expressed.

In the first establishments of speech there was an implicit compact, founded upon common consent, that such and such words should be signs, whereby they would express their thoughts one to another. South.

Our express requests are not granted, but the implicit desires of our hearts are fulfilled: Smollett.

The three words, however, sound so little, yet every word has it own particular meaning. Dryden.

Emblems of value, and of victory. South.

Where a malicious act is proved, a malicious intention is implicit. Sherlock.

TO IMPONDO, v. a. [imponeo, Fr. it might be written impoison.] To corrupt with poison.

On doth not know

How much an ill word doth impoison liking. Shak.

2. To kill with poison. This is rare. See EMPOISON.

A man of his own act impoison’d,

And with his clarity slain. Shak.
according to the direction of the poles.

Little need.

Being purposely adjoined unto a more vigorous loadstone, it will, in a short time, exchange its poles.

Brown.

IMPOLITICAL. adj. [in and politically].

Impolitic. = Improvident; indiscreet; void of art or forecast.

Be that exorbitant to beware of an enemy's policy, doth not give counsel to be impolitic; but rather to use all prudent foresight and circumstances; lest our simplicity be overthrown by cunning snares.

Hooke.

IMPOUND. adj. [in and ponders.]

Void of perceptible weight.

It produces visible and real effects by impounder and invisible emissions Brown's Vulg. Err.

IMPOUND. n. s. [in and ponders.]

Absence of interstices; compactness; closeness.

The porosity or impoundness between the tangible parts, and the greatness or smallness of the pores Baco.

IMPOUND. adj. [in and ponders.]

Free from pores; free from vacuities or interstices; close'd of texture; completely solid.

It has its earthly and salutary parts so exactly resolved that its body is left impounded, and dissected by atomical terminations Brown's Vulg. Err.

If stone should descend plumb down with equal velocity, being all perfectly solid and impounded, they would never the one overtake the other. Rign on the Grea.

To IMPORT. r. a. [import, Lat.]

1. To carry into any country from abroad: opposed to export for.

For wise I would sail with utmost speed, To import twelve naves, which serve luxurious feasts. Pop.

2. To imply; to infer.

Himself not only compassed all his necessities, but in such sort also framed every petition as might most naturally serve for many; and both, though not always require, yet always import a multitude of solicitors together. Hooker.

The name of discipline importeth not as they would extend it, but the thing symbolised, that thing it signified, which is named of doctrine doth. Hooker.

This question we now asked, imported, as though this land be a land of magicians. Bacon.

3. To produce in consequence.

Something be left imperfect in the state, Which since his coming forth is thought of, which Import the kingdom so much fear and danger, That his return was most required. Shakesp.

4. [importer, importe, Fr. Importem.] To be of moment: as, it imports, it is of weight or consequence.

Her length of sickness, with what else more serious.

Imprest thine heart, this bears. Shakesp.

Let the heat be such as may keep the mortal slightly affected; for that abuse all import to the work. Bacon.

Number in armies importeth not much, where the people is of weak courage. Bacon.

This to attain, whether heav'n move, or earth, Import not, if then reckon right. Milton.

It may import us in this case to hearken more than we have done to the storms that are now raising abroad. If I endure it, what import is it to you? Dryden.

IMPORT. [from the verb.]

1. Importance; moment; consequence.

What occasion of import.

Hath all so long detain d you from your wife. Shakesp.

Some business of import that triumph wears You seem to go with ground. Dryd. and Lee's Oedipus.

When there is any dispute, the judge ought to approach the importation of the cause, to prove both the clearest and the ability of the advocate, and in proportion to the import of the cause. Ags.

2. Tendency.

Tend to the former observations made about vegetables a third of the same import made in mineral substances. Boile.

3. Any thing imported from abroad; as, our imports ought not to exceed our exports.

IMPORTABLE. adj. [in and portable.]

Importable; not to be endured. A word accented by Spenser on the first syllable. It is used in the Apocrypha.

Boile.

4. Importance. An improper use peculiar to Shakespeare.

Marin wrote

The letter at Sir Toby's great importance.

In recurrence whither he hath married her. Shak.

IMPORTANT. adj. [import, Fr.]

1. Momentous; weighty; of great consequence.

is the most important and pressing care of a new and vigorous king was his marriage, for immediate establishment of the royal line. Hutton.

The great trouble to the crime: 'tis the falsifying the most important trust. Bacon of Piety.

O then, what interest shall I make To save him from the selfsame thing it signified, which is named of doctrine doth. Hooker.

This question we now asked, imported, as though this land be a land of magicians. Bacon.

Important things still let your fabes hold,

And moral mysteries with art unfold. Granville.

Th' important hour had pass'd unheed'd by Jem.

2. Momentous; forcible; of great efficacy.

This seems to be the meaning here.

He fiercely contended, and with important outcome his assailed;

Who soon prepar'd to fight, his sword and earth drew, And him with equal valour contemn'd. Fair Q.

3. Important. A corrupt use of the word. See IMPORT.

Importance.

My mourning and important tears hath pitied. Shak.

IMPORTATION. n. s. [from import.]

The act or practice of importing; or bringing into a country from abroad opposed to exportation.

The king's reserves should not be neglected upon importation and exportation. Bacon.

These mines fill the country with greater numbers of people than it would be able to bear, without the importation of corn from foreign parts.

The emperor has forbidden the importation of their manufactures into any part of the empire. Add.

IMPORTER. n. s. [from import.]

One that brings in from abroad.

It is impossible to limit the quantity that shall be brought in, especially if the importers of it have so sure a market as the Eschewer. Swift.

IMPORTLESS. adj. [from import.]

Of no moment or consequence. This is a word not in use, but not inelegant.

We less expect that matter needless of impertinent burden, Divide this thy land. Shakesp.

IMPORTUNATE. adj. [importunus, Lat. importune, Fr.] Unreasonable and incessant in solicitations; not to be repulsed.

I was in debt to my importunate business; but he would not hereupon excuse me. Shakesp.

They may not be able to bear the clamour of an importunate sitter. Smolleville.

A rule restrains the most importunate importers. R. Rogers.

IMPORTUITY. adv. [importunus, Lat. importune, Fr.] With incessant solicitation; pertinaciously in petition.

Their pertinacity is such, that when you drive them out of one form, they assume another; and are more importunately importune, as makes many think it impossible to be freed from them. Duppa.

IMPORTUENESS. n. s. [from importune.

Incessant solicitation.

She with more and more importuosity pressed, which, in all good manners, was either to be desired, or not desired as needed. Shakesp.

To IMPORTUNE. r. a. [importune, Fr. importunnus, Lat. Importuned accentuated on the second syllable.] To tease; to harass with slight vexation; perpetually recurring; to molest.

Against all sense you do importune her, Shakesp.

If he espied any head gaudy in his fellow servant, and so was able to straightway know it, and not rest free from importuning, until the fellow had put away his habit. Carec.

The king sent from the most solemn hierarchy began to be so importunately importunate, that a great part of the liturgy was addressed solely to her. Spenser.

The bloom of beauty other years demands, Nor will be gather'd by such wither'd hands.

You importune it with a false desire. Dryden.

Every one hath experienced this troublesome intrusion of some fascinating ideas, which thus importune the understanding, and hinder it from being employed. Locke.

We have been obliged to hire troops from several princes of the empire, whose ministers and residents here have perpetually importuned the court with unreasonable demands. Swift.

IMPORTUNE. adj. [importunnus, Lat. It was ancienly pronounced with the accent on the second syllable.]

1. Constantly recurring; troublesome by frequency.

All that charge did fervently apply,

With greedy malice and importune zeal.

And plenteous tears the huge artillery,

With which they daily made most dreadful battery, have drawn the blood of the most necessitous people. Spenser.

Henry, king of England, needed not to have bestowed such great sums, nor so to have busied himself with importune and incessant labour, to compass my death and ruin, if I had been a feigned person. Bacon's Henry VII.

2. Troublesome; vexatious.
Importunity, adv. [from importune].

1. Troublesomely; incessantly.

The pulser bent his ear unto the noise, To weet what call'd so importunately: Again he heard a more effectual voice. That bade him come in haste. Fairy Queen.

2. Unseasonable; improperly.

The constitutions that the apostles made concerning deacons and widows, are, with much importance, but very importantly urged by the disciplinarians. Sanderson.

Importunity, n.s. [importunitas, Lat. importunità, Fr. importuante.]

Incessant solicitation.

Overcome with the importunity of his wife, a woman of a haughty spirit, he altered his former purpose. Knuttel.

Thrice I deeded her, and turn'd to sport. Her importunity. Milton's Agonies.

To impose, v. a. [imposy, Fr. imposyité, Lat.]

1. To lay on as a burthen or penalty. It shall not be lawful to impose toll upon them. Ezra, vii.

If a son do fall into a lewd act, the imputation by your rule, should be imposed upon his father. Shakesp.

To tyrants others have their country sold. Imposing foreign lords for foreign gold. Dryd. En.

On impious realms and barb'd kings impose Thy plagues, and curse them with such ills as those. Pope.

2. To enjoin as a duty or law. What good or evil is there under the sun, what action correspondent or requir'd unto a law which God hath imposed upon his creatures; but in or upon it God doth work, according to the law which himself hath eternally purposed to keep. Hooker.

There was a thorough way made by the sword for the imposing of the laws upon them. Thon. Thou on the deep impost noble laws, And by that justice havest read the cause. Haller.

Christianity hath hardly imposed any other laws upon us, but what are enacted in our nature, or are agreeable to the prime and fundamental laws of nature. Tilling.

Impose but your commands. This hour shall bring you twenty thousand hands, Drydgen.

It was neither imposed on me, nor so much as the subject given me by any man. Drydgen.

3. To fix on; to impinge to. This cannot be allowed, except we impinge that unto the first cause which we impose not on the second; or what we deny unto nature, we impinge unto nature itself. Brown.

5. To impose on. To put a cheat on; to deceive. Physicians and philosophers have suffered themselves to be so imposed upon as to publish chymical experiments, which they never tried. Boyle.
Proud Caesar, 'midst triumphal cars,
The spoils of nations, and the pomp of wars,
Imag'd, vainly, to be great.
Shew'd Rome her Cato's figure drawn in state.

To IMPound. v. a. [in and pound.]
1. To inclose as in a pound; to shut in; to confine.
The great care was rather how to impound the rebels, that none of them might escape, than that any doubt was made to vanquish them. Bacon.

2. To shut up in a pinfold.
England
Hath taken and impounded as a stay
The king. Shaks. Henry V.

3. To impound, to enclose, to inclose.

To IMPower. See EMPOWER.

IMPRACTICABLE. adj. [impracticable, Fr. in and practicable.]
1. Not to be performed; impossible.
Had there not been still remaining bodies, the legitimate appendages of the mediævalian earth, I would have been an extravagant and impracticable undertaking to have gone about to determine any thing even to a consideration. Hooke.

2. Not to be performed; impracticable.
To speak up the necessity of that which our experience tells us is utterly impracticable, were to at last mar our own situation with the terrible precipice of universal pandemonium. Rogers.

IMPRACTICABILITY. n. s. [from impracticable.]
1. Impartiality.
I do not know a greater mark of an able minister than that of rightly adapting the several faculties of the body, and making all things more to be restrained than the impracticabilities of doing this. Swift.

2. Impracticableness; stubbornness.
To IMPRACTICATE. v. a. [imprecate, Lat.]
To call for evil upon himself or others.

IMPRECA'TION. n. s. [implication, Lat.]
Curse; prayer by which any evil is wished to another or himself.
My mother shall the horrid furies raise
With imprécation, that she, under the influence, Sir John Holburn, uncursed by any imprécation of mine, paid his own and his eldest son's heads. King.

3. Imprecation.
With imprécation thus he fill'd the air,
And angry Neptune heard th'unrighteous pray'r. Pope.

IMPRECATORY. adj. [from imprécation.]
Containing wishes of evil.

To IMPRECA'TE. v. a. [in and pregno, Lat.]
To fill with young; to fill with any matter or quality; to make pregnant.
In her ears the sound
Yet rung of his persuasive words, impréc'd
With reason, and not content to be more to be restrained than the impracticabilities of doing this. Swift.

IMPREGNATION. n. s. [from imprécate.]
The differences of impresible and not impresible, figurative and not figurable, are plebeian notions. Bacon’s Nat. History.

IMPRIPRESS. n. s. [from impress.] The mark made by pressure; the dint; the impression.

1. To mark upon any substance by pressure.
   One of the same sort, impressed upon pieces of wax of different colours. Hunter’s Essay of Speeches.
   Having surveyed the image of God in the soul of man, we are not to omit those characters of majesty that God impressed upon the body. South. She arrested his spacious meadows flows;
   Justices her arm upon his fat'ned lands,
   And seizes on his fine herbs impress her sands.

2. To stamp words upon paper by the use of types.
   To fix on the mind or memory.
   There is a kind of conveying of effectual and impressing passages, amongst compliments, which is of singular use.
   We have all those ideas in our understandings which we can make the objects of our thoughts without the help of those sensible qualities which first impressed them. Locke.
   "Recollect the power to revive again in our minds those ideas which, after impressing, have disappeared."

3. To imprint is less proper.
   When we set before our eyes a round globe, the idea impressed in our mind is of a flat circle, variably shadowed. Locke.

4. To imprimis.
   To imprint in is less proper.
   If we consider the nature of that impression which the brute impresses on the mind, Locke.

5. To imprison.
   To shut up; to confine; to keep from liberty; to restrain in place.
   He imprison’d was in chains remissless; For that Hippolytus’ rent corse he did redress. Spenser.
   Now we are in the street, he first of all, Improbableness proud, creeps on the wall; And so impressed and here in me by me, Sells for a little state his liberty. Donne.
   Try to imprison the restless wind; So swift is guilt, so hard to be confin’d. Dryden.
   If a man imprisons himself in his closet, and employes reason to find out the nature of the corporeal world, without experiments, he will frame a scheme of chaos. Wotton.
   It is not improbable, that all the virtual heat in the juices of vegetables, metals, and minerals, may be owing to the action of the impressed rays. Chev. Chan.

IMPRISONMENT. n. s. [emprisonment, Fr. from imprison.] Confinement; clausure; state of being shut in prison.

It may be written emprisonment.
His shrews waxen weak and raw, Through long imprisonment and hard constraint. Spenser.

IMPRISONMENT. n. s. [emprisonment, Fr. from imprison.] Confinement; clausure; state of being shut in prison.

IMPROBABILITY. n. s. [from improb- ble.] Unlikelihood; difficulty to be believed.

The difficulty and the improbability of attempting this successfully is great. Hammond.

IMPROBABLE. adj. [improbable, Fr. improbabilis, Lat. in and probable.] Unlikely; incredible.

In the improbability of those patches will appear improbable to those who live at a distance from the fashionable world. Addison.

IMPROBABLE, adv. [from improbable.]

1. Without likelihood.
   In a manner not to be approved. Obsole.
   Aristotle tells us, if a drop of wine be put into ten thousand measures of water, the wine being overpower’d, will be turned into water: he speaks very improbably. Boyle.

TO IMPROBATE. v. a. [in and prove, Lat.] Not to approve, to disprove. Ainsworth.

IMPROBATION. n. s. [improbation, Fr. Act of disallowing. Ainsworth.

IMPROBITY. n. s. [improbite, improbus, Lat.] Want of honesty; dishonesty; baseness.

He was perhaps excommunicable, yea, and cast out for notorious improbity. Hooker.

We balance the improbability of the one with the improbity of the other. L’Estrange.

TO IMPROFICALCATE. v. a. [in and prolific.] To impregnate; to fecundate. A word not used.

A difficulty in eggs is how the sperm of the cock impregnates, and makes the oval conception fruitful.

IMPROPER. adj. [impropre, Fr. imprisus, Lat.]

1. Not well adapted; unqualified.
   As every science requires a peculiar genius, so likewise there is a genius peculiarly improper for every one. Barrow.

2. Unit: not conclusive to the right end. The methods used in an original case would be very improper in a guilty case. Arbuth. on Dict.

3. Not just; not accurate.
   He disappointed, was rapacious; For his improper speech to say he dy’d: He was exhaul’d. Dryden.

IMPROPERLY. adv. [from improper.]

1. Not fitly; incongruously.

2. Not justly; not accurately.
   They amusing me of their assistance in correcting my fault, where I spoke improperly, I was encouraged. Dryden.

TO IMPROVISCATE. v. a. [in and propris, Lat.]

1. To convert to private use; to seize to himself.
   From the pardon of the rest the king thought it not fit it should pass by parliament; the better, being more of grace, to impriovise the thanks to himself. Bacon’s Henr. VII.

2. To forestall the possessions of the church into the hands of laicks.
   Mrs. Gulston being possessed of the improper parsonage of Bardwell in Suffolk, did procure from the king leave to annex the same to the vicarage. Speltman.
IMP

IMPROPRIATION. n.s. [from improve] Improbably, adv. [from improbably] Improbably, adv. [from improbably]

An impropery is properly so called when the chattel land is in the hands of a tenant; and an impropriation is when it is in the hands of a bishop, college, or religious house, though sometimes they are talked of as if they were

Improving in his estate, he took a course to dispose of it for the augmentation of the

IMPRAVATURAL. n.s. [from improve] Improving, adv. [from improve] Improving, adv. [from improve]

A layman that has the possession of the lands of the church.

Where the vicar leases his glebe, the tenant must pay the great tithes to the rector or improver.

IMPROVABLE. adj. [from improve] Improvable, adj. [from improve] Improvable, adj. [from improve]

Improvable. adj. [from improve] Improvable, adj. [from improve] Improvable, adj. [from improve]

The prosperity of a good is a better state; capable of improvement.

Improvable. adj. [from improve] Improvable, adj. [from improve] Improvable, adj. [from improve]

In a manner that admits of melioration.

To IMPROVE. v. a. [in and probus. Quasi proban facere. Skinner] To improve. v. a. [in and probus. Quasi proban facere. Skinner]

1. To advance any thing nearer to perfection;

To improve. v. u. To advance in good-

2. To improve. v. u. To advance in good-

3. To improve. v. u. To advance in good-

ACTIVE PRONOUN. v.s. [in and provision] Active pronoun. v.s. [in and provision] Active pronoun. v.s. [in and provision]

We take care to improve in our fragility and dignity, virtue, which become us, under all circum-
tances.

ACTIVE PRONOUN. v.s. [in and provision] Active pronoun. v.s. [in and provision] Active pronoun. v.s. [in and provision]

Improvement. n.s. [from improve] Improvement. n.s. [from improve] Improvement. n.s. [from improve]

1. Melioration; advancement of any thing from good to better.

Some virtues tend to the preservation of health, and others to the improvement and security of castes.

2. Act of improving; something added or changed for the better; sometimes with

The parts of Simon, Camilla, and some few others, are improvements on the Greek poet.

3. Progress from good to better.

There is a design of publishing the history of architecture, with its several improvements and decl.

4. Instruction; edification.

I look upon your city as the best place of improvement; from the school we go to the university, but from the universities to London. South.

5. Effect of melioration.

Love is the greatest of human affections, and friendship the noblest and most refined improvement of love.

6. One that makes himself or any thing else better.

They were the greatest improvers of those qualifications with which courts used to be adorned.

7. Unfitting; unmanly; incorrect.

Unfitting, unmanly; incorrect; with ill fortune.

This experiment has been but very improcerably attempted.

Boyle.

Improvable. adj. [from improve] Improvable, adj. [from improve] Improvable, adj. [from improve]

Capable of being advanced from a good to a better state; capable of melioration.

Improvable. adj. [from improve] Improvable, adj. [from improve] Improvable, adj. [from improve]

Adventures in knowledge are laudable, and the essays of weaker heads afford improvable hints un-

But, when we are poor, it is the fault of

Brown.

We have not enough, and that too of an improper nature, that is, capable of infinite ad-

Brown.

Animals are not improvable beyond their proper-ness; a dog will never learn to new tricks, or for a cat to talk; Green.

I have a fine spread of improvable lands, and am already planting woods and draining marshes.

Addison's Spectator.

Improvableness. n.s. [from improvable] Improvableness. n.s. [from improvable] Improvableness. n.s. [from improvable]

Capability of being made better.

Improvably. adv. [from improbably] Improvably. adv. [from improbably] Improvably. adv. [from improbably]

In a manner that admits of melioration.

To IMPROVE. v. a. [in and probus. Quasi proban facere. Skinner] To improve. v. a. [in and probus. Quasi proban facere. Skinner]

1. To advance any thing nearer to perfection; to raise from good to better. We

We amend a bad, but improve a good thing.

I hope to improve the honour of the living by imparing of that of the dead.

Denham.

Heaven seems improb'd with a superior ray.

And the bright arch reflects a double ray,

[In and prove; improver, Fr. impro-bo, Lat.] To disprove. Now disused.

Though the prophet Jeremy was unjustly accused, yet doth that improve any thing that I have said, therefore this is true.

To IMPROVE. v. u. To advance in good-

To IMPROVE. v. u. To advance in good-

To IMPROVE. v. u. To advance in good-

IMPULSIVE. adj. [from impulsive] Impulsive. adj. [from impulsive] Impulsive. adj. [from impulsive]

We take care to improve in our fragility and dignity, virtue, which become us, under all circum-

tances.

IMPULSIVE. adj. [from impulsive] Impulsive. adj. [from impulsive] Impulsive. adj. [from impulsive]

1. Communicated force; the effect of one body acting upon another.

If these little impulses set the great wheels of deduction on work, the largeness and height of that shall not be adjudged by the smallness of its case, South.

Bodies produce ideas in us manifestly by im-

Bodies, from the impulse of a fluid, can only

Bodies, from the impulse of a fluid, can only

Bodies, from the impulse of a fluid, can only

Bodies, from the impulse of a fluid, can only

Without thought; without care.

As we are in the street, lie first of all,

Improvement. n.s. [in and provision] Improvement. n.s. [in and provision] Improvement. n.s. [in and provision]

Want of forethought.

Her improvement would be justly accusable.

Brown.

IMPULSIVE. n.s. [impulsion, Fr. impul-sion, Lat.] Impulsion, impulse.

Want of prudence; indiscrimation; negligence; inattention to interest.

IMPULSIVE. adj. [impulsive, Fr. impul-sion, Lat.] Impulse, impulsive.

Wanting prudence; injudicious; indiscreet; negligent.

There is no such impudent person as he that to perform it first. Shakspe. Wint. Tale.

Nor did Noah's impiety justly Chan's impudence, or exempt him from that curse of being servant of servants.

King Charles.

These clear truths, that either their own evidence forces us to admit, or common experience makes it impudence to deny. Locke.

IMPUDENT. adj. [impudent, Fr. impu-dens, Lat.]

1. Shameless; wanting modesty.

It is not a confidant brow, nor the throne of

The virtues that come with such more than impulse withstanding, that can thrust me from a level con-

Shaks. Henry IV.

Is to be impudent. Dryden's Spanish Friar.

2. Unchaste; immodest.

IMPUDENTLY. adv. [from impudent.] Impudently. adv. [from impudent.] Impudently. adv. [from impudent.]

Shamelessly; without modesty.

At once assail

With open mouths, and impudently rail. Sowly.

Why should soft Fabius impudently bear

Names gain'd by conquest in the Gallic war?

Why lays he claim to Hercules his strain.

Yet dares be base, captivate, and want? Dryden.

To IMPUGN. v. a. [impugner, Fr. impugne, Lat.] To attack; to assault by law or argument.

Of a strange nature is the suit you follow;

Yet in such rule, that the Venetian law

Cannot impugn you. Shakspe. Merek. of Tren.

I cannot think myself engaged to discourse of lots; as to their nature, use, and allowableness;

But not only in the set number and business, but also of recreation, which is impugned

by some, though better defended by others. South.

Shakspeare reports, he was one of those in his time; but the truth hereof I will not rashly impugn, or over boldly affirm. Peacham en Drau.

IMPUGNER. n.s. [from impugn] Impugner. n.s. [from impugn] Impugner. n.s. [from impugn]

One that attacks or invades.

IMPULSE. n.s. [impulse, Lat.] Impulse.

1. Communicated force; the effect of one body acting upon another.

If these little impulses set the great wheels of deduction on work, the largeness and height of that shall not be adjudged by the smallness of its case, South.

IMP

These were my natural impulses for the undertaking; but there was an accidental motive, which was fall as forcible.

Dryden.

Moses saw the bush burn without being consumed, and heard a voice out of it: this was something, being the impulse of an idea upon his mind to go to Pharaoh, that he might bring his brethren out of Egypt.

Locke.

3. Hostile Impression.

Like two great rocks against the raging tide, Unmo'ved the united chiefs abide, sustaining th' impulse, and receive the war. Prior.

IMPULSION. n. s. [impulsion, Fr. impulsion, L. a.] The agency of body in motion upon body.

1. In the motion of parts of any solid body passeth without sound; for that sound that is heard sometimes is produced only by the breaking of the air, and not by the impulsion of the air.

Bacon.

To the impulse there is requisite the force of the body that moveth, and the resistance of the body that is moved; and if the body be too great, it yieldeth too little; and if it be too small, it resisteth too little.

Bacon's Nat. History.

2. Influence operating upon the mind.

But thou didst plead Divine impulsion in support how thou mightst find some occasion to inflame our foes.Milton's Ag.

IMPULSIVE. adj. [impulsion, Fr. from impulse.] Having the power of impulse; moving; impellent.

Nature and duty bind him to obedience; but those placed in a lower sphere, His fierce ambition, like the highest mover, has hurried with a strong impulsive motion against their proper course.

Addison.

What is the impulsive or impulsive cause of this prevention of sin? It is perfectly free grace.

South.

Poor me! poor papers! we and they do some impulsive force obey. And are but play'd with, do not play. Prior.

IMPUNITY. n. s. [impunity, Fr. impunité, L. impunitas, Lat.] Freedom from punishment; exemption from punishment.

In the condition of subjects they will gladly continue, as long as they may be protected, and justly governed, without oppression on the one side, or impunity on the other.

Davies.

A general impunity would confirm them; for the vulgar will never believe, that there is a crime where they see no penalty.

Men, potent in the commonwealth, will employ their ill-gotten influence towards procuring impunity, either for hardships unfavourable to themselves or dependants.

Atterbury.

IMPURE. adj. [impar, Fr. impur, L. impurus, Lat.] Unpurer; not pure.

1. Defiled with guilt; unholy: of men.

No more can impure man retain and move In that pure region of a worthy love, Thus earthy substance can un'derly aspire. And leave his nature to converse with fire, Divine.

2. Contrary to sanctity; unhallow'd; unholy: of things.

Hypocrisies hastily start, Condemning as impure what God has made Pure, and commands to some, leaves free to all.

Milton.

3. Unchaste.

If black scænal, or foul-fac'd reproach, Attend the second part of your imposition, Your meretriciousness shall acquaint me With all the impure spots and stains thereof. Shak.

One could not derange a new proper hell for an impure spirit, than that which Plato has touch'd upon.

Addison.

4. Feculent; foul with extraneous mixtures; drossy.

IMPURELY. adv. [from impure.] With impurity.

IMPURENESS. n. s. [impureté, Fr. impurité, L. impure.]

1. Want of sanctity; want of holiness.

Foul impurities reign'd among the monkish clergy.

Atterbury.

To be so full of impurities, and impurities of which will be carried into Arians.

3. Feculent admixture.

Cleanse the analytical duct by vomiting, and clysters, the impurities of which will be carried into Atterbury.

To IMPURPLE. p.a. [enmputr'rer, Fr. from purple.] To make red or colour as with purple. Now in loose garlands, thick thrown off the bright pavement, that like a sea of jasper stone, Impurpled with celestial roses smil'd. Milton.

IMPUTABLE. adj. [from impute.] 1. Chargeable upon any one; that of which any one may be accused. That first sort of foolishness is imputable to them. South.

2. Accusable; chargeable with a fault.

Not proper. If the wife departs from her husband, through any default of his, as on the account of cruelty, then he shall be compell'd to allow her alimony; for the law deems it to be a justive wife as long as the fault lies at his door, and she is wise imputable.

Adjut.

IMPUTABILITY. n. s. [from impute.] The quality of being imputable. The necessary to the imputability of an action, that it be avoidable.

Norris.

IMPUTATION. n. s. [imputation, Fr. from impute.] 1. Attribution of any thing : generally of ill.

Trust to me, Ulysses: Our imputation shall be oddly paid.

In this wild action, Shakesp. Troilus and Cress.

2. Censure; reproach.

Whatsoever happens they also the least feel that scourge of vulgar impugnation, which notwithstanding they deserve.

Hooker.

Let us be careful to guard ourselves against these groundless imputations of our enemies, and to rise above them.

Addison.

Neither do I reflect upon the memory of his late Majesty, whom entirely acquit of any imputation upon this matter.

Swift.

4. Hint; slight notice.

Anthony was a good man. —Have you any reason to impute the contrary? —No, nò; my meaning is to have you understand me that he is sufficient. Shakesp. Mer. of Venice.

IMPUTATIVE. adj. [from impute.] That which may impute.

Ainsworth.

To IMPUTE. r. a. [imputer, Fr. imputer, Lat.] 1. To charge upon; to attribute; generally ill; sometimes good.

It was imputed to him for righteousness.

Romans, iv. 22.

Men in their innovations should follow the example of time, which innovateth but quietly, and by degrees; so scarce to be changed otherwise whatsoever is new and unlooked for, even men's some, and impairs others; and he that is holpen takes it for a fortune, and thanks the time; and he that is hurt for a wrong, imputeth it to the author.

Bacon's Essays.

I made it by your persuasion, to satisfy those who imputed it to folly, and example. Impute your dangers to our ignorance. Dryden.

This obscurity cannot be imputed to want of language in so great a master of style.

I have read a book imputed to Lord Bathurst, called a dissertation on parties. Swift.

2. To reckon to one what does not properly belong to him.

Thy merit Imputed shall absolve them who renounce Their own both righteous and unrighteous deeds.

Milton.

IMPUTER. n. s. [from impute.] He that imputes.

N. prep. [in, Lat.] 1. Noting the place where any thing is present; not without.

In school of love are all things taught we see; There leant's this maid of arms the irresistible.

Fariar.

Is this place here not sufficient strong To guard us in? Daniel's Civil War.

2. Noting the state or thing present at any time.

The other is only by error and misconceived named the ordinance of Jesus Christ: no one proof is yet brought forth, whereby it may clearly appear to be so in very deed.

Hooker.

Like one of two contending in a prize, That thinks he hath done well in people's eyes.

Shakesp.

Sir Edmund Courtney, and the haughty prelate, With many more confederates, are in arms, Shak.

Danger before, a, d in, and after the act.

You needs must grant is great. Daniel's Civil War.

However he be in knowledge, I may truly say it is of no use at all in probabilities; for the asent there, being to be determined by the preponderance, after a due weighing of all the proofs on both sides, nothing is so unfit to assist the mind in so that as syllogism.

Locke.

God hath made our eternal and temporal interests, in most cases, very consistent.

Smirridge's Sermon.

None was so little in their friendships, so much in that of those whom they had most abused.

Dante's.

3. Noting the time.

When we would consider eternity a parte ante, what do we but, beginning from ourselves and the present time we are in, repeat in our minds the ideas of years or ages past?

Locke.

4. Noting power.

To feed men's souls, quoth he, is not in man.

Habb. Tale.

5. Noting proportion.

Let us in general be reduced to five in the hundred, and let that rate be proclaimed to be free and current.

Bacon.

I cannot lay down the common course, which, at least, in ten of those who enter into the ministry, are obliged to enter.

Swift.

6. According to.

In all likelihood I brought all my fins out of the bed, which, 'tis probable, he has not done off the breach.

Collier.

7. Concerning.

I only consider what he, who is allowed to have carried this argument fartherst, has said in it.

Locke.

8. For the sake. A solemn phrase.

955
INA

Neither ignorance nor inutility can be pretended to: and what plea can we offer to divine justice to prevent it? Shaks. Julius Caesar.

INA-ABSENCE. n. s. [in and absen-cence.] Intemperance; want of power to abstain; prevalence of appetite.

Diseases dire; of which a monstrous crew
Before thee should appear, that thy may's know

INA-ACCESSIBLE. adj. [inaccessible, Fr. in and accessible.] Not to be reached;

not to be approached.

In that sense.

Dyer.

INA-ACCURATE. adj. [inaccurate.] Want of exactness.

INA-ACCURATE. adj. [in and accurate.] Not exact; not accurate. It is used sometimes of persons, but more frequently of performances.

INACTION. n. s. [inaction, Fr. in and action.] Cessation from labour; forbearance of labour.

The times and amusements past are more like a dream to me, than those which are present:

Life in a refreshing kind of inaction.

Pope.

INA-ACTIVE. adj. [in and active.] Not busy; not diligent; idle; indolent;

sluggish.

INA-VIBLY. adv. [in passive,] Idly; without labour; without motion; sluggishly.

In seasons of perfect freedom, mark how your son spends his time; whether he inactively loses it away, when left to his own inclination. Locke.

INA-VINCE. n. s. [invincible, adj. invincible.] Not overcome; inact-ually.

Idleness; rest; sluggishness.

A doctrine which manifestly tends to discourage the endeavours of men, to introduce a lazy inactivity, and neglect of the ordinary means of grace. Rogers.

Inanity, conceiv'd within our breast,

Swift.

INA-DEMOCRATIC. adj. [in and democra-tical, Lat.] Not equal to the purpose;

defective; falling below the due proportion.

Remorse for vice

Not paid, or paid inadequate in price.

What further means can reason now direct? Drier.

Inadequate ideas are, that which is but a partial or incomplete representation of these arche-types to which they are referred. Locke.

INA-DEQUATELY. adv. [from inadequate,]

Defectively; not completely.

These people may either exactly fill, or but inaquately.

INA-VENIENCE. n. s. [indevenience, invenience, Fr. inadveniency,] Fr. from inadvertent.

INA-VENIENCE. n. s. [inadveniency, invenience, Fr. inadveniency,] Fr. from inadvertent.

1. Carelessness; negligence; inattention.

There is a difference between them, as between inadveniency and delirition, between surprise and set purpose.

From an habitual heedless inadveniency, men are so intent upon the present that they neglect nothing else.

South.

2. Act or effect of negligence.

Many persons have lain under great and heavy scandaJ's, which have taken their first rise only from some inadveniency or indiscretion.

The productions of a great genius, with many lapses and inadveniencies, are infinitely preferable to the works of an inferior kind of author, which are scrupulously exact.

Addison.

INA-DVERTENT. adj. [in and advertens,

Lat.] Negligent; careless.

INA-DVERTENTLY. adv. [from inadvertent.] Carelessly; negligently.

Aristotle mentions Telegonus as the son of Circe and Ulysses, who afterwards slew his father with the bite of a fish inadvertent.

Brome.

Worthy persons, if inadvertently drawn into a deviation, will endeavour instantly to recover their clear ground.

Circeus.

INA-LIENABLE. adv. [in and alienable,] That cannot be alienated, or granted to another.

INA-DIMENTIAL. adj. [in and alimental.]

Affecting no nourishment.

Dulcecorpor importet a degree to nourishment;

and the making of things inadvertent to become alimental, may be an experiment of great profit.

Bacon.

INA-MISSIBLE. adj. [inmissible, Fr. in and anmissare, Lat.] Not to be lost.

These advantages are inmissible.

Hommond.

INA-N. adj. [innacis, Lat.] Empty; void.

It is used licentiously for a substantive.

We sometimes speak of place in the great inane, beyond the confines of the world.

To IN-A-NIMATE. v. a. [in and animo,

Lat.] To animate; to quicken.

This word is not in use.

There's a kind of world remaining still,

Though she which did inanimate and fill

The world be gone; yet in this last night

Her ghost doth walk, that is, a glistening light.

Donne.

INA-NIENT. adj. [innacius, Lat.] Void of life; without animation.

The spirits of animate bodies are all in some degree in and of itself, but inanimate bodies have spirits to whir inflamed.

Bacon.

The golden goddess, present at the prayer,

Whose beauty so men of sense deificed fair

And gave the sign of granting. Dryden.

All the ideas of sensible qualities are not inherent in the inanimate bodies; but are the effects of their motion upon the inanimate bodies of

Bentley.

Both require the constant influence of a principle different from that which governs the inanimate part of the universe.

Chaucer.

From ruts where Verrius's colours fall,

And leave inanimate the naked wall,

Still in thy song should vanish'd France appear.

Pope.

INA-NITION. n. s. [inination, Fr. inani-sus, Lat.] Emptiness of body; want of fullness in the vessels of body.

Weakness which attends fevers proceeds from too great fullness in the beginning, and too great inanimality in the latter end of the disease.

Avicen theon Dint.

INA-NITY. n. s. [innacius, Lat.] Emptiness; void space.

This opinion excludes all such inanity, and admits no vacuities but so little only as no body whatever can come to, but will be bigger than they, and must touch the corpuscles which those vacuities divide.

Digby on Bulles.

INA-PETENCY. n. s. [in and appeten-

tia, Lat.] Want of stomach or appetite.

INA-PETENCY. n. s. [in and appeten-

tia, Lat.] Want of stomach or appetite.

INA-PETENCY. n. s. [in and appetentia, Lat.] Not to be put to a particular use.

INAPPLICABILITY. n. s. [from inapplicable.] Unfitness for the particular purpose.

INAPPLICABLE. n. s. [inapplicability, Fr. in and application.] Indulgence; negligence.

INARABLE. adj. [in and aro, Lat.] Not capable of tillage.

To INARGE, v. a. [in and arch.] Incur. To make the method of grafting, which is commonly called grafting by approach. This method of grafting is used when the stock and the tree may be joined; and on the branch, you would search and have fitted to it that part of the stock where you intend to joint it, you would have the wood and one side three inches in length: after the same manner cut the stock or branch in the place where the graft is to be united, so that they may join equally together that the sap may meet; then cut a little tongue upwards in the graft, and make a notch in the stock to admit it; so that when they are joined the tongue will prevent their slipping, and the graft will more closely unite with the stock. Having thus placed them exactly together, tie them; then cover the place with grafting clay, to prevent the air entering to dry it out, or the wet from getting in to rot the stock; you should make a stake into the ground, to which is to be united, and then the graft may be cut from the mother-tree, observing to smooth it off close to the stock, and cover the joints with fresh grafting clay. The operation is always performed in April or May, and is common practised upon oranges, myrtles, jasmines, walnuts, firs, and pines, which will not succeed by common grafting on holding.

INARCULATE. adj. [inarticulate, Fr. in and articulate.] Not uttered with distinctness, like that of the syllables of human speech.

Observe what inarticulate sounds resemble any of the particular letters of the English alphabet. Willis's Myth, Mag.

By the harmony of words we elevate the mind to a sense of devotion; as our solemn music, which is inarticulate poetry, doth in church.

INARCULATELY. adv. [from inarticulate.] Not distinctly.

INARTICULATENESS. n. s. [from inarticulate.] Confusion of sounds; want of distinctness in pronouncing.

INARTICULAR. adj. [in and inarticulate.] Contrary to art.

I have ranked this among the effects; and it may be thought inarticulate to make it the cause also. Decay of Virtue.

INARTIFICIALLY. adv. [from inartificial.] Without art; in a manner contrary to the rules of art.

This lofty humour is clamorous and inartificially managed, when it is effectuated by those of self-denying profession.

INATTENTION. n. s. [inattention, Fr. in and attention.] Disregard; negligence; neglect; heedlessness.

Persons keep out of the reach of the reproofs of the ministry, and, by such inattention or contempt renders them of little effect. Rogers.

We see a strange inattention to this most important point. Rogers.

Novel ladies attract our ravish'd ears; but old, the mind with inattention bears.

INATTENTIVE. adj. [in and attentive.] Heedless; careless; negligent; regardless.

If we indulge the frequent roaring of passions, we shall procure an unsteady and inattentive habit.

INAUDIBLE. adj. [in and audible.] Not to be heard; void of sound.

Let's take the instant by the forward top; for we are old, and, if our days are few, Th' inaudible and noiseless foot of time Steals, ere we can effect them. Shaksp.

To INAUGURATE. v. a. [inauguro, Lat.] To consecrate; to have a new office by solemn rites; to begin with good omens; to begin.

Those beginnings of years were propositions to him, as if kings did the remarkable days to inaugurate their favours, that they may appear acts as well of the time as of the will. Wotton.

INAUGURATION. n. s. [inauguration, Fr. inauguro, Lat.] Investiture by solemn rites.

The royal olive was solemnly sworn, at his inauguration, to observe these things inviolable. Hengel.

At his regal inauguration his old father resigned the kingdom to him. Brown's I. L. Err.

INAURO. n. s. [inauro, Lat.] The art of gilding or covering with gold.

The Romans had the art of gilding after our manner; but some sort of their inquisition, or gilding, must have been much dearer than ours.

INAUSPICIOUS. adj. [inauspicio, and auspicious.] Ill-omened; unlucky; unfortunate.

Oh, here I will set up my everlasting rest; And shake the yoke of inauspicious stars. Shaksp.

Though Heaven's inauspicious eye Lay black on love's mativity, Her eye a strong apron curfewe; Beau'ty, smiles, and love shall live. Crashaw.

The stars feel not the diseases their inauspicious influence produces. Pope.

In auspicious a wretched swain Purs'd the fairest nymph of all the plain; She him for all but a deep despair. Dry.

INBEING. n. s. [in and being.] Inherence; irresponsibleness.

When we say the bowl is round, the boy is witty, these are proper or inherent modes; for they have a sort of inbeing in the substance itself, and do not arise from the addition of any substance to it. Watts.

INBORN. adj. [in and born.] Innate; implanted by nature.

Led by sense of good, Inborn to all, I sought my needful food. Dryden.

All passions being within us, we are almost equally judges of them. Dryden.

Same Carolina, to Heaven's dictates true. Thy inward worth with conscious eyes shall see. Addison.

And slighter than imperial diadem for thee. Addison.

INBREATHED. adj. [in and breath.] Inspired; infused by inspiration.

Best pair of syrens, pledges of Heaven's joy, Sphere-born harmonious sisters, Voice and Verse, Wed your divine sounds, and mix power employ. Dead things with interest's sense, able to pierce. Milton.

INBRED. adj. [in and bred.] Produced within; hatched or generated within.

My inbred enemy.

For this is such

Milton's Par. Lost.

A man thinks better of his children than they deserve; but there is an impulse of tenderness, and there must be something in the raising of that inbred affection at work. L'Estrange. And he unmoved contemns their idle threat; And inbred worth doth boasting valor slight! Dryden.

To INCAGE. v. a. [in and cage.] To coop up; to shut up; to confine in a cage, or any narrow space.

And yet incaged in so small a verge, Thy voice is not with lesser than thy lord's, Shaks.

It made my imprisonment a pleasure: Ay, such a pleasure as incaged birds. Shakespeare, Henry VI.

INCANCE. n. s. [incalceo, Lat.]}

INCANCE. f. The state of growing warm; warmth; incipient heat.

Averous restrained his histrion, making no more thereof than Seneca commended; and was allowable; Cato; that is, a sober incalcenter, and regulated estimation from wine. Bacon.

The oil preserves the ends of the bones from incalcenter, which they being solid bodies, would have required a different cure. Bacon, Reg.

INCANTATION. n. s. [incantation, Fr. incanto, Lat.] Chants uttered by singing; enchantment.

My antient incantations are too weak, And hell too strong. Shaksp., Henry VI.

By Adam's beheading to his wife, mankind, by that her incalcenter, because the subject of labour, sorrow, and death. Raleigh.

The great wonders of witches, their carrying in the air, and transforming themselves into other bodies, are reported to be wrought, not by incantations or ceremonies, but by animating themselves all over, and being a man to them these fables are the effects of imagination; for ointments, if laid on any thing thick, by stopping of the pores, shut in the vapours, and send them out, and dead extremely. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

The name of a city being discovered unto them, and their people and patriarchs most be called forth by charms and incantations. Bacon.

The nuptial rites his outrage strait attends; The snow't deird his transfigured friends: The incantation backward she repeats, Inverts her rod, and what she did, deeds. Garth.

The commands which our religion hath imposed on its followers are not like the absurd ceremonies of pagan idolatry, that might look like incantations and magicks, but had no tendency to make mankind the dupes.

INCANTABILY. adj. [from incanto, Lat.] Dealing by enchantment; magical.

Fortune-tellers, jugglers, geomancers, and the like incantatory impostors, daily delude them.

Brown.

To INCANTON, v. a. [in and canton.] To unite to a canton or separate community.

When the cantons of Bern and Zurich proposed the incorporating Geneva in the cantons, the Roman catholics, fearing the protestant interest, proposed the incantoning of Constanza as a dangerous.

Addison on Italy.

INCAPABILITY. n. s. [from inca-pabar.] Inability natural; disqualification legal.

You have nothing to urge but a kind of incapability in yourself to the service. Suckling.

INCAP'ABLE. adj. [incapable, Fr. in and capable.] 1. Wanting room to hold or contain; with of before the thing to be contained.

2. Wanting power; wanting understanding; unable to comprehend, learn, or understand.

Incapable and shallow innocents! You cannot guess who caws't your father's death. Shaksp. 3. Not able to admit or have any thing.

Shakespeare.

Without, when he saw Goring put in the command, thought himself incapable of reparation. Clarendon.

4. Unable; not equal to any thing.

Shakespeare.

You are not your father's good, incapable Of nothingal affairs. Is he not stupid With age? Shakespeare, Winter's Tale.

5. Disqualified by law.
INC

Their lands are almost entirely taken from them, and they are rendered incapable of purchasing anything more.

Says

6. In conversation it is usual to say a man is incapable of falsehood, or incapable of generosity, or of any thing good or bad.

Capacious, adj. [in and capacious.]

Narrow; or of small content.

Souls that are made little and incapacitous, cannot enlarge their thoughts to take in any great compass of times or things.

Incarnadine, n. s. [incarnate.]

Narrowness; want of containing space.

To INCAPACITATE, v. a. [in and capacity.]

1. To disable; to weaken.

Nothing of consequence should be left to be done in the last incapacitating hours of life. Clariss.

Capacity could not incapacitate from marriage.

Arbuthnot.

2. To disqualify.

Monstrosity could not incapacitate from marriage. Arbuthnot.

INCAPACITY, n. s. [incapacité, Fr. in and capacity.]

Inability; want of natural power; want of power of body; want of comprehensiveness of mind.

Incarnation he imputes either to envy, or else ignorance and incapacity of estimating his worth. Government of the Tongue.

The incapacity of the soul is its incapacity to be moved with any thing common. Arbuthnot.

To INCARCERATE, v. a. [incarcero, Lat.]

To imprison; to confine. It is used in the Scots law to denote imprisoning or confining in a gaol; otherwise it is seldom found.

Confusion may be propagated by bodies, that easily incarcerate the infected air; as woollen clothes.

Incarceration, n. s. [from incarcerate.]

Imprisonment; confinement.

To INCARNATE, v. a. [incarnare, Lat.]

To carry with flesh.

To call a thing flesh.

The will shall soon arise in that cut of the bone, and exaltation of what is necessary, and Incarnate it. Warman.

To INCARNATION, n. s. [from incarnate.]

The soul is used from the beginning.

To INCARNATE, v. a. [incarnare, Fr. from the verb.]

1. Clothed with body; embodied with flesh.

Undoubtedly even the nature of God itself, in the person of the son, is incarnate, and hath taken to itself flesh. Hooker.

A most wise sufficient means of redemption and salvation, by the satisfactory death and obsequity of the incarnation of God, Jesus Christ, God blessed for ever. Sanderson.

Here shall thou sit incarnate, here shall reigns Both God and man. Milton's Paradise Lost.

2. It may be doubted whether Seifz understood this word.

INC

But he's possesst.

Incarnate with a thousand imps. Swift.

3. In Scotland incarnate is applied to any thing tinged of a deep red colour, from its resemblance to a flesh colour.

INCARNATION, n. s. [incarnation, Fr. from incarnate.]

1. The act of assuming body.

We may suppose we exclude not the nature of God from incarnation, and so make the son of God not to be very God. Hooker.

Upon the incarnation of our Lady-day, unseal on the incarnation of our blessed Savioir. Taylor's Guide to Devotion.

2. The state of breeding flesh.

The pudification of the female proceeded from the too lax incarnation of the wound. Warman.

INCAUTIOUS, adj. [in and caution.]

Unwary; negligent; heedless.

His false shrewdness easily captivates any intentions reader. Keill against Barnet.

INCAUTIOUSLY, adv. [from incautious.]

Unwarily; heedlessly; negligently.

A species of palmy invasions such as incauziously expose themselves to the morning air. Arbuthnot.

INCENDIARY, n. s. [incendieus, from incendere, Lat. to kindle, F.]

1. Who causes or spurs on fire.

Who kindles fires or towns or fires in malice or for robbery.

2. Who inflames factions, or promotes quarrels.

Nor could any order be obtained impartially to examine such incendiary matters. king Charles.

Incendiaries of figure and distinction, who are the inventors and publishers of gross falsehoods, cannot be regarded but with the utmost detestation. Addison.

Several cities of Greece have been burnt out in a conflagration, and peace of commonwealths. Butler.

INCENSE, n. s. [incensum, Lat. a thing burnt; incens, F. Perfumes exhaled by fire.

incense in honour of some god or goddess.

Upon such sacrifices, my Cordelia, The gods through me, scarce, Shak. K. Lear.

Nfram the rites of strict religion knew

On ev'ry altar laid the incense due. Prior.

To INCENSE, v. a. [from the noun.]

To perfume with incense.

To INCENSE, v. a. [incensum, Lat.]

To enkindle to rage; to inflame with anger; to enrage; to provoke; to irritate to anger; to heat; to fire; to make furious; to exasperate.

The world, too sweetly fond of the gods,

If you again you be incend'ed, we'll you put

Like one that means his proper harm, in memories. Shak.

He is attended with a desolate train

And what they may incende him to, being apt to have his ear abused, wisdom bids fear. Shak.

Tractable obedience is a slave to such incend'd will. Shak. Hen. VIII.

Foul indiscretion, and other faults,

Heed'd to the popular sum, will so incense God as to leave them. Milton's Paradise Lost.

How could my pious son my pow'r incense?

Or what, alack! did Tityr's offence? Dryd.

INCENSEMENT, n. s. [from incense.]

Rage; heat; fury.

His incensation at this moment is so impecunious, that satisfaction can be none but by pangs of death. Shaks.

INCENSE, n. s. [incensio, Lat.]

The act of kindling; the state of being on fire.

Suna loth its windiness by decocting, and subtle or windy spirits are taken off by incension. Bacon.

INCIPIENT, n. s. [indecipit, Lat.]

A kindler of anger; an inflamer of passions.

Many priests were inseminators and inculcators of the rage.

Hogar.

INCEST, n. s. [from incense.]

The vessel in which incense is burnt and offered. Ainsworth.

INCENTIVE, n. s. [incentivum, Lat.]

1. That which kindles.

Their unreasoned severity was not the least inceniter, that blew up into those flames the sparks of discontent. king Charles.

2. That which provokes; that which encourages; incitement; motive; encouragement; spur. It is used of that which incites, whether to good or ill: with to.

Congruity of opinions, to our natural constitution, is one great incentive to their reception. Glosse's Seppia.

Even the wisdom of God hath not suggested more pressing motives, more powerful incentives to charity, than these, that we shall be judged by it at the last dreadful day.

It encourages speculative persons, with all the incentives of place, profit, and preference. Addison.

INCENTIVE, adj. Initing; encouraging: with to.

Competency is the most incentive to industry: too little makes men desperate, and too much careless.

Decay of Pity.

INCEPTION, n. s. [inceptio, Lat.]

Beginning.

The inception of putrefaction hath in it a maturation. Bacon.

INCEPTIVE, adj. [incipient, Lat.]

Noting beginning.

An incentive and desirous disposition, as the fog descend the sun rises; but the fog haves not yet begun to vanish, therefore the sun is not yet risen. Locke.

INCEPTOR, n. s. [Lat.] A beginner; one who is in his rudiments.

INCEPTION. n. s. [incero, Lat.]

The act of covering with wax.

Dict.

INCERTITUDE, n. s. [inceptivus, Fr. incertitude, F.]

Uncertainty; doubtfulness.

INCESSANT, adj. [in and cessant, Lat.]

Unceasing; uninterrupted; continual; uninterrupted.

Raging wind blows up incessant show'rs. Shak.

The incessant weeping of my wife, For'd me to seek delays. Shak.

If, by pray'st

Ince'ntive.

I could hope to change the will Of him who all things can, I would not cease To wea're him with my asiduous cries. Milton.

In form, a herald of the king she flies From peir to peir, and thus incessant cries. Pope.

Incessantly, adv. [from incessant.]

Without intermission; continually.

Both his hunts most filthy fuculent, Above the water were on high extent, And fain'd to wash themselves incessantly. F. Qu. Who reads Incessantly, and to his ear lang brings not A spirit and judgement equal or superior. Milton.

The Christians, who carried their religion through so many persecutions, were incessantly
The setting on foot some of those arts in these parts would be looked upon as the first inclination of them, which yet would be but their reviewing.

Incidental. adj. Incident; casual; happening by chance; not intended; not deliberate; not necessary to the chief purpose.

The satisfaction you receive from those incidental discourses which we have wandered into.

By some, religious duties scarce appear to be regarded at all, and by others only as an incident to business, to be done when they have nothing else to do.

Incidentally. adv. [from incidental.] Beside the main design; occasionally.

The several rules are but occasionally and incidentally mentioned in Scripture, rather to manifest unto us a former, than to lay upon us a new obligation.

Incisive. adj. [incisif, Fr. from incisus, Lat.] Hallowing the quality of cutting or dividing.

The colour of many corpuses will cohere by being precipitated together, and be destroyed by the effusion of very pleasing and incisive qualities.

Incision. n.s. [incision, Fr. incisus, Lat.] Cutter; tooth in the forepart of the mouth.
To incline. v. n. [inclino, Lat. incliner, Fr.] 1. To bend; to lean; to tend toward any part: with to or towards. Her house inclineth unto death, and her paths unto the decay thereof. Prov. xii. 19. 2. To be favourably disposed to; to feel desire beginning. Dost his majesty incline to it, or no?—He seems indifferent; or rather swaying more upon our part. Shakes. Their hearts inclined to follow Abimelech. Judges.

To incline. v. a. 1. To give a tendency or direction to any place or state. The timely dew of sleep, Now falling with soft shumrous weight, incliner Our eye-lids. Milton. 2. To turn towards any thing, as desires or attentive. Incline our hearts to keep this law, Com. Prayer. You have not inclined your ear unto me. Jer. But that from us might ascend to heav'n so prevalent, as to concern the mind. Of God high-blessed, or to incline his will, Hard to belief may seem, yet this will prayer. Milton.

To incline. v. a. [in and cl.] To grasp; to incline; to surround. Whate'er the ocean pales, or sky inclin'd, Is thine, if thou wilt it. Shakes. Art. and Cleop. To inclister. v. a. [in and cloister.] To shut up in a cloister. To inclound. v. a. [in and cloud.] To darken; to obscure. In their thick breasts, Rank of gross dirt, shall we be inclined, And for'd to drink their vapour. Shakes. To incluse. v. a. [includo, Lat.] 1. To inclose; to shut in; as, the shell incluses a pearl. 2. To comprise; to comprehend. This desire being recommended to her majesty, it liked her to include the same within one little lease. Bacon. The marvellous fable includes whatever is supernatural, and especially the machines of the gods. Pope. Instead of enquiring whether he be a man of virtue, the question is only whether he be a witt or a tern; under which terms all good and ill qualities are included. Swift.

Inclusive. adj. [inclusive, Fr.] 1. Inclining; including. O, would that the incluse verge Of golden metal, that must round my brow, Were red-hot steel, to sear me to the brain! Shak. 2. Comprehended in the sum or number: as, from Wednesday to Saturday inclusive; that is, both Wednesday and Saturday taken into the number. I'll search where every virtuous dwells, From courts inclusive down to cells. Swift.

Inclusively. adv. [from inclusive.] The thing mentioned reckoned into the account. See inclusive.
INC

Thus much shall serve for the several periods or growth of the common law, until the time of Edward I. inclusively.

Incoherence. n. s. [in coherency.] The quality of not existing together; non-association of existence. An unusual word.

Another more incurable part of ignorance, which sets us more remote from a certain knowledge of the coexistence or inexistence of different ideas in the same subject, is, that there is no discernible connexion between any secondary quality and those primary qualities it depends on. Locke.

Incredible, adj. [in and conguilable.] Incapable of conclusion.

Inconsistency. n. s. [in coexistence.] The quality of not existing together; non-association of existence. An unusual word.

Another more incurable part of ignorance, which sets us more remote from a certain knowledge of the coexistence or inexistence of different ideas in the same subject, is, that there is no discernible connexion between any secondary quality and those primary qualities it depends on. Locke.

Incongruity. n. s. [incoherent.] Wanting the power of thought.

Purely material beings, as clippings of our beards, and sensible, thinking, perceiving beings, such as we find ourselves, we will call cogitative and incoherent beings.

Incongruously, adv. [incoherently.] Wanting the power of thought.

Purely material beings, as clippings of our beards, and sensible, thinking, perceiving beings, such as we find ourselves, we will call cogitative and incoherent beings.

Incongruity. n. s. [incoherence.] 1. Want of cohesion; looseness of material parts.
2. Want of connection; incongruity; consequence of argument; want of dependence of one part upon another.

I find that laying the intermediate ideas meditated in their order, shows the incoherence of the arguments better than anything. Locke. Incoherence in matter, and suppositions without proofs, put handwriting together, are apt to pass for strong reason. Locke.

Incoherent. adj. [in and coherent.] 1. Wanting cohesion; loose; not fixed to each other.
2. Inconsequent; inconsistent; having no dependence of one part upon another.

We have instances of perception whilst we are asleep, and as if all the matter of our thoughts was but the extravagant and incoherent are they, and how little considerable to the perfection of a rational being?

Incoherently, adv. [from incoherent.] Incoherently; inconsequently.

The character of Euryclaus is the imitation of a person confounded with fears, speaking irritably and incoherently. Bronte.

Incoherence. n. s. [in coherency.] The quality of not existing together; non-association of existence. An unusual word.

Another more incurable part of ignorance, which sets us more remote from a certain knowledge of the coexistence or inexistence of different ideas in the same subject, is, that there is no discernible connexion between any secondary quality and those primary qualities it depends on. Locke.

Incoherently, adv. [from incoherent.] Incoherently; inconsequently.

The character of Euryclaus is the imitation of one and the other is effected of that indubitable necessity to the earth and mankind, that they could not subsist without it. Woodward.

Incommodeous. adj. [incommodeous, Lat.] Inconvenient; vexatious without ground or right.

Things of general benefit, for in this world what is so perfect that no inconvenience doth ever follow it? may be some accident be commodeous to a few.

Mens intentions in speaking are to be understood, without frequent explanations and incommunicable assertions. Locke.

Incommodeously. adv. [from incommodeous.] Inconveniently; not at ease.

Incommodeousness. n. s. [from incommodeous.] Inconvenience.

Diseases, disorders, and the incommodeousment of external nature, are inconsistent with happiness. Bent. incommodeousness.

Incommodeousness. n. s. [from incommodeous.] Inconvenience.

The quality of not being impaible.

Incommodeous. adj. [incommodeous, Fr. incommode, Lat.] Not to be reduced to any measure common to both; not to be measured together, such as that the proportion of one to the other can be told.

Our disputations about vacuum or space, incommodeous quantities, the infinite divisibility of matter and eternal duration, will lead out the weakness of our nature. Watts.

Incommodeous. adj. [from incommodeous.] Not allowing one common measure.

The diagonal line and side of a quadrat, which, to our apprehension, are incommodeous, are yet commodeous to the infinite comprehenion of the divine intellect. More.

As all other measures of time are reducible to these three; so we labour to reduce these three, though strictly of themselves incommodeous to one another, to civil use, measuring the greater by the less. Holder on Time.

If the year comprehend days, it is but an aggregate of time may be said to comprehended. More, though the less space be incommodeous to the greater.

Incommodeous, n. s. [incoherence.] To incommode.

To incommode. v. a. [incommode.] 1 modo, Lat. incommode, Fr.] To be inconvenient to; to hinder or embarrass without very great injury.

A great, planted upon the horn of a bull, begg'd the bull's pardon; but rather than incommode ye, says he, I'll remove. Estienne.

Although they sometimes molest and incommode the inhabitants, yet the agent, whereby both the
inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.

inc. incomparable. adj. [incomparable; incomparable, Fr. in and comparable.] Excellent above compare; excellent beyond all competition.
lesser troubles, to secure himself from a condition incompletely more miserable? South.

INCONECTIBLE. adj. [in and conceptible; conceptus, Lat.] Not to be conceived; incomprehensible; inconceivable; word not used.

It is inconceivable how any such man, that bade street the shock of an eternal duration without corruption, should after be corrupted. Hale.

INCONCLUDENT. adj. [in and conclude, Lat.] Inferring no consequence.

The depictions of witnesses themselves, as being false, various, contrariant, single, inconclusient. Addis's Heroglem.

INCLUSIVE. adj. [in and conclude.]
Not enforcing any determination of the mind; not exhibiting cogent evidence.

INCONCLUSION. adv. [from inclusive.] Without any such evidence as determines the understanding.

INCONCLUSIVENESS. n. s. [from inclusive.] Want of rational cogency.

A man, unskilful in syllogism, at first hearing, could perceive the weakness and inconclusiveness of a long problematical and plausibly discoursed, where with some others, better skilled in syllogism, have been misled. Locke.

INCONECT. { adj. [in and concept.] Unrepaired; immaturity; not fully digested.

While the body, to be converted and altered, is too strong for the efficient that should convert it, it is all that which is nude and incorrupt; and the process is to be called crudity and inconclusion. Bacon.

I understand, remember, and reason better in my ripier years, than when I was a child, and hold my organical parts less digested and inconceited. Hale.

INCIPLE. n. s. [from inconceit.] The state of being indiscerned; unripe-ness; immaturity.

The middle action, which produce such imperfect bodies, is fully called illumination, or inconclusion, which is a kind of interjection. Bacon's Natural History.

While the body, to be converted and altered, is too strong for the efficient that should convert it, it is all that which is nude and incorrupt; and the process is to be called crudity and inconclusion. Bacon.

INCONECTITE. adj. [incunctitus, Lat.] Irregular; rude; unpolished.

Now sportive youth Carol incunctitus rhymes with suitting notes, And quaver inharmonious.

INCONDITIONAL. adj. [in and condition.] Not limited; not restrained by any conditions; absolute.

They ascribe to God, in relation to every man, an eternal, unchangeable, and indecidable degree of election or reprobation. Bengel.

INCONFORMITY. n. s. [in and conformity.] Incompliance with the practice of others.

We have thought their opinion to be, that utter inconformity with the church of Rome was not an extremity. If God was shown, it was to be done in this time, but the very mediocrity itself, wherein they meant they should ever continue. Hooker.

INCONFUSION. n. s. [in and confusion.] Distinction. Not used.

The cause of the confusion in sounds, and the inconsequence in species visible, is, for the that the slight worketh in right lines, and so there can be no coin- cidence in the eye; but sounds that move in oblique and accurate lines, must needs encounter and strike the one the other. Bacon.

INCONGRUENCE. n. s. [in and congruity.] Unsuitableness; want of adaptation.

Humidity is but relative, and depends upon the congruity or inconsequence of the component particles of the liquor to the parts of the bodies it touches. Boyle.

INCONGRUITY. n. s. [incongruit, Fr. from incongruous.]

1. Unsuitableness of one thing to another.

The following is the use of this acknowledgment of the incongruity of images to the Deity, from thence to prove the incongruity of the worship of them.

2. Inconsistency; inconsequence; absurdity; impropriety.

To avoid absurdisties and incongruites, it is a most law established for both arts; the painter is not to paint a cloud at the bottom of a picture, nor the poet to place what is proper to the end in the beginning of a poem. Dryden.

3. Disagreement of parts; want of symmetry.

She, whom after what form we see, is discord and rude incongruity; She, she is dead, she's dead. Donne.

INCONGRUOUSLY. adv. [from incongruous.] Improperly; unfitly.

INCONNECTEDLY. adv. [in and connect.] Without any connexion or dependency.

Little used.

Others ascribed hereto, as a cause, what perhaps but casually or inconsequently succeeds. Browm.

INCONSCIONABLE. adj. [in and conscionable.] Of the sense of good and evil; without influence of consci- ence. Not used.

So inconssonable are these common people, and so little feeling have they of God, or their own souls good. Spencer.

INCONSEQUENCE. n. s. [insequeence, Fr. from inconsequent, Lat. Inconclusiveness; want of just inference.

This he bestows the name of many fallacies upon; and runs on with shewing the inconsequent of it, as though he did in earnest believe it were an imperious answer. Stillingfleet.

INCONSEQUENT. adj. [in and consequens, Lat.] Without just conclusion; without regular inference.

The ground he assumes is unsound, and his illo- gism from thence deduced inconsequent. Hobbes.

Men rest not in false apprehensions without ab- surd and inconsiderate deductions from fallacious causes; and misapprehended mediums, erecting conclusions no way Inferrible from their pre- mises.

Brown's Fulgar Errors.

INCONSISTENCY. n. s. [inconsistent.]
Unworthy of notice; unimportant; mean; of little value.

I am an inconsistent fellow, and know nothing. 1. Stillingfleet.

The most inconsistent of creatures may at some time or other come to revenge itself upon the greatest.

Casting my eyes upon the ants, continually taken up with a thousand cares, very inconsistent with respect to us, but of the greatest importance for them, they appeared to me worthy of my curiosity.

May not plants and comets perform their motions fits and starts, and with less resistance, in this etherial medium than in any fluid, which fills all space adequately without leaving any pores, and by inconsequent is much denser than quid silver or gold? And may not its resistance be as small as to be inconceivable?

Warton. It would be hard to think we should have so little to do with others, and so much to do with the papers, if we would make our minds as little as possible to be inconsistent.

Black. Let us yield our appearance small or inconsequence by which an almighty God is offended, and eternal salvation endangered. Rogers.

INCONSIDERABLENESS. n. s. [from incon- siderable.] Small importance.

To those who are thoroughly convinced of the inconcessibility of this short dying life, in comparison of that eternal state which remains for us in another life, the consideration of a future happiness is the most powerful in motive.

Tilten.

From the consideration of our own smallness and inconciderableness, in respect of the greatness and splendor of heavenly bodies, let us with the holy psalmist raise our hearts. Ray on the Creation.

INCONSIDERATE. adj. [inconsideré, Fr. inconsideratus, Lat.]

1. Careless; thoughtless; negligent; inattentive; inadvertent; used both of men and things.

When thy inconsiderate hand Flings ope this casement with my trembling hand, Then think this name alive, and that thou hast In it offered me no injury.

Denne. If you lament it, That which now looks like justice will be thought And proper rashness. Dryden.

It is a very unhappy token of our corruption, that there should be any so inconciderate among us as to sacrifice morality to politics. Addis. Freehold.

2. Wanting due regard; with of before the subject.

He laid down his life for the redemption of the transgressions, which were under the first Testa- ment, cannot be so inconsiderate of our frailties. Decay of Poly.

INCONSIDERATELY. adv. [from in- consideré.] Negligently; thoughtlessly; inattentively.

The king, transported with just wrath, inconsiderately currying and precipitating the charge, before his whole numbers came up, was slain in the first onset.

Joseph was delighted with Marie's conversation, and endeavoured with all his art to set out the excess of heros passion for her; but when he still found her cold and incredulous, he inconsiderately told her the private orders he left behind.

Addison.

INCONSISTENCY. n. s. [from in- consistente.] Carelessness; thoughtlessness; negligence; want of thought; inadvertence; inattention.

If men do know and believe that there is such a being as God, not to deuce us towards him, as becomes our relation to him, is great stupidity and inconciderableness.

Tilten.

INCONSIDERATION. n. s. [inconsidera- tions, Fr. in and consideration.] Want of thought; inattention; inadvertence.

S. Gregory reckons uncleanness to be the per- rent of blindness of mind, inconsideration, precipi- tancy or dullness in actions, and self-love.

Toler.

INCONSISTING. adj. [in and consist.] Not consistent; incompatible with. Not used.
The persons and actions of a faire are all unnatural, and the manners false; that is, inconsistent with the characters of mankind. Draper's Duets.

INCONSISTENCY. n. s. [from incon-constant.

INCONSISTENT. adj. [in and consistent.

1. Inconstant; not suitably; incongruously; followed by with.

Finding an inconsistency in his sentiments, but sharp paradoxes against the demands, as inconsistent with conscience, justice, or religion, the cause looks bad.

2. Absurd; having parts of which one destroys the other.

INCONSISTENCY. n. s. [in and incon-sistant.] Absurdly; incongruous; with self-contradiction.

INCONVINCIBLE. adj. [in conj and convertible.

1. Unconvincible; without restraint of the appetites.

2. Immediately; at once. An obsolete sense. Spenser.

The cause of this war is no other than that we will not incommodiously submit ourselves to our neighbours.

INCONVINCIBLE. adj. [in and convertible.

Indisputable; not to be disputed.

INCONVINCIBLE. adv. [in from inconvenient.

To a degree beyond controversy or dispute.

The Hebrew is incomparable the primitive and surest text to rely upon; and to preserve the same uncorrupt, there hath been used the highest caution humanly could invent. Brown's Engl. Errors.

INCONVINENICE. n. s. [inconvenient,Fr.

1. Unfitness; inexpediency.

They plead against the inconvenient, not the unlawfulness of popish apparel; and against the inconvenience, not the unlawfulness of ceremonies in Puri.

The inconvenience of old age makes him incapable of corporal pleasures. Dryden.

Would not much quicker of sensation be on inconvenience to an animal, that must lie still where chance has once placed it? Locke.

Consider the disproportion between the worst inconveniences that attend inconsistency with men, and the eternal displeasure of God. Rogers.

We are freed from many inconveniences, and we enjoy several advantages. Atterbury.

The things of another world, being distant, operate but faintly upon us: to remedy this inconvenience, we must frequently revolve their certainty and importance. Atterbury.

INCONVENIENT. adj. [inconvenient,Fr.

in and convenient.

1. Incommodious; disadvantageous.

They lean to their old customs, though they be more inconvenient, and more inconsistent with the common people. Spencer on Ireland.

He knows that to be inconvenient, which we falsely think convenient for us. South.
INC

INCONVINCIBLY. adv. [from incernible]. Without admitting conviction.

It is injurious unto knowledge absolutely and incorrigible side with any corporeal, immaterial.

INCONVINCIBLE n. s. [from incernible].

Unlearned; arow. This sense is uncertain.

1. In Scotland it denotes mischievously unlucky: as, he's an incorvible fellow. This seems to be the meaning of Shakspeare.

"Of my list, most sweet jests, most meany vulgar wit.

When it comes so smoothly off. Shaks.}

INCORPORAL. adj. [incorporal]. Immaterial; distinct from matter; distinct from body.

Why don't you bend thine eye on vacancy, and with this incorporeal air do hold discourse?

Shaks. Learned men have not resolved us whether this incorporeal or corporeal they say it cannot be, because they would neither pierce the air, nor solid diaphanous bodies, and yet every day we see the skies air-dissipated: incorporal it can and must be, because sometimes it affecteth the sight with offence. Raleigh.

INCORPORALITY. n. s. [incorporalitY]. Fr. from incorporal. Immateriality; distinctness from body.

To INCORPORATE. v. a. [incorporer, Fr.]

1. To mingle different ingredients so as to make one mass. A filth from part of silver, incorporat with gold, will not be recovered, except you put a greater quantity of silver to draw it to the less. Bacon.

Who the swelling clouds in bladders tie;

To mollify the stubborn clods with rain,

And scatter'd dust incorporar again? Sandby.

2. To join insensibly, as one body.

Villainous thoughts, Rodrigo, when these immunities to the manner of the air is not the corporal part of silver, incorporat with the sand, will not be recovered, except you put a greater quantity of silver to draw it to the less. Bacon.

The swelling clouds in bladders tie;

To mollify the stubborn clods with rain,

And scatter'd dust incorporar again? Sandby.

3. To incorporate into a corporation, or to unite as one body.

Incorporate mass to the main, and incorporate the mass into the main, exercise, the incorporate corporation.

Bacon.

By your leaves, you shall not stay alone.

Till holy church incorporate two in one. Shaks. Upon my knees.

Ferenum vos, by the alms you did incorporate and make us one. Shaks.尸

Death and incorporeal.

Are incorporeal, and incorporate both. Milton.

3. To form into a corporation, or to unite as one body.

Incorporate trades in any community. Theep. The firmitly or firmly of all men, christian, that be Jews or Gentiles, bond or free, they are all incorporated into one company, they all make but one body. Hobbes.

The same is incorporated with a majority, and Mingled they with the general body of the people. Cicer.

4. To unite: to associate.

It is Cacque, once incorporate to our attempts. Shaks. Julia Cesare.

Your most divine belly was deliberate, not rash, like his accusers, and thus answered;

True is it, my incorporar friends, quoth he,

That I receive the general food at first,

The Romans did not subdue a country to put the inhabitants into the state of incorporeal and incorporeous, and incorporate them into their own community. Austin. Fresh.

5. To work into another mass.

All this learning is ignoble and mechanical among them, and the Confusion only essential and incorporate in their government. Temple.

6. To embody; to give a material form.

Courtesy, that seemed incorporar in his heart, would not be persuaded by danger to offer any resistance. The idolaters, who worshipped their images as gods, supposed some spirit to be incorporar therewith, and to unite together with it a person fit to receive worship. Stillingfleet.

To INCORPORATE. v. n.

1. To unite with something else. It is commonly followed by with.

Painters colours and ashes do better incorporate with oil. Bacon.

It is not universally true, that acid salts and oils will not incorporate or mingle. Boyle.

2. Sometimes it has into.

It finds the mind unpursuessed with any former notions, and so easily gains upon the assent, grows up with it, and incorporates into it. So do.

INCORPORATION. n. s. [incorporation]. Fr. from incorporar. Incorporation, union of divers ingredients in one mass.

Make proof of the incorporation of iron with sand: for if it can be incorporated without great charge, the composition of the sand makes it so.

Bacon.

This, with some little additional, may further the intrinsic incorporation. Bacon’s Nat. Hist.

2. Incorporation of a body politic.

3. Adoption; union; association: into.

In him we actually are, by our actual incorporation into that society which hath him for their head. Hobbes.

INCORPORATED. adj. [incorporated, Lat. incorporar, Fr. in and corporal]. Immaterial; unembodied.

It is a virtue which may be called incorporeal and immaterial, whereof there is in nature but few; thus incorporar spirits to smallest forms. Bacon.

Reduce their shapes immense. Milton.

Sense and perception must necessarily Proceed from some incorporar substance within us. Henley.

INCORPORATELY. adv. [incorporarly]. Fr. from incorporar.

Immaterially; without body.

Hearing striketh the spirits more immediately than the other senses, and more incorporarly than the smelling. Rale.

INCORPORATENESS. n. s. [in and corporateness]. Immateriality; distinctness from body.

To INCORPORATE. v. a. [incorporate] To incorporate; to unite into one body.

Not used.

He grew up to his seat;

As he had been incorporeal and demi-natured;

With the brave horse. Shaks. Hamlet.

INCORRECT. adj. [incorrect] Not nicely finished; not exact; inaccurate; full of faults.

The piece you think is incorrect: why take it? I am all submission: what you would have it, make it. Pope.

INCORRECTLY. adv. [from incorrect]. Inaccurately; not exactly.

INCORRECTNESS. n. s. [in and correctness]. Inaccuracy; want of exactness.

INCORRIGIBLE. adj. [incorrigible, Fr. in and correctly].

1. Bad beyond correction; depraved beyond amendment by any means; erroneous beyond hope of instruction: of persons.

2. The state of growing thick. 395
INC

Nothing doth congeal but water; for the determination of quicksilver is fixation, that of milk coagulation, and that of oil incrustation.

INCASSATIVE. n.s. [from increassate.]

Having the quality of thickening. The two latter indicate restraints to stench, and increassates to thicken the blood.

Harvey.

To INCREASE, v. a. [in and cresc.] Lat.
1. To grow more in number, or greater in bulk; to advance in quantity or value, or in any quality capable of being more or less.

Hear and observe to do it, that it may be well with thee, and that ye may increase mightily.

Dryden.

2. To be fertile.

Fishes are more numerous or increasing than beasts or birds, as appears by their numerous spawn.

Note.

To INCREASE, v. a. [from increassate.]

1. Augmentation; the state of growing more or greater.

For three years he lived with large increase in arms of honour, and esteem in peace.

Dryden.

2. Increase; that which is added to the original stock.

Take thou no usurp of him nor increase. Leviticus.

3. Product.

The increase of the threshing-floor, and the increase of the wine-press.

Numb.

As Heavens slugs, spread waters o’er thy field, And a most just and glad increase ‘twixt yield.

Deaven.

Those grains which grew produced an increase beyond expectation.

Mortimer’s Husbandry.

Into her womb convey fertility;

Dry up in her the organs of increase,

And from her derogate body never spring a babe.

Shakespear.

5. Progeny.

All the increase of thy house shall die in the flower of their age.

Sanctum.

Him young Thousa bore the bright increase

Of Pheonix.

Pope’s Odyssey.

6. The state of waxing, or growing full orb. Used of the moon.

increase, bare, plenty, hedge, herbs, beer, will grow sooner, if set or cut in the increase of the moon.

Brown’s Natural History.

INCREASE, n.s. [from increassate.] He who increases.

INCREASER, adj. Not created.

Since the design is infinite, nothing but the absolute and increas’d Infinite can adequately fill it.

Urine.

INCREDIBILITY, n.s. [incrédibilité, Fr.] The quality of surpassing belief.

For objects of incredibility, none are so removed from all appearance of truth as those of Cornelle’s Andromache.

INCREDIBLE, adj. [incrédible, Lat.]

Surpassing belief; not to be credited.

The ship Argo, that there might want no incredible thing in this tale, spoke to them. Raleigh.

Presenting things impossible to view.

This was the magnificence which is possible to view. Gervin.

INCREDIBLENESS, n.s. [from incredible.]

Quality of being not credible.

INCREDIBLY, adv. [from incredible.]

In a manner not to be believed.

INCREDIBILITY, n.s. [incrédibilité, Fr.] Quality of not believing; hardness of belief.

He was more large in the description of Paradise, to take away all scruple from the increasement of future ages.

Raleigh.

INCREDULOUS, adj. [incrédule, Fr. incredulus, Lat.] Hard of belief; refusing credit.

I am not altogether incredulous but there may be such canals as are made of mudman’s wool, being of the same texture with white-thick ing ti’d burning, and consumpt not.

Bacon.

INCREDULOUSNESS, n.s. [from incredules.]

Hardness of belief; incredulity.

INCREDULA. adj. [in and crema, Lat.] Not consumable by fire.

If from the skin of the salsaman these increasable pieces are composed.

Brown’s Fulg. Epi.

INCREMENT, n.s. [incrementum, Lat.]

1. Act of growing greater.

Divers conceptions are concerning the Nile’s increment, or incrustation.

Brown’s Fulg. Epi.

2. Increase; matter added.

This statute is expanded at top, serving as the seminary that furnishest matter for the formation and increment of animal and vegetable bodies.

Weeder.

3. Produce.

The orchard lover to love

With Winter winds; the houseb’d roots then drink

Large increment, current of happy years.

Phillips.

To INCREEATE, v. a. [incrépo, Lat.]

To chide; to reprehend.

INCREEATION, n.s. [incrēpetio, Lat.]

Reprehension; chiding.

The admonitions, fraternal or paternal, of his fellow Christians, or of the governors of the church, are more public repreheusions and incrēations.

Hummel.

To INCREEST, v. a. [incrēsto, Lat.]

To cover with an additional coat adhering to the internal matter.

The finer part of the wood will be turned into air, and the grosser thick-baked and incrēsted upon the sides of the vessel.

Bacon.

Some rivers bring forth spars, and other mineral matter so as to cover and incrēst the stones.

Hume.

Save be our army; and let Jove incrēst

Swords, pikes, and guns, with everlasting lust.

Pope.

Any of these sun-like bodies in the centers of the several vortices, are so incrēstated and weakened as to be carried about in the vortex of the true meaning.

Churche.

The shield was purchased by Woodward, who incrēsted it with a new crust.

Arbuthnot and Pope.

INCREESTATION, n.s. [incrēstatio, Fr. from incrēsto, Lat.]

An adherent covering; something superinversed.

Having such a prodigious hodge and mob, their chapels are laid over with such a rich variety of incrēstations as cannot be found in any other part.

Addison in Lady.

To INCUBATE, v. n. [incubo, Lat.] To sit upon eggs.

INCUBATION. n.s. [incubation, Fr. incubatio, Lat.]

The act of sitting upon eggs to hatch them.

Whether that vitality was by incubation, or how else, is only known to God.

Raleigh.

Birds have eggs enough at first conceived in them to serve them, allowing such a proportion for every year as shall serve for one or two incubations.

Rush.

When the whole tribe of birds by incubation produce their young, it is a wonderful deviation, that such few families should do it in a more universal way.

Arbuthnot.

INCUBUS, n.s. [Lat. incubo, Fr.]

The nightmare.

The incubus is an inflation of the membranes of the stomach, which hinders the motion of the diaphragm, lungs, and intestines, with a sense of a weight oppressing the breast.

Floyer.

To INCULCATE, v. a. [inculco, Lat. inculquer, Fr.] To impress by frequent admonitions; to enforce by constant repetition.

Manifest truth may deserve sometimes to be inculcated, because no one ought to forget it.

Arber.

Homer continually inculcates morality and piety to the gods.

Brome’s Notes to Pope’s Odyssey.

INCULCATION, n.s. [from inculcate.]
The act of impressing by frequent admonition; admonitory repetition.

INCULCE. adj. [inculte, Fr. incultus, Lat.]
Uncultivated; untilled.

Her forests large.

Incult, robust and tall, by Nature’s hand

Planted of old.

Thomson’s Autumn.

INCULPABLE, adj. [in and culpabilis, Lat.]
Unblamable; not reprehensible.

Ignorance, so far as it may be resolved into natural incapacity, is, at least, incurable, and consequently not the object of scorn, but pity.

South.

INCULPABLY, adv. [in and culpabilis, Lat.]
Unblamably; without blame.

As errors or infirmities, the frailty of man’s condition has invincibly, and therefore incurably, exposed him.

South.

INCUMBENCY, n.s. [from incumbent.]

1. The act of lying upon another.

2. The state of keeping a benefice.

These fies are only to be paid to the bishop, during his incumbency in the same see.

Swift.

INCUMBENT. adj. [incumbus, Lat.]

1. Resting upon; lying upon.

Then with expanded wings he steers his flight Aft-oft, incumbent on the dusky air.

That felt unequal weight.

Addison’s Paradise Lost.

The ascending part of air, having now little more than the weight of the incumbent water to support, were able both so to expand themselves as to fill up that part of the pipe which they pervaded, and, by pressing every way against the sides of it, to fill upwards with them what water they had before them.

Ryley.

With wings expanded wide ourselves we’ll rear, And fly incumbent on the dusky air.

Dryden.

While they.

And, when to move th’ incumbent load they try, Descending vapours on the day prevail.

Addison.

Man is the destiny’ prem of pestilence, And o’er his guilty domes She draws a close incumbent cloud of death.

Thomson.

2. Imposed as a duty.
All men, truly zealous, will perform those good works, that are incumbent on all Christians. Sporr. Ser.

There is nothing so much as duty incumbent upon us in the exercise of our powers.

Thus, we think and act, and shall shew ourselves truly mindful not only of the advantages we receive from thence, but of the obligations also which are incumbent upon us. Afterbury.

Incumbent. n. s. [incumbens, Lat.]

He who is in present possession of a benefice.

In many places the whole ecclesiastical due are in lay hands, and the incumbent lieth at the mercy of his patron. Swift.

To Incumb. v. a. [incumbere, Fr.]

To embarass. See Incumber.

My cause is call'd, and that long look'd-for day Is still incumbent'd with some new delay. Dryden.

To Incurr. v. a. [incurrer, Lat.]

1. To become liable to a punishment or reprehension.

I have incurred displeasure from inferiors for giving way to the faults of others. Hayward. They, not obeying, incurred what could they lose the penalty; And manifest'd in sin, deserv'd to fail. Milton.

So judge thou still, presumptuous! 'tis the wrath, Which thou incurred'st by flying, meet thy flight. Swift; and courage that wisdom back to hell. Milton.

They had a full persuasion that not to do it were to disappoint God, and consequently to incur his damnation. South.

2. To incur; to press on the senses; with to or into.

The motions of the minute parts of bodies are invisible, and incur not to the eye; yet they are to be apprehended by experience. Bacon.

The mind of man, even in spirituals, acts with corporal, and are more indiscernible in its operations, according to the different quality of external objects that incur into the senses. Incrability, n. s. [incrabilis, Fr. from incurrable.] Impossibility of cure; utter insusceptibility of remedy.

We'll instantly open a door to the manner of a proper and improper composition, together with the reason of the incurability of the former, and facile cure of the latter. Harrer.

Incurable. adj. [incurable, Fr. in and curable.] Not admitting remedy; not to be removed by medicine; irreducible; hopeless.

Pause not; for the present's time so sick, That present physic must be mistimed, Or overthrow incurable ensues. Shake.

Stop the rage before, Before that we may grow incur'd. South.

For being green, there is great hope of help, Shaks. A schismus is not absolutely incurable, because it has been known that fresh pasture has cured it in cattle. Arbuthnot.

If idiots and lunatics cannot be found, incurables may be taken into the hospital. Swift.

Incurability. n. s. [incurabilis, Fr. from incurrable.] State of not admitting any cure.

Incurably. adv. [from incurrable.] Without remedy.

We cannot know it is or not, being incurably ignorant. Locke.

Incurious. adj. [in and curious.] Negligent; inattentive.

The Critic did not meet so much skill upon his creatures, to be looked upon with a careless incurious eye. Derham.

He's out of the Park appear'd; Yet, not incurious, was inclin'd. To know the converse of mankind. Swift.

Inclusion. n. s. [from incrur, Lat.]

1. Attack; mischievous occurrence. Sins of daily incurrence and such as human frailty is unavoidably liable to. South.
4. It is used sometimes as a slight assertion or recapitulation in a sense hardly perceptible or explicable, and though some degree of obscure power is perceived, might, even where it is properly enough inserted, be omitted without miss.

I said I thought it was controversy between the juggler and the two servants; that indeed he said so without reflection. Bacon.

There is indeed great pleasure in these magistrates of war, after one has seen two or three of them in action.

Addison.

5. It is used to note concession in comparisons.

Against these forces were prepared to the number of near one hundred ships; not so great a bulk indeed, but of a more unstable motion. Bacon.

Is to Security or from Woodward.

is to Security each and is to Security means, is to Security Sprall. n.w.

indefinable.

Though our paper is the last part. Hay.

INDEFINITUDE. n.s. [from indefinite.]

Quantity not limited by our understanding, though yet definite. They are extended to a strange and prodigious multitude, if not indeterminate, by various positions, combinations, and conjunctures. Hale.

INDETERMINATE. [adj. [indeterminate, Fr.] Unpremeditated; done without consideration.

Actions proceeding from blndishments, or from sweet persuasions, if they be indeterminate, as in children who want the use of reason, are not properly from the defect.

The love of God better can consist with the indeterminate diversions of finite sin, than with an allowed perseverance in any one line of the time.

INDETERMINATE, adj. [indefinite, Fr. indélébilis, Lat. in and definite. It should be written indefinite.]

Wifflon

Want of delicacy; want of elegant decency.

Your papers would be chargeable with worse than indeliberacy, they would be mean, did you treat detestable indecency as you really treat it.

Addison.

INDELICATE. adj. [in and delicate. Wanting decency; void of a quick sense of decency.

INDEMNIFICATION. n.s. [from indemnify.]

1. Security against loss or penalty.

2. Reimbursement of loss or penalty.

To INDEMNIFY. v.a. [in and damnify.]

1. To secure against loss or penalty.

2. To maintain without.

Innoent signifies rude and haughty, indefiniteness to keep safe.

INDEFINITY. n.s. [indefiniteness, Fr.] Security from punishment; exemption from punishment.

I will use all means, both of amnesty and indemnity, which may most fully remove all fears, and have all parties in forgiveness. K. Charles.

To INDENT. v.a. [in and devo.]

To Mark any thing with inequalities like a row of teeth; to cut in and out; to make to wave or undulate.

About his neck.

A green and naked horse had wrought itself. Who with her head, nimble in threats, approach'd The opening of his mouth; but suddenly, setting An indelible mark, And with indelible marks did slip away Into a bush.

Shakespeare. As you like it.

The serpent then, not with indelible wave,

Prone on the ground, as since; but on his rear Circular wave of rising folds, that tower'd Fold above fold, a surging surge! Milton.

Trent, who, like some earth-born plant, sprouts His thirty arms along the indented mounds. Milton.

Old also for the comprehension of man, to terminate in a straight line, but are indelible. Woodward.

To INDENT. v.n. [from the method of cutting counterparts of a contract together, that, laid on each other, they may cut, and any want of conformity may discover a fraud.] To contract; to bargain; to make a compact. Shall we buy treason, and indent with fears? When they have lost and fortified themselves? Sh.

They descend to the solemnity of a pact and covenant, and have indent with us. Deceit of Pity.

INDENT. n.s. [from the verb.] Inequality; encircled; indelence. This is little used.

Treat shall not wind with such a deep indent, To rob me of so rich a bottom here. Shaksp.

INDEMNATION. n.s. [in and dems. adj.]

An indelence; waving in any figure.

The indelsible is no indelible, and the counterparts are indelent or cut one by the other; a contract, of which there is a counterpart. In Hall's chronicle much good matter is quite marred with indelentere Ancient, Atcham's School.

The critique to his grief will find

How firmly these indelence hold. Scott.

INDEPENDENCE. n.s. [independence.]

Fr. in and dependence.]

Freedom; exemption from reliance or control; state over which none has power.

Dues may give us some idea of the great excellency of a human soul, and some intimations of its indipendence on matter. Addison.

Let fortune do her worst, whatever she makes us lose, as long as she never makes us lose our honesty and our independence.

Give me, I cry'd, enough for me,

My bread and independence; So bought an annuity or two, and liv'd just as you see I do. Pope.

INDEPENDENT, adj. [indepennent, Fr. in and dependent.]

1. Not depending; not supported by any other; not relying on another; not controlled. It is used with on, of, or from, before the object; of which on seems most proper, since we say to depend on, and consequently dependent on.

Creation must needs infer providence, and God's making the world irrefragably proves that he governs it too; or that a being of dependent nature results necessarily independent upon his will in that respect.

Since all princes of independent governments are in a state of nature, the word never was without meaning in that state.

The town of St. Gaol is a Protestant republic. independent of the abbots, and under the protection of the crown. Addison.

2. Not relating to any thing else, as to a superior cause or power. The consideration of our understanding, which is an incorporeal substance independent from matter, and the conscious perception of our own bodies, which have all the stumps and characters of excellent contrivance; these alone do very easily guide us back to the Author who directed them all.

INDEPENDENT. n.s. One who in religious affairs holds that every ind

congregation is a complete church, subject to no superior authority.

We show in our sermons, take occasion to justify such passages in our liturgy as have been unjustly quarreled at by presbyterians, independents, or other puritan sectaries. Sanderson. A very famous independent minister was head of a college in those times. Addison's Spectator.

Independently, adv. [from independent.] Without reference to other things. Dryden Indescrib. n. s. [in and desert.] Want of merit. This is an useful word, but not much received. Those who were once looked on as his equals, are apt to flatter some of his merit a reflection on their own indecrets. Addison.

Indescribibly, adv. [indescribently, Fr. in and desirino, Lat.] Without cessation. They continue a month indecibly.

Indestructible, adj. [in and destructible.] Not to be destroyed.

Indeterminable, adj. [in and determination.] Not to be fixed; not to be defined or settled.

Indeterminately, adv. [in and determinately.] Indefinitely; not in any settled manner. His perspicacity discerned the leadstone to respect the North, when ours beheld it indeterminately.

Indeterminate, adj. [in and determinate.] Unfixed; not defined; indefinite.

Indetermination, n. s. [in and determination.] Want of determination; want of fixed or stated direction. By contingents I understand all things which may be done, and may not be done, may happen, or may not happen, by reason of the indetermination or accidental occurrence of the causes. Brunn.

Indevotion, n. s. [devotion, Fr. in and devotion.] Want of devotion; irreligion.

Let us take the church the scene of our peregrine, as of our faults; deplore our former indevotion, and, by an exemplary reverence, redress the scandal of profaneness. Decay of Piety.

Indevout, adj. [indesert, Fr. in and devout.] Not devout; not religious; irreligious.

In fact much; yet cur ses or more; whilst he is meek, but indevert.

Index, n. s. [Lat.]

1. The discoverer; the pointer out.

Tastes are the indices of the different qualities of plants, as well as of all sorts of animal. Arbuthnott.

That which was once the inorder; the point out of virtues, does now mark out that part of the world where least of them resides. Decay of Piety.

2. The hand that points to anything, as to the hour or way.

They have no more inward self-consciousness of what they do or suffer, than the index of a watch, of the hour it points to. Bentley.

3. The table of contents to a book.

In such index, although small. To their subsequent volumes, there is seen the baby figure of the giant mass. Shakesep.

If a book has no index or good table of contents, 'ts very useful to make one as you are reading it; and in your index to take notice only of parts new to you. Watts.

Indexterity. n. s. [in and dexterity.] Want of dexterity; want of readiness; want of handiness; clumsiness; awkwardness.

The indecency of our consumption-empers demonstrates their dandiness in belittling its causes. Harvey.

Indian Arrow-root. n. s. [maranta, Lat.] A root.

A sovereign remedy for the bite of wasps, and the pain of their stings. This root the Indians apply to extract the venom of their arrows. Miller.

Indian Cress. n. s. [arctidiol, Lat.] A plant.

Miller.

Indian Fig. n. s. [opusatie, Lat.] A plant.

Miller.

Indian Red. n. s. Is a species of ochre; a very fine purple earth, and of a firm compact texture, and great weight. Hill.

Indicant. adj. [indicans, Lat.] Show ing; pointing out; that which directs what is to be done in any disease.

To Indicate. v. a. [indicado, Lat.]

1. To show; to point out.

2. [In physic.] To point out a remedy. See Indicadon.

Indication. n. s. [indication, Fr. indicadon] indicate, from indicado, Lat.]

1. Mark; token; sign; note; symptom. The frequent stops they make in the most convenient places, are a plain indication of their weariness. Addison.

We think that our successes are a plain indication of the divine favour towards us. Atterbury.

2. [In physics.] Indication is of four kinds; vital, preservative, cutaneous, and palliative, as it directs what is to be done to continue life, cutting off the cause of an approaching distemper, curing it whilst it is actually present, or lessening its effects, or taking off some of its symptoms before it can be wholly removed. Quincy.

The deprivation of the instruments of mastication is a natural indication of a liquid diet. Arbuthnott.

3. Discovery made, intelligence given.

If a person that had a fair estate in reversion, should be assured by some skillful physician, that he would inevitably fall into a disease that would totally deprive him of his understanding and memory; if, I say, upon a certain belief of this indication, the man should appear overjoyed at the news; would not all that saw him conclude that the dimterer had seized him? Bentley.

4. Explanation; display.

These be the things that govern nature principally, and without which you cannot make any true analysis, and indication of the proceedings of nature. Bacon's Natural History.

Indicative. adj. [indicatives, Lat.]

1. Showing; informing; pointing out.

2. [In grammar.] A certain modification of a verb, expressing affirmation or indication.

The verb is formed in a certain manner to afirm, deny, or interrogate; which formation, from the principal use of it, is called the indicative mood. Clarke would be as great.

Indicatively. adv. [from indicative]

In such a manner as shows or betokens. These images, formed in the brain, are indicatively of the same species with those of sense. Grez.

Indict. See Indite, and its derivatives.

Indiction. n. s. [indiction, Fr. indicadon, Lat.]

1. Declaration; proclamation.

After a legation ad res repetendas, and a refusal, and a denunciation and indication of a war, the war is left in large. Bacon.

2. [In chronology.] The indication, instituted by Constantine the Great, is properly a cycle of bureties, orderly disposed, for fifteen years, and by it accounts of that kind were kept. Afterwards, in memory of the great victory obtained by Constantine over Mezentius, B Cal. Oct. 312, by which an entire freedom was given to Christianity, the Council of Nice, for the honour of Constantine, ordained that the accounts of years should be no longer kept by the Olympiads, which till that time had been done; but that, instead thereof, the indication should be made use of, by which to reckon and date their years, which hath its epocha A D. 312, Jan. 1.

Indifference. n. s. [indiffrerence, Fr. indifferent, Lat.]

1. Neutrality; suspension; equipoise or freedom from motives on either side.

In close of committees it is better to change indifferent persons, than to make an indifference by putting in those that are strong on both sides. Bacon's Essays.

By an equal indifference for all truth, I mean, not loving it as such, before we know it to be true. Locke.

A perfect indifference in the mind, not determinable by its last judgment, would be as great an imperfection as the want of indifference to act, or not to act, till determined by the will. Locke.

For we who would determine, consult either only those who have the goodluck to be thought sound and orthodox, avoiding those of different sentiments; or else with indifference look into notes of all commentators. Locke.

2. Impartiality.

Read the book with indifference and judgment, and thou canst not but greatly commend it. Whit.

3. Negligence; want of affection; unconcernedness.

Indifference cannot but be criminal; when it is conversant about objects which are so far from being of an indifferent nature, that they are of the highest importance. Addison.

A place which we must pass through, not only with the indifference of strangers, but with the vigilance or virtue who travel through the country of an enemy. Rogers.

Indiffence, chid in wisdom's guide, All fortunes of mind supply. For how can sly bowels weal,

In those who never pitty felt? Seft.

He will let you know he has got a clap as much indifference as he would a piece of public news. Seft.

The people of England should be frightened with the notion of the king and the pretendee once a year; the want of observing this necessary precept, has produced great indifference in the vulgar. Arbuthnott.
4. State in which no moral or physical reason preponderates; state in which there is no difference.

The choice is left to our discretion, except a principal bond of some higher duty; remove the in-difference that such things have in themselves: their indifference is removed, if we take away our own liberty.

Heber.

INDIFFERENT. adj. [indifferent, Fr. indiffère, Lat.]

1. Neutral; not determined on either side.

Dost his majesty incline to it or not?

—He seems in indifferent.

Shakesp.

2. Unconcerned; indifferent; regardless.

One thing was all to you, and your kindness made you indifferent to every thing else. Temple.

It was a law of Solon, that any person who, in the civil commotions of the republic, remained neutral was considered as an indifferent spectator of the contending parties, should be condemned to perpetual banishment.

Addison’s Freeman.

But how indifferent soever man may be to external things, yet surely to eternal things none can be indifferent.

Rogers.

3. Not to have such difference as that the one is for its own sake preferable to the other.

The nature of things indifferent is neither to be condemned nor forbidden, but left free and arbitrary.

Heber.

Customs, which of themselves are indifferent in other kingdoms, become exceedingly evil in this realm, by reason of the inconveniences which followed thereupon.

Davies.

Thus at first it was free, and in my choice whether or not I should publish these discourses; yet, the publication being once resolved, the decision was not so indifferent.

South.

This I mention only as my conjecture, it being indifferent to the matter which way the learned still determine.

Locke.

4. Impartial; disinterested.

Melville was partial to none, but indifferent to all; a master for the whole, and a father to every one.

Acham.

I am a most poor woman and a stranger.

Born out of your dominions; having here no judge indifferent, and no more assurance of its trial proceeding.

Shakesp.

There can hardly be an indifferent trial had between the king and the subject, or between party and party, by reason of this general kindred and community.

Davies.

5. Passable; having mediocrity; of a middling state; neither good nor worst.

This is an improper and colloquial use, especially when applied to persons.

Something admits of mediocrity: A councillor, or pleader at the bar, may want Messala’s powerful eloquence; or be less read that deep Casselius; yet this indifferent lawyer is esteemed it. Bacon.

This can hardly be an indifferent trial had between the king and the subject, or between party and party, by reason of this general kindred and community.

Davies.

This has obliged me to publish an indifferent collection of poems, for the fear of being thought the author of a worse.

Prior.

There is not one of these subjects that would not sell a very indifferent paper, could think of garrison the publick by such mean and base methods.

Addison.

6. In the same sense it has the force of an adverb.

I am myself indifferent honest; but yet I could account of such things, that it were better that my mother had not born me.

Shakesp. Hamlet.

This will raise a great storm on it, and leave your wine indifferent clear.

Mortimer.

INDIFFERENTLY. adv. [indifferenter, Fr. indifféremment, Lat.]

1. Without distinction; without preference.

Whiteness is a mean between all colours, having itself indifferent to them all, so as with equal facility to be tinged with any of them. Newton.

We pardon extended indifferentness to all which of them would think himself under any particular obligation.

Addison.

Though a church of England-man thinks every species of purchase equally lawful, he does not think them equally expedient, or for every country indifferent.

2. Equally; impartially.

The may truly and indifferently minister justice.

Common Prayer.

3. In a neutral state; without wish or aversion.

Set honour in one eye, and death in the other; and I will look on both indifferent.

Shakesp.

4. Not well, tolerably; passably; middling.

A mule will draw indifferent well, and carry great burdens.

Coren.

I hope it may indifferently entertain you, be it at an unending hour.

Roux.

An hundred and fifty of their beds, some that kept me but very indifferent from the floor.

Gulliver’s Travels.

INDIGENCE. n. s. [indigence, Fr. in-digénci, digènci, Lat.] Want; penury; poverty.

Where there is happiness, there must not be indigence, or want of any due comforts of life.

Burnet’s Theory.

For ev’n that indigence, that brings me low.

Myself, and all my friends; and made me know.

Burm. Societies.

It is a fact, that indigence, in its nature,

such as it is, cannot be remedied.

Loch. on Educ.

We are not to indigent the parts transmitted.

Hume.

INDIGENSION. n. s. [from indiginate.]

The act of pointing out or shewing, as by the finger.

Which things I conceive no obscure indigestation of providence.

More against Austin.

INDIGN. adj. [indigne, Fr. indigus, Lat.]

1. Unworthy; undeserving.

What is a kingdom that is altogether unable to defend or govern, is just for another nation, that is civil or politic, to subdue them?

Bacon.

2. Bringing indignity; disgraceful. This is a word not in use.

And all indigne and base adversities.

Make head against my estimation.

Shakesp.

INDIGNANT. adj. [indiguanus, Lat.]

Angry; raging; inflamed at once with anger.

He scorg’d with many a stroke th' indignant Milten.

The lustful monster fiend, pursued by the valorous and indignant Martin. Arberthaut and Pope.

What rage that hour did Albion’s soul possess.

Let chieftains imagine, and lovers guess.

He strides indignant, and with haughty cries.

To single fight the fairy prince defies.

Ticci.

INDIGNATION. n. s. [from indigurate.]

1. Anger mingled with contempt or disgust.

Suspend your indignation against my brother, till you receive better testimony of his intent. Skak.

From those officers, warm with indignation at the insolences of that vile rabble, came words of great contempt.

Clarend.

But keep this swelling indignation down.

And let your cooler reason now prevail.

Roux.

2. The anger of a superior.

There was great indignation against Israel.

2 King.

3. The effect of anger.

970
INDIGNITY. n. s. [indignitas, from indignus,Lat. indiginita, Fr.] Contumely; contemptuous injury; violation of right accomplished with insult. Bisphops and prelates could not but have bleeding hearts to behold a person of so great place and worth constrained to endure so foul indignities.

To this appearance of passion transported me, by the indigity of his carriage, to any thing unbecoming myself. King Charles.

No emotion of passion transported me, by the indigity of his carriage, to any thing unbecoming myself. Hooker.

Man he made, and for him built Magnificent this world, and curth his seat, Him lord pronounc'd; and, O! indignity Subjected to his service angel-wings, And flaming ministers, to watch and tend Their earthly charge. Milton.

He does not see how that mighty passion for the church can well consist with those indignities and that contempt men bestow on the clergy. Swift.

To more exalted glories born, Thy mean indignities I scorn. Paterson.

INDIGO. n. s. [indicium, Lat.] A plant, by the appearance of which the middle of the flower is the yellow, which afterwards becomes a jointed pod, containing one cylindrical seed in one partition, from which indigo is made, which is used in dying for a blue colour. Miller.

INDIRECT. adj. [indirect, Fr. indirect, Lat.]
1. Not strat: not rectilinar.
2. Not tending otherwise than obliquely or consequentially to a purpose; as, an indirect accusation.
3. Wrong: improper.

The tender prince Would fling his courses with me to meet your grace; But by his mother was perform'd with force, — 'tis, what an indirect and perjurious course.

Is this of her's? Shakesp. Richard III.

4. Not fair; not honest.

Think you, that any means under the sun Can coerce to indirect a course? Daniel.

These things which they do know they may, upon sundry indirect considerations, let pass; and although themselves do not err, yet may they deceive others, by indirect. Hooker.

O pity and shame! that they who to live well Enter'd so fair, should turn aside, to tread Paths indirect. Milton.

Indirecting will be discover'd one time or other, and then he loses his reputation. Titubon.

INDIRECTION. n. s. [in and direction.]
1. Oblique means; tendency not in a straight line.
And thus do we, of wisdom and of reach, With wits and words, and with essays of vaunts, By indirection find direction out. Shakesp. Hamlet.

I had rather confine my heart than wring From the base and vile trash of perjured vile trash, By any indirection. Shakesp. Julius Caesar.

INDIRECTLY. adv. [from indirect.] 1. Not in a right line; obliquely.
2. Not in express terms. Still she suppresses the name, which continues his doubts and hopes; and at last she indirectly manifestation. Browne.

3. Unfairly; not rightly.

He bids you then resign Your crown and kingdom, indirectly held From hand to hand, by the warring challenger. Shakesp. Henry V.

He that takes any thing from his neighbor, which was justly forfeited, to satisfy his own revenge or avarice, is tithe to repentance, but not to restitution: because I took the forfeiture indirectly, I am answerable to God for my unworthy injustice, or unjustifiable circumstances. Taylor.

INDIRECTNESS. n. s. [in and directness.]
1. Obliquity.
2. Unfairness; dishonesty; fraudulent art.

INDISCREET. adj. [in and discernible.]
Not perceptible; not discoverable.

Speculation, which, to my dark soul, Deprives of reason, is to indirect, As colours to my body, wanting sight. Denham.

INDISCRIBESIBLY. adv. [from indiscernible.]
In a manner not to be perceived.

INDISCRIMINATELY. adj. [in and discernible.]
Not to be separated; incapable of being broken or destroyed by dissolution of parts.

INDISCRIMINATIBILITY. n. s. [from indiscriminable.]
Incapability of dissolution.

INDISCOVERY. n. s. [in and discovery.]
The state of being hidden. An unusual word.

The ground of this assertion was the magnifying esteem of the ancients, arising from the indiscriminability of its head. Brown.

INDISCREET. adj. [in, direct, Fr. in, and discreet.]
Imprudent; imprudent; injudicious; inconsistent; injudicious.

Why then Are mortal men so fond and indiscreet, So evil gold to seek unto their aid; And having not complain, and leaving it unpurloined? Spenser.

If then be among the indiscreet, observe the time, but be continually among men of understanding. Eceret.

INDISCREETLY. adv. [from indiscriminate.]
Without prudence; without consideration; without judgment.

Job on justice hath aspersions hung. And spoken indiscreetly with his tongue. Sandys.

Let a great person undertake an action passionately, let him manage it indiscriminately, and he shall have enough to flatter him. Dyer.

INDISCORDANCE. n. s. [in, direct, Fr. in and discretion.]
Imprudence; rashness; insconsideration.

Indiscordance sometimes serves us well. When our deep, plots do fail. Shakesp. Hamlet.

His discords did proceed rather from neglectfulness, rashness, or other indiscretion, than from any malignant thought. Hayward.

Loose papers have been obtained from us by the importunity and divagation by the indiscretion of friends, although restrained by promises. Sertif.

INDISCRIMINATE. adj. [in, direct, Fr. in, and discreet.]
Undistinguishable; not marked with any note of distinction.

INDISCRIMINATELY. adv. [in, direct, Fr. in, and discreet.]
Without distinction.

Others use defamatory discourse purely for love of talk; whose speeches, like a flowing current, bears away indiscriminately whatever lies in its way. Government of the Tongue.

Liquors, strong of acid salts, destroy the blue- ness of the infusion of our wood; and liquors indiscriminately, that abroad with sulphurous salts restore it. Boyl.

INDISPENSABLE. adj. [Fr.]
Not to be remitted; not to be spared; necessary.

Rocks, mountains, and caverns, against which these exceptions are made, are of indiscriminable use and necessity, as well to earth as to man. Words.

INDISPENSABLENESS. n. s. [from indiscriminable.]
State of not being to be spared; necessity.

INDISPENSABLY. adv. [from indiscriminable.]
Without dispensation; without remission; necessarily.

Every one must look upon himself as indispensable to the practice of duty. Addison.

A man, to whom no indiscreet is due. Dryden.

1. To make unfit: with for.

Nothing can be reckoned good or bad to us in this life, any further than it prepares or indisposes us for the enjoyments of another. Essay on Divinity.

2. To dispossess to its indirect, with for.

It has a strange efficacy to indispose the heart to religion. Words.

3. To disorder; to disqualify for its proper functions.

The soul is not now hind-reed in its actions, by the disqualification of its organs. Goodwin.

4. To disorder slightly with regard to health.

Though it weakened, yet it made him rather indisposed than sick, and did no ways disoblige him from studying. Halton.

5. To make unprofitable: with towards.

The king was sufficiently indisposed towards the persons or the principles of Calvin's disciples. Clarendon.

INDISPENSABLENESS. n. s. [from indiscriminable.]
State of unfitness or disinclination; disordered state.

It is not any innate harshness in piety that renders the first essays of it unpleasant, but that is seeing only to the indisposition of our own hearts. Decay of Piety.

INDISPOSITION. n. s. [indisposition, Fr. from indispositive.]
1. Disorder of health; tendency to sickness; slight disease. The king discomfited a continual infirmity of body, yet only as an indisposition in health than any actual sickness. Hayward.

I have known a great fleet lose great occasion, by an indisposition of the admiral, while he was neither well enough to exercise, nor ill enough to leave the command. Temple.

Wisdarn is still looking forward, from the first indispositions into the progress of the disease. L'Augrenge.

His life seems to have been prolonged beyond its natural term, under those indispositions which hung upon the latter part of it. Addison's Speech.

2. Disinclination; dislike; with to or towards.

The indisposition of the church of Rome to reform herself, must be no stay unto us from performing our duty to God. Hooker.

It is known, that every degree of affected unfitness contracts men more and more to a general indisposition towards believing. Atterbury.

INDISPENSABLE. adj. [in and dispensable.]
Uncontrovertible; incontestable; evident; certain.

There is no manner in politics more indispensable, than that a nation should have many honours to reserve for those who do public services. Addis.

The apostle asserts a clear indispensable conclusion, which could admit of no question. Rogers.

INDISPENSABLENESS. n. s. [from indis passive.]
The state of being indispensable; certainty; evidence.

INDISPENSABLY. adv. [from indispensable.]
1. Without controversy; certainly; evidently.

The thing itself is questionable, nor is it indispensable what death she died. Brown.

2. Without opposition.

They questioned a duty that had been indispensably granted to so many preceding ages. Hook.

INDISSECTABLE. adj. [in and dissectable.]
1. Indissoluble; not separable as to its parts.
IND

Metals, corroded with a little acid, turn into rust, which is an earth tasteless and indissoluble in water; and this earth, imbued with more acid, becomes a metallic salt. Newton.

2. Obligatory; not to be broken; binding ever.

Deposition and degradation are without hope of any remission; and therefore the law stiles them an indissoluble bond; but a censure, a discerning bond. Apol. of the Euphr.

INDISSOLUBILITY. n. s. [indissolubilité, Fr. from indissoluble.]

1. Resistance to a dissolving power; firmness; sturdiness.

What hoops hold this mass of matter in so close a union, or the metal, or a party of value, or the metal, or a part of diamond's hardness and indissoluble bond. Locke.

2. Perpetuity of obligation.

INDISSOLUBLE. adj. [indissoluble, Fr. from indissolubilité, Lat. in and dissolubilis.]

1. Resisting all separation of its parts; firm; stable.

When copper and gold are mingled, the lead may be severed almost utterly; yet it, instead of the gold, a tunnill of the red elixir being mingled with the same, their union will be so indissoluble as is no possible way of separating the divided elixir from the fixed lead. Boyle.

2. Binding for ever; subsisting for ever; not to be looked on.

Far more comfort we for it, to be joined with that inimical and ungodly, to live as if we our persons being many, our souls were but one. Hooker.

They are true names and indissoluble consociation between men, of which the heathen poet saith we are all one generation. Bacon's Holy War.

To divide the other, that men so sundered, so well to be joined, it must, by all, shew them selves so contrary to such heavenly instructions, such indissoluble obligations. South.

INDISSOLUBLENESS. n. s. [from indissoluble.] Indissolubility; resistance to separation of parts.

Adam, though consisting of a composition intrinsically indissoluble, might have lived, by the Divine Will, a state of immortality and indissolubleness of his composition. Hale.

INDISSOLUBLY. adv. [from indissoluble.]

1. In a manner resisting all separation.

They have so moved indissolubly firm; nor obvious hill, nor straining vale, nor wood, nor stream divide their perfect rank. Pope.

The remaining ashes, a further degree of fire, may be indissolubly united into glass. Boyle.

They willingly unite, indissolubly firm: from Dubris south to northern Orcades. Phillips.

2. For ever obligatorily.

INDISTINCT. adv. [indistinct, Fr. in and distinctus, Lat.]

1. Not plainly marked; confused.

That is now a horse, even with a thought, The rack distills, and makes it indistinct. As water is in water. Shakespeare.

She warmed in her throat, and to'd her voice to many a merry note; But indistinct, and neither sweet nor clear, Dryden.

When we speak of the infinite divisibility of matter, we keep a very clear and distinct idea of division and divisibility; but when we come to consider for small objects, our ideas of these little bodies become obscure and indistinct. Watts.

2. Not exactly discerning.

We throw out our eyes for brave Othello, For the title taints the main and th' aerial blue An indistinct regard. Shakespeare.

INDISTINCTION. n. s. [from indistinct.]

1. Confusion; uncertainty.

The indistinction of many of the same name, or the misapplication of the word of one unto another hath made some doubt. Brown's Variorum Errours. Spratt.

2. Omission of discrimination; indiscrimination.

An indistinction of all persons, or equality of all orders, is far from being agreeable to the will of God. Newton.

INDISTINCTLY. adv. [from indistinct.]

1. Confusedly; uncertainly; without definiteness or discrimination.

In its sides it was bounded distinctly, but on its ends confusion and indistinctly, the light there. Newton's Opticks.

2. Without being distinguished.

Making trial thereof, both the liquors soaked indistinctly through the bowels. Brown's Variorum. Egg.

INDISTINCTNESS. n. s. [from indistinct.]

Confusion; uncertainty; obscurity.

There is unwearness or indiscernibility in the style of life in places, concerning the origin and forms of the earth. Burnet's Theory.

Old age makes the cornes and coat of the chrysanthemum hung flatter; so that the light, for want of sufficient refraction, will not converge to the bottom of the eye, but beyond it, and conversely at the bottom of the ray, make a confused picture; and according to the indistinctness of this picture, the object will appear confused. Newton.

INDISTURBANCE. n. s. [in and distur.]

Calmness; freedom from disturbance.

What a stunnckle apart is, and by the Scepticks indisturbance, seems all but mean, great tranquility of mind. Temple.

INDIVIDUAL. adj. [individu, individuel, Fr. individus, Lat.]

1. Separate from others of the same species; single; numerically one.

Neither is it enough to consult, secludum genere, what the kind and character of the person should be; for the most judgment is shown in the choice of individuals. Bacon.

They present us with images more perfect than the life in any individual. Dugald's Theory.

Must the whole man, amazing thought! return To the cold marble, or contracted urn? And never shall those particles agree, That were in life this indistinguishable? Prior.

Know all the good that individuals find. Lies in three words, health, peace, and content. Pope.

We see each circumstance of art and individual of nature summoned together by the extent and confluence of his imagination. Pope's Pref. to the Iliad.

It would be wise in them, as individual and private mortals, to look back, a little upon the storms they have raised, as well as those they have escaped. Swift.

The object of any particular idea is called an individual: so Peter is an individual man, London is an individual city. Watts.

2. Undivided; not to be parted or dissolved.

To give thee being, I lend Out of my side to thee, incurring then a heart, Substantial life, to have thee by my side Henceforth my individual solace dear, Milton.

Long eternity shall greet our bliss With an indissolubl kiss. Milton.

Under his great victorious reign abide United, as one individual soul, For evermore. Milton.

INDIVIDUALITY. n. s. [from individual.]

Separate or distinct existence.

He would tell his instructor, that all men were not singular; that individuality could hardly be predicated of any man: for it was commonly said, that a man is not the same he was, and that mankind are beside themselves. Arbuthnot.

INDIVIDUALLY. adv. [from individual.]

1. With separate or distinct existence; numerically.

How should that subsist solitarily by itself, which hath no substance, but individually the very same as others? Hooker.

2. Not separably; incomunicably.

I dare not pronounce him omniscient, that being an attribute individually proper to the godhead, and incomunicable to any created substance. Hakewill.

To INDIVIDUATE. r. a. [from individualis, Lat.] To distinguish from others of the same species; to make single.

Life is individuated into infinite numbers, that have their distinct sense and pleasure. More.

No man is capable of translating poetry, who, besides a genius to that art, is not a master both of his author's language and of his own; nor must we understand the language only of the poet, but his particular turn of thoughts and expression, which are the characteristic that distinguish and individuate him from all other writers. Dryden.

INDIVIDUATION. n. s. [from individuate.] That which makes an individual.

What is the principle of individuation? Or what is it that makes any one thing the same as another? Watts.

INDIVIDUITY. n. s. [from individualis, Lat.] The state of being an individual; separate existence.

INDIVIDUITY. n. s. [and divinity.] Want of divine power. Not in use.

How openly did the oracle betray his individuation under the Cross, who being ruined by his philosophical, and expostulating with him, received no higher answer than the excuse of his impotency. Dryden.

INDIVIDUALITY. n. s. [from individualis.] Individually, visible. State in which no more division can be made.

A pestle and mortar will as soon bring any particle of matter to individuality as the nearest thought in a mathematician. Locke.

INDIVIDUALITY. adj. [individuable, Fr. in and indivisible.] What cannot be broken into parts; so small as that it cannot be smaller; having reached the last degree of divisibility.

By atom, no body will imagine we intend to express a perfect indivisible, but only the least sort of indivisible. Digby.

Here is but one indivisible point of time observed, but one action performed; yet the eye cannot comprehend one indivisible whole object. Dryden.

INDIVIDUALLY. adv. [from individual.] So as it cannot be divided.

INDIGIBLE. adj. [in and docile.] Un teachable; insusceptible of instruction.

INDOCTIL. adj. [indoctile, Fr. indoctilis, Lat.] Un teachable; incapable of being instructed.

These certainly are the fools in the text, indeed, intractable fools, whose stubbornness can baffle all arguments, and is proof against the instruction itself. Bentley's Sermons.

INDOCRINITY. n. s. [indoctrinable, Fr. in and docile.] Un teachability, refusal of instruction.

To INDOCTRINATE. r. a. [indoctrinare, old Fr.] To instruct; to instruct with any science, or opinion.

Under a master that discoursed excelently, and took much delight in indoctrinating his young wards, I received from him that I was somewhat suspicious of the opinion of a gentleman that had observed a quick conception of speaking very gracefully and pertinently. Clarendon.
IND

They that never peep beyond the common belief, in which an easy understanding is fixed at first indiscriminately, are strongly opposed to the truth of their perceptions.

Ghulielma

INDOCRINATION. n. s. [from indocrinate]. Instruction; information.

Although this be very accommodable unto judicious instruction, yet are these authorities not to be embraced by the multitude of our intellectuals.

Brown

INDUCIBLE. n. s. [induce, and induce, Lat.]

INDOLENCY. n. s. [indolence, Fr.]

1. Freedom from pain.

As there must be indulgence where there is happiness, so there must not be indigence. Barrow.

If I have case, it must not be called indulgence.

Hooker.

2. Laziness; inattention; listlessness.

Let Epicurus give indulgence as an attribute to his gods, and place it in the happiness of the blest; the Deity which we worship has given us not only a present against it, but his own example to the contrary.

Dryden.

The Spanish nation, raised from their ancient indulgence and ignorance, seem now to improve trade. Bolingbroke.

INDOLENT. adj. [Fr.]

1. Free from pain. So the chirurgeons speak of an indolent tumour.

2. Careless; lazy; inattentive; listless.

Unfit for a chief

To waste long nights in indolent repose. Popes. Ill.

INDOLENTLY. adv. [from indolent.]

1. With freedom from pain.

2. Carelessly; hazily; inattentively; listlessly.

While all is heard by sound, and undisturbed by woe.

Calm and serene you indolently sit. Addison.

To INDULGE. v. a. [indurate, Lat.]

To portion; to enrich with gifts, whether of fortune or nature. See ENDOW.

INDRAUGHT. n. s. [in and draught.] To

1. An opening in the land into which the sea flows.

2. Inlet; passage inwards.

Navigable rivers are indraughts to attain wealth.

Bacon.

To INDRENCH. v. a. [from drench.] To soak; to drench.

My hopes lie drownd'd; in many fathom's deep

They lie buried. Scotch and Cynoada.

INDUBIOUS. adj. [in and dubium.] Not doubtful; not suspecting; certain.

Hence appears the vulgar vanity of rejecting so indubious confidence in those antidisciplinary spirits.

Indubitable. adj. [indubitabilis, Lat.]

Indubitable. Fr. in and dubitable.] Undoubted; unquestionable; evident; certain in appearance; clear; plain.

When general observations are made from so many particulars as to become certain and indubitable, these are jewels of knowledge.

Wits on the Mind.

Indubitably. adv. [from indubitable.]

Undoubtedly; unquestionably.

If we transport these proportions from audible to visible objects, there will indubitably result from such a graceful and harmonious concurrence.

The patriarchy was indubitably invested with both these authorities. Spratt.

I appeal to all sober judges, whether our souls may be only a mere echo from shaking atoms; or rather indubitably must proceed from a spiritual substance.

Indubitate. adj. [indubitatus, Lat.] Unquestioned; certain; apparent; evident.

If he stood upon his own title of the house of Lancaster, he was compelled by partizanship, and tended directly to the dismission of the name of York; held then the indubitable heirs of the crown. Bacon's Henry VII.

I have been tempted to wonder, how among the justice and equity, Edgar Atheling could subsist, being then the apparent and indubitable heir to the crown.

To INDUCE. v. a. [indure, Fr. induce, Lat.]

1. To influence to any thing; to persuade: of persons.

The self-same argument in this kind, which does induce it to do that sort to like, which may so strain the wiser to yield.

Hooker.

This lady, albeit she was furnished with so many excellent endowments both of nature and education, yet would she never be induced to enter marriage with any.

Hayward.

Desire with thee still longer to converse.

Induced.

Bacon.

Let not the covetous design of growing rich induce you to rain your reputation, but rather satisfy it with the many things thy brain has been taken up with acquiring to thyself a glorious name.

Dryden.

2. To produce by persuasion or influence; of things.

Let the vanity of the times be restrained, which the neighbourhood of other nations have induced, and we strive to space to extend our pattern. Bacon.

A bolder is abated of all moderation; and the evidence for induing it must be of that nature as to accommodate itself to all species of men.

Froissart.

3. To offer by way of induction, or consequent reasoning.

They play much upon the simile, or illustrative argumentation, to induce their ethylogies unto the people, and take up popular concents. Brown.

4. To inculcate; to enforce.

This induces a general change of opinion, concerning the person or party like to be obeyed by the greatest or strongest part of the people. Temp.

5. To cause extrinsicly; to produce; to effect.

 Sour things induce a contraction in the nerves, placed in the mouth of the stomach, which is a great cause of appetite. Bacon.

Acidity, as it is not the natural state of animal fluids, but induced by aliment, is to be cured by aliment with the contrary qualities. Arbuthnot.

6. To introduce; to bring into view.

To expunge their stupidity, he indueth the providence of stars: now, if the bird had have known, the illustration had been obscure, and the exporation not so proper. Brown.

The poet may be seen inducing his personages in the first line, where he discovers their humours, interests, and designs.

Pope.

7. To bring on; to superinduce; to effect gradually.

Selles is marked out by the apostle as a kind of perturbation, which induces that passion to which the fearfull expectation of wrath is consequent.

Decoy of Piety.

Inducement. n. s. [from induce.]

Motive to any thing; that which allureth or persuades to any thing.

The former inducements do now much more prevail, when the very thing hath ministered further reason.

Many inducements, besides Scripture, may lead me to the same, which if Scripture be against, they are of no value, yet otherwise are strongly effectual to persuade.

Hooker.

They mov'd me to,

Then mark th' inducement. Shakspeare, Henry VIII.

He lives

Higher degree of life; inducement strong.

For

Milton.

My inducement hither,

Was not at present here to find my son. Milton.

Inducing occurs of oppression, to which there appears no inducement from the circumstances of the actors.

In Duc, n. s. [from induce.] A persuader; one that induces.

To INDUCT. v. a. [inductus, Lat.]

1. To introduce; to bring in.

The ceremonies in the gathering were first induced by the Venetians.

Sunday's Tracts.

2. To put into actual possession of a benefit.

If a person thus instigated, though not induced, takes a second benefit, it shall make the first void.

激起's Penrith.

Induction. n. s. [induction, Fr. induc'tio, Lat.]

1. Introduction; entrance; anciently preface.

These promises are fair, the parties sure.

And our induction full of prouerbs hope. Shakesp.

2. Induction is when, from several particular propositions, we infer one general; as, the doctrine of the Socinians cannot be proved from the gospels, it cannot be proved from the acts of the apostles, it cannot be proved from the epistles, nor the book of revelations; therefore it cannot be proved from the New Testament.

The induction by induction is wonderful hard; for the things reported are full of fables, and new experiments can hardly be made but with extreme care. Bacon.

Mathematical things are only capable of clear demonstration: conclusions in natural philosophy are proved by induction of experiments, things by moral by moral arguments, and matters let by credible testimony. Tilletion.

Although the arguing from experiments and observations by induction be no demonstration of general conclusions, yet it is the best way of arguing which the nature of things admits of, and may be looked upon as so much the stronger by how much the induction is more general; and if no exception occur from phenomena, the conclusion may be general.

Newton's Opticks.

He brought in a new way of arguing from induction, and that grounded upon observation and experiments.

Baker.

The act or state of taking possession of an ecclesiastical living.

Inductive adj. [from induc.]

1. Leading; persuasive: with to:

A brutish vice, inductive merely to the sin of Eve. Milton.

2. Capable to infer or produce.

Abstractions may take away infallible conclusions in these evidences of fact, yet they may be probable and inductive of credibility, though not of science. Hale's Origin of Mankind.

3. Proceeding not by demonstration, but induction.

To INDUCE. v. a. [indo, Lat.]

1. To invest; to clothe.

Our first matter all,

Indue with various forms. Milton.

2. It seems sometimes to be, even by good writers, confused with endow or in due, to furnish or enrich with any quality or excellence.

According to which God indue'd the waters of Bethesda with supernatural virtue was not seen; yet the angel's presence was known by the waters.

Baker.

His power's with dreadful strength indue'd.

Chapman.

To INDULGE. v. a. [indulge, Lat.]

973
1. To encourage by compliance. The lazy glutton safe at home will keep; indulge his thrift, and fatten with his sleep. Dryd.

2. To indulge; to favour; to gratify with concession; to foster. If the matter of indulgence be a single thing, it has with it before it; if it be a habit, it has in it; as, indulge in it, himself, having a draught of wine, and he indulged himself in shameful drunkenness.

A mother was wont to indulge her daughter with dogs, squirrels, or birds, but then they must keep well. Locke.

To disclose those that have their hope in another life, implies that we indulge ourselves in the gratifications of this life very sparingly. Atterbury.

3. To grant not of right but favour. And in privileges, indulged by former kings to their people, must not without reason be revoked by their successors. Taylor

The virgin's ending beauty, indulge'd the day. Dryd.

The brown cave, and brush'd the dreams away. Dryd.

But since among mankind so few there are, Who will conform to philosophick fame, This much I will indulge thee for thy case, And mingle something of our times to please. Dryd.

My frie, indulge one labour more. And seek Atrides. Pope's Odyssey.

Yet, yet a moment, one dim ray of light Label that never, never friend's a life! Poe.

To INDULGE. v. n. [A Latinism not in use. To be favorable; to give indulgence with to.

He must, by indulging to one sort of reprovable discourse himself, defeat his endeavours against Government of the Tongue. Dryd.

INDULGENCE. n. s. [indulgence, Fr. indulgence, $ from induce].

1. Fondness; fond kindness. Restrain she will not brook; And left to herself, if evil thence ensue, She first her weak indulgence will accuse. Milton.

The glory of our Isle, Which yet like golden ore, unripe in beds, To vigour.

2. Forbearance; tenderness; opposite to rigour.

They err, that through indulgence to others, or fondness to any in themselves, substitute for separate, say nothing less indulgent, that was Humeon on Fonder.

In known images of life, I guess

The labour greater, as th' indulgence less. Pope.

3. Favour granted; liberality.

Indulgence given to any, are without any effect on us, as we must partake in our own folly. Reg.

4. Grant of the church of Rome, not defined by themselves, Thou, that giv'st wheres indulgences to sin, I'll canvass thee. Shakesp. Henry VI. Indulgences, dispenses, pardons, bulls, The span of winds.

In purgatory, indulgences, and supererogation, the assayers seem to be unanimous in nothing but profit. Dryd.

Len X. is deservedly infamous for his base imposition of indulgences.

INDULGENT. adj. [indulgent, Fr. indulgent, Lat.]

1. Kind; gentle; liberal. God has done all for us that the most indulgent Father could do for the work of his hands. Rogers.

2. Mild. Hereafter such in thy behalf shall be The indulgent censure of posterity. Waller.

3. Gratifying; favouring; giving way to; with of. The feeble old, indulgent of their case. Dryd.

INDULGENTLY. adv. [from indulgent.] Without severity; without censure; without self-reproach; with indulgence.

What order, so contriv'd as not to mix
Tastes, not well join'd, inelegant, but trite
Taste after taste, upheld with kindled change.
Milton

This very variety of sea and land, hill and vale,
Which is so inelegant and uncomely,
Is, indeed, extremely charming and agreeable.
Woodward

2. Wanting ornament of language.

In modern critics, having never read Homer, but in low and inelegant translations, impute the meanness of the translation to the poet.
Dowme

INEQUABLE. adj. [inequales, inequalis, L.] Not persuasive; not oratorical: opposite to eloquent.
INEFFECT. adj. [ineptus, L.]

1. Failing: foolish.
The works of Nature, being neither useless nor inept, must be guided by some principle of knowledge.
More

After their various unsuccessful ways,
Their fruitless labour, and inept essays,
No cause of these appearances they'll find,
But power of nature and her unerring hand.
Blacken

2. Useless for any purpose: useless.

When the upper and vegetative station was once washed off by rains, the hills would have become below of yielding only mere sterile matter, such as was wholly inept and improper for the formation of vegetables.
Hooke

None do their works so foolishly or ineptly. More

All things were at first disposed by an omniscient intellect, that cannot contrive ineptly. Glan

INEPTITUDE. n.s. [from ineptus, L.] Unfitness.
The grating and rubbing of the axes against the sickles, where they are placed, will cause some ineptitude or resistance to the rotation of the cylinder.
Wright

An omnipotent agent works infallibly and irresisibly, no ineptitude or stubbornness of the matter being ever able to hinder him. Ray on the Crea

There is an ineptitude to motio in too great Mass, and an ineptitude to motion in too great tension.
Arbuthnot

INEQUALITY. n.s. [from inequalis, inequales, L.]
1. Difference of comparative quantity.

There is so great an inequality in the length of our legs and arms, as makes it impossible for us to walk as all other quadrupeds do.
Ray

2. Unevenness; interchange of higher and lower parts.

The country is cut into so many hills and inequalities as renders it defendable. Addison on Italy

The glass seemed well wrought; yet when it was quicksilvered, the reflection discovered immutable inequalities all over the glass. Newton's Opt.

If there were no inequalities in the surface of the earth, nor in the seasons of the year, we should lose a considerable share of the vegetable kingdom.
Dous

3. Disproportion to any office or purpose; state of not being adequate; inadequateness.
The great inequality of all things to the appetites of a rational soul appears from this, that in all worldly things man is often not half the pleasure in the actual possession that he proposed in the expectation.
South

4. Change of state; unlikeliness of a thing to itself; difference of temper or quality.

In some places, by the nature of the earth, and by the situation of woods and hills, the air is more unequal than in others; and inequality of air is ever an enemy to health.
Bacon

5. Difference of rank or station.

INEVITABLE. adj. [inamissibilis, L.] Unavoidable; not to be escaped.

I had a pass with him: he gives me the stockin with such a mortal motion, that it is incurable.
Shaksp. Twelfth Night

Fate inescapable.
Sobiesus.

Since my inescapable death you know,
You safely vanquishing pity. Dryden's Aurelia

INEVITABLY. adv. [from inamissibilis, L.]

Without possibility of escape.

The day then came to such a pass, that to command, transmit, inestimably shall die.
Milton

It inevitably does an inordinate laughter end in a sigh!
Swift

If they look no further than the next line, it will inevitably follow, that they can drive to no certain point.
Dryden

Inflammations of the bowels of inevitably tend to the ruin of the whole. Hervey's Observations

If our sense of hearing were excited, we should have no quiet or sleep in the sliest nights, and we must inevitably be stricken dead or dead, with a clap of thunder.
Beatty

INEXCUSABLE. adj. [inexcusable, inexcusableness, inexcusable, Lat.]

Not to be excused; not to be palliated by apology.

It is a temerity, and a folly inexcusable, to deliver up ourselves needlessly into another's power.
L'Estrange

As we are an island with ports and navigable seas, we should be inexcusable if we did not make these blessings turn to account. Addison's Freedom

Surely four could only render them more elaborate, and more inexcusable: it would increase their guilt.
Atterbury

If learning be not encouraged under the weight of mere consideration, you are the most inexcusable person alive.
Swift

A fallen woman is the more inexcusable, as from the candle, the seas are divided against the decisions of men.
Clarissa

INEXCUSABLENESS. n.s. [from inexcusable, L.]

Enormity beyond forgiveness or palliation.

Their inexcusableness is stated upon the supposition that they knew God, but did not glorify him.
South

INECUSABLY. adv. [from inexcusableness, L.]

To a degree of guilt or folly beyond excuse.

It will inexcusably condemn some men, who having received excellent endowments, yet have frustrated the intention.
Brown

INEXHAUSTABLE. adj. [in and exhaust.] That which cannot be evaporated.

A new laid egg will not so easily be boiled hard, because it contains a great stock of humid parts, which must be evaporated before the heat can bring the inexcusable parts into consistence.
Brown

INEXHAUSTED. adj. [in and exhaust-ed.] Unemptied; not possible to be emptied.

So wert thou born into a tineous strain.
An early, rich, and inexcusated vein.
Dryden

INEXHAUSTIBLE. adj. [in and exhaustible.] Not to be drawn all away; not to be spent.

Reflect on the variety of combinations which may be made with number, whose stock is inexhaustible, and truly infinite.
Locke

The stock that the mind has in its power, by varying the idea of space, is perfectly inexhaustible, and so it cannot multiply figures in infinity.
Locke

INESSENT. adj. [in and exist.] Not having being; not to be found in nature.
To express complicated significations, they took a liberty to compound and piece together creatures of allowable forms into mixtures inexplicable. Brown. Unknown

2. Existing in something else. This use is rare.

We doubt whether these heterogeneities be so much as inexplicable in the concrete, whence they are obtained.

Infallible. *n.s. [in and existence.]

Want of being; want of existence.

He calls up the heroes of former ages from a state of inattention to adorn and diversify his poem. Dacre. Infallible dog! Shaksp. Merchant of Venice.

The seer

Infallible calls to penance. Milton.

And with the rest 'in fallible duns, Dryden. To 'in fallible garves were bad, And ought was seen, and ought was heard, But at all shuffles of woe, Pope.

We can be deaf to the words of so sweet a charmer, and inexplicable to all his invocations. Bag.

Inexpedience. *n.s. [in and expedience.]

Want of fitness; want of propriety; unsuitable to time or place; inconvenience.

It concerns such suspicions to look well to the expediency and inexpedience of what they conjure in different things.

Sanderson.

Inexpedient. *adj. [in and expedient.]

Inconvenient; unfit; improper; unsuitable to time or place.

It is inexpedient they should be known to come from a person altogether a stranger to chymical affairs.

Begle.

We should be prepared not only with patience to bear, but to receive with thankfulness a reproach, if God should see them to be inexpedient. South. So there is an inexpedient grace in Virgil's words; and in them principally consists that beauty, which gives so inexplicable a pleasure to him who best understands their force: this diction of his is never to be copied.

Dryden.

Inexpressible. *adj. [inexpressible.]

Not to be told; not to be uttered; not utterable.

Thus when in orbs

Of circuit inexplicable they stood,

Orb within orb. Milton's Parumah Lat.

Nothing can so peculiarly gratify the noble dispositions of human nature, as for one man to see so much more himself as to sigh his griefs, and groan his sufferings, and take the tears out of his eyes, and feel every thing by sympathy and secret inexplicable communications. South. So the true God had no certain name given him for Father, and God, and Creator, are but titles arising from his works; and God is not a name, but no notion in graven in human nature of any inexplicable and ineffable thing. Still things.

There is an inexplicable grace in Virgil's words; and in them principally consists that beauty, which gives so inexplicable a pleasure to him who best understands their force: this diction of his is never to be copied.

Dryden.

Inexpressibly. *adv. [inexpressibly.]

To a degree or in a manner not to be uttered; not utterable.

God will protect and reward all his faithful servants in a manner and measure inexpresibly abundant.

South. He began to play upon it: the sound was exceeding sweet, and wrought into a variety of tunes that were inexpresibly melodious. Addison's Spectator.

Inexpugnable. *adj. [inexpugnabili, Fr. inexpugnabilis, Lat.]

Impregnable; not to be taken by assault; not to be subdued.

Why should there be implanted in each sex such a sentiment and inexpugnable appetite of copulation?

Roy.

Inextinguishable. *adj. [inextinguishable, Fr. inextinguishable, Lat.]

Unquenchable.

Pillars, statues, and other memorials, are a sort of shadow of an endless life, and show an inextinguishable desire which all men have of it. Grev.

Inextricable. *adj. [inextricable, Fr. inextricable, Lat.]

Not to be disentangled; not to be cleared; not to be set free from obscurity or perplexity.

He that should tie inextricable knots, only to battle the industry of those that should attempt to unloose them, would be thought not to have served his genius. Drysp. & Petyt. Stupor by awful height, and gulpis immense

Of wisdom, and of vast omnipotence. Shaks. Men are led into inextricable mazes by setting up themselves as judges of the world. S泡沫k.

Inextricably. *adv. [inextricably.]

To a degree of perplexity not to be disentangled.

The mechanical atheist, though you grant him his laws of mechanism, is nevertheless inextricably puzzled and baimed with the first formation of animals. Bentley.

In vain they strive; the insolating smokes deny Incessively from, to Ely, Pope's Odyssey. To INEX. v. n. [in and eye.]

To inculcate; to propagate trees by the insinuation of a bud into a foreign stock.

Let sage experience teach thee all the arts O'crafting and ingenuity. Phillips.

Infallibility. *n.s. [infallibility, Fr. infallible.]

Infallibility; exemption from error. Infallibility is the highest perfection of the knowing faculty, and consequently the finest degree of assimilation. Tollem.

Infallible. *adj. [infallible, Fr. in and fallible.] Privileged from error; incapable of mistake; not to be misled or deceived; certain. Used both of persons and things. Every cause admitted, not such inexplicable evidence of proof, as leaves no possibility of doubt or scruple behind it. Hooker.

For they are certain and infallible. Shak. H. VI. The success is certain and infallible, and none ever yet miscarried in the attempt. South.

Infallibly. *adv. [from infallibly.]

1. Without danger from deceit; with security from error.

We cannot be as God, infallibly knowing good and evil.

Smad lib's Sermons.

2. Certainly.

Our blessed Lord has distinctly opened the scope of curiosity to us, and directed us to such a conduct as will infallibly render us happy in it. Rogers.

To INFAL. v. a. [informer, Fr. informer, Lat.]

To represent to disadvantage; to defame; to censure publicly; to make infamous; to brand. To defame is now used.

Liv. is infamous for the poisoning of her husband. Bacon. Hitherto obscured, infamous, and thy fair fruit let hang, as to end.

Shaks. Publicly branded with guilt; openly censured; of bad report. Those that be near, and those that be far from thee, shall mock thee, which art infamous. Ezek. These are as some infamous bawd or whore. Should praise a matron; what could hurt her more? B. Jonson. After-times will dispute it, whether H. I. them were more infamous at Hull or at Tower-hill, &c. Persons infamous, or branded in any public court of judicature, are forbidden to be advocates.

Infamously. *adv. [from infamous.]

1. With open reproach; with public notoriety of reproach.

2. Shamefully; scandalously.

That poem was infamous badly. Drysp. Drysp.

Infamousness. *n.s. [infamous, Fr. infamy.]

Public reproach; notoriety of bad character. Ye are taken up in the lips of takers, and are the infamy of the people. Ezek. xxxvi., 3.

The noble isle doth want her proper flames, Her face defaced with scars of infamous. Shak. Willful perpetuations of unworthy actions brand, with most indelible characters of infamous, the name and memory to posterity. K. Charles.

Infancy. *n.s. [infantia, Lat.]

96
In the first part of life. Usually extended by naturalists to seven years. Dare we affirm it was ever his meaning, that unto their salvation, who even from their tender infancy never knew any other faith or religion than only God? Is it not a kind of teaching c the universal conversion of Gentiles, Instituting Christianity? Hoder.

Infectious. adj. [from infect.] Contagious; influencing by communicated qualities.

Infectiousness. n.s. [from infectious.] The quality of being infectious; contagious.

Infective. adj. [from infect.] Having the quality of acting by contagion.

Infiltration. n.s. [infect. Fr. infectio, Lat.] Contagious; by an infection and obstruction of the spleen.

Infant. n.s. [infant, Fr. infantum, Lat.] A child from the birth to the age of the seventh year.

Infantile. adj. Not mature; in a state of infantile perfection.

Infanticide. n.s. [infanticide, Fr. infanticidium, Lat.] The slaughter of the infants by Herod.

Infantry. n.s. [infante, Fr. l'infanterie, Fr.] The foot soldiers of an army.

Infatuation. n.s. [from infect. Fr. infatation, Lat.] The act of striking with folly; depriving of understanding.

Infatuated. adj. [infatuated, Fr. infatuation, Lat.] Practicable; not to be done.

Infecund. n.s. [infecundus, Fr. infecund.] Unfruitful; ineffective.

Infelicity. n.s. [infelicit, Fr. infelicité, Lat.] Unhappiness; misery; calamity.

Inferiority. n.s. [infunditatis, Lat.] Want of fertility; barrenness.

Infer. n.s. [inferre, Fr. inferre, Lat.] To bring on; to induce.

Inference. n.s. [in and facio, Lat.] Stuffing; constipation.

VOL. I.

Infectious. adj. [from infect.] Contagious; influencing by communicated qualities.

Infectiousness. n.s. [from infectious.] The quality of being infectious; contagious.

Infective. adj. [from infect.] Having the quality of acting by contagion.

True love, well considered, hath an infective power.

Sydney.

Infecund. n.s. [infecundus, Lat.] Unfruitful; ineffective.

Sydney.

Inferiority. n.s. [infunditatis, Lat.] Want of fertility; barrenness.

Unhappiness; misery; calamity.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.

Shakespeare.
INF

Great,
Or bright, infers not excellence: the earth
Though in comparison of heav'n so small,
Yet is the source of all created good.
Milton.

One would wonder how, from so differing pre misses, they all should infer the same conclusion.
Decay of Piety.

They have more opportunities than other men of purchasing public esteem, by desert and well of mankind; and such opportunities always obligations. Aetberurg.

3. To offer, to produce. Not in use.

Full well hath Chilpon play'd the orator.

Inferring arguments of mighty force.
Shakespeare.

INFERENCE, n.s. [Inferre, Fr. from infer.] Conclusion drawn from pre positions arguments.

Though it may be thought to be right in the con clusion, it is yet unjust and mistaken in the me of infering.

These inferences or conclusions are the effects of reasoning, and the three propositions, taken all gether, are called syllogism or argument. Wotten.

INFERRABLE, adj. [from infer.] Deducible from premises.

As simple mistakes commonly betot fallacies, so men, from fallacious foundations, and misapp rehended mediums, erect conclusions no way in their own Ruiz.

INFERRABILIT.

INFERIOR, n.s. [inferior, Lat. inferiour, Fr.]
1. Lower in place.
2. Lower in station or rank of life: corre superior to superior.

Rogers.
3. Lower in value or excellence.

The love of liberty with life is giv'n,
And life itself the inferior gift of heav'n.
Drayton.

I have added some original papers of my own, which, whether they are equal to inferior to my other poems, an author is the most improper Drayton.

4. Subordinate.

General and fundamental truths in philosophy, religion, and human life, conduct our thoughts unto a thousand inferior and particular propositions.
Watts.

INFERRABLE.

INFERIORITY, n.s. [from the adjective.]
One in a lower rank or station than another.

A great person gets more by obliging his infer rithen than by disdaining him.
Shakespeare.

INFERNAL, adj. [infernal, Fr. infernal, Lat.]
Hellish; Tartarean; detestable.

Hoggenbeck names with huge embrace,
Infinites nine acres of infernal space. Drayton.

INFERNAL STONE, n.s.

Inferrational stone, or the lunar carnite, is prepared by a superimposed solution of silver, or from cre als of silver. It is a very powerful caustic, casting a flame and the evening to which it is applied.

INFERRIBLE, adj. [inferfle, Fr. in and fible.] Unfathomable; not productive;
which contains ferment; infectious.

Infermability of itself, like still clay, an in ferman soil, when pride comes to search and harden it, it grows perfectly insensible.
Government of the Tongue.

INFERTILITY.

n.s. [inferfle, Fr. from

INFERTILITY.

Unfruitfulness; want of fer

The same distemper of the air that occasioned the plague, occasioned the infertility or noxiousness of some of the fruits of the earth because either very small, or very unwashable.
Hale's Origin of Mankind.

To INFEST, r. u. [injfer, Fr. infester, Lat.] To harass; to disturb; to plague.

Utensils in great want.

Come but not with that mighty rage
Wherewith the martial troops thou dost infect,
And hearts of greatest heroes dost disgust. Spens.

Infinite power was manifest while, to strengthen that part which in heart they favoured, and to infect by all means, under colour of other quarrels, their greatest endeavors in that state.
Hooker.

Although they were a people infected, and mightily hated of all others, yet was there nothing of force to work, the ruin of their state, till the time beforementioned was expired.
Hooker.

They were no mean, distressed calamitous persons that fled to him for refuge; but of so great quality, as it was apparent that they came not thither to project their own fortune, but to infect and invade his.

Every avid, superstitious, loving, with the likes cases and passions infect human life, Adjutant.

No disease infecteth mankind more in its symptoms and impressions than Alchimattic Line.

INFECTION, n.s. [in fest and infest.

Mournfulness; want of cheerfulness.

INFESTED. adj. [in fest and fester.] Rank ling; invertebrate. Obsolete.

This cursed creature, mindful of that old
Infested grove, which his mother felt,
Said as soon as he did behold,
His heart with vengeful malice holy swelt.Soner.

INFECTION, n.s. [in fest and infest.]
The act of putting one in posses sion of a fee or estate.

Another military provision was conversational by persuading the tenants and the tenantry was usually called knight's service. Hale.

INFIELD. n.s. [infidel, Fr. infidelit.

An unbeliever; a miscreant; a pagan;
one who rejects Christianity.

Exhorting her, if she did marry, yet not to join herself to an infidel, as in three times some Vicar of Christ had done, for the advancement of their estate in this world.
Hooker.

INFIELD. n.s. [infidelit, Fr. infidel.

1. Want of faith.

The consideration of the divine omnipotence and infiniteness, and our own ignorance, are the principal objects of the murmur of infi delity. Taylor's Rule of Living Holy.

2. Disbelief of Christianity.

One would fancy that infidelity would be exempt from that single fault, which seems to go out the imprudent favours of religion; but so it is, that infidelity is propagated with as much ner ness and contention, as if the safety of mankind depended upon it.

INFIELD. n.s. [infidelit, Fr. infidel.

1. Unbounded; boundless; unlimited; immense, having no boundaries or limits to its nature.

Impossible it is, that God should withdraw his presence from the earth, because the very essence of God is infinite. Hooker.

What's time, when on eternity we think? A thousand ages in that sea must sink;

INF Те

of nothing but a word; a million
Is full as far from infinite as one. Denham.

Thou see'st pow'r, whose secret will contr

The inward bent and motion of our souls!
Why hast thou plac'd such infinite degrees
Between the mean and the infinite? Prior.

When we would think of infinite space or dur we at first make some very large idea; as per of mill. walls or miles, which, possibly, we multiply several times.

Locke.

Even an angel's comprehensive thought
Cannot extend as far thou hast wrought.
Our vast conceptions are by swelling brought,
Swelled and lost in infinite, to sought. Denham.

2. It is hyperbolically used for large; great.

INFINITELY. ad. [from infinite.]

1. Without limits; without bounds; im mensely.

Nothing may be infinitely desired, but that good which indeed is infinite. Hooker.

2. In a great degree.

This is Antonio,
To whom I am infinitely bound. Shakespeare.

The king saw contrariwise it would follow, that England, though much less in territory, yet should be legible to more soldiers of her native forces than those other nations have. Bacon.

Infinitely the greater part of mankind have pro fessed to act under a full persuasion of this great article.

INFINITENESS. n.s. [from infinite.] Im mensity; boundlessness; infinity.

The cunning of his fancy, the readiness of his hand, the infiniteness of himself, or, in short, the weakest threads of his net.
Sidney.

Let us always bear in mind those infinite impressions, and fear of God, that we may bend ourselves before his Almightyness, and express that infinite distance between his infiniteness and our weaknesses.

INFINITESTIMAL. adj. [from infinite.]

Infinitively divided.

INFINITIVE. adj. [infinitif, Fr. infiniti ves, Lat.] In grammar, the infinitive affirms or infers the intention of affir ming, which is one use of the indicative;
but then it does not do it absolutely.

Clarke.

INFINITUDE. n.s. [from infinite.]

1. Infinity; immensity.

Confusion heard his voice, and wild appear
Stood tall, stood vast infinite confused. Milton.

Then must the reason of mankind be equally incompatible to continued or successive motion, or continued quantity, and depends on the incom patability of the very nature of things successive or extensive with infinitude; yet that incompa bility is more conspicuous in discrete quantity, that arises from parts actually distinguished. Hale.

2. Boundless number.

We see all the good sense of the age cut out,
and mixed into almost an infinitude of distinc tion. Addison's Spectator.

INFINITY. n.s. [infinite, Fr. infinites,
Lat.]

1. Immensity; boundlessness; unlimited properties.

There cannot be more infinites than one; for one of them would limit the other. Raleigh's Hist.

The better, the more desirable; that therefore must be despicable, wherein there is infinity of goodness; so that if any thing desirable may be infinite, it must needs be the highest of all things that are desired; no good is infinite but only God, therefore he is our felicity and bliss. Hooker.

2. Endless number. An hyperbolical use of the word.

Homer has concealed faults under an infinity of desirable beauties. Browne's Notes on the Odyssey.
The liver, being swallowed, compresses the stom ach, stops the circulation of the juices, and pro duce an effect of bad symptoms. Aikin. on Diet.
INF

INFLEXIBLE. adj. [Fr. inflexible, Lat.] 1. Not to be better or incurvated.

Hence it is, as are acorns in our younger brows, grow oaks in our olden heads, and become inflexible to the powerful arm of reason. Brown.

The elasticity and elasticity of the flowes make them inflexible to the causes, to which they ought to yield. Arbuthnot.

2. Not to be prevailed on; immutable.

The soul was composed and steady to its trust, inflexible till, and obstinately just. Addison.

A man of an upright and inflexible temper, in the execution of his country's laws, can overcome his fear. Addison.

3. Not to be changed or altered.

The nature of things is inflexible, and their natural relations unalterable; we cannot bring our understandings to things, and not bend things to our fancies. Watts.

INEXECDLY, adv. [from inflexible.] In-exorably; invariably; without relaxation or remission.

It should be begun early, and inflexibly kept to; 'till these appears not the least reluctance. Locke.

To INFLICT. v. a. [inflige, inflictus, Lat. infligr, Fr.] To put in act or impose as a punishment.

I know no pain, they can inflict upon him, Will make him say I know'd him to those arms, Shakespeare.

Sufficient is this punishment which was inflicted. 2 Cor. vi.

What the potent victor in his rage

Can the inflexible. Milton.

What heart could wish, what hand inflict this disc brigade? Dryden's Ann.

Such are we condemned ourselves to greater torments than have been yet invented by anger or revenge, or inflicted by the greatest tyrants upon the worst of men. Temple.

INFLECTER. n. s. [from inflict.] He who punishes.

Revenge is commonly not bounded, but extended to the utmost power of the inflicting. Government of the Tongue.

INFLEXION. n. s. [from inflict.]

1. The act of using punishments.

So our decrees,

Dead to inflexion, to themselves are dead;
And liberty plucks justice by the nose. Shakesp.

But we are bound in duty, and death not only as to merit, but also as to actual inflexion. Smollett.

2. The punishment imposed.

What, but thy malice, m'de thee to misdeme of his bles, then cruelly to inflect him

With all inflexions? But his patience won. Milt.

How despicable are the threats of a creature as impotent as ourselves, when compared with the wrath of an Almighty Judge, whose power extends to eternal inflexions. Rogers.

His severest inflexions are in themselves acts of justice and righteousness. Rogers.

INFLICTIVE. adj. [infligter, Fr. from inflict.] That which imposes a punishment.

INFLEXION. n. s. [influence, Fr. influe.]

1. Power of the celestial aspects operating upon terrestrial bodies and affairs.

Their influence dreaded, as their ways unknown. Prior.

2. Ascendant power; power of directing or modifying. It was anciently followed by into; now, less properly, by upon.

Incomparable lady, your commandant doth not only pay the will, but the power to obey, yet such influence hath your excellence. Sidney.

INFLEXUOUS. adj. [from influx.] Influential. Not used.

The moon hath an influence power to make impressions upon their humours. Howe.

To INFOLD. v. a. [in and fold.] To involve; to inwrap; to inclose with involutions.

For all the crest a dragon did infold

With greedy jaws, and over all did spread

His golden wings. Fairy Queen.

And hold thee to my heart. Shakesp.

But does not nature for the child prepare

The parent's love, the tender nurse's care?

Who, for their own forgetfull, seek his good,

Infold his limbs in bands, and fill his veins with food. Black.

Wings raise her arms, and wings her feet infold. Pope.

To INFOLIATE. v. a. [in and folium, Lat.] To cover with leaves. Not much used, but elegant.

Long may his fruitful vine infoliate and clasp about him with embraces. Dryden.

To INFORM. v. a. [inforcar, Fr. informe, Lat.]

1. To animate; to actuate by vital powers.

All alike inform'd

With radiant light, as glowing 'r with fire. Milton.

Let others better mold the running mass

Of metals, and inform the breathing brass;
And soften into sheet a marble face. Dryd.

And as from chaos, budd'd and inform'd,

The god struck fire, and lighted up the lamps

That beautify the sky; so he inform'd

This ill-adviz'd body with a dangerous soul. Dryden and Lee.

Breath informs this fleeting frame. Prior.

This sovereign arbitrary

Inform'd, and moves, and animates the whole. Blackmore.

While life informs these limbs, the king reply'd,

Well to deserve be all my cares employ'd. Pope.

2. To instruct; to supply with new knowledge; to acquaint. Before the thing communicated was anciently put with; now generally of; sometimes in. I know not how properly.

The drift is to inform their minds with some means of reducing the laws into their original causes. I have this present evening from my sister been well inform'd of them, and with caution. Shakesp.

Our min, by thee inform'd, I learn. Milton.

The long speeches rather confounded than informed his understanding. Clarendon.

The difficulty arises not from what sense informs us of, but from wrong applying our notions. Dryden.

Though I may not be able to inform men more than they know, yet I may give them the occasion to consider.

The ancients examined in what consists the beauty of good pastures, as their works sufficiently inform us.

He may be ignorant of these truths, who will never take the pains to employ his faculties to inform himself of them. Locke.

To understand the commonwealth, and religion, is enough; few inform themselves in these things, the rest are mere conjectures. Locke.

A more proper opportunity tends to make this narration more informing or beautiful. Browne.

I think it necessary, for the interest of virtue and religion, that the whole kingdom should be informed in some parts of your character. Swift.

3. To offer an accusation to a magistrate.

Tertullus inform'd the governor against Paul. Acts.

To INFORM. v. b. To give intelligence.

It is the bloody business which informs. Thus to mine eyes. Shakesp. Marbeth.
INFORMAL. adj. [from inform.] Irregular; not competent. A word not used.

These poor informal women are no more
But instruments of some more mightier member,
That sets them on. Shakesp. Measure for Measure.

INFIRMAT. n.s. [Fr.]
1. One who gives information or instruction.
He believes the sentence is true, as it is made up of terms which his informant understands, though the ideas he unknown to him which his informant has under these words. Locke.
2. One who exhibits an accusation.

INFORMATION. n.s. [in and formatio, Lat. from formatio.]
1. Intelligence given; instruction.
But reason with the fellow.
Lest you should chance to whip your information, and beat the messenger who bares hewre
Of what is to be dreamed. Shaksp. Coriolanus.
The active informations of the intellect filling the passive reception of the will, like form changing with matter, grow actuate into a third and distinct perfection of practice. South's Sermons.
They gave Vizetelly complex ideas names, that the things they were continually to give and receive information about, might be the easier and quicker understood.
He should regard the propriety of his words, and get some information in the subject he intends to handle.

These men have had longer opportunities of information, and are equally concerned with ourselves. Rogers.

2. Charge or accusation exhibited.

The act of informing or accusing.
INFORMER. n.s. [from inform.]
1. One who gives instruction or intelligence.
This writer is either biased by an inclination to believe the worst, or a want of judgment to chose his informers. Swift.
2. One who discovers offenders to the magistrate.
There were spies and informers set to work to watch the company. L'Estrange.
Let no court syphant perturb my sense.
Norsly informer watch these words to draw.
Within the reach of treason. Pope.
Informers are a despicable race of people, though sometimes necessary. Swift.

INFORMABLE. adj. [in and formidabilis, Lat.] Not to be feared; not to be dreaded.
Of strength, of courage haughty, and of limb
Herculean built, though of terrestrial mould.
For not exemptable, except from wond. Milton.

INFORMITY. n.s. [from informis, Lat.]
Shapelessness.
From this narrow time of gestation may ensue
A smallness in the exclusion; but this neither infirms no information. Brown's Vulg. Err.

INFORMOUS. adj. [informe, Fr. informitis, Lat.] Shapeless; of no regular figure.
That a bear brings forth her young informous and unsheep, which she fashioneth after by licking them over, is an opinion delivered by ancient writers. Brown's Vulg. Err.

INfortunate. adj. [infortuné, Fr. infortunos, Lat.] Unhappy. See UNFORTUNE, which is commonly used.
Perkin, destitute of all hopes, having found all either informes or informator, did glory at the condition. Bacon's Henry VII.

INFRACTION. n.s. [infraction, Fr. infracratic, Lat.] The act of breaking; breach; violation of treaty.
By the same gods, the justice of whose wrath Shall punish the fault of any former, or shall
The very sin of infracting an infraction in the absence of their hostages, fall upon the sheep without their dogs. L'Estrange.

INFRAIBLE. adj. [in and irfrangible.]
Not to be broken.
The primitive ideas are supposed infrangible; extremely compacted and hard, which comparedness and hardness is a demonstration that nothing could be produced by them, since they be never coherent. Chevallier.

INFRQUENCY. n.s. [infrequentia, Lat.]
Uncommonness; rarity.
The absence of the gods, and the infrequency of objects, makes herity. Browne on the Odyssey.

INFREQUENT. adj. [infrequens, Lat.]
Rare; uncommon.

To INFIRIGIDATE. v. a. [in and frigidus, Lat.] To chill; to make cold.
The drops reached little farther than the surface of the liquor, whose coldness did not infirigidate the glass. Boccyn.

To INFIRNGE. v. a. [infringe, Lat.]
1. To violate; to break laws or contracts.
Those many had not dor to do that evil,
If the first man that did the effeffect infringes,
Had answer'd at Mero. Shaksp. Macbeth.
Having infringe'd the law, I wave my right.
As king, and thus submit my self to light. Waller.

2. To destroy; to hinder.
Humble, bring plain and popular instructions, do not infringe the edicacy, although but read.
Bright as the deathless gods and happy, she
From all that may infringe delight is free. Waller.

INFRIgnEMENT. n.s. [from infringe.]
Breach; violation.
The punishing of this infringement is proper to that jurisdiction against which the contempt is. Clarendon.

INFIRNGER. n.s. [from infringe.]
A breaker; a violator.
A clergyman's habit ought to be without any lace, under a severe penalty to be inflicted on the infringers of the provincial constitution. Addison.

INFUNDIBULIFORM. n.s. [from infusionidulium and forma, Lat.] Of the shape of a funnel or tundish.

INFUirATE. adj. [in and furia, Lat.]
Enraged; raging.
As at the other bare, with touch of fire
Diluted and infrate.
Fir'd by the torch of menu to tenfold rage,
T' infrate hillock forth shoots the pillar'd flame. Thomas.

INFUSATION. n.s. [in/usus, Lat.]
The act of darkening or blackening.

To INFUSE. v. a. [infusor, Fr. insusus, Lat.]
1. To pour in; to instil.
Thou almost mak'st me wary in my faith,
To hold opinion with Pythagoras,
That souls of antient infusors themselves
Into the trunks of men. Shaksp. Merck. of Venice.
My early mistress, now my ancient muse,
That strong Circe, and causes t' infrate.
Wherewith thou didst intoxicate my youth, Drub.
Why should he desire to have qualities infused into his brain, which himself received from Jove?

To pour into the mind; to inspire into.
For when God's hand laid written in the hearts
Of our first parents all the rules of good
So that their skill infratsur'd all arts
That ever were before, or since the flood. Recared.
Sublime ideas, and apt words infrate.
The more instruct my voice, and then inspire the muse. Bacon's Common.

INFUSION. n.s. [infusio, Lat.]
The influence of one liquid into another.
He infus'd
Bad influence into th' unawary breast. Milton.
Infus into their young breasts such a noble accord as will make them renounced. Milton.
Meat must he with money bought;
She therefore, upon second thought,
Infrat, and so it were, brought.
Some small regard for state and wealth. Swift.

3. To steep in any liquor with a gentle heat; to macerate so as to extract the virtues of any thing without boiling.
Take violets, and infus a good puglet of them in a quart of strong wine.
Hot.

4. To make an infusion with any ingredient; to supply, to tincture, to saturate with any thing infused. Not used.
Drink, infused with flesh, will nourish faster and easier than meat and drink together. Bacon.

5. To inspire with. Not used.
Then didst smile,
Infratitis with a fortitude from heaven. Shaksp.
Infrat his breast with magnanimity,
And make him, naked, fill a man at arms. Shak.

INFUSIBLE. adj. [from infusor.]
1. Possible to be infused.
From whom the doctrines being infusible into all, it will be more necessary to forewarn all of the coming of them. Bacon.

2. Incapable of dissolution; not fusible; that cannot be molten.
Vitrification is the last work of fire, and a fusion of the salt and earth, wherein the fusible salt draws the earth and infusable into one continuo. Brown's Fulc. Err.

INFUSION. n.s. [infusion, Fr. infusion, Lat.]
1. The act of pouring in; installation.
Our language has received innumerable elegancies and improvements from that infusion of Hieroglyphics, which are derived to the present in the poetical passages in holy writ. Addison.

2. The act of pouring into the mind; inspiration.
We participate Christ partly by imputation, as when those things which he did and suffered for us are imputed to us for righteousness; partly by habitual and real infusion, as when grace is invisibly bestowed on earth, and afterwards more fully both our souls and bodies in glory. Hooker.

3. Suggestion; whisper.
They found it would be matter of great debate and much trouble, during which they did not desire their company, nor to be troubled with their infusions. Clarendon.
Here his folly and his wisdom are of his own growth, not the echo or infusion of other men. Swift.

4. The act of steeping any thing in moisture without boiling.
Repeat the infusion of the body oftener. Bacon.

5. The liquor made by infusion.
To have the infusion strong, in those bodies which have finer spirits, repeat the infusion of the body oftener. Bacon.

INFUSIVE. adv. [from infusor.]
Having the power of infusion, or being infused. A word not authorized.
Still let my song a nobler note assume,
And sing thy inspirer's force of spring on man. Thomson.

INGATE. n.s. [in and gate.] Entrance; passage in.
An old word.
One noble person stoppeth the ingress of all that evil which is look'd for, and holdeth in all those which are at his back. Spenser.

INGANNATION. n.s. [ingannare, Ital.]
Chent; fraud; deception; juggel; delusion; imposture; trick; slight. A word neither used nor necessary.
In gathering. n. s. [in and gathering.] The set of getting in the harvest.

To ingeminate. v. a. [ingenious, Lat.] To double; to repeat.

Ingenious. adj. [ingenius, Fr. ingénieux, Lat.] Not to be produced or brought into being.

To ingeminate. n. s. [in and geminatio, Lat.] Repetition; reduplication.

Ingenious. adj. [ingenius, from ingeniare.] He that generates. See ENGENDER.

Ingenere. adj. [in and generate.] Not to be produced or brought into being.

Divers naturalists esteem the air, as well as other elements, to be ingenere and incorruptible.

Ingenere. adj. [ingenous, Lat.]

1. Iaborum; innate; inbred.

Those virtues were rather fugued and affected things to serve his ambition, than true qualities ingenere in his judgment or nature. Pope.

In divers children their ingenerate and seminal powers lie deep, and are of slow disclosure. Walton.

Those noble habits are ingenere in the soul, as religion, gratitude, obedience, and tranquillity of life.

Hat's Origin of Mankind.

2. Unbegotten. Not commonly used.

Yet shall we demonstrate the same, from persons presumed as far from us in condition as time; that is, our first and ingenere forefathers. Brown.

Ingenious. adj. [ingenius, Fr. ingénieux, Lat.]

1. Witty; inventive; possessed of genius.

'Tis a perilous boy.

Bold, quick, ingenious, forward, capable. Shakespeare.

Our ingenious friend Cowley not only has employed much eloquence to persuade that truth in his presence, but has in one of his poems given a noble example of it.

The more ingenious men are, the more they are apt to trouble themselves.

Wallace.

The king is mad, how still is my vile sense,

That I stand up, and have ingenious feeling

Of my huge sorrow! better I were distracted. Shak.

Ingeniously. adv. [from ingenious.]

Wittily; subtly.

I will not pretend to judge by common fears, or the schemes of men too ingeniously politic.

Temple.

Ingeniousness. n. s. [from ingenious.]

Wittiness; subtlety; strength of genius.

The greater appearance of ingeniosity there is in the person than dissipated, the more dangerous it is.

Boyle.

Ingeniæ. adj. [ingenius, Lat.] Inmate; inborn; native; ingenere.

Aristotle affirms the mind to be at first a mere tabula; and that notions are not ingenere, and immuted by the senses, but by the latter and more laudable impressions of sense, being only the supports of observation, and the result of so many repeated experiments.

South.

We give them this ingenæ, moving forces:

That makes them always downward take their course.

Ingeniæ. n. s. [ingeniæ, Fr. from ingenious.]

1. Openness; fairness; candour; freedom from dissimulation.

Such of high quality, or rather of particular note, as shall fall under my view, I shall not pass without their due character, being part of my profession ingenere.

Wotton.

My constancy I to the planets give;

My truth, to them who at the court do live;

Mine ingenuity and ownness.

To Jesuits; to buffs, more prudence.

Donne.

I know not whether he be more shame or wonder, that man can entertain such notions, and the native greatness of their kind, as to descend to so base, so ignoble a vice.

Government of the Tongue.

If a child, when questioned for any thing, directly confounds him his ingenæ, and pardon the fault, be it what it will.

Lecky.

2. From ingenious] Wit; invention; genius; subtlety; acuteness.

These are but the frigilities of wit, and become the genius of unigenious ingenæ.

The ancient alchemists might have slept for ever, had not the ingenuity of the present age recalled it from its arm and silence. Glanville.

Such sots have neither parts nor wit, ingenuity of discourse, nor beauty of expression, to entertain or delight any one.

South.

A pregnant instance how far virtue surpasses ingenæ, and how much an honest simplicity is preferable to fine parts and subtle speculations.

Woodeard.

Ingrat. v. a. [from ingrâtify.] To prostrate oneself by insinuation.

Nor are the ways alike in all.

How to ingrâtify, how to incite. May's Virgil.

2. To plant the sprig of one tree in the stock of another; as, he ingrâtified an apple upon a crab.

3. To plant or introduce any thing not native.

All his works on me,

Good or not good, ingrâtify, my merits those

Shall perfect, and for those alone.

Milton.

As next of kin, Achilles' arms I claim;

This fellow would ingrâtify a foreign name

Upon our stock.

Dryden.

4. To fix deep; to settle.

For a spur of diligence, we have a natural thirst after knowledge ingrâtify in us.

Hooker.

'Tis great pity that the noble Moor

Should hazard such a prize as his own reward,

With one of ingrâtify inmirity. Shak. Obeliste.

Ingrâtified love he bears to Caesar.

Shakespeare.

Ingratification. n. s. [from ingrâtify.]

1. The act of ingrâtifying.

2. The sprig ingrâtified.

Ingrât. adj. [ingrat, Lat. Ingramful. Fr.] Ingrât is proper, but ingrâtful less proper than ingrâtifable.

1. Ungrâtful; unthankful.

That we have been familiar,

Ingrâtfully shall pass poison, rather

Thaught how much I respected.

Shak. Coriolanus.

And you degenerate, you ingrâtly revolts. Shak.

So will fall

He and his faithless progeny: whose fault?

Whose but his own? Ingrât; he had of me

All he could have: I made him just and right,

Sufficient to have stood, though free to fall. Milton.

Perfidious and ingrâtly!

His stones he rages, and usurps his state.

2. Unpleasing to the sense.

The causes of that which is unpleasing or ingrâtate to the hearing, may receive light by that which is pleasing and grateful to the sight.

He gives no grateful food.

To ingrâtiate. v. a. [in and gratia, Lat.] To put in favour; to recommend to kindness. It has with before the person whose favours is sought.
Those have been far from receiving" "the rewards of such ingratitude when the people. "King Charles. Their flames made them ardent in the night, and give them their words, the more to ingratiate themselves with them, that they signify nothing less than future slaughter and destruction. Ingratitude. Politicians, who would rather ingratiate themselves with their sovereign, than profit in their real service, accommodate his counsels to his inclinations. Spectator.

INGRATITUDE. n. s. [ingratitude, Fr. iin et gratiite.] Retribution of evil for good; unthankfulness. Ingratitude: as marble-headed fiend. More hideous, when they shew their face in child. Than the sea monster. Shaks. King Lear. Ingratitude is abhorred both by God and man, and vengeance attends those that reap evil for good. Nor was it with ingratiate return'd, In equal fires the blissful couple burn'd. One joy possess'd them both, and in one grief they mourn'd. Dryden.

INGREDIENT. n. s. [ingredient, Fr. ingrediente, Lat.] 1. Component part of a body, consisting of different materials. It is commonly used in the simples of a medicine. The ointment is made of divers ingredients, wherein the hardest to come by is the moss upon the skull of a dead man unhurt, Boccon's Natural History. So dear do the poor of these ingredients pierce'd, E'tu's to the utmost sent of mental sight. That Adam, now enforce'd to shut his eyes, Sunk down, and all his spirits became entrance'd. By this way of analysis we may proceed from compounds to ingredients, and from motions to the forces producing them; and in general, from effects to their causes, and from particular causes to more general ones, till the arguments end in the more general. I have often wondered, that learning is not thought a proper ingredient in the education of a woman of quality or fortune. Addison's Guardian. Parties; human knowledge, and experience, are excellent ingredients in a public character. Rogers. Water is the chief ingredient in all the natural fluids and solids. Arbuthnot on Aliments.

2. It is used by Temple with into, properly, but not according to custom. Syrup is a bad ingredient into any other distemper. Temple.

INGRESS. n. s. [ingressus, Lat.] Entrance; power of entrance; introduction. All partakeings come from the ambient body; either by ingress of the substance of the ambient body into the body putrefied; or else by extraction of the body putrefied by the body ambient. Bacon. Those air-bearers, by a sudden subsidence, meet again by the ingress and egress of the air. Arctur.

INGRESSION. n. s. [ingression, Fr. ingressio, Lat.] The act of entering; entrance. The fire would strain the pores of the glass too suddenly, and break it all in pieces to get ingress. Dighy on Bodies.

INGUINAL. adj. [inguinal, Fr. inguine, Lat.] Belonging to the groin. The plague seems to be a particular disease, characterized with eruptions in bubes, by the inflammation of the summum and of the axillary inguinal, and other glands. Arbuthnot.

To INHABIT. v. a. [inhabit, Lat.] To draw in with air; to inspire; opposed to exhale or expire. Martin was walking forth to inhabit the fresh breeze of the evening. Arbuthnot, and Pope. But from the breeze deep to inhabit Inhabit the fragrant marmors of the western gale. Pope. There sits the shepherd on the grassy turf, Inhabiting healthful the descending sun. Thomson.

INHABITABLE. adj. [inhabitable, Fr. inhabitable, Lat.] Unshlif; unread; unfit; unqualified.

To INHABIT. v. a. [inhabit, Lat.] To dwell in; to hold as a dweller. Not all are partakers of that grace whereby Christ inhabits them. Hooker. They shall build houses and inhabit them. Isa. They shall be inhabited of devils. Baruch.

To INHABIT. v. n. To dwell; to live. Learn what creatures there inhabit. Milton. They say, wild beasts inhabit here; But grief and wrong secure my fear. Walter.

To INHERIT. v. a. [inherit, Lat.] To descend, or to become the property of by the death or the decease of another. To inherit the earth. Matt. The son can receive from his father good things, without empire, that was vested in him for the good of others; and therefore the son cannot claim or inheri, it by a title, which is founded wholly on his own private good. Inherit.

To INHERIT. v. a. [inhabit, Lat.] To exist in something else. For, nor in nothing: nor in things Extreme and scattering bright, can love inher. Donne. They do not inherit in their subject which supports them; their being is a dependence on a subject. Dryden, and Donne. Dignity and Deities.

INHERENT. adj. [inherent, Fr. inhere, Lat.] 1. Existing in something else, so as to be inseparable from it. I will not do, Lest I surcease to honour mine own truth; And, my body's action, teach my mind. Shakespear, Coriolanus.

2. Naturally conjoined; innate; inborn. I mean not the authority which is annexed to your office: I speak of that which is inborn and inherent to your person. Dryden's Journal. The power of drawing iron is one of the ideas of a loadstone; and a power to be so drawn is a part of the quality of iron, which passes over for inherent qualities. Locke. Animal oil is various according to principles inherent in it. They will be sure to decide in favour of themselves, and talk much of their inherent right. Secr. The ideas of such qualities, as the Tarses of the lunar, the earth, and the wood of redness was just now found to be inherent in the blood, or that of whiteness in the brain. Benet. The obligations we are under of distinguishing ourselves as much by an inherent and habitual, as we are already distinguished by an external and relative holiness. Butler.

To INHERIT. v. a. [cuhrier, Fr.] 1. To receive or possess by inheritance. Treasure is not inherited, my lord. Shakespear. Why, all dugs in airs; but that most vain, Which with pain purchases doth inherit pain. Shakespear. Prince Harry is valiant: for the cold blood he did naturally inherit of his father he hath, like boon, until bath, enwrapped with excellent good store of tender shires. Shakespear. Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth. Matt. We must know how the first rule, from whom any recevings, came by his authority, before we can know who has a right to succeed him in it, and inherit it from him. Locke. Unlawful to sell an estate he had some part of; should inherit of it. Addison.
Inheritance. n. s. [from inherit.] Transmission by inheritance; obtainable by succession.

A kind of inheritable estate accrued upon them.

By the ancient laws of the realm, they were not inheritable by descent.

Was the power the same, and from the same original in Moses as it was in David? And was it inheritable to God, and not in the other? Leck.

Inhabitants. n. s. [from inhabit.] Those who inhabit.

To inhabit is to hold or occupy.

The stars and planets being whirled about with great velocity, would suddenly, did nothing inhabit it, be scattered in pieces. Ray on the Creation.
Moderate labour of the body conduces to the preservation of health, and cures many initial diseases, but the toil of the mind destroys health and generates maladies.

Harr.

The schools have used a middle term to express this affliction, and have called it the initial fear of God.

To INITIATE. v. o. [initier, Fr. initier, Lat.] To enter; to instruct in the rudiments of an art; to place in a new state; to put into a new society.

Providences would only initiate mankind into the useful knowledge of their treasures, leaving the rest to employ our industry. More's Ant. against Atheism.

To initiate his pupil in any part of learning, an ordinary skill in the governor is enough. Locke. He was initiated into half a dozen clubs before he was one and twenty. Spectator.

No sooner was a convert initiated, but, by an easy figure, he became a new man. Addison.

To INITIATE v. n. To do the first part; to perform the first rite

The king himself initiates to the pow'r, Scotts with quivering hand the sacred floor, And the stream sprinkles. Pope's Odyssey.

INITIATION. n. s. [initiation, Lat. from initiate.] The reception, admission, or entrance of a new comer into any art or state.

The ground of initiates or entering men into Christian life, is more summarily comprised in the form of baptism, the ceremony of this initiation instituted by Christ. Haun.

Silence is the first thing that is taught us at our initiation into sacred mysteries. Brum. INOCU'DITY. n. s. [in junc'dity.] Unpleasantness.

INJUDICABLE. adj. [in and judicato, Lat.] Not cognizable by a judge.

INJUDICIAL. adj. [in and judicial.] Not according to form of law. Dict.

INJUDICIOUS. adj. [in and judicious.] Void of judgment; without judgment. Used both of persons and things.

A philosopher would either think me jest, or very injudicious, if I took the earth for a body regular in itself, if compared with the rest of the universe. Burnet.

A sharp wit may find something in the wisest man, whereby he may expose him to the contempt of injudicious people. Tilton.

INJUDICIOUSLY. adv. [from injudicious.] With all judgment; not wisely.

Seagar injudiciously condemns this description. Bron.

INJUNCTION. n. s. [from injon; in injustice, injunctio, Lat.] 1. Command; order; precept.

The institution of God's law is described as being established by solemn injunction. Hooker.

My duty cannot suffer To obey the last of your daughter's hard commands; Though the injunction he to har my doors, And let this tyrannous night take hold upon you. Shak.

For, still they knew, and ought I have still remember'd The high injunction, not to taste that fruit, Whatever tempteth. Milton.

The ceremonies of the church are necessary as the injunctions of lawful authority, the practice of the primitive church, and the general rule of decency. South.

2. [In law.] Injunction is an interlocutory decree out of the chancery, sometimes to give possession unto the plaintiff for want of appearance in the defendants, sometimes to the king's ordinary court, and sometimes to the court-christian, to stay proceeding.

Cowl.

To INJURE. v. a. [injurier, Fr. injurier, Lat.]

1. To hurt unjustly; to mischief undeservingly; to wrong.

They injure by chance in a crowd, and without a design; then late always whom they once injure. Temple.

Forgotten to the injure'd doth belong; But they ne'er pardon who commit the wrong. Drayton.

2. To annoy; to affect with any inconvenience.

Let her should injure us, his timely care Hath amus'd our people. Milton.

Injurious. n. s. [from injure.] He that hurts another unjustly; one who wrongs another. Milton.

Ill deeds are well turn'd back upon their author; And 'gainst an injurer, the revenge is just. Ben Jonson.

The uprightness will confluence right, and disconsequence wrong, whoever be the injurer or the sufferer. Atterbury.

INJURIOUS. adj. [from injury; injurious. Lat. injurius, Fr.]

1. Unjust; invasive of another's rights.

Till the injurious Romans did extort This tribute from us, we were free. Shak. Injurious strength would rapine still excuse, By oil ring terms the master must refuse. Dryden.

2. Guilty of wrong or injury.

Yet beauty, though injurious, hath strange power, After offence returning, to regain Love more possess. Milton. Agamemnon.

3. Mischief; unjustly hurtful.

Our repentance is not real, because we have not done what we can to undo our fault, or at least to hinder the injurious consequences of it from proceeding. Dryden.

4. Detractory; contumelious; reproachful; wrongful.

A prison, indeed injurious, because a prison, but else well testifying affection, because in all respects as reasonable as anything can be. It is natural for a man, by directing his prayers to an image, to suppose the being he prays to is represented by that image; which so dangerous, how contumelious must it be to the gracious nature of God! South.

If injurious appellations were of any advantage to a cause, what appellations would those deserve who endeavor to sow the seeds of sedition? Swift.

INJURIOUSLY. adv. [from injurious.] Wrongfully; hurtfully with injustice, with contumely.

Nor ought he to neglect the vindication of his character, when it is injuriously attacked. Pope and Gay.

INJURIOUSNESS. n. s. [from injurious.] Quality of being injurious.

Some miscarriages might escape, rather through sudden necessities of state, than any propensity either to injuriousness or oppression. King Charles.

INJURY. n. s. [injury, Lat. injur, Fr.]

1. Hurt without justice.

The places were acquired by just title of victory; and therefore in keeping of them no injury was offered. Haywood.

Riot ascends above their loftiest towers. And injury and outrage. Milton.

2. Mischief; detriment.

Many times we do injury to a cause by dwelling upon trifling arguments. Hutton's Logic.

3. Annoyance.

Great injuries mice and rats do in the fields. Marterer.

4. Contumelious language; reproachful appellation. A French mode of speech, not now in use.

Casting off the respects fit to be continued between these kings, he sets himself against the French king; and spake all the injuries he could devise of Charles. Bacon.

INJUSTICE, n. s. [injuster, Fr. injustitia, Lat.] Iniquity; wrong.

Cunning men can be guilty of a thousand injustices without being discovered, or at least without being punished. Swift.

INK. n. s. [encre, Fr. inchiostro, Ital.] 1. The black liquor with which men write. Mourn boldly, my ink; for while she looks upon you, your blackness will shine. Shaks.

Of the fallen Ink to the pen, that the wide sea Hath drops too few to wash her clean again. Shak. Like madmen they hurl'd stones and ink. Ben Jonson.

Intending to have try'd The silver favour which you gave, In ink the shining point I dy'd, And drench'd it in the saffron wave. Waller. Vitriol is the active or chief ingredient in ink, and no other salt will strike the colour with effect. Brown.

I have found pens blacked almost all over when I had a white cart out about me in a silver ink case. The secretary poured the ink box all over the writings, and so defaced them. Howes's Vocal Forest.

I, that would live clear of envy must lay his finger upon his mouth, and keep his hand out of the ink pot. L'Esperance.

I could hardly restrain them from throwing the ink bottle at another's head. Arbuthnot.

2. It is used for any liquor with which they write: as, red ink; green ink.

To INK. v. a. [from the noun.] To black or dye with ink as, his face is all over inked.

INKHORN. n. s. [ink and horn.] A portable case for the instruments of writing, commonly made of horn. Bid him bring his pen and inkhorn to the jail; we are now to examine those men. Shak.

Ere that we will suffer such a prince To be deject'd by an inkhorn mate. We, and our wives and children, all will fight. Shak.

What is more frequent than to say, inkhorn? Grew.

INKLE. n. s. A kind of narrow fillet; a tape. Inclus, caddises, cambricks, lawns: why he songs them ever as they were gods and goddesses. Shak. He wish'd not when the hepen string I drew, Now mine I quickly doff of inke blue Gray's Past.

INKLING. n. s. [This word is derived by Skimmer from inklincket to sound within. This sense is still retained in Scotland: as, I heard not an inkling.] Hint; whisper; intimation.

Our business is not unknown to the serate: they have had inkling what we intend to do, which now we'll shew them in deeds. Shak. Cordones.

We in Europe, notwithstanding all the remarkable discoveries and navigations of this last age, never heard of any of the least inkling or glimpse of this island. Bacon's New Atlantis.

They had some inkling of secret messages between the marquis of Newcastle and young Hotham. Clarendon.

6 K 294
IN L.
Aboard a Corinthian vessel he got an inkling among the ship's crew of a conspiracy. L. Estrange.
INKMAKER. n. s. [ink and maker.] He who makes ink.
INKY. adj. [from ink.] 1. Consisting of ink.
England bound in with the triumphant sea, And rocky shore beats back the envious siege
Of wat'ry Neptune, is bound in with shame.
With inky blot and rotten parchment bonds, Shakesp.
2. Resembling ink.
The liquor presently began to grow pretty clear and transparent, losing its inky blackness. Blake.
INKY. adj. as black as ink.
"It's not alone my inky cloak, good mother, Nor customary suits of solemn black, That can denote me truly," Shakesp. Hamlet.
INLAND. adj. [in and land.] Interior; lying remote from the sea.
In this wide inland sea, that high by nature, The little lake, my winding ship I now, Speaker.
Goodly lakes, like little inland seas, will carry even ships upon their waters.
Speaker.
An old religious uncle of mine was, in his youth, an inland man. Shakesp. As you like it.
The sea is not so bright as a king. Until a king be by; and then his state Empties itself, as doth an inland brook Into the main of waters. Shakesp. Merch. of Venice.
INLANDER. n. s. [from inland.] Dweller remote from the sea.
The same name is given unto the inlanders, or inland inhabitants of this island. Brench.
To INLANDIPADATE. v. a. [in and lapide. Lat.] To make stony; to turn to stone.
Some natural spring waters will inlandipadate wood; so that you shall see one piece of wood, whereof the part above the water shall continue wood, and that under the water shall be turned into a kind of gravelly stone. Bacon.
To INLAY. v. a. [in and lay.] 1. To diversify with different bodies inserted into the ground or substratum.
They are worthy To inlay heaven with stars. Shakesp. Cymbeline.
Look, how the flow of heaven Is thick inlaid with patrons of bright gold. Shakesp.
A sapphire throne, inlaid with pure Amber, and colours of the show'ry arch. Milton.
The timber bears a great price with the cabinetmakers, when large, for inlaying. Mortimer.
Here chosed canes 'midst knobs of toys are bound, And inlaid tresses cases strow the ground. Gay.
2. To make variety by being inserted into bodies; to variegate.
Sea girl isles, That like to rich and various gems inlay
The unassum'd bottom of the deep. Milton.
INLAY. n. s. [from the verb.] Matter inlaid; wood formed to inlay.
Under foot the violet, Crescus, and hyacinth, with rich inlay, Gower'd the ground. Milton.
To INLACE. v. a. [in and lae.] To clear of outlawry or attainder.
It should be a great incongruity to have them to make laws, who themselves were not inlaced. Bacon.
INLET. n. s. [in and let.] Passage; place of ingress; entrance.
Doors and windows, inlets of men and of light, I couple together; I find their dimensions brought under one. Wotton.
She through the porch and inlet of each sea
Drop in ambrosial oils till she reviv'd. Milton.
I desire any one to assign any simple idea, which is not derived from one of these inlets. Bentely.
A fine bargain indeed, to part with all our commodious ports, which the greater the inlets are so much the better, for the imaginary pleasure of a straight shore. Bentely.
Inlets among the broken lands and islands. Elish.
INLY. adj. [from in.], Interior; internal; secret.
Did'st thou but know the inly touch of love, Thou couldst not then go kindle fire with snow.
As seek to quench the fire of love with words. Shakesp.
INLY. adv. Internally; within; secretly.
The heart with joy unawaked inly swell'd,
As feeling wondrous comfort in her weaker e'd. Spenser.
I've inly wept,
Or should have spake ere this. Shakesp. Tempest.
Whereat he inly rag'd, and as they talk'd,
Smoke him into the midst with a stone,
The king's out alive. Henry VII. Milton.
The bosom's great spring, thoughts, my soul soon perceiving.
By words at times cast forth, inly rejoic'd. Milton.
The soldiers shout around with gen'rous rage;
He prais'd their ardor: inly pleas'd to see her host.
Dyden. Knight's Tale.
INNATE. n. s. [in and mate.] Innate are those that are best fitted to dwell for their money jointly with another man, though in several rooms of his mansion-house, passing in and out by one door.
So make the enemy of mankind, inclin'd In serpent, innate bad! and toward Eve Address'd his way. Milton.
There he dies, and leaves his race
Growing into a nation; and now grown,
Suspected to a subtle king, who seeks To stop their overgrowth as innate guests Too numerous. Milton. Paradise Lost.
Home is the sacred refuge of our life,
Secrecy from all approaches but a wife: If thence we fly, the cause admits no doubt,
But an innate foe could force us out. Dyden.
INMOST. adj. [from in.] Deepest within; remotest from the surface.
'Tis you must dig with mattock and with spade, And pierce the inmost centre of the earth. Shakesp.
Rising sighs and falling tears,
That show too well the warm desires,
The silent, slow, consumming fires,
Which on my inmost vitals prey,
And melt my very soul away. Addison on Eton.
Comparing the quantity of light reflected from the several rings, I found that it was most copious from those in the centre, and in the exterior rings became less and less. Newton.
He sends a dreadful gaudian: the rocks around
Through all their inmost hollow caves resound. Pope.
I go into the inmost court. Girlliter's Travels.
INN. n. s. [inn, Sax. a chamber.] 1. A house of entertainment for travellers.
How all this is but a fair inn.
Of fossil guests which dwell within. Snyder.
A spot of earth, death is an equal doom. Good to good and bad, the common inn of rest. But, after death, the trial is come,
When best shall be to them that live best. Fair Queen.
New day is spent,
Therefore with me ye may take up your inn. Fair Queen.
INN.
The West, that glimmers with some streaks of day,
New spurs the last traveller pace.
To gain the time. Shakesp. Macbeth.
Like pilgrims to th' appointed place we tend;
The world's an inn, and death the journey's end. Dryden.
One may learn more here in one day, than in a year's rambling from one inn to another. Locke.
2. A house where students were boarded and taught: whence we still call the colleges of common law inns of court.
Go some and pull down the Savoy: others to the inns of courts: down with them all. Shakesp.
3. It was anciently used for the town houses in which great men resided when they attended the court.
To INN. v. n. [from the noun.] To take up temporary lodging.
In thyself dwell; Jan any where: continuance maketh hell. Donne.
To INN. v. a. To house; to put under cover.
He that ears my land, spares my tenant, and gives me leave to inn the crop. Shakesp.
However the laws made in that parliament did bear good fruit, yet the subsidy bare a fruit that proved harsh and bitter, all was stowed at last into the king's garnet. Dryden.
Mow clover or vye-grass, and make it fit to inn. Mortimer.
INNATE. adj. [innate, Fr. innatus, INNATED. F. Nat.] 1. Inborn; ingenerate; natural; not superadded; not adventitious. Innated is not proper.
The Delian hath been cried up for an innated integrity, and accounted the orpright dealer on earth. Hovels.
With eloquence innate his tongue was arm'd; Though harsh the precept, yet the people charmed. Dryden.
2. Innate is used in the following passage for inherent. Innate in persons, inherent in things.
Mutual gravitation, or spontaneous attraction, cannot possibly be innate and essential to matter. Bentley.
INNATENESS. n. s. [from innate.] The quality of being innate.
INNAVIGABLE. adj. [innavigabilis, Lat.] Not to be passed by sailing.
If he having a soul will undertake, As twice to pass th' innavigable lake. Dryden.
INNER. adj. [from in.] Interior; not outward.
But th' effan knight with wonder all the way
Did feed his eyes, and fill'd his inner thought. Spenser.
This attracts the soul, Governs the inner man, the nobler part;
That other 'er the body only reigned. Milton.
Many families are established in the West Indies, and some discovered in the inner parts of America. Addison on Eton.
The kidney is a congested gland, which is to be understood only of the outer part; for the inner part, whereof the papilae are composed, is muscular.
Thus, seiz'd with sacred fear, the monarch pray'd; Then to his inner court the guests convey'd. Pope.
INNERMOST. adj. [from inner.] It seems less proper than innermost.
Remotest from the outward part.
The reflected beam of light would be so broad at the distance of six feet from the speculum, where the rings appeared, as to obscure one of the innermost rings. Newton.
INNHOLDER. n. s. [inn and hold.] A man who keeps an inn; an innkeeper.
INNINGS. n. s. Lands recovered from the sea.

INKEEPER. n. s. [inn and keeper.] One who keeps lodgings and provisions for the entertainment of travellers.

Clergymen must not keep a tavern, nor a judge be an innkeeper.

Taylor's Rule of Living Holy.

A joking innkeeper was hunged, drawn, and quartered.

Addison.

We were not so inguagious about the inn as the innkeeper; and provided our landlord's principles were sound, did not take any notice of the state of his provisions.

Addison.

INNOCENCE. n. s. [innocence, Fr. innocenta, Lat.]

1. Purity from injurious action; untainted integrity.

Simplicity and spotless innocence.

Milton.

What comfort does overflows the devout soul,

From a consciousness of its own innocence and integrity.

Tiltoton.

2. Freedom from guilt imputed.

It will help me nothing

To plead ignorance, for that dye is on me.

Which makes my whitest part black.

Shakespeare.

If truth and uprightness innocency fail me,

I'll be as wise in sin as sense.

Shakespeare. Henry IV.

3. Harmlessness; innoxiousness.

The air was calm and serene; none of those tumultuary motions and conflicts of vapours, which the mountains and the winds cause in ours; it was suited to a golden age, and to the first innocence of nature.

Barnet's Theory.

4. Simplicity of heart, perhaps with some degree of weakness.

I urge this childhood proof,

Because what follows is pure innocence.

Shakespeare.

We laugh at the malice of ages, as well as at the innocence of children.

Temple.

INNOCENT. adj. [innocent, Fr. innocent, Lat.]

1. Pure from mischief.

Something

You may desire of him through me and wisdom,

To offer up a weak, poor, innocent lamb,

T appease an angry god.

Shakespeare. Macbeth.

Wreck on innocent frail man his trust.

Milton.

2. Free from any particular guilt.

Good man, keep you,

And keep yourself within yourself:

The man is innocent.

Shakespeare. Ant. and Cleop.

The peasant, innocent of all these ill,

With crooked ploughs the fertile follows tills,

And the round year with daily labour fills.

Dryden.

3. Unhurtful; harmless in effect.

The sweet spot,

Sang innocent, and spent its force in air.

Pope.

INNOCENT. n. s.

One free from guilt or harm.

So pure an innocent as that same lamb. F. Queen.

Then last kill'd the sweetest innocent,

That e'er did lift up eye.

Shakespeare. Othello.

If marble rings innocent be executing,

Why, then thou art an executioner.

Shakespeare. Henry VI.

2. A natural; an ideal.

Innocents are excluded by natural defects. Hooker.

INNOCENTLY. adv. [from innocent.]

1. Without guilt.

The humble and contented man pleases himself innocently and easily, while the ambitious man attempts to please others sinfully and difficultly.

South.

2. With simplicity; with sinnless or imprudence.

Without hurt.

Balls at his feet lay innocently dead. Cowley.

INNOCUOUS. adj. [innocuous, Lat.]

Harmless in effect.

The most dangerous poisons, skilfully managed, may be made not only innocuous, but of all other medicines the most effectual.

Gray.

INNOCUOUSLY. adv. [from innocuous.]

Without mischievous effects.

Whether quails, from any peculiarity of constitution, do innocuous poison, or rather sometimes but medicinally use the same. Brown.

INNOCUOUSNESS. n. s. [from innocuous.]

Harmlessness.

The blow which shakes a wall, or beats it down, and kills men, has not a greater effect on the mind than that which penetrates into a mud wall, and doth little harm; for that innocuousness of the effect makes it, that, although it be as great as that of the other, yet it's little observed. Digby on Bodley.

To INNOVATE. v. a. [innovare, Fr. innover, Lat.]

1. To bring in something not before known.

Mens purge some few principles which they have chance upon, and care not to innovate, which draws unknown inconveniences. Bacon.

Former things

Are set aside like abolished kites;

And every moment alters what is done,

And innovates some act 'till then unknown. Dryden.

Every man cannot distinguish between pedantry and poetry; every man therefore is not fit to innovate.

Dryden.

2. To change by introducing novelties.

Every attempt upon the civil power, he proceeds to innovate God's worship. South.

INNOVATION. n. s. [innovation, Fr. from innoverante.]

Change by the introduction of novelty.

The love of things ancient doth argue stayness, and that levity which wants of experience and novelty. Hooker.

It were good that men in innovations would follow the example of nature itself, which indeed innovatur greatly, but quietly by inch by inch. Bacon's Essays.

Great changes may be made in a government, yet the form continue; but large intervals of time must pass between every such innovation, except that to make it a piece of the constitution. Swift.

INNOVATOR. n. s. [innovateur, Fr. from innove.]

1. An introducer of novelties.

I attach thee as a traslator innovator,

A sly to th' publick seat.

Shakespeare. Coriolanus.

He that will not apply new remedies, must expect new evils; for time is the greatest innovator: and if time of course alters things to the worse, and wisdom and council shall not alter them to the better, what shall be the end? Bacon's Essays.

2. One that makes changes by introducing novelties.

He consents them to detest and persecute all innovators of divine worship. South.

INNOXIOUS. adj. [innoxious, Lat.]

1. Free from mischievous effects.

Innoxious flames are often seen on the hair of men's heads and horses' manes. Dugli.

We may safely use purgatives, they being benigne, and of innocuous qualities. Brown's Fugl. Err.

Smelt by the better method of the night.

Innoxious painting on the horse's muzzle.

The meteor sits. Thomson's Autumn.

2. Pure from crimes.

Stranger to civil and religious rage,

The good man walk'd innocuous through his age. Pope.

INNOXIOUSLY. adv. [from innocuous.]

1. Harmlessly; without harm done.

Without harm suffered.

Animals, that can innocuously digest these poisons, become antidotal to the poison digested. Brown's Fugl. Erron.

INNOXIOUSNESS. n. s. [from innocious.]

Harmlessness.

INNUENDO. n. s. [innuendo, from innervo, Lat.]

An oblique hint.

As if the commandments, that require obedience and forbid murmur, are not indicted for a libellous innuendo upon all the great men that come to concern. L'Estrange.

INNOVATION. n. s. [innovation, Fr. from innoverante.]

1. Inoculation is practised upon all sorts of stone fruit, and upon oranges and jasmines.

Chase a smooth part of the stock; then with your knife make an horizontal cut cross the rind of the stock, and from the middle of that cut make a slit downwards about two inches in length in the form of a T; but be careful not to cut too deep, lest you wound the stock: then having cut off the leaf from the bud, leaving the footstalk remaining, make a cross cut about half an inch below the eye, and with your knife slice off the bud, with part of the wood to it. This done, with your knife pull off that part of the wood which was taken with the bud, observing whether the eye of the bud be left to it or not. For all these buds which lose their eyes in stripping are good for nothing; then raising the bark of the stock, thrust the bud there in, placing it exactly between the rind and the wood of the stock; and so having exactly fitted the bud to the stock, tie them closely round, taking care not to bind round the eye of the bud. Miller.

In the stem of Elaham they all met, and came to be ingrained all upon one stock, most of them by inoculation. Hewet.
2. The practice of transplanting the smallpox, by infusion of the matter from infected pustules into the veins of the uninoculated, in hopes of procuring a milder sort than what frequently comes by infection.

It is evident, by inoculation, that the smallest quantity of the matter, mixed with the blood, produces the disease of the inoculated.

INDOLATOR. n. s. [from inoculate.]

1. One that practises the inoculation of trees.
2. One who propagates the small-pox by inoculation.

Had John a Gaulestre been now living, he would have been at the head of the inoculators.

INDORATE. adj. [in and odoratus, Lat.]

Having no scent.

Whites are more inodorous than flowers of the same kind coloured.

INDOROUS. adj. [inodorous, Lat.]

Wanting scent; not affecting the nose.

The white of an egg is a white, unmarked, insipid, inodorous liquor.

INOFFENSIVE. adj. [in and offensive.]

1. Giving no scandal; giving no provocation.

A stranger, inoffensive, unprovoking. Fleetwood.

However inoffensive we may be in other parts of our conduct, if we are found wanting in this trial of our love, we shall be disgraced by God as traitors.

2. Giving no uneasiness; causing no terror.

Should infants have taken offence at anything, mixing pleasant and agreeable appearances with it, must be used, till it be grown inoffensive to themselves.

INOFFENSIVENESS. n. s. [from inoffensive.]

Harmlessness; freedom from appearance of harm.

INOFFICIOUS. adj. [in and officious.]

Not civil; not attentive to the accommodation of others.

INOPIATE. adj. [inopinatus, Lat. in- + opinare, Fr.] Not expected.

INOPPORTUNE. adj. [inopportunus, Lat.]

Unseasonable; inconvenient.

INORDINACY. n. s. [from inordinate.]

Irregularity; disorder. It is safer to use inordination.

They become very sinful by the excess, which were not so in their nature; that inordinacy sets them in opposition to God's designation.

INORDINATE. adj. [in and ordinatus, Lat.]

Irregular; disorderly; deviating from right.

These people were wisely brought to allegiance; but being straight led unto their own inordinate life, they forget what fust before they were taught.

INQUIETUDE. n. s. [from inquietu.]

Disturbed state; want of quiet; attack on the quiet.

Having had such experience of his fidelity and observance abroad, he found himself engaged in support to him at home from any further inquietude.

INQUIETED. adj. [inquietudine, Fr. inquiétude, -ed, Lat.]

Disturbed state; want of quiet; attack on the quiet.

INQUINATIONS. n. s. [inquinatio, Lat. from inquirere.]

Corruption; pollution.

Their causes and axioms are so full of imagination, and so infected with the old received theories, as they are more inquisitions of experience, and connect it with the middle action, which produces such imperfect bodies, is truly called by some of the ancients inquisition, or incommunicatio, which is a kind of putrefaction.

INQUIRING. adj. [from inquire.]

That of which inquisition or inquest may be made.

INQUIRY. n. v. [enquirer, Fr. inquiere, Lat.]

1. To ask questions; to make search; to exert curiosity on any occasion; with of before the person asked.

You have oft inquir'd after the shepherds that complain'd of love. Shak.

We will call the damsel, and inquire at her mouth. Gen.

Herod inquired of them diligently. Matthew.

They began to inquire among themselves, which of them it was that should do this thing? Luke, xxii. 23.

He sent Hadamor to kind David, to inquire of his welfare. 1 Chron. xviii. 10.

2. It is used with into when something is already imperfectly known.

It may deserve our best skill to inquire into those rules, by which we may guide our judgment. South.

The step-dame poison for the son prepares; the son the father's years. Dryden.

INQUIRY. n. v. [enquirer, Fr. inquiring, Lat.]

1. To ask questions; to make search; to exert curiosity on any occasion; with of before the person asked.

He sends Hadamor to kind David, to inquire of his welfare. 1 Chron. xviii. 10.

2. It is used with into when something is already imperfectly known.

It may deserve our best skill to inquire into those rules, by which we may guide our judgment. South.

The step-dame poison for the son prepares; the son the father's years. Dryden.

3. Sometimes with of.

Under their grateful shade fœtuses sat;

His left young Fallas kept, fœte to his side,

And oft of winds inquire'd, and of the tide.

Dryden's Ennius.

4. With after when something is last or missing; in which case for is likewise used.

Inquire for one soul of Tarus. Acts, ix. 11.

They are more in danger to go out of the way, who are marching under a guide that will mislead them, than he that is like to be prevailed upon to turn aside the right way. Locke.

5. With about, when fuller intelligence is desired.

To those who inquired about me, my lover would answer, that I was an old dependent upon his family.

6. To make examination.

Awful Rhadamastos rules the state:

He hears and judges each committed crime.

Inquiries into the person, place, and time. Dryden.

To INQUIRE. v. a.

1. To ask about; to seek out: as, he inquired the way.

2. To call; to name; Obsolete.

Caunte had his portion from the rest.

The which he call'd Caution, for his hire, Now Cautium, which Kent we commonly inquire.

3. It is now more commonly written enquire.

INQUIRING. n. s. [from inquire.]

1. Searcher; examiner; one curious and inquisitive.

What satisfaction may be obtained from those violent disputers, and eager inquirers into what day of the month the world began? Brown's Vulg. Err.

What's good doth open to the inquirers stand, And in its finding 'tis the accepting hand. Denham.

Superficial inquirers may satisfy themselves that the parts of matter are united by ligaments.

Glaudat's Sepulchre.

This is a question only of inquirers, not disputers, who neither affirm nor deny, but examine. Locke.

Late inquirers by their glasses find;

That every insect of each different kind,

In its own egg, clear'd by the solar rays,

Organ's inviolate and latest life displays. Blacken.

2. One who interrogates; one who questions.

INQUIRY. n. s. [from inquire.]

1. Interrogation; search by question.

To Smth's Sliakap.

To Simon's house, and stood before the gate.

2. Examination; search.

This exactly is absolutely necessary in[question after philosophical knowledge, and in controversy about truth or error.

As to the inquiry about liberty, I think the question is not proper, whether the will be free, but with a mind be free.

I have been engaged in physical inquiries. Locke.

It is an real inquiry concerning the nature of a bird, or a lea, to make their yet imperfect of it more complete.

Judgment or opinion, in a remoter sense, may be called invention: as when a judge or a physician makes an exact inquiry into any cause.

INQUISITION. n.s. [inquisition, Fr. inquisition, L.]

When he made inquisition for blood, he remembered them: he forgetteth not the cry of the humble.

When inquisition was made of the matter, it was found out.

With much severity, and strict inquisition, punished the adherents and siders of the late rebels.

Though it may be impossible to recollect every falling, yet you are far to exercise an inquisition upon yourself, as, by observing lesser particulars, you may the better discover what the consequence of your nature sways to.

By your good leave, these men and their judges: we must stand

The inquisition of their marriage.

On our condition.

Southern.

2. Examination; discussion.

We were willing to make by a patron or precedent of an essay,

Bacon's Natural History.

3. [In law.] A manner of proceeding in matters criminal, by the office of the judge.

Cowell.

4. The court established in some countries subject to the pope for the detection of heresy.

One kis of her's, and but eighteen words.

Put question to the Spanish inquisition.

Corbet.

INQUISITIVE. adj. [inquisitivus, L.; Lat.]

Curious; busy in search; active to pry in any thing; with about, after, into, or of, and sometimes to.

My boy at eighteen years became inquisitive after his brother.

Shakesp. Comedy of Errors.

This idea, together with fear of inquisition, has been the cause that the Irish were ever the most inquisitive people after news of any nation in the world.

He is not inquisitive into the reasonableness of indifferent and innocent commands.

Taylor.

It can be no duty to write his heart upon his forehead, and to give all the inquisitive and malicious world a survey of those thoughts, which is the prerogative of God only to know.

South.

His old shaking site.

Inquisitive of fights, still long in vain

To find him in the number of the slain.

Dryden.

Then what the Goliack gys will do,

Art anxiously inquisitive to know.

Dryden.

A Dutch ambassador, entertaining the king of Siam with the particularities of Holland, which he was inquisitive after, told him that the water would, in cold weather, be so hard that men walked upon it.

The whole neighbourhood grew inquisitive after my name and character.

Addison's Spectator.

A wise man is not inquisitive about things imperfect.

Damon.

They cannot bear with the importinent question of a young inquisitive and curiosity genius.

On the Blind.

INQUISITIVELY. adv. [from inquisitive.]

With curiosity; with narrow scrutiny.

INQUISTIVENESS. n.s. [from inquisitive.

Incurious; not to pry into things hidden.

Though he thought inquisitiveness an uncommonly good, he could not but ask who she was. Swift.

Hippolytus that we scorn our prospect, and despise in which reason will never touch the bottom, yet surely the pleasure arising from thence is great and noble; for as we afford perpetual matter to the inquisitiveness of human reason, and so are large enough for it to take its full scope and play in. South's Sermons.

Provided, delivering great conclusions to us, designed to excite our curiosity and inquisitiveness after new methods by which things were known to pass.

Burnet.

Curiosity in children nature has provided, to remove that ignorance they were born with; which, without this busy inquisitiveness, will make them dull.

Locke.

INQUISTOR. n.s. [inquisitor, Lat. inquisitor, Fr.]

1. One who examines judically.

In these particulars I have played myself the inquisitor, and find nothing contrary to religious or manners, but rather mendicible. Bacon's Essays.

And since, the strict inquisitor, appears,

And lives and crines with his assessors bears.

Dryden.

2. An officer in the popish courts of inquisition.

To inerail. n.s. [in and rail.] To inclose with rails.

In things indifferent, what the whole church doth think convenient for the whole, the same if any part do wilfully violate, it may be reformed and inscribed again, by that general authority whereunto each particular is subject.

Where fair St. Giles's ancient limits spread,

An inerail'd column rests its lofty head;

Here to sev'n streets sev'n days count the day,

And from each other catch the circling ray.

Gay.

INROAD. n.s. [in and road.] Incursion; sudden and desultory invasion.

Many hot invades they make in Italy.

Shakesp., Ant. and Cleop.

From Scotland we have had in former times some alarms and incursions into the northern parts of this kingdom.

Bacon.

By proof we feel

Our pow'rs sufficient to disturb his heav'n.

And with parental tears to alarm.

Though inaccessible his fatal throne.

Milton.

The loss of Shrewsbury exposed all North Wales to the daily incursions of the enemy.

Clarendon.

The country open by without defence.

For poets frequent incursions there have made.

Dryden.

INSANABLE. adj. [insanabalis, L.] Incorrigible; irredeemable.

INSANE. adj. [insanus, L.]

1. Mad.

2. Making mad.

Were such things here as we do speak about?

Or have we eaten of the insanest root?

That takes the reason prisoner?

Shakesp., Meroth.

INSATIABLE. adj. [insatiabilis, Lat. insatiable, Fr.] Greedily beyond measure; greedy so as not to be satisfied.

INSATIABILITY, n.s. [from insatiabl.]

Greediness to be appeased.

Some men's hydroptic insatiabilities had learned to thirst the more, by how much more they drank.

King Charles.

INSATIABLY. adv. [from insatiabl.

With greediness not to be appeased.

They were extremely ambitious, and insatiably covetous; and therefore no impression, from argument or miracles, could reach them.

South.

INSATIATY. adj. [insatiatus, L.] Greedily so as not to be appeased.

Of that insatiate Edward.

Shakesp. Rich. II.

Institute to pursue

Vain war with heav'n.

Milton.
Insensible, adj. [insensible, Fr. insensible.] Not to be perceived; not discoverable by the senses.

1. Imprecipitately, in such a manner as is not discovered by the senses.

Ye be reprobates; obdurate insensate creatures.
Hammond.

So fund are mortal men,
As their own sin and themselves t'invite,
Insensate left, or to sense reprobat,

And with blindness internal struck. Milton's Algon.

2. Inability to perceive.

Insensibility of slow motions may be thus accounted for: motion cannot be perceived without perception of the parts of space which it left, and those which it reached.

Glaucus.

3. Torpor; dulness of mental perception.

Insensible adj. [insensible, Fr.]

1. Imperceptible, not discoverable by the senses.

What is that word honoun? Air; a trim reckoning. Who hath it? He that died a Wednesday. Doth he feel it? No. Doth he hear it? No. Is it insensible then? Yea, to the dead. But will it not live with the living? No. Why? Deacon. Will it not suffer it? Shakespear.

Two small and almost insensible pricks were found upon Cleopatra's arm. Brown's Vol. Err.

The death of the cicada will obscure the rare and bright light of these dark colours round about it, and render them almost insensible of Opticks.

2. Slowly gradual, so as that no progress is perceived.

They fall away, and languish with insensible decay.
Dryden.

1. Then was passing my former state Insensible, and forthwith to dissolve. Milton.

2. Accept no obligation without being a slave to the giver, or insensible of his kindness.
Wotton.

3. Void of feeling, either mental or corporal.

Absence of perception; inability to perceive.

To be insensible of the pain proceeds rather from the relaxation of the nerves than their obstruction.
Roy.

1. Insensibility. n.s. [insensible. Fr. insensible.]

1. Insensibility; absence of perception; inability to perceive.

In the insensibility of the pain proceeds rather from the relaxation of the nerves than their obstruction.
Roy.

2. Although the editor's interest to insert what the author's judgment had rejected.

Sojé.

Poesy and oratory omit things not essential, and inculcate little improvement, in order to place everything in the most affecting light. Wottu.

Insertion. n.s. [insertion, Fr. insertio, Lat.]

1. The act of placing any thing in or among other matter.

The great disadvantage our historians labour under is not that there is an interruption, by the insertion of records in their narration. Felton on the Classics.

An item, commonly called the twisting of the guts, is either a circulation of air, or intemperance of one part of the gut within the other. Athisnath.

2. The thing inserted.

He softhes the Republic by such insertion, before he wrote the other essays.
INSIDE. n.s. [in and in side.] Interior part; part within. Opposed to the surface or outside.

Look'd be 't! the inside of the paper?—He did and she. Shakespeare. Henry VIII.

Show the insides of your purse to the outside of his hand, and no more ado. Shak. Winter's Tale.

Here are the outsides of the one, the insides of the other, and there's the moity I promised ye. L'Estrange.

As for the inside of their nest, none but themselves were concerned in it. Addison's Guardian.

INSIGNITORE. n.s. [Lat.] One who lies in wait. Dict.

INSIDIOUS. adj. [insidieux, Fr. insidieux, Lat.] Sly; circumventive; diligent to entrap; treacherous.

Since men mark all our steps, and watch our haltings, let a sense of their insidious vigilance exalt us so to behave ourselves, that they may find a conviction of the mighty power of Christianity towards regulating the passions. Atterbury.

They wing their course, and dart on distant coasts, if some sharp rock, or shoul insidious, breaks not their career. Thomson.

INSIDIOUSLY. adv. [from insidious.] In a sly and treacherous manner; with malicious artifice.

The castle of Cadmus was taken by Theobald the Macedonian, insidiously and in violation of league. Bacon.

Sinon and Levi spoke not only falsely but insidiously, never hypocrisy, using their proctors, and their religion, for the effecting their cruel designs. Government of the Tongue.

INSIGHT. n.s. [insicht, Dut.] This word had formerly the accent on the last syllable. Intrusion, insight; deep view; knowledge of the interior parts; thorough skill in any thing.

Hardy shepherd, such as the metes, such may be her insight justly to grant them reward. Sidney.

Sleeping sent with careful diligence, he fetch'd a speech, the which had great weight in that disease of crowed conscience, and well could cure the same; his name was Patience.

Now will be the right season of forming them to able writers, when they shall be thus fraught with an universal insight into things. Milton.

The use of a little insight in those parts of knowledge, which are not a man's proper business, is to accustom our souls to all sorts of ideas. Locke.

A great man gives us a great insight into the advance and wisdom of providence, and suggests immaterial substances of meditation. Spectator.

Our knowledge of the deeper insight into things, would soon have made them sensible of their error. Horden.

INSIGNIFICANCE. n.s. [insignificance, insignificancy.] n.s. (from insignificant.)

1. Want of meaning; unmeaning terms. To give an account of all the insignificancies and the verbal notings of this philosophy, would be to transcribe it. Glanville.

2. Unimportance.

As I was ruminating on that I had seen, I could not forbear reflecting on the insignificance of human art, when set in comparison with the designs of Providence. Addison's Guardian.

My annals are in mouldy mists wrought, With easy insignificance of thought. South. (in)

INSIGNIFICANT. adj. [in and significant.] Wanting meaning; void of signification;

1. Of any value, or weight, or gravity equally, These words are insignificant and vain. Buckmore.

2. Unimportant; wanting weight; inefficacious. This sense, though supported by authority, is not very proper.

That I might not he vappored down by insignificant testimonies, I presumed to use the great name of your society to annihilate all such arguments. Glanville's Speech. Part.

Calumny robes the publick of all that benefit which it may justly claim from the world and virtue of praising you by rendering their virtuously insignificant. South.

All the arguments to a good life will be very insignificant to a man that hath a mind to be wicked, when remissness of sins may be had upon cheap terms. Tillotson.

Nothing can be more contemptible and insignificant than the scan of a people, instigated against a king. Addison.

In a hemorrhage from the lungs, no remedy so proper as bleeding, often repeated: styphlets are often insignificant. Arberuth.

INSIGNIFICANTLY. adv. [from insignificant.]

1. Without meaning.

Birds are taught to use articulate words, yet they understand not their import, but use them insconsiderably, as the organ or pipe renders the tune, which it understands not. Hale.

2. Without importance or effect.

INSINCERE. adj. [insincerus, Lat. in and sincere.] Not what he appears; not hearty; dissembling; unfaithful; of person.

2. Not sound; corrupted; of things.

And why, Peruators? To render sleep's soft blessings insincere? Alike devote to sorrow's dire extreme, The day reflection, and the midnight dream. Pope.

INSINCYRITY. n.s. [from insincere.] Dissimulations want of truth or fidelity. If men should always act under a mask, and in disguise, that indeed betrays design and insincerity. Browne on the Odyssey.

To INSINUATE. v. a. [in and since.] To strengthen; to confirm. A word not used.

All members of our cause.

That are insinuated to this action. Shakespeare.

INSINUANT. adj. [Fr.] Having the power to gain favour.

Men not so quick perhaps of conceit as slow to passions, and commonly less irritable than judges, however prove very plausible, insinuant, and fortunate men. Wotton.

To INSINUATE. v. a. [insinuer, Fr. insinue, Lat.] To introduce any thing gently.

The water easily insinuates itself into and pliability divests the vessels of vegetable food. Locke.

To push gently into favour or regard, commonly with the reciprocal pronoun.

There is no particular evil which hath not some appearance of goodness, whereby to introduce itself. Hooker.

At the isle of Rhe he insinuated himself into the very good grace of the duke of Buckingham. Clarendon.

3. To hint; to impart directly.

And all the actions hards pursue Do but insinuate what's true. Swift.

4. To instil; to influence gently.

All the art of rhetoric, besides order and clearness, are for nothing else but to insinuate wrong ideas, move the passions, and thereby mislead the judgment. Locke.

To INSINUATE. v. n.

1. To wheedle; to gain on the affections by gentle degrees.

I love me colours; and without all colour Of base insinuating flattery, I pluck this white rose with Plantagenet. Shakespeare.

2. To steal into imperceptibility; to be conveyed insensibly.

INSINUATION. n.s. [insinuatio, Lat. insinuation, Fr. from insinuate.] The power of pleasing or stealing upon the affections.

When the industry of one man hath settled the work, a new man, by insinuation or misinformation, may not supplant him without a just cause.

He had a natural insinuation and address, which made him acceptable in the best company. Clarendon.

INSINUATIVE. adj. [from insinuate.]

Stealing on the affections.

Phrases of power which example and custom have us. Government of the Tongue.

INSINUATOR. n.s. [insinuator, Lat.] He that insinuates. Ainsworth.

INSIPID. adj. [insipide, Fr. insipideus, Lat.]

1. Wanting taste; wanting power of affecting the organs of gust.

Some earths yield, by distillation, a liquor very far different from insipid or insipid. Boyle.

Our fathers much adulter'd their sauces sweet, And often call'd for sugar with their meat; Insipid taste, old friend, to them, that Paris knew, Where rosebuds, silkworm, and the salt garlic grew. King.

This chyle is the natural and alimentary pithua, which the ancients described as insipid.

Flower on the Hamour.

She lays some useful hint aside, To strike the chyle's insipid tide. Prior.

2. Wanting spirit; wanting passion; flat; dull; heavy.

The gods have made your noble mind for me, And her insipid soul for Pondercy; A heavy languid insipid without desire, A heap of ashes that o'circles your fire. Dryden's Cleon.

Some short excursions of a broken row.

He made indeed, but flat insipid stuff. Dryden.

INSIPIDITY. n.s. [insipid, Fr. from insipidness.] Insipid.

1. Want of taste.

2. Want of life or spirit.

Dryden's lines shine strongly through the insipidity of Tarte's. Pope.

INSIPIDLY. adv. [from insipid.]

1. Without taste.

2. Dull; without spirit.

The great reason why many children abandon themselves wholly to silly sports, and trifle away all their time insipidly, is because they have found their curiosity upon the centers of the bottom of the cells on the other side. Bay.

2. Not to recede from terms or assertions; to persist in.

Upon such large terms, and so absolute, our conditions shall insist upon. Our peace shall stand firm as rocky mountains. Shakespeare.
INS

If it have not a sufficient insolation it looketh pale, and attains not its laudable colour; if it be over-tended, it suffereth a torrefaction. Brown.

INSOLENCE. n.s. (insolence, Fr. insolé.) Pride exerted in contemptuous and overbearing treatment of others; petulant contempt.

They could not restrain the insolence of O'Neil, who, finding himself so admired, made himself lord of those people that remained. —Spencer.

Such a nature fied with good success, disdains the shadow which he treads on at noon; but I do wonder His insolence can brook to be commanded Under Conunisius. —Shakespeare.

Public judgements are the barns and shores upon which God breaks the insolency of sinners, and stays established pillars. —Tillemain.

The steady tyrant man, Who with the thoughtless insolence of power, For most alone, pursues the cruel chase. —Thomson.

The fear of any violence, either against her own person or against her own, might deter Persepol from using any endeavours to remove men of such insolence and power. —Bacon.

To INSOLENCE. v.a. [from the noun.] To insult; to treat with contempt. A very bad word.

The bishops, who were first faulty, insolenced and assaulted. —King Charles.

INSOLENT. adj. [insolent, Fr. insolent.] Contemptuous of others; haughtily; overbearing.

We have not pilleagued those rich provinces which we rescued: victory itself hath not made us insolent masters. —Addison.

INSOLENTLY. adv. [insolently, Fr. in and solc.] With contempt of others, haughtily; rudely.

What I most disprove, He insolently talk'd to me of love. —Dryden.

Not fation, when it shook thy regal seat, Nor snarls, insolently loud, Those echoes of a thoughtless crowd, Could warp thy soul to their unjust decree. —Dryd.

Being naturally of an haughty temper, treated him very insolently, more like a criminal than a prisoner of war. —Addison.

INSOLUBLE. adj. [insoluble, Fr. in and solc.] Not to be solved; not to be cleared; inextricable; such as admits of no solution, or explanation.

To spend a few minutes on the puzzling enquires concerning vacuums, the doctrine of infinites, indescribable and incomprehensible, wherein there appear some insoluble difficulties. —Watts on the Mind.

2. That cannot be paid.

INSOLVENT. adj. [in and solv.] Unable to pay.

By public declaraion he proclaimed himself insolvent of those vast sums he had taken upon credit. —Hawel.

A farmer accused his guards for robbing him of oxen, and the emperor shot the offenders: but demanding repayment of the accuser for so many brace fellows and finding him insolvent, compounded the matter by taking his life. —Bacon.

INSOLVENTY. n.s. [from insolvent.] Inability to pay debts. An act of insolvent is a law by which imprisoned debtors are released without payment.

INSOMNIA. n.s. [from insomni.] An insomni is a man that cannot pay his debts. —Watts.

An insolvent tenant of incumber's space. —Smart.

5.

INSOLVENCY. n.s. [from insolvent.] Inability to pay debts. An act of insolvency is a law by which imprisoned debtors are released without payment.

INSOMNIAC. n.s. [from insomni.] A person who cannot sleep. —Smart.

1. That; such to a degree that.

It hath ever been the use of the conqueror to despise the language of the conquered, and to force him to speak in that sense the Romans always use the language that there is no nation but is sprinkled with their language. —Spencer.

To insomniac, is a person who cannot sleep. —Smart.

To make a man a insomniac, is to make him a person who cannot sleep. —Smart.

Insomniacs were an excellent pest, inasmuch that he made his fortune by it. —L'Estrange.

They made the ground uneven about their nest, insomniac that the state did not lie flat upon it, but left a free passage underneath. —Addison.

2. This word is growing obsolete.

To INSPECT. v.a. [inspec, inspectum, Lat.] To look into by way of examination.

INSPECTION. n.s. [inspection, Fr. inspectio, Lat.] To inspect by way of examination.

1. Prying examination; narrow and close survey.

2. A narrow search, and with inspection deep.

Consider every creature. —Milton.

Our religion is a religion that dares to be understood; that offers itself to the search of the inquisitive, to the inspection of the severest and the most awakend reason; tor, being secure of her substantial truth and purity, she knows that for her to be seen and looked into, is to be embraced and admired, as there needs no greater argument for men to love the light than to see it. —South.

3. Superintendence; presencing care.

In the first sense it should have into before the object, and in the second sense it may admit over; but authors confound them.

We may safely conceal our good deeds, when they run no hazard of being diverted to improper ends, for want of our own inspection. —Addison.

We should apply ourselves to study the perfections of God, and to procure lively and vigorous impressions of his perpetual presence with us, and inspection over us. —Addison.

The divine inspection into the affairs of the world, both necessarily follow from the nature and being of God: and that denies this, doth implicitly deny his existence. —Bentley.

INSPECTOR. n.s. [Lat.] 1. A prying examiner.

With their now light our bold inspectors press, Like Cham, to show their father's nakedness. —Drayton.

2. A superintendent.

Young men may travel under a wise inspector or tutor to different parts, that they may bring home useful knowledge. —Watts.

INSPECTION. n.s. [inspersion, Lat.] A sprinkling upon. —Ainsworth.

To INSPIRE. v.a. [in and sphere.] To place in an orb or sphere.

Where those immortal shapes of bright aerial spirits live imagined, in regions mild of calm and serene air. —Milton.

INSPIRABLE. adj. [from inspire.] Which may be drawn in with the breath; which may be infused.

To these inspirable hurts, we may commemorate those they obtain from their expiration of religious storms. —Horsey.

INSPIRATION. n.s. [from inspire.] 1. The act of drawing in the breath.
To INSPIRE. v. a. [inspiro, Lat. inspirer., Fr.] To draw in the breath; opposed to expire.

1. To breathe into.

Ye nine, descend and sing.
The breathing instruments inspire.

Pope.

2. To influe by breathing.

He knew not his Maker, and he that inspired him into him an active soul, and breathed in a living spirit.

If id. xvi. 11.

3. To influe into the mind; to impress upon the fancy.

I have been troubled in my sleep this night; but waking daybreak, to breathe inspir'd. Shak.

Shakespeare.

Then to the heart inspir'd
Vernal delight.

Milton.

4. To animate by supernatural infusion.

Not 'twas inspir'd
Castalian spring.

Milton.

Erato, thy poet's mind inspire,
And fill his soul with thy celestial fire.

Dryden.

The letters are often read to the young religious, to inspire them with sentiments of virtue.

Addison.

5. To draw in with the breath.

By means of sulphurous coal smacks the lungs are stilled and oppressed, whereby they are forced to inspire and expel the air with difficulty, in comparison of the facility of inspiring and expiring the air in the country.

Harvey.

His baleful breath inspir'd as he glides; Now like a chain around his neck he rides.

Dryden.

INSPIRER. n. s. [from inspire.] He that inspires.

To the infinite God, the omnipotent creator and preserver of the world, the most gracious re-doer, preserver of mankind, be all honour.

Deacon.

To INSPIRIT. v. a. [in spirit.] To animate; to actuate; to fill with life and vigour; to enliven; to invigorate; to encourage.

It has pleased God to inspire and enliven all his evangelical methods by a concurrence of supernatural strength, which makes it not only eligible but possible; very easy and pleasant to do whatever he commands us. Decay of Piety.

A discreet use of becoming ceremonies renders the services of the church solemn and affecting, inspires the sluggish, and inflames even the devout worshipper.

Abarbic.

The courage of Agramoun is inspired by love of empire and ambition. Pope's Trist. in F. Florids.

Let joy or ease, let influence or content, and the gay conscience of a life well spent, Vol. I.

CALM every thought, inspire every grace,
Glow in thy heart, and smile upon thy face. Pope.

To INSPIRATE. n. a. [in and spissus., Lat.] To thicken; to make thick. Sugar doth inspissate the spirits of the wine, and maketh them not so easy to resolve into vapours.

Shak.

This oil farth inspissated by evaporation turns into balm. Deacon on Abbeville.

INSPISSATION. n. s. [from inspissate.]
The act of making any liquid thick.

The effect is wrought by the inspiration of the air. Bacon.

Recent urine will crystalize by inspirations, and afford a salt neither solid nor alkaline. Deacon.

INSTABILITY. n. s. [instabilitas, from instabilis, Fr. instabilis, Lat.] Inconstancy; fickleness; mutability of opinion or conduct.

The temper of temper ought to be checked, when it doth dispose men to wander from one scheme of government to another; such a fickleness cannot but be fatal to our country. Addison's Freethinker.

INSTABLE adj. [instabilis, Lat.] Inconstant; changing. See UNSTABLE.

To INSTALL. v. a. [installer, Fr. i. et stafl.] To advance to any rank or office, by placing in the seat or stall proper to that condition.

She reigns a goddess now among the saints, That wasion the saffron of sheep's fight, And is installed now in heaven's height. Spencer.

Comeres is returned with welcome, Instal'd archbishop of Canterbury. Shak.

The king chose him master of the horse, after this he was installed of the most noble order. H. Evelyn.

INSTALLATION. n. s. [installation, fr. install.] The act of giving visible possession of a rank or office, by placing in the proper seat.

Upon the election the bishop gives a mandate for this installation. Addison's Parergon.

INSTALMENT. n. s. [from instal.] 1. The act of installing.

Is it not easy
To make lord William Hastings of our mind,
For the installation of this noble hero,
In the seat royal?

Shak. Richard III.

2. The seat in which one is installed.

Search Windsor-castle, clives,
The several chairs of order look you sour;

Each fair instalment, seat, and carv'd crest;

With loyal blazon evermore be bright. Shak.

 INSTANCE. n. s. [from instanc.] 1. Importunity; urgency; solicitation.

Christian men should much better frame themselves to those heavenly precepts which our Lord and Saviour with so great instance gave us concerning peace and unity, if we did continue to make the ancient councils renewed. Hooker.

2. Motive; influence; pressing argument. Not now in use.

She dwells so securely upon her honour, that folly dares not present itself. Now, could I come to her with any direction in my mind, my desires had instance and argument to commend themselves. Shak. Merry Wives of Windsor.

The instances that such a marriage more are base respects of thrift, but none of love. Shak.

3. Prosecution or process of a suit.

The instance of a cause is said to be that judicial process which is made from the conclusion of a fair trial, the trial of pronouncing sentence in the cause, or till the end of three years. Agis.

4. Example; document.

Yet doth this accident
So far exceed all instance, all discourse,
That I am ready to distrust mine eyes. Shak.

instance, a thing that is often cast in, there riseth suddenly a fly, which sometimes moveth on the walls of the furnace; sometimes on the fire, so presently as it is out of the furnace; which is a noble instance, and worthy to be weighed. Bacon.

We find in history instances of persons, who, after having received fain things, have chosen rather to languish in their distresses, than stake their miserable lives and fortunes upon the success of such a scheme. Addison.

The greatest kings are sometimes made the most remarkable instances of suffering. Atterbury.

The earth should be removed out of the sun, and resolve for instance in the orbit of Mercury, the whole world would boil with heat. Bentley.

The use of instances is to illustrate and explain a difficulty; and this end is best answered by such instances as are familiar and common. Baker.

5. State of any thing.

These seem as if, in the time of Edward the First, they were drawn up into the form of a law in the first instance. Hale.

6. Occasion; act.

The performances required on our part, are no other than what natural reason has recommended to us to observe, even in the most severe and difficult instances of duty. See Chinese, in each hard instance try

Above all pain, all anger, and all pride. Pope.

If Emanetia has lived as free from sin as it is possible for human nature, it is because she is always watching and guarding against instance of pride. Low's Serious Call.

To INSTANCe. n. r. [from the noun.] To give or offer an example.

As to false caitiffs, that the world may see how little he is to be trusted, I shall instance in two or three about which he makes the boldest clamour. Talmage.

In the body and soul, this age and the last have excelled the ancients; and I would instance in Shakespeare of the former, in Dorset of the latter. Dryden's Jure Divi.

INSTANT. adj. [instant, Fr. instante, Lat.]

1. Pressing; urgent; importunate; earnest.

And they were instant with loud voices, requiring that he might be crucified. Luke xix. 23. Rejoicing in hope, patient in tribulation, continuing instant in prayer. Romans xii. 12.

2. Immediate; without any time intervening; present.

To call for good old friend, bestow Your needful counsel to our businesses, Which crave the instant use. Shak. King Lear.

The former of copper and brass, and all the new and with courtesy in arms embassied. Pope.

3. Quick; making no delay.

Instant without dispute they took alarm. Milton.

Give'th that a visitant so long should wait Unmark'd, unhonour'd, at a monarch's gate; Instantly viewed, with instant hand and instant arm. Prior.

4. Without delay.

And the new friend with courteous air embossed. Pope.

INSTANT. n. s. [instant, Fr.]

1. Instant is such a part of duration wherein we perceive no succession.

Locke.

There is scarce an instant between their flourishing and their not being.

Hooker.

Her mind is happy yet in time must move, And not in instant through all paths white.

But she is swift and far, beneath above,
In point of time, which thought cannot divide. Prior.

At any instant of time the moving atom is but in one single point of the line; therefore all but 6 L 993
2. A particular time.

I can at any unseasonable instant of the night appoint her to look out at her lady's chamber-window.

Shakep.

3. It is used in low and commercial language for a day of the present or current month.

On the twentieth instant it is my intention to essay the front of the Addison's Guardian.

INSTANTaneously, adj. [instantaneously, Lat.] Done in an instant; acting habitually without any perceptible succession; acting with the utmost speed; done with the utmost speed.

This manner of the beginning or cessation of the Theron's mountain.

INSTANTaneously, adv. [from instantaneously.] In an indivisible point of time.

That what I had heard of the mining of frogs came to pass of itself, being reason to conclude

To come from the clods, or were instantaneously generated.

INSTANTLY, adv. [instant, Lat.]

1. Immediately; without any perceptible interval of time.

In a great while, the sense and the effects of any

Milton.

2. With urgent importunity.

To INSTAte, v. a. [in and state.]

To place in a certain rank or condition.

This kind of conquest does not only instate

Tennyson.

INSTAuration, n. s. [instauration, Fr. instauratio, Lat.] Restoration; repARATION; renewal.

Instead of, prep. [A word formed by the coalition of in and stead, place.]

1. In room of; in place of

That instead of fruit

Shakep.

Vary the form of speech, and instead of the word

Swift.

2. Equal to.

This very consideration to a wise man is instead of a thousand arguments, to satisfy him, that, in those times, no such thing was believed.

Tibullus.

3. Instead of; in place use without of.

In the place; in the room.

He in derision sets

Upon their tongues a various spirit, to raise

Milton.

To instep, v. a. [in and steep.]

1. To soak; to macerate in moisture.

Suffolk first died, and York, all bagged over,

Thom. to Comes to him, where he lay instep'd. Shak.

2. Lying under water.

The gartered rocks, and congeated sands,

Traitors instep'd to clou'd the guiltless keel. Shakep.

Instep n. s. [in and stp by.]
The upper part of the foot where it joins to the leg.

The caliga was a military shoe with a very thick

Arbuthnot on Coins.

To INSTITUTE, v. a. [instigo, Lat. instilger, Fr.] To urge to ill; to provoke or incite to a crime.

Instigation n. s. [instigation, Fr. from instigare.] Incitement to a crime; encouragement; impulse to ill.

Why, what need we

Commune with you of this? But rather follow

It was partly by the instigation of so many factious

Milton's Areopagitica.

instinctus, Fr. instinctué, Lat.]

To instil, v. a. [instillo, Lat. instillicr, Fr.]

1. To infuse by drops.

He from the well of life three drops instilled. Milton.

2. To instigate any thing imperceptibly into the mind; to infuse.

Though assemblies be had indeed for religion's sake, hurtful nevertheless they may easily prove,

Chap. King Charles.

Either the eagerness of acquiring, or the revenge

of missing dignities, have been the great instigators of ecclesiastical feuds.

Def. of Pety.

To INSTIL. v. a. [instillo, Lat. instillicr, Fr.]

1. To infuse by drops.

Milton.

2. To instigate any thing imperceptibly into the mind; to infuse.

Though assemblies be had indeed for religion's sake, hurtful nevertheless they may easily prove,

Chap. King Charles.

Either the eagerness of acquiring, or the revenge

of missing dignities, have been the great instigators

of ecclesiastical feuds.

Def. of Pety.

He had a farther design to instil and instigate by contributing to men's happiness in this present life.

Hooker.

These benefactions did in a particular manner instil the principle in the minds of the children of loving their country, which is far otherwise now-a-days. Swift.

INSTITUTION, n. s. [instillatio, Lat. from insti.

1. The act of pouring in by drops.

2. The act of instilling slowly into the mind.

3. The thing instilled.

They imibiter the cup of life by insensible insti-tations. Rambler.

INSTITMENT, n. s. [from insti.] Any thing instilled.

The leprous instiment.

Shakep.

INSTINCT, adj. [instinct, Fr. instinctus, Lat.] Moved; animated. A word not in use.

Forth rash'd with whirlwind sound

The chariot of paternal deity.

Shakep.

Flashing thick flames, wheel within wheel unwound,

Itself instarct with spirit, but convoy'd by

For the very meaning of tongues unknown. Milton.

INSTINCT, n. s. [instinct, Fr. instinctus, Lat. This word has its accent formerly

The thing which had its accent formerly

The word and its accent formerly acting in the mind without the interventhe institution of God’s law is described as being established by solemn injunction. Hooker. It became the duty of all things to the way of salvation to all, that the institution and restitution of the world might be both wrought with one another. Swift.

18. Hooker. It had described is Shakespeare. That the words of a man might be the proper argument of and was justified by the present. Shakespeare.

3. Positive law.

It quailed sometimes with the execution of laws, and sometimes with the institution. Temple. The holiness of the first fruits and the lamp is a holiness merely of institution, outward and nominal; whereas the holiness of the root is an holiness of nature, inherent and real. Atterbury.
The law and institution founded by Moses was to establish religion, and to have mercy and peace known to the whole earth. Forbes.

4. Education.

After baptism, when it is in infancy received, succeeds instruction and institution in the nature and several branches of that way, which was made at the fountain, in a short intelligible manner, Ham.

It is a necessary piece of Providence in the institution of our children, to train them up to whatsoever in their youth, that may honestly entertain them in their age. L'Estrange.

His learning was not the effect of precept or institution. Addison.

INSTITUTIONARY. adj. [from institution.] Elementary; containing the first doctrines, or principles of doctrine.

That it was not out of fashion Aristotle declared in his politics, among the institutionary rules of mankind. Bacon.

INSTRUCTOR. n. s. [instructor, Fr. instructeur, Lat.]

1. An establisher; one who settles. It might have succeeded a little better, if it had pleased the instructors of the civil months of the sun to have ordered them alternately cold and warm.

2. Instructor; educator.

The two great aims which every instructor of youth should mainly and intentionally direct.

Walker.

INSTITUTIONIST. n. s. [from institute.] Writer of institutes, or elemental instructions.

Green gall the instructors would persuade us to be an effect on the stagnant stench. Harvey on Cats.

To instep. v. a. [in and stop.] To close up; to stop.

To INSTRUCT. v. a. participle preterite, instructed or instruct. [instructo, Lat. instruire, Fr.]

1. To teach; to form by precept; to inform authoritatively; to educate; to instruct; to direct.

Out of heaven he made thee to hear his voice, that he might instruct thee. Deut. iv. 30. God's gods instruct him to discretion, and teach him the path whereon he should walk. Job, xxi. 28. 29.

Chancellor, chief of the Levites, instructed about the song, because he was skilled. 1 Chron. xxv. 2. You approve the things that are more excellent, being instructed out of the law. Rom. ii. 15. Instruct me, for thou knowest Milton.

He ever by consulting at the shrine Return'd the wiser, or the more instruct
To dy or fall what concern'd him most. Milton.

2. It has commonly in the thing taught. That they were instructed in the songs of the Lord were two hundred four-score and eight. 1 Chron.

These are the things wherein Solomon was instructed for building of the house of God. 2 Chron.

3. To model; to form. Little in use.

They speak to the merits of a cause, after the proctor had prepared and instructed the same for a hearing before the judge.

INSTRUCTOR. n. s. [from instruct.] A teacher; an instructor; one who delivers precepts or imparts knowledge.

It is often written INSTRUCTOR.

Though you have ten thousand instructors in Christ, St. Cor. iv. 15.

And twice the flood arts to Chalcides fell.

The father of the faithful there did dwell,

Who both their parent and instructor was, Davenant.

As prevent, heavily instructor Milton.

Poets, the first instructors of mankind, Spenser.

They brought all things to their native proper use. Roscommon.

They see how they are beset on every side, not with temptations, but instructors to vice. Locke.

Several instructors were dispensed amongst this little helpless people. Addison.

We have precepts of duty given us by our instructors. Rogers.

INSTRUCTION. n. s. [instruction, Fr. instruire, Lat.]

1. The act of teaching; instruction.

It lies on you to speak, not by your own instruction, nor by any matter which your brothers shall shew. Shakespeare.

We are beholden to jocund writers of all ages, for those discoveries and discourses they have left behind them for your instruction. Locke.

2. Precepts conveying knowledge.

Will ye not receive instruction to hearken to receive my words? Jer. xxx. 10.

Of every thing delightful wisdom grows. In every stream a sweet instruction flows; but some antaught o'er the whispering rill, is set of sacred leisure, blackboards still. Johnson.

3. Authoritative information; mandate.

See this dispatch'd with all the haste thou canst. Ann.Ill give thee more instruction. Shakespeare.

INSTRUCTIVE. adj. [from instruct; instructif, Fr.] Conveying knowledge.

With variety of instructive expressions by speech man alone is endowed. Holder.

I would not laugh but to instruct; or if my mirth ceases to be instructive, it shall never cease to be innocent. Addison.

INSTRUMENT. n. s. [instrumentum, Lat.]

1. A tool used for any work or purpose; especially, an instrument of iron, so that he die, he is a murderer. Num. xxxix. 16.

What artificial frame, what instrument,

Did one superior or another,

Which the muscles is prefer'd? Blackmore.

A box is useful for turners and instrument makers. Mortimer.

A frame constructed so as to yield harmonious sounds.

He that striketh an instrument with skill, may cause notwithstanding the most pleasant sound, if the string wherein he striketh chance to be capable of harmony.

She tooketh most delight in music, instruments and poetry. Shakespeare.

In solemn groves he makes his mean, Nor, mix'd in mirth, in youthful pleasure shares, but sighs when songs and instruments he hears. Johnson.

Dreyden.

3. A writing containing any contract or order.

He called Edna his wife, and took paper, and did write an instrument of covenants, and sealed them with the seal of the house of Solomon. Tobin.

5. That by means whereof something is done.

The gods would not have delivered a soul into the body which hath arms and legs, only instruments of doing; but that they were intended the mind should employ them. Sidney.

All voluntary self-denials and austerities which Christianity commands become necessary, not simply for themselves, but as instru- ments towards a higher end. Decius. Piety.

Reputation is the smallest sacrifice those can make us, who have been the instruments of our ruin. Swift.

There is one thing to be considered concerning religion: that under one wise man the proper instrument of it, and the wisest way of exercising this faculty.

Locke.

6. One who acts only to serve the purposes of another.

He scarcely knew what was done in his own chest that he as it placed his instruments, for his own use.

Sidney.

All the instruments which aided to expose the child, were even then lost when it was found. Shak.

In benefits as well as injuries; it is the principal that we are to consider, not the instrument; that which a man does by another, is in truth his own act. Locke.

The bold are but the instruments of the wise, they undertake the danger, they advise. Dryden.

INSTRUMENTAL. adj. [instrumental, Fr. instrumentum, Lat.]

1. Conductive as means to some end; organisical.

All sound and instrumental causes, without that operation which he acts, would become altogether silent, viceless, and dead. Raleigh.

Payer, which is instrumental to every other, hath a particular promise in this thing. Taylor.

It is not an essential part of religion, but rather an auxiliary and instrumental duty. Dryden.

I discoursel on some excellent final causes of conjunction of body and soul: but the instrumental I know not, nor what invisible bands and letters united them. Berkeley.

2. Acting to some end; contributing to some purpose; helpful; used of persons and things.

The presbyterian merit is of little weight, when they allege themselves instrumental towards the restoration. Swift.

3. Consisting not of voices but instruments; produced by instruments, not by the voice; which, under presence of the law esce- nial abrogated, require the abrogation of instrumental music, approving nevertheless the use of voices and to remain, must show some reason, whereas the one should be thought a legal ceremony and not the other. Hooker.

In instruments, oft in hands, While they keep watch, or nightly rounding walk, With heavenly touch of instrumental sounds, In full harmonious number join'd, their songs Divide the night, and lift our thoughts to heav'n. Milton.

Sweet voices, mixt with instrumental sounds, Ascend the vaulted roof, the vaulted roof re- bounds. Dryden.

INSTRUMENTALITY. n. s. [from instrumen- tal.] Subordinate agency; agency of any thing as means to an end.

Those natural and involuntary actions are not done by deliberation and formal command, yet they are done by the virtue, cunning, and skill of the instrumentality of the spirits, Halle.

INSTRUMENTALLY. adv. [from instrumen- tal.] In the nature of an instrument; as means to an end.

Man's well-being here in this life is instrumen- tally good, as being the means for him to be well in the next life. Locke.
Habitual preparation for the sacrament consists in a standing, permanent habit, or principle of holiness, wrought chiefly by God's spirit, and sacramentally by his word, in the heart or soul of man. South.

Instrumentality, n.s. [from instrumental]. Usefulness as means to an end. The instrumentality of riches to works of charity has been considered, and very political, in every commonwealth, by laws to settle and secure propriety. Hammond.

Insufferable, adj. [in and sufferable].
1. Intolerable; insupportable; intense beyond endurance.

   The one is oppressed with constant heat, the other with insufferable cold. Brown's Coler. Err. Eves that confess'd born for kindly way.

   So fierce, they found insufferable day.

   Dryden.

   Though great light be insufferable to our eyes, yet the highest degree of darkness does not at all displease them; because that causing no disorderly motion, leaves that curious organ unharmed. Locke.

2. Detestable; contemptible; disgusting beyond endurance.

   A multitude of scribblers, who daily pestil the world with insufferable stuff, should be discouraged from writing any more.

   Dryden.

Insufferably, adv. [from insufferable.]
To a degree beyond endurance.

   Those heavily shaped:

   Will dazzle now this earthy, with their blaze.

   Insuffr. bright.

   Miten. There is no person remarkably ungrateful, who was not also insufferably proud. South.

Insufficiency, n.s. [insufficiency, Fr. insuffisance].
Insufficiency, f in and sufficient]
Insufficiency to any end or purpose; want of requisite value or power; used of things and persons.

   The minister's apathy or insufficiency, otherwise than by reading to instruct the flock, standeth in this place as a stranger, with whom our form of common prayer hath nothing to do. Hooker.

   The insufficiency of the light of nature is, by the light of scripture, so fully supplied, that further light than this hath addeth, there outh not need unto that end. Hooker.

   We want give you sleepy drinks, that your senses, unintelligent of our insufficiency, may, though they cannot praise us, as little accuse us.

   Till experience had discovered their defect and insufficiency, I did certainly conclude them to be insuficient.

   Consider the plea made use of to this purpose, and show the insufficiency and weakness of them. Atterbury.

Insufficient, adj. [insufficient, Fr. insuffisant and sufficient.]
Insufficient to any need, use, or purpose; wanting abilities; incapable; unfit.

   The bishop to whom they shall be presented, may justly reject them as incapable and insufficient. Sprague.

   We are weak, dependent creatures, insufficient to our own happiness, full of wants which of ourselves we cannot relieve, exposed to a numerous train of evils which we know not how to divert. Rogers.

   Fasting kills by the bad state, not by the insufficient quantity of food. Arbuthnot on Aliments.

Insufficiently, adv. [from insufficient.]
With want of proper ability; not skillfully.

Insufflation, n.s. [in and sufflo, Lat.]
The act of breathing upon.

   Imposition of hands is a custom of parents in blessing their children, but taken up by the apostles instead of that divine insufflation which Christ used.

   Hammond's Fundamentals.

Insular. adj. [insulaire, Fr. insulaire, Lat.] Belonging to an island.

   Being, surrounded with the sea, is hardly to be invaded, having many other insurmountable advantages. Houd.

Insulated. adj. [insulat, Lat.]
Not contiguous on any side.

PItul. [insulat, Lat. Dull; insipid; heavy. Dict.

Insult, n.s. [insultus, Lat. insult, Fr.]
1. The act of keeping upon any thing.

   In this sense it has the accent on the last syllable: the sense is rare.

   The insult of four a she may sustain.

   But after ten from impudic rites refrain.

   Dryden.

   2. Act or speech of insolence or contempt.

   The ruthless, sore insult adds to grief.

   Savage.

   Take the sentence seriously, because rickleness are an insult on the unfortunate.

   From on the Odyssey.

To insult, v. a. [insulter, Fr. insulte, Lat.]
1. To treat with insolence or contempt.

   It is used sometimes with over, sometimes without a preposition.

   The poet makes his hero, after he was platted by the death of Hector, and the honour he did his friend by killing over his murderers, to be moved by the tears of king Priam.

   Pope.

   2. To trample upon; to triumph over.

   It pleased the king his master very lately.

   To strike at me upon his misconstruction.

   When he conjunct, and that his displeasure.

   Tragick me behind; being down, insulted, rail'd,

   And put upon him such a deal of man,

   That worthied him.

   Shaksp. King Lear.

   So scrapest the insulting fire his narrow rail,

   And makes small outlet to open air.

   Dryden.

   Ev'n when they sing at ease in full content,

   Funding over the toil they underwent,

   Yet still they find a future task remain,

   To turn the soil.

   Dryden's Virgil.

Insulter, n.s. [from insult.]
One who treats another with insolent triumph.

   Ev'n man, the merciless insulter man,

   Man, who reproaches in our sex's weakness,

   Shall pity these.

   Rowe's Jane Shore.

Insultingly, adv. [from insulting.]
With contemptuous triumph.

   Insultingly, he made love his boast,

   Gave me my life, and told me what it cost.

   Dryden.

Insuperable, n.s. [from insuperable.]
The quality of being invincible.

Insuperable, adj. [insuperabilis, Lat.]
Invincible; insurmountable; not to be conquered; not to be overcome.

   This appears to be an insuperable objection, because of the evidence that sense seems to give in it.

   Digby on Boileau.

   Much might be done, would we but endeavour; nothing is insuperable to pains and patience. Ray.

   And innumerable natures how they long to join,

   Yet never pass 'th insuperable line.

   Pope.

Insuperableness, n.s. [from insuperable.]
Invincibility; impossibility to be surmounted.

Insuperably, adv. [from insuperable.]
Invincibly; insurmountably.

   Between the grain and the vein of a diamond there is this difference, that the former furthers, the latter, being so insuperably hard, binds the splitting of it.

   Great's Museum.

Insupportable, adj. [insupportable, Fr. in and supportable.]
Intolerable; insufferable; not to be endured.

   A disgrace put upon a man in company is insupportable; it is heightened according to the number of the persons that hear.

   The baser the enemies are, the more insupportable is the insolence.

   Dryden.

   The thought of doing nothing after death is a burden insupportable to a virtuous man; we naturally aim at happiness, and cannot bear to have it continued to our present being.

   Dryden.

   To those that dwell under or near the Equator, this spring would be a most pestilential and insupportable summer; and for those countries that are nearer the Poles, a perpetual Spring will not do their business.

   Bentley.

Insupportably, adv. [from insupportable.]
Beyond endurance.

   But safe be he who staid aloof,

   When insuperably his foot advance'd,

   In search of their wretched arms and warlike tools,

   Spurred them to death by troops. Milton's Age:

   The first day's audience sufficiently convinced me, that the poem was insupportably too long.

   Dryden.

Insurnourable, adj. [insurno, insurgo, Lat.]
A seditious rising; a rebellious commotion.

   Between the acting of a dreadful thing,

   And the first motion, all the interim is

   Like a phantasm, or a hideous dream:

   The genius and mortal instruments

   Are then in council; and the state of man,

   Like to a little kingdom, suffers then.

   The nature of an insurrection. Shaksp. Cesar.

   This city of old time hath made insurrection against their masters, and that rebellion and sedition have been made therein. Ero.

   There shall be a great insurrection upon those that bear the Lord.

   2 Est. xvi. 70.

   Insurrections of base people are commonly more furious in their beginnings. Bacon's Hen. VII.

   The trade of Rome had like to have suffered another great stroke by an insurrection in Egypt. Arbuthnot.

Insusuration, n.s. [insurus, Lat.]
The act of whispering into something.

Intactible, adj. [in and intactum, Lat.]
Not perceptible to the touch.

Intaglio, n.s. [Ital.]
Any thing that has figures engraved on it.

We meet with the figures which Juvenal describes on antique insculptures and medals.

Addson on Italy.

Intangible, adj. [in and taste.]
Not raising any sensations in the organs of taste. A word not elegant, nor used.

   Something which is invisible, intangible, and insensible, existing only in the fancy, may produce a pleasure superior to that of sense.

   Crow.

Integer, n.s. [Lat.]
The whole of any thing.
As not only signified a piece of money, but any integer, from whence is derived the word unit, unit.

INTEGRAL. adj. [integral, Fr. integer, Lat.]
1. Whole: applied to a thing considered as comprising all its constituent parts.
2. Unimpaired; complete; not defective.
3. Not fractional; not broken into fractions.

INTEGRAL n.s. The whole made up of parts.

INTEGRITY. n.s. [integrity, Fr. integrity, from integer, Lat.]
1. Honesty; uncorrupt mind; purity of manners; uncorrupted nature.

INSEGUENT. n.s. [insequentum, in-fergo, Lat.] Any thing that covers or envelops another.

INTELLIGECE. n.s. [intellec-tes, Fr. intellectus, Lat.] The intellectual mind; the power of understanding.

INTELLIGENT. adj. [intelligen-tis, Fr. intellectis, Lat.] Having power to understand. If a man as intellectual be created, then either he means the whole man, or only that by which he is intellectual.

INTELLIGENT. adj. [intellectual, Fr. intellect, Lat.]
1. Relating to the understanding; belonging to the mind; transacted by the understanding.

INTELLIGENCE. n.s. [intelligence, Fr. intelligence, intelligens, Lat.]
1. Commerce of information; notice; mutual communication; account of things distant or secret.
2. Intelligence for the understanding; mental powers or faculties. This is little in use.

INTELLECT. n.s. [intellect, Fr. intellect, Lat.] The intellectual mind; the power of understanding.

INTELLECTIVE. adj. [intellectif, Fr. from intellect.] Having power to understand. If a man as intellectual be created, then either he

He lived rather in a fair intelligence, than any friendship with the favourites.

3. Spirit; unembodied mind.

INTELLIGENCE. n.s. [from intelligere.] One who sends or conveys news; one who gives notice of private or distant transactions; one who carries messages between parties.

INTELLIGENS. n.s. [from intelligens.]
1. Knowing; instructed; skilful.

INTELLIGIBILITY. n.s. [from intelligibilis.] He lived rather in a fair intelligence, than any friendship with the favourites.

INTELLIGIBILITY. n.s. [from intelligibilit.]
1. Possibility to be understood.

2. The power of understanding; intellection. Not proper.

The soul's nature consists in intelligibility. Glanv.

INTELLIGIBLE adj. [intelligible. Fr. intelligible, Lat.] To be conceived by the understanding; possible to be understood.

We shall give satisfaction to the mind, to show it a fair and intelligible account of the deluge. Burnet.

To something that must be lost in all translations, but the sense will be as clear, which would otherwise be obtained, when it is scarce intelligible. Dryden.

Many natural duties relating to God, ourselves, and our neighbour, would be exceedingly difficult for the bulk of mankind to find out by reason; therefore it has pleased God to express them in a plain manner, intelligible to souls of the lowest capacity.

INTELLIGIBILITY n. s. [from intelligible.] Possibility to be understood; perspicuity.

It is in our ideas, that both the rightness of our knowledge, and a kind of variety or intelligibility of our speaking, consists. Locke.

INTELLIGIBLY adv. [from intelligible.] So as to be understood; clearly; plainly.

The genuine sense, intelligibly told, Shews a reckoning with discretion and boldness. Bacon. To write of metals and minerals intelligibly, is a task more difficult than to write of animals. Wood.

INTEMERATE adj. [intemperatus, Lat.] Undeified; unpolluted.

INTEMPERANCE n. s. [in and tempera- ment] Bad constitution.

Some depend upon the intermixture of the part alacreted, and others upon the afflux of lacer- rate humours. Harvey.

INTEMPERANces. n. s. [intemperance, in- temperancy, Fr. intemperance, Lat.]

1. Want of temperance; want of temperance; commonly excess in meat or drink.

Unblest in temperance. Shaksp.

Shakep, Macbeth, Another law of Lycurgus induced to inter- temperance, in order to secure his constitution. Glanv.

Some, as thou saw'st, by violent stroke shall die.

By fasting, fasting, by intemperance more.

They make and drinks, and which on the earth shall bring Diseases die, of which a monstrous crew

Before thee shall appear, that thou mayst not know What thy next occasion of life

Shall bring on thee. Milton.

The Lacedaemonians trained up their children to be drunkards, and imprudent, by bringing a drunken man into their company. Watts.

2. Excessive addiction to any appetite or affection.

INTEMPERATE adj. [intemperant, Fr. intemperance, Lat.]

1. Immoderate in appetite; excessive in meat or drink; drunken; gluttonous.

More women should die than men, if the number of barbats answered in proportion to that of sicknesses; but men, being more intemperate than women, die as much by reason of their vices, as women by the excess of their sex. Gourn.

Notwithstanding all their talk of reason and philosophy, and those unanswerable doubts, which over their ears they pretend to have against Christianity; persue, but the covetous man not to deny his money, the intemperate man to abate his desire, and I do undertake that all their gilded objections shall vanish. South.

2. Passionate; ungodly; without rule.

You are more intemperate in your blood

Than those famer'd animals,

Than those savage sensuality, Shaksp.

Use not thy mouth to intemperate swearing; for therein is the word of sin. Ecclus. xxiii. 13.

3. Excessive; exceeding the just or conven- venient mean; as, an intemperate climate; we have intemperate weather.

INTEMPERATELY adv. [from intemperance.]

1. With breach of the laws of temperance.

How greatly do many of us contradict the plain precepts of the Saviour, by living intemperately or unjustly. Titusam.

2. Immoderately; excessively.

Do not too many believe no religion to be pure, but what is intemperately right? Whereas no religion is true, that is not peaceable as well as pure.

INTEMPERATENESS n. s. [from intemper- ance.]

1. Want of moderation.

2. Unseasonableness of weather. Ainsworth.

INTEMPERATURE n. s. [from intemper- ance.]

Excess of some quality.

INTELLIGIBLE adj. [in and tene- rable.] Indefensible, as, an intolerable opinion; an intemperate fortress.

To INTRUDER. v. a. [intento, Lat.]

1. To stretch out. Obsolete.

The same advancing high above his head,

With sharp intemperant sing so rude he made

That to this stern and arkened deign

Nelving night would have him life bete. Fairq."
Faith differs from hope in the extension of its object, and in the intensity of degree. Taylor.

INTELLIGENT. adj. [from intense.]

1. Stretched or increased with respect to itself; that which may admit increase of degree.

At his perfection is infinitely greater than the perfection of a man, so it is infinitely greater than the perfection of an angel; and were it not infinitely greater perfection of an angel, it could not be infinitely greater than the perfection of a man, because the intensive distance between the perfection of an angel and a man is finite.

Hale.

2. Intent; unremitting.

Tired with that assiduous attendance and intensive examination, which a long time did require, he was not unwilling to bestow upon another some part of the pains. Wotton.

INTELLIGIBLY. adv. By encrease of degree.

God and the good angels are more free than we are, that is, intensively in the degree of freedom but not extensively in the latitude of the object, according to a liberty of exercise, but not of speci-

INTENT. adj. [intentus, Lat.]

1. Anxiously diligent; fixed with close application: formerly with to. Distractions in England made most men intent to their own safety. King Charles.

2. Commonly with on.

When we use but those means which God hath laid before us, it is a good sign that we are rather intent upon God's glory than our own convenience. Taylor.

The general himself had been more intent upon his command than on their march and dance. Clarendon.

They were on the mirth and dance. Intent. Milton.

Of action eager, and intent on thought. The chair whereof a danger sought. Dryden.

Were men as intent upon this as on things of lower consequence, there are none so ensnared to the necessities of life, who might not find many vacancies that might be harnessed to this advantage of their knowledge. Locke.

Whilst they are intent on one particular part of their theme, they bend all their thoughts to prove or disprove some proposition that relates to that part, without attention to the consequences that may arise from another. Watts.

Be intent and solicitous to take up the meaning of the speaker. Watts.

INTENT. n.s. [from intend.]

1. A design; a purpose; a drift; a view formed; meaning.

Although the Scripture of God be stored with infinite variety of matter in all kinds, although it abound with all sorts of laws, yet the principal intent of Scripture is to deliver the laws of duties supernatural. Hooker.

Whereas commandment was given to destroy all places where the Caananites had served the gods, this precept had reference unto a special intent and purpose, which was, that there should be but one place whereunto the people might bring offerings. Hooker.

So to increase him in his intent towards our wives, are a yoke of his disconsled men. Shaksp.

I'll urge his hatred more to Clarence; And, if I fail not in my deep intent, Clarence hath not another day to live. Shaksp.

This fury fit for her intent she chose; One who delights in war. Dryden's En. The Azareans sent their fleet to Sicily; pretence only to assist the Leontines; but with an intent to make themselves masters of that island. Gray.

Of darkness visible so much be lent, As half to shew, half veil the deep intent. Dunce.

2. To all intents. In all senses, whatever may be meant or designed.

There is an incalculable blindness caused by a restless soul not to understand the pur- poses, he will not open his eyes for the present as blind as he cannot. South.

He was miserable to all intents and purposes. L'Estrange.

INTENT. n.s. [from intent.]

The state of being intent; anxious application.

He is more disengaged from his intentsion upon affairs. Swift.

TO INTER. v.a. [from enter.] 1. To cover under ground; to bury.

Within their clearest temple I'll erect a tomb, wherein you shall be inter'd, Shak.

The evil that men do lives after them; The good is oft interred with their bones. Shaksp.

His body shall be royally inter'd. And the last funeral spurns adorn his vein. Dryden.

The ashes, in an old recoup of the censer, are said to have been interred between the holy wall and the altar where they were taken up. Addison.

2. To cover with earth.

The best way is to inter them as you further please. Montmorency.

INTERCAMARY. v.a. [intercalary, Fr.]

INTERCAMARY. [intercalarius, Lat.] It is intercalated out of the common order to preserve the equation of time, as the twentieth of February in a leap year is an intercalary day.

To INTERCALATE. v.a. [intercalar, Fr. intercalo, Lat.] To insert an extraordinary day.

INTERCAMULATION. n.s. [intercalation, Fr. intercalatio, Lat.] Insertion of days out of the ordinary reckoning.

In sixty-three years there may be lost almost eighteen days, omitting the intercalation of one day every fourth year, allowed for this quadrant, or six supernumeraries. Brown.

TO INTERCEDE. v.n. [interceder, Fr. intercedo, Lat.] 1. To pass between.

He supposesthat a vast period interceded between that origination and the age whereinto he lived. Hoile.

Those superficies reflect the greatest quantity of light, which have the greatest refracting power, and which intercede mediums that differ most in their refracting densities. Newton.

2. To mediate; to act between two parties with a view of reconciling differences. It hath with it only one part be named, and between if both be named.

Then the placid son Presenting, thus to intercede began. Milton.

Nor was our blessed Saviour only our propitiation to die for us, and procure our atonement, but he is still our Advocate, continually interceding with his Father in behalf of all true penitents. Calvin.

I may restore myself into the good graces of the fair critics, and your lordship may intercede with them on my promise of amendment. Dryden.

Oripen desires that any prayer is to be made to them, although it be only to intercede with God for us, but only the sun of God. Stillingshe.

INTERCEDE. n.s. adv. [from intercede.]

One that intercedes; a mediator.

TO INTERCEPT. v.a. [intercept, Fr. interceptus, Lat.] 1. To stop and seize in the way.

The better course should be by planting of car- risons about him, which, whenever he shall look thither he shall be drawn upon, and stand ready to intercept his going or coming. Spenser.

Who intercepts me in my expedition? Or, she that might have intercepted thee. By strangling thee. Shaksp. Richard III.

1. Then in London, keeper of the king. Made his way through the Lord's bands of friars, March'd towards St. Albans intercept the queen. Shaksp.

999
1. To put each in the place of the other; to give and take mutually; to exchange.

They had left but one piece of one ship, whereon they kept themselves in all truth, having interchanged the masters, and other cares for each other, each comforting and counselling how to labour for the better, and to abide the worse.

Sidney.

My warded state for Henry's regal crown. Shaksp.

2. To succeed alternately.

His faithful friend and brother Euanarch came so mightily to his succour, that, with some interchanging changes of fortune, they begot of a just war, the best child peace.

Sidney.

INTERCHANGE. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. Commerce; permutation of commodities.

Those have an interchange or trade with Elam. Hostel.

2. Alternate succession.

With what delight could I have walk'd thee round?

If I could joy in ought! sweet interchange

Of hill and valley, rivers, woods, and plains. Milt.

The original measure of time, by help of the light, is irrefragable to us by the interchanges of light and darkness, and succession of seasons. Holber.

Hereafter, interchanges and interchanges would often happen in the first ages after the flood. Burnett's Theory.

3. Mutual donation and reception.

To Iintercrosse one hear him,

And bring a Goblet Good Diamond,

Furnish you fairly &t this interchange. Shaksp.

Farewell; the leisure, and the fearful time,

Cuts off the ceremonies, vows of love,

And ample exchange of sweet discourse. Shaksp.

Since their more nature dignities made separation of their society, their encounters, though not personal, have been regularly attended with interchanges of gifts. Shaksp.

After so vast an obligation, owned by so free a reckoning, I would do thee the more thing he expected, but a continual interchange of kindness? South.

INTERCHANGEABLE. adj. [from interchange.]

1. Given and taken mutually.

So many testimonies, interchangeable warrants, and counterseals, running through the bands and resting in the power of so many several persons, is sufficient to argue and convince all manner of falsehood. Bacon.

2. Following each other in alternate succession.

Just under the lime they may seem to have two Winters and two Summers; but there also they have four incomparable seasons, which is enough whereby to measure. Holber.

All along the history of the Old Testament we find the interchange of providences of God, towards the people of Israel, always suited to their manners. Tildton.

INTERCESSOR. n. s. [intercessor, Fr. intercessor, Lat.] Mediator; agent between two parties to procure reconciliation.

Behold the brev'mst thither thine eyesight bend; Thy looks, sighs, tears, for intercessions send. Faeif.

On man's behalf.

Patron or intercessor, none appear'd. Milton.

When we shall hear our eternal doom from our mediators, let it convince us, that a denial of Christ is more than transitory words. South.

To INTERCHAIN. v. a. [inter and chain.]

To chain; to link together.

Two bosoms interchained with an oath; So then two bonds, and a single trunk. Shaksp.

To INTERCHANGE. v. a. [inter and change.]

INTERCIPIENT. adj. [intercipient, Lat.] Obstructing; catching by the way.

INTERCIPIENT. n. s. [intercipient, Lat.] An intercepting power; something that causes a stoppage.

They commended repellants, but not with much affectation, unless as interceptants upon the parts above, lest the matter should thereby be incumbered in the part. Wiseman.

INTERCISION. n. s. [inter and ceede, Lat.] Interruption.

By cessation of words we may understand their intercession not obtrusion, or communication desolation.

Brown.

To INTERCLUDE. n. v. [interclude, Lat.] To shut from a place or course by something intervening; to intercept.

The voice is sometimes intercluded by a harsness, or vicious pleurisy cleaving to the aspen arterio.

INTERCLUSION. n. s. [interclusus, Lat.] Obstruction; intersection.

INTERCOLUMINATION. n. s. [inter and columna, Lat.] The space between the pillars.

The distance or intercolumination may be near four of his own diameter, because the materials commonly laid over this pillar were rather of wood than stone. Wotton.

To INTERCO'MON. n. v. [inter and common.] To feed at the same table.

Wine is to be forbear in exactions, for that the spirit of man do appear upon the viscid juice of the body, and intercommunication with the spirits of the body, and so rob them of their nourishment. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

INTERCOMMUNITY. n. s. [inter and community.] 1. A mutual communication or community.

2. A mutual freedom or exercise of religion.

INTERCO'STAL. adj. [intercostal, Fr. inter and costa, Lat.] Placed between the ribs.

The diaphragm seems the principal instrument of ordinary respiration, although to restrained respiration the intercostal muscles may contribute. Boyle.

By the assistance of the inward intercostal muscles, in deep respirations, we take large gulps of air.

INTERCOURSE. n. s. [intercourses, Fr.]

1. Commerce; exchange.

This sweet interchange Of looks, and smiles; for smiles from reason flow, To brute decay'd, and are of love the fuel. Milton.

2. Communication; followed by with.

The choice of the place requires many circumstances, as the situation near the sea, the commodiousness of an intercourse with England. Bacon.

What an honour is it that God should admit us into such a participation of himself! That he should give us minds capable of such an intercourse with the Supreme Mind! Atterbury.

INTERCURRENCE. n. s. [from intercurre, Lat.] Passage between.

Consider what fluidity saltpute is capable of, without the intercurrense of a liquor. Boyle.

INTERCURRENT. adj. [intercurrent, Lat.] Running between.

If into a phial, filled with good spirit of nitre, you cast a piece of iron, the liquor, whose parts involved phlegmically with the particles in the iron, altering the motion of its parts, and perhaps that of some very subtle intercurrent matter, those active parts presently begin to penetrator, and scatter abroad particles of the iron. Boyle.
INTERCEAAL n. s. [inter and deal.] Traditio; intercourse. Obsolate.

The Gaulish speech is the very British, which is yet retained of the Welshmen and Britons of France; though the alteration of the trading and intercourse with other nations has greatly interfered the dialect.

To INTERCED. v. a. [intercede, Fr. interdisc, Lat.]
1. To forbid; to prohibit.
   Alone I pass’d, through ways
   That broad, with sudden to the tree
   Of intercepted knowledge. Milton’s Paradise Lost.

By imagery fact, by which the world is governed, no monarch is in his grandest interest, ridicule.

2. To prohibit from the enjoyment of communion with the church.
   An archbishop may not excommunicate and interdict his suffragans, but his vicar-general may do the same.

INTERCEAL. n. s. [from the verb.]
1. Prohibition; prohibiting decree.
   Amongst his other fundamental laws, he did ordain the interdicts and prohibitions touching entrance of strangers.
   Those are not fruits forbidden, no interdict Defends the teaching of these wands pure;
   Their taste no knowledge works at least of evil. Milton.

Had he lived to see her happy change,
   He would have cancelled that harsh interdict,
   And jointed himself, Dryd. Don Sebaat.

2. A papal prohibition to the clergy to celebrate the holy offices.
   Nani carried himself meritoriously against the pope, in the time of the interdict, which held up his credit among the patriots.

INTERCEAL. n. s. [interdict, Fr. interdictio, Lat. from interdict.]
1. Prohibition; forbidding decree.

Stendy he pronounced
   The rigid interdictions, which roused
   Yet creaked in dull ear. Milton’s Paradise Lost.

2. Curse: from the papal interdict. An improper use of the word.

The trust issue of thy throne,
   By his own interdictio stands accordant. Shakespeare.

INTERCEALATORY. adj. [from interdict.]

Belonging to an interdict. Missworth.

To INTERCEAL. v. a. [intercessor, Fr.]

To INTERCEAL. To Concern; to affect; to give share in.

The mystical communion of all faithful men is such as marks every one to be interested in those precious possessions, which any one of them receiveth at God’s hands. Hooker.

Our joy.
   Although our last rest not; whose young love,
   The times of France and milk of Burgundy,
   Strive to be interested. Shakespeare. King Lear.

To love our native country, and to study its benefit and its glory, to be interested in its concerns, is natural to all men. Dryden.

Scipio, restoring the Spanish bride, gained a great universal interest themselves for Rome against Carthage. Dryden.

This was a goddess who used to interest herself in marriages. It succeeded not in discourse that ambitions and interested people. Arbequin on Cries.

To INTERCEAL. v. n. To affect; to move; to touch with passion; to gain the affections: as, this is an interesting story.

INTERCEAL. n. s. [interest, Lat. interet, Fr.]

Concern; advantage; good.

O give us a serious comprehension of that one great interest of others, as well as ourselves. Ham.

Divine good, universal good, and public good.

There is no man but God hath put many things in his possession, to be used for the common good and interest.

Caban.

Vol. I.

INTERCEAL. n. s. [interject, Lat.]

Speak, share; part in any thing; participation; as, this is a matter in which we have interest.

Endeavour to adjust the degrees of influence, that each cause might have in producing the effect, and the proper agency and interest of each therein. Hume.

4. regard to private profit.

Wherever interest or power thinks fit to interfere, it little imports what principles the opposite parties think fit to charge upon each other. Selden.

When interest calls off all her sneaking traits.

Pope.

5. Money paid for use; usury.
   Did take interest?
   No, not take interest; not, as you would say, directly, interest.
   Shakesp.

It is a sad life we lead, my dear, to be so teazed; paying interest for old debts, and still contracting new ones. Arbuthnot.

6. Any surplus of advantage.

With all speed.
   You shall have your desires with interest. Shakesp.

To INTERJECT. v. n. [inter and ferio, Lat.]

1. To interpose; to intermeddle.
   So cautiously were our ancestors in conversation, as never to interfere with party disputes in the state. Swift.

2. To clash; to oppose each other.

If each acts by an independent power, their commands may interfere, Smaritrid’s Sermom.

3. A horse is said to interfere, when the side of one of his shoes strikes against and hurts one of his fellocks; or the hitting one leg against another, and striking off the skin. Parriep’s Diet.

INTERCEALENT. adj. [interjunct, Lat.]

Flowing between.

Air may consist of any terecine or aqueous corpuscles, kept swimming in the interjunct celestial matter.

Goethe.

INTERCEALSENT. adj. [inter and fereis, Lat.]

Shining between.

INTERCEALSED. adj. [interjunctus, Lat.]

Poured or scattered between.

The ambient air wide interfused, Embracing round this florid earth. Milton.

INTERCEALGENCY. n. s. [from interjecas, Lat.]

1. The act or state of lying between.

England and Scotland is divided only by the interjecas of the Tweed and some desert ground. Hale.

2. The thing lying between.

Its fluctuations are so infinite, which winds, storms, showers, and every interjecy irregularizes. Brown.

INTERCEALSANT. adj. [interjunct, Lat.]

Intervening; lying between.

The sea itself must be very broad, and void of little interjunct, else will it yield pleasant argument of quared to the kingdom which it serveth.

Through this hole objects that were by sea, might be by land, distinctly, which would not at all be seen through other parts of the glasses, where the air was interjecas. Newton’s Opticks.

INTERCEALION. n. s. [interject, Fr. interjecas, Lat.]

1. A part of speech that discovers the mind to be seized or affected with some passion; such as are in English, O alas! ah! Clarke’s Latin Grammar.

Their wild natural notes, when they would express their passions, are at the best like natural interjection, to discover their passions or impressions. Hade’s Origin of Mankind.

2. Intervention; interposition; act of something coming between; act of putting something between.

Laughing causes a continual expansion of the breathing, with the loud noise which makes the interjection of laughing. Bacon.

INTERCEAL. n. s. [inter and join.]

To join mutually; to intermarry.

Whose passions and whose plots have broken their sleep.

To take the one the other, by some chance.

Some trick not worth an egg shall grow dear friends, and join their issues. Shakesp. Coriolanus.

INTERCEALS. n. adj. [inter, Lat. intercicar, Fr. intercal.]

Internal; inner; not outward; not superficial.

The fool-madness, that chuse by chow.

Not learning more than the fond eye doth teach.

Which play not to disintercal?

Shakesp.

The greater parts, thus sunk down, would harden, and constitute the intercal parts of the earth. Burnet.

INTERCEALKNOWLEDGE. n. s. [from and knowledge.]

Mutual knowledge.

All nations have intercalknowledge one of another, either by voyage into foreign parts, or by strangers that come to them. Bacon.

To INTERCEAL. v. a. [interrelasser, Fr.]

To intermix; to put one thing within another.

Some are to be intercelled between the divine readings of the law and prophets. Hooker.

The ambassadors intercelled, in their conference, the purpose of their master to match with the daughter of Maximilian. Boon.

They acknowledged what services he had done for the commonwealth, yet intercelling some others, wherewith they seemed to reproach him. Hyde.

Your argument is as strong against the use of rhyme in poesies as in plays; for the quick way where intercelled with dialogue. Dryden.

INTERCEALP. n. s. [inter and lapse.]

The flow of time between any two events.

These drugs are calcined into such salts, which, after a short intercelapse of time, produce coughs. Harvey.

To INTERCEAL. v. a. [entrecoller, Fr.]

1. To mix meat with bacon, or fat; to diversely lean with fat.

2. To interpose; to insert between.

Jests should be intercelled, after the Persian custom, by ages young and old. Cerce.

3. To diversely by mixture.

The laws of Normandy were the declaration of the English laws, and a transcript of them, though mingled and intercelled with many particular laws of their own, which altered the features of the original. Hade’s Laws of English.

4. Phillips has used this word very harshly, and probably did not understand it.

They intercelled their native drinks with choice Of strongest brandy. Phillips.
To interleave. v. a. [inter and leave.] To chequer a book by the insertion of blank leaves.

To interline. v. a. [inter and line.] 1. To write in alternate lines.
   When, by interlining Latin and English one with another, he has got a moderate knowledge of the Latin tongue, he may then advance farther.
   2. To correct by something written between the lines.

The muse invoke'd, sit down to write,
But out, correct, and interline.

Interlineation. n. s. [inter and lineation.] Correction made by writing between the lines.

Many clergymen write in so disordered a manner, with such frequent blotting and interlacings, that it is not always able to go on without perpetual hesitations.

To interlink. v. a. [inter and link.] To connect chains one to another; to join one in another.

The fair mixture in pictures causes us to enter into the subject which it imitates, and impress it more deeply into our imagination and our memory; these are two chains which are interlinked, which contain, and are at the same time contained.

Interlocution. n. s. [interlocution, Fr. interlocutio, Lat.]

1. Dialogue; interchange of speech.
   The plainest and most intelligible rehearsal of the psalms they favour not, because it is done by interlocution, and with a mutual return of sentences from side to side.

2. Preparatory proceeding in law; an intermediate act before final decision.
   These things are called accidental, because some new incident in judicature may emerge upon them, on which the judge ought to proceed by interlocution.

Interlocutor. n. s. [inter and locutor, Lat.]

   When the minister by exhortation raiseth them up, and the people by protestation of their readiness declare he speaketh not in vain unto them; these interlocutory forms of speech, what are they else but most effectual, partly testifications, and partly inducements of all pieties? Hooker.
   There are several interlocutory discourses in the holy Scriptures, though the persons speaking are not mentioned or referred to. Fidler.

2. Preparatory to decision.

To interloper. v. b. [inter and looper, Dut. to run.] To run between parties and intercept the advantage that one should have from the other; to traffic without a proper licence; to forestall; to anticipate irregularly.

The patron is desired to leave off this interloping trade, or admit the knights of the industry to their share.

Interlud. Interlude. n. s. [from interlude.] One who runs into business to which he has no right.

The swallow was a fly-catcher, and was no more an interloper upon the spider's right, than the spider was upon the swallow's. L'Estrange.

Interludian. adj. [interlacens, Lat.] Shining between.

Interlude. n. s. [inter and ludus, Lat.] Something played at the intervals of festivity; a farce.

When there is a queen, and ladies of honour attending her, there must sometimes be masques, and revells, and interludes. Bacon.

The emperor of Scythes hired Aristophanes to personate him on the stage, and, by the insinuations of those interludes, conveyed a hatred of him into the people, to me Government of the Tongue.

Dramas are but interludes, which fancy makes; When monarch reason sleeps, this unimock wakes.

Interludium. n. s. [inter and ludus, Lat.] Water interposed; interposition of a flood.

Those parts of Asia and America, which are now disjoined by the interludium of the sea, might have been formerly contiguous.

Intermediate. adj. [inter and medius, Lat.] Belonging to the time when the moon, about to change, is invisible.

We add the two Egyptian days in every month, the interludium and plenimensual exemptions. Browne.

The sun makes a circuit, and is silent as the moon.

When she deserts the night, She'll in her vacant interludium give.

[intermixture. n. s. [inter and mixture.] Marriage between two families, where each takes one and gives.

Because the alliances and intermediate marriages, among so small a people, might obstruct justice, they have a foreigner for judge of St. Mark's. Addison.

To intermarry. v. n. [inter and marry.] To marry some of each family with the other.

About the middle of the fourth century, from the building of Rome, it was declared lawful for nobles and plebeians to intermarry.

To intermeddle. v. a. [inter and meddle.] To interpose officiously.

The practice of Spain hath been by war, and by conditions of treaty, to intermediate with foreign states, and declare themselves protectors of General de Chur. Bacon.

Seeing the king was a sovereign prince, the emperor should not intermediate with ordering his subjects, or directing the affairs of his realm. Heyward.

There were no ladies who disposed themselves to intermediate in business.

To intermediate. v. a. [intermeddler, Fr.] To intermix; to mingle. This is perhaps misprinted for intermeddle.

Many other adventures are intermediate; as the love of Britannia and the virtuoseness of Belshazzar.

Intermeddler. n. s. [from intermediate.] One that interposes officiously; one that thrusts himself into business to which he has no right.

There's hardly a greater pest to government and families, than foolish talkers and solakers, and many intermeddlers.

Our allies, and our stock-jobbers, we suspect her majesty to have changed her secretary or treasurer, who, for the reasons that these officious intermeddlers demand'd their continuance, ought never to have been admitted into the least trust.

Shall strangers, saucy intermeddlers I say, Thus far, and thus, are you allow'd to punish? A. Phillips.

Intermediate. adj. [inter and medius, Lat.] Intervening; lying between; intervenient.

The love of God makes a man temperate in the midst of feasts, and is active enough without any intermediat appetites.

Taylor.

Intermediate. adj. [intermediet, Fr. inter and medius, Lat.] Intervening; interposed; holding the middle place or degree between two extremes.

Do not the most refregious raves excite the shortest vibrations for making a sensation of a deep violet, the least refregious the largest for making a sensation of deep red, and the several intermediate sorts of rays, vibrations of several intermediate sorts, and minglings of the several intermediate colours? Newton's Opticks.

An animal consists of solid and fluid parts, unless we consider them into several intermediate substances, as fat and phlegm. Arbuthnot.

Those general mists, which stand between the nearest and remotest, are called intermediate allures.

Intermediate. adv. [from intermediate.] By way of intervention.

To intermediate. v. a. [intermesser, Fr.] To mix; to mingle. Not in use.

By occasion hereof many other adventures are intermediated, but rather as accidents than intended.

Interment. n. s. [interment, Fr. from inter.] Burial; sepulture.

Intermigration. n. s. [intermigration, Fr. inter and migra, Lat.] Act of removing from one place to another, so that of two parties removing, each takes the place of the other.

Men have a strange variety in colour, stature, and humour; and from writing from the climate, though the continent be but one, as to the point of access, mutual intercourse, and possibility of intermarriages, wherein is reckoned some of the most, as fat and phlegm. Arbuthnot.

Interminable. adj. [interminable, Fr. in and termino, Lat.] Immense; admitting no boundary.

As if they would confine th' interminable, And tie him to his own prescript. Milton. Agamia.

Interminate. adj. [interminate, Fr. interminatus, Lat.] Unbounded; unlimited.

Within a thicket I repos'd; when round I railed up full leafy leaves in heaps, and found, Let fall from heaven, a sleep interminate. Chapman's Odyssey.

Intermination. n. s. [intermination, Fr. intermino, Lat.] Menace; threat.

The threats and intermediations of the Gospel, those terrors of the Lord, as goods may drive those brutish creatures who will not be attracted. Decay of Psalms.

To interminge. v. a. [inter and mingle.] To mingle; to mix; to put some things amongst others.

The church in her liturgies hath intermingled, with reason and decency, lessons taken out of the law and prophets. Hooker.

His church he comprehendeth a field, where tares, mixt with grapes, by all men, do grow intermingled with good corn. Huber.

My lord shall never rest; I'll intermingle every thing he does.

With Cassius's suit. Shakep. Othello. 1.002
INT

Here sailing ships delight the wand'ring eyes;
There trees and intermingled temples rise. Pope.

To INTERMINGLE. v. n. To be mixed or incorporated.

INTERMIS. n.s. [intermission, Fr. intermission, Lat.]

1. Cessation for a time; pause; intermediate stop.

Came a seeking post,
Delivered letters, spight of intermission.

Ben Jonson.

2. Intervene in time.

But, gentle heav'n,
Cut short the intermission; front to front,
Bring thou this scoundrel of Scotland and myself. Shak.

Words borrowed of antiquity, have the authority of years, and out of their intermission do win to themselves a kind of grace-like newness. Locke.

4. The space between the paroxysms of a fever, or any fits of pain; rest; pause of sorrow.

Rest or intermission none I find. Milton.

INTERMITTENT. adj. [from intermit.]

Coming by fits; not continual.

I reduced Ireland, after so many intermitting wars, to a perfect passive obedience. Howard's England's Tears.

As though there were any lassitude in nature, or justiness imaginable in professors, whose subject is under no intermission but continual way of mutation, this season is commonly termed the physicians vacation. Brown's Dialgym Errors.

To INTERMIT. v. a. [intermitto, Lat.]

To forbear any thing for a time; to interrupt.

If nature should intermit her course, and leave altogether, though it were but for a while, the observation of her own laws. Hooker.

Rain from the clouds, full upon your knees;
Pray to the gods, to intermit the plague.

That needs must light on this ingratitude. Shak. His mazed, lascivious son. Edward the Second, intermitted so

The course of glory.

Daniel's Civil War.

The setting on foot some of those arts that were once employed; and that would be but the reviving of those arts which were long before practised, though intermitted and interrupted by war. Hale.

Certain Indians, when a horse is running in his full career, leap down, gather any thing from the ground, and immediately leap up again, the horse not intermitting his course. Weldin.

Speech intermitted, thus began. Milton.

We are furnished with an armour from Heaven, but if we are remiss, or persuaded to lay by our arms, and intermit our guard, we may be surprized. Rogers.

To INTERMIT. v. n. To grow mild between the fits or paroxysms. Used of fevers.

INTERMITTENT. adj. [intermittent, Fr. intermittant, Lat.]

Coming by fits.

Next to those durable pains, short intermittent or swift recurrent pains do precipitate patients into consumptions. Harvey.

To INTERMIX. v. a. [inter and mixt.]

To mingle; to join; to put some things among others.

Her persuasions she intermixt with tears, affirming, that she would depart from him. Haye.

INTERNESION. n.s. [intercussion, Fr. intercussion, Lat.]

Endeavouring mutual destruction.

The Egyptians, however, made for them their dogs, and for their Faith made intercussion war. Huldrum.

INTERNATION. n.s. [intercucion, Fr. intercucion, Lat.]

Mutual destruction; massacre; slaughter.

INTERNATIONAL. n.s. [interpolation, Fr. interpola, Lat.]

Messenger between two parties.

In all extracts judicial one citation, monument, or extrajudicial interpolation is sufficient. Selden.

INTERNELATION. n.s. [interpolation, Fr. interpola, Lat.]

A summons; a call upon.

To do anything into a place to which it does not belong.

The Athenians were put in possession of Salamis by another law, which was cited by Sulan, or, as some think, interpolated by him for that purpose. Pepys.

To renew; to begin again; to carry on with intercussions. In this sense it is not in use.

This motion of the heavenly bodies themselves seems to be partly continued and intermitted, as the motion of the first movable, partly interpolated and interrupted. Hume.

That individual hath necessarily a consonant succession of interpolations, or motions, the pulses of the heart, and the successive motions of respiration. Hume.

INTERNATIONALISATION. n.s. [interpolation, Fr. interpola, Lat.]

Something added into the original matter. I have changed the situation of some of the Latin verses, and made many intercussions. Cowan to Pope.

INTERNATIONALISATOR. n.s. [Lat. interpola- tor, Fr.]

One that falsifies in counterfeit passages. You or your interpolator ought to have considered. Swift.

INTERNATIONALISAL. n.s. [from interpole.]

1. Interposition; agency between two persons.

The interpol of my lord of Canterburie's command for the publication of this mean discourse, may seem to take away my choice. South.

2. Intervention.

Very backward souls may be embarrassed by corrupted cases, whose influenceal sentences are intercepted by the interpol of the benighted creature. Glanville's Sequel.

INTERNIPUSE. n.s. [interponeo, Lat. interpoer, Fr.]

To place between; to make interveniens.

Some weeks the king did honourably interpose, both to give space to his brother's intercession, and to show that he had a conflict with himself what he should do. Bacon.

To thrust in as an obstruction, interposition, or inconvenience.

What watchful cares do interpose themselves between your eyes and night? Shakspere.

Deals ready stands to interpose his dart. Miss.

Human frailty will too often interpose itself among persons of the holiest function. Swift.

To offer as a succour or relief.

The common father of mankind seasonably interposed his hand, and rescued miserable man out of the gross stupidity and sensibility whereunto he was plunged. Woodward.

To INTERPOSE. v. n.

1. To mediate; to act between two parties.

2. To put in by way of interruption.

But, interpose Eleutherius, this objection may be made indeed almost against any hypothesis. Boyle.

To INTERPOSE. n.s. [from interpone.]

1. One that comes between others.
I. To INTERPRET. v. a. [interpreter, Fr. interprétateur, Lat.]. To explain; to translate; to decipher; to give a solution to; to clear by exposition; to expound.

One, but painted thus,

Would be interpreted perplex'd

Beyond self-explication.

Shakespeare. Cymbeline.

You should be women,

And yet your beards forbid me to interpret

What I see.

Shakespeare. Macbeth.

Pharaoh told them his dreams; but there was none that could interpret them unto him. Gen. xi. 9.

An excellent spirit, knowledge, and understanding, interpreting of dreams, and shewing of hard sentences, and dissolving of doubts, were found in the same Daniel.

Daniel, v. 2.

Hear his sighs, thou mate!

Unskilful with what words to pray, let me

Interpret for him.

Milton's Fair. Lost.

INTERPRETABLE. adj. [from interpret.]

Capable of being expounded or deciphered.

No man's face is actionable; these singularities are interpretable from more innocent causes. Collier.

INTERPRETATION. n.s. [interpretation, Fr. interprétation, Lat. from interpret.]

1. The act of interpreting; explanation.

This is a poor epitome of your's,

Which, by the interpretation of full time,

May show like all yourself.

Shakespeare. Coriol.

Look how we can, or sad or merry,

Interpretation will misquote our books.

Shakespeare.

2. The sense given by an interpreter; exposition.

If it be obscure or uncertain what they meant, charity, I hope, constrained me now, which standeth doubtful of their minds, to lay to the hardest and worst interpretation that their words can carry.

The primitive Christians knew how the Jews, who preceded our Saviour, interpreted these predictions, and the marks by which the Messiah would be discovered; and how the Jewish doctors, who succeeded him, deviated from the interpretations of their forefathers.

Addison.

3. Theory of explaining.

We beseech the reader to bear this great sign, and to give us the interpretation and use of it in mercy.

Bacon.

INTERPRETATIVE. adj. [from interpret.]

Collected by interpretation.

INTERRUPTIVE. n.s. Pronoun used in asking questions: as, who? what? which? whether?

INTERRUPTIVELY. adv. [from interpretive.]

IN form of a question.

INTERRUPTOR. n.s. [from interrupt.]

An asker of questions.

INTERRUPTORY. n.s. [from interruptoire, Fr.]

A question; an enquiry.

He with no more civility began in captious matters to put interrogatories unto him. Sidney.

Nur tune, nor place,

Will serve long interrogatories. Shakespeare. Cymbeline.

What earthly name to interrogatories.

Can think the free-born spirit of a sacred king? Shakespeare.

The examination was summed up with one question, Whether he was prepared for death? The boy was frightened out of his wits by the last dreadful interrogatory.

Addison.

INTERRUPTORY. adj. Containing a question; expressing a question; as an interrogatory sentence.

To INTERRUPT. v.a. [interrumpere, Fr. interruptus, Lat.]

1. To hinder the process of any thing by breaking in upon it.

Rage doth rend

Like interrupted waters, and o'erbear

What they are used to do in the interruption of the Heav'n of damnation.

Shakespeare.

He might securely enough have engaged his body of horse against their incomparable army, were he not under the necessity of interrupt his charge.

Clarendon.

This motion of the heavenly bodies seems partly interrupted, as that of the first movable interrupted and interrupted.

Hale.

2. To hinder one from proceeding by interruption.

Answer not before thou hast heard the cause; neither interrupt men in the midst of their talk.

Eccles. xi. 8.

3. To divide; to separate; to rescind from continuity.

INTERRUPT. adj. Containing a chasm.

See what thou rage

Transports our adversary, whom no bounds,

Nor yet the main abyss as wide interrupt, can hold?

Milton.

INTERRUPTEDLY. adv. [from interrupted.]

Not in continuity; not without stoppages.

The incident light that meets with a grosser liquor, will have its beams either refracted or imbolded, or reflected more or less interruptedly; then they would be, if the body had been unfashioned.

Dugall on Colours.

INTERRUPT. n.s. [from interrupt.]

He who interrupts.

INTERRUPTION. n.s. [interruption, Fr. interruption, Lat.]

1. Interposition; breach of continuity.

Places severed from the continent by the interruption of the sea. Hale's Origin of Manland.

2. Interposition; interruption.

You are to do the one as soon as you have given a stroke of the pencil to the other; lest the interruption of time cause you to lose the idea of one part.

Dugall's Discovery.

3. Hindrance; stop; let; obstruction.

Bloody England and Ireland gone.

Overhearing interruption, spite of France. Shakespeare.

4. Interruption.

This way of thinking on what we read, will be a rub only in the beginning; when custom has made it familiar, it will be dispatched without resting or interruption in the course of our reading.

Locke.
The sun shining through a large prism upon a comb placed immediately behind the prism, his light, which passed through the interstices of the teeth, fell upon a white paper; the breadth of the teeth were equal to their interstices, and seven teeth together with their interstices took up an inch.

Newton.

The force of the fluid will separate the smallest particles of any substance from which they are strained, so as to form a vacuum interstices in those places where they cohered before.

Ahbuthon.

2. Time between one act and another.

I will point out the interstices of time which ought to be between one citation and another.

Alys'g Parergon.

INTERSTICEAL. adj. [inter and stel'le, Lat.] Interferring between the stars.

The interstellar sky hath so much affinity with the stars that there is a rotation of that as well as the star.

Bacon.

INTERSTICE. n. s. [interstitium, Lat. inter- stice, Fr.] 1. Space between one thing and another.

2. The sun shining through a large prism upon a comb placed immediately behind the prism, his light, which passed through the interstices of the teeth, fell upon a white paper; the breadth of the teeth were equal to their interstices, and seven teeth together with their interstices took up an inch.

Newton.

The force of the fluid will separate the smallest particles of any substance from which they are strained, so as to form a vacuum interstices in those places where they cohered before.

Ahbuthon.

2. Time between one act and another.

I will point out the interstices of time which ought to be between one citation and another.

Alys'g Parergon.

INTERSTICAL. adj. [from interstice.] Containing interstices.

In oiled papers, the interstitial division being actuated by the accession of oil, becomes transparent.

Brown.

INTERTEXUTRE. n. s. [inter tex'tur, Lat.] Diversification of things mingled or wove one among another.

To INTERWINE. v. a. [inter and twin, or to INTERTWIN, a. and s. or twist.] To unite by twisting one in another.

Under some concussion of shades, Whose branching arms thick interwined might unsew;

From dews and sprints of night his shelter'd bread.

Milton.

INTERVAL. n. s. [interval, Fr. intervallement, Lat.] 1. Space between places; interstice; vacancy; space unoccupied; void place; vacancy; vacant space.

With any obstacle let all the light be now stopped which passes through any one interstice of the teeth, so that the range of colours which comes from thence may be taken away, and you will see the light of the rest of the ranges to be expanded into the place of the range taken away, and there to be coloured.

Newton's Opticks.

2. Time passing between two assignable points.

The century and half following was a very happy period, the intervals between every war being so short.

Sheik.

3. Remission of a delirium or distemper.

Though he had a long illness, considering the great heat with which it raged, yet his interval of sense being few and short, left but little room for the offices of devotion.

Aubery.

INTERVENE. v. a. [intervenio, Lat. intervenir, Fr.] 1. To come between things or persons.

To make intervals.

While so near each other thus all day
Our task we choose, what wonder, if so near,

Looks interven, and smiles?

Milton.

3. To cross unexpectedly.

Erect the danger of an action, and the possibilities which accompany, and every cross of time that can intervein, to be either a mercy on God's part, or a fault on ours.

Tudor.

INTERVENING. adj. [intervenies, Lat. intervenient, Fr.] Intercedent; interspersed; passing between.

There be intervenent in the rise of eight, in tones two blemish or half notes.

Bacon.

INTERVENTION. n. s. [intervention, Fr. intervisito, Lat.] 1. Agency between persons.

Let us decide our quarrels at home, without the intervention of any foreign power.

Temples.

God will judge the world in righteousness by the intervention of the man Christ Jesus, who is the Saviour, as well as the judge of the world. Thetb.

2. Agency between antecedents and consequents.

In the dispensation of God's mercies to the world, some things he will do himself, others by the intervention of natural means, and by the mediation of such instraments as he has appointed.

I Thess. 3.

3. Interposition; the state of being interspersed.

Sound is shut out by the intervention of that lax membrane, and not suffer'd to pass into the inward ear.

Holker.

To INTERVENE. v. a. [intervento, Lat.] 1. To turn to another course.

The duke interverted the bargain, and gave the poor widow of Epiphanus for the books five hundred pounds.

Wotton.

2. To turn to another use.

INTERCLAVE. n. s. [intervenere, Fr.] Mutual sight; sight of each other. It is commonly used for a formal, appointed, or important meeting or conference.

The day will come, when the passions of former enmity being allayed, we shall with ten times re-doubled tokens of reconciled love show ourselves each to the other, the same, which Joseph and the brethren of Joseph were at the time of their interview in Egypt.

Holker.

Hence were, that the interview between England and France might, through their unity, breed him some prejudice.

Shakspere, H. VIII.

Such happy interview, and fair event
Of love, and youth not lost, songs, garlands, flow'res,

And charming symphonies, aimed at the heart
Of Adam.

Milton's Paradise Lost.

To INTERVOLVE. v. a. [intervolvo, Lat.] To involve one within another.

Mystical dance! which yonder starry sphere
Of planets, and of fix'd, in all her wheels
Resounds nearest; zones intricate,

Intervolve, and interwove.

Then most, when most irregular, they seem. Milton.

To INTERWAVE. v. a. [preter, interwove, part, pass. interwoven, interwove, or interweaved. [inter and wave.]] To mix one with another in a regular texture; to intermingle.

Then laid he down Under the hospitable covert nigh
Of trees thick interwove.

Milton.

At last
Words interweave with sighs found out their way weren'.

Leant me down to watch upon a bank
With Ivy campeled, and interweave
With flinting honeysuckle.

Milton.

None Can say love utter end, and art begins.

But mix't like it' elements, and born like twins.

So interweave'd, so like, so much the same:

None, this mere nature, that mere art can name.

The proud theatres disclose the scene,

Which interwoven Britons seem to raise,

And show the triumph which their shame displays.

Dryden.

He so interweave truth with probable fiction, that he puts a pleasing fallacy upon us. Dryden.

It appeared a vast scene painted with islands, that were covered with fruits and flowers, and

1065
The Turk has sought to extinguish the ancient memory of those people which he has subjected and infestat.

Now tell all to themselves in
Both what they judge, and what they choose; for so
I form'd them free, and free must they remain
Till they themselves shall conquer.

She soothes, but never can intamitate my mind:
Why may not peace and love for once be join'd?

INTIMALMENT. n. s. [from intamale.] Servitude; slavery.

Moses and Aaron, sent from God to claim
His people from intamale, they return
With glory and spoil back to their promised land.

To intomath. v. a. [in and throne.] To raise to royalty; to seat on a throne:
commonly intomath. One, chief, in glorious dignity intomath'd, Shines o'er the rest. Thomas's Summer.

INTIMACY. n. s. [from intamate.] Close familiarity.

It is in our power to confine our friendships and intimacies to men of virtue.

INTIMATE. adj. [intamade, Span. intimus, Lat.]

1. Intimost; inward; intestine.

They knew
That what I intimated was of God. I knew
From intimate impulse. Milton's Agonistes.

Fearing so being intimate to our natures, it is the stipulation of Tiltown.

2. Near; not kept at distance.

Moses was with him in the retirements of the Mount, received there his private instructions; and when the multitude were thunder'd away from any approach, he was honoured with an intimate and immediate admission. South.

3. Familiar; closely acquainted.

United by this sympathetic bond. You great families, your and each other, Bacon.

INTIMATE. n. s. [intimato, Span. intimo,
Fr. intimus, Lat.] A familiar friend; one who is trusted with our intimated words.

The design was to entertain his reason with a more equal converse, assign him his intimated whose intellect as much corresponded with his as did the outward form. Government of the Tongue.

To INTIMATE. v. a. [intimater, Fr. intimare, low Lat.] To hint; to point out indirectly, or not very plainly.

Alexander Van Sachten tells us, that by a way he intimates, may be made a mercury of copper, not of the silver colour of other mercurials but green. Boyle.

The names of simple ideas and substances, with the abstract ideas in the mind, intimation some real existence, which was derived from their original catch.

To intimate, a term that is ever heard in
And intimates eternity to man. Addison's Cato.

INTIMATELY, adv. [from intamate.]

1. Closely; with mixture of parts.

The same estate is observed in the circulation of the cases with the body, by mixing it intamately with the parts of the body to which it is to be assimilated. Arbutnot.

2. Nearly; inseparably.

Quality, as it regards the mind, has its rise from knowledge and judgment, is that which is more essential to us, and most intimately united with us.

Arbutnot, Spectator.

3. Familiarly; with close friendship.

INTIMATION. n. s. [intimation, Fr. from intimate.] Hint; obscure or indirect declaration or direction.

Let him strictly observe the first stirrings and intimations; the first hints and whispers of good and evil that pass in his heart.

INTIME. adj. Inward; being within the mass; not being external, or on the surface; internal. Not used.

The composition or dissolution of mixed bodies, which is the chief work of chemists, and requires an intime application of the agents, water hath the principal and excess over earth.

INTIME. n. s. [inner, better intimacy, sentiment.] Wholeness; integrity.

So shall all times find me the same;
You this intimacies both befriend,
Who have the pattern with you still. Donne.

INTO. prep. [in and to.]

1. Noting entrance with regard to place:
opposed to out of.

Water introduces into vegetables the matter it bears along with it. Woodward's Nat. Hist.

Acid substances, which pass into the capillary ducts, must irritate them into greater contraction.

Arbutnot on Aliments.

2. Noting entrance of one thing into another.

It will require by mere continuance an habitual inclination to the site it held, how much more education, being a constant plant and infect, induce by custom good habits into a reasonable creature. Hooker.

To give life to that which has yet no being, is to frame a living creature, fashion the parts, and having fitted them together, to put into them a living soul. Locke.

3. Noting penetration beyond the outside, or some action which reaches beyond the superficies or open part.

To look into letters already opened or drop is held to be penetration. Pope.

4. Noting inclusion real or figurative.

They have denominated some herbs solar and some lunar, and such like toys put into great words.

Baron.

5. Noting a new state to which any thing is brought by the agency of a cause.

Our bodies may be reduced into other substances than such as they are divided into by the fire.

Boyle.

A man must sin himself into a love of other men sins; for a bare notion of this black art will not carry him so far. South.

Sure thou art born to some peculiar fate.

When the mad people are in such a state,
To look them into duty; and command
An awful silence with thy hooked hand. Dryden.

1006
INT

It concerns every man that would not taste away his soul, and fold himself into irrecoverable misery, with the greatest seriousness to enquire into these matters. Teldon.

He is not a fair being, that he should be tied into compliance by the force of asidious application.

In hollow bottoms, if any creatures chance to rise, they naturally spread themselves into lakes, before they can find any issue. Additions on Italy.

It would have been all irrevocably lost, was it not by this means collected and brought into one main word.

Woodward.

Why are these positions charged upon us as their side author; and the reader led into a belief, that they were never before maintained by any English or Italian writer. Teldon.

It is no ways congruous, that God should be always frightening men into an acknowledgment of the truth, who were made to be wrount upon by calm evidence.

A man may where and drink himself into atheism; but it is impossible he should think himself into it. Bentley.

INTOLERABLE. adj. [intolerabilis, Lat. intolerable, Fr.]

1. Insufferable; not to be endured; not to be born; having any quality in a degree too powerful to be endured.

If we bring into one day's thoughts the evil of many, certain and uncertain, what will never be, our load will be as intolerable as it is unreasonable. Taylor.

His and presence did the crowd surprise; Nor durst the rash spectator meet his eyes; Eyes that confess'd him born for kingly sway, So fierce, the rash'd intolerable day. Dryden.

Some more quickly weary of one thing; the same study long continued in is as intolerable to them, as the appearing long in the same clothes is to a court lady. Locke.

From Param's top th' Amity rode, Intolerable day proclaimed the God. Browne.

2. Bad beyond suferance.

INTOLERABLENESS. n.s. [from intolerable.]

Quality of a thing not to be endured.

INTOLERANTLY. adv. [from intolerable.]

To a degree beyond endurance.

INTOLERANT. adj. [intolerant, Fr.]

Not enduring; not able to endure.

Too great moisture affects human bodies with one class of diseases, and too great dryness with another; both kinds being limited and intolerable of excesses. Arbuthnot.

INTOLERABLE. v.a. [in and rob.]

To inclose in a funeral monument; to bury. What commandment had the Jews for the ceremony of their dead, after which custom notwithstanding our Lord was contented that his most precious blood should be intomb'd? W. Harker.

It's night's predominaire or the day's shame, That darkness does the face of earth intomb'd Shak. Mighty heroes more majestick shades, And youths intomb'd before their father's eyes. Dryden.

To intone. r.a. [in to, Lat.]

To thunder. Dict.

INTONATION. n.s. [intonation, Fr. from intonate, the act of thundering. Dict.

INTONE. r.n. [from intone, or rather from tone; intoner, Fr.]

To make a slow protracted noise.

So swells each wind-pipe; as intimus to ass Haemorrh. twang, Pope's Dunciad.

INTORI. r.a. [intorto, Lat.]

To twist; to wrench; to wring.

The brain is a congeries of glands, that separate the finer parts of the blood, called animal spirits; and a man roars at it, as to drink of it, to think himself intoried and wound up together. Arbuthnot.

To intrench. v.n. [in and trencher, Fr.]

To invade; to encroach; cut off part of what belongs to another; with on.

Little I desire my sceptre should intrench on God's sovereignty, which is the only king of men's consciences. Teldon.

That crawling insect, who from mud began, Would by my beaks, and kindled into man! Durst he, who dares but for my pleasure live, Intrench on love, my great prerogative. Dryden.

We are not to intrench upon truth in any conversation, but least of all with children. Locke.

INTRODUCE. v.a. [introitus, Lat.]

1. To break with hollows.

His face Deep scars of thunder had intrenched', and care Sat on his faded cheek. Milton's Parad. Lost.

2. To fortify with a trench; as, the allies were intrenched in their camp.

INTRENTIAL. adj. [This word, which is, I believe, found only in Shakespeare, is thus explained: The intrenchant air means the air which suddenly encroaches and closes upon the space left by any body which had passed through it. Hamner. I believe Shakespeare intended rather to express the idea of indivisibility or invulnerableness, and derived intrenchant, from in, privative, and trencher to cut; intrenchant is indeed properly not cutting, rather than not to be cut; but this is not the only instance in which Shakespeare confounds words of active and passive signification.] Not to be divided; not to be wounded; indivisible.

As easy may'st thou the intrenchant air With thy keen sword impress, as make me bleed. Shakesp.

INTREMBLE. n.s. [from intrench.]

Fortification with a trench.

INTREPID. adj. [intrepide, Fr. intrepidus, Lat.]

Fearless; daring; bold; brave.

Argyle

Calm and intrepid in the very threat Of sulphurous war, on Teniers dreadful field. Thomson.

INTREPIDITY. n.s. [intrepidity, Fr.]

Fearlessness; courage; boldness.

I could not sufficiently wonder at the intrepidity of the devout young man, who preferred to walk upon my body, without trembling Galilee.

INTREPIDLY. adv. [from intrepide.]

Fearlessly; boldly; daringly.

He takes the globe for the scene; he launches forward intrepide, like one to whom no place is new. Pope.

INTRICACY. n.s. [from intricate.]

State of being entangled; perplexity; involve; complication of facts or notions.

The part of Ulysses in Homer's Odyssey is much admired by Aristotle, as perplexing that fable with very agreeable plots and intricacies, by the many adventures in his voyage, and the subtilty of his behaviour. Addison.

INTREPLICATE. adj. [intre'nchant.]

Entangled; perplexed; involved; complicated; obscure.

Much of that we are to speak may seem to a number perhaps tedious, perhaps obscure, dark and intricate. Hooke.

His style was fit to convey the most intricate business to the understanding with the utmost clearness. Addison.
To INTRICATE. v. a. [from the adjective.] To perplex, to darken. Not proper, nor in use. Alterations of sinname have so intricately, or rather obscured the truth of our pedigrees, that it will be no little hard labour to deduce them. Cam. Grew.

INTRICATELY. adv. [from intricate.] With invocation of one in another; with perplexity. The variety of distinctions into which we are so intricately engaged, gave occasion to this discourse. Sec. Vol.

INTRICATENESS. n. s. [from intricate.] Perplexity; invocation; obscurity. He found such intricateness, that he could see no end of the matter. Sidney.

INTRIGUE. n. s. [intrigue, Fr.] 1. A plot; a private transaction in which many parties are engaged; usually an affair of love.

These are the grand intrigues of man,
These his great thoughts, and these his chief desires.
Flam. Jn.

A young fellow long made love, with much affectation and intrigue, to a rich widow. Addis, Guardian. Nothing of a comedy is represented victorious in all his intrigues. Swift.

Now love is dwindled to intrigue,
And marriage grown a sorry race. Shak. Sonnet.

2. Intricacy; complication. Little in use.

Though this vicioty of ourselves to ourselves cannot give us the full prospect of all the intrigues of our nature, yet we have much more advantage to keep ourselves, than to know other things without us. Hume's Origin of Mind.

3. The complication or perplexity of a fable or poem; artful invocation of feigned transaction.

As causes are the beginning of the action, the opposite designs against that of the hero are the middle of it, and form that difficulty or intrigue which makes up the greater part of the poem. Pope.

To INTRIGUE. n. s. [intrigue, Fr. from the noun.] To form plots; to carry on private designs, commonly of love.

INTRIGUER. n. s. [intriguer, Fr. from intrigue.] One who busies himself in private transactions; one who forms plots; one who pursues women.

I desire that intrigues will not make a pimp of my soul, and convey their thoughts to one another.

Ibn.

INTRIGUINGLY. adv. [from intricate.] With intrigue; with secret plotting.

INTRINSICAL. adj. [intrinsicus, Lat. intrinsic, Fr.] This word is now generally written intrinsic, contrary to etymology.

1. Internal; solid; natural; not accidental, not merely apparent. These measure the laws of God not by the intrinsic goodness and equity of them, but by the terms and subordinations which they find in their own hearts against them. Tilt.

The near and intrinsic, and convincing arguments of the being of God, is from human nature itself. Bentley.

2. Intimate; closely familiar. Out of use.

He falls into intricate society with Sir John Graham, who dissuaded him from marriage. Wat.

Sir Falk Creveld is a man in appearance intricate with him, or at least admitted to his melancholy hours. Wotton.

3. Internally; naturally; really. A light is absolutely and intrinsically evil.

Smith. Every one of his pieces is an ingot of gold, intrinsically and solidly valuable. Prior.

4. Within; in the inside.

In his countenance no open alteration; but the less he showed without, the more he wrought intricately. Wotton.

If once the motion of the matter of itself acquire it again; nor till it be thrust by some other body from without, or intricately moved by an immaterial self-active substance, but that can only be done by a mind. Bentley.

INTRINSIC. adj. [intrinsicus, Lat.]

1. Inward; internal; real; true. Intrinsich goodness consists in accordance, and sin in contrariety to the secret will of God, as well as to his revealed. Hammond's Pandects.

2. Not depending on accident; fixed in the nature of the thing.

The difference between worth and merit, strictly taken; that is, a man's intrinsic; this, his current value.

Great, his fame, like gold, the more 'tis try'd
The more shall its intrinsic worth proclaim. Prior. Beautiful as a jewel set in gold, which, though it adds little to intrinsic value, yet improves the lustre, and attracts the eyes of the beholder. Rogers.

INTRINSICATE. adj. (This word seems to have been ignorantly formed between intricate and intrinsical.) Perplexed; entangled. Not in use.

To intrunse, intrusio. Like rats, oft bite the holy cords in twain, Too intricate Tantowre. Shak. King Lear.

With thy sharp teeth this knot intricate
Of life at once untie. Shad. Antony and Cleopatra.

INTRODUCTIVE. adj. [introductivus, Lat.] Previous; serving as a means to something further.

This introductory discourse itself is to be butt an essay, not a book. Boyle.

INTRODUCTION. n. s. [introduction, Lat.] Entrance; the act of entering.

INTRODUCE. v. a. [introduct, Fr.] The beginning of the introduction the beginning of public devotions.

INTROSPECTION. n. s. [introspection, Lat.] 1. The act of sending in.

If sight be caused by introduction, or receiving in the form of that which is seen, contrary species or forms shall be received confusedly together, which makes the doctrine of Providence.

All the reason that I could ever hear suffered by the chief factors for a general introduction of all sects would be persuaded, is, that those who separate from us are still and obstinate, and will not submit to the rules of our church, and the proceedings of our Synod. South.

2. (In the Scottish law.) The act of intermeddling with another's effects; as, he shall be brought to an account for his introductions with such an estate.

INTROSPECT. v. a. [introspectus, Lat.] To look in; to let in; to admit.

INTROSPECT. n. s. [from introspect.] A view of the inside.

The settings of the mind or imagination itself, by way of reflection or introspection of themselves, are discernible by man. Hale.

I was forced to make an introduction into my own mind, and introduced that idea of beauty which I had formed in my own imagination. Dryden.

INTROVENSION. adj. [intro and venio, Lat.] Entering; coming in.

Scarcely any condition which is not exhausted and declined, from the constitution of these nations, either by commerce or conquest. Brown.

INTRODUCE. v. a. [introductus, Lat.] To make in unmelancholy by a kind of violence; to enter without invitation or permission.

You here, who want wit, your want wants edge And manners to introduce where I am gauc'd. Shak.

The Jewish religion was yet in possession; and therefore that might well enter, as not to intro- duction, it was to bring its warrant from the same hand of omnipotence. South.

2. It is followed by on before persons, or personal possessions.

Forgive me, sir, if officious friendship
Introduces on your person, but comes thus late.

To great yews with the tidings of Bove. Dry. Some thoughts rise and intrude upon us, while we would be tranquill; others fly from us, when we would hold them. Wats.

3. To encroachment; to force in uncalled or unpermitted; sometimes with into.

Let no man beguile you of your reward, in a voluntary humility of mind, intruding into those things which he hath not seen by his bodily mind. Col. ii. 16.
INV

1. Weakness; want of cogency.

2. Want of bodily strength. This is no
English meaning.

He ordered, that none who could work should be idle; and that none who could not work, by age, sickness, or invalidity, should want. Temple.

Invulnerable. adj. [in and valuable] Precious above estimation; inestimable.

The faith produced by terror would not be so free an act as it ought, to which are annexed all the glorious and invaluable privileges of believing.

Invariable. adj. [in and varius, Lat. invariable, Fr.] Unchangeable; constant.

Being not able to design times by days, months, or years, they thought best to determine these separations by some known and invariable signs, and such did they conceive the rising and setting of the sun.

Brown.

The rule of good and evil would not appear uniform and invariable, but different, according to men's different complexions and inclinations.

Invariableness. n. s. [from invariable] Immutable; constancy.

Invariably. adv. [from invariable] Unchangeably; constantly.

He, who steereth his course invariable by this rule, takes the surest way to make all men praise him.

Invasion. n. s. [invasion, Fr. invasio, Lat.]

1. Hostile entrance upon the rights or possessions of another; hostile encroachment.

We made an invasion upon the Cherokees.

Susan.

Reason finds a secret grief and remorse from every invasion that sin makes upon innocence, and that must render the first entrance and admission of sin uneasy.

South.

The handful of th' Ammonian shore
Shall bear the dreadful rumour from afar,
Of arm'd invasion, and embrace the war.

Drieden.

William the Conqueror invaded England about the year 1060, which means this; that taking the duration, from our Saviour's time till now, for one entire length of time, it shews at what distance this invasion was from the two extremes.

Locke.

What demonstrates the plague to be endemic to Egypt, is its invasion and going off at certain seasons.

Arabian.

Invasive. adj. [from invade.] Entering hostily upon other men's possessions; not defensive.

I must come closer to my purpose, and not make more invasive wars abroad, when, like Hamanial,
I am called back to the defence of my country.

Drieden.

Let other monarchs, with invasive hands,
Lesse their people, and extend their hands;
By gasping nations huddled and they'd,
Lord of the deserts that their swords had made.

Arabian.

Inventive. n. s. [inventive, Fr. inventive, low Lat.]

1. A censure in speech or writing; a reproachable accusation.

Plain men desiring to serve God as they ought,
but being not so skillful as to unmask themselves,
where the snares of gluing speech do lie to entangle them, are in mind not a little troubled, when they hear so bitter invectives against that which this church hath taught them to reverence as holy, to approve as lawful, and to observe as beneficent for the practice of Christian duty.

Hooker.

If we take satyr, in the general significance of the word, for an invective, 'tis almost as old as veronica.

Drieden's Journal.

2. It is used with against.

So deep're thieves, all hopeless of their lives,
Breathe out invectives against the officers.

Shakespeare.

Casting off respect, he fell to bitter invectives against the French king.

Bacon's Henry VI.

3. Less properly with.

Whilst we censure others, we may indeed be in the wrong; and that the invectives we make at supposed errors fall back with a rebounded force upon our own real faults.

Dryden.

Invective. adj. [from the noun.] Satirical; abusive.

Let him read, let his inventive muse
Have four and twenty letters to abuse.

Drieden.

Invectively. adv. Satirically; abusively.

Thus most invectively be peregrated through
The body of the country, city, county,
Vex, and of this our life; swearing that we
Are mere usurpers, tyrants.

Shakespeare.

To INVEIGLE. v. a. [invei/d, Lat.] To utter censure or reproach; with against.

I cannot blame him for invectivag so sharply against his enemies, in the age.

Drieden.

He invectives severely against the folly of parties, in returning scandalous to retain their his.

Arbuthnot.

Invenger. n. s. [from inveigh.] Vehemoral pillar.

One of these inveighers against mercury, in seven weeks, could not cure one small herpes in the paran.

To INVEIGLE. v. a. [inveiglo1, Ital. Minshew; inveogle, or inveugler, Fr. Skinner and Junius.] To persuade to something bad or hurtful; to wheedle; to allure; to seduce.

Most false Duessa, royal richly dight,
That easy was to inveigle weaker sail,
Was, by her wicked arts and witty skill,
Too false and strong for earthly skill or might.

Shakespeare.

Achilles hath inveigled his fool from him. Shak.
Yet have they many hats and guilful spells,
To inveigle and invite th' unwary sense
Of them that pass unweeding by the way.

Shakespeare.

T' inveigle and draw in the rabble. Hudibras.

Those drops of prettiness, scatteringly sprinkled amongst the creatures, were designed to extol our conceptions, not inveigle or detain our passions.

Bygone.

I leave the use of gallicker to such as are inveigled into the gout by the use of too much drinking.

Temple.

The inveigling a woman, before she is come to years of discretion, should be as criminal as the seducing of her before she is ten years old.

Spectator.

To INVENT. v. a. [inventer, Fr. in-venlion, Lat.]

1. To discover; to find out; to excogitate; to produce something not made before.

The substance of the service of God, as far forth as it hath in it any thing more than the law of reason doth teach, may not be invented of men, but must be received from God himself.

Hooker.

By their count, which lovers books invent,
The sphere of Cupid forty years contains.

Spenser.

Matter of mirth enough, though there were none
She could devise, and thousand ways invent
To feed her foolish humour and vain pomatum.

Fairy Queen.
Inventive. adj. [inventif, Fr. from inventer.]

1. Quick at contrivance; ready at expedien
These have the inventive heads for all purposes, and roundest tongues in all matters. Shakespeare.

Her fatality from the temple drew. Dryden.

The inventive god, who never fails his part. Inspires the wit, when once he warms the heart. Dryden.

2. Having the power of excretion or fiction. As he had an inventive brain, so there never lived any man that believed better than himself. Raleigh.

Reason, remembrance, wit, inventive art, No nature, but immortal, can impart. Denham.

Investor, n. r. [inventor, Lat.] 1. A finder out of something new. It is written likewise inventor. We have the statue of your Columbus, that discovered the West Islands, also the inventor of ships: your Monk, that was the inventor of ordinance, and of gunpowder. Bacon.

Studious they appear Of arts to publish life; inventors rare, Unmindful of their maker. Milton. Paradise Lost.

Why are these positions charged upon me as their sole author and inventor, and the reader led into a false credit and opinion? words in a volume, even to every person of virtue? Atterbury.

2. A contriver; a framor. In an ill sense. In this observation, purposes misconstrue, Falls on the inventors heads. Shakespeare.

Investorilly adv. [from inventory, whence perhaps inventorially.] In manner of an inventory. To divide inventorily, would dizzy the arithmetick of memory. Shakespeare. Hamlet.

Inventory. n. s. [inventorie, Fr. inventarium, Lat.] An account or catalogue of moveables. I found, Forsooth, an inventory, thus importing, The several parishes of his plate. Shakespeare. The leanness that afflicts us, the object of our misery, is as an inventory to particularize their abundance; our sufferings is a gain to them. Shakespeare. Coriolanus.

Where look, For yourselves dare not go, o'er Cheshire books, Shall find their wardrobe's inventory. Donne.

It was of much consequence to have such an inventory of nature, wherein, as, on the one hand, nothing should be wanting, so nothing reposed on the other. Green's Travels.

It persuades the children of Eve are reckoned in the inventory of their goods and chattels; and it is usual, when a man sells a bale of silk, to test half a dozen women into the bargain. Addison.

To Inventory, r. a. [inventor, Fr.] To register; to place in a catalogue. I will give out divers schedules of my beauty: it shall be inventoried, and every particle and utensil laid down. Shakespeare.

A man looks on the love of his friend as one of the richest possessions: the philosopher thought friends were to be inventoried as well as goods. Government of the Tongue.

Invettress. n. s. [inventrice, Fr. from inventor.] A female that invents. The arts, with all their repute of lesser trades, History and Tradition tell us when they had their beginning; and how many of their inventresses and inventors were defiled. Gray.

Inventress of the vocal frame; The sweet enthusiasm, from her sacred store, Endow'd the fairest narrow bounds. Dryden.

Inverse. adj. [invers, Fr. inversus, Lat.] Inverted; reciprocal: opposed to direct. It is so called in proportion, when the fourth term is so much greater than the third, as the second is less than the first; or so much less than the third as the second is greater than the first.

Every part of matter tends to every part of matter with a force, which is always in a direct proportion of the quantity of matter, and an inverse duplicate of the distance of the bodies. Boyle.

Inversion. n. s. [inversion, Fr. invention, Lat.] 1. Change of order or time, so as that the last is first, and first last. If he speaks truth, it is upon a subtle inversion of the precept of God, to do good that evil may come of it. Brereton.

'Tis just the inversion of an act of parliament; your lordship first signed it, and then it was passed among the lords and commons. Dryden.

2. Change of place, so that each takes the room of the other. To INVERT, r. a. [inverter, Lat.] 1. To turn upside down; to place in contrary method or order to that which was before. With fate inverted, shall I humbly bow? And some proud prince, in wild Nimble horn, Pray to accept in my scorn! Walter. Ask not the cause why sunny Spring So long delays her flowr's to bear, And Winter storms invert the year. Dryden.

Poetry and oratory omit things essential, and invent and actions, to place every thing in the most affecting light. Hars.

2. To place the last first. Yes, every poet is a fool; By demonstration Ned can shew it Happy, could Ned's inverted rule Prev't every fool be so neat. Prior.

3. To divert; to turn into another channel; to imbezze. Instead of this convert or invert is now commonly used. Saladman charged him bitterly with inventing his treasures to his own private use, and having secret intelligence with his enemies. Knolles's History of the Turks.

Invertedly adv. [from inverted.] In contrary or reversed order. Placing the foremost of the eye to the hole of the window of a darkened room, we have a pretty landscape of the objects abroad, invertedly painted on the paper, on the back of the eye. Derham.

To INVEST, r. a. [investir, Fr. investir, Lat.] 1. To dress; to clothe; to array. It has in or with before the thing superinduced or conferred. Their gesture sly, Invest in rank lean chesks and war-worn coats, Presented them onto the gazing moon, So many horrid ghosts. Shakespeare. Henry V.

There was a mantle didst invest The rising world of waters. Milton. Let the eyes shine forth in their full lustre; Invest them with thy loveliest smits, put on Thy choicer looks. Dryden's Sophy.

2. To place in possession of a rank or office. When we sanctify or hallow churches, that which we do is only to testify that we made places of public resort, that we invest God himself with them, and that we sever them from common use. Holder.

After the death of the other archbishop, he was invested in that high dignity, and settled in his palace at Lambeth. Pope.

The practice of all ages, and all nations, has been to do honour to those who are invested with publick place. Atterbury.

3. To adorn; to grace; as clothes or ornaments.

Investment. adj. [investimenti, Lat.] Covering; clothing. The shells served as pams or moulds to this sand, which, when consolidated and freed from its investent shell, is of the same shape as the cavity of the shell. Huxley.

Investigable. adj. [from investigate.] To be searched out; discoverable by rational disposition.

When in such sort we are investigable, that the knowledge of us is general, the world hath always been acquainted with us. Holder.

In deed, as much as a greater, the greatness whereof is by reason investigable, and may be known. Holder.

To INVESTIGATE, r. a. [investige, Lat.] To search out; to find out by rational disposition. Investigate the variety of motions and figures made by the organs for articulation. Holder on Speech.

From the present appearances investigate the powers and forces of nature, and from these accounts for future observations. Chalmers.

Investigation. n. s. [investigation, Fr. investigation, Lat.] 1. The act of the mind by which unknown truths are discovered. Not only the investigation of truth, but the communication of it also, is often practised in such a method as neither agrees precisely to synthetical or analytica. Hales.

Presumptive truth, the patient force of thought investigation calm, whose silent powers Commands the world. Thomson's Summer.

2. Examination. In your travels I hear much of: my own shall never more lie in a strange land, but a different investigation of my own territories. Pope to Swift.

Investiture. n. s. [Fr.] 1. The right of giving possession of any manner, office, or benefice.

He had refused to yield up to the pope the investiture of bishops, and collation of ecclesiastical dignities within his dominions. Raleigh's Essay.

2. The act of giving possession.

Investment. n. s. [in and vestament.] Dress; clothes; garment; habit. OJhes do not believe his vows; for they are broken.

Not of that die which their investments show not.

You, my lord archbishop, Who sees us by a civil peace maintain'd Whose heard the silver hand of peace hath touch'd, Whose hand's the peaceful ere the peace hath touch'd. Shakespeare. Whose white investments figure innocence. The dove, and every blessed spirit of peace; Wherefore do we so translate yourself Out of the speech of peace, that bears such grace, Into the harsh and boisterous tongue of war. Shakespeare.
1. Long continuance of any thing bad; obstinacy confirmed by time.

The perseverance of the people's prejudices compelled their rulers to make use of all means for preserving them.

2. [In physic.] Long continuance of a disease.

INVETERATE. adj. [inveterate, Lat.] Old; long established.

1. The custom of Christians was then, and had been a long time, not to wear garments, and therefore that undoubtedly they did offend who presumed to violate such a custom by not observing that thing: the very inveterate observation of a law being able to bind all men to observe it, unless they could show some higher law, some law of Scripture, to the contrary.

2. It is an inveterate and received opinion, that embankments, applied to any part of the body, touch the bladder, and exacerbat it. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

2. Obstinate by long continuance.

It is not easy to acquire a complete knowledge of the art; but it must be a long inveterate course and custom of sinning, that at length produce the effect of those curses. He who writes satire honestly is no more an enemy to the offender, than the physician to the patient, when he prescribes harsh remedies against an inveterate disease.

Dryden.

In a well-instituted state the executive power will never let abuses grow inveterate, or multiply so fast as will be able to find remedies. Swift.

To Inveterate. v. a. [inveter, Fr. inverter, Lat.] To fix and settle by long continuance.

The vulgar conceived, that now there was an end given, and a consummation to superstitions proposed under an ancient tradition, which had by tradition been infused and inveterate into men's minds. Bacon.

Let not Athlos lay the fault of their sins upon human nature, which have their prevalence from long custom and inveterate habit. Bentley.

INVETERATENESS. n. s. [from inveterate.] Long continuance of any thing bad; obstinacy confirmed by time.

The act of hardening or confirming by long continuance.

INVIOUS, adj. [invidious, Lat.] Envious; malignant.

I shall open to them the interior secrets of this mysterious art, without imposing on or invidious reserve. Erasmus.

2. Likely to incure or bring hatred. This is the more usual sense.

Agamemnon found it an inveterate affair to give the preference to any one of the Grecian heroes.

Browne.

Not to be further tedious, or rather inveterous, these are a few causes which have contributed to the ruin of our morals. Soty.

INVIOUSLY, adv. [from invidious.]

1. Malignantly.

2. In a manner likely to provoke hatred.

The clergy murmur against the privileges of the laity; the laity inveterately aggravate the impiety of the clergy. Sprunt.

INVOSI DISMISS. n. s. [from inveterious, inveterate.] Quality of provoking envy or hatred.

To Invigorate. v. a. [in and vigour.] To endue with vigour; to strengthen; to animate; to enforce.

The spleen is introduced to invigorate the sinister side, which, dilated, would rather inflame and debilitate. Gentle warmth.

Disinfect well the earth's all-teeming womb.

Inferior tender seeds.

I had lived with a prince, instead of invigorating the laws, assumed a power of dispensing with them.

Addison.

None can enjoy health, without he feel a light-minded and invigorating principle, which spurs him to action.

Spectator.

Christian graces and virtues they cannot be, unless fed, invigorated, and animated by universal charity.

Attenborough.

2. The act of invigorating.

I find in myself an appetitive faculty, which is always in the very height of activity and invigoration. Novius.

INVOSIBLE. adj. [invvisible, Fr. invisibilit, Lat.] Insensible; unconsiderable; not to be seen.

I would have thought her spirits had been invisible against all assaults of affection. Shakespere.

Should he invade their country, he would soon see that invincible nation with its united forces up in arms. Maturin.

This remains invincible.

That mistake, which is the consequence of invincible errors, scarce deserves the name of wrong judgment. Bacon.

If an Athlet had made the making of himself, he would have framed a constitution that could have kept pace with his invincible lust, been invincible by intermission, and have held out a thousand years in a perpetual domestic.

Bentley.

INVOSIBLNESS. n. s. [from invisible.]

Unconscionableness; insensible ness.

INVOSIBLY. adv. [from invisible.]

Inconsiderably, unconsiderably; not to be observed. Ye have been fearless in his righteous cause; and as ye have receiv'd, so have ye done. Invisibly.

Neither invitations nor threats avail with those who are invincibly impeded, to apply them to their benefit. Milton.

INVOSIBLE. adj. [invvisible, Fr. invisibilis, Lat.] Not to be professed; not to be injured.

To him who sent us, whose charge is to keep this place inviolate, and these from harm. Milton.

In vain did Nature's wise command

Divide the waters from the land,

If daring ships, and men prophan, invade th' inviolable main;

Th' eternal fences over ?. And pass at will the boundless deep. Dryden.

Ye lamps of heav'n, he said, and lifted high his hands, now free: thou venerable sky! Inviolable pow'rs! ador'd with dread.

Be all of you adjur'd.

This birthright, when our author pleases, must and must be inviolable. Locke.

2. Not to be broken.

The prophet David thinks, that the very meeting of men together, and their accompanying one another to the house of God, should make the bond of their love inviolable, and tie them in league of inviolable unity. Hooker.

See, see, they join, embrace, and seem to kiss, as if they vow'd some league inviolable. Shakespere.

3. Insusceptible of hurt or wound.

'Tis inviolable saint.

In cubick phalanx arm'd r'de l'arte. Milton.

INVOSIVELY. adv. [from invisible.]

Imperceptibly to the sight.

Age by degrees inviolably doth creep,

Nor do we seem to die, but full askep. Desmam.

To Invigorate. v. a. [in and vigour, Lat.] To line; to intaglo in gluttonous matter.

The camel's food being flies, it hath in the tongue a mucous and slimey exteriority, whereby, upon a sudden emission, it invigorates and sustains those insects. Brown.

INVITATIVELY. adv. [from invitatio, Lat.] Using invitation; containing invitation.

To Invite. v. a. [invito, Lat. inver.] To bid; to ask to any place, particularly to one's own house, with intent and complaisance.

If thou be invited of a mighty man, withdraw thyself. Eccles. Milton.
INVOCATION. n.s. [invocation, Fr. invocaiton, Lat.]
1. The act of calling upon in prayer.
2. Not having the power of choice.

INVOlUNTARY. adj. [in and voluntari, Lat. involuntari, Fr.]
1. Not having the power of choice.

IN V A L I D  O F  It a n o r m a t o n o n a l  n. s. [invocation, Fr. invocaiton, Lat.]
1. The act of involving or inwrapping.
2. The state of being entangled; complication.

IN V I T A T I O N. n. s. [invi tation, Lat.]
1. To make ready or willing by practice and custom; to accustom.
2. It had anciently with before the thing practised, now to.

IN V I T E.command. Milton
To all things invite
Milton.

IN V I T E. n. [invi tate.] He who invites.
They forcibly cut out abortive votes, such as their interests and encouragements most fancied.

INVITATION. n.s. [from invite.] He who invites.
To peaceful counsels Milton.

INVITINGLY. adv. [from inviting.] In such a manner as invites or allures.
If he can but dress up a temptation to look invitingly, it has commonly been done.

INVITATION. n.s. [from invito, Lat.] The act of inviting, or the act of urging, or the act of inculcating.
Invitation, says Cowley, implies less than deluge.

INVOCATE. v.n. [from invoke.] He who invokes.
They forcibly cut out abortive votes, such as their interests and encouragements most fancied.

INVOCATE, v.n. [from invoke.] He who invokes.
There are no deluges of fire and brimstone, and no floods of quicksands, when our reasons are thus made weighty, and our words are thus made eloquent.

INVOCATION. n.s. [from invocati, Lat.] The act of calling upon in prayer.
Not having the power of choice.

INVOCATION. n s. [from invocati, Lat.] The act of calling upon in prayer.
Not having the power of choice.
INW

INVULNERABLE. adj. [invulnerable, Fr. invulnérable, Lat.] Not to be wounded; secure from wound.

Our canon's walle vaine shall be spent
Against invulnerable clouds of heav'n. Shak.

Nor vainly hope
To be invulnerable in those bright arms,
That might be augmented as they would be
With little to invulnerable themselves strongly. Spenser.

INWARD. adj. [inward, Sax.]

1. Towards the internal parts; within.
The parts of living creatures that are more inward, nourish more than the outward.

2. With inflection or incurvature; concavely.

He stretches out his arm in sign of peace, with his breast bending inward. Drayton's Dyscursus.

3. Into the mind or thoughts.

Let your thoughts be stricken dumb; looking upward we speak and prevail. Hooker.

INWARDLY. adv. [from inward.]

1. In the heart; privately.

The most inwardly each none should be, the church outwardly ought to testify. Hooker.

2. Intimate; near acquaintance. Little used.

Sir, I was in inward of his; a shy fellow was the duke; and I know the cause of his withdrawing. Shak.

INWALL. v. a. [in and wall.] To inclose or fortify with a wall.

Three such towns in those places with the garrison, would be the more augmented as they would be able with little to invulnerable themselves strongly. Spenser on Ireland.

INWARDNESS, n. s. [from inward.]

Intimacy; familiarity.

You know, my inwardness and love Is very much unto the prince and Chlorio. Shak.

INWEAVE. v. a. [in and weave.] To mix any thing in weaving, so that it forms part of the texture.

A fair border, wrought of sunny flowers, Invulnerable with an ivy winding trail. Spr.

INWEAP. v. a. [in and weap.] To cover.

Their crowns, invade with amaranth and gold.

INWOOD. v. a. [in and wood.] To hide in woods. Not used.

He got out of the river, invulnerable himself as the ladies lost the marking his Florins. Sidney.

INWRAP. v. a. [in and wrap.] To cover by involuntion; to involve.

And over them Aetnae high did lift Her cunning veil, and spread her self not, Invulnerable in fume. spice. Pre.

INWRAP'T. v. a. [in and wrap.] To wound, to pique with difficulty or obscurity.

The case is no sooner made than resolved; if it be not unravel'd, but plainly and perspicuously.

INWOUGHT. adj. [in and wrought.] Adorned with work.

Carnus, reverend sir, went footill slow,
His mantle hairy, and his hood sedge.
Invrought with figures dim, and on the edge
Like to that sunny flower Infract'd with bee.

INWREATH. v. a. [in and wreath.] To surround with a crown.

Bind their resplendent locks invulnerable with beas.

INWRESTLE. v. a. [in and wrestle.] To struggle.

No less the palm of peace invulnerable thy brow. Thomson.

JOB, n. s. [A low word now much in use, of which I cannot tell the etymology.]

1. Petty, padding work; a piece of chance work.

2. A low mean lucrative busy affair.

He was now with his old friends, like an old favourite of a cunning minister after the job is over. Arbuthnot.
JOH

Joyn. v. a. [join'de, Fr.] 1. To add one to another in contiguity. Wore unto them that join house to house that lay field to field. Isa. lvii. Join them one to another into one stick. Ezek. The wall was joined together unto the hulk. Neh. iv. 6. 2. To couple; to combine. In this faculty repeating and joing together its ideas, the mind has great power. Locke. 3. To unite in league or confederacy. One only daughter heirs my crown and state, Whom not our stables, nor hay's; nor fate, Nor frequent profligates permit to join With any native of the Ausonian line. Dryd. Aen. 4. To clash together; to collide; to encounter: this sense is to be found in the phrase to join battle, in which battle seems not to signify fight, but troops in array, committe exercitus, though it may likewise mean fight, as committe prelum. When they joined battle, Israel was smitten. 1 Sam. iv. 2. They should with resolve minds endure, until they might join battle with their enemies. Knolles. 5. To associate. Go near, and join thyself to this chariot, Acts. 13. Thou shoulst not be joined with them in burial. 2 Sam. 22. 6. To unite in or to do the same thing. Our best notes are useless to his fame, Join'd with the loud applause of public voice. Dryd. Thy tuneful voice with numbers join'd. Thy words will more prevail then mine. Dryd. 7. To unite in concord. Be joined in the same mind. 1 Cor. 8. To act in concert with. Know your own interest, Sir, where'er you lead, We jointly vow to join no other head. Dryd. Aureg. To Join. v. n. 1. To grow to; to adhere; to be contiguous. Justin's house join'd hard to the symple Acts. 2. To close; to clash. You look, you all that kiss my lady peace at home, that our armies join not in a hot day. Shak. Henry IV. 1. Here's the earl of Wiltshire's brand, Whom I encounter'd, as the battles join'd. Shak. 3. To unite or in marriage, or to other league. Should we again break thy commandments, and join in affinity with the people? Ezra. 4. To become confederate. When there fell out any war, they join'd unto our enemies, and fight against us. Exod. Let us make peace with him, before he join with Alexander against us. 1 Mac. Join with the rest; you are arm'd against us. Dryd. Any other may join with him that is in trouble, and assist him in recovering satisfaction. Locke. Joinder. n. s. [from join.] Conjunction; joining. Not used. A contract of eternal hand of love, Confirmed by mutual joinder of your hands. Shak. Joiner, n. s. [from join.] One whose trade is to make utensils of wood compacted. The people wherewith you plant ought to be smiths, carpenters, and joiners. Basset's Essays. It is counted great markmanship in a joiner, to bear his hand curiously even. Morus's En. Joinery. n. s. [from joiner.] Joinery is an art whereby several pieces of wood are so fitted and joined together by strait lines, squares, mitres, or any bevel, that they shall seem one entire piece. Morton. Joint. n. s. [junctura, Lat. jointure, Fr.] 1. Articulation of limbs; juncture of moveable bones in animal bodies. Dropsies and asthmata, and joint racking rheums. Milton. I felt the same pain in the same joint. Temple. 2. Hinge; junctures which admit motion of the parts. The coach, the cover whereof was made with such joints that as they might, to avoid the weather, pull it up close when they list; so when they would, they might remain as discovered and open-sighted as on horseback. Sidney. 3. In joiner; joint, Fr. Strait lines, in joiner's language, is called a joint, that is, two pieces of wood are shot, that is, pinned. Marot. 4. A knot or croissante in a plant. 5. One of the limbs of an animal cut up by the butcher. In bringing a joint of meat, it falls out of your hand. 6. Out of joint. Luxated; slipped from the socket, or correspondent part where it naturally moves. Jacob's thigh was out of joint. Gen. xxxii. 54. As the head and whole body was sore hurt, and also one of my arms and legs put out of joint. Her. 7. Out of joint. Thrown into confusion and disorder; confused; full of disturbance. This time is out of joint, ob caused skipt! That ever I was born to set it right. Shak. Joint. adj. 1. Shared among many. Entertain no more of it Than a joint burthen laid upon us all. Shak. Though it be common in respect of some men, it is not so to all mankind; but is the joint propriety of this country, or this parish. Locke. 2. United in the same possession as we say, jointheirs or coheirs, jointheirs or coheirs is. The son and man did strive, Joint tenants of the world, who should survive. Done. Pride then was not; nor arts, that pride to aid; Man walk'd with beast joint tenant of the shade. Pope. 3. Combined; acting together in concert. On your joint vigour now, My hold of this new kingdom all depends. Milton. In a war carried on by the joint force of so many nations, France could send troops. Addon. To Join. v. a. [from the noun.] 1. To form in articulations. The fingers are joined together for motion, and furnished with several muscles. Hay on the Creation. 2. To form many parts into one. Against the steel be threw His forceful spear, which hissing as it flew, Pierce'd through the yielding planks of jointwood. Dryd. 3. To join together in confederacy. Not used. The times Made friends of them, jointing their force against Cesar. Shak. 4. To divide a joint; to cut or quarter into joints. He joints the neck; and with a stroke so strong The helm strikes off; and bearsthe head along. Dryd. Joister. adj. [from joint.] Full of joints, knots, or commissures. Three cubits high The jointed herbage was. Philips. Jointer. n. s. [from joint.] A sort of plane. The jointer is somewhat longer than the fore plane, and both its sole perfectly strait; its office is to follow the fore-plane, and smooth and edge perfectly strait, when a joint is to be shot. Morot.
JOINTLY, adv. [from joint.]
1. Together; not separately.
2. In a state of union or co-operation.

JOINTSTOOL, n.s. [joint and stool.] A stool made not merely by insertion of the feet, but by inserting one part in another.

JOINTURE, n.s. [jointure, Fr.] Estate settled on a wife to be enjoyed after her husband's decease.

JOKE, n.s. [jocus, Lat.] A jest; something not serious.

JOKE. n.s. [jocur, Lat.] To jest; to be merry in words and actions.

JOKE, n.s. [from joke.] A jester; a merry fellow.

JOVAR, adv. from joke.] Your wan complexion, and your thin jowls, father.

JOY. The head of a fish.

JOY, v.o. [from the verb.] Shock; violent agitation.

JOVIAL, adj. [jovial, Fr., jovialis, Lat.] Every little unevenness of the ground will cause such a joviality of the chariot as to hinder the motion of its sails. Williams. Arbuthnot on Dict.

JOVIAL, adj. [jovial, Fr., jovialis, Lat.] To shake one as a carriage does.

JOYFUL adj. [from jolly.] Shock; violent agitation.

JOYFUL adj. [from jolly.] The symptoms are, bloody water upon a sudden jolt or violent motion. Arbuthnot on Dict.

JOYOUS adj. [from jolly.] If the first jolt had not been as strong as it was, but afterwards the motion was easy. Swift.

JOYLESS adj. [from jolly.] To join to a stool.

JOYLESS adj. [from jolly.] To join to a stool.

JOYLUSS. A pot. They will allow us no jollies in the morning, and then we will leak in your chimney, and your chamberly breaks bleed like a toast. Boss. The copper pot can boil milk, heat porridge, small beer or salt, in case of necessity, serve for a jolly and a salt. Swift.

JOY. v.o. [from joke.] To jostle to rush against.

JOY. v.o. [from joke.] A point; a title; the least quality assignable.

JOYFUL adj. [from jolly.] As superfluous flesh did rot, Amendment ready still at hand did wait, to pluck it out with pincers fiery hot, That soon in him was left no more a corporal joy, Fairy Queen.

JOYFUL adj. [from jolly.] Go, Eros, send his treasure after, do it; Denim no joy, I charge thee. Shaks. Let me not stay a joy from dinner; go, get it ready. Shaks.

JOYFUL adj. [from jolly.] This nor hunts he nor profits you a joy; Forbear it therefore; give your cause to Heaven. Shaks.

JOYFUL adj. [from jolly.] This bond doth give thee here no joy of blood; The words express a pound of flesh. Shaks. I argue not against Heaven's hand, or will; nor hate one joy Of heart or hope; but still hear up and shout Right onwards. Shaks. Yon might, with every joy as much just, hang me up because I am old, as best me because I'm important. L'Estrange. A man may read the discourses of a very rational author, and yet acquire not one jot of knowledge. Locke. The final event will not be one joy less the consequence of our own choice and actions, for God's having from all eternity foreseen and determined what that event shall be. Rogers.
JOY

1. Under the influence of Jupiter.

The fixed stars are astrologically influenced by the planets, and are esteemed mortal or joyal, according to the colors whereby they are colored to the planets.

2. Gay; airy; merry.

Be bright and gay; merriment. Shaksp. Our musician's song delights. Shaksp.

Some men, of an ill and melancholy nature, incline the company, into which they come, to be sad and ill-dispised; and thenceforth, others of a joyal nature dispose the company to be merry and cheerful.

Boileau's Nat. Hist.

Its odors are some of them pungent, to eye moist, the rest jovial or buccanuish. Dryden.

Perhaps the jest that charm'd the sprightly light And made the jovial table laugh so loud. To some false notion owes its poor pretence. Prior.

JOVIALLY. adv. [from jovial] Merrily, gaily.

JOVIALNESS. n.s. [from jovial] Gaiety; merriment.

JOUSANCE. n.s. [rejoissance, Fr.] Jollity; merriment; festivity. Obsole.

Colin, my dear, when shall it please thee sing. As thou wert wont, songs of some joyousness? Thyn Muse too long slumbering in sorrow, Lulled asleep in Pleas and Pleas's misgovernment, Spens.

JOURNAL. adj. [journal, Fr. giornal, It.] Daily; accustomed. Out of use

Now gan the golden Phœbus for to steep His fiery face in billows of the West, And hid in deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, deep, de
JOY

There's him rests in natural suffrance,
Or all his gladness and kindling gage. Speener.

Joyful. adj. [joyful and.]

1. Full of joy; glad; exulting.
2. Sometimes it has of before the cause of joy.
3. It has of sometimes before the cause of joy.

Round cut death-bed ev'ry friend should run,
And joyous of our compact ever won.

While the musing, and went into their trysts joyful and glad of heart.

1. Kings.
2. My soul shall be joyful in God. Is. Ix. 10.

Joyfully, adv. [from joyful.] With joy: gladly.

If we no more meet till we meet in heav'n,
Then joyfully, my noble lord of Bedford,
And my kind kinsman, warrors all, ad.

Never did man more joyfully obey,
Or sooner understood the sign to flee:
With such alacrity they bore away.

As if they praised all the states stood by.

The good Christian considers pains only as necessary passages to a glorious immortality; that, through this dark scene of fancied terror, sees a crown and a throne, and everlasting blessings prepared for him.joyfullyCatholick receives his summons, as he has long impatiently expected it.

Joyfully, n. s. [from joyful.] Gladness; joy.

Thou servest not the Lord thy God with joyfulness,
And with gladness of heart, for the abundance of all things.

Joyless. adj. [from joy.] joyless.

1. Void of joy; feeling no pleasure.

A little joy enjoys the queen thereof;
For I am she, and altogether joyous.

With downcast eyes the joyous victor sat,
Revolving in his mind's soul and thought various actions of choice below;
And saw and then a sight he should bear,
And tears began to flow.

Drayton's Alexander's Feast.

2. It has of sometimes before the object.

With two fair eyes his mistress burns his breast;
He looks and languishes, and leaves his rest;
Forsakes his food, and, pining for the loss,
Is joyful of the grove, and spurns the flowering grass.

Drayton.

3. Giving no pleasure.

A joyless, disdain'd, black, and sorrowful issue;
Here is a babe, as lostsight as a toad.

Shakespeare.

Here he was golden sinews employ'd; here lights
His constant lamp, and waves his pearly wings;
Reigns here, and roves; not in the stoutest smiles.
Of lastest, joyless, unequalued,
Causal fruit.

Parnell's Poem. Let.

The pure in heart shall see God; and if any others could so eradicate this their inchoate, as to take heaven by violence, it surely would be a joyless possession.

Decay of Polit.

He forgets his sleep, and loathes his food,
That youth, and health, and war, are joyous to him.

Admonition.

Joyous. adj. [joyous, Fr.]

1. Glad; gay; merry.

Most joyous man, on whom the shining sun
Did shine his face, myself I did esteem,
And that my false lik'd me no joyous deem.

Joyous the birds; fresh gales and gentle gale:
Whisper'd it.

Milton.

The joyous birds frequent the lonely grove,
And beasts, by nature stung, renew their love.

Fast by her flow'ry bank the sons of Arcas, Fav'rites of heav'n, with happy care protect.
Their dechy charge, and joyous drink her life.

Prior.

2. Giving joy.

They all as glads as birds of joyous prime
Thence led her forth, about her dancing round.

Fairy Queen.

IRK

IRKSOME. adj. [from irk.] Wearisome; tedious; troublesome; toilsome; tiresome; unpleasing.

I know she is an irksome brawling scold. Shak.

Shall I then can't talk of love so well.

Thy company, which erst I held in none.

I will endure. Shakespeare. As you like it.

Where he may not seek best.

Truce to his restless thoughts, and entertain
The irksome hours till his chief great return. Milt.

Not for to irksome toll, but to delight
He mortifies, and delight to reason join'd. Milton.

There is nothing so irksome as general discourse, especially when they turn chiefly upon words.

Shytrn.

IRKSOMELY. adv. [from irksome.] Wearisomely; tediously.

IRKSOMENESS. n. s. [from irksome.] Weariness; wearisomeness.

IRON. n. s. [hairy, Welsh; ieporo, Sax. ior.]

1. A metal common to all parts of the world. Though the lightest of all metals, except tin, it is considerably the heaviest; and when pure, naturally malleable: when wrought into steel, or when in the impure state from its first fusion, it is scarce malleable. Most of the other metals are brittle, while they are hot; but this is most malleable as it approaches nearest to fusion. The specific gravity of iron is to water as 7632 is to 1000. It is the only known substance that is attracted by the lodestone. Iron has greater medicinal virtues than any of the other metals.

Hill.

Nor ales dungeon, nor strong links of iron, Can be receiv'd to the strength of spirit Shakespeare.

If he smite him with an instrument of iron, so that he die, he is a murderer. Num. xxvi. 16.

The power of drawing iron is one of the flees of a lodestone, and to be so drawn is a part of that of iron.

Lecce.

A piece of iron ore, of a ferruginous colour, are several thin plates, placed parallel to each other.

I treated of making iron work, and steel work. Moxon.

2. Any instrument or utensil made of iron: as, a flat iron, box iron, or smoothing iron. In this sense it has a plural.

Iron of a doit, dobbles that hangmen would.
Bury with those that were there; these, these blades, Eve yet the fight be done, pack up, pack, Shak. Coriol.
O Thou! whose captain I account myself,
Look on my forces with a gracious eye:
Put in their hands the iron of wrath,
That they may crush down with a heavy fall.
Th' usurping helmets of our adversaries.

Shakespeare, Richard III.

Canst thou fill his skin with barbed irons, or his head with fishspears?

Job, xlii. 7.

For this your locks in paper dunmeance bound.

For this with tort ring iron wrought round around Pope.

3. Chain; shackle; manacle; as, he was put in irons.

The iron entered into his soul. Psal. Cam. Proy.

His feet but with fettrers: he was laid in irons. Psalms.

IRON. adj.

1. Made of iron.

In iron walls they deem'd me not secure. Shak.

Get me an iron arrow, and bring it straight unto my cell. Shakespeare. Romeo and Juliet.

Some are of an iron red, shining and polite;
IRR

So grave a body, upon so solemn an occasion, should deal in irony, or explain their meaning by contary.

IRRADIACTY. n. s. [irradiance, fr. irr., Lat.]

1. Emission of rays or beams of light upon any object.
2. Beams of light emitted.

Love not the heav'nly spirits? Or do they mix virtuous, or immediate touch? Milton.

To IRRADiATE. v. a. [irradio, Lat.]

1. To adorn with light emitted upon it unto; to brighten.

When he thus perceives that these opacous bodies do not hit or the eye from judging light to have an equal plenary diffusion through the whole place it irradiates, he can have no difficulty to allow air, that is diaphanous, to be every where mingled with light. Digby on Bodies.

It is not a converting but a discovering grace;
such as love and pity puts a circle of glory about the head of him upon whom it descends. Swift.

2. To enlighten; to illumine; to illuminate.

Celestial light
Shine inward, and the mind through all her pawn's Irradate; there plant eyes; all melt from

To IRRADiATE. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To smooth with an iron.
2. To shake with irons.

lronical adj. [ironique, Fr. from ironic.] Expressing one thing and meaning another; speaking by contraries.

In this fallacy may be comprised all ironical or expressions reversed inverted significations.

I take all your ironical civilities in a literal sense, and shall expect them to be literally performed.
Swift.

Irronically, adv. [from ironical.] By the use of irony.

Socrates was pronounced by the oracle of Delphes to be the wisest man of Greece, which he would triumphingly deny, saying, There could be nothing in him to verify the oracle.
except this, that he was not wise, and knew it;
and others were wise, and knew it not. Bacon.
The deceiver and braggart.
Still sham'd the fool, and lais'th the knife. Swift.

Ironmonger. n. s. [iron and monger.]
A dealer in iron.

Ironwood. n. s. A kind of wood extremely hard, and so ponderous as to sink in water. It grows in America.
Robinson Crusoe.

Ironwort. n. s. [stericis, Lat.]
Miller.

Irony. adj. [from iron.] Made of iron;
partaking of iron.

The force they are under is real, and that of their fate but imaginary; it is not strange if the irony chains have more solidity than the comparative.
Hammond's Fundamentals.
Some springs of Hungary, highly impregnated with vitriol salts, dissolve the body of one metal, or the containing piece of the spring; and deposit, in lieu of the iron particles carried off, coppery particles. Woodward on Irons.

Irony. n. s. [ironic, fr. G. ironikos.]
A mode of saying in which the meaning is contrary to the words: as, Belshazzar was a holy man.

IRR

As for obsolete, irreconcilable, proscribed enemies, we must expect their calumnies will continue.

irreconcilable adj. [irreconcilable, fr. in and reconcilable.]
1. Not to be recalled to kindness; not to be appeased.

Wage eternal war.

Arbuthnot's John Bull.

1. A week unequal faction may animate a government; but when it grows equal in strength, and irreconcilable by animosity, it cannot end without a crisis.

There are no factions, though irreconcilable to one another, that are not united in their affection to the last interest of their country.

2. Not to be made consistent: it is not or to.

As she was strictly virtuous herself, so she turns the best construction upon the words and actions of her neighbours, except where they were irreconcilable to the rules of honesty and decency. Arbuthnot's John Bull.

i r r e c o n c i l a b l e . n s . [fr. irreconcilable.] Impossibility to be reconciled.

irreconcilably, adv. [from irreconcilable.] In a manner not admitting reconciliation.

irreckoned, adj. [in and reconcilable.]
Not atoned.

A servant dies in many irreconcilable injuries.
Shaksp.

irrecoverable, adj. [in and recover-
able.]
1. Not to be regained: not to be restored or repaired.

Time, in a natural sense, is irrecoverable: the moment just fled by us, it is impossible to recall.
Bunyan.

2. Not to be remedied.

The irrecoverable loss of so many lives of principal value.
It concerns every man, that would not live away half a day of himself into irrecoverable unwisdom, with the greatest seriousness to enquire. Taitton.

irrecoverably, adv. [from irrecoverable.] Beyond recovery; past repair.
O dark, dark mind! the blaze of noon.
Irrecoverably dark, total eclipse.
Without all hope of day. Milton's Aenid.

The credit of the Exchanger is irrecoverably lost by the last breach with the bankers, Milton's Paradise.

irrecoverable, adj. [in and rever-
able.]
Not to be brought or reduced.

These observations seem to argue the corpuses of air to be irreducible into water.
Rush.

irrefragability. n. s. [irrefrag-able.] Strength of argument not to be refuted.

irrefragable, adj. [irrefragabilis school Lat. irrefragabilis, Fr.] Not to be confuted; superior to argumental opposition.

I r r e r e s p r o n s i b l e. n. s. [irreresponsibility.]
Without reason; absurdly.

irreclaimable, adj. [in and claim-able.] Not to be reclaimed; not to be changed to the better.

Swift.

1019
IRREFRAGABLE. adv. [from irrefragable.] With force above contention. That they denied a future state is evident from St Paul’s reasoning; which are of no weight; but only on that supposition, as Origin largely and irrefragably proves. After wry.

IRREFUTABLE adj. [irrefutabiliis, Lat.] Not to be overthrown by argument.

IRREGULAR adj. [irregulariter, Fr. irregularis, Lat.] 1. Deviating from rule, custom or nature. The amorous youth Obtain’d of Venus his desire, How’er irregular his fire. Dryer.

2. Inmethodical; not confined to any certain rule or order. This motion seems excentrique and irregularly, yet not well to be resisted or quieted. K. Charles.

Regular.

Then most, when most irregular they seem.

The numbers of pindarics are wild and irregular, and sometimes seem harsh and unmeasured. Con.

3. Not being according to the laws of virtue. A soft word for vitius.

IRREGULARITY. n. s. [irregularité, Fr. from irregular.] 1. Deviation from rule.

2. Neglect of method and order. This irregularity of its many and tumultuous motion might afford a beginning unto the common danger. Bacon. As these vast heaps of mountains are thrown together with so much irregularity and confusion, there forms a great variety of follow bottoms. Add.

3. Inordinate practice; vice.

Religion is somewhat less in danger of corruption, while the sinner acknowledges the obligations of his duty, and is ashamed of his irregularities. Rogers.

IRREGULARLY adv. [from irregular.] Without observation of rule or method. Phaeton.

By the wild course of his fancy drawn, From East to West irregularly hurled, First set on fire himself, and then the world. Dryer. Your’s is a soul irregularly great, Which wanting temper, yet abounds with heat. Dryden.

It may give some light to those whose concerns for the little ones makes them so irregularly bold as to consider their own reason, in the education of their children, rather than to rely upon old custom.

To IRREGULATE. v. a. [from ir and regul,a, Lat.] To make irregular; to disorder.

Its fluctuations are but motions subservient, which winds, shelves, and every interjacency regulates. Brown.

IRRELATIVE adj. [in and relativus, Lat.] Having no reference to any thing; single; unconnected.

Separated by the voice of God, things in their species came out in uncommunicated varieties, and particular situations. Brown’s Vulg. Err.

IRRELIGION. n. s. [irreligion, Fr. in and religio.] Contempt of religion; impiety.

The weapons with which I combat irreligion are already consecrated. Dryden.

We believe the instance of prophanea and irreligion, not only committed, but defamed and glorified in.

IRRELIGIOUS adj. [irreligieux, Fr. in and religious.] 1. Contemning religion; impious. The is an instance of true religion. Shakespeare. Whoever sees these religious men, With barb of a sickness weak and faint,

But hears then talking of religion then, And vows himself to mix it ev’ry saint. Davies.

Shame and reproach is generally the portion of the impious and religious. South.

2. Contrary to religion.

Wherein that Scripture standeth not the church of God in any thing, except nothing at all to direct, but may be let pass as needless to be consulted with, we judge it profane, impious, and irreverent. Locke.

Might not the queen’s domesticks be obliged to avoid swearing and irreligious profane discourses, Swift.

IRRELIGIOUSLY adv. [from irreligious.] With impiety; with religion.

IRRIMEDICAL adj. [irremedialis, Lat.] Admitting no return. The keeper char’d, the chief without delay Pass’d on, and took th’ irremediable way. Dryden.

IRRIMEDICABLE adj. [irremediable, Fr. irr and remediable.] Admitting no cure; not to be remedied.

They content themselves with that which was the irremediable error of former times, or the necessity of the present hath cast upon them. Hooker.

A steady hand, in military affairs, is more requisite than in peace, because an error committed in war may prove irremediable. Bacon.

What house keeps about, unless he lead to some fatal and irremediable mischief, be sure you advise only as a friend. Locke.

IRRIMEDICABLY adv. [from irremedicable.] Without cure.

It happens so irremediable, and inevitably, that we may perceive these accidents are not the fruits of our labour, but gifts of God. Taylor’s Worthy Communicant.

IRRIMEDICABILITY. n. s. [irremedialité, Fr. from irremedicable.] The quality of being not to be borne.

Thence arises the aggravation and irrepressibility of the sin. Hammond on Fundamentals.

IRRIMEDICABLE adj. [irremediable, Fr. irr and remediable.] Not to be pardoned.

IRRIMEDICABILITY. n. s. [irremedialité, Fr. from irremedicable.] The quality of being not to be pardoned.

Thence arises the aggravation and irrepressibility of the sin. Hammond on Fundamentals.

IRRIMEDICABLE adj. [irremediable, Fr. irr and remediable.] Not to be recovered; not to be repaired.

Irrepairable is the loss, and Patience says it is not past her care. Shakes. Tempest.

Toil’d with loss irrepairable. Milton.

It is an irreparable injustice we are guilty of, when we are prejudiced by the looks of those whom we dislike. Addison.

The story of Dacilian and Pyrrha teaches, that piety and innocence cannot miss of the divine protection, and that the only loss irreparable is that of our prosperity. Garth.

IRRIMEDICABLY adv. [from irremedicable.] Without recovery; without amendments.

Such adventures befall artists irreparably. Boyle.

The most industrious and gay, whereby she should be nourished, were irreparably injurious to her. Decay of Pity.

IRRIMEDICABLY adv. [from irremedicable.] Not to be remedied.

IRRIMEDICABLY adv. [from irremediable, Fr. irrepairable, Lat.] Except from blame.

IRRREPREHENSIBLY adv. [from irreprehensible.] Without blame.

IRRREPREHENSIBLY adj. [in and represent.] Not to be figured by any representation.

God’s irreprehensible nature doth hold against making images of God. Stillingfleet.

IRRREPROACHABLE. adj. [in and reproachable.] Free from blame; free from reproach.

He was a serious sincere Christian, of an inoffensive irreproachable, may, exemplary life. Attar.

There can be better, that they may raise up, and breed as irreproachable a young family as their parents have done. Pope.

IRRREPROACHABLY adv. [from irreproachable.] Without blame; without reproach.

IRRREPROVEABLE adj. [in and reprovable.] Not to be blamed; irreproachable.

IRRRESISTIBILITY. n. s. [from irrisistible.] Power or force above opposition.

The doctrine of irresistible grace, if it be acknowledged, there is nothing to be affixed to it. Hammond.

IRRRESISTIBLE adj. [irresistible, Fr. in and resistible.] Superior to opposition.

Fear doth grow from an apprehension of the Deity, induced with resistible power to hurt; and is of all affections, and thoughts, the unanswerable admitted to conference with reason. Hooker.

In mighty quadruple joint Of union irresistible. Milton.

Fear of God is inward acknowledgement of an holy just being, armed with almighty and irresistible power. Tillotson.

There can be no difference in the subjects, where the application is almighty and irresistible, as in creation. Rogers.

IRRRESISTIBLY adv. [from irresistible.] In a manner not to be opposed.

God irresistibly sways all manner of events on earth. Dryden.

Fond of pleasing and entertaining ourselves to those we esteem, we are irresistibly led into the same inclinations and aversions with them. Rogers.

IRRRESTLESS. adj. [a barbarous grammatical construction of two negatives.] Irresistible; resistless.

These rash entrees, whose irresistable flame strikes Envy dasy and, keeps Solicitude tame, They can to passing multitudes give law, Convert the factions, and the rebel awe.

IRRRESOLVED adj. [in and resolutus, Lat.] Not to be broken; not to be dissolved.

In factitious salt amonition the common and ursine silts are so well mingled, that both in the open fire and in subliming vessels they rise together as one salt, which seems in such vessels irresoluble by force alone. Boyle.

IRRRESOLVABLE. adj. [in and resolutus, Lat.] Resistance to separation of the parts.

Quarrens has this confusion of the irresolubility of diamonds. Boyle.

IRRRESOLVABLE adj. [in and resolutus, Lat.] Resistance to separation of the parts.

Quarrens has this confusion of the irresolubility of diamonds. Boyle.

IRRRESOLVABLY adv. [in and resolutus.] Without settled determination.

Divers of my friends have thought it strange to hear me speak so irresolubly concerning those things, which some take to be the elements, and others the principles of all mixed bodies. Boyle.

IRRRESOLVE adj. [irresolu, Fr. in and resolute.] Not constant in purpose; not determined.

Were he cruel he would outgo His father, by as much a performance Does an irresolute purpose. Shakespeare. Henry VIII.
I RR

Him, after long debate irreproachable
But though resolute in mind, he is not Breathless in speech, nor does he clench
His jaws, as if to speak. Milton. Poem, Lost. To
To make reflexions upon what is past, is
Not the part of ingenuous but irrepressible men. Temple.
So Mr. Myrrh's mind, impelled on either side,
Takes on the air of a boat long since Irreproachable on which she should rely,
At last unkindly in, is only lady'd to die. Dryden.

Irresolute, adv. [from irresolute.]
Without firmness of mind; without determination purpose.

Irresolution. n. s. [irresolution, Fr. in and resolution.]
Want of firmness of mind.
It hath most force upon things that have the lightest motion, and therefore upon the spirits of men, and in them upon such affections as move lightest; as upon men in fear, or men in Irresolution on the schemes of life, which offer themselves to our choice, and inconstancy in pursuming them, are the greatest causes of all our unhappiness. Addison.

Irrespective. adj. [in and irrespective.]
Having no regard to any circumstances.
Thus did the Jew, by persuading himself of his particular irrespective election, think it safe to run into all sins! Hammond.

According to this doctrine, it must be resolved wholly into the absolute irrespective will of God.
Rogers.

Irrespectively, adv. [from irrespective.]
Without regard to circumstances. He is convinced, that all the promises belong to him absolutely and irrespectively. Hammond.

Irreprovable, adj. [in and irreprovable.]
Not to be repaired; irreparable; irreprovable.

Irreproachably, adv. [from irrepro-vable.] Irreproachable; irreprovable.

Irreverence. n. s. [irreverent, Lat. irreverence, Fr. in and reverence.]
1. Want of reverence; want of veneration; want of respect.
Having seen ourascalious irreverence towards God's worship in general, 'tis easy to make application to the several parts of it. Decoy of Piety.

They were a sort of attributes, with which it was a matter of religion to salute them on all occasions, and which it was an irreverence to omit. Pope.

2. State of being disregarded.
The concomitance of the house of peers in that fury can be imputed to no one thing more than to the irreverence and scorn the judges were justly in, who had been always looked upon there as the arbiters of the law. Clarendon.

Irreverent, adj. [irreverent, Fr. in and reverence.]
Not paying due homage or reverence; not expressing or conceivinig due veneration or respect.
As our faith exclude not that boldness which becometh saints, so, if our familiarity with God does not savour of fear, it draweth too near that irreverent confidence whereby true humility can never stand. Hooker.

Knowing good judges sought for, and covered it from the vulgar sort as jewels of an insatiable price, fearing the irreverent construction of the ignorant and unphilosophical. Raleigh.

Witness the irreverent son
Of him who built the ark; who, for the shame
Done to his father, heard his heavy curse,
Servant of servants, on his vicious race. Milton.
1. A termination added to an adjective to express diminution; a small degree, or incipient state of any quality: as, bluish, tending to blue; brightish, somewhat bright.

2. It is likewise sometimes the termination of a gentle or possessive adjective: as, Swedish, Danish; the Danish territories, or territories of the Danes.

3. It likewise notor participation of the qualities of the substantive to which it is added; as, fool, foolish, man, manish; rogue, roglisth.

Isicle, n. s. [More properly icle, from icle; but icle should rather be written ise; icle, Sax.] A pendent shoot of ice.

Do you know this lady? — The moon doth shine. icle as a icle. That's curated by the frost from purest snow. Hanging on Dion's temple. Shaksp.

This forms and shows her tender body, but that is not limbs for icles to tear. Dryden.

Isinglass, n. s. [from icle, or ise, and glass; iclethypocolla, Lat.] Isinglass is a tough, firm, and light substance, of a white colour, and in some degree transparent, much resembling glue. The fish from which isinglass is prepared, is one of the cartilaginous kind: it grows to eighteen and twenty feet in length, and greatly resembles the sturgeon. It is frequent in the Danube, the Bosphorus, the Volga, and the larger rivers of Europe. From the intestines of this fish the isinglass is prepared by boiling. Hill.

The care of putrefaction requires an incrassating diet, as all viscid broth, brothshorn, ivory, and singlass. Some make it clear by reiterated fermentations and others by additions, as isinglass, creamed sugar.

Isinglass Stone, n. s. A fossil which is one of the purest and simplest of the natural bodies. The masses are of a brownish or reddish colour; but when the plates are separated, they are perfectly colourless, and more bright and pulkulent than the finest glass. It is found in Muscovy, Persia, the island of Cyprus, in the Alps and Apennines, and the mountains of Germany. Hill's Mat. Med.

Island, n. s. [insula, Lat. sola, Ital. canal, Erse. It is pronounced land.] A tract of land surrounded by water.

He will carry this island home in his pocket, and give it his son for an apple—and sawing the kernels of it in the sea, bring forth more islands. Shaksp. Tempest.

Within a long reach there lies a bay. An island shades it from the rolling sea. And forms a port. Dryden.

Island of Islay is the subject scene. Thomson.

Islander, n. s. [from island. Pronounced islander;] An inhabitant of a country surrounded by water.

We, as all islanders, are lunatics, or the moon's men. Cowper.

Ye dirver, and the generous islanders. Canuden.

By you invited, do attend your presence. Shak.

There are many bitter sayings against islanders in general, representing them as fierce, Utopians, under the name of our inhabitants. Those who live on the continent have such frequent intercourse with men of different religions and languages, that the language is one kind that those who are the inhabitants of an island. Addison's Frenehman.

A race of rugged mariners are these, Unfathom'd men, and bosoms as their seas: The native idlers are their ene, And hateful be that breaches a foreign sea. Pope.

Isle, n.s. [from, fr. island. Pronounced isle;] 1. An island; a country surrounded by water.

The instalment of this noble duke Is the seat royal of this famous isle. Shaksp.

Betwixt a nation and two words I write; Seas stand with gore I sing, adventures told, And ships and mariners in exultation roll. Dryden.

2. [Written] I think, corruptly for aire, from air, Fr. from air, Lat. the air being probably at first only a wing or side walk. It may come likewise from air, Fr. a walk. A long walk in a church, or publick building.

Over the twilight groves and dusky caves, Long sounding airis and intermingled graves. Black.

Isometrical, n. s. [equi, piz, and mer.] In geometry, are such figures as have equal perimeters or circumferences, of which the circle is the greatest. Harris.

Isoceles, n. s. [isocele, Fr. or equiangular triangle.] That which hath only two sides equal. Harris.

Issue, n. s. [issue, Fr.] 1. The act of passing out.

Let us examine what body's so moveable whilst in motion, as the only means to find an issue of this difficulty. Dryden.

We might have easily prevented those great returns of money to France; and if it be true the French are so impoverished, in what condition must they be, if that issue of wealth had been stopped? Scott.

3. Event; consequence.

Spiritual things not finely touch'd, But fine to issues. Shaksp. Measure for Measure, If I were ever fearful To do a thing, where I the issue doubted, Where the end outlived the existing cause; Against the non-performance, 'twas a fear Which infects the wisest. Shaksp. Winter's Tale. But let the heart not prove To good beginnings of each enterprise. Fairfax.

If things were cast upon this issue, that God should not make a just man desirous of the best would sin, and sin for ever. South.

The witless sayings and sentences will be found the zones of chance, and nothing else but some lucky hits of a running fancy. Our present condition is better for us in the issue, than that uninterrupted health and security that the Athenian days. Bentley.

4. Termination; conclusion.

He hath preserved Argalus alive, under pretence of having him publicly execrated after these wars, of which they hope for a soon and serious issue. Sidney.

What issue of my love remains for me! How wild a passion works within my breast! With what prodigious flames am I possessed! Dryden.

Homer, at a loss to bring difficult matters to an issue, lays his hero asleep, and this solves the difficulty. Booke.

5. Sequel deduced from premises.

I am to pray you not to strain my speech To grosser issues, nor to larger reach, Than to some. Shaksp. Othello.

6. A fontanel; a vent made in a muscle for the discharge of humours. This tumour in his left arm was caused by strict binding of his Issue. Wiseman.

Evacuation.

A woman was diseased with an issue of blood. Mat. 9, 57.

8. Progeny; offspring.

O nation miserable! Since they at the true issue of thy house, By his own intercession stand nearest. Shaksp. Macbeth.

Nor were Abassan kings their issue guard, Mount Amura, their sun, nor the stupendous True Paradise, under the æolian pipe. By N. Long. Milton's Parad. Lost.

The oil, or peaceful prince, whom Heron's decreed, was blessed with no male issue to succeed. Dryden's Enmity.

The frequent productions of waters, in all the species of animals, and strange issues of human birth, carry with them difficulties, not possible to confound with this by synthetic Locke.

9. [In law.] Issue hath several applications in the common law: sometimes used for the children begotten between a man and his wife; sometimes for profits growing from an amercement, fine, or executions of suit; sometimes for profits of lands or tenements; sometimes for that point of matter depending in suit, where upon the parties join and put their cause to the trial of the jury. Issue is either general or special; general issue seemeth to be that whereby it is referred to the jury to bring in their verdict, whether the defendant hath done any such thing as the plaintiff laid to his charge. The special issue then must be that, where special matter being alleged by the defendant for his defence, both the parties join thereupon, and so grow rather to a demurrer, if it be quedo juris, or to trial by the jury, if it be questio facti. Coke.

To Issue. v. n. [from the noun; isser, Fr. uscere, Ital.] 1. To come out; to pass out of any place.

Water's issu'd out from under the threshold of the house. Lck.

From the utmost end of the head branches there issueth out a gummy juice. Raleigh's History.

Waters issu'd from a cave. Milton.

Ere Pallus issu'd from the thunderer's head. D'Urfey, over all passed his other mountain. Pope.

2. To make an eruption; to break out.

Three master of Forist's brothers watch the door with pistols, that none should issu out, otherwise they might escape. Shaksp.

See that same issue forth a so. Milton.

Haste, arm your Ardeons, issu to the plain; With faith to friend, assault the Iogian train. Dryden.

At length there issu'd, from the grove behind, A fair assembly of the female kind. Dryden.

A buzzing noise of bees his ears alarms; Straight issue through the sides assembling swarms, Dryden.

Full for the port that lineaus stand, And fuel their sails, and issue on the land. Pope's Odyssey.

3. To proceed as an offspring.

Of the sons that shall issu out of thee, whom thou shalt begot, shall they take away. 2 Kings, xx. 10.

4. To be produced by any fund.

These alarums issu'd out of the offerings made to the altar, and were payable in the priesthood, Apul.'s Parergon.

5. To run out in lines.

Pipes made with a belly towards the lower end, and then lasting into a straight concave again. Scar.

To Issue. v. n.

1. To send out; to send forth.

A weak degree of heat is not able either to digest the parts or to issue the spirits. Bacon's Nat. Hist.
T"}

2. To send out judicially or authoritatively.

This is the more frequent sense. It is commonly followed by a particle, out or forth.

If the council famed out any order against them, or if the king sent a proclamation for their repair to their cities, some whiteners published a pro-testation. Clarendon.

Deep in a rocky cave he makes abode,
A mansion proper for a mourning god:
Here he gives audience, issuing out decrees
To rivers, his dependent deities.
Dryden.

Let us often return to the scenes of our
Vain in the trembling sailors ply their hands;
The tempest unforeseen prevents their care. Dry.

They constantly wait in court to make a due return of what they have done, and to receive such additional orders as the judge shall issue forth.

Agile's Periogon.

ISSUELESS. adj. [from issue.] Having no offspring; wanting descendants.

Carew, by virtue of this entail, succeeded to Hugh's portion, as dying issueless.

He knew no issue. Carew's Survey of Cowme. I have done sin
For which the Heaven's, taking angry note,

Have left me issueless. Shaksp. Winter's Tale.

ISTRUM. n. s. [isthns. Lat.] A neck of land joining the peninsula to the continent.

There is a castle strongly seated on a high rock, which is joined by an isthmus to the land, and is incomparably fortified.

Sandys's Travels.

The Assyrian empire stretched northwestward to that isthmus between the Euxine and the Caspian seas.

Breckwood on Languages.

O life, thou nothing boundless. Lord.
Thou weak built isthmus, that dost proudly rise
Up between two eternities.
Yet canst not wave, nor wind sustain;
But broken and overthrown the ocean meets again.

Crawley.

Our south of England stands as Corinthus between two seas, and there are some busy to cutting the isthmus, to let in both at once upon it. Stilling fl.

Glemones thinking it more advisable to fortify, not the isthmus, but the mountains, put his design in execution.

Creech.

Plag'd on this isthmus of a middle state,
The Briton's name seems great.

Pope.

IT. pronoun. [Piz. Sax.]

1. The neutral demonstrative. Used in speaking of things. For it, its ancestors used he, as the neutral pronoun; and for its they used his. Thus in the Accidence, a noun adjective that which cannot stand by itself, but requireth another word to be joined with him to show its signification.

Nothing can give to that which another it hath not itself.

Will our great anger learn to stoop so low?
I know it not.

Tell me, O tell, what kind of thing is it
That who master art of it.

Crawley.

His son, it may be, dreads no harm;
But kindly waits his father's coming home. Flattin.

The time will come, it will, when you shall know
The rage of love.

Dryden.

How can I speak? or how, sir, can you hear?

Imagine that which you would most deplore.
And that which I would speak, is it or more.

Dryden.

The mind so furnished, what reason has its quisice in its conclusions?

Locke.

The glory which encompassed them covered the place, and started its rays with so much strength that the whole fabric began to melt. Addison.

If we find a greater good in the present constitution, than would have accrued either from the total privation of but one other frame, and structures, we may perhaps reasonably conclude that the present constitution proceeded from an intelligent and good being, that formed it that particular way out of choice.

Bentley.

2. It is used absolutely for the state of a person or affair.

How is it with our general —
Even so
As with a man by his own alms impion'd,
And with his charity slain. Shaksp. Coriolanus.

3. It is used for the thing; and the matter;
the affair.

It's come to pass,
That inadquate obedience is a slave to each incensed will. Shaksp. Henry VIII.

4. It is sometimes expressed by it.

He raised his reed; and put it
For catching fire by nearer food,
He lifted with such might and strength,
As would have hurt'd him if three times his length. Hudib.

The design, it seems, is to avoid the dreadful imputation of pedantry. Swift.

5. It is used ludicrously after neutral verbs, to give an emphasis.

If Abraham brought all with him, it is not probable that he meant to walk it back again for his pleasure.

Reid.

The Lacedemonians, at the stragglings of Thermopylæ, when their arms failed them, fought it out with their nails and teeth. Dryden.

I have often seen people lavish it profusely in tricking up their children, and yet starve their minds.

Loch.

The more courses it is not on the ground, like the rat or mouse, but earth. Addition.

Whether the charmer sin it, or saint it,
If folly grows romantick, I must paint it. Pope.

6. Sometimes applied similiarly, ludicrously, or rudely to persons.

Let us after him,
Whose care is gone before to bid us welcome:
It is a peerless kinsman. Shaksp. Macbeth.

Do, child, go to thy grandam, the old,
Give grandam kingdom, and its grandam will Give it up him. Shaksp. King John.

7. It is sometimes used of the first or second person, sometimes of more. This mode of speech, though used by good authors, and supported by the if y a of the French, has yet an appearance of barbarism.

Who was it came by?
'Tis two or three, my lord, that bring you word,
Maccduff is fled to England. Shaksp. Macbeth.

'Tis I, that made thy widows. Shaksp. Coriolanus.
'Tis these that early taint the female soul. Pope.

ITCH. n. s. [Itena. Sax.]

1. A cutaneous disease extremely contagious, which overthrows the body with small pustules filled with a thin serum, and raised, as microscopes have discovered, by a small animal. It is cured by sulphur.

Lost and liberty
Creech in the minds and memories of our youth,
And the stream of virtue they may still
And drawn themselves in rite, tickets, blanches, Shak.
The Lord will smite thee with the scab and with the itch, whereof thou cannot be healed. Deut. xviii. 37.

As if divinity had catch'd
The itch on purpose to be scratch'd.

Hudibras.

2. The state of uneasiness in the skin, which is eased by rubbing.

Shakesp.

3. A constant teasing desire.

A certain itch of meddlings with other people's matters, puts us upon shifting.

'I'rangage.

He had staid pedgare in his head, and the itch of being thought of was driving.

Dryden.

From servants company a child is to be kept, not by prohibitions, for that will but give him an itch to get out. dryden.

At half mankind when generous Mansly raves,
All know 'tis virtue, for he thinks them knaves:

Brow.

4. To itch. v. a. [Itena. Lat.] Also. A word used when any article is added to the former.

ITEM. n. s.

1. A new article.

I could have looked on him without the help of admiration, though the catalogue of his end-ments had been tabulated by his side, I saw to him by items. Shaksp.

2. A hint; an imundo.

If this discourse have not concluded our weakness, I have one item, more of mine; for perhaps as a kind letter brother to you, if you have sent me word, I may have word, I must show you, that there is none. Glanville.

To ITERATE. v. a. [itera. Lat.] Repeating.

We must not take the present, or especially familiar to all:
this is the very cause why we iterate the prayer oftener than any other part of Scripture besides; the cause wherefore we intone the people together with their ministers, and not the minister alone to read them, as other parts of Scripture he doth.

The king, to keep a decency towards the French king, sent new solemn ambassadors to intone unto him the decree of his estates, and to iterate his solemnity that the French would desist from hostility.

Bacon's Henry VII.

There be two kinds of reflections of sounds;
the one at distance, which is the echo, wherein the original is heard distinctly, and the reflection also distinctly; the other in concurrence, when the sound returneth immediately upon the original, and so iterate it not, but amplithe it. Bacon.

2. To do over again.

Ashes burn, and well reverberated by fire, after the heat thereof hath been drawn out by iterated deceptions.

Brow.

Andrew took no thought,
Eating his fill; nor Eve to mate
Her conqueror trespasses for all, the more to shew
Him with her lov'd society. Milton's Parad. Lost.

ITERANT. adj. [iterans. Lat.] Repeating.

Waters being near, make a current even; but being farther off, they make an iterant echo.

Brow's Nat. Hist.

ITERATION. n. s. [iteration. Fr. iteration. Lat.] Repetition: recital over again.

1023
Judgment is that whereby we join ideas together by affirmation or negation; so, this tree is high.

2. Doom; the right or power of passing judgment.

If my suspect be false, forgive me God.

3. The act of exercising judgment: judicatory.

They gave judgment upon him.

Addison's Spectator.

4. Determination; decision.

Where distinctions or identities are purely material, the judgment is made by the imagination, otherwise by the understanding. Garrick's Essays.

We shall make a certain judgment, what kind of dissolution that earth was capable of.

Burnet's Theory.

Reason ought to accompany the exercise of our senses, whenever we would form a just judgment of things proposed to our inquiry.

Watts.

5. The quality of distinguishing propriety and impropriety; criticism.

Judgment, a cool and slow faculty, attends not a man in the raptures of poetical composition.

Dennis.

'Tis with our judgments as our watches, none go just alike; yet each believes his own. Pope.

6. Opinion, notion.

I see men's judgments are a parcel of their fortunes, and things outward Draw the inward quality after them,

To suffer all alike. Shakspeare, Act 3, Cleop.

When she did think my master lov'd her well,

She, in my judgment was as fair as you. Shakspeare.

7. Sentence against a criminal.

When he was brought again to the bar, to bear His knell rung out, his judgment was strik'd with agony.

Shakspeare, Henry VIII.

The chief priests informed me, desiring to have judgment against him. Acts 21, xix. 15.

On Adrian last this judgment he pronounced.

Milton.

8. Condemnation. This is a theological use.

The judgment was by one to condemnation; but the free gift is of many offences unto justification.

Rom. v. 16.

The precepts, promises, and threatenings of the God of Israel will rise up in judgment against us, and the articles of our faith will be so many articles of accusation.

Tobit.

9. Punishment inflicted by Providence, with reference to some particular crime.

The judgment of the heavens that makes us tremble,

Touche us not with pity. Shakspeare, King Lear.

We cannot be guilty of greater meanness than to interpret afflictions as punishments and judgments: it aggravates the evil to him who suffers, when he looks upon himself as the mark of divine vengeance.

Addison's Spectator.

10. Distribution of justice.

The Jews made insurrection against Paul, and brought him to the judgment seat. Acts, xviii. 12.

Our only object is Shakspeare.

In judgment between rich and poor, consider not what the poor man needs, but what is his own duty. Taylor.

A bold and wise petitioner goes strait to the throne and judgment seat of the monarch.

Arbuthnot and Pope.

11. Justiciary law; statute.

If ye bearken to these words, and keep and do them, the Lord thy God shall keep unto thee the covenant.

Deut.
JUM

that the accidental jumbling of the alphabet would fall into a most ingenious treatise of philosophy.

To JUMBLE. v. t. To be agitated together.

They will all meet and jumble together into a perfect harmony.

JUMBLE. n. s. [from the verb.] Confused mixture; violent and confused agitation.

Had the world been congeanted from that supposed fortitions jumble, this hypothesis had been tolerable.

What jumble here is made of ecclesiastical remains, as if they were all alienated with equal justice.

JUM'MENT. n. s. [jument, Fr. junctum, Lat.] Beast of burden.

Junctures, as horses, oxen, and asses, have no croaching, or clothing. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

To JUMP. v. n. [jumpen, Dut.]

1. To leap; to skip; to move without step or sliding.

Not the worst of the three but jumps twelve foot and an half by the square. Shab. Winter's Tale.

To jump from a high place is dangerous.

And fearless, queench their thirst, while I look on, and take me for their fellow-citizen. Dryden.

So have I seen from Nevin's brink, a flock of goose jump down together, Swim where the bird of Iove would sink, and swimming never wet a feather. Shaksp. Cymb. Ensign. Petition to the Emperor to entertain the court with a dance on the rope; and whoever jumps the highest succeeds in the office. Out. Traps.

2. To leap suddenly.

One perilous jump into a fiery furnace at the Olympic games, only to shew the company how far his vaunt could carry him. Collier.

We see a little, presume a great deal, and so jump to the conclusion. Spectator.

3. To jolt.

The noise of the prancing horses, and of the jumping chariots. Nah. iii. 2.

4. To agree; to tally; to join.

Do not embrace me till each circumstance of place, time, fortune, do cohere and jump That I am Vioha. Shaksp. Twelfth Night.

In some sort it jumps with my humour. Shaksp. The Tempest.

Yet do these new revellings on Turkish feet. Shaksp. "

Because I will not jump with common spirits, and rank me with the barbarous nations. Shaksp. "

Hercin percoche he jump not with Litus, and they stick not at Justicia.

Never did trusty square with knight, or knight with square, ever jump more right; Their arms and equipage did fit.

As well as virtue, parts, and wit. Hudibras.

This shews how perfectly the ramp and commonwealth in nature jump. For as a fly that goes to bed.

Rests with his tail above his head; So in this mangled state of ours, The rabble are the supreme powers. Hudibras.

Good wits jump, and mine the nimblest of the two. More.

Good now, how your devotions jump with mine. Dryden.

I am happier for finding our judgments jump in the notion. Pope to Swift.

To JUMP. v. a. To pass by a leap; to pass eagerly or carelessly over.

Here, upon this bank and shelfe of time, We'd jump the line to come. Shaksp. Macbeth.

JUMP. ade. Exactly; nicely.Obsolete.

Otherwise one man could not excel another, but all should be either absolutely good, as hitting jump that indivisible point or center wherein good cannot be; or else missing it, they should be excluded out of the number of well-doers.

JUN.

But since so jump upon this bloody question, You from the Knaves war, and you from Esau found, Are here arriv'd. Shaksp. Hamlet.

Myself the while to draw the Moor apart, And bring my Allan home, when he may Cassio find Soliciting his wife. Shaksp. Othello.

JUMP. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. The act of jumping; a leap; a skip.

The surest way for a learner, is not to advance by jump with rods, but let, which he sees himself to learn next, be as nearly conjoin'd with what he knows already, as is possible. Locke.

2. A lucky chance.

The prescript of this scroll, our fortune lies Upon this jump. Shaksp. Ant. and Cleopatra.

3. [Jupé, Fr.] A waistcoat; a kind of loose or linen stays worn by sickly ladies.

The going cassycock scar'd into a jump.

A sign the presbytery's worn to the stump. Clearem. Juncate.

JUNCATE. n. s. [juncade, Fr. gièncate, Ital.]

1. Cheesecake; a kind of sweetmeat of curds and sugar.

2. Any delicacy.

A gouty table of pure ivory. Milton.

All spices and junctures, fit to entertain. Spencer.

With stories told of many a feast, How fairy Mah the junctures out. Milton.

3. A furtive or private entertainment. It is now improperly written juncket in this sense, which alone remains much in use. See Juncate.

JUNC'OUS. adj. [juncus, Lat.] Full of bulrushes.

JUNCTION. n. s. [jonction, Fr.] Union; coalition.

Upon the junction of the two corps, our spies discovered a great cloud of dust. Adinam.

JUNCTURE. n. s. [juncture, Lat.]

1. The line which two things are joined together.

Besides those grossest elements of bodies, salt, sulphur, and mercury, there may be ingredients of a more subtle nature, which being extremely light, may escape unperceived at the junctures of the distillatory vessels, though never so carefully luted.

2. Joint; articulation.

She has made the back-bone of several vertebræ, as being less in danger of breaking than if they were all one entire bone without those joints. Mere.

All other animals have transverse bodies; and though some do raise themselves upon their hinder legs to an upright posture, yet they cannot endure it long, neither are the figures or junctures or order of their bones, fitted to such a posture.

Hale.

3. Union; amity.

Nor are the sobrest of them so apt for that devotional compliance and juncture of hearts, which I desire to bear in those holy offices to be performed with me. More.

4. A critical point or article of time.

By this profession in that juncture of time, they did bare all to the pleasures of this life. Adv. perch. When any law does not conduce to the publick safety, or in some extraordinary junctures, the very observation of it would endanger the community, that law ought to be laid aside. Adinam.

JUNE. n. s. [Juin, Fr. Junius, Lat.] The sixth month from January.

June is drawn in a mantle of dark green. Peacham.

JUNIOR. adj. [junior, Lat.] One younger than another.

JUR.

The fools, my juniors, by a year, Are tortured with suspense and fear.

Who wisely thought my age a screen, When death approach'd to stand between. Swift.

According to the nature of men of years, I was replacing at the rise of my juniors, and unequal distribution of wealth. Tatler.

JUP'NER. n. s. [juniperus, Lat.] A tree.

A clyster may be made of the common deceptions, or of the hollows, bay, and juniper berries, with oil of linseed. Watson.

JUNK. n. s. [probably an Indian word.]

1. A small ship of China.

America, which have now but junkes and canoes, are numbered then in number. Bacon's New Atlantis.

2. Pieces of old cable.

JUN'KET. n. s. [properly juncket.]

See Juncate.

1. A sweetmeat.

You know, there wants no juncets at the feast. Shaksp.

2. A stolen entertainment.

To JUN'KET. v. n. [from the noun.]

1. To feast secretly; to make entertainments by stealth.

Thy grateful guests you can piller in the day, save them to juncet with your fellow servants at night. Swift.

2. To feast.

Thy spurs children junceted and feasted together often, but the reckoning cost them dear at last. South.

The apostle would have so revelling or juncet- ing. South.

JUN'TO. n. s. [Italian.] A cabal; a kind of men combined in any secret design.

Would men have spent solsome days and watchful nights in the busieous quest of knowledge preparative to this work, at length come and dance attendance for approbation upon a junta of petty tyrants, acted by party and prejudice, who denied fitness from learning, and grace from morality.

From this time began an intrigue between his majesty and a junta of ministers, which had like to have ended in my destruction. Gulliver's Travels.

IVORY. n. s. [ivoire, Fr. chour, Lat.]

Ivory is a hard, solid, and firm substance, of a fine white colour; it is the dense excrement of the elephant, who carries on each side of his jaws a tooth of six or seven feet in length; the two sometimes weighing three hundred and thirty pounds; these teeth if cut from the base to a certain height, and the cavity is filled with a compact mediately substance. Hill.

There is more difference between thy flesh and hers, than between jet and ivory. Shaksp.

Draw Kato with a sweet and lovely comnestance, bearing a heart with an ivory key. Peacham.

From their ivory port the cherubim

Forth is't.

Milton.

Two gates the silent house of sleep adorn,

Of polish'd ivory, that of transparent horn: True visions through transparent horn arise,

Through polish'd ivory pass deluding lies. Dryden.

JUPPON. n. s. [juppon, Fr.] A short close coat.

Some wore a breast-plate and a light jupon, Their horses cloth'd with rich caparison. Dryden.

JURAT. n. s. [juratus, Lat. juré, Fr.] A magistrate in some corporations.

JURATORY. adj. [juratoire, Fr. juro, Lat.] Comprising an oath. A communution prayer may be compelled to give juratutory caution de parende juro. Agrippa's Par.

JURIDICAL. adj. [juridicus, Lat. juris- disque, Fr.]

1. Acting in the distribution of justice.

2. Used in courts of justice.
This place exempt

From Hear's suh jurisdiction Mitton.

As Adam had no such power as gave him suh sovereign jurisdiction over mankind. Locke.

This custom in a popular state, of impleading parties, as a means of enquiring into nothing else but the people's chusing to exercise their own jurisdiction in person. Scott.

2. District to which any authority extends.

JURISPRUDENCE. n. s. [jurus prudencia, Fr. jurisprudencia, Lat.] The science of law.

JURIST. n. s. [juriste, Fr. jura, Lat.] A civil lawyer; a man who professes the science of the law; a civilian. This is not to be measured by the principles of jurists Bacon.

JURO. n. s. [juro, Lat.] One that serves on the jury.

Were you servd, I am servd. Pope.

I shall find your lordship judge and juro. Lord Byron.

You are so merciful, I see your end. Deane.

Tis my undoing. Dryden.

I sing that have a good s[ell to any width. Dryden.

But about noon the jurors went together, and because they could not agree, they were shut in. Hoyt.

JURY. n. s. [jurata, Lat. juré, Fr.]

Jury, a company of men, as twenty-four, or twelve, sworn to deliver a truth upon such evidence as shall be delivered them touching the matter in question. There be three manners of trials in English land: one by parliament, another by battle, and the third by assize or jury. The trial by assize, be the action civil or criminal, publick or private, personal or real, is referred for the fact to a jury, and as they find it, so passeth the judgment. This jury is used not only in causes of justices erant, but also in other courts, and matters of office, as, if the exchequer make inquisition in any thing to do with the doth, to know of inquest; if the coroner enquire how a subject found dead came to his end, he useth inquest: the justices then meet the inquest, and in the quarter-sessions, the sheriff in his county and town, the bailiff of a hundred, the steward of a court-leet or court-baron, if they enquire of any, or hence, the sheriffs, the justices in the quarter-sessions, the

at the beginning of the reign of King Richard the First. Hale.

JURIDICALLY. adv. [from juridical] With legal authority; according to forms of justice.

JURISCONSULT. n. s. [juris consultus, Lat.] One who gives his opinion in cases of law.

There mention made, in a decision of the jurisconsult Javolemus, of a Brittanick fleet. Arbuthnot on Colin.

JURISDICTION. n. s. [jurisdiction, Lat.]

1. Legal authority; extent of power.

Sometimes the practice of such jurisdiction may swerve through error even in the very best, and for other respects, where less integrity is. Hooker.

You may not be a legate: by which power

You show'd the jurisdiction of all bishops. Scott.

All persons exercising ecclesiastical jurisdiction should have the King's arms in their seals of office. Hoyt.

2. District to which any authority extends.

JURISPRUDENCE. n. s. [jurisprudencia, Fr. jurisprudencia, Lat.] The science of law.

JURIST. n. s. [juriste, Fr. jura, Lat.] A civil lawyer; a man who professes the science of the law; a civilian. This is not to be measured by the principles of jurists Bacon.

JURO. n. s. [juro, Lat.] One that serves on the jury.

Jury, a company of men, as twenty-four, or twelve, sworn to deliver a truth upon such evidence as shall be delivered them touching the matter in question. There be three manners of trials in English land: one by parliament, another by battle, and the third by assize or jury. The trial by assize, be the action civil or criminal, publick or private, personal or real, is referred for the fact to a jury, and as they find it, so passeth the judgment. This jury is used not only in causes of justices erant, but also in other courts, and matters of office, as, if the exchequer make inquisition in any thing to do with the doth, to know of inquest; if the coroner enquire how a subject found dead came to his end, he useth inquest: the justices then meet the inquest, and in the quarter-sessions, the sheriff in his county and town, the bailiff of a hundred, the steward of a court-leet or court-baron, if they enquire of any, or hence, the sheriffs, the justices in the quarter-sessions, the

at the beginning of the reign of King Richard the First. Hale.

JURIDICALLY. adv. [from juridical] With legal authority; according to forms of justice.

JURISCONSULT. n. s. [juris consultus, Lat.] One who gives his opinion in cases of law.

There mention made, in a decision of the jurisconsult Javolemus, of a Brittanick fleet. Arbuthnot on Colin.

JURISDICTION. n. s. [jurisdiction, Lat.]

1. Legal authority; extent of power.

Sometimes the practice of such jurisdiction may swerve through error even in the very best, and for other respects, where less integrity is. Hooker.

You may not be a legate: by which power

You show'd the jurisdiction of all bishops. Scott.

All persons exercising ecclesiastical jurisdiction should have the King's arms in their seals of office. Hoyt.

2. District to which any authority extends.

JURISPRUDENCE. n. s. [jurisprudencia, Fr. jurisprudencia, Lat.] The science of law.

JURIST. n. s. [juriste, Fr. jura, Lat.] A civil lawyer; a man who professes the science of the law; a civilian. This is not to be measured by the principles of jurists Bacon.

JURO. n. s. [juro, Lat.] One that serves on the jury.

Jury, a company of men, as twenty-four, or twelve, sworn to deliver a truth upon such evidence as shall be delivered them touching the matter in question. There be three manners of trials in English land: one by parliament, another by battle, and the third by assize or jury. The trial by assize, be the action civil or criminal, publick or private, personal or real, is referred for the fact to a jury, and as they find it, so passeth the judgment. This jury is used not only in causes of justices erant, but also in other courts, and matters of office, as, if the exchequer make inquisition in any thing to do with the doth, to know of inquest; if the coroner enquire how a subject found dead came to his end, he useth inquest: the justices then meet the inquest, and in the quarter-sessions, the sheriff in his county and town, the bailiff of a hundred, the steward of a court-leet or court-baron, if they enquire of any, or hence, the sheriffs, the justices in the quarter-sessions, the

at the beginning of the reign of King Richard the First. Hale.

JURIDICALLY. adv. [from juridical] With legal authority; according to forms of justice.

JURISCONSULT. n. s. [juris consultus, Lat.] One who gives his opinion in cases of law.

There mention made, in a decision of the jurisconsult Javolemus, of a Brittanick fleet. Arbuthnot on Colin.

JURISDICTION. n. s. [jurisdiction, Lat.]
JUST

Being spent with age, and just at the point of death, Democritus called for leaves of new bread to be brought, and with the steam of them under his chin, expired. Temple.

JUST. u. s. [juste, Fr.] Mock encounter on horseback; tilt; tournament. Just more proper.

Now was either more grateful to the beholders, or more noble in itself, than just, both with sword and lance.

What news? hold those justs and triumphs! Shaksp.

Among themselves the tourney they divide.
In equal squadrons rang'd on either side;
Then turn'd their horse-heads, and man to man, And strove, as the justs began. Dryd.

To JUST. v. n. [j uster, Fr.]
1. To engage in a mock fight; to tilt.
2. To push; to drive; to justle.

JUSTICE. u. s. [justice, Fr. justitie, Lat.]

1. The virtue by which we give to every man what is his due; opposed to injury or wrong. It is either distributive, belonging to magistrates; or commutative, respecting common transactions between men.

O that I were judge, I would do justice. 2 Sam. 15. 23.

The king's use being grace.

As justice, verity, temperance, stability, I have no relish of them. Shaksp, Macbeth.

The nature and office of justice being to dispose the mind to a constant and perpetual readiness to render to every man his due, it is evident, that if gratitude be a part of justice, it must be conversant about something that is due to another. Locke.

2. Equity; agreeableness to right; as, he proved the justice of his claim.

3. Vindicative retribution; punishment; opposed to mercy.

He executed the justice of the Lord. Deut. 32. 3.

Let justice overtake thee. Is. 3. 14.

Examples of justice must be made, for terror to some; examples of mercy, for comfort to others. Bacon's Advice to Fieathers.

4. Right; assertion of right.

Draw thy sword.

That if my speech offend a noble heart, Thy arm may do thee justice. Shaksp. King Lear.

5. [Justiciarius, Lat.] One deputed by the king to do right by way of judgment. Covell.

And them, Exeas, ordain judges and justices, that they may judge in all Syria. 1 Exeas.

6. Justice of the King's Bench. [justiciarius de Bangro Regis.] Is a lord by his office, and the chief of the rest; wherefore he is also called capitale justiciarius Angliae. His office especially is to hear and determine all pleas of the crown; that is, such as concern offences committed against the crown, dignity, and peace of the king; as treasons, felonies, mayhems, and such like: but it is come to pass, that he with his assistants hearth all personal actions, and real also, if they be incident to any personal action depending before them. Covell.

Give that whipper his errand.
He'll take my lord chief justices warrant. Prior.

7. Justice of the Common Pleas. [justiciarius Comunnium Placitorum.] Is a lord by his office, and is called dominus justiciarius comunnium placitorum. He with his assistants originally did hear and determine all causes at the common law; that is, all civil causes between common persons, as well personal as real; for which cause it was called the court of common pleas, in opposition to the pleas of the crown, or the king's pleas, which are special, and appertaining to him only. Covell.

8. Justice of the Forest. [justiciarius Forester.] Is a lord by his office, and hath the hearing and determining of all offences within the king's forest, committed against venison or vert: of these there be two, whereof the one hath jurisdiction over all the forest on this side Trent, and the other of all beyond. Covell.

9. Justices of Assise. [justiciarii ad capicudas Assisas.] Are such as were wont, by special commission, to be sent into this or that country to take assises; the ground of which politey was the ease of the subjects: for whereas these actions pass always by jury, so many men might not, without great hindrance, be brought to London; and therefore justices, for this purpose, were by commission particularly authorised and sent down to the

10. Justices in Eyre. [justiciarii Edrov.] Are so termed of the French erre, her. The use of these, in ancient time, was to send them with commission into divers counties, to hear such causes especially as were termed the pleas of the crown, and therefore I must imagine they were sent abroad for the ease of the subjects, who must else have been hurried to the King's Bench, if the cause were too high for the country court. They differed from the justices of Oyer and Terminer, because they were sent upon some one or few especial cases, and to one place; whereas the justices in eyre were sent through the provinces and countries of the land, with more indefinite and general commission. Covell.

11. Justices of Gaol Delivery. [justiciarii ad Gaol delivcrandus.] Are such as are sent with commission to hear and determine all causes appertaining to such as for any offence are cast into gaol, part of whose authority is to punish such as let to mainprize those prisoners that by law be not bailable. These by likelihood, in ancient time, were sent to countries upon several occasions; but afterward justices of assise were likewise authorised to this. Covell.

12. Justices of Nisi Prius are all one now-a-days with justices of assise; for it is a common adjournment of a cause, in the common pleas, to put it off to such a day, nisi prius justiciarius vcnuint ad eas partes ad capicendas assisas; and upon this clause of adjournment they are called Justices of nisi prius, as well as justices of assise, by reason of the writ or action that they have to deal in. Covell.

13. Justices of Peace. [justiciarii ad Purficn.] Are they that are appointed by the king's commission, with others, to attend the peace of the country where they dwell; of whom some, upon especial respect, are made of the quorum, because some business of importance may not be dealt in without the presence of them, or one of them. Covell.

The justice.

In fair round full body of good espous,'ndid,
With eyes severe, and heard of formal cut,
Full of wise saws and modern instances,
And so he plays his part. Shaksp. As you like it.

Then hast appointed justices of the peace to call poor men before them, about matters they were not able to answer. Shaksp.

The justices of peace are of great use; anciely they were conversators of the peace; these are the same, saving that several acts of parliament have enlarged their jurisdiction. Baron.

To JUSTICE. v. n. [from the noun.] To administer justice to any. A word not in use.

As for the title of procurator, wherein the emperor hath been judge and party, and hath justice himself, God forbid but that it should endure an appeal to a war. Bacon.

Whereas one Steward, a Scot, was apprehended for intending to poyon the young queen of Scots; the king delivered him to the French king, to be justified by him at his pleasure. Hayward.

JUSTICUREM. n. s. [from justice ] Procedure in courts.

JUSTICER. n. s. [from To justice.] Administrator of justice. An old word.

He was a singular good justicer; and if he had not died in the second year of his government, was the likeliest person to have reformed the English colonies. Duars in Ireland.

JUSTICESHIP. n. s. [from justice.] Rank or office of justice. Swift.

JUSTICIABLE. adj. [from justice. ] Proper to be examined in courts of justice.

JUSTIFIABLE. adj. [from justly. ] Defensible by law or reason.

Just are the ways of God.

And justifiable to men. Milton's Agamem.

Although some animals in the water do carry a justifiable resemblance to some at land, yet are the major part which bear their names unlike. Brown's Vulg. Err.

JUSTIFIABLENESS. n. s. [from justly. ] Rectitude; possibility of being fairly defended.

Men, members of the justifiables of their doings before God, never think they have human strength enough. King Charles.

JUSTIFIABLY. adv. [from justly. ] Rightly; so as to be supported by right; defensibly.

A man may more justifiably throw cross and pile for his opinions, than take them up by such measures. Locke.

JUSTIFICATION. n. s. [justification; Fr. justification, low Lat.]

1. Absolution.

I hope, for my brother's justification, he wrote this but as an essay of my virtue. Shaksp.

2. Defence; maintenance; vindication; support.

Among theological arguments, in justification of absolute obedience, was one of a singular nature. Serf.
3. Deliverance by pardon from sins past.

In such righteousness
To them by faith implored, they may find justification towards God, and peace
Of conscience.

Milton, Par. Lost.
Is not one starry spark,
But gods met gods, and justice in the dark. Lee Couriers therefore justly for a grant;
And when they break their friendship, plead their rights. Dryden.
The more remote run stumbling with their fear,
And, in the dark, men justly as they meet. Dryden.
When elephant 'painted elephant did rear
His trunk, and castles justly in the air,
My sword they way to victory had shown. Dryden.
There was not one who had set bar and doors to Wor, and said, Hitherto shalt thou come, but no farther, and here shall thy proud waves be staid;
then might we well expect such valets, such justlings and clashing in nature. Hoodward.
I thought the dead had been too proud
To justle here among a crowd. Swift.
To Justle, v. t. [from justly.] To push; to drive;
to force by rushing against it. It is commonly used with a particle following, as out or off.

Private and single abilities should not justle out and deprive the church of the joint abilities of many learned and godly men. King Charles.

The surly common shall respect deny
And justify pecucy, and justly in its place. Dryden.
It is not to be imagined that the incongruous alabes and abuses of writing can ever be justly out of their possession of all libraries. Holden.
Running in the dark, a man may justly a post.
Collier.

Absent good, though thought on, not making any part of unholiness in its absence, is justified out to make way for the removal of those unholinesses we feel.

We soon another out, and disputed the ground for a great while. Addison's Guardian.

JUS, n. s. [from justly.]
1. Uprightly; honestly; in a just manner.

Nothing can justify desponds, that cannot justly be blamed; where there is no choice, there may be no blame.

With ignominy smould'red, in open sight:
Next view the Tarquin kings: the avenge sword
Of those justly drawn, and Rome restor'd. Dryden.
The goddeless, studious of her Grecians fate,
Taught them in laws and letters to excel,
In acting justly. Prior.

2. Properly; exactly; accurately.
Their artful hands, instruct the lute to sound,
Their feet assist their hands, and justly beat the ground. Dryden.

JUStLies, n. s. [from justly.]
1. Justice; reasonableness; equity. Justness is properly applied to things, and justice to persons; though we now say the justice of a cause, as well as of a judge.

It maketh upon the right of the war against him, whose successGod comptes only to be according to the justices of the cause for which it is made.

Spranger on Ireland.

We may not think the justness of each act
Such and no other than event doth form it. Shaks.

2. Accuracy; exactness; propriety. In this sense it is now most used.

I value the satisfaction I had in seeing it represented with all the justness and gracefulness of action.

Dryden.

JYM
I appeal to the people, was the usual saying of a very excellent dramatick poet, who, when he had any dispute with particular persons about the justness and regularity of his productions.

Addison.

To JUT. v. n. [This word is supposed to be corrupted from jest, perhaps from shoot.] To push or shoot into prominences;
to come out beyond the main bulk.

Upon the innocent and awesomless. Shaks.
All the projected or jutting parts should be very moderate, especially the cornicles of the lower orders. Wotton.
The land if not restrain'd, had met your way,
Projected out a neck, and juttered to the sea. Dryd.
Broke by the jutting land on either side;
In double streams the briny waters glide. Dryden.
It seems to jut out of the structure of the poem, and be independent of it. Brome.

To JyTY. v. a. [from just.] To shoot out beyond.

Then lend the eye a terrible aspect;
Let it pry through the portage of the head
Like a brass cannon; let the brow o'ermaid it
As fearfully as doth a galled rock
O'erhang and jutty his confounded base,
Swill'd with the wild and wasteful ocean. Shaks.

JUVENILE. adj. [juvenilis, Lat.]
Young; youthful.

Learning hath its infancy when it is almost childish; then its youth, when it is luxuriate and juvenile; then its strength of years, when it is solid; and lastly, its old age, when it waxeth dry

JUVENILy. n. s. [from juvenilis.]
1. Youthfulness.

The restoration of grey hairs to juvenility, and renewing exhausted marrow, may be effected Glantiles.

2. Light and careless manner.

Customary strains and abstracted juvenilities have made it difficult to comend and speak credibly in dedications. Glantiles.

JUXTAPOSITION. n. s. [juxtoposition.
Fr. justic et positio, Lat.] Apposition;
the state of being placed by each other.

Nor can it be a difference, that the parts of solid bodies are held together by hooks, since the coherence of these will be of difficult conception;
and we must either suppose an infinite number of them holding together, or at last come to parts that are united by a mere juxtoposition. Glantiles.

IVY. n. s. [1597 Sax. hedera, Lat.] A plant.

It is a parrtick plant, sending forth roots or fibres from its branches, by which it is fastened to either trees, walls, or plants which are near it, and from thence receives a great share of its nourishment. & Miller.

A gown made of the finest wool;
A belt of straw, and ivy buds,
With coral clasps and amber studs;
And if these pleasures may thee move,
Come live with me and be my love. Raleigh.

Direct the clapping hand to the climb. Miles.

JYMBOL. adj. [See GIMAL.]
Their poor jades
Lob down their heads, dropping the hide and baps
And in their pale dull mouths the jymbol bit
Lies, foul with chwy'd grass, still and motionless.
Shaks.